Should go so generall current through the world.
By heauen I cannot flatter: I defie
The Tongues of Soothers. But a Braver place
In my heart loue, hath no man then your Selfe.
Nay, take me to my word: approue me Lord.

Dou. Thou art the King of Honor.
No man so potent breathes vpon the ground,
But I will Beard him.

Enter a Messenger.

Hot. Do so, and 'tis well. What Letters hast there?
I can but thanke you.

Mess. These Letters come from your Father.

Hot. Letters from him?
Why comes he not himselfe?

Mes. He cannot come, my Lord,
He is grieuous sicke.

Hot. How? has he the leysure to be sicke now,
In such a iustling time? Who leades his power?
Vnder whose Gouernment come they along?

Mess. His Letters bespeaks his mindes, not I his minde.
Wor. I prethee tell me, doth he keepe his Bed?
Mess. He did, my Lord, foure dayes ere I set forth:
And at the time of my departure thence,
He was much fear'd by his Physitions.
Wor. I would the state of time had first beene whole,
Ere he by sicknesse had beene visited:
His health was never better worth then now.
Hotsp. Sicke now? droope now? this sicknes doth infect
The very Life-blood of our Enterprise,
'Tis catching hither, even to our Campe.
He writes me here, that inward sicknesse,
And that his friends by deputation
Could not so soone be drawne: nor did he thinke it meet,
To lay so dangerous and deare a trust
On any Soule remou'd, but on his owne.
Yet doth he give vs bold advertisement,
That with our small conjunction we should on,
To see how Fortune is disposd to vs:
For, as he writes, there is no quailing now,
Because the King is certainely possest
Of all our purposes. What say you to it?
Wor. Your Fathers sicknesse is a mayme to vs.
Hotsp. A perilious Gash, a very Limme lopt off:
And yet, in faith, it is not his present want
Seemes more then we shall finde it.
Were it good, to set the exact wealth of all our States
All at one Cast? To set so rich a mayne
On the nice hazard of one doubtfull houre,
It were not good: for therein should we reade
The very Bottome, and the Soule of Hope
The very Lift, the very vtmost Bound
Of all our fortunes.
Dougl. Faith, and so wee should;
Where now remaines a sweet reversion.
We may boldly spend, vpon the hope
Of what is to come in:
A comfort of retirement lives in this.
Hotsp. A Randezvous, a Home to fly vnto,
If that the Deuill and Mischance looke bigge
Vpon the Maydenhead of our Affaires.
Wor. But yet I would your Father had beene here:
The Quality and Heire of our Attempt
Brookes no division: It will be thought
By some, that know not why he is away,
That wisedome, loyalty, and meere dislike
Of our proceedings, keepe the Earle from hence.
And think, how such an apprehension
May turne the tyde of fearefull Faction,
And breede a kinde of question in our cause:
For well you know, we of the offring side,
Must keepe aloofe from strict arbitrement,
And stop all sight-holes, every loope, from whence
The eye of reason may pry in vpon vs:
This absence of your Father drawes a Curtaine,
That shewes the ignorant a kinde of feare,
Before not dreamt of.
Hotsp. You straine too farre.
I rather of his absence make this vse:
It lends a Lustre, and more great Opinion,
A larger Dare to your great Enterprise,
Then if the Earle were here: for men must thinke,
If we without his helpe, can make a Head
To push against the Kingdome; with his helpe,
We shall o're-turne it topsie-turvy downe:
Yet all goes well, yet all our joyes are whole.
Dougl. As heart can thinke:
There is not such a word spoke of in Scotland,
As this Dreame of Feare.

Enter Sir Richard Vernon.

Hotsp. My Cousin Vernon, welcome by my Soule.
Vern. Pray God my newes be worth a welcome, Lord.
The Earle of Westmorland, seuen thousand strong,
Is marching hither-wards, with Prince John.
Hotsp. No harme: what more?
Vern. And further, I have learn'd,
The King himselfe in person hath set forth,
Or hither-wards intended speedily,
With strong and mighty preparation.
Hotsp. He shall be welcome too.
Where is his Sonne,
The nimble-footed Mad-Cap, Prince of Wales,
And his Comrades, that daft the World aside,
And bid it passe?
Vern. All furnisht, all in Armes,
All plum'd like Estridges, that with the Winde
Bayted like Eagles, having lately bath'd,
Glittering in Golden Coates, like Images,
As full of spirit as the Moneth of May,
And gorgeous as the Sunne at Mid-summer,
Wanton as youthfull Goates, wilde as young Bulls.
I saw young Harry with his Beuer on,
His Cuishes on his thighes, gallantly armd,
Rise from the ground like feathered Mercury,
And vaulted with such ease into his Seat,
As if an Angell dropt downe from the Clouds,
To turne and winde a fierie Pegasus,
And witch the World with Noble Horsemanship.
Hotsp. No more, no more,
Worse then the Sunne in March:
This praysse doth nourish Agues: let them come.
They come like Sacrifices in their trimme,
And to the fire-ey'd Maid of smoakie Warre,
All hot, and bleeding, will wee offer them:
The mayled Mars shall on his Altar sit
Vp to the eares in blood. I am on fire,
To heare this rich reprizall is so nigh,
And yet not ours. Come, let me take my Horse,
Who is to beare me like a Thunder-bolt,
Against the bosome of the Prince of Wales.
Harry to Harry, shall not Horse to Horse
Meete, and no're part, till one drop downe a Corse?
Oh, that Glendower were come.
Ver. There is more newes:
I learned in Worcester, as I rode along,
He cannot draw his Power this fourteene dayes.
Dougl. That's the worst Tidings that I heare of yet.
Wor. I by my faith, that bears a frosty sound.
Hotsp. What may the Kings whole Battaile reach vnto?
Ver. To thirty thousand.
Hot. Forty let it be,
My Father and Glendower being both away,
The powers of vs, may serue so great a day.
Come, let vs take a muster speedily:
Doomesday is neere; dye all, dye merrily.
Dou. Talke not of dying, I am out of feare
Of death, or death's hand, for this one halfe yeare.
Exeunt Omnes.

Scæna Secunda.

Enter Falstaffe and Bardolph.

Falst. Bardolph, get thee before to Coventry, fill me a Bottle of Sack, our Souldiers shall march through: we'le to Sutton-cop-hill to Night.

Bard. Will you give me Money, Captaine?

Falst. Lay out, lay out.

Bard. This Bottle makes an Angell.

Falst. And if it doe, take it for thy labour. and if it make twentie, take them all, Ile answere the Coynage. Bid my Lieutenant Peto meete me at the Towne end.

Bard. I will Captaine: farewell. Exit.

Falst. If I be not asham'd of my Souldiers, I am a sowe't-Gurnet: I have mis-vs'd the Kings Presse damnably. I have got, in exchange of a hundred and fiftie Souldiers, three hundred and odde Pounds. I prest me none but good House-holders, Yeomens Sonnes: enquire me out contracted Bachelers, such as had beene ask'd twice on the Banes: such a Commoditie of warme slaves, as had as lieue heare the Deuill, as a Drummer; such as feare the report of a Caliuer, worse then a struck-Foole, or a hurt wilde-Ducke. I prest me none but such Toasts and Butter, with Hearts in their Bellyes no bigger then Pismires heads, and they haue bought out their seruices: And now, my whole Charge consists of Ancients, Corporals, Lieutenants, Gentlemen of Companies, Slaues as ragged as Lazarus in the painted Cloth, where the Gluttons Dogges licked his Sores; and such, as indeed were never Souldiers, but dis-carded vnlaid Seruingmen, younger Sonnes to younger Brothers, reuolted Tapsters and Ostlers, Trade-fallen, the Cankers of a calme World, and long Peace, ten times more dis-honorable ragged, then an old-fac'd Ancient: and such haue I to fill vp the roomes of them that haue bought out their seruices: that you would thinke, that I had a hundred and fiftie tattet'd Prodigalls, lately come from Swine-keeping, from eating Draffe and Husks. A mad fellow met me on the way, and told me, I had vnloaded all the Gibbets, and prest the dead bodyes. No eye hath seene such skar-Crowes: Ile not march through Coventry with them, thes's flat. Nay, and the Villaines march wide betwixt the Legges, as if they had Gyues on; for indeede, I had the most of them out of Prison. There's not a Shirt and a halfe in all my Company: and the halfe Shirt is two Napkins tacht together, and throwne over the shoulders like a Herralds Coat, without sleeues: and the Shirt, to say the truth, stolne from my Host of S. Albones, or the Red-Nose Inne-keeper of Daintry. But that's all one, they'le finde Linnen enough on every Hedge.

Enter the Prince, and the Lord of Westmerland.

Prince. How now blowne Iack? how now Quilt?

Falst. What Hal? How now mad Wag, what a Deuill do'st thou in Warwickshire? My good Lord of Westmerland, I cry you mercy, I thought you Honour had already beene at Shrewsbury.

West. Faith, Sir Iohn, 'tis more then time that I were there, and you too: but my Powers are there alreadie. The King, I can tell you, looks for vs all: we must away all to Night.

Falst. Tut, never feare me, I am as vigilant as a Cat, to steale Creame.

Prince. I thinke to steale Creame indeed, for thy theft hath already made thee Butter: but tell me, Iack, whose fellowes are these that come after?

Falst. Mine, Hal, mine.

Prince. I did never see such pitiffull Rascals.

Falst. Tut, tut, good enough to toste Foode for Powder, foode for Powder: they'le fill a Pit, as well as better: tush man, mortall men, mortall men.

Westm. I, but Sir Iohn, me thinkes they are exceeding poore and bare, too beggarly.

Falst. Faith, for their pouertie, I know not where they had that; and for their bareneſſe, I am sure they never learn'd that of me.

Prince. No, Ile be sworne, vnlesse you call three fingers on the Ribbes bare. But sirra, make haste, Percy is already in the field.

Falst. What, is the King encamp'd?

West. He is, Sir Iohn, I feare we shall stay too long.

Falst. Well, to the latter end of a Fray, and the beginning of a Feast, fits a dull fighter, and a keene Guest. Exeunt.

Scæna Tertia.

Enter Hotspur, Worcester, Douglas, and Vernon.

Hotsp. We'le fight with him to Night.

Worc. It may not be.

Doug. You give him then advantage.

Vern. Not a whit.

Hotsp. Why say you so? looks he not for supply?

Vern. So doe we.

Hotsp. His is certaine, ours is doubtfull.

Worc. Good Coufin be aduis'd, stirre not to night.

Vern. Doe not, my Lord.

Doug. You doe not counsaile well:
You speake it out of feare, and cold heart.

Vern. Doe me no slander, Douglas by my Life,
And I dare well maintaine it with my Life,
If well-respected Honor bid me on,
I hold as little counsaile with weake feare,
As you, my Lord, or any Scot that this day liues.
Let it be seene to morrow in the Battell,
Which of vs feares.

Doug. Yea, or to night.

Vern. Content.

Hotsp. To night, say I.

Vern. Come, come, it may not be.
I wonder much, being men of such great leading as you are
That you fore-see not what impediments
Drag backe our expedition: certaine Horse
Of my Coufin Vernons are not yet come vp,
Your Vncle Worcesters Horse came but to day,
And now their pride and mettall is asleepe,
Their courage with hard labour tame and dull,
That not a Horse is halfe the halfe of himselfe.

Hotsp. So are the Horses of the Enemie
In generall journey bated, and brought low:
The better part of ours are full of rest.

Ware. The number of the King exceedeth ours:
For Gods sake, Cousin, stay till all come in.

The Trumpet sounds a Parley. Enter Sir Walter Blunt.

Blunt. I come with gracious offers from the King,
If you vouchsafe me hearing, and respect.
Hotsp. Welcome, Sir Walter Blunt.
And would to God you were of our determination.
Some of vs love you well: and even those some
Envie your great deserving, and good name,
Because you are not of our quality,
But stand against vs like an Enemie.
Blunt. And Heaven defend, but still I should stand so,
So long as out of Limit, and true Rule,
You stand against anointed Majestie.
But to my Charge.
The King hath sent to know
The nature of your Griefes, and wherefore
You conjure from the Breft of Civill Peace,
Such bold Hostilitie, teaching his dutious Land
Audacious Cruelties. If that the King
Have any way your good Deserts forgot,
Which he confesseth to be manifold,
He bids you name your Griefes, and with all speed
You shall have your desires, with interest;
And Pardon absolute for your selfe, and these,
Herein mis-led, by your suggestion.
Hotsp. The King is kinde:
And well we know, the King
Knowes at what time to promise, when to pay.
My Father, my Vncle, and my selfe,
Did give him that same Royalties he weares:
And when he was not five and twentie strong,
Sicke in the Worlds regard, wretched, and low,
A poore vninded Out-law, sneaking home,
My Father gave him welcome to the shore:
And when he heard him swear, and vow to God,
He came but to be Duke of Lancaster,
To sue his Liverie, and begge his Peace,
With teares of Innocencie, and restorem of Zeale;
My Father, in kinde heart and pitty mov'd,
Swore him assistance, and perform'd it too.
Now, when the Lords and Barons of the Realme
Perceiv'd Northumberland did lean to him.
The more and lesse came in with Cap and Knee,
Met him in Boroughs, Cities, Villages,
Attended him on Bridges, stood in Lanes,
Layd Gifts before him, proffer'd him their Oathes,
Gave him their Heires, as Pages followed him,
Even as the beeles, in golden multitudes.
He presently, as Greatnesse knowes it selfe,
Steps me a little higher then his Vow
Made to my Father, while his blood was poore,
Vpon the naked shore at Ravenspurgh:
And now (forsooth) takes on him to reforme
Some certaine Edicts, and some strait Decrees,
That lay too heavie on the Common-wealth;
Cryes out vpon abuses, seemes to weepe
Over his Countries Wrongs: and by this Face,
This seeming Brow of Iustice, did he winne
The hearts of all that he did angle for.
Proceeded further, cut me off the Heads
Of all the Favorites, that the absent King
In deputation left behinde him here,
When he was personall in the Irish Warre.
Blunt. Tut, I came not to heare this.
Hotsp. Then to the point.
In short time after, he deposed the King,
Soone after that, deprived him of his Life;
And in the neck of that, task't the whole State.
To make that worse, suffer'd his Kinsman March,
Who is, if every Owner were plac'd,
Indeeds his King, to be engaged in Wales,
There, without Ransome, to lye forfeited:
Disgrac'd me in my happie Victories,
Sought to intrap me by intelligence,
Rated my Vncle from the Counsell-Board,
In rage dismiss'd my Father from the Court,
Broke Oath on Oath, committed Wrong on Wrong,
And in conclusion, drove vs to seeke out
This Head of safetie; and withall, to pole
Into his Title: the which wee finde
Too indirect, for long continuance.
Blunt. Shall I returne this answer to the King?
Hotsp. Not so, Sir Walter.
We'le with-draw a while.
Goe to the King, and let there be impower'd
Some speeche for a safe returne againe,
And in the Morning early shall my Vncle
Bring him our purpose: and so farewell.
Blunt. I would you would accept of Grace and Love.
Hotsp. And't may be, so we shall.
Blunt. Pray Heaven you doe. Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter the Arch-Bishop of Yorke, and Sir Michell.

Arch. Hie, good Sir Michell, beare this sealed Briefe
With winged haste to the Lord Marshall,
This to my Cousin Scroope, and all the rest
To whom they are directed.
If you knew how much they doe import,
You would make haste.
Sir Mich. My good Lord, I guesse their tenor.
Arch. Like enough you doe.
To morrow, good Sir Michell, is a day,
Wherein the fortune of ten thousand men
Must bide the touch. For Sir, at Shrewsbury,
As I am truly given to vnderstand,
The King, with mightie and quick-raysed Power,
Meetes with Lord Harry; and I feare, Sir Michell,
What with the sickness of Northumberland,
Whose Power was in the first proportion;
And what with Owen Glendowers absence thence,
Who with them was rated firmely too,
And comes not in, over-rul'd by Prophecies,
I feare the Power of Percy is too weake.
To wage an instant tryall with the King.
Sir Mich. Why, my good Lord, you need not feare,
There is Douglas, and Lord Mortimer.
Arch. No, Mortimer is not there.
Sir Mic. But there is Mordake Vernon, Lord Henry Percy,
And there is my Lord of Worcester,
And a Head of gallant Warriors,
Noble Gentlemen.

Arch. And

Arch. And so there is, but yet the King hath drawne
The specialll head of all the Land together:
The Prince of Wales, Lord Iohn of Lancaster,
The Noble Westmerland, and warlike Blunt;
And many moe Corrivals, and deare men
Of estimation, and command in Armes.
Sir M. Doubt not my Lord, he shall be well opposd
Arch. I hope no lesse? Yet needfull 'tis to feare,
And to prevent the worst, Sir Michell speed;
For if Lord Percy thrive not, ere the King
Dismisse his power, he meanes to visit vs:
For he hath heard of our Confederacie,
And, 'tis but Wisedome to make strong against him:
Therefore make haste, I must go write againe
To other Friends: and so farewell, Sir Michell. Exeunt.

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter the King, Prince of Wales, Lord Iohn of Lancaster, Earle of Westmerland, Sir Walter Blunt, and Falstaffe.

King. How bloodily the Sunne begins to peere
Above yon busie hill: the day looks pale
At his distemperature.
Prin. The Southerne winde
Doth play the Trumpet to his purposes,
And by his hollow whistling in the Leaves,
Foretels a Tempest, and a blustring day.
King. Then with the losers let it sympathize,
For nothing can seeme foule to those that win.
The Trumpet sounds.
Enter Worcester.

King. How now my Lord of Worster? 'Tis not well
That you and I should meet upon such termes,
As now we meet. You have decrie'd our truth,
And made vs doffe our easie Robes of Peace,
To crush our old limbes in ungentle Steele:
This is not well, my Lord, this is not well.
What say you to it? Will you againe unknit
This churlish knot of all-abhorred Warre?
And move to that obedient Orbe againe,
Where you did give a faire and naturall light,
And be no more an exhaled Meteor,
A prodigie of Feare, and a Portent
Of broached Mischeefe, to the unborne Times?
Wor. Heare me, my Liege:
For mine owne part, I could be well content
To entertaine the Lagge-end of my life
With quiet hours: For I do protest,
I have not sought the day of this dislike.
King. You have not sought it: how comes it then?
Fal. Rebellion lay in his way, and he found it.
Prin. Peace, Chewet, peace.
Wor. It pleas'd your Maiesty, to turne your lookes
Of Fauour, from my Selfe, and all our House;
And yet I must remember you my Lord,
We were the first, and dearest of your Friends:
For you, my staffe of Office did I breake
In Richards time, and posted day and night
To meete you on the way, and kiss your hand,
When yet you were in place, and in account
Nothing so strong and fortunate, as I;
It was my Selfe, my Brother, and his Sonne,
That brought you home, and boldly did out-dare
The dangers of the time. You swore to vs,
And you did swear that Oath at Doncaster,
That you did nothing of purpose 'gainst the State,
Nor claime no further, then your new-faine right,
The seate of Gaunt, Dukedome of Lancaster,
To this, we swore our aide: But in short space,
It rain'd downe Fortune showring on your head,
And such a flood of Greatnesse fell on you,
What with our helpe, what with the absent King,
What with the injuries of wanton time,
The seeming sufferances that you had borne,
And the contrarious Winds that held the King
So long in the unlucky Irish Warres,
That all in England did repute him dead:
And from this swarme of faire advantages,
You tooke occasion to be quickly woo'd,
To gripe the generall sway into your hand,
Forgot your Oath to vs at Doncaster,
And being fed by vs, you vs'd vs so,
As that ungentle gull the Cuckowes Bird
Vseth the Sparrow, did oppresse our Nest,
Grew by our Feeding, to so great a bulke,
That eaten our Loue durst not come neere your sight
For feare of swallowing: But with nimble wing
We were infore'd for safetty sake, to flye
Out of your sight, and raise this present Head,
Whereby we stand opposed by such meanes
As you your selfe, have forg'd against your selfe,
By unkinde vsage, dangerous countenance,
And violation of all faith and troth
Sworne to vs in yonger enterprize.
King. These things indeede you have articulated,
Proclaim'd at Market Crosses, read in Churches,
To face the Garment of Rebellion
With some fine colour, that may please the eye
Of fickle Changelings, and poore Discontents,
Which gape, and rub the Elbow at the newes
Of hurly burly Innouation:
And never yet did Insurrection want
Such water-colours, to impaint his cause:
Nor moody Beggars, starving for a time
Of pell-mell havocke, and confusion.
Prin. In both our Armies, there is many a soule
Shall pay full dearely for this encounter,
If once they joyne in triall. Tell your Nephew,
The Prince of Wales doth loyne with all the world
In praise of Henry Percie: By my Hopes,
This present enterprise set off his head,
I do not thinke a braver Gentleman,
More active, valiant, or more valiant yong,
More daring, or more bold, is now alive,
To grace this latter Age with Noble deeds.
For my part, I may speake it to my shame,
I have a Trauant beene to Chiualry,
And so I heare, he doth account me too:
Yet this before my Fathers Maiesty,
I am content that he shall take the odds
Of his great name and estimation,
And will, to save the blood on either side,
Try fortune with him, in a Single Fight.
King. And Prince of Wales, so dare we venture thee,
Albeit, considerations infinite
Do

Do make against it: No good Worster, no,
We love our people well; even those we love
That are misled upon your Cousins part:
And will they take the offer of our Grace?
Both he, and they, and you; yea, every man
Shall be my Friend again, and I'le be his.
So tell your Cousin, and bring me word,
What he will do. But if he will not yeeld,
Rebuke and dread correction wait on vs,
And they shall do their Office. So bee gone,
We will not now be troubled with reply.
We offer faire, take it advisedly.

Exit Worcester.

Prin. It will not be accepted, on my life,
The Douglas and the Hotspurre both together,
Are confident against the world in Armes.

King. Heere therefore, every Leader to his charge.
For on their answer will we set on them;
And God befriend vs, as our cause is just. Exeunt.

Manet Prince and Falstaffe.

Fal. Hal, if thou see me downe in the battell,
And bestride me, so; 'tis a point of friendship.

Prin. Nothing but a Colossus can do thee that friendship
Say thy prayers, and farewell.

Fal. I would it were bed time Hal, and all well.

Prin. Why, thou ow'st heaven a death.

Fals. 'Tis not due yet: I would bee loath to pay him before his day. What needs I bee so forward with him, that call's not on me? Well, 'tis no matter, Honor pricks me on. But how if Honour pricke me off when I come on? How then? Can Honour set too a legge? No: or an arme? No: Or take away the greefe of a wound? No.
Honour hath no skill in Surgerie, then? No. What is Honour? A word. What is that word Honour? Aire: A trim reckoning. Who hath it? He that dy'de a Wednesday. Doth he feele it? No. Doth hee heare it? No. Is it insensible then? yea, to the dead. But it will not live with the living? No. Why? Detraction will not suffer it, therefore I'le none of it. Honour is a meere Scutcheon, and so ends my Catechisme. Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Worcester, and Sir Richard Vernon.

Wor. O no, my Nephew must not know, Sir Richard,
The liberall kinde offer of the King.

Ver. 'Twere best he did.

Wor. Then we are all undone.
It is not possible, it cannot be,
The King would keepe his word in loving vs,
He will suspect vs still, and finde a time
To punish this offence in others faults.
Suppositions, all our lives, shall be stucke full of eyes;
For Treason is but trusted like the Fox,
Who ev're so tame, so cherisht, and lock'd vp,
Will have a wilde tricke of his Ancestors.
Looke how he can, or sad or merrily,
Interpretation will misquote our looks,
And we shall feede like Oxen at a stall,
The better cherisht, still the nearer death.
My Nephews trespasse may be well forgot,
It hath the excuse of youth, and heate of blood,
And an adopted name of Pthiseledge,
A haire-brain'd Hotspurre, govern'd by a Spleene.
All his offences live upon my head,
And on his Fathers. We did traine him on,
And his corruption being taint from vs,
We as the Spring of all, shall pay for all:
Therefore good Cousin, let not Harry know
In any case, the offer of the King.

Ver. Deliver what you will, I'le say 'tis so.
Heere comes your Cousin.

Enter Hotspurre.

Hot. My Vncle is return'd,
Deliver vp my Lord of Westmerland.
Vncle, what newes?

Wor. The King will bid you battell presently.

Dou. Defie him by the Lord of Westmerland.

Hot. Lord Douglas: Go you and tell him so.

Dou. Marry and shall, and verie willingly.

Exit Douglas.

Wor. There is no seeming mercy in the King.

Hot. Did you beggge any? God forbid.

Wor. I told him gently of our grevances,
Of his Oath-breaking: which he mended thus,
By now forswearing that he is forsworne,
He cals vs Rebels, Traitors, and will scourge
With haughty armes, this hatefull name in vs.

Enter Douglas.

Dou. Arme Gentlemen, to Armes, for I have thrown
A brave defiance in King Henries teeth:
And Westmerland that was ingag'd did bear it,
Which cannot choose but bring him quickly on.

Wor. The Prince of Wales stept forth before the King,
And Nephew, challeng'd you to single fight.

Hot. O, would the quarrell lay upon our heads,
And that no man might draw short breath to day,
But I and Harry Monmouth. Tell me, tell mee,
How shew'd his Talking? Seem'd it in contempt?

Ver. No, by my Soule: I never in my life
Did heare a Challenge vrg'd more modestly,
Vnlesse a Brother should a Brother dare
To gentle exercise, and proofe of Armes.
He gave you all the Duties of a Man,
Trimm'd vp your praises with a Princely tongue,
Spoke your deservings like a Chronicle,
Making you ever better than his praise,
By still dispraising praise, valew'd with you:
And which became him like a Prince indeed,
He made a blushing citall of himselfe,
And chid his Trewant youth with such a Grace,
As if he mastred there a double spirit
Of teaching, and of learning instantly:
There did he pause. But let me tell the World,
If he out-live the envie of this day,
England did never owe so sweet a hope,
So much misconstrued in his Wantonnesse.

Hot. Cousin, I thinke thou art enamoured
On his Follies: never did I heare
Of any Prince so wilde at Liberty
But he he as he will, yet once ere night,
I will embrace him with a Souldiers armes,
That he shall shrinke vnder my curtesie.
Armes, armes with speed. And Fellow's, Souldiers, friends,
Better consider what you have to do,
That I that lame not well the gift of Tongue,

Can

Can lift your blood vp with perswasion.

Enter a Messenger.

Mes. My Lord, heere are Letters for you.

Hot. I cannot reade them now.

O Gentlemen, the time of life is short;
To spend that shortnesse basely, were too long.
If life did ride vpon a Dials point,
Still ending at the arrivall of an houre,
And if we liue, we liue to treade on Kings:
It dye; braue death, when Princes dye with vs.
Now for our Consciences, the Armes is faire,
When the intent of bearing them is iust.

Enter another Messenger.

Mes. My Lord prepare, the King comes on space.

Hot. I thanke him, that he cuts me from my tale:
For I professe not talking: Onely this,
Let each man do his best. And heere I draw a Sword,
Whose worthy temper I intend to staine
With the best blood that I can meete withall,
In the aduenture of this perillous day.
Now Esperance Percy, and set on:
Sound all the lofty Instruments of Warre,
And by that Musicke, let vs all imbrace:
For heauen to earne, some of vs never shall,
A second time do such a curtesie.

They embrace, the Trumpets sound, the King entereth with his power, alarum vnto the battell. Then enter Douglas, and Sir Walter Blunt.

Blu. What is thy name, that in battel thus crossest me?
What honor dost thou seeke vpon my head?

Dou. Know then my name is Douglas,
And I do haunt thee in the battell thus,
Because some tell me, that thou art a King.

Blunt. They tell thee true.

Dou. The Lord of Stafford deere to day hath bought
Thy likenesse: for instead of thee King Harry,
This Sword hath ended him, so shall it thee,
Vnlesse thou yeeld thee as a Prisoner.

Blu. I was not borne to yeeld, thou haughty Scot,
And thou shalt finde a King that will reuenge
Lords Staffords death.

Fight, Blunt is slaine, then enters Hotspur.

Hot. O Douglas, hadst thou fought at Holmedon thus
I never had triumphed o're a Scot.

Dou. All's done, all's won, here breathless lies the king.

Hot. Where?

Dou. Heere.

Hot. This Douglas? No, I know this face full well:
A gallant Knight he was, his name was Blunt,
Semblably furnish'd like the King himselfe.

Dou. Ah foole: go with thy soule whether it goes,
A borrowed Title hast thou bought too deere.
Why dost thou tell me, that thou wer'e a King?

Hot. The King hath many marching in his Coates.

Dou. Now by my Sword, I will kill all his Coates,
Ile murder all his Wardrobe peece by peece,
Vntill I meet the King.

Hot. Vp, and away,
Our Souldiers stand full fairely for the day. Exeunt.

Alarum, and enter Falstaffe solus.

Fal. Though I could scape shot-free at London, I feare the shot heere: here's no scoring, but vpon the pate. Soft who are you? Sir Walter Blunt, there's Honour for you: here's no vanity. I am as hot as molten Lead, and as heauy too; heauen keepe Lead out of mee, I neede no more weight then mine owne Bowelles. I haue led my ragamuffins where they are pepper'd: there's not three of my 150. left aliue, and they for the Townes end, to beg during life. But who comes heere?

Enter the Prince.

Pri. What, stand'st thou idle heere? Lend me thy sword.
Many a Nobleman lies starke and stiffe
Vnder the hooues of vsurping enemies,
Whose deaths are vnreuenged. Prethy lend me thy sword.

Fal. O Hal, I prethee giue me leaue to breath a while:
Turke Gregory never did such deeds in Armes, as I haue done this day. I haue paid Percy, I haue made him sure.

Pri. He is indeed, and liuing to kill thee:
I prethee lend me thy sword.

Fals. Nay Hal, if Percy bee aliue, thou gets't not my Sword; but take my Pistoll if thou wilt.

Pri. Giue it me: What, is it in the Case?

Fal. I Hal, 'tis hot: There's that will Sacke a City.

The Prince drawes out a Bottle of Sacke.

Pri. What, is it a time to iest and dally now. Exit.

Throwes it at him.

Fal. If Percy be aliue, Ile pierce him: if he do come in my way, so: if he do not, if I come in his (willingly) let him make a Carbonado of me. I like not such grinning honour as Sir Walter hath: Giue mee life, which if I can saue, so: if not, honour comes vnlook'd for, and there's an end. Exit.

Scena Tertia.

Alarum, excursions, enter the King, the Prince, Lord Iohn of Lancaster, and Earle of Westmerland.

King. I prethee Harry withdraw thy selfe, thou bleedest too much: Lord Iohn of Lancaster, go you with him.

P. Iob. Not I, my Lord, vnlesse I did bleed too.

Pri. I beseech your Maiesty make vp,
Least you retirement do amaze your friends.

King. I will do so:
My Lord of Westmerland leade him to his Tent.

West. Come my Lord, Ile leade you to your Tent.

Pri. Lead me my Lord? I do not need your helpe;
And heauen forbid a shallow scratch should driue
The Prince of Wales from such a field as this,
Where stain'd Nobility lyes troden on,
And Rebels Armes triumph in massacres.

Iob. We breath too long: Come cosin Westmerland,
Our duty this way lies, for heauens sake come.

Pri. By heauen thou hast deceiu'd me Lancaster,
I did not thinke thee Lord of such a spirit:
Before, I lou'd thee as a Brother, Iohn;
But now, I do respect thee as my Soule.

King. I saw him hold Lord Percy at the point,
With lustier maintenance then I did looke for
Of such an vngrowne Warriour.

Pri. O this Boy, leads mertall to vs all. Exit.

Enter Douglas.

Dou. Another King? They grow like Hydra's head:
I am the Douglas, fatall to all those
That weare those colours on them. What art thou
That counterfeit'st the person of a King?

King. The King himselfe: who Douglas grieues at heart

So

So many of his shadowes thou hast met,
And not the very King. I have two Boyes
Seeke Percy and thy selfe about the Field:
But seeing thou fall'st on me so luckily,
I will assay thee: so defend thy selfe.

Doug. I feare thou art another counterfeit:
And yet infaith thou bear'st thee like a King:
But mine I am sure thou art, whoere thou be,
And thus I win thee. They fight, the King being in danger,
Enter Prince.

Prin. Hold vp thy head vile Scot, or thou art like
Never to hold it vp againe: the Spirits
Of valiant Shirly, Stafford, Blunt, are in my Armes;
It is the Prince of Wales that threatens thee,
Who never promiseth, but he meanes to pay.
They Fight, Douglas flyeth.
Cheerely My Lord: how fare's your Grace?
Sir Nicholas Gawsey hath for succour sent,
And so hath Clifton: Ile to Clifton straight.

King. Stay, and breath awhile.
Thou hast redeem'd thy lost opinion,
And shew'd thou mak'st some tender of my life
In this faire rescue thou hast brought to mee.

Prin. O heaven, they did me too much injury,
That ever said I hearkned to your death.
If it were so, I might have let alone
The insulting hand of Douglas over you,
Which would have bene as speedy in your end,
As all the poysonous Potions in the world,
And saw'd the Treacherous labour of your Sonne.

K. Make vp to Clifton Ile to Sir Nicholas Gawsey. Exit.
Enter Hotspur.

Hot. If I mistake not, thou art Harry Monmouth.

Prin. Thou speak'st as if I would deny my name.

Hot. My name is Harry Percie.

Prin. Why then I see a very valiant rebel of that name.
I am the Prince of Wales, and think not Percy,
To share with me in glory any more:
Two Starres keepe not their motion in one Sphere,
Nor can one England brooke a double reigne,
Of Harry Percy, and the Prince of Wales.

Hot. Nor shall it Harry, for the howre is come
To end the one of vs; and would to heaven,
Thy name in Armes, were now as great as mine.

Prin. Ile make it greater, ere I part from thee,
And all the budding Honors on thy Crest,
Ile crop, to make a Garland for my head.

Hot. I can no longer brooke thy Vanities. Fight.
Enter Falstaffe.

Fal. Well stood Hal, to it Hal. Nay you shall finde no Boyes play heere, I can tell you.

Enter Douglas he fights with Falstaffe, who falls down as if he were dead. The Prince killeth Percie.

Hot. Oh Harry, thou hast rob'd me of my youth:
I better brooke the losse of brittle life,
Then those proud Titles thou hast wonne of me,
They wound my thoughts worse, then the sword my flesh:
But thought's the slave of Life, and Life, Time's foole;
And Time, that takes survey of all the world,
Must have a stop. O, I could Prophesie,
But that the Earth, and the cold hand of death,
Lyes on my Tongue: No Percy, thou art dust
And food for.——

Prin. For Worms, brave Percy. Farewell great heart
Ill-weav'd Ambition, how much art thou shrunke?
When that this bodie did containe a spirit,
A King doome for it was too small a bound:
But now two paces of the vilest Earth
Is roome enough. This Earth that beares the dead,
Beares not alike so stout a Gentleman,
If thou wer't sensible of courtesie,
I should not make so great a shew of Zeale.
But let my favours hide thy mangled face,
And even in thy behalfe, Ile thanke my selfe
For doing these fayre Rites of Tenderness.
Adieu, and take thy praise with thee to heaven,
Thy ignomy sleepe with thee in the grave,
But not remembred in thy Epitaph.
What? Old Acquaintance? Could not all this flesh
Keepe in a little life? Poore Jacke, farewell:
I could have better spar'd a better man.
O, I should have a heavy misse of thee,
If I were much in love with Vanity.
Death hath not struck so fat a Deare to day,
Though many dearer in this bloody Fray:
Imboweil'd will I see thee by and by,
Till then, in blood, by Noble Percie lye. Exit.

Falstaffe riseth up.

Fals. Imboweil'd? If thou imboweil mee to day, Ile give you leave to powder me, and eat me too to morrow. 'Twas time to counterfeit, or that hotte Termagant Scot, had paid me scot and lot too. Counterfeit? I am no counterfeit; to dye, is to be a counterfeit, for he is but the counterfeit of a man, who hath not the life of a man: But to counterfeit dying, when a man thereby liveth, is to be no counterfeit, but the true and perfect image of life indeede. The better part of Valour, is Discretion; in the which better part, I have saved my life. I am afraide of this Gun-powder Percy though he be dead. How if he should counterfeit too, and rise? I am afraid he would prove the better counterfeit: therefore Ile make him sure: yea, and Ile sweare I kill'd him. Why may not he rise as well as I: Nothing confutes me but eyes, and no-body sees me. Therefore sirra, with a new wound in your thigh come you along me. Takes Hotspurre on his back.
Enter Prince and John of Lancaster.

Prin. Come Brother John, full bravely hast thou fleshe thy Maiden sword.

John. But soft, who have we heere?
Did you not tell me this Fat man was dead?

Prin. I did, I saw him dead,
Breathlesse, and bleeding on the ground: Art thou alive?
Or is it fantasie that plays vpon our eye-sight?
I prethee speake, we will not trust our eyes
Without our ears. Thou art not what thou seem'st.

Fal. No, that's certaine: I am not a double man: but if I be not Jacke Falstaffe, then am I a Jacke: There is Percy, if your Father will do me any Honor, so: if not, let him kill the next Percie himselfe. I looke to be either Earle or Duke, I can assure you.

Prin. Why, Percy I kill'd my selfe, and saw thee dead.

Fal. Did'st thou? Lord, Lord, how the world is given to Lying? I grant you I was downe, and out of Breath, and so was he, but we rose both at an instant, and fought a long hour by Shrewsburie clocke. If I may bee believed, so: if not, let them that should reward Valour, bear the sinne vpon their owne heads. Ile take't on my death I gave him this wound in the Thigh: if the man were alive, and would deny it, I would make him eate a peece of my sword.

John. This is the strangest Tale that e're I heard.

Prin. This is the strangest Fellow, Brother John.

Come

Come bring your luggage Nobly on your backe:
For my part, if a lyre may do thee grace,
Ile gild it with the happiest termes I haue.
A Retreat is sounded.
The Trumpets sound Retreat, the day is ours:
Come Brother, let's to the highest of the field,
To see what Friends are liuing, who are dead. Exeunt
Fal. Ile follow as they say, for Reward. He that rewards me, Heauen reward him. If I do grow great again, Ile grow less: For Ile purge, and leaue Sacke, and liue cleanly, as a Nobleman should do. Exit

Scena Quarta.

The Trumpets sound.
Enter the King, Prince of Wales, Lord Iohn of Lancaster, Earle of Westmerland, with Worcester & Vernon Prisoners.

King. Thus euer did Rebellion finde Rebuke.
Ill-spirited Worcester, did we not send Grace,
Pardon, and terms of Loue to all of you?
And wouldst thou turne our offers contrary?
Misleade the tenor of thy Kinsmans trust?
Three Knights vpon our party slaine to day,
A Noble Earle, and many a creature else,
Had beene alue this houre,
If like a Christian thou had'st truly borne
Betwixt our Armes, true Intelligence.
Wor. What I haue done, my safety vrg'd me to
And I embrace this fortune patiently,
Since not to be auoyded, it falls on vnce.
King. Bear Worcester to death, and Vernon too:
Other Offenders we will pause vpon.
Exit Worcester and Vernon.
How goes the Field?
Prin. The Noble Scot Lord Douglas, when he saw
The fortune of the day quite turn'd from him,
The Noble Percy slaine, and all his men,
Vpon the foot of feare, fled with the rest;
And falling from a hill, he was so bruis'd
That the pursuers tooke him. At my Tent
The Douglas is, and I beseech your Grace,
I may dispose of him.
King. With all my heart.
Prin. Then Brother Iohn of Lancaster,
To you this honourable bounty shall belong:
Go to the Douglas, and deliuer him
Vp to his pleasure, ransomlesse and free:
His Valour shewne vpon our Crests to day,
Hath taught vs how to cherish such high deeds,
Euen in the bosome of our Aduersaries.
King. Then this remaines: that we diuide our Power.
You Sonne Iohn, and my Cousin Westmerland
Towards Yorke shall bend you, with your dearest speed
To meet Northumberland, and the Prelate Scroope,
Who (as we heare) are busily in Armes.
My Selfe, and you Sonne Harry will towards Wales,
To fight with Glendower, and the Earle of March.
Rebellion in this Land shall lose his way,
Meeting the Checke of such another day:
And since this Businesse so fare is done,
Let vs not leaue till all our owne be wonne. Exeunt.

FINIS.

The Second Part of Henry the Fourth,

Containing his Death: and the Coronation of King Henry the Fift.

Actus Primus. Scœna Prima.

INDVCTION.

Enter Rumour.

OPen your Eares: For which of you will stop
The vent of Hearing, when loud Rumor speakes?
I, from the Orient, to the drooping West
(Making the winde my Post-horse) still vnfold
The Acts commenced on this Ball of Earth.
Vpon my Tongue, continuall Slanders ride,
The which, in every Language, I pronounce,
Stuffing the Eares of them with false Reports.
I speake of Peace, while couert Enmitie
(Vnder the smile of Safety) wounds the World:
And who but Rumour, who but onely I
Make feareful Musters, and prepar'd Defence,
Whil'st the bigge yeare, swoln with some other griefes,
Is thought with childe, by the sterne Tyrant, Warre,
And no such matter? Rumour, is a Pipe
Blowne by Surmises, Iealousies, Coniectures;
And of so easie, and so plaine a stop,
That the blunt Monster, with vncounted heads,
The still discordant, wauering Multitude,
Can play vpon it. But what neede I thus
My well-knowne Body to Anathomize
Among my houshold? Why is Rumour heere?
I run before King Harries victory,
Who in a bloodie field by Shrewsburie
Hath beaten downe yong Hotspurre, and his Troopes,
Quenching the flame of bold Rebellion,
Even with the Rebels blood. But what meane I
To speake so true at first? My Office is
To noyse abroad, that Harry Monmouth fell
Vnder the Wrath of Noble Hotspurres Sword:
And that the King, before the Douglas Rage
Stoop'd his Anointed head, as low as death.
This haue I rumour'd through the peasant-Townes,
Between the Royall Field of Shrewsburie,
And this Worme-eaten-Hole of ragged Stone,
Where Hotspurres Father, old Northumberland,
Lyes crafty sicke. The Posts come tyring on,
And not a man of them brings other newes
Then they haue learn'd of Me. From Rumours Tongues,
They bring smooth-Comforts-false, worse then True-wrongs. Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Lord Bardolfe, and the Porter.

L.Bar. Who keepes the Gate heere hea?
Where is the Earle?
Por. What shall I say you are?
Bar. Tell thou the Earle
That the Lord Bardolfe doth attend him heere.
Por. His Lordship is walk'd forth into the Orchard,
Please it your Honor, knocke but at the Gate,
And he himselfe will answer.
Enter Northumberland.
L.Bar. Heere comes the Earle.
Nor. What newes Lord Bardolfe? Eu'ry minute now
Should be the Father of some Stratagem;
The Times are wilde: Contention (like a Horse
Full of high Feeding) madly hath broke loose,
And beares downe all before him.
L.Bar. Noble Earle,
I bring you certaine newes from Shrewsbury

Tha. My Lord, Sir John Umfrauis turn'd me backe
With joyfull tydings; and (being better hors'd)
Out-rod me. After him, came spurring head
A Gentleman (almost forc-spent with speed)
That stopp'd by me, to breath his bloodied horse.
He ask'd the way to Chester: And of him
I did demand what Newes from Shrewsbury:
He told me, that Rebellion had ill lucke,
And that young Henry Percies Spurre was cold.
With that he gave his able Horse the head,
And bending forwards strooke his able heeles
Against the panting sides of his poore Iade
Vp to the Rowell head, and flaring so,
He seem'd in running, to devoure the way,
Staying no longer question.

North. Ha? Againe:
Said he young Harry Percies Spurre was cold?
(Of Hot-Spurre, cold-Spurre?) that Rebellion,
Had met ill lucke?

L.Bar. My Lord: Ile tell you what,
If my young Lord your Sonne, heare not the day,
Vpon mine Honor, for a silken point
Ile give my Barony. Never talke of it.

Nor. Why should the Gentleman that rode by Thauis
Give then such lnstances of Losse?

L.Bar. Who, he?
He was some hissing Fellow, that had stolne
The Horse he rode-on: and vpon my life
Speaks at adventure. Looke, here comes more Newes.

Enter Morton.

Nor. Yet, this mans brow, like to a Title-leaf,
Fore-tels the Nature of a Tragicke Volume:
So looks the Scroad, when the Imperious Flood
Hath left a witnest Vsurpation.
Say Morton, did'st thou come from Shrewsbury?

Mor. I ran from Shrewsbury (my Noble Lord)
Where hateful death put on his vglieft Maske
To fright our party.

North. How doth my Sonne, and Brother?
Thou trembl'st, and the whitenesse in thy Cheeke
Is apter then thy Tongue, to tell thy Errand.
Even such a man, so faint, so spiritlesse,
So dull, so dead in looke, so woe-be-gone,
Drew Priams Curtaine, in the dead of night,
And would haue told him, Halfe his Troy was burn'd.
But Priam found the Fire, ere he his Tongue:
And I, my Percies death, ere thou report'st it.
This, thou would'st say: Your Sonne and thou, and thou:
Your Brother, thou. So fought the Noble Douglas,
Stopping my greedy eare, with their bold deeds.
But in the end (to stop mine Eare indeed)
Thou hast a Sigh, to blow away this Praise,
Ending with Brother, Sonne, and all are dead.

Mor. Douglas is liuing, and your Brother, yet:
But for my Lord, your Sonne.

North. Why, he is dead.
See what a ready tongue Suspicion hath:
He that but feares the thing, he would not know,
Hath by Instinct, knowledge from others Eyes,
That what he feard, is chanc'd. Yet speake (Morton)
Tell thou thy Earle, his Diuination Lies,
And I will take it, as a sweet Disgrace,
And make thee rich, for doing me such wrong.

Mor. You are too great, to be (by me) gainsaid:
Your Spirit is as true, your Fears too certaine.

North. Yet for all this, say not that Percies dead.
I see a strange Confession in thine Eye:
Thou shak'st thy head, and hold'st it Feare, or Sinne,
To speake a truth. If he be slaine, say so:
The Tongue offends not, that reports his death:
And he doth sinne that doth belye the dead:
Not he, which says the dead is not alive:
Yet the first bringer of vnwelcome Newes
Hath but a losing Office: and his Tongue,
Sounds ever after as a sullen Bell
Remembred, knolling a departing Friend.

L.Bar. I cannot think (my Lord) your son is dead.

Mor. I am sorry, I should force you to believe
That, which I would to heauen, I had not seene.
But these mine eyes, saw him in bloody state,
Rend'ring faint quittance (wearied, and out-breath'd)
To Hotspur Montmorth, whose swift wrath beate downe
The never-daunted Percie to the earth,
From whence (with life) he never more sprang vp.
In few; his death (whose spirit lent a fire,
Even to the dullest Peasant in his Campe)
Being bruised once, tooke fire and heate away
From the best tempe'd Courage in his Troopes.
For from his Mettle, was his Party fred'd;
Which once, in him abated, all the rest
Turn'd on themselues, like dull and heavy Lead:
And as the Thing, that's heavy in it selfe,
Vpon enforcement, flyes with greatest speede,
So did our Men, heavy in Hotspurs losse,
Lend to this weight, such lightnesse with their Feare,
That Arrowes fled not swifter toward their aime,
Then did our Soldiers (aiming at their safety)
Fly from the field. Then was that Noble Worcester
Too soone ta'ne prisoner: and that furious Scot,
(The bloody Douglas) whose well-labouring sword
Had three times slaine th'appearance of the King,
Gan vaile his stomacke, and did grace the shame
Of those that turn'd their backes: and in his flight,
Stumbling in Feare, was tooke. The summe of all,
Is, that the King hath wonne: and hath sent out
A speedy power, to encounter you my Lord,
Vnder the Conduct of yong Lancaster
And Westmerland. This is the Newes at full.

North. For this, I shall haue time enough to mourne.
In Poyson, there is Physicke: and this newes
(Hauing beene well) that would haue made me sicke,
Being sicke, haue in some measure, made me well.
And as the Wretch, whose Feauer-weakned ioynts,
Like strengthlesse Hinges, buckle vnder life,
Impatient of his Fit, breakes like a fire
Out of his keepers armes: Even so, my Limbes
(Weak'ned with greefe) being now inrag'd with greefe,
Are thrice themselues. Hence therefore thou nice crutch,
A scalie Gauntlet now, with ioynts of Steele
Must glouse this hand. And hence thou sickly Quoife,
Thou art a guard too wanton for the head,
Which Princes, flesh'd with Conquest, aymes to hit.
Now bloade my Browes with Iron, and approach
The ragged'st houre, that Time and Spight dare bring
To frowne vpon th'enrag'd Northumberland.
Let Heaven kisse Earth: now let not Natures hand
Keepe the wilde Flood confin'd: Let Order
And let the world no longer be a stage
To feede Contention in a ling'ring Act:
But let one spirit of the First-borne Cains

Reigne in all bosomes, that each heart being set
On bloody Courses, the rude Scene may end,
And darknesse be the burier of the dead. (Honor

L.Bar. Sweet Earle, divorce not wisedom from your Hon. The lines of all your loving Complices
Lesse-on your health, the which if you giue-o're
To stormy Passion, must perforce decay.
You cast th'event of Warre (my Noble Lord)
And summ'd the accompt of Chance, before you said
Let vs make head: It was your presurmize,
That in the dole of blowes, your Son might drop.
You knew he walk'd o're perils, on an edge
More likely to fall in, then to get o'ver:
You were ad*d'd* his skills were capeable
Of Wounds, and Scarres; and that his forward Spirit
Would lift him, where most trade of danger rang'd,
Yet did you say go forth: and none of this (Though strongly apprehended) could restraine
The stiffe-borne Action: What hath then befallen?
Or what hath this bold enterprize bring forth,
More then that Being, which was like to be?

L.Bar. We all that are engaged to this loss,
Know that we ventur'd on such dangerous Seas,
That if we wrought our life, was ten to one:
And yet we ventur'd for the gainer proper'd,
Chook'd the respect of likely peril fear'd,
And since we are o're-set, venture again.
Come, we will all put forth; Body, and Goods.

Mor. 'Tis more then time: And (my most Noble Lord)
I heare for certaine, and do speake the truth:
The gentle Arch-bishop of Yorke is vp.
With well appointed Powres: he is a man
Who with a double Surety binds his Followers.
My Lord (your Sonne) had onely but the Corpes,
But shadowes, and the shewes of men to fight.
For that (some word (Rebellion) did divide
The action of their bodies, from their soules,
And they did fight with queasinesse, constrain'd
As men drinke Potions; that their Weapons only
Seem'd on our side: but for their Spirits and Soules,
This word (Rebellion) it had frozne them vp,
As Fish are in a Pond. But now the Bishopp
Turnes Insurrection to Religion,
Supposed sincere, and holy in his Thoughts:
He's follow'd both with Body, and with Minde:
And doth enlarge his Rising, with the blood
Of faire King Richard, scrap'd from Pomfret stones,
Derives from heaven, his Quarrell, and his Cause:
Tells them, he doth bestride a bleeding Land,
Gasping for life, under great Bolingbroke,
And more, and lesse, do flocke to follow him.

North. I knew of this before. But to speake truth,
This present grosse had wip'd it from my minde.
Go in with me, and counsell every man
The aptest way for safety, and revenge:
Get Posts, and Letters, and make Friends with speed,
Never so few, not never yet more need. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Falstaffe and Page.

Fal. Sirra, you giant, what saies the Doct. to my water?

Pag. He said sir, the water itselfe was a good healthy water; but for the party that ow'd it, he might have more diseases than he knew for.

Fal. Men of all sorts take a pride to gird at me: the brains of this foolish compounded Clay-man, is not able to invent any thing that tends to laughter, more than I invent, or is invented on me. I am not only witty in my selfe, but the cause that wit is in other men. I do here walke before thee, like a Sow, that hath o'rewhelm'd all her Litter, but one. If the Prince put thee into my Service for any other reason, then to set me off, why then I have no judgement. Thou horson Mandrake, thou art fitter to be worne in my cap, then to walk at my heeles. I was never mann'd with an Agot till now: but I will sette you neyther in Gold, nor Silver, but in vile apparell, and send you backe again to your Master, for a Jewell. The Juvenall (the Prince your Master) whose Chin is not yet fledg'd, I will sooner have a beard grow in the Palme of my hand, then he shall get one on his cheeke: yet he will not sticke to say, his Face is a Face-Royall. Heaven may finish it when he will, it is not a haire amisse yet: he may keepe it still as a Face-Royall, for a Barber shall never earne sixe pence out of it; and yet he will be crowing, as if he had writ man ever since his Father was a Bachellour. He may keepe his owne Grace, but he is almost out of mine, I can assure him. What said M.Dumbledon, about the Satten for my short Cloake, and Slops?

Pag. He said sir, you should procure him better Assurance, then Bardolfe: he would not take his Bond & your, he lik'd not the Security.

Fal. Let him bee damn'd like the Glutton, may his Tongue be hotter, a horson Achitophel; a Rascally-yea-forsooth-knave, to bearе a Gentleman in hand, and then stand upon Security? The horson smooth-pates doe now weare nothing but high shoes, and bunches of Keyes at their girdles: and if a man is through with them in honest Taking-up, then they must stand upon Security: I had as liefe they would put Rats-bane in my mouth, as offer to stoppe it with Security. I look'd he should have sent me two and twenty yards of Satten (as I am true Knight) and he sends me Security. Well, he may sleep in Security, for he hath the horne of Abundance: and the lightnesse of his Wife shines through it, and yet cannot he see, though he have his owne Lanthorne to light him. Where's Bardolfe?

Pag. He's gone into Smithfield to buy your worship a horse.

Fal. I bought him in Paules, and he'l buy me a horse in Smithfield. If I could get me a wife in the Stewes, I were Man'd, Hors'd, and Wiv'd.

Enter Chiefe Justice, and Servant.

Pag. Sir, heare comes the Noblemen that committed the Prince for striking him, about Bardolfe.

Fal. Wait close, I will not see him.

Ch.Just. What's he that goes there?

Ser. Falstaffe, and's please your Lordship.

Just. He that was in question for the Robbery?

Ser. He my Lord, but he hath since done good service at Shrewsbury: and (as I heare) is now going with some Charge, to the Lord John of Lancaster.

Just. What to Yorke? Call him backe again.

Ser. Sir John Falstaffe.

Fal. Boy, tell him, I am deafe.

Pag. You must speake lowder, my Master is deafe.

Just. I am sure he is, to the hearing of any thing good. Go plucke him by the Elbow, I must speake with him.

Ser. Sir John.

Fal. What's a young knave and beg? Is there not wars? is there not employment? Doth not the King lack subjects? Do not the Rebels want Soldiers? Though it be a shame to be on on my side but one, it is worse shame to begge, then to be on the worst side, were it worse then the name of Rebellion can tell how to make it.

Sur. You mistake me Sir.

Fal. Why sir? Did I say you were an honest man? Setting my Knight-hood, and my Souldier-ship aside, I had lyed in my throat, if I had said so.

Sur. I pray you (Sir) then set your Knighthood and your Souldier-ship aside, and give me leave to tell you, you lye in your throat, if you say I am any other then an honest man.

Fal. I give thee leave to tell me so? I say a-side that which growes to me? If thou get'st any leave of me, hang me: if thou takst leave, thou wert better be hang'd: you Hose-counter, hence: Anon.

Sur. Sir, my Lord would speake with you.

Iust. Sir John Falstaff, a word with you.

Fal. My good Lord: give your Lordship good time of the day. I am glad to see your Lordship abroad: I heard say your Lordship was sicke. I hope your Lordship goes abroad by advise. Your Lordship (though not clean past your youth) hath yet some smack of age in you: some relish of the saturne of Time, and I most humbly beseech your Lordship, to have a reverend care of your health.

Iust. Sir John, I sent you before your Expedition, to Shrewsbury.

Fal. If it please your Lordship, I heare his Maiestie is return'd with some discomfort from Wales.

Iust. I talke not of his Maiesty: you would not come when I sent for you?

Fal. And I heare moreover, his Highnesse is falne into this same whorson Apoplexie. (you.

Iust. Well, heaven mend him. I pray let me speak with

Fal. This Apoplexie is (as I take it) a kind of Lethargie, a sleeping of the blood, a horson Tingling.

Iust. What tell you me of it? be it as it is.

Fal. It hath it original from much greefe; from study and perturbation of the braine. I have read the cause of his effects in Galen. It is a kinde of deafenesse.

Iust. I think you are falne into the disease: For you heare not what I say to you.

Fal. Very well (my Lord) very well: rather an't please you) it is the disease of not Listning, the malady of not Marking, that I am troubled withall.

Iust. To punish you by the heeles, would amend the attention of your eares, & I care not if I be your Physitian

Fal. I am as poore as Iob, my Lordship not so Patient: your Lordship may minister the Potion of imprisonment to me, in respect of Poverty: but how I should bee your Patient, to follow your prescriptions, the wise may make some dram of a scruple, or indeede, a scruple in fetle.

Iust. I sent for you (when there were matters against you for your life) to come speake with me.

Fal. As I was then advised by my learned Counsel, in the lawes of this Land-service, I did not come.

Iust. Well, the truth is (Sir John) you live in great infamy

Fal. He that buckles him, in my belt, cannot live in feife.

Iust. Your Manner is very slender, and your theft great.

Fal. I would it were otherwise: I would my Manner were greater, and my wealth slenderer.

Iust. You have misled the youthfull Prince.

Fal. The yong Prince hath misled me. I am the Fellow with the great belly, and he my Dogge.

Iust. Well, I am loth to gall a new-heal'd wounds: your dates service at Shrewsbury, hath a little gilded over your Nights exploit on Gads-hill. You may thanke the vnquiet time, for your quiet o're-poising that Action.

Fal. My Lord? (Wolfe.

Iust. But since all is well, keep it so: wake not a sleeping

Fal. To wake a Wolfe, is as bad as to smell a Fox.

Iu. What? you are as a candle, the better part burnt out.

Fal. A Wassell-Candle, my Lord; all Tallow: if I did say of wax, my growth would approve the truth.

Iust. There is not a white haire on your face, but should have his effect of gravity.

Fal. His effect of grave, grave, grave.

Iust. You follow the yong Prince vp and downe, like his ill Angell.

Fal. Not so (my Lord) your ill Angell is light: but I hope, he that looks vpon me, will take mee without, weighing: and yet, in some respects I grave, I cannot go: I cannot tell. Vertue is of so little regard in these Costermongers, that true valor is turn'd Beare-herd. Pregnancie is made a Tapster, and hath his quicke wit wasted in giving Reckonings: all the other gifts appertinent to man (as the malice of this Age shapes them) are not worth a Gooseberry. You that are old, consider not the capacities of vs that are yong: you measure the heat of our Livers, with the bitternesse of your gals. & we that are in the vauward of our youth, I must confesse, are wagges too.

Iust. Do you set downe your name in the scroule of youth, that are written downe old, with all the Characters of age? Have you not a moist eye? a dry hand? a yellow cheeke? a white beard? a decreasing leg? an increasing belly? Is not your voice broken? your winde short? your wit single? and every part about you blasted with Antiquity? and wil you cal your selfe young? Fy, fy, fy, Sir John.

Fal. My Lord, I was borne with a white head, & something a round belly. For my voice, I have lost it with hollowing and singing of Anthemes. To approve my youth further, I will not: the truth is, I am only olde in judgement and understanding; and he that will caper with me for a thousand Marks, let him lend me the money, & have at him. For the boxe of th'eare that the Prince gave you, he gave it like a rude Prince, and you tooke it like a sensible Lord. I have checkt him for it, and the young Lion repents: Marry not in ashes and sackcloth, but in new Silke, and old Sacke.

Iust. Wel, heaven send the Prince a better companion.

Fal. Heaven send the Companion a better Prince: I cannot rid my hands of him.

Iust. Well, the King hath sever'd you and Prince Harry, I heare you are going with Lord John of Lancaster, against the Archbishop, and the Earle of Northumberland

Fal. Yes, I thanke your pretty sweet wit for it: but looke you pray, (all you that kisse my Ladie Peace, at home) that our Armies ioyne not in a hot day: for if I take but two shirts out with me, and I meane not to sweat extraordinarily: if it be a hot day, if I brandish any thing but my Bottle, would I might never spit white again: There is not a dangerous Action can peep out his head, but I am thrust vpon it. Well, I cannot last ever.

Iust. Well, be honest, be honest, and heaven blesse your Expedition.

Fal. Will your Lordship lend me a thousand pound, to furnish me forth?

Iust. Not a penny, not a penny: you are too impatient to bear crosses. Fare you well. Commend me to my Cosin Westmorland.

Fal. If I do, fillop me with a three-man-Beetle. A man can no more separate Age and Covetousnesse, then he can part young limbes and lecchery: but the Gout galles the one, and the pox pinches the other; and so both the Degrees prevent my curses. Boy?

Page. Sir.

Fal. What money is in my purse?

Page. Seven groats, and two pence.

Fal. I can get no remedy against this Consumption of the purse. Borrowing onely lingers, and lingers it out, but the disease is incurable. Go bear this letter to my Lord of Lancaster, this to the Prince, this to the Earle of Westmerland, and this to old Mistris Ursula, whome I have weekly sworne to marry, since I perceiu'd the first white haire on my chin. About it: you know where to finde me. A pox of this Gowt, or a Gowt of this Pox: for the one or th'other playes the rogue with my great toe: It is no matter, if I do halt, I have the warres for my colour, and my Pension shall seeme the more reasonable. A good wit will make vse of any thing: I will turne diseases to commodity. Exeunt

Scena Quarta.

Enter Archbishop, Hastings, Mowbray, and Lord Bardolfe.

Ar. Thus have you heard our cause, & know our Meane:
And my most noble Friends, I pray you all
Speake plainly your opinions of our hopes,
And first (Lord Marshall) what say you to it?

Mow. I well allow the occasion of our Armes,
But gladly would be better satisfied,
How (in our Meanes) we should advance our selves
To looke with forhead bold and big enough
Vpon the Power and puissance of the King.

Hast. Our present Musters grow vpon the File
To five and twenty thousand men of choice:
And our Supplies, live largely in the hope
Of great Northumberland, whose bosome burnes
With an incensed Fire of Iniuries.

L. Bar. The question then (Lord Hastings) standeth thus
Whether our present five and twenty thousand
May hold-vp-head, without Northumberland:

Hast. With him, we may.

L. Bar. I marry, there's the point:
But if without him we be thought to feeble,
My judgement is, we should not step too farre
Till we had his Assistance by the hand.
For in a Theame so bloody fac'd, as this,
Conjecture, Expectation, and Surmise
Of Aydes incertaine, should not be admitted.

Arch. 'Tis very true Lord Bardolfe, for indeed
It was ynng Hotspurres case, at Shrewsbury.

L. Bar. It was (my Lord) who lin'd himselfe with hope,
Eating the ayre, on promise of Supply,
Flatt'ring himselfe with Project of a power,
Much smaller, then the smallest of his Thoughes,
And so with great imagination
(Proper to mad men) led his Powers to death,
And (winking) leap'd into destruction.

Hast. But (by your leave) it never yet did hurt,
To lay downe likely-hoods, and formes of hope.

L. Bar. Yes, if this present quality of warre,
Indeed the instant action: a cause on foot,
Lives so in hope: As in an early Spring,
We see th'appearing buds, which to prove fruite,
Hope give not so much warrant, as Dispaire
That Frosts will bite them. When we meane to build,
We first survey the Plot, then draw the Modell,
And when we see the figure of the house,
Then must we rate the cost of the Erection,
Which if we finde out-weighes Ability,
What do we then, but draw a-new the Modell
In fewer offices? Or at least, desist
To build at all? Much more, in this great worke,
(Which is almost) to pluche a Kingdome downe,
And set another vp) should we survey
The plot of Situation, and the Modell;
Consent vpon a sure Foundation:
Question Surveyors, know our owne estate,
How able such a Worke to vndergo,
To weigh against his Opposite? Or else,
We fortifie in Paper, and in Figures,
Vsing the Names of men, instead of men:
Like one, that drawes the Modell of a house
Beyond his power to build it; who (halfe through)
Gives o're, and leaves his part-created Cost
A naked subiect to the Weeping Clouds,
And waste, for churlish Winters tyranny.

Hast. Grant that our hopes (yet likely of faire birth)
Should be still-borne: and that we now possest
The vtmost men of expectation:
I think we are a Body strong enough
(Even as we are) to equall with the King.

L. Bar. What is the King but five & twenty thousand?

Hast. To vs no more: nay not so much Lord Bardolf.
For his divisions (as the Times do brawl)
Are in three Heads: one Power against the French,
And one against Glendower: Perforce a third
Must take vp vs: So is the vnfirme King
In three divided: and his Coffers sound
With hollow Poverty, and Emptynesse.

Ar. That he should draw his seuerall strengths together
And come against vs in full puissance
Need not be dreaded.

Hast. If he should do so,
He leaves his backe vnarm'd, the French, and Welch
Baying him at the heeles: never feare that.

L. Bar. Who is it like should lead his Forces hither?

Hast. The Duke of Lancaster, and Westmerland:
Against the Welsh himselfe, and Harry Monmouth.
But who is substituted 'gainst the French,
I have no certaine notice.

Arch. Let vs on:
And publish the occasion of our Armes.
The Common-wealth is sicke of their owne Choice,
Their over-greedy love hath surfetted:
An habitation giddy, and vnsure
Hath he that buildeth on the vulgar heart.
O thou fond Many, with what loud applause
Did'st thou beate heaven with blessing Bolingbroke,
Before he was, what thou would'st have him be?
And being now trimm'd in thine owne desires,
Thou (beastly Feeder) art so full of him,
That thou prouok'st thy selfe to cast him vp.
So, so, (thou common Dogge) did'st thou disgorge
Thy glutton-bosome of the Royall Richard,
And now thou would'st eate thy dead vomit vp,
And howl'st to finde it. What trust is in these Times?
They, that when Richard liu'd, would have him dye,
Are now become enamour'd on his grave
Thou that threw'st dust vpon his goodly head
When through proud London he came sighing on,
After th'admired heeles of Bolingbroke.
Cri'st now, O Earth, yield vs that King againe,

And

And take thou this (O thoughts of men accurs'd)
"Past, and to Come, seemes best; things Present, worst.

Mow. Shall we go draw our numbers, and set on?

Hast. We are Times subiects, and Time bids, be gon.

Actus Secundus. Scena Prima.

Enter Hostesse, with two Officers, Fang, and Snare.

Hostesse. Mr. Fang, have you entred the Action?

Fang. It is entered.

Hostesse. Where's your Yeoman? Is it a lusty yeoman? Will he stand to it?

Fang. Sirrah, where's Snare?

Hostesse. I, I, good M. Snare.

Snare. Heere, heere.

Fang. Snare, we must Arrest Sir Iohn Falstaffe.

Host. I good M. Snare, I haue enter'd him, and all.

Sn. It may chance cost some of vs our liues: he wil stab

Hostesse. Alas the day: take heed of him: he stabd me in mine owne house, and that most beastly: he cares not what mischeefe he doth, if his weapon be out. Hee will sowne like my diuell, he will spare neither man, woman, nor childe.

Fang. If I can close with him, I care not for his thrust.

Hostesse. No, nor I neither: Ile be at your elbow.

Fang. If I but fist him once: if he come but within my Vice.

Host. I am vndone with his going: I warrant he is an infinitiue thing vpon my score. Good M Fang hold him sure: good M. Snare let him not scape, he comes continuantly to Py-Corner (saving your manhoods) to buy a saddle, and hee is indicted to dinner to the Lubbars head in Lombardstreet, to M. Smoother the Silkman. I pra'ye, since my Exion is enter'd, and my Case so openly known to the world, let him be brought in to his answer: A too. Marke is a long one, for a poore lone woman to beare: & I haue borne, and borne, and borne, and haue bin fub'dof, and fob'd-off, from this day to that day, that it is a shame to be thought on. There is no honesty in such dealing, vnless a woman should be made an Asse and a Beast, to beare every Knaues wrong. Enter Falstaffe and Bardolfe.

Yonder he comes, and that arrant Malmesey-Nose Bardolfe with him. Do your Offices, do your offices: M. Fang, & M. Snare, do me, do me, do me your Offices.

Fal. How now? whose Mare's dead? what's the matter?

Fang. Sir Iohn, I arrest you, at the suit of Mist. Quickly.

Falst. Away Varlets, draw Bardolfe: Cut me off the Villaines head. throw the Queene in the Channel.

Host. Throw me in the channell? Ile throw thee there. Wilt thou? wilt thou? thou bastardly rogue. Murder, murder, O thou Hony-suckle villaine, wilt thou kill Gods officers, and the Kings? O thou hony-seed Rogue, thou art a honyseed, a Man-queller, and a woman-queller.

Falst. Keep them off, Bardolfe. Fang A rescu, a rescu.

Host. Good people bring a rescu. Thou wilt not? thou wilt not? Do, do thou Rogue: Do thou Hempseed.

Page Away you Scullion, you Rampallion, you Fustilirian. Ile tucke your Catastrophe. Enter. Ch. Iustice.

Iust. What's the matter? Keepe the Peace here, hoa.

Host. Good my Lord be good to me. I beseech you stand to me.

Ch. Iust. How now Sir Iohn? What are you brawling here? Doth this become your place, your time, and businesse? You should haue bene well on your way to Yorke. Stand from him Fellow; wherefore hang'st vpon him?

Host. Oh my most worshipfull Lord, and't please your Grace, I am a poore widdow of Eastcheap, and he is arrested at my suit. Ch. Iust. For what summe?

Host. It is more then for some (my Lord) it is for all: all I haue, he hath eaten me out of house and home; hee hath put all my substance into that fat belly of his: but I will haue some of it out again, or I will ride thee o'Nights, like the Mare.

Falst. I thinke I am as like to ride the Mare, if I haue any vantage of ground, to get vp.

Ch. Iust. How comes this, Sir Iohn? Fy, what a man of good temper would endure this tempest of exclamation? Are you not asham'd to inforce a poore Widdowe to so rough a course, to come by her owne?

Falst. What is the grosse summe that I owe thee?

Host. Marry (if thou wer't an honest man) thy selfe, & the many too. Thou didst sweare to mee vpon a parcell gilt Goblet, sitting in my Dolphin-chamber at the round table, by a sea-cole fire, on Wednesday in Whitson week, when the Prince broke thy head for lik'ning him to a singing man of Windsor; Thou didst sweare to me then (as I was washing thy wound) to marry me, and make mee my Lady thy wife. Canst ye deny it? Did not goodwife Keech the Butchers wife come in then, and cal me gossip Quickly? commng in to borrow a messe of Vinegar: telling vs, she had a good dish of Prawnes: whereby ye didst desire to eat some: whereby I told thee they were ill for a greene wound? And didst not thou (when she was gone downe staires) desire me to be no more familiar with such poore people, saying, that ere long they should call me Madam? And did ye not kisse me, and bid mee fetch thee 30. s? I put thee now to thy Book-oath, deny it if thou canst?

Fal. My Lord, this is a poore mad soule: and she sayes vp & downe the town, that her eldest son is like you. She hath bin in good case, & the truth is, poverty hath distracted her: but for these foolish Officers, I beseech you, I may haue redresse against them.

Iust. Sir Iohn, sir Iohn. I am well acquainted with your maner of wrenching the true cause, the false way. It is not a confident brow, nor the throng of wordes, that come with such (more then impudent) sawcinesse from you, can thrust me from a leuell consideration, I know you ha' practis'd vpon the easie-yeelding spirit of this woman.

Host. Yes in troth my Lord.

Iust. Prethee peace: pay her the debt you owe her, and vnpay the villany you haue done her: the one you may do with sterling money, & the other with currant repentance.

Fal. My Lord, I will not vndergo this sneape without reply. You call honorable Boldnes, impudent Sawcinesse: If a man will curtsie, and say nothing, he is vertuous: No, my Lord (your humble duty remembred) I will not be your sutor. I say to you, I desire deliu'rance from these Officers being vpon hasty employment in the Kings Affaires.

Iust. You speake, as having power to do wrong: But answer in the effect of your Reputation, and satisfie the poore women.

Falst. Come hither Hostesse. Enter M. Gower

Ch. Iust. Now Master Gower; What newes?

Gow. The King (my Lord) and Henrie Prince of Wales Are neere at hand: The rest the Paper tellers.

Falst. As I am a Gentleman.

Host. Nay, you said so before.

Fal. As I am a Gentleman. Come, no more words of it.

Host. By this Heauenly ground I tread on, I must be faine to pawne both my Plate, and the Tapistry of my dyning Chambers.

Fal. Glasses, glasses, is the onely drinking; and for thy walles a pretty slight Drollery, or the Storie of the Prodigall, or the Germane hunting in Waterworke, is worth a thousand of these Bed-hangings, and these Fly-bitten Tapistries. Let it be tenne pound (if thou canst.) Come, if it were not for thy humours, there is not a better Wench in England. Go, wash thy face, and draw thy Action: Come, thou must not bee in this humour with me, come, I know thou was't set on to this.

Hosp. Prethee (Sir Iohn) let it be but twenty Nobles, I loath to pawne my Plate, in good earnest Ia.

Fal. Let it alone, Ile make other shift: you'l be a fool still.

Hosp. Well, you shall have it although I pawne my Gowne. I hope you'l come to Supper. You'l pay me altogether?

Fal. Will I live? Go with her, with her; hooke-on, hooke-on.

Hosp. Will you have Doll Tearsheet meet you at supper?

Fal. No more words. Let's have her.

Ch. Iust. I have heard better newes.

Fal What's the newes (my good Lord?)

Ch. Iu. Where lay the King last night?

Bist. At Basingstoke my Lord.

Fal. I hope (my Lord) all's well. What is the newes my Lord?

Ch. Iust. Come all his Forces backe?

Mess. No: Fifteene hundred Foot, five hundred Horse Are march'd up to my Lord of Lancaster, Against Northumberland, and the Archbishop.

Fal. Comes the King backe from Wales, my noble Lr

Ch. Iust. You shall have Letters of me presently.
Come, go along with me, good M. Gower.

Fal. My Lord.

Ch. Iust. What's the matter?

Fal. Master Gower, shall I entreate you with mee to dinner?

Gow. I must waite upon my good Lord here.
I thanke you, good Sir Iohn.

Ch. Iust. Sir Iohn, you loyter here too long being you are to take Souldiers up, in Countries as you go.

Fal. Will you sup with me, Master Gower?

Ch. Iust. What foolish Master taught you these manners, Sir Iohn?

Fal. Master Gower, if they become mee not, hee was a Foole that taught them mee. This is the right Fencing grace (my Lord) tap for tap, and so part faire.

Ch. Iust Now the Lord lighten thee, thou art a great Foole. Exeunt

Scena Secunda.

Enter Prince Henry, Poins, Bardolfe, and Page.

Prin. Trust me, I am exceeding weary.

Poin. Is it come to that? I had thought weariness durst not have sattach'd one of so high blood.

Prin. It doth: though it discolours the complexion of my Greatnesse to acknowledge it. Doth it not shew vilderly in me, to desire small Beere?

Poin. Why, a Prince should not be so loadsly studied, as to remember so weake a Composition.

Prince. Belike then, my Appetite was not Princely got, for (in troth) I do now remember the poore Creature, Small Beere. But indeede these humble considerations make me out of loue with my Greatnesse. What a disgrace is it to me, to remember thy name? Or to know thy face to morrow? Or to take note how many paire of Silk stockings thou hast? (Viz. these, and those that were thy peach-colour'd ones:) Or to beare the Inuentorie of thy shirts, as one for superfluity, and one other, for vse. But that the Tennis-Court-keeper knowes better than I, for it is a low ebbe of Linnen with thee, when thou keep'st not Racket there, as thou hast not done a great while, because the rest of thy Low Countries, have made a shift to eate up thy Holland.

Poin. How till it followes, after you have labour'd so hard, you should talke so idlely? Tell me how many good yong Princes would do so, their Fathers lying so sicke, as yours is?

Prin. Shall I tell thee one thing, Poines?

Poin Yes: and let it be an excellent good thing.

Prin. It shall serue among wines of no higher breeding then thine.

Poin. Go to: I stand the push of your one thing, that you'l tell.

Prin. Why, I tell thee, it is not meet, that I should be sad now my Father is sicke: albeit I could tell to thee (as to one it pleases me, for fault of a better, to call my friend) I could be sad, and sad indeed too.

Poin Very hardly, upon such a subiect.

Prin. Thou think'st me as farre in the Diuels Booke, as thou, and Falstaffe, for obduracie and perstinacie. Let the end try the man. But I tell thee, my heart bleeds inwardly, that my Father is so sicke: and keeping such vild company as thou art, hath in reason taken from me, all ostentation of sorrow.

Poin. The reason?

Prin. What would'st thou think of me, if I should weep?

Poin. I would think thee a most Princely hypocrite.

Prin. It would be every man's thought: and thou art a blessed Fellow, to think as every man thinkes: never a man's thought in the world, keepes the Rode-way better than thine: every man would think me an Hypocrite indeede. And what accrues your most worshipful thought to thinke so?

Poin. Why, because you haue been so lewde, and so much ingrossed to Falstaffe.

Prin. And to thee.

Poines. Nay, I am well spoken of, I can heare it with mine owne eares: the worst that they can say of me is, that I am a second Brother, and that I am a proper Fellowe of my hands: and those two things I confesse I cannot helpe. Looke, looke, here comes Bardolfe.

Prince. And the Boy that I gave Falstaffe, he had him from me Christian, and see if the fat villain haue not transform'd him Ape.

Enter Bardolfe.

Bar. Saue your Grace.

Prin. And yours, most Noble Bardolfe.

Poin. Come you pernitious Asse, you bashfull Foole, must you be blushing? Wherefore blush you now? what a Maidenly man at Armes are you become? Is it such a matter to get a Pottle-pott Maiden-head?

Page. He call'd me even now (my Lord) through a red Lattice, and I could discerne no part of his face from the window:

wiedow: at last I spy'd his eyes, and me thought he had made two holes in the Ale-wives new Petticoat, & peeped through.

Prin. Hath not the boy profited?

Bar. Away, you horson vpright Rabbet, away.

Page. Away, you rascally Abbots drooms, away.

Prin. Instruct vs Boy: what dreame, Boy?

Page. Marry (my Lord) Abbots dream'd, she was delier'd of a Firebrand, and therefore I call him her dream.

Prince. A Crownes-worth of good Interpretation: There it is, Boy.

Poin. O that this good Blossome could be kept from Cankers: Well, there is fiu pence to preserue thee.

Bard. If you do not make him be hang'd among you, the gallowes shall be wrong'd.

Prince. And how doth thy Master, Bardolph?

Bar. Well, my good Lord: he heard of your Graces comming to Towne. There's a Letter for you.

Poin. Delitter'd with good respect: And how doth the Marshalles, your Master?

Bard. In bodily health Sir.

Poin. Marry, the tenour all part needes a Physitian: but that moues not him: though that be sicke, it dyes not.

Prince. I do allow this Wen to bee as familiar with me, as my dogge: and he holds his place, for looke you he writes.

Poin. Letter. John Falstaffe Knight: (Every man must know that, as oft as hee hath occasion to name himselfe:) Even like those that are kinne to the King, for they never pricke their finger, but they say, there is some of the kings blood spilt. How comes that (sayes he) that takes vpon him not to concaine? the answer is as ready as a borrowed cap: I am the Kings poore Cosin, Sir.

Prince. Nay, they will be kin to vs, but they will fetch it from Iaphet. But to the Letter: —Sir John Falstaffe, Knight, to the Sonne of the King, nearest his Father, Harry Prince of Wales, greeting.

Poin. Why this is a Certificate.

Prin. Peace.

I will imitate the honourable Romaines in brauity.

Poin. Sure he meanes brauity in breach: short-winded. I commend me to thee, I commend thee, and I leaue thee. Do not too familiar with Poins, for he misuses thy Fauours so much, that he swears thou art to marrie his Sister Nell. Repent at idle times as thou mayst, and so farewell.

Thine by yea and no: which is as much as to say, as thou vsest him. Iacke Falstaffe with my Familiars
John with my Brothers and Sisters: & Sir
John, with all Europe.

My Lord, I will speepe this Letter in Sack, and make him eate it.

Prin. That's to make him eate twenty of his Words. But do you vse me thus Ned? Must I marry your Sister?

Poin. May the Wench haue no worse Fortune. But I never said so.

Prin. Well, thou we play the Fooles with the time, & the spirites of the wise, sit in the clouds, and mocke vs: Is your Master heere in London?

Bard. Yes my Lord.

Prin. Where supper he? Doth the old Bore, feede in the old Frankfort?

Bard. At the old place my Lord, in Eest-cheape.

Prin. What Company?

Page. Ephesians my Lord, of the old Church.

Prin. Sup my women with him?

Page. None my Lord, but old Mistris Quickly, and M. Doll Tearsheet.

Prin. What Pagan may that be?

Page. A proper Gentlewoman, Sir, and a Kinswoman of my Master.

Prin. Even such Kin, as the Parish Heyfers are to the Towne-Bull?

Shall we steale vpon them (Ned) at Supper?

Poin. I am your shadow, my Lord, I'le follow you.

Prin. Sirrah, you boy, and Bardolph, no worse to your Master that I am yet in Towne.

There's for your silence.

Bar. I haue no tongue, sir.

Page. And for mine Sir, I will gouerne it.

Prin. Fare ye well: go.

This Doll Tearsheet should be some Rode.

Poin. I warrant you, as common as the way betweene S. Albans, and London.

Prin. How ma ghe we see Falstaffe bestow himselfe to night, in his true colours, and not our selues be seene?

Poin. Put on two Leather Ierkins, and Aprons, and wait vpon him at his Table, like Drawers.

Prin. From a God, to a Bull? A heauie declension: It was Ioues case. From a Prince, to a Prentice, a low transformation, that shall be mine: for in every thing, the purpose must weigh with the folly. Follow me Ned. Exeunt

Scena Tertia.

Enter Northumberland, his Ladie, and Harrie Percies Ladie.

North. I prethee loving Wife, and gentle Daughter,
Giue an eare my vnto my rough Affaires:
Put not you on the visage of the Times,
And be like them to Percie, troublesome.

Wife. I haue given over, I will speak no more,
Do what you will: your Wisedome, be your guide.

North. Alas (sweet Wife) my Honor is at pawne,
And but my going, nothing can redeeme it.

La. Oh yet, for heauens sake, go not to these Warres;
The Time was (Father) when you broke your word,
When you were more endear'd to it, then now,
When your owne Percy when my heart-deere Harry,
Threw many a Northward looke, to see his Father
Bring vp his Powres: but he did long in vaine.
Who then perswaded you to stay at home?
There were two Honors lost; Yours, and your Sonnes.
For Yours, may heauenly glory brighten it:
For His, it stucke vpon him, as the Sunne
In the gray vault of Heauen: and by his Light
Did all the Chiualrie of England moue
To do braue Acts. He was (indeed) the Glasse
Wherein the Noble-Youth did dresse themselues.
He had no Legges, that practis'd not his Gate:
And speaking thicke (which Nature made his blemish)
Became the Accents of the Valiant.
For those that could speake low, and tardily,
Would turne their owne Perfection, to Abuse,
To seeme like him. So that in Speech, in Gate,
In Diet, in Affections of delight,
In Militarie Rules, Humors of Blood,

He was the Marke, and Glasse, Copy, and Booke,
That fashion'd others. And him, O wondrous! him,
O Miracle of Men! Him did you leave
(Second to none) vn-seconded by you,
To looke vpon the hideous God of Warre,
In dis-aduantage, to abide a field,
Where nothing but the sound of Hotspurs Name
Did seeme defensible: so you left him.
Never, O never doe his Ghost the wrong,
To hold your Honor more precise and nice
With others, then with him. Let them alone:
The Marshall and the Arch-bishop are strong.
Had my sweet Harry had but halfe their Numbers,
To day might I (hanging on Hotspurs Neche)
Haue talk'd of Monmouth's Grave.

North. Beshrew your heart,
(Faire Daughter) you doe draw my Spirits from me,
With new lamenting ancient Over-sights.
But I must goe, and meet with Danger there,
Or it will seeke me in another place,
And finde me worse prouided.

Wife. O fly to Scotland,
Till that the Nobles, and the armed Commons,
Haue of their Puissance made a little taste.

Lady. If they get ground, and vantage of the King,
Then ioyne you with them, like a Ribbe of Steele,
To make Strength stronger. But, for all our loues,
First let them try themselues. So did your Sonne,
He was so suffer'd; so came I a Widow
And never shall haue length of Life enough,
To raine vpon Remembrance with mine Eyes,
That it may grow, and sprouve, as high as Heauen,
For Recordation to my Noble Husband.

North. Come, come, go in with me: 'tis with my Minde
As with the Tyde, swell'd vp vnto his height,
That makes a still-stand, running neyther way.
Faine would I goe to meet the Arch-bishop,
But many thousand Reasons hold me backe.
I will resolue for Scotland. there am I,
Till Time and Vantage craue my company. Exeunt

Scæna Quarta.

Enter two Drawers.

1. Drawer. What hast thou brought there? Apple-Johns? Thou know'st Sir Iohn cannot endure an Apple-Iohn.

2. Draw. Thou say'st true: the Prince once set a Dish of Apple-Iohns before him, and told him there were fiue more Sir Iohns: and, putting off his Hat, said, I will now take my leaue of these fiue dre, round, old-withe'd Knights. It anger'd him to the heart: but he hath forgot that.

1. Draw. Why then cover, and set them downe: and see if thou canst finde out Sneaker Noyse; Mistris Tearsheet would fayne haue some Musique.

3. Draw. Sirrha, here will be the Prince, and Master Poins, anon: and they will put on two of our Ierkins, and Aprons, and Sir Iohn must not know of it: Bardolph hath brought word.

1. Draw. Then here will be old Vice. it will be an excellent stratagem.

2. Draw. He see if I can finde out Sneaker. Exit.

Enter Hostesse, and Dol.

Host. Sweet-heart, me thinkes now you are in an excellent good temperalitie: your Pulsidge beates as extraordinarily, as heart would desire; and your Colour (I warrant you) is as red as any Rose: But you haue drunke too much Canaries, and that's a marrellous searching Wine; and it perfumes the blood, ere wee can say what's thin. How doe you now?

Dol. Better then I was: Hem.

Host. Why that was well said: A good heart's worth Gold. Looke, here comes Sir Iohn.

Enter Falstaffe.

Falst. When Arthur first in Court—(empties the Iordan) and was a worthy King. How now Mistris Dol?

Host. Sick of a Calme: yea, good-sooth.

Falst. So is all her Sect: if they be once in a Calme, they are sick.

Dol. You muddie Rascall, is that all the comfort you giue me?

Falst. You make fat Rascalls, Mistris Dol.

Dol. I make them? Gluttonie and Diseases make them, I make them not.

Falst. If the Cooke make the Gluttonie, you helpe to make the Diseases (Dol) we catch of you (Dol) we catch of you: Grant that, my poore Vertue, grant that.

Dol. I marry, our Chaynes, and our Iewels.

Falst. Your Brooches, Pearles, and Owches: For to serue bravely, is to come halting off: you know, to come off the Breach, with his Pike bent bravely, and to Surgerie bravely; to venture vpon the charg'd-Chambers bravely.

Host. Why this is the olde fashion: you two never meete, but you fall to some discord: you are both (in good troth) as Rheumatike as two dry Toasts, you cannot one beare with anothers Confirmities. What the good-yere? One must beare, and that must bee you. you are the weaker Vessell; as they say, the emptier Vessell.

Dol. Can a weake emptie Vessell beare such a huge full Hogs-head? There's a whole Marchants Venture of Bordeux-Stuffe in him: you haue not seene a Hulke better stuffe in the Hold. Come, He be friends with thee Iacke. Thou art going to the Warres, and whether I shall euer see thee agame, or no, there is no body cares.

Enter Drawer.

Drawer. Sir, Ancient Pistoll is below, and would speake with you.

Dol. Hang him, swaggering Rascall, let him not come hither. it is the foule-mouth'dst Rogue in England.

Host. If hee swagger, let him not come here: I must liue amongst my Neighbors, He no Swaggerers: I am in good name, and fame, with the very best: shut the doore, there comes no Swaggerers heere. I haue not liu'd all this while, to haue swaggering now: shut the doore, I pray you.

Falst. Do'st thou heare, Hostesse?

Host. Pray you pacifie your selfe (Sir Iohn) there comes no Swaggerers heere.

Falst. Do'st

Tall. Do'ſt thou heare? it is mine Ancient.

Hoſt. Tilly-fally (Sir Iohn) never tell me, your ancient Swaggerer comes not in my doores. I was before Master Tiſick, the Deputie, the other day: and as hee ſaid to me, it was no longer agoe then Wednesday laſt: Neighbour Quickly (ſayes hee;) Maſter Dumbe, our Miniſter, was by then: Neighbour Quickly (ſayes hee) receive thoſe that are Civill; for (ſayth hee) you are in an ill Name: now hee ſaid ſo, I can tell whereupon: for (ſayes hee) you are an honeſt Woman, and well thought on; therefore take heede what Guests you receive: Receive (ſayes hee) no ſwaggering Companions. There comes none heere. You would bleſſe you to heare what hee ſaid. No, He no Swaggerers.

Falſt. Hee's no Swaggerer (Hoſteſſe:) a tame Cheater, hee: you may ſtroke him as gently, as a Puppie Greyhound: hee will not ſwagger with a Barberie Henne, if her feathers turne backe in any ſhew of reſiſtance. Call him vp (Drawer.)

Hoſt. Cheater, call you him? I will barre no honeſt man my houſe, nor no Cheater: but I doe not love ſwaggering; I am the worſe when one ſayes, (ſwagger: Feele Maſters, how I ſhake: looke you, I warrant you.

Dol. So you doe, Hoſteſſe.

Hoſt. Doe I? yea, in very truth doe I, if it were an Aſpen Leafe: I cannot abide Swaggerers.

Enter Piſtol, and Bardolph and his Boy.

Pyſ. Save you, Sir Iohn.

Falſt. Welcome Ancient Piſtol. Here (Piſtol) I charge you with a Cup of Sacke: doe you diſcharge vpon mine Hoſteſſe.

Pyſ. I will diſcharge vpon her (Sir Iohn) with two Bullets.

Falſt. She is Piſtoll-proofe (Sir) you ſhall hardly offend her.

Hoſt. Come, Ile drinke no Proofes, nor no Bullets: I will drinke no more then will doe me good, for no mans pleaſure, I.

Pyſ. Then to you (Miſtris Dorothie) I will charge you.

Dol. Charge me? I ſcorne you (ſcarlet Companion) what? you poore, baſe, raſcally, cheating, lacke-Linnen-Mate: away you mouldie Rogue, away; I am meat for your Maſter.

Pyſ. I know you, Miſtris Dorothie.

Dol. Away you Cut-purſe Raſcall, you filthy Bung, away: By this Wine, Ile thruſt my Knife in your mouldie Chappes, if you play the ſawcie Cuttle with me. Away you Bottle-Ale Raſcall, you Baſket-hilt ſtale Iugler, you. Since when, I pray you, Sir? what, with two Points on your ſhoulder? much.

Pyſ. I will murther your Ruffe, for this.

Hoſt No, good Captaine Piſtol: not heere, ſweete Captaine

Dol. Captaine? thou abhominable damn'd Cheater, art thou not a ſhame'd to be call'd Captaine? If Captaines were of my minde, they would trunchion you out, for taking their Names vpon you, before you have earn'd them. You a Captaine? you ſlaue, for what? for tearing a poore Whores Ruffe in a Bawdy-houſe? Hee a Captaine? hang him Rogue, hee liues vpon mouldie ſtew'd-Prunes, and dry'de Cakes. A Captaine? Theſe Villaines will make the word Captaine odious: Therefore Captaines had neede looke to it.

Bard. Pray thee goe downe, good Ancient.

Falſt. Hearke thee hither, Miſtris Dol.

Piſt. Not I: I tell thee what, Corporall Bardolph, I could taxe her: Be be reuenge'd on her.

Page. Pray thee goe downe.

Pyſ. Ile ſee her damn'd firſt: to Plutos damn'd Lake, to the Infernall Deepe, where Erebus and Tortures vilde alſo. Hold Hooke and Line, ſay I: Downe: downe Dogges, downe Fates: haue wee not Hiren here?

Hoſt. Good Captaine Peaſel be quiet, it is very late; I beſeeche you now, aggreaue your Choler.

Pyſ. Theſe be good Humors indeede. Shall Pack-Horſes, and hollow-pamper'd Iades of Aſia, which cannot goe but thirtie miles a day, compare with Cæſar, and with Cannibals, and Trotian Greekes? nay, rather damne them with King Cerberus, and let the Welkin roare: ſhall wee fall foule for Toyes?

Hoſt. By my troth Captaine, theſe are very bitter words.

Bard. Be gone, good Ancient: this will grow to a Brawle anon.

Pyſ. Die men, like Dogges; give Crownes like Pinnes: Haue we not Hiren here?

Hoſt. On my word (Captaine) there's none ſuch here. What the good-yere, doe you thinke I would denye her? I pray be quiet.

Piſt. Then feed, and be fat (my faire Calipolis.) Come, give me ſome Sack, Si fortuna me tormenta, ſperato me contento. Feare wee broad-ſides? No, let the Fiend give fire: Give me ſome Sack: and Sweet-heart lye thou there: Come wee to full Points here, and are et cætera? nothing?

Fal. Piſtol, I would be quiet.

Piſt. Sweet Knight, I kiſſe thy Neaſfes: what? wee haue ſeene the ſeuen Starres.

Dol. Thruſt him downe ſtayres, I cannot endure ſuch a Faſtian Raſcall.

Pyſ. Thruſt him downe ſtayres? know we not Galloway Nagges?

Fal. Quoit him downe (Bardolph) like a ſhouel-groat ſhilling: nay, if hee doe nothing but ſpeake nothing, hee ſhall be nothing here.

Bard. Come, get you downe ſtayres.

Pyſ. What? ſhall wee haue Incision? ſhall wee embrew? then Death rocke me aſleepe, abridge my dolefull dayes: why then let grieuous, gaſtly, gaping Wounds, untwin'd the Siſters three: Come Atropos, I ſay.

Hoſt. Here's good ſtuffe toward.

Fal. Give me my Rapier, Boy.

Dol. I prethee Iack, I prethee doe not draw.

Fal. Get you downe ſtayres.

Hoſt. Here's a goodly tumult: Ile forſweare keeping houſe, before Ile be in theſe tirrits, and frights. So Murther I warrant now. Alas, alas, put vp your naked Weapons, put vp your naked Weapons.

Dol. I prethee Iack, be quiet, the Raſcall is gone: ah, you whorſon little valiant Villaine, you.

Hoſt. Are you not hurt i'th' Groyne? me thought hee made a ſtrewd Thruſt at your Belly.

Fal. Haue you turn'd him out of doores?

Bard. Yes Sir: the Raſcall's drunke: you haue hurt him (Sir) in the ſhoulder.

Fal. A Raſcall to braue me.

Dol. Ah, you ſweet little Rogue, you: alas, poore Ape, how thou ſweat'ſt? Come, let me wipe thy Face: Come on, you whorſon Chops: Ah Rogue, I loue thee: Thou art art as valorous as Hector of Troy, worth five of Agamemnon, and tenne times better then the nine Worthies: ah Villaine.

Fal. A rascally Slaue, I will toſſe the Rogue in a Blanket.

Dol. Doe, if thou dar'ſt for thy heart: if thou doo'ſt, Ile canuas thee betweene a paire of Sheetes.

Enter Muſique.

Page. The Muſique is come, Sir.

Fal. Let them play: play Sirs. Sit on my Knee, Dol. A Raſcall, bragging Slaue: the Rogue fled from me like Quick-ſiluer.

Dol. And thou followd'ſt him like a Church: thou whoreſon little tydie Bartholmew Bore-pigge, when wilt thou leaue fighting on dayes, and foyning on nights, and begin to patch vp thine old Body for Heauen?

Enter the Prince and Poins diſguis'd.

Fal. Peace (good Dol) doe not ſpeake like a Deaths-head: doe not bid me remember mine end.

Dol. Sirrha, what humor is the Prince of?

Fal. A good ſhallow young fellow: hee would haue made a good Pantler, hee would haue chipp'd Bread well.

Dol. They ſay Poines hath a good Wit.

Fal. Hee a good Wit? hang him Baboone, his Wit is as thicke as Tewkesburie Muſtard: there is no more conceit in him, then is in a Mallet.

Dol. Why doth the Prince loue him ſo then?

Fal. Becauſe their Legges are both of a bigneſſe: and hee playes at Quoits well, and eates Conger and Fennell, and drinkes off Candles ends for Flap-dragons, and rides the wilde-Mare with the Boyes, and iumpes vpon Ioyn'd-ſtooles, and ſweares with a good grace, and weares his Boot very ſmooth, like vnto the Signe of the Legge; and breeden no bate with telling of diſcreete ſtories: and ſuch other Gamboll Faculties hee hath, that ſhew a weake Minde, and an able Body, for the which the Prince admits him; for the Prince himſelfe is ſuch another: the weight of an hayre will turne the Scales betweene their Habere-de-pois.

Prince. Would not this Naue of a Wheele haue his Eares cut off?

Poin. Let vs beat him before his Whore.

Prince. Looke, if the wither'd Elder hath not his Poll claw'd like a Parrot.

Poin. Is it not ſtrange, that Deſire ſhould ſo many yeeres out-liue performance?

Fal. Kiſſe me Dol.

Prince. Saturne and Venus this yeere in Conkunction? What ſayes the Almanack to that?

Poin. And looke whether the fierie Trigon, his Man, be not liſping to his Maſters old Tables, his Note-booke, his Councell-keeper?

Fal. Thou do'ſt giue me flatt'ring Buſſes.

Dol. Nay truely, I kiſſe thee with a moſt conſtant heart.

Fal. I am olde, I am olde.

Dol. I loue thee better, then I loue ere a ſcurrie young Boy of them all.

Fal. What Stuffe wilt thou haue a Kirtle of? I ſhall receiue Money on Thurſday: thou ſhalt haue a Cappe to morrow. A merrie Song, come: it growes late, wee will to Bed. Thou wilt forget me, when I am gone.

Dol. Thou wilt ſet me a weeping, if thou ſoy'ſt ſo: prouc that euer I dreſſe my ſelfe handſome, till thy returne: well, hearken the end.

Fal. Some Sack, Francis.

Prin.Poin. Anon, anon, Sir.

Fal. Ha? a Baſtard Sonne of the Kings? And art not thou Poines, his Brother?

Prince. Why thou Globe of ſinfull Continents, what a Life do'ſt thou lead?

Fal. A better then thou: I am a Gentleman, thou art a Drawer.

Prince. Very true, Sir: and I come to draw you out by the Eares.

Hoſt. Oh, the Lord preſerue thy good Grace: Welcome to London. Now Heauen bleſſe that ſweete Face of thine: what, are you come from Wales?

Fal. Thou whoreſon mad Compound of Maieſtie: by this light Flеſh, and corrupt Blood, thou art welcome.

Dol. How? you fat Foole, I ſcorne you.

Poin. My Lord, hee will driue you out of your reuenge, and turne all to a merriment, if you take not the heat.

Prince. You whoreſon Candle-mynde you, how vildly did you ſpeake of me even now, before this honeſt, vertuous, ciuill Gentlewoman?

Hoſt. Bleſſing on your good heart, and ſo ſhee is by my troth.

Fal. Didſt thou heare me?

Prince. Yes: and you knew me, as you did when you ranne away by Gads-hill: you knew I was at your back, and ſpoke it on purpoſe, to trie my patience.

Fal. No, no, no: not ſo: I did not thinke, thou waſt within hearing.

Prince. I ſhall driue you then to confeſſe the wilfull abuſe, and then I know how to handle you.

Fal. No abuſe (Hal) on mine Honor, no abuſe.

Prince. Not to diſpraiſe me? and call me Pantler, and Bread-chopper, and I know not what?

Fal. No abuſe (Hal.)

Poin. No abuſe?

Fal. No abuſe (Ned) in the World: honeſt Ned none. I diſpraiſ'd him before the Wicked, that the Wicked might not fall in loue with him: In which doing, I haue done the part of a carefull Friend, and a true Subiect, and thy Father is to giue me thanks for it. No abuſe (Hal:) none (Ned) none; no Boyes, none.

Prince. See now whether pure Feare, and entire Cowardiſe, doth not make thee wrong this vertuous Gentlewoman, to cloſe with vs? Is ſhee of the Wicked? Is thine Hoſteſſe heere, of the Wicked? Or is the Boy of the Wicked? Or honeſt Bardolph (whoſe Zeale burnes in his Noſe) of the Wicked?

Poin. Anſwere thou dead Elme, anſwere.

Fal. The Fiend hath prickt downe Bardolph irrecouerable, and his Face is Lucifers Priuy-Kitchin, where he doth nothing but roſt Maule-Wormes: for the Boy, there is a good Angell about him, but the Deuill outbids him too.

Prince. For the Women?

Fal. For one of them, ſhee is in Hell already, and burnes poore Soules: for the other, I owe her Money; and whether ſhee bee damn'd for that, I know not.

Hoſt. No, I warrant you.

Fal. No,

Fal. No, I thinke thou art not: I thinke thou art quit for that. Marry, there is another Indictment vpon thee, for suffering flesh to bee eaten in thy house, contrary to the Law, for the which I thinke thou wilt howle.

Host. All Victuallers doe so: What is a Loyne of Mutton, or two, in a whole Lent?

Prince. You, Gentlewoman.

Dol. What sayes your Grace?

Fals. His Grace sayes that, which his flesh rebells against.

Bard. Who knocks so lowd at doore? Looke to the doore there, Francis?

Enter Peto.

Prince. Peto, how now? what newes?

Peto. The King, your Father, is at Westminster, And there are twentie weake and wearied Postes, Come from the North: and as I came along, I met, and ouer-tooke a dozen Captaines, Bare-headed, sweating, knocking at the Taverns, And asking every one for Sir John Falstaffe.

Prince. By Heaven (Peto) I feele me much to blame, So idly to prophane the precious time, When Tempest of Commotion, like the South, Borne with black Vapour, doth begin to melt, And drop vpon our bare vnarmed heads. Giue me my Sword, and Cloake: Falstaffe, good night. Exit.

Fall. Now comes in the sweetest Morsell of the night, and wee must hence, and leaue it vnpickt. More knocking at the doore? How now? what's the matter?

Bard. You must away to Court, Sir, presently, A dozen Captaines stay at doore for you.

Fals. Pay the Musitians, Sirrha: farewell Hostesse, farewell Dol. You see (my good Wenches) how men of Merit are sought after: the vndeserver may sleepe, when the man of Action is call'd on. Farewell good Wenches: If I be not sent away poste, I will see you againe, ere I goe.

Dol. I cannot speake: if my heart bee not readie to burst— Well (sweete Iacke) haue a care of thy selfe.

Fals. Farewell, farewell. Exit.

Host. Well, fare thee well: I haue knowne thee these twentie nine yeeres, come Pescod-time. but an honester, and truer-hearted man— Well, fare thee well.

Bard. Mistris Tearse-sheet.

Host. What's the matter?

Bard. Bid Mistris Tearse-sheet come to my Master.

Host. Oh runne Dol, runne: runne, good Dol. Exeunt.

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Enter the King, with a Page.

King. Goe, call the Earles of Surrey, and of Warwick: But ere they come, bid them ore-reade these Letters, And well consider of them: make good speed. Exit.

How many thousand of my poorest Subiects Are at this houre asleepe? O Sleepe, O gentle Sleepe, Nature's soft Nurse, how haue I frighted thee, That thou no more wilt weigh my eye-lids downe, And steepe my Senses in Forgetfulnesse? Why rather (Sleepe) lyest thou in smoakie Cribs, Vpon vneasie Pallads stretching thee, And hush'st with buzzing Night, flyes to thy slumber, Then in the perfum'd Chambers of the Great? Vnder the Canopies of costly State, And lull'd with sounds of sweetest Melodie? O thou dull God, why lyest thou with the vile, In loathsome Beds, and leau'st the Kingly Couch, A Watch-case, or a common Larum-Bell? Wilt thou, vpon the high and giddie Mast, Seale vp the Ship-boyes Eyes, and rock his Braines, In Cradle of the rude imperious Surge, And in the visitation of the Windes, Who take the Ruffian Billowes by the top, Curling their monstrous heads, and hanging them With deafning Clamors in the slipp'ry Clouds, That with the hurley, Death it selfe awakes? Canst thou (O partial Sleepe) giue thy Repose To the wet Sea-Boy, in an houre so rude: And in the calmest, and most stillest Night, With all appliances, and meanes to boote, Deny it to a King? Then happy Lowe, lye downe, Vneasie lyes the Head, that weares a Crowne.

Enter Warwicke and Surrey.

War. Many good-morrowes to your Maiestie.

King. Is it good-morrow, Lords?

War. 'Tis One a Clock, and past.

King. Why then good-morrow to you all (my Lords) Haue you read o're the Letters that I sent you?

War. We haue (my Liege.)

King. Then you perceiue the Body of our Kingdome, How foule it is: what ranke Diseases grow, And with what danger, neere the Heart of it?

War. It is but as a Body, yet distemper'd, Which to his former strength may be restor'd, With good aduice, and little Medicine: My Lord Northumberland will soone be cool'd.

King. Oh Heauen, that one might read the Book of Fate, And see the reuolution of the Times Make Mountaines leuell, and the Continent (Weaste of solide firmenesse) melt it selfe Into the Sea: and other Times, to see The beachie Girdle of the Ocean Too wide for Neptunes hippes; how Chances mocks And Changes fill the Cuppe of Alteration With diuers Liquors. 'Tis not tenne yeeres gone, Since Richard, and Northumberland, great friends, Did feast together; and in two yeeres after, Were they at Warres. It is but eight yeeres since, This Percie was the man, neerest my Soule, Who, like a Brother, toyl'd in my Affaires, And layd his Loue and Life vnder my foot: Yea, for my sake, even to the eyes of Richard Gaue him defiance. But which of you was by (You Cousin Nevil, as I may remember) When Richard, with his Eye, brim-full of Teares, (Then check'd, and rated by Northumberland) Did speake these words (now proue'd a Prophecie:) Northumberland, thou Ladder, by the which

Mv

My Cousin Bullingbrooke ascends my Throne:
(Though then, Heaven knowes, I had no such intent,
But that necessitie so bow'd the State,
That I and Greatnesse were compell'd to kisse:)
The Time shall come, (thus did hee follow it)
The Time will come, that foule Sinne gathering head,
Shall breake into Corruption: so went on,
Fore-telling this same Times Condition,
And the diuision of our Amitie.

War. There is a Historie in all mens Liues,
Figuring the nature of the Times deceas'd:
The which obserue'd, a man may prophecie
With a neere ayme, of the main chance of things,
As yet not come to Life, which in their Seedes
And weake beginnings lye intreatured:
Such things become the Hatch and Brood of Time;
And by the necessarie forme of this,
King Richard might create a perfect guesse,
That great Northumberland, then false to him,
Would of that Seed, grow to a greater falsenesse,
Which should not finde a ground to roote vpon,
Vnlesse on you.

King. Are these things then Necessities?
Then let vs meete them like Necessities;
And that same word, even now cryes out on vs:
They say, the Bishop and Northumberland
Are fifteen thousand strong.

War. It cannot be (my Lord:)
Rumor doth double, like the Voice, and Eccho,
The numbers of the feared. Please it your Grace
To goe to bed, vpon my Life (my Lord)
The Pow'rs that you already haue sent forth,
Shall bring this Prize in very easily.
To comfort you the more, I haue receiu'd
A certaine instance, that Glendower is dead.
Your Maiestie hath beene this fort-night ill,
And these vnseason'd howres perforce must adde
Vnto your Sicknesse.

King. I will take your counsaile:
And were these inward Warres once out of hand,
Wee would (deare Lords) vnto the Holy-Land.
Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Shallow and Silence: with Mouldie, Shadow, Wart, Feeble, Bull-calfe.

Shal. Come-on, come-on, come-on: giue mee your Hand, Sir; giue mee your Hand, Sir: an early stirrer, by the Rood. And how doth my good Cousin Silence?

Sil. Good-morrow, good Cousin Shallow.

Shal. And how doth my Cousin, your Bed-fellow? and your fairest Daughter, and mine, my God-Daughter Ellen?

Sil. Alas, a blacke Ouzell (Cousin Shallow.)

Shal. By yea and nay, Sir, I dare say my Cousin William is become a good Scholler? hee is at Oxford still, is hee not?

Sil. Indeede Sir, to my cost.

Shal. Hee must then to the Inns of Court shortly: I was once of Clements Inne; where (I thinke) they will talke of mad Shallow yet.

Sil. You were call'd lustie Shallow then (Cousin.)

Shal. I was call'd any thing: and I would haue done any thing indeede too, and roundly too. There was I, and little Iohn Doit of Staffordshire, and blacke George Bare, and Francis Pick-bone, and Will Squele a Cot-sol-man, you had not foure such Swindge-bucklers in all the Inns of Court againe: And I may say to you, wee knew where the Bona-Robas were, and had the best of them all at commandement. Then was Iacke Falstaffe (now Sir Iohn) a Boy, and Page to Thomas Mowbray, Duke of Norfolke.

Sil. This Sir Iohn (Cousin) that comes hither anon about Souldiers?

Shal. The same Sir Iohn, the very same: I saw him breake Scogan's Head at the Court-Gate, when hee was a Crack, not thus high: and the very same-day did I fight with one Sampson Stock-fish, a Fruiterer, behinde Gresyes-Inne. Oh the mad dayes that I haue spent! and to see how many of mine olde Acquaintance are dead?

Sil. Wee shall all follow (Cousin.)

Shal. Certaine: 'tis certaine: very sure, very sure: Death is certaine to all, all shall dye. How a good Yeke of Bullocks at Stamford Fayre?

Sil. Truly Cousin, I was not there.

Shal. Death is certaine. Is old Double of your Towne liuing yet?

Sil. Dead, Sir.

Shal. Dead? See, see: hee drew a good Bow: and dead? hee shot a fine Shoote. Iohn of Gaunt loued him well, and betted much Money on his head. Dead? hee would haue clapt in the Clowt at Twelue-score, and carryed you a fore-hand Shaft at fourteene, and fourteene and a halfe, that it would haue done a mans heart good to see. How a score of Ewes now?

Sil. Thereafter as they be: a score of good Ewes may be worth tenne pounds.

Shal. And is olde Double dead?

Enter Bardolph and his Boy.

Sil. Heere come two of Sir Iohn Falstaffs Men (as I thinke)

Shal. Good-morrow, honest Gentlemen.

Bard. I beseech you, which is Iustice Shallow?

Shal. I am Robert Shallow (Sir) a poore Esquire of this Countie, and one of the Kings Iustices of the Peace: What is your good pleasure with me?

Bard. My Captaine (Sir) commends him to you: my Captaine, Sir Iohn Falstaffe: a tall Gentleman, and a most gallant Leader.

Shal. Hee greetes me well: (Sir) I knew him a good Back-Sword-man. How doth the good Knight? may I aske, how my Lady his Wife doth?

Bard. Sir, pardon: a Souldier is better accommodated, then with a Wife.

Shal. It is well said, Sir; and it is well said, indeede, too: Better accommodated? it is good, yea indeede is it: good phrases are surely, and euery where very commendable. Accommodated, it comes of Accommodo: very good, a good Phrase.

Bard. Pardon, Sir, I haue heard the word. Phrase call you it? by this Day, I know not the Phrase: but I will maintaine the Word with my Sword, to be a Souldier-like Word, and a Word of exceeding good Command. Accommodated. that is, when a man is (as they say) accommodated: or, when a man is, being whereby whereby he thought to be accommodated, which is an excellent thing.

Enter Falstaffe.

Shal. It is very iust: Looke, heere comes good Sir Iohn. Giue me your hand, giue me your Worships good hand: Trust me, you looke well: and beare your yeares very well. Welcome, good Sir Iohn.

Fal. I am glad to see you well, good M. Robert Shallow: Master Sure-card as I thinke?

Shal. No sir Iohn, it is my Cosin Silence: in Commission with mee.

Fal. Good M. Silence, it well befits you should be of the peace.

Sil. Your good Worship is welcome.

Fal Fye, this is hot weather (Gentlemen) haue you prouided me heere halfe a dozen of sufficient men?

Shal. Marry haue we sir: Will you sit?

Fal. Let me see them, I beseech you.

Shal. Where's the Roll? Where's the Roll? Where's the Roll? Let me see, let me see, let me see: so, so, so: yea marry Sir. Rafe Mouldie: let them appeare as I call; let them do so, let them do so: Let mee see, Where is Mouldie?

Moul. Heere, if it please you.

Shal. What think you (Sir Iohn) a good limb'd fellow: young, strong, and of good friends.

Fal. Is thy name Mouldie?

Moul. Yea, if it please you.

Fal. 'Tis the more time thou wert vs'd.

Shal. Ha, ha, ha, most excellent. Things that are mouldie, lacke vse: very singular good. Well said Sir Iohn, very well said.

Fal. Pricke him.

Moul. I was prickt well enough before, if you could haue let me alone: my old Dame will be vndone now, for one to doe her Husbandry, and her Drudgery; you need not to haue prickt me, there are other men fitter to goe out, then I.

Fal. Go too: peace Mouldie, you shall goe. Mouldie, it is time you were spent.

Moul. Spent?

Shallow. Peace, fellow, peace; stand aside: Know you where you are? For the other sir Iohn. Let me see: Simon Shadow.

Fal. I marry, let me haue him to sit vnder: he's like to be a cold souldier.

Shal. Where's Shadow?

Shad. Heere sir.

Fal. Shadow, whose sonne art thou?

Shad. My Mothers sonne, Sir.

Fal. Thy Mothers sonne: like enough, and thy Fathers shadow: so the sonne of the Female, is the shadow of the Male: it is often so indeede, but not of the Fathers substance.

Shal. Do you like him, sir Iohn?

Fal. Shadow will serue for Summer: pricke him: For we haue a number of shadowes to fill vppe the Muster-Booke.

Shal. Thomas Wart?

Fal. Where's he?

Wart. Heere sir.

Fal. Is thy name Wart?

Wart. Yea sir.

Fal. Thou art a very ragged Wart.

Shal. Shall I pricke him downe, Sir Iohn?

Fal. It were superfluous: for his apparrel is built vpon his backe, and the whole frame stands vpon pins: pricke him no more.

Shal. Ha, ha, ha, you can do it sir: you can doe it: I commend you well.

Francis Feeble.

Feeble. Heere sir.

Shal. What Trade art thou Feeble?

Feeble. A Womans Taylor sir.

Shal. Shall I pricke him, sir?

Fal. You may:

But if he had beene a mans Taylor, he would haue prick'd you. Wilt thou make as many holes in an enemies Battaile, as thou hast done in a Womans petticoat?

Feeble. I will doe my good will sir, you can haue no more.

Fal. Well said, good Womans Tailor: Well sayde Courageous Feeble: thou wilt bee as valiant as the wrathfull Dove, or most magnanimous Mouse. Pricke the womans Taylour well Master Shallow, deepe Master Shallow.

Feeble. I would Wart might haue gone sir.

Fal. I would thou wert a mans Tailor, that thou might'st mend him, and make him fit to goe. I cannot put him to a priuate Souldier, that is the Leader of so many thousands. Let that suffice, most Forcible Feeble.

Feeble. It shall suffice.

Fal. I am bound to thee, reuerend Feeble. Who is the next?

Shal. Peter Bullcalfe of the Greene.

Fal. Yea marry, let vs see Bullcalfe.

Bul. Heere sir.

Fal. Trust me, a likely Fellow. Come, pricke me Bullcalfe till he roare againe.

Bul. Oh, good my Lord Captaine.

Fal. What? do'st thou roare before th'art prickt.

Bul. Oh sir, I am a diseased man.

Fal. What disease hast thou?

Bul. A whorson cold sir, a cough sir, which I caught with Ringing in the Kings affayres, vpon his Coronation day, sir.

Fal. Come, thou shalt go to the Warres in a Gowne: we will haue away thy Cold, and I will take such order, that thy friends shall ring for thee. Is heere all?

Shal. There is two more called then your number: you must haue but foure heere sir, and so I pray you go in with me to dinner.

Fal. Come, I will goe drinke with you, but I cannot tarry dinner. I am glad to see you in good troth, Master Shallow.

Shal. O sir Iohn, doe you remember since wee lay all night in the Winde mill, in S Georges Field.

Falstaffe. No more of that good Master Shallow? No more of that.

Shal. Ha? it was a merry night. And is Iane Nightworke alive?

Fal. She liues, M. Shallow.

Shal. She neuer could away with me.

Fal. Never, never: she would always say shee could not abide M. Shallow.

Shal. I could anger her to the heart: shee was then a Bona-Roba. Doth she hold her owne well.

Fal. Old, old, M Shallow.

Shal. Nay, she must be old, she cannot choose but be old: certaine fheet's old: and had Robin Night-worke, by old Night-worke, before I came to Clement's Inne.

Sil. That's fixtie fixe yeeres agoo.

Shal. Hah, Cousin Silence, that thou hadst seene that, that this Knight and I have seene: hah, Sir John, said I well?

Falst. We have heard the Chymes at mid-night, Master Shallow.

Shal. That we have, that we have; in faith, Sir John, we have: our watch-word was, Hem-Boyes. Come, let's to Dinner; come, let's to Dinner: Oh the days that we have seene. Come, come.

Bul. Good Master Corporate Bardolph, fland my friend, and here is fouze Harry tenne fhillings in French Crownes for you: in very truth, fir, I had as liefe be hang'd fir, as goe: and yet, for mine owne part, fir, I do not care; but rather, because I am vnwilling, and for mine owne part, have a desire to fhy with my friends: elfe, fir, I did not care, for mine owne part, fo much.

Bard. Go-too: ftand afide.

Mould. And good Master Corporall Captaine, for my old Dames fake, ftand my friend: fhee hath no body to doe any thing about her, when I am gone: and fhe is old, and cannot helpe her felfe: you fhall have fortie, fir.

Bard. Go-too: ftand afide.

Feeble. I care not, a man can die but once: wee owe a death. I will never beare a bafe minde: if it be my deftinie, fo: if it be not, fo: no man is too good to feruе his Prince: and let it goe which way it will, he that dies this yeere, is quit for the next.

Bard. Well faid, thou art a good fellow.

Feeble. Nay, I will beare no bafe minde.

Falst. Come fir, which men fhall I have?

Shal. Foure of which you pleafe.

Bard. Sir, a word with you: I have three pound, to free Mouldie and Bull-calfe.

Falst. Go-too: well.

Shal. Come, fir John, which foure will you have?

Falst. Doe you chufe for me.

Shal. Marry then, Mouldie, Bull-calfe, Feeble, and Shadow.

Falst. Mouldie, and Bull-calfe: for you Mouldie, ftay at home, till you are paft feruice: and for your part, Bull-calfe, grow till you come vnto it: I will none of you.

Shal. Sir John, Sir John, doe not your felfe wrong, they are your likeliyeft men, and I would haue you feru'd with the beft.

Falst. Will you tell me (Master Shallow) how to chufe a man? Care I for the Limbe, the Thewes, the ftature, bulke, and bigge affemblance of a man? give me the fpirit (Master Shallow.) Where's Wart? you fee what a ragged appearance it is: hee fhall charge you, and discharge you, with the motion of a Pewterers Hammer: come off, and on, fwifter then hee that gibbets on the Brewers Bucket. And this fame halfe-fac'd fellow, Shadow, give me this man: hee prefents no marke to the Enemie, the foe-man may with as great ayme levell at the edge of a Pen-knife: and for a Retreat, how fwiftly will this Feeble, the Womens Taylor, runne off. O, give me the fpare men, and fpare me the great ones. Put me a Calyuer into Wart's hand, Bardolph.

Bard. Hold Wart, Traverse: thus, thus, thus.

Falst. Come, manage me your Calyuer: fo: very well, go-too, very good, exceeding good. O, give me always a little, leane, old, chaps, bald Shot. Well faid Wart, thou art a good Scab. hold, there is a Tefter for thee.

Shal. Hee is not his Craftes-master, hee doth not doe it right. I remember at Mile-end-Greene, when I lay at Clements Inne, I was then Sir Dagonet in Arthurs Show: there was a little quiver fellow, and hee would manage you his Peece thus: and hee would about, and about, and come you in, and come you in: Rah, tah, tah, would hee fay, Bounce would hee fay, and away againe would hee goe, and again would he come: I fhall never fee fuch a fellow.

Falst. These fellowes will doe well, Master Shallow. Farewell Master Silence, I will not vse many words with you: fare you well, Gentlemen both: I thanke you: I must a dozen mile to night. Bardolph, give the Souldiers Coates.

Shal. Sir John, Heaven bleffe you, and prafper your Affaires, and fend vs Peace. As you returne, visit my houfe. Let our old acquaintance be renewed: peradventure I will with you to the Court.

Falst. I would you would, Master Shallow.

Shal. Go-too: I have fpoke at a word. Fare you well. Exit.

Falst. Fare you well, gentle Gentlemen. On Bardolph, leade the men away. As I returne, I will fearch off these Iuftices: I doe see the bottome of Iuftice Shallow. How fubiect wee old men are to this vice of Lying? This fame ftaru'd Iuftice hath done nothing but prate to me of the wildeneffe of his Youth, and the Feates hee hath done about Turnball-ftreet, and every third word a Lye, duer pay'd to the hearer, then the Turkes Tribute. I doe remember him at Clements Inne, like a man made after Supper, of a Cheefe-parung. When hee was naked, hee was, for all the world, like a forked Radifh, with a Head fantaftically carv'd vpon it with a Knife. Hee was fo forlorne, that his Dimenfions (to any thicke fight) were invincible. Hee was the very Genius of Famine: hee came ever in the rere-ward of the Fafhion: And now is this Vices Dagger become a Square, and talkes as familiarly of John of Gaunt, as if hee had beene fworne Brother to him: and I'le be fworne hee never faw him but once in the Tilt-yard, and then he burft his Head, for crowding among the Marshals men. I faw it, and told John of Gaunt, hee beat his own Name, for you might haue trafh'd him and all his Apparrell into an Eele-skinne: the Cafe of a Treble Hoboy was a Manfion for him: a Court: and now hath hee Land, and Beeves. Well, I will be acquainted with him, if I returne: and it fhall goe hard, but I will make him a Philofophers two Stones to me. If the young Dace be a Bayt for the old Pike, I fee no reafon, in the Law of Nature, but I may fnap at him. Let time fhape, and there an end. Exeunt.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter the Arch-bishop, Mowbray, Hastings, Westmerland, Colevile.

Bish. What is this Forreft call'd?

Hast. 'Tis Gualtree Forreft, and't fhall pleafe your Grace.

Bish. Here ftand (my Lords) and fend Discoverers forth, To know the numbers of our Enemies.

Hast. We

Hast. Wee haue sent forth already.
Bish. Tis well done.
My Friends, and Brethren (in these great Affaires)
I must acquaint you, that I haue receiu'd
New-dated Letters from Northumberland:
Their cold intent, tenure, and substance thus.
Here doth hee wish his Person, with such Powers
As might hold sortance with his Qualitie,
The which hee could not leuie: whereupon
Hee is retyr'd, to ripe his growing Fortunes,
To Scotland; and concludes in hearty prayers,
That your Attempts may ouer-liue the hazard,
And fearefull meeting of their Opposite.
Mow. Thus do the hopes we haue in him, touch ground,
And dash themselues to pieces.

Enter a Messenger.

Hast. Now? what newes?
Mess. West of this Forrest, scarcely off a mile,
In goodly forme, comes on the Enemie:
And by the ground they hide, I iudge their number
Vpon, or neere, the rate of thirtie thousand.
Mow. The iust proportion that we gaue them out.
Let vs sway-on, and face them in the field.

Enter Westmerland.

Bish. What well-appointed Leader fronts vs here?
Mow. I thinke it is my Lord of Westmerland.
West. Health, and faire greeting from our Generall,
The Prince, Lord Iohn, and Duke of Lancaster.
Bish. Say on (my Lord of Westmerland) in peace:
What doth concerne your coming?
West. Then (my Lord)
Vnto your Grace doe I in chiefe addresse
The substance of my Speech. If that Rebellion
Came like it selfe, in base and abiect Routs,
Led on by bloodie Youth, guarded with Rage,
And countenanc'd by Boyes, and Beggerie:
I say, if damn'd Commotion so appeare,
In his true, native and most proper shape,
You (Reuerend Father, and these Noble Lords)
Had not beene here, to dresse the vgly forme
Of base, and bloodie Insurrection,
With your faire Honors. You, Lord Arch-bishop,
Whose Sea is by a Ciuill Peace maintain'd,
Whose Beard, the Siluer Hand of Peace hath touch'd,
Whose Learning, and good Letters, Peace hath tutor'd,
Whose white Inuestments figure Innocence,
The Doue, and very blessed Spirit of Peace.
Wherefore doe you so ill translate your selfe,
Out of the Speech of Peace, that beares such grace,
Into the harsh and boysterous Tongue of Warre?
Turning your Bookes to Graues, your Inke to Blood,
Your Pennes to Launces, and your Tongue diuine
To a loud Trumpet, and a Point of Warre.
Bish. Wherefore doe I this? so the Question stands.
Briefely to this end: Wee are all diseas'd,
And with our surfetting, and wanton hourres,
Haue brought our selues into a burning Feuer,
And we must bleede for it: of which Disease,
Our late King Richard (being infected) dy'd.
But (my most Noble Lord of Westmerland)
I take not on me here as a Physician,
Nor doe I as an Enemie to Peace,
Troope in the Throngs of Militarie men:
But rather shew a while like fearefull Warre,
To dyet ranke Minds, sicke of happinesse,
And purge th'obstructions, which begin to stop
Our very Veines of Life: heare me more plainely.
I haue in equall ballance iustly weigh'd,
What wrongs our Arms may do, what wrongs we suffer,
And finde our Griefes heauier then our Offences.
Wee see which way the streame of Time doth runne,
And are enforc'd from our most quiet there,
By the rough Torrent of Occasion,
And haue the summarie of all our Griefes
(When time shall serue) to shew in Articles;
Which long ere this, wee offer'd to the King,
And might, by no Suit, gayne our Audience:
When wee are wrong'd, and would vnfold our Griefes,
Wee are deny'd access vnto his Person,
Euen by those men, that most haue done vs wrong.
The dangers of the dayes but newly gone,
Whose memorie is written on the Earth
With yet-appearing blood; and the examples
Of every Minutes instance (present now)
Hath put vs in these ill-beseeming Armes:
Not to breake Peace, or any Branch of it,
But to establish here a Peace indeede,
Concurring both in Name and Qualitie.
West. When euer yet was your Appeale deny'd?
Wherein haue you beene galled by the King?
What Peere hath beene suborn'd, to grate on you,
That you should seale this lawlesse bloody Booke
Of forg'd Rebellion, with a Seale diuine?
Bish. My Brother generall, the Common-wealth,
I make my Quarrell, in particular.
West. There is no neede of any such redresse:
Or if there were, it not belongs to you.
Mow. Why not to him in part, and to vs all,
That feele the bruizes of the dayes before,
And suffer the Condition of these Times
To lay a heauie and vnequall Hand vpon our Honors?
West. O my good Lord Mowbray,
Construe the Times to their Necessities,
And you shall say (indeede) it is the Time,
And not the King, that doth you iniuries.
Yet for your part, it not appeares to me.
Either from the King, or in the present Time,
That you should haue an inch of any ground
To build a Griefe on: were you not restor'd
To all the Duke of Norfolkes Seignories,
Your Noble, and right well-remembred Fathers?
Mow. What thing, in Honor, had my Father lost,
That need to be reuiu'd, and breath'd in me?
The King that lou'd him, as the State stood then,
Was forc'd, perforce compell'd to banish him:
And then, that Henry Bullingbrooke and hee
Being mounted, and both rowsed in their Seates,
Their neighing Coursers daring of the Spurre,
Their armed Staues in charge, their Beauers downe,
Their eyes of fire, sparkling through sights of Steele,
And the loud Trumpet blowing them together:
Then, then, when there was nothing could haue stay'd
My Father from the Breast of Bullingbrooke;
O, when the King did throw his Warder downe,
(His owne Life hung vpon the Staffe he threw)
Then shew hee downe himselfe, and all their Liues,
That by Indictment, and by dint of Sword,
Haue since mis-carryed vnder Bullingbrooke.

West. You speak (Lord Mowbray) now you know not what.
The Earle of Hereford was reputed then
In England the most valiant Gentleman.
Who knowes, on whom Fortune would then haue smil'd?
But if your Father had beene Victor there,
Hee ne're had borne it out of Couentry.
For all the Countrey, in a generall voyce,
Cry'd haste vpon him: and all their prayers, and loue,
Were set on Hereford, whom they doted on,
And bless'd, and grac'd, and did more then the King.
But this is meere digression from my purpose.
Here come I from our Princely Generall,
To know your Griefes, to tell you, from his Grace,
That hee will giue you Audience: and wherein
It shall appeare, that your demands are iust,
You shall enioy them, every thing set off,
That might so much as thinke you Enemies.
Mow. But hee hath forc'd vs to compell this Offer,
And it proceedes from Pollicy, not Loue.
West. Mowbray, you ouer-weene to take it so:
This Offer comes from Mercy, not from Feare.
For loe, within a Ken our Army lyes,
Vpon mine Honor, all too confident
To giue admittance to a thought of feare.
Our Battaile is more full of Names then yours,
Our Men more perfect in the vse of Armes,
Our Armor all as strong, our Cause the best;
Then Reason will, our hearts should be as good.
Say you not then, our Offer is compell'd.
Mow. Well, by my will, wee shall admit no Parley.
West. That argues but the shame of your offence:
A rotten Case abides no handling.
Hast. Hath the Prince Iohn a full Commission,
In very ample vertue of his Father,
To heare, and absolutely to determine
Of what Conditions wee shall stand vpon?
West. That is intended in the Generals Name:
I muse you make so slight a Question.
Bish. Then take (my Lord of Westmerland) this Schedule,
For this containes our generall Grieuances:
Each seuerall Article herein redress'd,
All members of our Cause, both here, and heace,
That are lo sinewed to this Action,
Acquitted by a true substantiall forme,
And present execution of our wills,
To vs, and to our purposes confin'd,
Wee come within our awfull Banks again,
And knit our Powers to the Arme of Peace.
West. This will I shew the Generall. Please you Lords,
In sight of both our Battailes, wee may meete
At either end in peace: which Heauen so frame,
Or to the place of difference call the Swords,
Which must decide it.
Bish. My Lord, wee will doe so.
Mow. There is a thing within my Bosome tells me,
That no Conditions of our Peace can stand.
Hast. Feare you not, that if wee can make our Peace
Vpon such large termes, and so absolute,
As our Conditions shall consist vpon,
Our Peace shall stand as firme as Rockie Mountaines.
Mow. I, but our valuation shall be such,
That every slight, and false-deriued Cause,
Yea, every idle, nice, and wanton Reason,
Shall, to the King, taste of this Action:
That were our Royall faiths, Martyrs in Loue,
Wee shall be winnowed with so rough a winde,
That euen our Corne shall seeme as light as Chaffe,
And good from bad finde no partition.
Bish. No, no (my Lord) note this: the King is wearie
Of dainties, and such picking Grieuances:
For hee hath found, to end one doubt by Death,
Reuiues two greater in the Heires of Life,
And therefore will hee wipe his Tables cleane,
And keepe no Tell-tale to his Memorie,
That may repeat, and Historie his losse,
To new remembrance. For full well hee knowes,
Hee cannot so precisely weede this Land,
As his mis-doubts present occasion:
His foes are so en-rooted with his friends,
That plucking to vnfixe an Enemie,
Hee doth vnfasten so, and shake a friend.
So that this Land, like an offensiue wife,
That hath enrag'd him on, to offer strokes,
As he is striking, holds his Infant vp,
And hangs resolu'd Correction in the Arme,
That was vpreare'd to execution.
Hast. Besides, the King hath wasted all his Rods,
On late Offenders, that he now doth lacke
The very Instruments of Chastisement:
So that his power, like to a Pangleffe Lion
May offer, but not hold.
Bish. Tis very true:
And therefore be assur'd (my good Lord Marshal)
If we do now make our attonement well,
Our Peace, will (like a broken Limbe vnited)
Grow stronger, for the breaking.
Mow. Be it so:
Heere is return'd my Lord of Westmerland.

Enter Westmerland.

West. The Prince is here at hand: pleaseth your Lordship
To meet his Grace, iust distance 'twene our Armies?
Mow. Your Grace of Yorke, in heauen's name then forward.
Bish. Before, and greet his Grace (my Lord) we come.

Enter Prince Iohn.

Iohn. You are wel encountred here (my cosin Mowbray)
Good day to you, gentle Lord Archbishop,
And so to you Lord Hastings, and to all.
My Lord of Yorke, it better shew'd with you,
When that your Flocke (assembled by the Bell)
Encircled you, to heare with reuerence
Your exposition on the holy Text,
Then now to see you heere an Iron man
Cheering a rout of Rebels with your Drumme,
Turning the Word, to Sword; and Life to death.
That man that sits within a Monarches heart,
And ripens in the Sunne-shine of his fauor,
Would hee abuse the Countenance of the King,
Alack, what Mischiefes might hee set abroach,
In shadow of such Greatnesse? With you, Lord Bishop,
It is euen so. Who hath not heard it spoken,
How deepe you were within the Bookes of Heauen?
To vs, the Speaker in his Parliament;
To vs, th'imagine Voyce of Heauen is selfe:
The very Opener, and Intelligencer,
Betweene the Grace, the Sanctities of Heauen;
And our dull workings. O, who shall believe,
But you mis-vse the reuerence of your Place,
Employ the Countenance, and Grace of Heauen,
As a false Fauorite doth his Princes Name,
In deedes dis-honorable? You haue taken vp,

Vnder the counterfeited Zeale of Heauen,
The Subiects of Heauens Substitute, my Father,
And both against the Peace of Heauen, and him,
Haue here vp-swarmed them.

Bish. Good my Lord of Lancaster,
I am not here against your Fathers Peace:
But (as I told my Lord of Westmerland)
The Time (mis-order'd) doth in common sence
Crowd vs, and crush vs, to this monstrous Forme,
To hold our safetie vp. I sent your Grace
The parcels, and particulars of our Griefe,
The which hath been with scorne shou'd from the Court:
Whereon this Hydra-Sonne of Warre is borne,
Whose dangerous eyes may well be charm'd asleepe,
With graunt of our most iust and right desires;
And true Obedience, of this Madnesse cur'd,
Stoope tamely to the foot of Maiestie.

Mow. If not, wee readie are to trye our fortunes,
To the last man.

Hast. And though wee here fall downe,
Wee haue Supplyes, to second our Attempt:
If they mis-carry, theirs shall second them.
And so, successe of Mischiefe shall be borne,
And Heire from Heire shall hold this Quarrell vp,
Whiles England shall haue generation,

Iohn. You are too shallow (Hastings)
Much too shallow,
To sound the bottome of the after-Times.

West. Pleaseth your Grace, to answere them directly,
How farre-forth you doe like their Articles.

Iohn. I like them all, and doe allow them well:
And sweare here, by the honor of my blood,
My Fathers purposes haue beene mistooke,
And some, about him, haue too lauishly
Wrested his meaning, and Authoritie.
My Lord, these Griefes shall be with speed redrest:
Vpon my Life, they shall. If this may please you,
Discharge your Powers vnto their seuerall Counties,
As wee will ours: and here, betweene the Armies,
Let's drinke together friendly, and embrace,
That all their eyes may beare those Tokens home,
Of our restored Loue, and Amitie.

Bish. I take your Princely word, for these redrresses.

Iohn. I giue it you, and will maintaine my word:
And thereupon I drinke vnto your Grace.

Hast. Goe Captaine, and deliuer to the Armie
This newes of Peace: let them haue pay, and part:
I know, it will well please them.
High thee Captaine Exit.

Bish. To you, my Noble Lord of Westmerland.

West. I pledge your Grace:
And if you knew what paines I haue bestow'd,
To breede this present Peace,
You would drinke freely: but my loue to ye,
Shall shew it selfe more openly hereafter.

Bish. I doe not doubt you.

West. I am glad of it.
Health to my Lord, and gentle Cousin Mowbray.

Mow. You wish me health in very happy season,
For I am on the sodaine, something ill.

Bish. Against ill Chances, men are euer merry,
But heauinesse fore-runnes the good euent.

West. Therefore be merry (Coze) since sodaine sorrow
Serues to say thus: some good thing comes to morrow.

Bish. Believe me, I am passing light in spirit.

Mow. So much the worse, if your owne Rule be true.

Iohn. The word of Peace is rendr'd: hearke how they shoute.

Mow. This had been cheerefull, after Victorie.

Bish. A Peace is of the nature of a Conquest:
For then both parties nobly are subdu'd,
And neither party loser.

Iohn. Goe (my Lord)
And let our Army be discharged too:
And good my Lord (so please you) let our Traines
March by vs, that wee may peruse the men Exit.
Wee should haue coap'd withall.

Bish. Goe, good Lord Hastings:
And ere they be dismis'd, let them march by. Exit.

Iohn. I trust (Lords) wee shall lye to night together.
Enter Westmerland.
Now Cousin, wherefore stands our Army still?

West. The Leaders having charge from you to stand,
Will not goe off, vntill they heare you speake.

Iohn. They know their duties. Enter Hastings.

Hast. Our Army is dispers'd:
Like youthfull Steeres, vnyoak'd, they tooke their course
East, West, North, South: or like a Schoole, broke vp,
Each hurryes towards his home, and sporting place.

West. Good tidings (my Lord Hastings) for the which,
I doe arrest thee (Traytor) of high Treason:
And you Lord Arch-bishop, and you Lord Mowbray,
Of Capitall Treason, I attach you both.

Mow. Is this proceeding iust, and honorable?

West. Is your Assembly so?

Bish. Will you thus breake your faith?

Iohn. I pawn'd thee none:
I promis'd you redresse of these same Grieuances
Whereof you did complaine; which, by mine Honor,
I will performe, with a moist Christian care.
But for you (Rebels) looke to taste the due
Meet for Rebellion, and such Acts as yours.
Most shallowly did you these Armes commence,
Fondly brought here, and foolishly sent hence.
Strike vp our Drummes, pursue the scatter'd stray,
Heauen, and not wee, haue safely fought to day.
Some guard these Traitors to the Block of Death,
Treasons true Bed, and yeelder vp of breath. Exeunt.
Enter Falstaffe and Coleuile.

Falst. What's your Name, Sir? of what Condition are you? and of what place, I pray?

Col. I am a Knight, Sir:
And my Name is Coleuile of the Dale.

Falst. Well then, Coleuile is your Name, a Knight is your Degree, and your Place, the Dale. Coleuile shall still be your Name, a Traytor your Degree, and the Dungeon your Place, a place deepe enough: so shall you be still Coleuile of the Dale.

Col. Are not you Sir Iohn Falstaffe?

Falst. As good a man as he is, who ere I am. doe yee yeelde sir, or shall I sweate for you? if I doe sweate, they are the drops of thy Louers, and they weep for thy death, therefore rowze vp Feare and Trembling, and do obey-
sance to my mercy.

Col. I think you are Sir Iohn Falstaffe, & in that thought yeeld me.

Fal. I haue a whole Schoole of tongues in this belly of mine, and not a Tongue of them all, speakes any other word but my name: and I had but a belly of any indifferi-encie, I were simply the most actiue fellow in Europe:
my wombe, my wombe, my wombe vndoes me. Heere comes our Generall.

Enter Prince Iohn, and Westmerland.

Iohn. The heat is past, follow no farther now:
Call in the Powers, good Cousin Westmerland.
Now Falstaffe, where haue you beene all this while?
When every thing is ended, then you come.
These tardie Tricks of yours will (on my life)
One time, or other, breake some Gallowes back.

Falst. I would bee sorry (my Lord) but it should bee thus: I never knew yet, but rebuke and checke was the reward of Valour. Doe you thinke me a Swallow, an Arrow, or a Bullet? Haue I, in my poore and olde Motion, the expedition of Thought? I haue speeded hither with the very extremest inch of possibilitie. I haue swoondred nine score and odde Postes: and here (traueil-tainted as I am) haue, in my pure and immaculate Valour, taken Sir Iohn Coltsmile of the Dale, a most furious Knight, and glorious Enemie: But what of that? hee saw mee, and yeelded: that I may iustly say with the hooke-nos'd fellow of Rome, I came, saw, and ouer-came.

Iohn. It was more of his Courtesie, then your deserting.

Falst. I know not: here hee is, and heere I yeeld him: and I beseech your Grace, let it be book'd, with the rest of this dayes deedes; or I sweare, I will haue it in a particular Ballad, with mine owne Picture on the top of it (Coltsmile kissing my foot:) To the which course, if I be enforc'd, if you do not all shew like gilt two-pences to me; and I, in the cleare Skie of Fame, o're-shine you as much as the Full Moone doth the Cynders of the Element (which shew like Pinnes-heads to her) believe not the Word of the Noble: therefore let meet haue right, and let desert mount.

Iohn. Thine's too heauie to mount.

Falst. Let it shine then.

Iohn. Thine's too thick to shine.

Falst. Let it doe something (my good Lord) that may doe me good, and call it what you will.

Iohn. Is thy Name Coltsmile?

Col. It is (my Lord.)

Iohn. A famous Rebell art thou, Coltsmile.

Falst. And a famous true Subiect tooke him

Col. I am (my Lord) but as my Betters are,
That led me hither: had they beene rul'd by me,
You should haue wonne them dearer then you haue.

Falst. I know not how they sold themselues, but thou like a kinde fellow, gau'st thy selfe away; and I thanke thee, for thee.

Enter Westmerland.

Iohn. Haue you left pursuit?

West. Retreat is made, and Execution stay'd.

Iohn. Send Coltsmile, with his Confederates,
To Yorke, to present Execution.
Blunt, leade him hence, and see you guard him sure.
Exit with Coltsmile.
And now dispatch we toward the Court (my Lords)
I heare the King, my Father, is sore sicke.
Our Newes shall go before vs, to his Maiestie,
Which (Cousin) you shall beare, to comfort him:
And wee with sober speede will follow you.

Falst. My Lord, I beseech you, giue me leaue to goe through Gloucestershire: and when you come to Court, stand my good Lord, pray, in your good report.

Iohn. Fare you well, Falstaffe: I, in my condition,
Shall better speake of you, then you deserue. Exit.

Falst. I would you had but the wit: twere better then your Dukedome. Good faith, this same young sober-blooded Boy doth not loue me, nor a man cannot make him laugh: but that's no marrauile, hee drinkes no Wine. There's neuer any of these demure Boyes come to any proofe: for thinne Drinke doth so ouer-coole their blood, and making many Fish-Meales, that they fall into a kinde of Male Greene-sicknesse: and then, when they marry, they get Wenches. They are generally Fooles, and Cowards; which some of vs should be too, but for inflamation. A good Sherris-Sack hath a two-fold operation in it: it ascends me into the Braine, dryes me there all the foolish, and dull, and crudde Vapours, which enuiron it: makes it apprehensiue, quicke, forgetiue, full of nimble, fiery, and delectable shapes; which deliuer'd o're to the Voyce, the Tongue, which is the Birth, becomes excellent Wit. The second properties of your excellent Sherris, is, the warming of the Blood: which before (cold, and setled) left the Liuer white, and pale; which is the Badge of Pusillanimitie, and Cowardize: but the Sherris warmes it, and makes it course from the inwards, to the parts extremes: It illuminateth the Face, which (as a Beacon) giues warning to all the rest of this little Kingdome (Man) to Arme: and then the Vitall Commoners, and in-land petite Spirits, muster me all to their Captaine, the Heart; who great, and pufft vp with his Retinue, doth any Deed of Courage: and this Valour comes of Sherris. So, that skill in the Weapon is nothing, without Sack (for that sets it a-worke:) and Learning, a meere Hoord of Gold, kept by a Deuill, till Sack commences it, and sets it in act, and vse. Hereof comes it, that Prince Harry is valiant: for the cold blood hee did naturally inherite of his Father, hee hath, like leane, sterrill, and barre Land, manured, husbanded, and tyll'd, with excellent endeauour of drinking good, and good store of fertile Sherris, that hee is become very hot, and valiant. If I had a thousand Sonnes, the first Principle I would teach them, should be to forswearre thinne Potations, and to addict themselues to Sack. Enter Bardolph. How now Bardolph?

Bard. The Armie is discharged all, and gone.

Falst. Let them goe: Ile through Gloucestershire, and there will I visit Master Robert Shallow, Esquire: I haue his sleeuedie tempering betweene my finger and my thombe, and shortly will I seale with him. Come away.

Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter King, Warwick, Clarence, Gloucester.

King. Now Lords, if Heauen doth giue successefull end
To this Debate that bleedeth at our doores,
We will our Youth lead on to higher Fields,
And draw no Swords, but what are sanctify'd.
Our Navie is addressed, our Power collected,
Our Substitutes, in absence, well inuested,
And every thing lyes leuell to our wish;
Onely we want a little personall Strength:
And pawse vs, till these Rebels, now a-foot,
Come vnderneath the yoake of Gouernment.

War. Both which we doubt not, but your Maiestie
Shall soone enioy.

King. How-

King. Humphrey (my Sonne of Gloucester) where is the Prince, your Brother?

Glo. I thinke hee's gone to hunt (my Lord) at Windsor.

King. And how accompanied?

Glo. I doe not know (my Lord.)

King. Is not his Brother, Thomas of Clarence, with him?

Glo. No (my good Lord) hee is in presence heere.

Clar. What would my Lord, and Father?

King. Nothing but well to thee, Thomas of Clarence. How chance thou art not with the Prince, thy Brother? Hee loves thee, and thou do'st neglect him (Thomas.) Thou hast a better place in his Affection, Then all thy Brothers: cherish it (my Boy) And Noble Offices thou may'st effect Of Mediation (after I am dead) Betweene his Greatnesse, and thy other Brethren. Therefore omit him not: blunt not his Love, Nor loose the good advantage of his Grace, By seeming cold, or careless of his will. For hee is gracious, if hee be observ'd: Hee hath a Teare for Pitie, and a Hand Open (as Day) for melting Charitie: Yet notwithstanding, being incens'd, hee's Flint, As humorous as Winter, and as sudden, As Flawes congealed in the Spring of day. His temper therefore must be well observ'd: Chide him for faults, and doe it reverently, When you perceive his blood enclin'd to mirth: But being moodie, give him Line, and scope, Till that his passions (like a Whale on ground) Confound themselves with working. Learne this Thomas, And thou shalt prove a Shelter to thy friends, A Hoope of Gold, to binde thy Brothers in: That the united Vessell of their Blood (Mingled with Venome of Suggestion, As force, perforce, the Age will powre it in) Shall never leake, though it doe worke as strong As Acanthum, or rash Gun-powder.

Clar. I shall observe him with all care, and love.

King. Why art thou not at Windsor with him (Thomas!)

Clar. Hee is not there to day: hee dines in London.

King. And how accompanyed? Canst thou tell that?

Clar. With Poins, and other his continuall followers.

King. Most subject is the fattest Soyle to Weedes: And hee (the Noble Image of my Youth) Is over-spread with them: therefore my griefe Stretches it selfe beyond the houre of death. The blood weepes from my heart, when I doe shape (In formes imaginarie) th'unguided Dayes, And rotten Times, that you shall looke upon, When I am sleeping with my Ancestors. For when his head-strong Riot hath no Curbe, When Rage and hot-Blood are his Counsellors, When Meanes and lawlesse Manners meete together; Oh, with what Wings shall his Affections flye Towards fronting Perill, and oppos'd Decay?

War. My gracious Lord, you looke beyond him quite: The Prince but studies his Companions, Like a strange Tongue: wherein, to gaine the Language, 'Tis needfull, that the most immodest word Be look'd upon, and learn'd: which once attayn'd, Your Highnesse knowes, comes to no further vse, But to be knowne, and hated. So, like grosse termes, The Prince will, in the perfectnesse of time, Cast off his followers: and their memorie Shall as a Patterne, or a Measure, live, By which his Grace must mete the lives of others, Turning past-evills to advantages.

King. 'Tis seldome, when the Bee doth leave her Comb In the dead Carrion.

Enter Westmerland.

Who's heere? Westmerland?

West. Health to my Soveraigne, and new happinesse Added to that, that I am to deliver. Prince John, your Sonne, doth kisse your Graces Hand: Mowbray, the Bishop, Scroope, Hastings, and all, Are brought to the Correction of your Law. There is not now a Rebels Sword vnsheath'd, But Peace puts forth her Olive every where. The manner how this Action hath beene borne, Here (at more leysure) may your Highnesse reade, With every course, in his particular.

King. O Westmerland, thou art a Summer Bird, Which ever in the haunch of Winter sings The lifting vp of day.

Enter Harcourt.

Looke, heere's more newes.

Har. From Enemies, Heaven keepe your Majestie: And when they stand against you, may they fall, As those that I am come to tell you of. The Earle Northumberland, and the Lord Bardolfe, With a great Power of English, and of Scots, Are by the Sherife of Yorkeshire overthrowne: The manner, and true order of the fight, This Packet (please it you) containes at large.

King. And wherefore should these good newes Make me sicke? Will Fortune never come with both hands full, But write her faire words still in foulest Letters? Shee eyther gives a Stomack, and no Foode, (Such are the poore, in health) or else a Feast, And takes away the Stomack (such are the Rich, That have aboundance, and enioy it not.) I should reioyce now, at this happy newes, And now my Sight fayles, and my Brayne is giddie. O me, come neere me, now I am much ill.

Glo. Comfort your Majestie.

Cla. Oh, my Royall Father.

West. My Soveraigne Lord, cheere vp your selfe, looke vp.

War. Be patient (Princes) you doe know, these Fits Are with his Highnesse very ordinarie. Stand from him, give him aire: Hee'le straight be well.

Clar. No, no, hee cannot long hold out: these pangs, Th'incessant care, and labour of his Minde, Hath wrought the Mure, that should confine it in, So thinne, that Life looks through, and will breake out.

Glo. The people feare me: for they doe observe Vnfather'd Heires, and loathly Births of Nature: The Seasons change their manners, as the Yeare Had found some Moneths asleepe, and leap'd them over.

Clar. The Riuer hath thrice flow'd, no ebbe between: And the old folke (Times doting Chronicles) Say it did so, a little time before That our great Grand-sire Edward sick'd, and dy'd.

War. Speake lower (Princes) for the King recouers.

Glo. This Apoplexie will (certaine) be his end.

King. I pray you take me vp, and beare me hence
Into some other Chamber: softly pray.
Let there be no noyse made (my gentle friends)
Vnlesse some dull and fauourable hand
Will whisper Musicke to my wearie Spirit.

War. Call for the Musicke in the other Roome.

King. Set me the Crowne vpon my Pillow here.

Clar. His eye is hollow, and hee changes much.

War. Lesse noyse, lesse noyse.

Enter Prince Henry.

P.Hen. Who saw the Duke of Clarence?

Clar. I am here (Brother) full of heauinesse.

P.Hen. How now? Raine within doores, and none abroad? How doth the King?

Glo. Exceeding ill.

P.Hen. Heard hee the good newes yet?
Tell it him.

Glo. Hee altert'd much, vpon the hearing it.

P.Hen. If hee be sicke with Ioy,
He'le recouer without Physicke.

War. Not so much noyse (my Lords)
Sweet Prince speake low,
The King your Father, is disposed to sleepe.

Clar. Let vs with-draw into the other Roome.

War. Will please your Grace to goe along with vs?

P.Hen. No: I will sit, and watch here, by the King.
Why doth the Crowne lye there, vpon his Pillow,
Being so troublesome a Bed-fellow?
O polished Perturbation! Golden Care!
That keep'st the Ports of Slumber open wide,
To many a watchfull Night: sleepe with it now,
Yet not so sound, and halfe so deeply sweete,
As hee whose Brow (with homely Biggen bound)
Snores out the Watch of Night. O Maiestie!
When thou do'st pinch thy Bearer, thou do'st sit
Like a rich Armor, worne in heat of day,
That scald'st with safetie: by his Gates of breath,
There lyes a downey feather which stirres not:
Did hee suspire, that light and weightlesse downe
Perforce must moue. My gracious Lord, my Father,
This sleepe is sound indeede: this is a sleepe,
That from this Golden Rigall hath diuorc'd
So many English Kings. Thy due, from me,
Is Teares, and hearte Sorrowes of the Blood,
Which Nature, Loue, and filiall tenderneſſe,
Shall (O dear Father) pay thee plenteously.
My due, from thee, is this Imperiall Crowne,
Which (as immediate from thy Place and Blood)
Deriues it selfe to me. Loe, heere it sits,
Which Heauen shall guard:
And put the worlds whole strength into one gyant Arme,
It shall not force this I lawfull Honor from me.
This, from thee, will I to mine leaue,
As 'tis left to me. Exit.

Enter Warwicke, Glouster, Clarence.

King. Warwicke? Glouster, Clarence.

Clar. Doth the King call?

War. What would your Maiestie? how fares your Grace?

King. Why did you leaue me here alone (my Lords?)

Cla. We left the Prince (my Brother) here (my Liege)
Who vndertooke to sit and watch by you.

King. The Prince of Wales? where is hee? let mee see him.

War. This doore is open, hee is gone this way.

Glo. Hee came not through the Chamber where wee stayd.

King. Where is the Crowne? who tooke it from my Pillow?

War. When wee with-drew (my Liege) wee left it heere.

King. The Prince hath ta'ne it hence:
Goe seeke him out.
Is hee so hastie, that hee doth suppose
My sleepe, my death? Finde him (my Lord of Warwick)
Chide him hither: this part of his conioynes
With my disease, and helpes to end me.
See Sonnes, what things you are:
How quickly Nature falls into reuolt,
When Gold becomes her Obiect?
For this, the foolish ouer-carefull Fathers
Haue broke their sleepes with thoughts,
Their braines with care, their bones with industry.
For this, they haue engrossed and pyl'd vp
The canker'd heapes of strange-atchieued Gold:
For this, they haue beene thoughtfull, to inuest
Their Sonnes with Arts, and Martiall Exercises:
When, like the Bee, culling from euery flower
The vertuous Sweetes, our Thighes packt with Wax,
Our Mouthes with Honey, wee bring it to the Hiue;
And like the Bees, are murthered for our paines.
This bitter taste yeelds his engrossements,
To the ending Father.

Enter Warwicke.

Now, where is hee, that will not stay so long,
Till his Friend Sicknesse hath determin'd me?

War. My Lord, I found the Prince in the next Roome,
Washing with kindly Teares his gentle Cheeke,
With such a deepe demeanure, in great sorrow,
That Tyranny, which never quaffe but blood,
Would (by beholding him) haue wash'd his Knife
With gentle eye-drops. Hee is comming hither.

King. But wherefore did hee take away the Crowne?

Enter Prince Henry.

Loe, where hee comes. Come hither to me (Harry.)
Depart the Chamber, leaue vs heere alone. Exit.

P.Hen. I never thought to heare you speake againe.

King. Thy wish was Father (Harry) to that thought:
I stay too long by thee, I weerie thee.
Do'st thou so hunger for my empticie Chayre,
That thou wilt seeke inuest thee with mine Honors,
Before thy howre be ripe? O foolish Youth!
Thou seek'st the Greatneſſe, that will ouer-whelme thee.
Stay but a little: for my Cloud of Dignitie
Is held from falling, with so weake a winde,
That it will quickly drop: my Day is diuine.
Thou hast stolne that, which after some few howres
Were thine, without offence: and at my death
Thou hast seal'd vp my expectation.
Thy Life did manifest, thou lou'dst me not,
And thou wilt haue me dye assur'd of it.
Thou hid'st a thousand Daggers in thy thoughts,
Which thou hast whetted on thy stonie heart,
To stab at halfe an howre of my Life.
What? canst thou not forbeare me halfe an howre?

Then

Then get thee gone, and digge my grave thy selfe,
And bid the merry Bels ring to thy ears
That thou art Crowned, not that I am dead
Let all the Teares, that should bedew my Hearse
Be drops of Balme, to sanctifie thy head:
Onely compound me with forgotten dust.
Giue thee, which gaue thee life, vnto the Wormes:
Plucke downe my Officers, breake my Decrees;
For now a time is come, to mocke at Formes.
Henry the fift is Crown'd: Vp Vanity,
Downe Royall Scepe: All you sage Counsailors, hence:
And to the English Court, assemble now
From ev'ry Region, Apes of Idlenesse.
Now neighbor-Confines, purge you of your Scum:
Haue you a Ruffian that swill swearer? drinke? dance?
Reuell the night? Rob? Murder? and commit
The oldest sinnes, the newest kinde of wayes?
Be happy, he will trouble you no more:
England, shall double gill'd, his trebble guilt.
England, shall giue him Office, Honor, Might:
For the Fift Harry, from curb'd License plackes
The muzzle of Restraint; and the wilde Dogge
Shall flesh his tooth in every Innocent.
O my poore Kingdome (sicke, with chill blowes)
When thou my Care could not with-hold thy Ryots,
What wilt thou do, when Ryot is thy Care?
O, thou wilt be a Wildernesse against,
Peopled with Wolues (thy old Inhabitants.

Prince. O pardon me (my Liege)
But for my Teares,
The most Impediments vnto my Speech,
I had sore-stall'd this dorre, and deepe Rebuke,
Ere you (with greefe) had spoke, and I had heard
The course of it so farre. There is your Crowne,
And he that weares the Crowne immortally,
Long guard it yours. If I affect it more.
Then as your Honour, and as your Renowne,
Let me no more from this Obedience rise,
Which my most true, and inward duteous Spirit
Teacheth this prostrate, and exterious bending.
Heaven witnesse with me, when I heere came in,
And found no course of breath within your Maiestie,
How cold it strooke my heart. If I do faine,
O let me, in my present wildenesse, dye,
And never liue, to shew th'incredulous World,
The Noble change that I haue purposed.
Comming to looke on you, thinking you dead.
(And dead almost (my Liege) to thinke you were)
I spake vnto the Crowne (as hauing sense)
And thus vpbraided it. The Care on thee depending,
Hath fed vpon the body of my Father,
Therefore, thou best of Gold, art worst of Gold.
Other, lesse fine in Cherract, is more precious,
Preserving life, in Med'cine potable:
But thou, most Fine, most Honour'd, most Respour'd,
Hast eate the Bearer vp.
Thus (my Royall Liege)
Accusing it, I put it on my Head,
To try with it (as with an Enemie,
That had before my face murdred my Father)
The Quarrell of a true Inheritor.
But if it did infect my blood with Ioy,
Or swell my Thoughts, to any straine of Pride,
If any Rebell, or vaine spirit of mine,
Did, with the least Affection of a Welcome,
Giue entertainment to the might of it,
Let heauen, for euer, keepe it from my head,
And make me, as the poorest Vassaile is,
That doth with awe, and terror kneele to it.

King. O my Sonne!
Heauen put it in thy minde to take it hence,
That thou might'st ioyne the more, thy Fathers loue,
Pleading so wisely, in excuse of it.
Come hither Harry, sit thou by my bedde,
And heare (I think, the very latest Counsell
That ever I shall breath: Heauen knowes, my Sonne)
By what by-paths, and indirect crook'd-wayes
I met this Crowne: and I my selfe know well
How troublesome it sate vpon my head.
To thee, it shall descend with better Quiet,
Better Opinion, better Confirmation:
For all the foyle of the Archieuement goes
With me, into the Earth. It seem'd in mee,
But as an Honour snatch'd with boyst'rous hand,
And I had many liuing, to vpbraide
My gaine of it, by their Assistances.
Which daylY grew to Quarrell, and to Blood-shed,
Wounding supposed Peace.
All these bold Feares,
Thou seest (with peril!) I haue answered:
For all my Reigne, hath beene but as a Scene
Acting that argument. And now my death
Changes the Moode: For what in me, was purchas'd,
Falles vpon thee, in a more Fayrer sort.
So thou, the Garland wear'st successively.
Yet, though thou stand'st more sure, then I could do,
Thou art not firme enough, since greefes are greene:
And all thy Friends, which thou must make thy Friends
Haue but their stings, and teeth, newly tak'n out,
By whose fell working, I was first aduanc'd,
And by whose power, I well might lodge a Feare
To be against displac'd. Which to auoyd,
I cut them off: and had a purpose now
To lead out many to the Holy Land;
Least rest, and lying still, might make them looke
Too neere vnto my State.
Therefore (my Harry)
Be it thy course to busie giddy Minds
With Forraigne Quarrels: that Action hence borne out,
May waste the memory of the former dayes.
More would I, but my Lungs are wasted so,
That strength of Speech is vtterly denied me.
How I came by the Crowne, O heauen forgiue:
And grant it may, with thee, in true peace liue.

Prince. My gracious Liege:
You woone it, wore it: kept it, gaue it me,
Then plaine and right must my possession be;
Which I, with more, then with a Common paine,
'Gainst all the World, will rightfully maintaine.

Enter Lord Iohn of Lancaster, and Warwicke.

King Looke, looke,
Heere comes my Iohn of Lancaster:
Iohn Health, Peace, and Happinesse,
To my Royall Father.
King. Thou bring'st me happinesse and Peace
(Sonne Iohn:
But health (alacke) with youthfull wings is flowne
From this bare, wither'd Trunke. Vpon thy sighs
My worldly business makes a period.

Where

Where is my Lord of Warwicke?

Prin. My Lord of Warwicke.

King. Doth any name particular belong
Vnto the Lodging, where I first did swoon'd?

War. Tis call'd Ierusalem, my Noble Lord.

King. Laud be to heauen:
Euen there my life must end.
It hath beene prophesi'de to me many yeares,
I should not dye, but in Ierusalem:
Which (vainly) I suppos'd the Holy-Land.
But bearе me to that Chamber, there lle lye:
In that Ierusalem, shall Harry dye. Exeunt.

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter Shallow, Silence, Falstaffe, Bardolfe, Page, and Dauie.

Shal. By Cocke and Pye, you shall not away to night. What Dauy, I say.

Fal. You must excuse me, M. Robert Shallow.

Shal I will not excuse you: you shall not be excused. Excuses shall not be admitted: there is no excuse shall serue: you shall not be excus'd.
Why Dauie

Dauie. Heere sir.

Shal. Dauy, Dauy. Dauy, let me see (Dauy) let me see: William Cooke, bid him come hither. Sir Iohn, you shal not be excus'd.

Dauy. Marry sir, thus: those Precepts cannot bee seru'd. and againe sir, shall we sowe the head-land with Wheate?

Shal With red Wheate Dauy. But for William Cook: are there no young Pigeons?

Dauy. Yes Sir.
Heere is now the Smithes note, for Shoeing,
And Plough-Irons.

Shal. Let it be cast, and payde: Sir Iohn, you shall not be excus'd.

Dauy Sir, a new linke to the Bucket must needes bee had: And Sir, doe you meane to stoppe any of Williams Wages, about the Sacke he lost the other day, at Hinckley Fayre?

Shal. He shall answer it:
Some Pigeons Dauy, a couple of short-legg'd Hennes: a ioynt of Mutton, and any pretty little tine Kickshawes, tell William Cooke.

Dauy Doth the man of Warre, stay all night sir?

Shal Yes Dauy:
I will vse him well. A Friend i'th Court, is better then a penny in purse. Vse his men well Dauy, for they are arrant Knaues, and will backe-bite.

Dauy No worse then they are bitten, sir: For they haue marueilous fowle linnen.

Shallow. Well conceited Dauy: about thy Businesse, Dauy.

Dauy. I beseech you sir,
To countenance William Visor of Woncot, against Clement Perkes of the hill.

Shal. There are many Complaints Dauy, against that Visor, that Visor is an arrant Knaue, on my knowledge.

Dauy. I graunt your Worship, that he is a knaue Sir:) But yet heauen forbid Sir, but a Knaue should haue some Countenance, at his Friends request. An honest man sir, is able to speake for himselfe, when a Knaue is not. I haue seru'd your Worshippe truely sir, these eight yeares: and if I cannot once or twice in a Quarter beare out a knaue, against an honest man, I haue but a very litle credite with your Worshippe. The Knaue is mine honest Friend Sir, therefore I beseech your Worship, let him bee Countenanc'd.

Shal. Go too,
I say he shall haue no wrong: Looke about Dauy.
Where are you Sir Iohn? Come, off with your Boots.
Giue me your hand M. Bardolfe.

Bard. I am glad to see your Worship.

Shal. I thanke thee, with all my heart, kinde Master Bardolfe: and welcome my tall Fellow:
Come Sir Iohn.

Falstaffe. Ile follow you, good Master Robert Shallow. Bardolfe, looke to our Horses. If I were saw'de into Quantities, I should make foure dozen of such bearded Hermites staues, as Master Shallow. It is a wonderfull thing to see the semblable Coherence of his mens spirits, and his: They, by observing of him, do beare themselues like foolish Iustices: Hee, by conuersing with them, is turn'd into a Iustice-like Seruingman. Their spirits are so married in Coniunction, with the participation of Society, that they flocke together in consent, like so many Wilde-Geese. If I had a suite to Mayster Shallow, I would humour his men, with the imputation of being neere their Mayster. If to his Men, I would curre with Maister Shallow, that no man could better command his Seruants. It is certaine, that either wise bearing, or ignorant Carriage is caught, as men take diseases, one of another: therefore, let men take heede of their Companie. I will deuise matter enough out of this Shallow, to keepe Prince Harry in continuall Laughter, the wearing out of fixe Fashions (which is foure Termes) or two Actions, and he shall laugh with Intermallinus. O it is much that a Lye (with a slight Oath) and a iest (with a sadde brow) will doe, with a Fellow, that never had the Ache in his shoulders. O you shall see him laugh, till his Face be like a wet Cloake, ill laid vp.

Shal. Sir Iohn.

Falst. I come Master Shallow, I come Master Shallow. Exeunt

Scena Secunda.

Enter the Earle of Warwicke, and the Lord Chiefe Iustice.

Warwicke How now, my Lord Chiefe Iustice, whether away?

Ch. Iust. How doth the King?

War. Exceeding well: his Cares
Are now, all ended.

Ch. Iust I hope, not dead.

War. Hee's walk'd the way of Nature,
And to our purposes, he liues no more.

Ch. Iust I would his Maiesty had call'd me with him,
The seruice, that I truly did his life,
Hath left me open to all iniuries.

War.

War. Indeed I thinke the yong King loues you not.
Ch.Iust. I know he doth not, and do arme my selfe
To welcome the condition of the Time,
Which cannot looke more hideously vpon me,
Then I haue drawne it in my fantasie.

Enter Iohn of Lancaster, Gloucester, and Clarence.

War. Heere come the heauy Issue of dead Harry:
O, that the liuing Harry had the temper
Of him, the worst of these three Gentlemen:
How many Nobles then, should hold their places,
That must strike saile, to Spirits of vilde sort?
Ch.Iust. Alas, I feare, all will be ouer-turn'd.
Iohn. Good morrow Cosin Warwick, good morrow.
Glou. Cla. Good morrow, Cosin.
Iohn. We meet, like men, that had forgot to speake.
War. We do remember: but our Argument
Is all too heauy, to admit much talke.
Iohn Well: Peace be with him, that hath made vs heauy
Ch.Iust. Peace be with vs, least we be heauier.
Glou. O, good my Lord, you haue lost a friend indeed:
And I dare swear, you borrow not that face
Of seeming sorrow, it is sure your owne.
Iohn. Though no man be assur'd what grace to finde,
You stand in coldest expectation.
I am the sorrier, would 'were otherwise.
Cla. Well, you must now speake Sir Iohn Falstaffe faire,
Which swimmes against your streame of Quality.
Ch.Iust. Sweet Princes: what I did, I did in Honor,
Led by th'Imperiall Conduct of my Soule,
And never shall you see, that I will begge
A ragged, and forre-staff'd Remission.
If Truth, and vpright Innocency fayle me,
Ile to the King (my Master) that is dead,
And tell him, who hath sent me after him.
War. Heere comes the Prince.

Enter Prince Henrie.

Ch.Iust. Good morrow, and heauen saue your Maiesty
Prince. This new, and gorgeous Garment, Maiesty,
Sits not so easie on me, as you thinke.
Brothers, you mixe your Sadnesse with some Feast:
This is the English, not the Turkish Court:
Not Amurah, an Amurah succeeds,
But Harry, Harry: Yet be sad (good Brothers)
For (to speake truth) it very well becomes you
Sorrow, so Royally in you appeares,
That I will deeply put the Fashion on,
And weare it in my heart. Why then be sad,
But entertaine no more of it (good Brothers)
Then a loyne burthen, laid vpon vs all.
For me, by Heauen (I bid you be assur'd)
Ile be your Father, and your Brother too:
Let me but beare your Loue, Ile beare your Cares;
But weepe that Harrie's dead, and so will I.
But Harry liues, that shall conuert those Teares
By number, into hours of Happinesse.
Iohn, &c. We hope no other from your Maiesty.
Prin. You all looke strangely on me: and you most.
You are (I thinke) assur'd, I loue you not.
Ch.Iust. I am assur'd (if I be measur'd rightly)
Your Maiesty hath no iust cause to hate mee.
Pr. No? How might a Prince of my great hopes forget
So great Indignities you laid vpon me?
What? Rate? Rebuke? and roughly send to Prison
Th'immediate Heire of England? Was this easie?
May this be wash'd in Lethe, and forgotten?
Ch.Iust. I then did vse the Person of your Father:
The Image of his power, lay then in me,
And in th'administration of his Law,
Whiles I was busie for the Commonwealth,
Your Highnesse pleased to forget my place,
The Maiesty, and power of Law, and Iustice,
The Image of the King, whom I presented,
And stroke me in my very Seate of Iudgement.
Whereon (as an Offender to your Father)
I gaue bold way to my Authority,
And did commit you. If the deed were ill,
Be you contented, wearing now the Garland,
To haue a Sonne, set your Decrees at naught?
To pluck downe Iustice from your awefull Bench?
To trip the course of Law, and blunt the Sword
That guards the peace, and safety of your Person?
Nay more, to spurne at your most Royall Image,
And mocke your workings, in a Second body?
Question your Royall Thoughts, make the case yours:
Be now the Father, and propose a Sonne.
Heare your owne dignity so much prophan'd,
See your most dreadfull Lawes, so loosely slighted;
Behold your selfe, so by a Sonne disdained:
And then imagine me, taking you part,
And in your power, soft silencing your Sonne:
After this cold consideranee, sentence me;
And, as you are a King, speake in your State,
What I haue done, that misbecame my place,
My person, or my Liege Soueraignte.
Prin. You are right Iustice, and you weigh this well;
Therefore still beare the Ballance, and the Sword:
And I do wish your Honors may encrease,
Till you do liue, to see a Sonne of mine
Offend you, and obey you, as I did.
So shall I liue, to speake my Fathers words:
Happy am I, that haue a man so bold,
That dares do Iustice, on my proper Sonne;
And no lesse happy, having such a Sonne,
That would deliuer vp his Greatnesse so,
Into the hands of Iustice. You did commit me:
For which, I do commit into your hand,
Th'vnstained Sword that you haue vs'd to beare:
With this Remembrance; That you vse the same
With the like bold, iust, and impartiall spirit
As you haue done 'gainst me. There is my hand,
You shall be as a Father, to my Youth:
My voice shall sound, as you do prompt mine eare,
And I will stoope, and humble my Intents,
To your well-practis'd, wise Directions
And Princes all, believe me, I beseech you:
My Father is gone wilde into his Grave,
(For in his Tombe, lye my Affections)
And with his Spirits, sadly I survive,
To mocke the expectation of the World;
To frustrate Prophesies, and to race out
Rotten Opinion, who hath writ me downe
After my seeming. The Tide of Blood in me,
Hath proudly flow'd in Vanity, till now.
Now doth it turne, and ebbe backe to the Sea,
Where it shall mingle with the state of Floods,
And flow henceforth in formall Maiesty.
Now call we our High Court of Parliament,
And let vs choose such Limbes of Noble Counsaile,

Thor.

That the great Body of our State may go
In equall ranke, with the best gouern'd Nation,
That Warre, or Peace, or both at once may be
As things acquainted and familiar to vs,
In which you (Father) shall haue formost hand.
Our Coronation done, we will aretke
(As I before remembred) all our State,
And heauen (consigning to my good intents)
No Prince, nor Peere, shall haue iust cause to say,
Heauen shorten Harries happy life, one day. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Falstaffe, Shallow, Silence, Bardolfe, Page, and Pistoll.

Shal. Nay, you shall see mine Orchard: where, in an Arbor we will eate a last yeares Pippin of my owne graffing, with a dish of Carraways, and so forth (Come Cosin Silence, and then to bed.

Fal. You haue here a goodly dwelling, and a rich.

Shal. Barren, barren, barren: Beggers all, beggers all Sir Iohn: Marry, good aire. Spread Dauy, spread Dauie: Well said Dauie.

Fals. This Dauie serues you for good vses: he is your Seruingman, and your Husband.

Shal. A good Varlet, a good Varlet, a very good Varlet, Sir Iohn: I haue drunke too much Sacke at Supper. A good Varlet. Now sit downe, now sit downe. Come Cosin.

Sil. Ah sirra (quoth-a) we shall doe nothing but eate, and make good cheere, and praise heauen for the merrie yeere. when flesh is cheape, and Females deere, and lustie Lads rome heere, and there: so merrily, and euer among so merrily.

Fal. There's a merry heart, good M. Silence, Ile giue you a health for that anon.

Shal. Good M Bardolfe: some wine, Dauie.

Da. Sweet sir, sir: Ile be with you anon: most sweete sir, sir. Master Page good M. Page, sit: Proface. What you want in meate, we'l haue in drinke: but you beare, the heart's all.

Shal. Be merry M Bardolfe, and my little Souldiour there, be merry.

Bard. Be merry, be merry, my wife ha's all.
For women are Shrewes, both short, and tall:
'Tis merry in Hall, when Beards wagge all;
And welcome merry Shrouetide. Be merry, be merry.

Fal. I did not thinke M. Silence had bin a man of this Mettle.

Sil. Who I? I haue beene merry twice and once, ere now.

Dauy. There is a dish of Leather-coats for you.

Shal. Dauie.

Dau. Your Worship: Ile be with you straight. A cup of Wine, sir?

Sil. A Cup of Wine, that's briske and fine, & drinke vnto the Leman mine: and a merry heart liues long-a.

Fal. Well said, M Silence.

Sil. If we shall be merry, now comes in the sweete of the night.

Fal. Health, and long life to you, M. Silence

Sil. Fill the Cuppe, and let it come. Ile pledge you a mile to the bottome.

Shal. Honest Bardolfe, welcome: If thou want'st any thing, and wilt not call, beshrew thy heart. Welcome my little tyne theefe, and welcome indeed too: Ile drinke to M. Bardolfe, and to all the Cauileroes about London.

Dau. I hope to see London, ere I die.

Bar. If I might see you there, Dauie.

Shal. You'l cracke a quart together? Ha, will you not M. Bardolfe?

Bar. Yes Sir, in a pottle pot.

Shal. I thanke thee: the knaue will sticke by thee. I can assure thee that. He will not out, he is true bred.

Bar. And Ile sticke by him, sir.

Shal. Why there spoke a King: lack nothing, be merry. Looke, who's at doore there, ho: who knockes?

Fal Why now you haue done me right.

Sil. Do me right, and dub me Knight, Samingo. Is't not so?

Fal. Tis so.

Sil. Is't so? Why then say an old man can do somewhat.

Dau. If it please your Worshippe, there's one Pistoll come from the Court with newes.

Fal. From the Court? Let him come in.

Enter Pistoll.

How now Pistoll?

Pist. Sir Iohn, 'save you sir.

Fal. What winde blew you hither, Pistoll?

Pist. Not the ill winde which blowes none to good, sweet Knight: Thou art now one of the greatest men in the Realme.

Sil. Indeed, I think he bee, but Goodman Puffe of Barson.

Pist. Puffe? puffe in thy teeth, most recreant Coward base. Sir Iohn, I am thy Pistoll, and thy Friend: I better skelter haue I rode to thee, and tydings do I bring, and lockie ioyes, and goldeo Times, and happie Newes of price.

Fal. I prethee now deliuer them, like a man of this World.

Pist. A foorra for the World, and Worldlings base. I speake of Affrica, and Golden ioyes.

Fal. O base Assyrian Knight, what is thy newes? Let King Cotha know the truth thereof.

Sil. And Robin-hood, Scarlet, and Iohn.

Pist. Shall dunghill Curres confront the Hellicons? And shall good newes be baffel'd? Then Pistoll lay thy head in Furies lappe.

Shal. Honest Gentleman, I know not your breeding.

Pist. Why then Lament therefore.

Shal. Give me pardon, Sir. If sir, you come with news from the Court, I take it, there is but two wayes, either to vtter them, or to conceale them. I am Sir, vnder the King, in some Authority.

Pist. Vnder which King? Besonian, speake, or dye.

Shal. Vnder King Harry.

Pist. Harry the Fourth? or Fift?

Shal Harry the Fourth.

Pist. A foorra for thine Office.
Sir Iohn, thy tender Lamb-kinne, now is King,
Harry the Fift's the man, I speake the truth.
When Pistoll lyes, do this, and figge-me, like
The bragging Spaniard.

Fal.

Fal. What, is the old King dead?
Pist. As nailes in doore.
The things I speake, are left.
Fal. Away Bardolfe, Saddle my Horse,
Master Robert Shallow, choose what Office thou wilt
In the Land, 'tis thine. Pistol, I will double charge thee
With Dignities.
Bard. O joyfull day:
I would not take a Knighthood for my Fortune.
Pist. What? I do bring good newes.
Fal. Carrie Master Silence to bed: Master Shallow, my Lord Shallow, be what thou wilt, I am Fortunes Steward. Get on thy Boots, we I ride all night. Oh sweet Pistoll: Away Bardolfe: Come Pistoll, vsse more to me: and wichall deuise something to do thy selfe good. Boote, boote Master Shallow, I know the young King is sick for me. Let vs take any mans Horses: The Lawes of England are at my command'ment. Happie are they, which haue beene my Friendes: and woe vnto my Lord Chiefe Iustice.
Pist. Let Vultures vil'de seize on his Lungs also:
Where is the life that late I led, say they?
Why here it is, welcome those pleasure dayes. Exeunt

Scena Quarta.

Enter Hostesse Quickly, Dol Teare-sheet, and Boaller.

Hostesse. No, thou arrant knaue: I would I might dy, that I might haue thee hang'd: Thou hast drawne my shoulder out of ioynt.
Off. The Constables haue deliuer'd her ouer to me: and shee shall haue Whipping cheere enough, I warrant her. There hath beene a man or two (lately) kill'd about her.
Dol. Nut-hooke, nut-hooke, you Lye: Come on, Ile tell thee what, thou damn'd Tripe-visag'd Rascall, if the Childe I now go with, do miscarrie, thou had'st better thou had'st stroake thy Mother, thou Paper-fac'd Villaine.
Host. O that Sir Iohn were come, hee would make this a bloody day to some body. But I would the Fruite of her Woombe might miscarry.
Officer. If it do, you shall haue a dozen of Cushions againe, you haue but eleuen now. Come, I charge you both go with me: for the man is dead, that you and Pistoll beate among you.
Dol. Ile tell thee what, thou thin man in a Censer; I will haue you as soundly swing'd for this, you blew-Bottel'd Rogue: you filthy famish'd Correctioner, if you be not swing'd, Ile forswear halfe Kirtles.
Off. Come, come, you thee-Knight-arrant, come.
Host. O, that right should thus o'recome might. Well of sufferance, comes ease.
Dol. Come you Rogue, come:
Bring me to a Iustice.
Host. Yes, come you staru'd Blood-hound.
Dol. Goodman death, goodman Bones.
Host. Thou Anatomy, thou.
Dol. Come you thinne Thing:
Come you Rascall.
Off. Very well. Exeunt.

Scena Quinta.

Enter two Grooms.

1. Groo. More Rushes, more Rushes.
2. Groo. The Trumpets haue sounded twice.
1. Groo. It will be two o'the Clocke, ere they come from the Coronation. Exit Groo.

Enter Falstaffe, Shallow, Pistoll, Bardolfe, and Page.

Falstaffe. Stand heere by me, M. Robert Shallow, I will make the King do you Grace. I will leere vpon him, as he comes by: and do but marke the countenance that hee will giue me.
Pistol. Blesse thy Lungs good Knight.
Falst. Come heere Pistol, stand behind me. O if I had had time to haue made new Liueries, I would haue bestowed the thousand pound I borrowed of you. But it is no matter, this poore shew doth better. this doth inferre the zeale I had to see him.
Shal. It doth so.
Falst. It shewes my earnestnesse in affection.
Pist. It doth so.
Fal. My devotion.
Pist. It doth, it doth, it doth.
Fal. As it were, to ride day and night,
And not to deliberate, not to remember,
Not to haue patience to shift me.
Shal. It is most certaine.
Fal. But to stand stained with Trauaile, and sweating with desire to see him, thinking of nothing else, putting all affayres in oblivion, as if there were nothing els to bee done, but to see him.
Pist. 'Tis semper idem: for obsque hoc nihil est. 'Tis all in every part.
Shal. 'Tis so indeed.
Pist. My Knight, I will inuiron thy Noble Liuer, and make thee rage. Thy Dol, and Helen of thy noble thoghts is in base Durance, and contagious prison: Hall'd thither by most Mechanicall and dirty hand. Rouze vppe Reuenge from Ebon den, with fell Alecto's Snake, for Dol is in. Pistol, speakes nought but troth.
Fal. I will deliuer her.
Pistol. There roar'd the Sea: and Trumpet Clangour sounds.

The Trumpets sound. Enter King Henrie the Fift, Brothers, Lord Chiefe Iustice.

Falst. Saue thy Grace, King Hall, my Royall Hall.
Pist. The heauens thee guard, and keepe, most royall Impe of Fame.
Fal. 'Saue thee my sweet Boy.
King. My Lord Chiefe Iustice, speake to that vaine man.
Ch.Iust. Haue you your wits?
Know you what 'tis you speake?
Falst. My King, my Ioue; I speake to thee, my heart.
King. I know thee not, old man: Fall to thy Prayers:
How ill white haires become a Foole, and Iester?
I haue

I have long dream'd of such a kinde of man,
So surfeit-swell'd, so old, and so prophane:
But being awake, I do despise my dreame.
Make less thy body (hence) and more thy Grace,
Leave gormandizing; Know the Grave doth gape
For thee, thrice wider then for other men.
Reply not to me, with a Foole-borne Iest,
Presume not, that I am the thing I was,
For heaven doth know (so shall the world perceiue)
That I have turn'd away my former Selfe,
So will I those that kept me Companie.
When thou doft heare I am, as I have bin,
Approach me, and thou shalt be as thou was't
The Tutor and the Feeder of my Riots.
Till then, I banish thee, on paine of death,
As I have done the rest of my Misleaders,
Not to come neere our Person, by ten mile.
For competence of life, I will allow you,
That lacke of means enforce you not to evill:
And as we heare you do reforme your selves,
We will according to your strength, and qualities,
Give you advancement. Be it your charge (my Lord)
To see performed the tenure of our word. Set on.
Exit King.

Fal. Master Shallow, I owe you a thousand pound.

Shal. I marry Sir Iohn, which I beseech you to let me have home with me.

Fal. That can hardly be, M. Shallow, do not you grieve at this: I shall be sent for in private to him: Looke you, he must seeme thus to the world: feare not your advancement. I will be the man yet, that shall make you great.

Shal. I cannot well perceive how, vnless you should give me your Doublet, and stuffe me out with Straw. I beseech you, good Sir Iohn, let me have five hundred of my thousand.

Fal. Sir, I will be as good as my word. This that you heard, was but a colour.

Shal. A colour I feare, that you will dye, in Sir Iohn.

Fal. Feare no colours, go with me to dinner:
Come Lieutenant Pistol, come Bardolfe,
I shall be sent for soone at night.

Ch. Just. Go carry Sir Iohn Falstaffe to the Fleete,
Take all his Company along with him.

Fal. My Lord, my Lord.

Ch. Just. I cannot now speake, I will heare you soone:
Take them away.

Pist. Si fortuna me tormenta, spera me contento.
Exit. Manet Lancaster and Chiefe Iustice.

Iohn. I like this faire proceeding of the Kings:
He hath intent his wonted Followers
Shall all be very well provided for:
But all are banisht, till their conversations
Appeare more wise, and modest to the world.

Ch. Just. And so they are.

Iohn. The King hath call'd his Parliament,
My Lord.

Ch. Just. He hath.

Iohn. I will lay odds, that ere this yeere expire,
We heare our Civill Swords, and Native fire
As farre as France. I heare a Bird so sing,
Whose Musicke (to my thinking) pleas'd the King.
Come, will you hence? Exeunt

FINIS.

EPILOGVE.

FIRST, my Feare: then, my Curtsie: last, my Speech. My Feare, is your Displeasure: My Curtsie, my Dutie: And my Speech, to Begge your Pardons. If you looke for a good Speech now, you vndoe me: For what I haue to say, is of mine owne making: and what (indeed) I should say, will (I doubt) proue mine owne marring. But to the Purpose, and so to the Venture. Be it knowne to you (as it is very well) I was lately heere in the end of a displeasing Play, to pray your Patience for it, and to promise you a Better: I did meane (indeede) to pay you with this, which if (like an ill Venture) it come vnluckily home, I breake; and you, my gentle Creditors lose. Heere I promist you I would be, and heere I commit my Bodie to your Mercies: Bate me some, and I will pay you some, and (as most Debtors do) promise you infinitely.

If my Tongue cannot entreate you to acquit me: Will you command me to vse my Legges? And yet that were but light payment, to Dance out of your debt: But a good Conscience, will make any possible satisfaction, and so will I. All the Gentlewomen heere, haue forgiuen me, if the Gentlemen will not, then the Gentlemen do not agree with the Gentlewomen, which was neuer seene before, in such an Assembly.

One word more, I beseech you: if you be not too much cloid with Fat Meate, our humble Author will continue the Story (with Sir Iohn in it) and make you merry, with faire Katherine of France: where (for any thing I know) Falstaffe shall dye of a sweat, vnlesse already he be kill'd with your hard Opinions: For Old-Castle dyed a Martyr, and this is not the man. My Tongue is weare, when my Legs are too, I will bid you good night; and so kneele downe before you: But (indeed) to pray for the Qvgene.

THE ACTORS NAMES.

RVMOVR the Prelenor.
King Henry the Fourth.
Prince Henry, afterwards Crowned King Henrie the Fift.
Prince Iohn of Lancaster. } Sonnes to Henry the Fourth, & brethren to Henry 5.
Humphrey of Gloucester.
Thomas of Clarence.

Northumberland.
The Arch Bishop of Yorke.
Mowbray.
Hastings.
Lord Bardolfe.
Travers.
Morton.
Coleuile.
} Opposites against King Henrie the Fourth.

Warwicke.
Westmerland.
Surrey.
Gowre.
Harecourt.
Lord Chiefe Iustice.
} Of the Kings Partie.

Pointz.
Falstaffe.
Bardolphe.
Pistoll.
Peto.
Page.
} Irregular Humorists.

Shallow. } Both Country
Silence. } Iustices.
Dauie, Seruant to Shallow.
Phang, and Snare, 2. Serieants
Mouldie.
Shadow.
Wart.
Feeble.
Bullcalfe.
} Country Soldiers

Drawers
Beadles.
Groomes

Northumberlands Wife.
Percies Widdow.
Hostesse Quickly.
Doll Teare-sheete.
Epilogue.

The Life of Henry the Fift.

Enter Prologue.

O for a Muse of Fire, that would ascend
The brightest Heaven of Invention;
A Kingdome for a Stage, Princes to Act,
And Monarchs to behold the swelling Scene.
Then should the Warlike Harry, like himselfe,
Assume the Port of Mars, and at his heeles
(Leasht in, like Hounds) should Famine, Sword, and Fire
Crouch for employment. But pardon, Gentles all:
The flat unraysed Spirits, that hath dar'd,
On this unworthy Scaffold, to bring forth
So great an Object: Can this Cock-Pit hold
The vastie fields of France? Or may we cramme
Within this wooden O, the very Casques
That did affright the Aire at Agincourt?
O pardon: since a crooked Figure may
Attest in little place a Million,
And let us, Cyphers to this great Accompt,
On your imaginary Forces worke.
Suppose within the Girdle of these Walls
Are now confin'd two mighty Monarchies,
Whose high, up-reared, and abutting Frontes,
The perilous narrow Ocean parts asunder:
Piece out our imperfections with your thoughts:
Into a thousand parts divide one Man,
And make imaginarie Puissance.
Think when we talke of Horses, that you see them
Printing their proud Hoofes i'th' receiving Earth:
For 'tis your thoughts that now must deck our Kings,
Carry them here and there: Jumping o'er Times;
Turning th'accomplishment of many yeares
Into an Houre-glasse: for the which supplie,
Admit me Chorus to this Historie;
Who Prologue-like, your humble patience pray,
Gently to heare, kindly to judge our Play. Exit.

Actus Primus. Scæna Prima.

Enter the two Bishops of Canterbury and Ely.

Bish. Cant.

MY Lord, I'le tell you, that selfe Bill is urg'd,
Which in th'eleventh yeare of ye last Kings reign
Was like, and had indeed against us past,
But that the scambling and unquiet time
Did push it out of further question.

Bish. Ely. But how my Lord shall we resist it now?

Bish. Cant. It must be thought on: if it passe against us,
We loose the better halfe of our Possession:
For all the Temporall Lands, which men devoute
By Testament have given to the Church,
Would they strip from us; being valu'd thus,
As much as would maintaine, to the Kings honor,
Full fifteene Earles, and fifteene hundred Knights;
Six thousand and two hundred good Esquires:
And to relieve of Lazars, and weake age
Of indigent faint Soules, past corporall toyle,
A hundred Almes-houses, right well supply'd:
And to the Coffers of the King beside,
A thousand pounds by th'yeare. Thus runs the Bill.

Bish. Ely. This would drake deepe.

Bish. Cant. 'Twould drinke the Cup and all.

Bish. Ely. But what prevention?

Bish. Cant. The King is full of grace, and fare regard.

Bish. Ely. And a true lover of the holy Church.

Bish. Cant. The courses of his youth promis'd it not.
The breath no sooner left his Fathers body,
But that his wildnesse, mortify'd in him,
Seem'd to dye too: yes, at that very moment,
Consideration like an Angell came,
And whipt th'offending Adam out of him;
Leaving his body as a Paradise,
T'inuelop and containe Celestiall Spirits.
Never was such a sodaine Scholler made:
Never came Reformation in a Flood,
With such a heady currence scowring faults:
Nor never Hidra-headed Wilfulnesse
So soone did loose his Seat; and all at once;
As in this King.

Bish. Ely. We are blessed in the Change.

Bish. Cant. Heare him but reason in Diuinitie;
And all-admiring, with an inward wish
You would desire the King were made a Prelate;
Heare him debate of Common-wealth Affaires;
You would say, it hath been all in all his study:
List his discourse of Warre; and you shall heare
A fearefull Battaile rendred you in Musique.

Tame him to my Caule of Pollicy,
The Gordian Knot of it he will vnloose,
Familiar as his Garter: that when he speakes,
The Ayre, a Charter'd Libertine, is still,
And the mute Wonder lurketh in mens eares,
To steale his sweet and honyed Sentences:
So that the Art and Practique part of Life,
Must be the Mistresse to this Theorique.
Which is a wonder how his Grace should gleane it,
Since his addiction was to Courses vaine,
His Companies vnlettet'd, rude, and shallow,
His Houres fill'd vp with Ryots, Banquets, Sports;
And neuer noted in him any studie,
Any retirement, any sequestration,
From open Haunts and Popularitie.

B. Ely. The Strawberry growes vnderneath the Nettle,
And holesome Berryes thriue and ripen best,
Neighbour'd by Fruit of baser qualitie:
And so the Prince obscur'd his Contemplation
Vnder the Veyle of Wildnesse, which (no doubt)
Grew like the Sommer Grasse, fastest by Night,
Vnseene, yet crescite in his facultie.

B. Cant. It must be so; for Miracles are ceast:
And therefore we must needes admit the meanes,
How things are perfected.

B. Ely. But my good Lord:
How now for mitigation of this Bill,
Vrg'd by the Commons? doth his Maiestie
Incline to it, or no?

B. Cant. He seemes indifferent:
Or rather swaying more vpon our part,
Then cherishing th'exhibiters against vs:
For I haue made an offer to his Maiestie,
Vpon our Spirituall Conuocation,
And in regard of Causes now in hand,
Which I haue open'd to his Grace at large,
As touching France, to giue a greater Summe,
Then euer at one time the Clergie yet
Did to his Predecessors part withall.

B. Ely. How did this offer seeme receiu'd, my Lord?

B. Cant. With good acceptance of his Maiestie:
Saue that there was not time enough to heare,
As I perceiu'd his Grace would faine haue done,
The seuerals and vnhidden passages
Of his true Titles to some certaine Dukedomes,
And generally, to the Crowne and Seat of France,
Deriu'd from Edward, his great Grandfather.

B. Ely. What was th'impediment that broke this off?

B. Cant. The French Embassador vpon that instant
Crau'd audience; and the howre I think is come,
To giue him hearing: Is it foure a Clock?

B. Ely. It is.

B. Cant. Then goe we in, to know his Embassie:
Which I could with a ready guesse declare,
Before the Frenchman speake a word of it.

B. Ely. I le wait vpon you, and I long to heare it.

Exeunt.

Enter the King, Humfrey, Bedford, Clarence, Warwick, Westmerland, and Exeter.

King. Where is my gracious Lord of Canterbury?

Exeter. Not here in presence.

King. Send for him, good Vncle.

Wests. Shall we call in th'Ambassador, my Liege?

King. Not yet, my Cousins: we would be resolu'd,
Before we heare him, of some things of weight,
That task our thoughts, concerning vs and France.

Enter two Bishops.

B. Cant. God and his Angels guard your sacred Throne,
And make you long become it.

King. Sure we thanke you.
My learned Lord, we pray you to proceed,
And iustly and religiously vnfold,
Why the Law Salike, that they haue in France,
Or should or should not barre vs in our Clayme:
And God forbid, my deare and faithfull Lord,
That you should fashion, wrest, or bow your reading,
Or nicely charge your vnderstanding Soule,
With opening Titles miscreate, whose right
Suits not in native colours with the truth:
For God doth know, how many now in health,
Shall drop their blood, in approbation
Of what your reuerence shall incite vs to.
Therefore take heed how you impawne our Person,
How you awake our sleeping Sword of Warre;
We charge you in the Name of God take heed:
For never two such Kingdomes did contend,
Without much fall of blood, whose guiltlesse drops
Are every one, a Woe, a sore Complaint,
'Gainst him, whose wrongs giues edge vnto the Swords,
That makes such waste in briefe mortalitie.
Vnder this Conisration, speake my Lord:
For we will heare, note, and beleeue in heart,
That what you speake, is in your Conscience washe,
As pure as sinne with Baptisme.

B. Cant. Then heare me gracious Soueraign, & you Peers,
That owe your selues, your liues, and seruices,
To this Imperiall Throne. There is no barre
To make against your Highnesse Clayme to France,
But this which they produce from Pharamond,
In terram Salicam Mulieres ne succedant,
No Woman shall succeed in Salike Land:
Which Salike Land, the French vniustly gloze
To be the Realme of France, and Pharamond
The founder of this Law, and Female Barre.
Yet their owne Authors faithfully affirme,
That the Land Salike is in Germanie,
Betweene the Flouds of Sala and of Else:
Where Charles the Great hauing subdu'd the Saxons,
There left behind and settled certaine French:
Who holding in disdaine the German Women,
For some dishonest manners of their life,
Establisht then this Law; to wit, No Female
Should be Inheritrix in Salike Land:
Which Salike (as I said) 'twixt Else and Sala,
Is at this day in Germanie, call'd Meisen.
Then doth it well appeare, the Salike Law
Was not deuised for the Realme of France:
Nor did the French possesse the Salike Land,
Vntill foure hundred one and twentie yeares
After defunction of King Pharamond,
Idly supposd the founder of this Law,
Who died within the yeere of our Redemption,
Foure hundred twentie six: and Charles the Great
Subdu'd the Saxons, and did seat the French
Beyond the Riuer Sala, in the yeere
Eight hundred fiue. Besides, their Writers say,
King Pepin, which deposed Childeric,
Did as Heire Generall, being descended
Of Blithild, which was Daughter to King Clothair,
Make Clayme and Title to the Crowne of France.
Hugh Capet also, who vsurpt the Crowne

Of Charles the Duke of Lorraine, sole Heire male
Of the true Line and Stocke of Charles the Great:
To find his Title with some shewes of truth,
Though in pure truth it was corrupt and naught,
Conuey'd himselfe as th'Heire to th' Lady Lingare,
Daughter to Charlemaine, who was the Sonne
To Lewis The Emperour, and Lewis the Sonne
Of Charles the Great: also King Lewis the Tenth,
Who was sole Heire to the Vsurper Capet,
Could not keepe quiet in his conscience,
Wearing the Crowne of France, 'till satisfied,
That faire Queene Isabel, his Grandmother,
Was Lineall of the Lady Ermengare,
Daughter to Charles the foresaid Duke of Lorraine:
By the which Marriage, the Lyne of Charles the Great
Was re-vnited to the Crowne of France
So, that as cleare as is the Summers Sonne,
King Pepins Title, and Hugh Capets Clayme,
King Lewis his satisfaction, all appeare
To hold in Right and Title of the Female:
So doe the Kings of France vnto this day.
Howbeit, they would hold vp this Salique Law,
To barre your Highnesse claiming from the Female,
And rather chuse to hide them in a Net,
Then amply to imbarre their crooked Titles,
Vsurpt from you and your Progenitors.

King. May I with right and conscience make this claim?

Bish. Cant. The sinne vpon my head, dread Soueraigne:
For in the Booke of Numbers it is writ,
When the man dyes, let the Inheritance
Descend vnto the Daughter. Gracious Lord,
Stand for your owne, vnwind your bloody Flagge,
Looke back into your mightie Ancestors:
Goe my dread Lord, to your great Grandsires Tombe,
From whom you clayme; mooke his Warlike Spirit,
And your Great Vncles, Edward the Black Prince,
Who on the French ground play'd a Tragedie,
Making defeat on the full Power of France:
Whiles his most mightie Father on a Hill
Stood smiling, to behold his Lyons Whelpe
Forrage in blood of French Nobilitie.
O Noble English, that could entertaine
With half their Forces, the full pride of France,
And let another half stand laughing by,
All out of worke, and cold for action.

Bish. Awake remembrance of these valiant dead,
And with your puissant Arme renew their Feats;
You are their Heire, you sit vpon their Throne:
The Blood and Courage that renowned them,
Runs in your Veines: and my thrice-puissant Liege
Is in the very May-Morne of his Youth,
Ripe for Exploits and mightie Enterprises.

Exet. Your Brother Kings and Monarchs of the Earth
Doe all expect, that you should rouse your selfe,
As did the former Lyons of your Blood. (mighs;

West. They know your Grace hath cause, and means, and
So hath your Highnesse: never King of England
Had Nobles richer, and more loyall Subiects,
Whose hearts haue left their bodyes here in England,
And lye pauilion'd in the fields of France.

Bish. Can. O let their bodyes follow my deare Liege
With Bloods, and Sword and Fire, to win your Right:
In ayde whereof, we of the Spiritualtie
Will raise your Highnesse such a mightie Summe,
As never did the Clergie at one time
Bring in to any of your Ancestors.

King. We must not onely arme t'inuade the French,
But lay downe our proportions, to defend
Against the Scot, who will make roade vpon vs,
With all aduantages.

Bish. Can. They of those Marches, gracious Soueraign,
Shall be a Wall sufficient to defend
Our in-land from the pilfering Borderers.

King. We do not meane the coursing Snatchers onely,
But feare the maine intendment of the Scot,
Who hath been still a giddy neighbour to vs:
For you shall reade, that my great Grandfather
Neuer went with his forces into France,
But that the Scot, on his vnfurnisht Kingdome,
Came pouring like the Tyde into a breach,
With ample and brim fulnesse of his force,
Galling the gleaned Land with hot Assayes,
Girding with grieuous siege, Castles and Townes;
That England being empty of defence,
Hath shooke and trembled at th'ill neighbourhood.

B. Can. She hath bin the more fear'd the harm'd, my Liege:
For heare her but exampl'd by her selfe,
When all her Cheualrie hath been in France,
And shee a mourning Widdow of her Nobles,
Shee hath her selfe not onely well defended,
But taken and impounded as a Stray.
The King of Scots: whom shee did send to France,
To fill King Edwards fame with prisoner Kings,
And make their Chronicle as rich with praise,
As is the Owse and bottome of the Sea
With sunken Wrack, and sum-lesse Treasuries.

Bish. Ely. But there's a saying very old and true,
If thou you will France win, then with Scotland first begin.
For once the Eagle (England) being in prey,
To her vnguarded Nest, the Weasell (Scot)
Comes sneaking, and so sucks her Princely Egges,
Playing the Mouse in absence of the Cat,
To tame and hauocke more then she can eate.

Exet. It followes then, the Cat must stay at home,
Yet that is but a crutch'd necessity,
Since we haue locks to safeguard necessaries,
And pretty traps to catch the petty theeues.
While that the Armed hand doth fight abroad,
Th'aduised head defends it selfe at home:
For Gouernment, though high, and low, and lower,
Put into parts, doth keepe in one consent,
Congreeing in a full and natural close,
Like Musicke.

Cant. Therefore doth heauen diuide
The state of man in diuers functions,
Setting endeuour in continual motion:
To which is fixed as an ayme or butt,
Obedience: for so worke the Hony Bees,
Creatures that by a rule in Nature teach
The Act of Order to a peopled Kingdome.
They haue a King, and Officers of sorts,
Where some like Magistrates correct at home:
Others, like Merchants venture Trade abroad:
Others, like Souldiers armed in their stings,
Make boote vpon the Summers Velvet buddes:
Which pillage, they with merry march bring home.
To the Tent-royal of their Emperor
Who busied in his Maiesties surueyes
The singing Masons building roofes of Gold,
The ciuill Citizens kneading vp the hony;
The poore Mechanicke Porters, crowding in
Their heavy burthens at his narrow gate:

The sad-ey'd Iustice with his surly hiatme,
Delivering ore to Executors pale
The lazie yawning Drone: I this inferre,
That many things having full reference
To one consent, may worke contrariously,
As many Arrowes loosed severall wayes
Come to one marke: as many wayes meet in one towne,
As many fresh streams meet in one salt sea;
As many Lynes close in the Dials center:
So may a thousand actions once a foote,
And in one purpose, and be all well borne
Without defect. Therefore to France, my Liege,
Diuide your happy England into foure,
Whereof, take you one quarter into France,
And you withall shall make all Gallia shake.
If we with three such powers left at home,
Cannot defend our owne doores from the dogge,
Let vs be worried, and our Nation lose
The name of hardinesse and policie.

King. Call in the Messengers sent from the Dolphin.
Now are we well resolu'd, and by Gods helpe
And yours, the noble sinewes of our power,
France being ours, we'l bend it to our Awe,
Or breake it all to peeces. Or there we'l sit,
(Ruling in large and ample Emperie,
Ore France, and all her (almost) Kingly Dukedomes)
Or lay these bones in an vnworthy Vrne,
Tombleffe, with no remembrance ouer them
Either our History shall with full mouth
Speake freely of our Acts, or else our grave
Like Turkish mute, shall have a tongueleffe mouth,
Not worshipt with a waxen Epitaph.

Enter Ambassadors of France.

Now are we well prepar'd to know the pleasure
Of our faire Cosin Dolphin: for we heare,
Your greeting is from him, not from the King.

Amb. May t please your Maiestie to giue vs leave
Freely to render what we haue in charge:
Or shall we sparingly shew you farre off
The Dolphins meaning, and our Embassie.

King. We are no Tyrant, but a Christian King,
Vnto whose grace our passion is as subject
As is our wretches fettred in our prisons,
Therefore with franke and with vncurbed plainnesse,
Tell vs Dolphins minde.

Amb. Thus then in few:
Your Highnesse lately sending into France,
Did claime some certaine Dukedomes, in the right
Of your great Predecessor, King Edward the third.
In answer of which claime, the Prince our Master
Says, that you fauour too much of your youth,
And bids you be aduis'd: There's sought in France,
That can be with a nimble Gallyard wonne:
You cannot reuell into Dukedomes there,
He therefore sends you meeter for your spirit
This Ton of Treasure; and in lieu of this,
Desires you let the dukedomes that you claime
Heare no more of you. Thus the Dolphin speakes.

King. What Treasure Vncle?

Exe. Tennis balles, my Liege.

King. We are glad the Dolphin is so pleasant with vs,
His Present, and your paines we thanke you for:
When we haue matcht our Rackets to these Balles,
We will in France (by Gods grace) play a fee,
Shall strike his fathers Crowne into the hazard.
Tell him, he hath made a match with such a Wrangler,
That all the Courts of France will be disturb'd
With Chaces. And we vnderstand him well,
How he comes o're vs with our wilder dayes,
Not measuring what vse we made of them.
We never valew'd this poore seate of England,
And therefore liuing hence, did giue our selfe
To barbarous license: As 'tis euer common,
That men are merriest, when they are from home.
But tell the Dolphin, I will keepe my State,
Be like a King, and shew my sayle of Greatnesse,
When I do rouse me in my Throne of France.
For that I haue layd by my Maiestie,
And plodded like a man for working dayes:
But I will rise there with so full a glorie,
That I will dazle all the eyes of France,
Yes strike the Dolphin blinde to looke on vs,
And tell the pleasant Prince, this Mocke of his
Hath turn'd his balles to Gun-stones, and his soule
Shall stand sore charged, for the wasteful vengeance
That shall flye with them: for many a thousand widows
Shall this his Mocke, mocke out of their deer husbands;
Mocke mothers from their sonnes, mock Castles downe:
And some are yet vngotten and vnborne,
That shal haue cause to curse the Dolphins scorne.
But this lyes all within the wil of God,
To whom I do appeale, and in whose name
Tel you the Dolphin, I am comming on,
To venge me as I may, and to put forth
My rightfull hand in a wel-hallow'd cause.
So get you hence in peace: And tell the Dolphin,
His Iest will sauour but of shallow wit,
When thousands weepe more then did laugh at it.
Conuey them with safe conduct. Fare you well.

Exeunt Ambassadors.

Exe. This was a merry Message.

King. We hope to make the Sender blush at it.
Therefore, my Lords, omit no happy houre,
That may giue furtherance to our Expedition:
For we haue now no thought in vs but France,
Saue those to God, that runne before our business.
Therefore let our proportions for these Warres
Be soone collected, and all things thought vpon,
That may with reasonable swiftnesse adde
More Feathers to our Wings: for God before,
We'le chide this Dolphin at his fathers doore.
Therefore let euery man now taske his thought,
That this faire Action may on foot be brought. Exeunt.

Flourish. Enter Chorus.

Now all the Youth of England are on fire,
And silken Dalliance in the Wardrobe lyes:
Now thrive the Armorers, and Honors thought
Reignes solely in the breast of every man.
They sell the Pasture now, to buy the Horse;
Following the Mirror of all Christian Kings,
With winged heeles, as English Mercuries.
For now sits Expectation in the Ayre,
And hides a Sword, from Hilts vnto the Point,
With Crownes Imperiall, Crownes and Coronets
Promis'd to Harry, and his followers.
The French aduis'd by good intelligence
Of this most dreadfull preparation,
Shake in their feare, and with pale Policy
Seeke to diuert the English purposes.
O England: Modell to thy inward Greatnesse,
Like little Body with a mighty Heart:

What mightst thou do, that honour would thee do,
Were all thy children kinde and natural:
But see, thy fault France hath in thee found out,
A net of hollow bosomes, which he fills
With treacherous Crowns, and three corrupted men:
One, Richard Earle of Cambridge, and the second
Henry Lord Scroope of Masham, and the third
Sir Thomas Gray Knight of Northumberland,
Have for the Gilt of France (O guilt indeed)
Confirm'd Conspiracy with fearefull France,
And by their hands, this grace of King must dye,
If Hell and Treason hold their promises,
Ere he take ship for France; and in Southampton.
Linger your patience on, and wee'l digest
Th'abuse of distance; force a play:
The summe is payde, the Traitors are agreed,
The King is set from London, and the Scene
Is now transported (Gentles) to Southampton,
There is the Play-house now, there must you sit,
And thence to France shall we conuey you safe,
And bring you backe: Charming the narrow seas
To give you gentle Passe: for if we may,
We'l not offend one stomacke with our Play.
But till the King come forth, and not till then,
Vnto Southampton do we shift our Scene. Exit

Enter Corporall Nym, and Lieutenant Bardolfe.

Bar. Well met Corporall Nym.

Nym. Good morrow Lieutenant Bardolfe.

Bar. What, are Ancient Pistoll and you friends yet?

Nym. For my part, I care not: I say little: but when time shall serue, there shall be smiles, but that shall be as it may. I dare not fight, but I will winke and holde out mine yron: it is a simple one, but what though? It will toste Cheese, and it will endure cold, as another mans sword will: and there's an end.

Bar. I will bestow a breakfast to make you friendes, and wee'l bee all three sworne brothers to France: Let's be so good Corporall Nym.

Nym. Faith, I will live so long as I may, that's the certaine of it: and when I cannot live my longer, I will doe as I may: That is my rest, that is the rendezvous of it.

Bar. It is certaine Corporall, that he is married to Nell Quickly, and certainly she did you wrong, for you were troth-plight to her.

Nym. I cannot tell, Things must be as they may: men may sleepe, and they may haue their throats about them at that time, and some say, knives haue edges: It must bee as it may, though patience be a tyred name, yet shee will plodde, there must be Conclusions, Well, I cannot tell.

Enter Pistoll, & Quickly.

Bar. Heere comes Ancient Pistoll and his wife: good Corporall be patient heere. How now mine Hostle Pistoll?

Pist. Base Tyke, call'st thou mee Hoste, now by this hand I sweare I scorne the terme: nor shall my Nell keep Lodgers.

Host. No by my troth, not long: For we cannot lodge and board a dozen or fourteene Gentlewomen that live honestly by the pricke of their Needles, but is will bee thought we keepe a Bawdy-house straight. O well-day Lady, if he be not hewne now, we shall see wilful adultery and murther committed.

Bar. Good Lieutenant, good Corporal offer nothing heere. Nym. Pish.

Pist. Pish for thee, Iland dogge: thou prick-eared cur of Iland.

Host. Good Corporall Nym shew thy valor, and put vp your sword.

Nym. Will you shogge off? I would haue you solus.

Pist. Solus, egregious dog? O Viper vile; The solus in thy most mercurialle face, the solus in thy teeth, and in thy throate, and in thy hatefull Lungs, yea in thy Maw perdy; and which is worse, within thy nastie mouth. I do retort the solus in thy bowels, for I can take, and Pistols cocke is vp, and flashing fire will follow.

Nym. I am not Barbason, you cannot conjure mee: I haue an humor to knocke you indifferently well: If you grow foule with me Pistoll, I will scourse you with my Rapier, as I may, in Gyre termes. If you would walke off, I would pricke your guts a little in good termes, as I may, and that's the humor of it.

Pist. O Braggard vile, and damned furious wight,
The Grave doth gape, and doting death is neere,
Therefore exhale.

Bar. Heare me, heare me what I say: Hee that strikes the first stroake, I'le run him vp to the hilts, as I am a soldier.

Pist. An oath of mickle might, and fury shall abate.
Give me thy fist, thy fore-foote to me giue: Thy spirites are most tall.

Nym. I will cut thy throate one time or other in faire termes, that is the humor of it.

Pistoll. Couple a gorge, that is the word. I defie thee again. O hound of Crete, think'st thou my spouse to get? No, to the spittle goe, and from the Poudring tub of infamy, fetch forth the Lazar Kite of Cressida kinde, Doll Tear-sheete, she by name, and her espouse. I have, and I will hold the Quondam Quickly for the only shee: and Pauca, there's enough to go to.

Enter the Boy.

Boy. Mine Hoost Pistoll, you must come to my Master, and your Hostesse: He is very sicke, & would to bed. Good Bardolfe, put thy face between his sheets, and do the Office of a Warming-pan: Faith, he's very ill.

Bard. Away you Rogue.

Host. By my troth he'l yeeld the Crow a pudding one of these dayes: the King has kild his heart. Good Husband come home presently. Exit

Bar. Come, shall I make you two friends. We must to France together: why the diuel should we keep knaues, to cut one another throats?

Pist. Let floods ore-swell, and fiends for food howle on.

Nym. You'l pay me the eight shillings I won of you at Betting?

Pist. Base is the Slaue that payes.

Nym. That now I will haue: that's the humor of it.

Pist. As manhood shal compound: push home. Draw

Bard. By this sword, hee that makes the first thrust, I'le kill him: By this sword, I will.

Pi. Sword is an Oath, & Oaths must haue their course.

Bar. Corporall Nym, & thou wilt be friends be friends, and thou wilt not, why then be enemies with me too: prethee put vp.

Pist. A Noble shalt thou haue, and present pay, and Liquor likewise will I give to thee, and friendship shall combine, and brotherhood. He that by Nymme, & Nymme shall live by me, is not this just? For I shal sutler be vnto the Campe, and profits will accrue. Giue me thy hand.

Nym. I shall haue my Noble?

Pist. In cash, most iustly paid.

Nym. Well, then that the humor of't.

Enter Hostesse.

Host. As ever you come of women, come in quickly to Sir Iohn: A poore heart, hee is so shak'd of a burning quotidian Tertian, that it is most lamentable to behold. Sweet men, come to him.

Nym. The King hath run bad humors on the Knight, that's the euen of it.

Pist. Nym, thou hast spoke the right, his heart is fractured and corroborate.

Nym. The King is a good King, but it must bee as it may: he passes some humors, and carreeres.

Pist. Let vs condole the Knight, for (Lambekins) we will liue.

Enter Exeter, Bedford, & Westmerland.

Bed. Fore God his Grace is bold to trust these traitors

Exe. They shall be apprehended by and by.

West. How smooth and euen they do beat themselues, As if allegeance in their bosomes sate Crowned with faith, and constant loyalty.

Bed. The King hath note of all that they intend, By interception, which they dreame not of.

Exe. Nay, but the man that was his bedfellow, Whom he hath dull'd and clog'd with gracious fauours; That he should for a forraigne purse, so sell His Soueraignes life to death and treachery.

Sound Trumpets.

Enter the King, Scroope, Cambridge, and Grey.

King. Now sits the winde faire, and we will aboard. My Lord of Cambridge, and my kinde Lord of Masham, And you my gentle Knight, giue me your thoughts: Thinke you not that the powres we beare with vs Will cut their passage through the force of France? Doing the execution, and the acte, For which we haue in head assembled them.

Scro. No doubt my Liege, if each man do his best.

King. I doubt not that, since we are well perswaded We carry not a heart with vs from hence, That growes not in a faire consent with ours: Nor leaue not one behinde, that doth not wish Successe and Conquest to attend on vs.

Cam. Never was Monarch better fear'd and lou'd, Then is your Maiesty; there's not I thinke a subiect That sits in heart-greefe and vneasinesse Vnder the sweet shade of your gouernment.

Kni. True: those that were your Fathers enemies, Haue steep'd their gauls in hony, and do serue you With hearts create of duty, and of zeale.

King. We therefore haue great cause of thankfulnes, And shall forget the office of our hand Sooner then quittance of desert and merit, According to the weight and worthinesse.

Scro. So seruice shall with steeled sinewes toyle, And labour shall refresh it selfe with hope To do your Grace incessant seruices.

King. We ludge no lesse. Vncle of Exeter, Inlarge the man committed yesterday, That rayl'd against our person: We consider It was excesse of Wine that set him on, And on his more aduice, We pardon him.

Scro. That's mercy, but too much security: Let him be punish'd Soueraigne, least example Breed (by his sufferance) more of such a kind.

King. O let vs yet be merciful.

Cam. So may your Highnesse, and yet punish too.

Grey. Sir, you shew great mercy if you giue him life, After the taste of much correction.

King Alas, your too much loue and care of me, Are heauy Orisons 'gainst this poore wretch: If little faults proceeding on distemper, Shall not be wink'd at, how shall we stretch our eye When capitall crimes, chew'd, swallow'd, and digested, Appeare before vs? We'l yet inlarge that man, Though Cambridge, Scroope, and Grey, in their deere care And tender preseruation of our person Would haue him punish'd. And now to our French causes, Who are the late Commissioners?

Cam. I one my Lord, Your Highnesse bad me aske for it to day.

Scro. So did you me my Liege.

Grey. And I my Royall Soueraigne.

King. Then Richard Earle of Cambridge, there is yours: There yours Lord Scroope of Masham, and Sir Knight: Grey of Northumberland, this same is yours: Reade them, and know I know your worthinesse. My Lord of Westmerland, and Vncle Exeter, We will aboard to night. Why how now Gentlemen? What see you in those papers, that you loose So much complexion? Looke ye how they change: Their cheekes are paper. Why, what reade you there, That haue so coward'd and chac'd your blood Out of apparance.

Cam. I do confesse my fault, And do submit me to your Highnesse mercy.

Grey. Scro. To which we all appeale.

King. The mercy that was quicke in vs but late, By your owne counsaile is suppreft and kill'd: You must not dare (for shame) to talke of mercy. For your owne reasons turne into your bosomes, As dogs vpon their maisters, worrying you: See you my Princes, and my Noble Peeres, These English monsters: My Lord of Cambridge here, You know how apt our loue was, to accord To furnish with all appertinents Belonging to his Honour; and this man, Hath for a few light Crownes, lightly conspir'd And sworne vnto the practises of France To kill vs here in Hampton. To the which, This Knight no lesse for bounty bound to Vs Then Cambridge is, hath likewise sworne. But O, What shall I say to thee Lord Scroope, thou cruell, Ingrateful, sauage, and inhumane Creature? Thou that didst beare the key of all my counsailes, That knew'st the very bottome of my soule, That (almost) might'st haue coyn'd me into Golde, Would'st thou haue practis'd on me, for thy vse? May it be possible, that foreaigne hire Could out of thee extract one spark of euill That might annoy my finger? 'Tis so strange, That though the truth of it stands off as grosse As blacke and white, my eye will scarsely see it. Treason, and murther, euer kept together, As two yoake diuels sworne to eythers purpose, Working so grossly in an naturall cause, That admiration did not hoope at them. But thou (gainst all proportion) didst bring in Wonder to write on treason, and on murther: And whatsoever cunning fiend it was That wrought vpon thee so preposterously, Hath got the voyce in hell for excellence:

And

And other diuels that suggest by treasons,
Do bouch and bungle vp damnation,
With patches, colours, and with formes being fetche
From gilt'ring semblances of piety:
But he that temper'd thee, bad thee stand vp,
Gaue thee no instance why thou shouldst do treason,
Vnlesse to dub thee with the name of Traitor.
If that same Dæmon that hath gull'd thee thus,
Should with his Lyon-gate walke the whole world,
He might returne to vastie Tartar backe,
And tell the Legions, I can neuer win
A soule so easie as that Englishmans.
Oh, how hast thou with iealousie infected
The sweetnesse of affiance? Shew men dutifull,
Why so didst thou: seeme they grauе and learned?
Why so didst thou. Come they of Noble Family?
Why so didst thou. Seeme they religious?
Why so didst thou. Or are they spare in diet,
Free from grosse passion, or of mirth, or anger,
Constant in spirit, not swerving with the blood,
Garnish'd and deck'd in modest complement,
Not working with the eye, without the eare,
And but in purged iudgement trusting neither,
Such and so finely boulted didst thou seeme:
And thus thy fall hath left a kinde of blot.
To make thee full fraught man, and best indued
With some suspition, I will weepe for thee.
For this reuolt of thine, me thinkes is like
Another fall of Man. Their faults are open,
Arrest them to the answer of the Law,
And God acquit them of their practises.

Exe. I arrest thee of High Treason, by the name of Richard Earle of Cambridge.

I arrest thee of High Treason, by the name of Thomas Lord Scroope of Masham.

I arrest thee of High Treason, by the name of Thomas Grey, Knight of Northumberland.

Scro. Our purposes, God iustly hath discouer'd,
And I repent my fault more then my death,
Which I beseech your Highnesse to forgiue,
Although my body pay the price of it.

Cam. For me, the Gold of France did not seduce,
Although I did admit it as a motiue,
The sooner to effect what I intended:
But God be thanked for prevention,
Which in sufferance heartily will reioyce,
Beseeching God, and you, to pardon mee.

Grey. Never did faithfull subiect more reioyce
At the discouery of most dangerous Treason,
Then I do at this houre ioy ore my selfe,
Preuented from a damned enterprize:
My fault, but not my body, pardon Soueraigne.

King. God quit you in his mercy: Hear your sentence
You haue conspir'd against Our Royall person,
Ioyn'd with an enemy proclaim'd, and from his Coffers,
Receyu'd the Golden Earnest of Our death:
Wherein you would haue sold your King to slaughter,
His Princes, and his Peeres to seruitude,
His Subiects to oppression, and contempt,
And his whole Kingdome into desolation:
Touching our person, seeke we no reuenge,
But we our Kingdomes safety must so tender
Whose ruine you sought, that to her Lawes
We do deliuer you. Get you therefore hence,
(Poore miserable wretches) to your death:
The taste whereof, God of his mercy giue
You patience to indure, and true Repentance
Of all your deare offences. Beare them hence. Exit.
Now Lords for France: the enterprise whereof
Shall be to you as vs, like glorious.
We doubt not of a faire and luckie Warre,
Since God so graciously hath brought to light
This dangerous Treason, lurking in our way,
To hinder our beginnings. We doubt not now,
But euery Rubbe is smoothed on our way.
Then forth, deare Countreymen: Let vs deliuer
Our Puissance into the hand of God,
Putting it straight in expedition.
Cheerely to Sea, the signes of Warre aduance,
No King of England, if not King of France. Flourish.

Enter Pistoll, Nim, Bardolph, Boy, and Hostesse.

Hostesse. Prythee honey sweet Husband, let me bring thee to Staines.

Pistoll. No: for my manly heart doth erne. Bardolph, be blythe: Nim, rouse thy vaunting Veines: Boy, bristle thy Courage vp: for Falstaffe hee is dead, and wee must erne therefore.

Bard. Would I were with him, wheresomere hee is, eyther in Heauen, or in Hell.

Hostesse. Nay sure, hee's not in Hell: hee's in Arthurs Bosome, if euer man went to Arthurs Bosome: a made a finer end, and went away and it had beene any Christome Child: a parted eu'n iust betweene Twelue and One, eu'n at the turning o'th' Tyde: for after I saw him fumble with the Sheets, and play with Flowers, and smile vpon his fingers end, I knew there was but one way: for his Nose was as sharpe as a Pen, and a Table of greene fields. How now Sir Iohn (quoth I?) what man? be a good cheare: so a cryed out, God, God, God, three or foure times: now I, to comfort him, bid him a should not thinke of God; I hop'd there was no neede to trouble himselfe with any such thoughts yet: so a bad me lay more Clothes on his feet: I put my hand into the Bed, and felt them, and they were as cold as any stone: then I felt to his knees, and so vp-peer'd, and vpward, and all was as cold as any stone.

Nim. They say he cryed out of Sack.

Hostesse. I, that a did.

Bard. And of Women.

Hostesse. Nay, that a did not.

Boy. Yes that a did, and said they were Deules incarnate.

Woman. A could neuer abide Carnation, 'twas a Colour he neuer lik'd.

Boy. A said once, the Deule would haue him aboue Women.

Hostesse. A did in some sort (indeed) handle Women: but then hee was rumatique, and talk'd of the Whore of Babylon.

Boy. Doe you not remember a saw a Flea sticke vpon Bardolphs Nose, and a said it was a blacke Soule burning in Hell.

Bard. Well, the fuell is gone that maintain'd that fire: that's all the Riches I got in his seruice.

Nim. Shall wee shogg? the King will be gone from Southampton.

Pist. Come, let's away. My Loue, giue me thy Lippes: Looke to my Chattels, and my Moueables: Let Sences rule: The world is Pitch and pay: trust none: for Oathes are Strawes, mens Faiths are Wafer-Cakes, and hold-fast is the only Dogge: My Ducke, therefore Caueto bee thy Counsailor. Goe, cleare thy Chrystalls. Yoke-fellowes in Armes, let vs to France, like Horse-leeches leeches my Boyes, to suche, to sucke, the very blood to suche.

Boy. And that's but vnwholesome food, they say.

Pist. Touch her soft mouth, and march.

Bard. Farwell Hostesse.

Nym. I cannot kisse, that is the humor of it: but adieu.

Pist. Let Husswifrie appeare: keepe close, I thee command.

Hostesse. Farwell: adieu. Exeunt

Flourish.

Enter the French King, the Dolphin, the Dukes of Berry and Britaine.

King. Thus comes the English with full power vpon vs,
And more then carefully it vs concerne,
To answer Royally in our defeares.
Therefore the Dukes of Berry and of Britaine,
Of Brabant and of Orleance, shall make forth,
And you Prince Dolphin, with all swift dispatch
To line and new repaire our Townes of Warre
With men of courage, and with meanes defendant;
For England his approaches makes as fierce,
As Waters to the sucking of a Gulfe.
It sits vs then to be as prouident,
As feare may teach vs, out of late examples
Left by the fatall and neglected English,
Vpon our fields.

Dolphin. My most redoubted Father,
It is most meet we arme vs 'gainst the Foe:
For Peace it selfe should not so dull a Kingdome,
(Though War nor no knowne Quarrel were in question)
But that Defences, Musters, Preparations,
Should be maintain'd, assembled, and collected,
As were a Warre in expectation.
Therefore I say, 'tis meet we all goe forth,
To view the sick and feeble parts of France:
And let vs doe it with no shew of feare,
No, with no more, then if we heard that England
Were busied with a Whitson Morris-dance:
For, my good Liege, shee is so idly King'd,
Her Scepter so phantastically borne,
By a vaine giddie shallow humorous Youth,
That feare attends her not.

Const. O peace, Prince Dolphin,
You are too much mistaken in this King:
Question your Grace the late Embassadors,
With what great State he heard their Embassie,
How well supply'd with Noble Councellors,
How modest in exception; and withall,
How terrible in constant resolution:
And you shall find, his Vanities fore-spent,
Were but the out-side of the Roman Brutus,
Couering Discretion with a Coat of Folly;
As Gardeners doe with Ordure hide those Roots
That shall first spring, and be most delicate.

Dolphin. Well, 'tis not so, my Lord High Constable.
But though we thinke it so, it is no matter:
In cases of defence, 'tis best to weigh
The Enemie more mightie then he seemes,
So the proportions of defence are fill'd:
Which of a weake and niggardly protection,
Doth like a Miser spoyle his Coat, with scanting
A little Cloth.

King. Thinke we King Harry strong:
And Princes, looke you strongly arme to meet him.
The Kindred of him hath beene flesh vpon vs:
And he is bred out of that bloodie strine,
That haunted vs in our familiar Paths:
Witnesse our too much memorable shame,
When Cressy Battell fatally was strucke,
And all our Princes captiu'd, by the hand
Of that black Name, Edward, black Prince of Wales:
While that his Mountaine Sire, on Mountaine standing
Vp in the Ayre, crow n'd with the Golden Sunne,
Saw his Heroicall Seed, and smil'd to see him
Mangle the Worke of Nature, and deface
The Patternes, that by God and by French Fathers
Had twentie yeares been made. This is a Stem
Of that Victorious Stock: and let vs feare
The Native mightinesse and fate of him.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Embassadors from Harry King of England,
Doe crave admittance to your Maiestie.

King. We'le give them present audience.
Goe, and bring them.
You see this Chase is hotly followed, friends.

Dolphin. Turne head, and stop pursuit: for coward Dogs
Most spend their mouths, when what they seem to threaten Runs faire before them. Good my Soueraigne
Take vp the English short, and let them know
Of what a Monarchie you are the Head:
Self-loue, my Liege, is not so vile a sinne,
As self-neglecting.

Enter Exeter.

King. From our Brother of England?

Exe. From him, and thus he greets your Maiestie:
He wills you in the Name of God Almighty,
That you deuest your selfe, and lay apart
The borrowed Glories, that by gift of Heaven,
By Law of Nature, and of Nations, longs
To him and to his Heires, namely the Crowne,
And all wide-stretched Honors, that pertaine
By Custome, and the Ordinance of Times,
Vnto the Crowne of France: that you may know
'Tis no sinister, nor no awk-ward Claymes,
Pick'd from the worme-holes of long-vanisht dayes,
Nor from the dust of old Oblivion rak't,
He sends you this most memorable Lyne,
In every Branch truly demonstrative;
Willing you ouer-looke this Pedigree:
And when you find him euenly deriu'd
From his most fam'd, of famous Ancestors,
Edward the third; he bids you then resigne
Your Crowne and Kingdome, indirectly held
From him, the Native and true Challenger.

King. Or else what follows?

Exe. Bloody constraint: for if you hide the Crowne
Euen in your hearts, there will he rake for it.
Therefore in fierce Tempest is he comming,
In Thunder and in Earth-quake, like a Iouse:
That if requiring faile, he will compell.
And bids you, in the Bowels of the Lord,
Deliuer vp the Crowne, and to take mercie
On the poore Soules, for whom this hungry Warre
Opens his vastie Iawes: and on your head
Turning the Widdowes Teares, the Orphans Cryes,
The dead-mens Blood, the priuy Maidens Groanes,
For Husbands, Fathers, and betrothed Louers,
That shall be swallowed in this Controuersie.
This is his Claymes, his Threatning, and my Message:
Vnlesse the Dolphin be in presence here;
To whom expressly I bring greeting too.

King. For

King. For vs, we will consider of this further:
To morrow shall you bear our full intent
Back to our Brother of England.
Dolph. For the Dolphin.
I stand here for him: what to him from England?
Exe. Scorne and defiance, slighte regard, contempt,
And any thing that may not mis-become
The mightie Sender, doth he prize you at.
Thus sayes my King: and if your Fathers Highnesse
Doe not, in grount of all demands at large,
Sweeten the bitter Mock you sent his Maiestie;
He'le call you to so hot an Answer of it,
That Cannon and Wombie Vaultages of France
Shall chide your Trespas, and returne your Mock
In second Accent of his Ordinance.
Dolph. Say: if my Father render faire returne,
It is against my will: for I desire
Nothing but Oddes with England.
To that end, as matching to his Youth and Vanitie,
I did present him with the Paris-Balls.
Exe. He'le make your Paris Louer shake for it,
Were it the Mistresse Court of mighrie Europe:
And be assur'd, you'le find a diff'rence,
As we his Subiects have in wonder found,
Betweene the promise of his greener dayes,
And these he masters now: now he weighes Time
Even to the vtmost Graine: that you shall reade
In your owne Losses, if he stay in France.
King. Tomorrow shall you know our mind at full.
Flourish.
Exe. Dispatch vs with all speed, least that our King
Come here himselfe to question our delay;
For he is footed in this Land already.
King. You shalbe soone dispatcht, with faire conditions.
A Night is but small breathe, and brute pewle,
To answer matters of this consequence. Exeunt.

Actus Secundus.

Flourish. Enter Chorus.
Thus with imagin'd wing our swift Scene flyes,
In motion of no lesse celeritie than that of Thought.
Suppose, that you have seene
The well-appointed King at Douer Pier,
Embarke his Royalties: and his braue Fleet,
With silken Streamers, the young Phebus fayning;
Play with your Fancies: and in them behold,
Vpon the Hempen Tackle, Ship-boyes climbing;
Heare the shrill Whiffle, which doth order give
To sounds confus'd: behold the threaden Sayles,
Borne with th'inuisible and creeping Wind,
Draw the huge Bottomes through the furrowed Sea,
Breaking the lofte Surge. O, doe but thinke
You stand vpon the Rinage, and behold
A Citie on th'inconstant Billowes dancing:
For so appeares this Fleet Maiestically,
Holding due course to Harflew. Follow, follow:
Grapple your minds to sternage of this Navie,
And leave your England as dead Mid-night, still,
Guarded with Grandsires, Babyes, and old Women,
Either past, or not arriu'd to pyth and puissance:
For who is he, whose Chin is but enriche
With one appearing Hayre, that will not follow
These cull'd and choyse-drawne Caualiers to France?
Worke, worke your Thoughts, and therein see a Siege:
Behold the Ordnance on their Carriages,
With fatall mouthes gaping on girded Harflew.
Suppose th'Embassador from the French comes back;
Tells Harry, That the King doth offer him
Katherine his Daughter, and with her to Downe,
Some petty and vnprofitable Dukedomes.
The offer likes not: and the nimble Gunner
With Lynstock now the diuellish Cannon touches,
Alarum, and Chambers goe off.
And downe goes all before them. Still be kind,
And eech out our performance with your mind. Exit.

Enter the King, Exeter, Bedford, and Glouster
Alarum: Scaling Ladders at Harflew.
King Once more vnto the Breach,
Deare friends, once more;
Or close the Wall vp with our English dead:
In Peace, there's nothing so becomes a man,
As modest stillnesse, and humilitie:
But when the blast of Warre blowes in our eares,
Then imitate the action of the Tyger:
Stiffen the sinewes, commune vp the blood,
Disguise faire Nature with hard-fauour'd Rage:
Then lend the Eye a terrible aspect:
Let it pry through the portage of the Head,
Like the Brasse Cannon: let the Brow o'rewhelme it,
As feerefully, as doth a galled Rocke
O're-hang and iutty his confounded Base,
Swill'd with the wild and wastfull Ocean.
Now set the Teeth, and stretch the Nosthrill wide,
Hold hard the Breath, and bend vp every Spirit
To his full height. On, on, you Noblish English,
Whose blood is fet from Fathers of Warre-proofe:
Fathers, that like so many Alexanders,
Haue in these parts from Morne till Eaen fought,
And sheath'd their Swords, for lack of argument.
Dishonour not your Mothers: now attest,
That those whom you call'd Fathers, did beget you.
Be Copy now to me of grosser blood,
And teach them how to Ware. And you good Yeomen,
Whose Lyms were made in England; shew vs here
The mettell of your Pasture: let vs sweare,
That you are worth your breeding: which I doubt not:
For there is none of you so mean and base,
That hath not Noble lustre in your eyes.
I see you stand like Grey-hounds in the slips,
Straying vpon the Start. The Game's afoot:
Follow your Spirit; and vpon this Charge,
Cry, God for Harry, England, and S. George.
Alarum, and Chambers goe off.

Enter Nim, Bardolph, Pistoll, and Boy.
Bard. On, on, on, on, on, to the breach, to the breach.
Nim. Pray thee Corporall stay, the Knocks are too hot: and for mine owne part, I haue not a Case of Liues: the humor of it is too hot, that is the very plaine-Song of it.
Pist. The plaine-Song is most iust: for humors doe abound: Knocks goe and come: Gods Vassals drop and dye: and Sword and Shield, in bloody Field, doth winne immortall fame.
Boy. Would I were in an Ale-house in London, I would give all my fame for a Pot of Ale, and safetie.

Pist. And I: If wishes would preuayle with me, my purpose should not fayle with me; but thither would I high.

Boy. As duly, but not as truly, as Bird doth sing on bough.

Enter Flewellen.

Fla. Vp to the breach, you Dogges; auaunt you Cullions.

Pist. Be mercifull great Duke to men of Mould: abate thy Rage, abate thy manly Rage; abate thy Rage, great Duke Good Bawcock bate thy Rage: vse lenitie sweet Chuck.

Nim. These be good humors: your Honor wins bad humors. Exeu.

Boy. As young as I am, I haue obseru'd these three Swashers: I am Boy to them all three, but all they three, though they would serue me, could not be Man to me; for indeed three such Antiques doe not amount to a man: for Bardolph, hee is white-liuer'd, and red-face'd; by the meanes whereof, a faces it out, but fights not: for Pistoll, hee hath a killing Tongue, and a quiet Sword; by the meanes whereof, a breakes Words, and keepes whole Weapons: for Nim, hee hath beard, that men of few Words are the best men, and therefore hee scornes to say his Prayers, left a should be thought a Coward: but his few bad Words are matcht with as few good Deeds; for a never broke any mans Head but his owne, and that was against a Post, when he was drunke. They will steale any thing, and call it Purchase. Bardolph stole a Lute-case, bore it twelue Leagues, and sold it for three halfpence. Nim and Bardolph are sworne Brothers in filching: and in Callice they stole a fire-shouell. I knew by that peece of Seruice, the men would carry Coales. They would haue me as familiar with mens Pockets, as their Gloues or their Hand-kerchers: which makes much against my Manhood, if I should take from anothers Pocket, to put into mine; for it is plaine pocketting vp of Wrongs. I must leaue them, and seeke some better Seruice: their Villany goes against my weake stomacke, and therefore I must cast it vp. Exit.

Enter Gower.

Gower. Captaine Flewellen, you must come presently to the Mynes; the Duke of Gloucester would speake with you.

Fla. To the Mynes? Tell you the Duke, it is not so good to come to the Mynes: for looke you, the Mynes is not according to the disciplines of the Warre; the concauities of it is not sufficient: for looke you, th'other sorte, you may discusse vnto the Duke, looke you, is dig himselfe foure yard vnder the Countermines: by Chesse, I think a will plowe vp all, if there is not better directions.

Gower. The Duke of Gloucester, to whom the Order of the Siege is giuen, is altogether directed by an Irish man, a very valiant Gentleman yfarth.

Welsh. It is Captaine Makmurrie, is it not?

Gower. I thinke it be.

Welsh. By Chesse he is an Asse, as in the World, I will verrie as much in his Beard: he has no more directions in the true disciplines of the Werres, looke you, of the Romon disciplines, then is a Poppy-dog.

Enter Makmurrie, and Captaine Iamy.

Gower. Here a comes, and the Scots Captaine, Captaine Iamy, with him.

Welsh Captaine Iamy is a marvellous falorous Gentleman, that is certain, and of great expedition and knowledge in th'aunchiant Werres, vpon my perticular knowledge of his directions: by Chesse he will maintaine his Argument as well as any Militarie man in the World, in the disciplines of the Pristine Werres of the Romans.

Scot. I say gudday, Captaine Flewellen.

Welsh. Godden to your Worship, good Captaine Iames.

Gower. How now Captaine Makmurrie, haue you quit the Mynes: haue the Pioners giuen o're.

Irish. By Christ Law tish ill done: the Worke ish giue ouer, the Trompet sound the Retreat. By my Hand I swearre, and my fathers Soule, the Worke ish ill done; it ish giue ouer: I would haue blowed vp the Towne, so Christ sauе me law, in an houre. O tish ill done, tish ill done: by my Hand tish ill done.

Welsh. Captaine Makmurrie, I beseech you now, will you vouchsafe me, looke you, a few disputations with you, as partly touching or concerning the disciplines of the Warre, the Roman Warres, in the way of Argument, looke you, and friendly communication: partly to satisfie my Opinion, and partly for the satisfaction, looke you, of my Mind: as touching the direction of the Militarie discipline, that is the Point.

Scot. It sall be very gud, gud feith, gud Captens bath, and I sall quit you with gud leue, as I may pick occasion: that sall I marry.

Irish. It is no time to discourse, so Christ saue me: the day is hot, and the Weather, and the Warres, and the King, and the Dukes: it is no time to discourse, the Town is beseech'd: and the Trompet call vs to the breech, and we talke, and be Christ do nothing, tis shame for vs all: so God sa'me tis shame to stand still, it is shame by my hand: and there is Throats to be cut, and Workes to be done, and there ish nothing done, so Christ sa'me law.

Scot. By the Mes, ere theese eyes of mine take themselues to slomber, ayle de gud seruice, or Ile ligge i'th' grund for it; ay, or goe to death: and Ile pay't as valorously as I may, that sal I suerly do, that is the breff and the long: marry, I wod full faine heard some question tween you tway.

Welsh. Captaine Makmurrie, I thinke, looke you, vnder your correction, there is not many of your Nation.

Irish. Of my Nation? What ish my Nation? Ish a Villaine, and a Bastard, and a Knaue, and a Rascall. What ish my Nation? Who talkes of my Nation?

Welsh. Looke you, if you take the matter otherwise then is meant, Captaine Makmurrie, peradventure I shall thinke you doe not vse me with that affabilitie, as in discretion you ought to vse me, looke you, being as good a man as your selfe, both in the disciplines of Warre, and in the derination of my Birth, and in other particularities.

Irish. I doe not know you so good a man as my selfe: so Christ saue me, I will cut off your Head.

Gower. Gentlemen both, you will mistake each other.

Scot. A, that's a foule fault. A Parley.

Gower. The Towne sounds a Parley.

Welsh. Captaine Makmurrie, when there is more better opportunitie to be required, looke you, I will be so bold as to tell you, I know the disciplines of Warre: and there is an end. Exit.

Enter the King and all his Traine before the Gates.

King. How yet resolues the Governour of the Towne? This is the latest Parle we will admit:

Therefore to our best mercy give your selues,
Or like to men proud of destruction,
Defie vs to our worst: for as I am a Souldier,
A Name that in my thoughts becomes me best;
If I begin the batt'rie once againe,
I will not leaue the halfe-atchieued Harflew,
Till in her ashes she lye buryed.
The Gates of Mercy shall be all shut vp,
And the flesh'd Souldier, rough and hard of heart,
In libertie of bloody hand, shall raunge
With Conscience wide as Hell, mowing like Grasse
Your fresh faire Virgins, and your flowring Infants.
What is it then to me, if impious Warre,
Arrayed in flames like to the Prince of Fiends,
Doe with his smyrche complexion all fell feats,
Enlynckt to wast and desolation?
What is't to me, when you your selues are cause,
If your pure Maydens fall into the hand
Of hot and forcing Violation?
What Reyne can hold licentious Wickednesse,
When downe the Hill he holds his fierce Carriere?
We may as bootlesse spend our vaine Command
Vpon th enraged Souldiers in their spoyle,
As send Precepts to the Leviathan, to come ashore.
Therefore, you men of Harflew,
Take pitty of your Towne and of your People,
Whiles yet my Souldiers are in my Command,
Whiles yet the coole and temperate Wind of Grace
O're-blowes the filthy and contagious Clouds
Of headly Murther, Spoyle and Villany.
If not: why in a moment looke to see
The blind and bloody Souldier, with foule hand
Defiue the Locks of your shrill-striking Daughters:
Your Fathers taken by the siluer Beards,
And their most reuerend Heads dasht to the Walls:
Your naked Infants spitted vpon Pykes,
Whiles the mad Mothers, with their howles confus'd,
Doe breake the Clouds; as did the Wiues of Iewry,
At Herods bloody-hunting slaughter-men.
What say you? Will you yeeld, and this auoyd?
Or guiltie in defence, be thus destroy'd.

Enter Gouernour.

Gouv. Our expectation hath this day an end:
The Dolphin, whom of Succours we entreated,
Returnes vs, that his Powers are yet not ready,
To raysse so great a Siege: Therefore great King,
We yeeld our Towne and Liues to thy soft Mercy:
Enter our Gates, dispose of vs and ours,
For we no longer are defensible.

King. Open your Gates: Come Vncle Exeter,
Goe you and enter Harflew; there remaine,
And fortifie it strongly 'gainst the French:
Vse mercy to them all for vs, deare Vncle.
The Winter comming on, and Sicknesse growing
Vpon our Souldiers, we will retyre to Calis.
To-night in Harflew will we be your Guest,
To-morrow for the March are we addrest.

Flourish, and enter the Trowne.

Enter Katherine and an old Gentlewoman.

Kath. Alice, tu es esté en Angleterre, & tu bien parler le Language.

Alice. En pas Madame.

Kath. Ie te prie m'enseigner, il faut que ie apprend a parler: Comment appelle vous le main en Anglois

Alice. Le main il & appelle de Hand.

Kath. De Hand.

Alice. E le doyts.

Kat. Le doyts, ma foy ie oublie, e doyt mays, se me souuenray le doyts ie pense qu'ils ont appelle de fingres, ou de fingres.

Alice. Le main de Hand, le doyts le Fingres, ie pense que tu fais le bon escholier.

Kath. I'ay gagnee diux mots d'Anglois vistement, comment appelle vous le ongles?

Alice. Le ongles, les appellons de Naylos.

Kath. De Naylos escoute: dites moy, si tu parle bien: de Hand, de Fingres, e de Naylos.

Alice. C'est bien dict Madame, il est fort bon Anglois.

Kath. Dites moy l'Anglois pour le bras.

Alice. De Arme, Madame.

Kath. E de coudee.

Alice. D'Elbow.

Kath. D'Elbow: Ie men fay le repiticie de tous les mots que vous mauez appris des a present.

Alice. Il est trop difficile Madame, comme le pense.

Kath. Excuse moy Alice escoute, d'Hand, de Fingre, de Naylos, d'Arme, de Bilbow.

Alice. D'Elbow, Madame.

Kath. O Seigneur Dieu, ie men oublie d'Elbow, comment appelle vous le col.

Alice. De Nick, Madame.

Kath. De Nick, e le menton.

Alice. De Chin.

Kath. De Sin: le col de Nick, le menton de Sin.

Alice. Ouy. Sauf vostre honneur en verité vous prononcez les mots aussi droict, que le Natifs d'Angleterre.

Kath. Ie ne doute point d'apprendre par de grace de Dieu, & en peu de temps.

Alice. N'auez vous y desia oublie ce que ie vous a enseigner.

Kath. Nenni ie recitera a vous promptement, d'Hand, de Fingre, de Maylos.

Alice. De Naylos, Madame.

Kath. De Naylos de Arme, de Elbow.

Alice. Sans vostre honneur d'Elbow.

Kath. Ainsi de ie d'Elbow, de Nick, & de Sin: comment appelle vous les pied & de robe.

Alice. Le Foot Madame, & le Count.

Kath. Le Foot, & le Count: O Seigneur Dieu, il sont les mots de son mauvais corruptible grosse & impudique, & non pour le Dames de Honeur d'oser: Ie ne voudray prononcer ce mots deuant le Seigneurs de France, pour toute le monde, fo le Foot & le Count, mais mays, le recitera vn autre fois ma lecon ensembe, d'Hand, de Fingre, de Naylos, d'Arme, d'Elbow, de Nick, de Sin, de Foot, le Count.

Alice. Excellent, Madame.

Kath. C'est assez pour vne foyes, alons nous a dinner.

Exeu.

Enter the King of France, the Dolphin, the Constable of France, and others.

King. Tis certaine he hath past the Riuer Some.

Const. And if he be not fought withall, my Lord,
Let vs not liue in France: let vs quit all,
And giue our Vineyards to a barbarous People.

Dolph. O Dieu viuant: Shall a few Sprayes of vs,
The emptying of our Fathers Luxurie,
Our Syons, put in wilde and sauage Stock,
Spirt vp so suddenly into the Clouds,
And ouer-look their Grafters?

Bri. Normans, but bastard Normans, Norman bastards!
Mort du ma vie, if they march along
Vnfought withall, but I will sell my Dukedome,

To

To buy a slobbry and a dirtie Farme
In that nooke-shotten Ile of Albion.

Const. Dieu de Battailes, where have they this mettell?
Is not their Clymate foggy, raw, and dull?
On whom, as in despight, the Sunne looker pale,
Killing their Fruit with frowns. Can sodden Water,
A Drench for sur-reyn'd Iades, their Barly broth,
Decoct their cold blood to such valiant heat?
And shall our quick blood, spirited with Wine,
Seeme frostie? O, for honor of our Land,
Let vs not hang like roping Isyckles
Vpon our Houses Thatch, whiles a more frostie People
Sweat drops of gallant Youth in our rich fields:
Poore we call them, in their Native Lords.

Dolphin. By Faith and Honor,
Our Madames mock at vs, and plainely say,
Our Mettell is bred out, and they will give
Their bodyes to the Lust of English Youth,
To new-store France with Bastard Warriors.

Brit. They bid vs to the English Dancing-Schooles,
And teach Lavoltas high, and swift Corantos,
Saying, our Grace is onely in our Heeles,
And that we are most loftie Run-awayes.

King Where is Montoy the Herald? speed him hence,
Let him greet England with our sharpe defiance
Vp Princes, and with spirit of Honor edged,
More sharper then your Swords, high to the field:
Charles Delabreth, High Constable of France,
You Dukes of Orleance, Barbon, and of Berry,
Alanson, Brabant, Bar, and Burgoyne,
Iaques Chastillion, Rambures, Vandemont,
Beaumont, Grand Pre, Roussi, and Fauconbridge,
Loys, Lestrale, Bouriquall, and Charalloyes,
High Dukes, great Princes, Barons, Lords, and Kings;
For your great Seats, now quit you of great shames:
Barre Harry England, that sweepes through our Land
With Pennons painted in the blood of Harflew:
Rush on his Hoast, as doth the melted Snow
Vpon the Valleyes, whose low Vassall Seat,
The Alpes doth spit, and void his rhewme vpon.
Goe downe vpon him, you have Power enough,
And in a Captive Chariot, into Roan
Bring him our Prisoner.

Const. This becomes the Great.
Sorry am I his numbers are so few,
His Souldiers sick, and sunshit in their March:
For I am sure, when he shall see our Army,
Hee'le drop his heart into the sinck of feare,
And for atchiievement, offer vs his Ransome.

King. Therefore Lord Constable, haste on Montoy,
And let him say to England, that we send,
To know what willing Ransome he will give.
Prince Dolphin, you shall stay with vs in Roan.

Dolph. Not so, I doe beseech your Maiestie.

King Be patient, for you shall remaine with vs.
Now forth Lord Constable, and Princes all,
And quickly bring vs word of Englands fall. Exeunt.

Enter Captaines, English and Welch, Gower and Fluellen.

Gower. How now Captaine Fluellen, come you from the Bridge?

Flu. I assure you, there is very excellent Services committed at the Bridge.

Gower. Is the Duke of Exeter safe?

Flu. The Duke of Exeter is as magnanimous as Agamemnon, and a man that I loue and honour with my soule and my heart, and my dutie, and my loue, and my liuing, and my vttermost power. He is not, God be praysed and blessed, any hart in the World, but keepes the Bridge most valiantly, with excellent discipline. There is an ancient Lieutenant there at the Pridge, I thinke in my very conscience hee is as valiant a man as Marke Antony, and hee is a man of no estimation in the World, but I did see him doe as gallant service.

Gower. What doe you call him?

Flu. Hee is call'd ancient Pistoll.

Gower. I know him not.

Enter Pistoll.

Flu. Here is the man.

Pist. Captaine, I thee beseech to doe me fauours, the Duke of Exeter doth loue thee well.

Flu. I, I praysse God, and I haue merited some loue at his hands.

Pist. Bardolph, a Souldier firme and sound of heart, and of buxome valour, hath by cruell Fate, and giddie Fortunes furious fickle Wheele, that Goddesse blind, that stands vpon the rolling restlesse Stone.

Flu. By your patience, ancient Pistoll: Fortune is painted blinde, with a Muffler afore his eyes, to signifie to you, that Fortune is blinde; and shee is painted also with a Wheele, to signifie to you, which is the Morall of it, that shee is turning and inconstant, and mutabilitie, and variation; and her foot, looke you, is fixed vpon a Spherical Stone, which rowles, and rowles, and rowles: in good truth, the Poet makes a most excellent description of it: Fortune is an excellent Morall.

Pist. Fortune is Bardolphs foe, and frowner on him: for he hath stolne a Pax, and hanged must a bee: a damned death: let Gallowes gape for Dogge, let Man goe free, and let not Hempe his Wind-pipe suffocate: but Exeter hath given the doome of death, for Pax of little price. Therefore goe speake, the Duke will heare thy voyce; and let not Bardolphs vitall thred bee cut with edge of Peney-Cord, and vile reproach. Speake Captaine for his Life, and I will thee requite.

Flu Aunchient Pistoll, I doe partly vnderstand your meaning.

Pist. Why then rejoyce therefore.

Flu. Certainly Aunchient, it is not a thing to rejoyce at: for if, looke you, he were my Brother, I would desire the Duke to vse his good pleasure, and put him to execution; for discipline ought to be vsed.

Pist Dye, and be dam'd, and Figo for thy friendship.

Flu. It is well.

Pist The Figge of Spaine. Exit.

Flu. Very good.

Gower. Why, this is an arrant counterfeit Rascall, I remember him now: a Bawd, a Cut-purse.

Flu. Ile assure you, a vtt'red as prane words at the Pridge, as you shall see in a Summers day: but it is very well: what he has spoke to me, that is well I warrant you, when time is serue.

Gower. Why 'tis a Cull, a Foole, a Rogue, that now and then goes to the Warres, to grace himselfe at his retrame into London, vnder the forme of a Souldier: and such fellowes are perfit in the Great Commanders Names, and they will learne you by rote where Services were done: at such and such a Sconce, at such a Breach, at such a Conuoy: who came off bravely, who was shot, who disgrac'd, what termes the Enemy stood on: and this they conne perfitly in the phrase of Warre; which they trick he up

vp with new-tuned Oathes: and what a Beard of the Generalls Cut, and a horride Sute of the Campe, will doe among foaming Bottles, and Ale-washt Wits, is wonderfull to be thought on: but you must learne to know such slanders of the age, or else you may be marvellously mistooke.

Flu. I tell you what, Captaine Gower: I doe perceiue hee is not the man that hee would gladly make shew to the World hee is: if I finde a hole in his Coat, I will tell him my minde: hearke you, the King is comming, and I must speake with him from the Pridge.

Drum and Colours. Enter the King and his poore Souldiers.

Flu. God plesse your Maiestie.

King. How now Fluellen, cam'st thou from the Bridge?

Flu. I, so please your Maiestie: The Duke of Exeter ha's very gallantly maintain'd the Pridge; the French is gone off, looke you, and there is gallant and most prave passages: marry, th'athuersatie was have possession of the Pridge, but he is enforced to retyre, and the Duke of Exeter is Master of the Pridge: I can tell your Maiestie, the Duke is a prave man.

King. What men have you lost, Fluellen?

Flu. The perdition of th'athuersane hath beene very great, reasonable great: marry for my part, I thinke the Duke hath lost never a man, but one that is like to be executed for robbing a Church, one Bardolph, if your Maiestie know the man: his face is all bubukles and whelkes, and knobs, and flames a fire, and his lippes blowes at his nose, and it is like a coale of fire, sometimes plew, and sometimes red, but his nose is executed, and his fire's out.

King. Wee would have all such offendors so cut off: and we gave expresse charge, that in our Marches through the Countrey, there be nothing compell'd from the Villages; nothing taken, but pay'd for: none of the French vpbrayded or abused in disdainefull Language; for when Lenities and Cruelties play for a Kingdome, the gentler Gamester is the sooneft winner.

Tucket. Enter Mountiey.

Mountiey. You know me by my habit.

King. Well then, I know thee: what shall I know of thee?

Mountiey. My Masters mind.

King. Vnfold it.

Mountiey. Thus sayes my King: Say thou to Harry of England, Though wee seem'd dead, we did but sleepe: Advantage is a better Souldier then rashnesse. Tell him, wee could have rebuk'd him at Harflewe, but that wee thought not good to bruise an iniurie, till it were full ripe. Now wee speake vpon our Q, and our voyce is imperiall: England shall repent his folly, see his weaknesse, and admire our sufferance. Bid him therefore consider of his ransoone, which must proportion the losses we have borne, the subiects we have lost, the disgrace we have digested; which in weight to re-answer, his pettinesse would bow vnder. For our losses, his Exchequer is too poore; for th'effusion of our bloud, the Master of his Kingdome too faint a number; and for our disgrace, his owne person kneeling at our feet, but a weake and worthlesse satisfaction. To this adde defiance: and tell him for conclusion, he hath betrayed his followers, whose condemnation is pronounc't: So farre my King and Master; so much my Office.

King. What is thy name? I know thy qualitie.

Mount. Mountiey.

King. Thou doo'ft thy Office fairely. Turne thee back,
And tell thy King, I doe not seeke him now,
But could be willing to march on to Callice,
Without impeachment: for to say the sooth,
Though 'tis no wisdome to confesse so much
Vnto an enemie of Craft and Vantage,
My people are with sicknesse much enfeebled,
My numbers lessen'd: and those few I have,
Almost no better then so many French;
Who when they were in health, I tell thee Herald,
I thought, vpon one payre of English Legges
Did march three Frenchmen. Yet forgive me God,
That I doe bragge thus; this your ayre of France
Hath blowne that vice in me. I must repent:
Goe therefore tell thy Master, heere I am;
My Ransome, is this frayle and worthlesse Trunke;
My Army, but a weake and sickly Guard:
Yet God before, tell him we will come on,
Though France himselfe, and such another Neighbor
Stand in our way. There's for thy labour Mountiey.
Goe bid thy Master well aduise himselfe.
If we may passe, we will: if we be hindred,
We shall your tawnie ground with your red blood
Discolour: and so Mountiey, fare you well.
The summe of all our Answer is but this:
We would not seeke a Battaile as we are,
Nor as we are, we say we will not shun it:
So tell your Master.

Mount. I shall deliver so: Thankes to your Highnesse.

Glost. I hope they will not come vpon vs now.

King. We are in Gods hand, Brother, not in theirs:
March to the Bridge, it now drawes toward night,
Beyond the Riuer wee'le encampe our selues,
And on to morrow bid them march away. Exeunt.

Enter the Constable of France, the Lord Rambures, Orleance, Dolphin, with others.

Const. Tut, I haue the best Armour of the World: would it were day.

Orleance. You haue an excellent Armour: but let my Horse have his due.

Const. It is the best Horse of Europe.

Orleance. Will it never be Morning?

Dolph. My Lord of Orleance, and my Lord High Constable, you talke of Horse and Armour?

Orleance. You are as well prouided of both, as any Prince in the World.

Dolph. What a long Night is this? I will not change my Horse with any that treades but on foure postures: ch'ha: he bounds from the Earth, as if his entrayles were hayres: le Cheual volante, the Pegasus, chez les narines de feu. When I bestryde him, I soare, I am a Hawke: he trots the ayre: the Earth sings, when he touches it: the basest horne of his hoofe, is more Musicall then the Pipe of Hermes.

Orleance. Hee's of the colour of the Nutmeg.

Dolph. And of the heat of the Ginger. It is a Beast for Perseus: hee is pure Ayre and Fire; and the dull Elements of Earth and Water never appeare in him, but only in patient stillnesse while his Rider mounts him: hee is indeede a Horse, and all other Iades you may call Beasts.

Const. In-

To buy a slobbry and a dirtie Farme
In that nooke-shotten Ile of Albion.

Const. Dieu de Battailes, where have they this mettell?
Is not their Clymate foggy, raw, and dull?
On whom, as in despight, the Sunne looker pale,
Killing their Fruit with frownes. Can sodden Water,
A Drench for sur-reyn'd Iades, their Barly broth,
Decoct their cold blood to such valiant heat?
And shall our quick blood, spirited with Wine,
Seeme frostie? O, for honor of our Land,
Let vs not hang like roping Isyckles
Vpon our Houses Thatch, whiles a more frostie People
Sweat drops of gallant Youth in our rich fields:
Poore we call them, in their Native Lords.

Dauphin. By Faith and Honor,
Our Madames mock at vs, and plainely say,
Our Mettell is bred out, and they will giue
Their bodyes to the Lust of English Youth,
To new-store France with Bastard Warriors.

Brit. They bid vs to the English Dancing-Schoolers,
And teach Lauelta's high, and swift Corantos,
Saying, our Grace is onely in our Heeles,
And that we are most loftie Run-awayes.

King Where is Montioy the Herald? speed him hence,
Let him greet England with our sharpe defiance
Vp Princes, and with spirit of Honor edged,
More sharper then your Swords, high to the field:
Charles Delabreth, High Constable of France,
You Dukes of Orleance, Burbon, and of Berry,
Alanson, Brabant, Bar, and Burgoine,
Iaques Chastillion, Rambures, Vandemont,
Beaumont, Grand Pre, Roussi, and Faulconbridge,
Loys, Lestrale, Bouciquall, and Charalloyes,
High Dukes, great Princes, Barons, Lords, and Kings;
For your great Seats, now quit you of great shames:
Barre Harry England, that sweepes through our Land
With Penons painted in the blood of Harflew:
Rush on his Hoast, as doth the melted Snow
Vpon the Valleyes, whose low Vassall Seat,
The Alpes doth spit, and void his rheume vpon.
Goe downe vpon him, you have Power enough,
And in a Captiue Chariot, into Roan
Bring him our Prisoner.

Const. This becomes the Great.
Sorry am I his numbers are so few,
His Souldiers sick, and sunshrnk in their March:
For I am sure, when he shall see our Army,
He'le drop his heart into the sinck of feare,
And for achiuement, offer vs his Ransome.

King. Therefore Lord Constable, haste on Montioy,
And let him say to England, that we send,
To know what willing Ransome he will giue.
Prince Dauphin, you shall stay with vs in Roan.

Dauph. Not so, I doe beseech your Maiestie.

King Be patient, for you shall remaine with vs.
Now forth Lord Constable, and Princes all,
And quickly bring vs word of Englands fall. Exeunt.

Enter Captaines, English and Welch, Gower and Flueller.

Gower. How now Captaine Flueller, come you from the Bridge?

Flu. I assure you, there is very excellent Services committed at the Bridge.

Gower. Is the Duke of Exeter safe?

Flu. The Duke of Exeter is as magnanimous as Agamemnon, and a man that I loue and honour with my soule, and my heart, and my duele, and my lire, and my Brains, and my vttermost power. He is not, God be praysed and blessed, any hart in the World, but keepes the Bridge most valiantly, with excellent discipline. There is an ancient Lieutenant there at the Pridge, I thinke in my very conscience hee is as valiant a man as Marke Antoney, and hee is a man of no estimation in the World, but I did see him doe as gallant service.

Gower. What doe you call him?

Flu. Hee is call'd ancient Pistoll.

Gower. I know him not.

Enter Pistoll.

Flu. Here is the man.

Pist. Captaine, I thee beseech to doe me fauours, the Duke of Exeter doth loue thee well.

Flu. I, I praysse God, and I haue merited some loue at his hands.

Pist. Bardolph, a Souldier firme and sound of heart, and of buxome valour, hath by cruell Fate, and giddie Fortunes furious fickle Wheele, that Goddesse blind, that stands vpon the rolling restlesse Stone.

Flu. By your patience, ancheient Pistoll: Fortune is painted blinde, with a Muffler afore his eyes, to signifie to you, that Fortune is blinde; and shee is painted also with a Wheele, to signifie to you, which is the Moraill of it, that shee is turning and inconstant, and mutabilitie, and variation; and her foot, looke you, is fixed vpon a Spherical Stone, which rowles, and rowles, and rowles: in good truth, the Poet makes a most excellent description of it: Fortune is an excellent Moraill.

Pist. Fortune is Bardolphs foe, and frowneth on him: for he hath stolne a Pax, and hanged must a bee: a damned death: let Gallowes gape for Dogge, let Man goe free, and let not Hempe his Wind-pipe suffocate: but Exeter hath giuen the doome of death, for Pax of little price. Therefore goe speake, the Duke will heare thy voyce; and let not Bardolphs vitall thred bee cut with edge of Penny-Cord, and vile reproach. Speake Captaine for his Life, and I will thee requite.

Flu Ancheient Pistoll, I doe partly vnderstand your meaning.

Pist. Why then reioyce therefore.

Flu. Certainly Ancheient, it is not a thing to reioyce at: for if, looke you, he were my Brother, I would desire the Duke to vse his good pleasure, and put him to execution; for discipline ought to be vsed.

Pist Dye, and be dam'd, and Figo for thy friendship.

Flu. It is well.

Pist The Figge of Spaine. Exit.

Flu. Very good.

Gower. Why, this is an arrant counterfeit Rascall, I remember him now: a Bawd, a Cut-purse.

Flu. Ile assure you, a vtt'red as prauie words at the Pridge, as you shall see in a Summers day: but is is very well: what he has's spoke to me, that is well I warrant you, when time is serue.

Gower. Why 'tis a Gull, a Foole, a Rogue, that now and then goes to the Warres, to grace himselfe at his retume into London, vnder the forme of a Souldier: and such fellowes are perfit in the Great Commanders Names, and they will learne you by rote where Services were done; at such and such a Sconce, at such a Breach, at such a Conuoy: who came off bruisely, who was shot, who disgrac'd, what termes the Enemy stood on: and this they conne perfitly in the phrase of Warre; which they trickle

vp with new-tuned Oathes: and what a Beard of the Generalls Cut, and a horride Sute of the Campe, will doe among foaming Bottles, and Ale-washt Wits, is wonderfull to be thought on: but you must learne to know such slanders of the age, or else you may be marvellously mistooke.

Flu. I tell you what, Captaine Gower: I doe perceiue hee is not the man that hee would gladly make shew to the World hee is: if I finde a hole in his Coat, I will tell him my minde: hearke you, the King is comming, and I must speake with him from the Pridge.

Drum and Colours. Enter the King and his poore Souldiers.

Flu. God plesse your Maiestie.

King. How now Fluellen, cam'st thou from the Bridge?

Flu. I, so please your Maiestie: The Duke of Exeter ha's very gallantly maintain'd the Pridge; the French is gone off, looke you, and there is gallant and most prave passages: marry, th'athwersarie was have possession of the Pridge, but he is enforced to retyre, and the Duke of Exeter is Master of the Pridge: I can tell your Maiestie, the Duke is a prave man.

King. What men have you lost, Fluellen?

Flu. The perdition of th'athwersarie hath beene very great, reasonable great: marry for my part, I thinke the Duke hath lost never a man, but one that is like to be executed for robbing a Church, one Bardolph, if your Maiestie know the man: his face is all bubukles and whelkes, and knobs, and flames a fire, and his lippes blowes at his nose, and it is like a coale of fire, sometimes plew, and sometimes red, but his nose is executed, and his fire's out.

King. Wee would have all such offendors so cut off: and we give expresse charge, that in our Marches through the Countrey, there be nothing compell'd from the Villages; nothing taken, but pay'd for; none of the French vpbrayded or abused in disdainefull Language; for when Lenities and Cruelties play for a Kingdome, the gentler Gamester is the soonest winner.

Tucket. Enter Mountiey.

Mountiey. You know me by my habit.

King. Well then, I know thee: what shall I know of thee?

Mountiey. My Masters mind.

King. Vnfold it.

Mountiey. Thus says my King: Say thou to Harry of England. Though we seem'd dead, we did but sleepe: Aduantage is a better Souldier then rashnesse. Tell him, wee could have rebuk'd him at Harflewe, but that wee thought not good to bruise an iniurie, till it were full ripe. Now wee speake vpon our Q. and our voyce is imperiall: England shall repent his folly, see his weaknesse, and admire our sufferance. Bid him therefore consider of his ransoome, which must proportion the losses we have borne, the subiects we have lost, the disgrace we have digested; which in weight to re-answer, his pettinesse would bow vnder. For our losses, his Exchequer is too poore; for th'effusion of our bloud, the Master of his Kingdome too faint a number; and for our disgrace, his owne person kneeling at our feet, but a weake and worthlesse satisfaction. To this adde defiance: and tell him for conclusion, he hath betrayed his followers, whose condemnation is pronounc'd: So farre my King and Master; so much my Office.

King. What is thy name? I know thy qualitie.

Mount. Mountiey.

King. Thou doo'st thy Office fairely. Turne thee back,
And tell thy King, I doe not seeke him now,
But could be willing to march on to Callice,
Without impeachment: for to say the sooth,
Though 'tis no wisdome to confesse so much
Vnto an enemie of Craft and Vantage,
My people are with sicknesse much enfeebled,
My numbers lessen'd: and those few I haue,
Almost no better then so many French;
Who when they were in health, I tell thee Herald,
I thought, vpon one payre of English Legges
Did march three Frenchmen. Yet forgive me God,
That I doe brogge thus; this your ayre of France
Hath blowne that vice in me. I must repent:
Goe therefore tell thy Master, heere I am;
My Ransome, is this frayle and worthlesse Trunke;
My Army, but a weake and sickly Guard:
Yet God before, tell him we will come on,
Though France himselfe, and such another Neighbor
Stand in our way. There's for thy labour Mountiey.
Goe bid thy Master well aduise himselfe.
If we may passe, we will: if we be hindred,
We shall your tawnie ground with your red blood
Discolour: and so Mountiey, fare you well.
The summe of all our Answer is but this:
We would not seeke a Battaile as we are,
Nor as we are, we say we will not shun it:
So tell your Master.

Mount. I shall deliver so: Thankes to your Highnesse.

Glouc. I hope they will not come vpon vs now.

King. We are in Gods hand, Brother, not in theirs:
March to the Bridge, it now drawes toward night,
Beyond the Riuer we'le encampe our selues,
And on to morrow bid them march away. Exeunt.

Enter the Constable of France, the Lord Rambures, Orleance, Dolphin, with others.

Const. Tut, I haue the best Armour of the World: would it were day.

Orleance. You haue an excellent Armour: but let my Horse have his due.

Const. It is the best Horse of Europe.

Orleance. Will it never be Morning?

Dolph. My Lord of Orleance, and my Lord High Constable, you talke of Horse and Armour?

Orleance. You are as well prouided of both, as any Prince in the World.

Dolph. What a long Night is this? I will not change my Horse with any that treades but on foure postures: ch'ha: he bounds from the Earth, as if his entrayles were hayres: le Chaual volante, the Pegasus, chez les narines de feu. When I bestryde him, I soare, I am a Hawke: he trots the ayre: the Earth sings, when he toucheth it: the basest horne of his hoofe, is more Musicall then the Pipe of Hermes.

Orleance. Hee's of the colour of the Nutmeg.

Dolph. And of the heat of the Ginger. It is a Beast for Perseus: hee is pure Ayre and Fire; and the dull Elements of Earth and Water never appeare in him, but only in patient stilnesse while his Rider mounts him: hee is indeede a Horse, and all other Iades you may call Beasts.

Const. In-

Const. Indeed my Lord, it is a most absolute and excellent Horse.

Dolph. It is the Prince of Palfreyes, his Neigh is like the bidding of a Monarch, and his countenance enforces Homage.

Orleance. No more Cousin.

Dolph. Nay, the man hath no wit, that cannot from the rising of the Larke to the lodging of the Lambe, varie deserued praise on my Palfrey: it is a Theame as fluent as the Sea: Turne the Sands into eloquent tongues, and my Horse is argument for them all: 'tis a subject for a Soueraigne to reason on, and for a Soueraignes Soueraigne to ride on: And for the World, familiar to vs, and vnknowne, to lay apart their particular Functions, and wonder at him, I once writ a Sonnet in his praysle, and began thus, Wonder of Nature.

Orleance. I haue heard a Sonnet begin so to ones Mistresse.

Dolph. Then did they imitate that which I compos'd to my Courser, for my Horse is my Mistresse.

Orleance. Your Mistresse beares well.

Dolph. Me well, which is the prescript praysse and perfection of a good and particular Mistresse.

Const. Nay, for me thought yesterday your Mistresse shrewdly shooke your back.

Dolph. So perhaps did yours.

Const. Mine was not bridled.

Dolph. O then belike she was old and gentle, and you rode like a Kerne of Ireland, your French Hose off, and in your strait Strossers.

Const. You haue good iudgement in Horsemanship.

Dolph. Be warn'd by me then: they that ride so, and ride not vearily, fall into foule Boggs: I had rather haue my Horse to my Mistresse.

Const. I had as liue haue my Mistresse a Iade.

Dolph. I tell thee Constable, my Mistresse weares his owne hayre.

Const. I could make as true a boast as that, if I had a Sow to my Mistresse.

Dolph. Le chien est retourne a son propre vomissement et la truye lauee au bourbier: thou mak'st vse of any thing.

Const. Yet doe I not vse my Horse for my Mistresse, or any such Prouerbe, so little kin to the purpose.

Rambe. My Lord Constable, the Armour that I saw in your Tent to night, are those Starres or Sunnes vpon it?

Const. Starres my Lord.

Dolph. Some of them will fall to morrow, I hope.

Const. And yet my Sky shall not want.

Dolph. That may be, for you beare a many superfluously, and 't were more honor some were away.

Const. Eu'n as your Horse beares your praysles, who would trot as well, were some of your braggs dismounted.

Dolph. Would I were able to loade him with his desert. Will it never be day? I will trot to morrow a mile, and my way shall be paued with English Faces.

Const. I will not say so, for feare I should be fac't out of my way: but I would it were morning, for I would faine be about the ears of the English.

Rambe. Who will goe to Hazard with me for twentie Prisoners?

Const. You must first goe your selfe to hazard, ere you haue them.

Dolph. 'Tis Mid-night, Ile goe arme my selfe. Exit.

Orleance. The Dolphin longs for morning.

Rambe. He longs to eate the English.

Const. I thinke he will eate all he kills.

Orleance. By the white Hand of my Lady, hee's a gallant Prince.

Const. Swearе by her Foot, that she may tread out the Oath.

Orleance. He is simply the most actiue Gentleman of France.

Const. Doing is actiuitie, and he will still be doing.

Orleance. He never did harme, that I heard of.

Const. Nor will doe none to morrow: hee will keepe that good name still.

Orleance. I know him to be valiant.

Const. I was told that, by one that knowes him better then you.

Orleance. What's hee?

Const. Marry hee told me so himselfe, and hee sayd hee car'd not who knew it.

Orleance. Hee needes not, it is no hidden vertue in him.

Const. By my faith Sir, but it is: never any body saw it, but his Lacquey: 'tis a hooded valour, and when it appeares, it will bate.

Orleance. Ill will never sayd well.

Const. I will cap that Prouerbe with, There is flatterie in friendship.

Orleance. And I will take vp that with, Giue the Deuill his due.

Const. Well plac't: there stands your friend for the Deuill: haue at the very eye of that Prouerbe with, A Pox of the Deuill.

Orleance. You are the better at Prouerbs, by how much a Fooles Bolt is soone shot.

Const. You haue shot ouer.

Orleance. 'Tis not the first time you were ouer-shot.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My Lord high Constable, the English lye within fifteene hundred paces of your Tents.

Const. Who hath measur'd the ground?

Mess. The Lord Grandpree.

Const. A valiant and most expert Gentleman. Would it were day? Alas poore Harry of England: hee longs not for the Dawning, as wee doe.

Orleance What a wretched and peruish fellow is this King of England, to mope with his fat-brain'd followers so farre out of his knowledge.

Const. If the English had any apprehension, they would runne away.

Orleance. That they lack: for if their heads had any intellectuall Armour, they could never weare such heauie Head-pieces.

Rambe. That Iland of England breedes very valiant Creatures; their Mastiffes are of vnmatchable courage.

Orleance. Foolish Curres, that runne winking into the mouth of a Russian Beare, and haue their heads crusht like rotten Apples: you may as well say, that's a valiant Flea, that dare eate his breakefast on the Lippe of a Lyon.

Const. Iust, iust: and the men doe sympathize with the Mastiffes, in robustious and rough comming on, leauing their Wits with their Wiues: and then giue them great Meales of Beefe, and Iron and Steeles, they will eate like Wolues, and fight like Deuils.

Orleance. I,

Orleance. I, but these English are shrowdly out of Beefe.

Const. Then shall we finde to morrow, they have only stomacke to eace, and none to fight. Now is it time to arme: come, shall we about it?

Orleance. It is now two a Clock: but let me see, by ten We shall have each a hundred English men. Exeunt.

Actus Tertius.

Chorus.

Now entertaine conjecture of a time,
When creeping Murmure and the poring Darke
Fills the wide Vessell of the Vniverse.
From Camp to Camp, through the foule Wombe of Night
The Hummne of either Army stilly sounds;
That the fixt Centinels almost receive
The secret Whispers of each others Watch.
Fire answers fire, and through their paly flames
Each Battaile sees the others umber'd face.
Steeds threatens Steed, in high and boastfull Neighs
Piercing the Nights dull Eare: and from the Tents,
The Armourers accomplishing the Knights,
With busie Hammers closing Rivets vp,
Give dreadfull note of preparation.
The Countrey Cocks doe crow, the Clocks doe towlet
And the third howre of drowsie Morning nam'd,
Proud of their Numbers, and secure in Soule,
The confident and over-lustie French,
Doe the low-rated English play at Dice;
And chide the creeple-tardy-gated Night,
Who like a soule and ougly Witch doth limpe
So tediously away. The poore condemned English,
Like Sacrifices, by their watchfull Fires
Sit patiently, and inly ruminate
The Mornings danger: and their gesture sad,
Investing lanke-leane Cheekes, and Warre-worne Coats,
Presented them vnto the gazing Moone
So many horride Ghosts. O now, who will behold
The Royall Captaine of this ruin'd Band
Walking from Watch to Watch, from Tent to Tent;
Let him cry, Praysse and Glory on his head:
For forth he goes, and visits all his Host,
Bids them good morrow with a modest Smyle,
And calls them Brothers, Friends, and Countreymen.
Vpon his Royall Face there is no note,
How dread an Army hath enrounded him;
Nor doth he dedicate one iot of Colour
Vnto the weary and all-watched Night:
But freshly looks, and over-bestes Attaint.
With cheerefull semblance, and sweet Maiestie:
That every Wretch, pining and pale before,
Beholding him, plucks comfort from his Looke.
A Largesse vniversall, like the Sunne,
His liberall Eye doth give to every one,
Thawing cold feare, that mean and gentle all
Behold, as may vnworthiness define.
A little touch of Harry in the Night,
And so our Scene must to the Battaile flye:
Where, O for pity, we shall much disgrace,
With foure or five most vile and ragged foyles,
(Right ill disposed, in brawle ridiculous)
The Name of Agincourt: Yet sit and see,
Minding true things, by what their Mock'ries be.
Exit.

Enter the King, Bedford, and Gloucester.

King. Gloster, 'tis true that we are in great danger,
The greater therefore should our Courage be.
Good morrow Brother Bedford: God Almightie,
There is some soule of goodnesse in things evill,
Would men observingly distill it out.
For our bad Neighbour makes vs early stirrers,
Which is both healthfull, and good husbandry.
Besides, they are our outward Consciences,
And Preachers to vs all; admonishing,
That we should dresse vs fairely for our end.
Thus may we gather Honey from the Weed,
And make a Morall of the Diuell himselfe.

Enter Erpingham.

Good morrow old Sir Thomas Erpingham:
A good soft Pillow for that good white Head,
Were better than a churlish turfe of France.

Erping. Not so my Liege, this Lodging likes me better,
Since I may say, now lye I like a King.

King. 'Tis good for men to lose their prefest paines,
Vpon example, so the Spirit is eased:
And when the Mind is quickned, out of doubt
The Organs, though defunct and dead before,
Breake vp their drowsie Grave and newly move
With casted slough, and fresh legeritie.
Lend me thy Cloake Sir Thomas: Brothers both,
Commend me to the Princes in our Campe;
Doe my good morrow to them, and anon
Desire them all to my Pauilion.

Gloster. We shall, my Liege.

Erping. Shall I attend your Grace?

King. No, my good Knight:
Goe with my Brothers to my Lords of England:
I and my Bosome must debate a while,
And then I would no other company.

Erping. The Lord in Heaven blesse thee, Noble Harry. Exeunt.

King. God a mercy old Heart, thou speak'st cheerefully. Enter Pistol.

Pist. Qui vive le?

King. A friend.

Pist. Discusse vnto me, art thou Officer, or art thou base, common, and popular?

King. I am a Gentleman of a Company.

Pist. Trayl'st thou the puissant Pyke?

King. Even so: what are you?

Pist. As good a Gentleman as the Emperor.

King. Then you are a better than the King.

Pist. The King's a Bawcock, and a Heart of Gold, a Lad of Life, an Imps of Fame, of Parents good, of Fist most valiant: I kisse his dirtie shooe, and from heart-string I love the lovely Bully. What is thy Name?

King. Harry le Roy.

Pist. Le Roy? a Cornish Name: art thou of Cornish Crew?

King. No, I am a Welchman.

Pist. Know'st thou Fluellen?

King. Yes.

Pist. Tell him I'le knock his Leeke about his Pate vpon S. Davies day.

King. Doe not you wear your Dagger in your Cappe that day, least he knock that about yours.

Pist. Art thou his friend?

King. And his Kinsman too.

Pist. The Pyo for thee then.

King. I thanke you: God be with you.

Pist. My name is Pistol call'd. Exit.

King. It sorts well with your fierceneſſe.

Manet King.

Enter Flueller and Gower.

Gower. Captaine Flueller.

Flu. So, in the Name of Iesu Chriſt, ſpeake fewer: it is the greateſt admiration in the vniuerſall World, when the true and auncient Prerogatiues and Lawes of the Warres is not kept: if you would take the paines but to examine the Warres of Pompey the Great, you ſhall finde, I warrant you, that there is no tiddle tadle nor pibble babble in Pompeyes Campe: I warrant you, you ſhall finde the Ceremonies of the Warres, and the Cares of it, and the Formes of it, and the Sobrietie of it, and the Modeſtie of it, to be otherwiſe.

Gower. Why the Enemie is loud, you heare him all Night.

Flu. If the Enemie is an Aſſe and a Foole; and a prating Coxcombe; is it meet, thinke you, that wee ſhould alſo, looke you, be an Aſſe and a Foole, and a prating Coxcombe, in your owne conſcience now?

Gow. I will ſpeake lower.

Flu. I pray you, and beſeech you, that you will. Exit.

King. Though it appeare a little out of faſhion,
There is much care and valour in this Welchman.

Enter three Souldiers, John Bates, Alexander Court, and Michael Williams.

Court. Brother Iohn Bates, is not that the Morning which breakes yonder?

Bates. I thinke it be: but wee haue no great cauſe to deſire the approach of day.

Williams. Wee ſee yonder the beginning of the day, but I thinke wee ſhall neuer ſee the end of it. Who goes there?

King. A Friend.

Williams. Vnder what Captaine ſerue you?

King. Vnder Sir Iohn Erpingham.

Williams. A good old Commander, and a moſt kinde Gentleman: I pray you, what thinkes he of our eſtate?

King. Euen as men wracke vpon a Sand, that looke to be waſht off the next Tyde.

Bates. He hath not told his thought to the King?

King. No: nor it is not meet he ſhould: for though I ſpeake it to you, I thinke the King is but a man, as I am: the Violet ſmells to him, as it doth to me; the Element ſhewes to him, as it doth to me; all his Sences haue but humane Conditions: his Ceremonies layd by, in his Nakedneſſe he appeares but a man; and though his affections are higher mounted then ours, yet when they ſtoope, they ſtoope with the like wing: therefore, when he ſees reaſon of feares, as we doe; his feares, out of doubt, be of the ſame relliſh as ours are: yet in reaſon, no man ſhould poſſeſſe him with any appearance of feare; leaſt he, by ſhewing it, ſhould diſ-hearten his Army.

Bates. He may ſhew what outward courage he will: but I believe, as cold a Night as 'tis, hee could wiſh himſelfe in Thames vp to the Neck; and ſo I would he were, and I by him, at all aduentures, ſo we were quit here.

King. By my troth, I will ſpeake my conſcience of the King: I thinke hee would not wiſh himſelfe any where, but where hee is.

Bates. Then I would he were here alone; ſo ſhould he be ſure to be ranſomed, and a many poore mens liues ſaued.

King. I dare ſay, you loue him not ſo ill, to wiſh him here alone: howſoever you ſpeake this to ſeele other mens minds, me thinks I could not dye any where ſo contented, as in the Kings company; his Cauſe being iuſt, and his Quarrell honorable.

Williams. That's more then we know.

Bates. I, or more then wee ſhould ſeeke after; for wee know enough, if wee know wee are the Kings Subiects: if his Cauſe be wrong, our obedience to the King wipes the Cryme of it out of vs.

Williams. But if the Cauſe be not good, the King himſelfe hath a heauie Reckoning to make, when all thoſe Legges, and Armes, and Heads, chopt off in a Battaile, ſhall loyne together at the latter day, and cry all, Wee dyed at ſuch a place, ſome ſwearing, ſome crying for a Surgean; ſome vpon their Wiues, left poore behind them; ſome vpon the Debts they owe, ſome vpon their Children rawly left: I am afeard, there are few dye well, that dye in a Battaile: for how can they charitably diſpoſe of any thing, when Blood is their argument? Now, if theſe men doe not dye well, it will be a black matter for the King, that led them to it; who to diſobey, were againſt all proportion of ſubiection.

King. So, if a Sonne that is by his Father ſent about Merchandize, doe ſinfully miſcarry vpon the Sea; the imputation of his wickedneſſe, by your rule, ſhould be impoſed vpon his Father that ſent him: or if a Seruant, vnder his Maſters command, tranſporting a ſumme of Money, be aſſayled by Robbers, and dye in many vnreconcil'd Iniquities; you may call the buſineſſe of the Maſter the author of the Seruants damnation: but this is not ſo: The King is not bound to anſwer the particular endings of his Souldiers, the Father of his Sonne, nor the Maſter of his Seruant; for they purpoſe not their death, when they purpoſe their ſeruices. Beſides, there is no King, be his Cauſe neuer ſo ſpotleſſe, if it come to the arbitrement of Swords, can trye it out with all vnſpotted Souldiers: ſome (peradventure) haue on them the guilt of premeditated and contriued Murther; ſome, of beguiling Virgins with the broken Seales of Periurie; ſome, making the Warres their Bulwarke, that haue before gored the gentle Boſome of Peace with Pillage and Robberie. Now, if theſe men haue defeated the Law, and outrunne Native puniſhment; though they can out-ſtrip men, they haue no wings to flye from God. Warre is his Beadle, Warre is his Vengeance: ſo that here men are puniſht, for before breach of the Kings Lawes, in now the Kings Quarrell: where they feared the death, they haue borne life away; and where they would bee ſafe, they periſh. Then if they dye vnprouided, no more is the King guiltie of their damnation, then hee was before guiltie of thoſe Impieties, for the which they are now viſited. Every Subiects Duties is the Kings, but every Subiects Soule is his owne. Therefore ſhould every Souldier in the Warres doe as every ſicke man in his Bed, wiſh every Moth out of his Conſcience: and dying ſo, Death is to him aduantage; or not dying, the time was bleſſedly loſt, wherein ſuch preparation was gayned: and in him that eſcapes, it were not ſinne to thinke, that making God ſo free an offer, he let him outliue that day, to ſee his Greatneſſe, and to teach others how they ſhould prepare.

Will. Tis certaine, every man that dyes ill, the ill vpon his owne head, the King is not to answer it.

Bates. I doe not desire he should answer for me, and yet I determine to fight lustily for him.

King. I my selfe heard the King say he would not be ransom'd.

Will. I, hee said so, to make vs fight chearefully: but when our throats are cut, hee may be ransom'd, and wee ne're the wiser.

King. If I live to see it, I will never trust his word after.

Will. You pay him then: that's a perillous shot out of an Elder Gunne, that a poore and a priuate displeasure can doe against a Monarch: you may as well goe about to turne the Sunne to ice, with fanning in his face with a Peacocks feather: You'le never trust his word after; come, 'tis a foolish saying.

King. Your reproofe is something too round, I should be angry with you, if the time were conuenient.

Will. Let it bee a Quarrell betweene vs, if you liue.

King. I embrace it.

Will. How shall I know thee againe?

King. Giue me any Gage of thine, and I will weare it in my Bonnet: Then if ever thou dar'st acknowledge it, I will make it my Quarrell.

Will. Heere's my Gloue: Give mee another of thine.

King. There.

Will. This will I also weare in my Cap. If ever thou come to me, and say, after to morrow, This is my Gloue, by this Hand I will take thee a box on the eare.

King. If ever I liue to see it, I will challenge it.

Will. Thou dar'st as well be hang'd.

King. Well, I will doe it, though I take thee in the Kings company.

Will. Keepe thy word: fare thee well.

Bates. Be friends you English fooles, be friends, wee haue French Quarrels enow, if you could tell how to reckon. Exit Souldiers.

King. Indeede the French may lay twentie French Crowneses to one, they will beat vs, for they bearе them on their shoulders: but it is no English Treason to cut French Crowneses, and to morrow the King himselfe will be a Clipper.

Vpon the King, let vs our Liues, our Soules,
Our Debts, our carefull Wiues,
Our Children, and our Sinnes, lay on the King:
We must bear all.
O hard Condition, Twin-borne with Greatnesse,
Subiect to the breath of every foole, whose sence
No more can feele, but his owne wringing.
What infinite hearts-ease must Kings neglect,
That priuate men enioy?
And what haue Kings, that Priuates haue not too,
Save Ceremonie, save generall Ceremonie?
And what art thou, thou Idoll Ceremonie?
What kind of God art thou? that suffer'st more
Of mortall griefes, then doe thy worshippers.
What are thy Rents? what are thy Commings in?
O Ceremonie, shew me but thy worth.
What? is thy Soule of Odoration?
Art thou ought else but Place, Degree, and Forme,
Creating awe and feare in other men?
Wherein thou art lesse happy, being fear'd,
Then they in fearing.
What drink'st thou oft, in stead of Homage sweet,
But poyson'd flatterie? O be sick, great Greatnesse,
And bid thy Ceremonie giue thee cure.
Thinks thou the fiery Feuer will goe out
With Titles blowne from Adulation?
Will it giue place to flexure and low bending?
Canst thou, when thou command'st the beggers knee,
Command the health of it? No, thou proud Dreame,
That play'st so subtilly with a Kings Repose
I am a King that find thee: and I know,
'Tis not the Balme, the Sceptre, and the Ball,
The Sword, the Mace, the Crowne Imperiall,
The enter-tissued Robe of Gold and Pearle,
The farsed Title running 'fore the King,
The Throne he sits on: nor the Tyde of Pompe,
That beates vpon the high shore of this World:
No, not all these, thrice-gorgeous Ceremonie;
Not all these, lay'd in bed Maiesticall,
Can sleepe so soundly, as the wretched Slaue:
Who with a body fill'd, and vacant mind,
Gets him to rest, cram'd with distressefull bread,
Never sees horrible Night, the Child of Hell:
But like a Lacquey, from the Rise to Set,
Sweates in the eye of Phebus; and all Night
Sleepes in Elisium: next day after dawne,
Doth rise and helpe Hiperion to his Horse,
And followes so the ever-running yeere
With profitable labour to his Graue:
And but for Ceremonie, such a Wretch,
Winding vp Dayes with toyle, and Nights with sleepe,
Had the fore-hand and vantage of a King.
The Slaue, a Member of the Countreyes peace,
Enioyes it; but in grosse braine little wots,
What watch the King keepes, to maintaine the peace;
Whose houres, the Peasant best aduantages.

Enter Erpingham.

Erp. My Lord, your Nobles iealous of your absence,
Seeke through your Campe to find you.

King. Good old Knight, collect them all together
At my Tent: Ile be before thee.

Erp. I shall doe't, my Lord. Exit.

King. O God of Battailes, feele my Souldiers hearts,
Possesse them not with feare: Take from them now
The sence of reckning of th'opposed numbers:
Pluck their hearts from them. Not to day, O Lord,
O not to day, thinke not vpon the fault
My Father made, in compassing the Crowne.
I Richards body haue interred new,
And on it haue bestowed more contrite teares,
Then from it issued forced drops of blood.
Fiue hundred poore I haue in yeerely pay,
Who twice a day their wither'd hands hold vp
Toward Heaven, to pardon blood:
And I haue built two Chauntries,
Where the sad and solemne Priests sing still
For Richards Soule. More will I doe:
Though all that I can doe, is nothing worth;
Since that my Penitence comes after all,
Imploring pardon.

Enter Gloucester.

Glou. My Liege.

King. My Brother Gloucester: voyce? I:
I know thy errand, I will goe with thee.
The day, my friend, and all things stay for me.

Exeunt.

Enter the Dolphin, Orleance, Rambures, and Beaumont.

Orleance. The Sunne doth gild our Armour vp, my Lords.

Dolph. Monte Cheual: My Horse, Varlet Lacquey: Ha.

Orleance. Oh brave Spirit.

Dolph. Via les eaues & terre.

Orleance. Rien pas le air & feu.

Dolph. Cein, Cousin Orleance. Enter Constable.
Now my Lord Constable?

Cons. Hearke how our Steedes, for present Service neigh.

Dolph. Mount them, and make incision in their Hides,
That their hot blood may spin in English eyes,
And doubt them with superfluous courage: ha.

Ram. What, wil you haue them weep our Horses blood?
How shall we then behold their naturall teares?

Enter Messenger.

Messeng. The English are embattail'd, you French Peeres.

Cons. To Horse you gallant Princes, straight to Horse.
Doe but behold yond poore and starued Band,
And your faire shew shall suck away their Soules,
Leaning them but the shales and huskes of men.
There is not worke enough for all our hands,
Scarce blood enough in all their sickly Veines,
To giue each naked Curtleax a stayne.
That our French Gallants shall to day draw out,
And sheath for lack of sport. Let vs but blow on them,
The vapour of our Valour will o're-cume them
'Tis positive against all exceptions, Lords,
That our superfluous Lacquies, and our Peasants,
Who in vnnecessarie action swarme
About our Squares of Battaile, were enow
To purge this field of such a hilding Foe;
Though we vpon this Mountaines Basis by,
Tooke stand for idle speculation:
But that our Honours must not. What's to say?
A very little little let vs doe,
And all is done: then let the Trumpets sound
The Tucket Sonuance, and the Note to mount:
For our approach shall so much dare the field,
That England shall couch downe in feare, and yeeld.

Enter Grandpree.

Grandpree. Why do you stay so long, my Lords of France?
Yond Iland Carrions, desperate of their bones,
Ill-fauoredly become the Morning field:
Their ragged Curtaines poorely are let loose,
And our Ayre shakes them passing scornefully.
Bigge Mars seemes banqu'rout in their begger'd Hoast,
And faintly through a rustie Beuer peepes.
The Horsemen sit like fixed Candlesticks,
With Torch-staues in their hand: and their poore Iades
Lob downe their heads, dropping the hides and hips:
The gumme downe roping from their pale-dead eyes,
And in their pale dull mouthes the Iymold Bitt
Lyes foule with chaw'd-grasse, still and motionlesse.
And their executors, the knauish Crowes,
Flye o'te them all, impatient for their howre.
Description cannot suite it selfe in words,
To demonstrate the Life of such a Battaile,
In life so liuelesse, as it shewes it selfe.

Cons. They haue said their prayers,
And they stay for death.

Dolph. Shall we goe send them Dinners, and fresh Suites,
And giue their fasting Horses Prouender
And after fight with them?

Cons. I stay but for my Guard: on
To the field, I will the Banner from a Trumpet take.
And vse it for my haste. Come, come away,
The Sunne is high, and we out-weare the day. Exeunt.

Enter Gloucester, Bedford, Exeter, Erpingham with all his Hoast: Salisbury, and Westmerland.

Glouc. Where is the King?

Bed. The King himselfe is rode to view their Battaile.

West. Of fighting men they haue full threescore thousand.

Exe. There's fine to one, besides they all are fresh.

Salisb. Gods Arme strike with vs, 'tis a fearefull odds.
God buy' you Princes all; I'le to my Charge:
If we no more meet, till we meet in Heauen;
Then loyfully, my Noble Lord of Bedford,
My deare Lord Gloucester, and my good Lord Exeter,
And my kind Kinsmen, Warriors all, adieu.

Bed. Farwell good Salisbury, & good luck go with thee:
And yet I doe thee wrong, to mind thee of it,
For thou art fram'd of the firme truth of valour.

Exe. Farwell kind Lord: fight valiantly to day.

Bed. He is as full of Valour as of Kindnesse,
Princely in both.

Enter the King.

West. O that we now had here
But one ten thousand of those men in England,
That doe no worke to day.

King. What's he that wishes so?
My Cousin Westmerland. No, my faire Cousin:
If we are markt to dye, we are enow
To doe our Country loss: and if to liue,
The fewer men, the greater share of honour.
Gods will, I pray thee wish not one man more.
By Iouy, I am not couetous for Gold,
Nor care I who doth feed vpon my cost:
It yernes me not, if men my Garments weare;
Such outward things dwell not in my desires.
But if it be a sinne to coueting Honor,
I am the most offending Soule aliue.
No 'faith, my Coziz, wish not a man from England:
Gods peace, I would not loose so great an Honor,
As one man more me thinkes would share from me,
For the best hope I haue. O, doe not wish one more:
Rather proclaime it (Westmerland) through my Hoast,
That he which hath no stomack to this fight,
Let him depart, his Passport shall be made,
And Crownes for Conuoy put into his Purse:
We would not dye in that mans compaine,
That feares his fellowship, to dye with vs.
This day is call'd the Feast of Crispian:
He that out-liues this day, and comes safe home,
Will stand a tip-toe when this day is named,
And rouse him at the Name of Crispian.
He that shall see this day, and liue old age,
Will yeerely on the Vigill feast his neighbours,
And say, to morrow is Saint Crispian.
Then will he strip his sleeue, and shew his scarres:
Old men forget; yet all shall be forgot:
But he'le remember, with aduantages,
What feats he did that day. Then shall our Names,
Familiar in his mouth as household words,

Harry the King, Bedford and Exeter,
Warwick, and Talbot, Salisbury and Glouster,
Be in their flowing Cups freshly remembred.
This story shall the good man teach his sonne:
And Crispine Crispian shall ne're goe by,
From this day to the ending of the World,
But we in it shall be remembred;
We few, we happy few, we band of brothers:
For he to day that sheds his blood with me,
Shall be my brother: be he ne're so vile,
This day shall gentle his Condition.
And Gentlemen in England, now a bed,
Shall think themselves accurst they were not here,
And hold their Manhoods cheape, whiles any speakes,
That fought with vs vpon Saint Crispines day.

Enter Salisbury.

Sal. My Soueraign Lord, bestow your selfe with speede
The French are bravely in their battailes set,
And will with all expedience charge on vs.

King. All things are ready, if our minde be so.

Westm. Perish the man, whose mind is backward now.

King. Thou do'st not wish more helpe from England, Couze?

Westm. Godo wish, my Liege, would you and I alone,
Without more helpe, could fight this Royall battaile.

King. Why now thou hast vnwisht five thousand men:
Which like me better, then to wish vs one.
You know your places: God be with you all.

Tucket. Enter Montiey.

Mont. Once more I come to know of thee King Harry,
If for thy Ransome thou wilt now compound,
Before thy most assured Ouerthrow:
For certainly, thou art so neere the Gulfe,
Thou needs must be englutted. Besides, in mercy
The Constable desires thee, thou wilt mind
Thy followers of Repentance; that their Soules
May make a peaceful and a sweet ceryre
From off these fields: where (wretches) their poore bodies
Must lye and fester.

King. Who hath sent thee now?

Mont. The Constable of France.

King. I pray thee beare my former Answer back:
Bid them achieue me, and then sell my bones.
Good God, why should they mock poore fellowes thus?
The man that once did sell the Lyons skin
While the beast liu'd, was kill'd with hunting him.
A many of our bodyes shall no doubt
Find Native Graues: vpon the which, I trust
Shall witnesse liue in Brasse of this dayes worke.
And those that leaue their valiant bones in France,
Dying like men, though buryed in your Dunghills,
They shall be fam'd: for there the Sun shall greet them,
And draw their honors reeking vp to Heauen.
Leaving their earthly parts to choake your Clyme,
The smell whereof shall breed a Plague in France.
Marke then abounding valour in our English:
That being dead, like to the bullets crasing,
Breake out into a second course of mischiefe,
Killing in relapse of Mortalitie.
Let me speake proudly: Tell the Constable,
We are but Warriors for the working day:
Our Gayneffe and our Gilt are all besmyrcht
With rainie Marching in the painefull field.
There's not a piece of feather in our Hoofts
Good argument (I hope) we will not fye:
And times hath worne vs into slouenrie.
But by the Masse, our hearts are in the trim:
And my poore Souldiers tell me, yet ere Night,
They'le be in fresher Robes, or they will pluck
The gay new Coats o're the French Souldiers heads,
And turne them out of seruice. If they doe this,
As if God please, they shall; my Ransome then
Will soone be leuyed.
Herauld, faue thou thy labour:
Come thou no more for Ransome, gentle Herauld,
They shall heue none, I sweare, but those my leyges:
Which if they heue, as I will leaue vm them,
Shall yeeld them little, tell the Constable.

Mont. I shall, King Harry. And so faue thee well:
Thou neeer shalt heare Herauld any more. Exit.

King. I feare thou wilt once more come againe for Ransome.

Enter Yorke.

Yorke. My Lord, most humbly on my knee I begge
The leading of the Vaward.

King. Take it, braue Yorke.
Now Souldiers march away,
And how thou pleaseft God, dispose the day. Exeunt

Alarum. Excursions.

Enter Pistoll, French Souldier, Boy.

Pist. Yeeld Curre.

French. Je pense que vous estes le gentilhomme de bon qualitee.

Pist. Qualitie calmie custure me. Art thou a Gentleman? What is thy Name? discuss.

French. O Seignieur Dieu.

Pist. O Signieur Dewe (should be a Gentleman: perpend my words O Signieur Dewe, and marke: O Signieur Dewe, thou dyest on point of Fox, except O Signieur thou doe giue to me egregious Ransome.

French. O prenez misericordie ayez pitie de moy.

Pist. Moy shall not serue, I will haue forte Moyes: for I will fetch thy rymme out at thy Throat, in droppes of Crimson blood.

French. Eh il impossible d'esthapper le force de ton bras.

Pist. Brasse, Curre? thou damned and luxurious Mountaine Goat, offer'st me Brasse?

French. O perdonez moy.

Pist. Say'st thou me so? is that a Toane of Moyes? Come hither boy, aske me this slaue in French what is his Name.

Boy. Escoute comment estes vous appelle?

French. Monsieur le Fer.

Boy. He sayes his Name is M. Fer.

Pist. M. Fer: I'le fer him, and fitke him, and ferret him: discuss the same in French vnto him.

Boy. I doe not know the French for fer, and ferret, and fitke.

Pist. Bid him prepare, for I will cut his throat.

French. Que dit il Monsieur?

Boy. Il me commande a vous dire que vous faites vous prest, car en ceste heure cest disposer tout presture de couper votre gorge.

Pist. Ovy, cuppele gorge permoy sey pesant, voleffi tuoi vne me Crownes, brase Crowne nor mangled shalt thou be by this my Sword.

French. O Ie vous supplie pour l'amour de Dieu: me pardonner, Ie suis le Gentilhomme de bon maison, garde ma vie, & Ie vous donneray deux cent escus.

Pist. What we his words?

Boy. He

Boy. He prayes you to save his life, he is a Gentleman of a good house, and for his ransom he will give you two hundred Crownes.

Pist. Tell him my fury shall abate, and I the Crownes will take.

Fran. Petit Monsieur que dit il?

Boy. Encore qu'il est contre son serment, de pardonner aux prisonniers, il est content a vous donner la liberte le francheisement.

Fre. Sur mes genoux je vous donnes mille remercimens, et je me estime heureux que je le monde entre les mains d'un Chevalier si pauvre, si plein de valeur et tres digne seigneur d'Angleterre.

Pist. Expound unto me boy.

Boy. He gives you upon his knees a thousand thanks, and he esteemes himselfe happy, that he hath fallen into the hands of one (as he thinkes) the most brave, valorous and thrice-worthy Signeur of England.

Pist. As I suchet blood, I will some mercy shew. Follow me.

Boy. Suivez vous le grand Capitaine?

I did never know so full a voyce issue from so empticie a bonet: but the saying is true. The empty vessel makes the greatest sound, Bardolfe and Nym had ten times more valour, than this roaring diavell i'th olde play, that everie one may payre his staples with a woodden dagger, and they are both hang'd, and so would this be, if he durst steale any thing adventurously. I must stay with the Lackies with the Luggage of our camp, the French might have a good prey of vs, if he knew of it, for there is none to guard it but boyes. Exit.

Enter Constable, Orleance, Bourbon, Dolphin, and Rambures.

Con. O Diable.

Orl. O figueur le jour est perdu, tout est perdu.

Dol. Mor Dieu ma vie, all is confounded all,
Reproach, and everlasting shame
Sits mocking in our Plumes. A short Alarum.
O meschante Fortune, do not runne away.

Con. Why all our rankes are broke.

Dol. O perdurable shame, let's stab our selves:
Be these the wretches that we plaid at dice for?

Orl. Is this the King we sent too, for his ransome?

Bur. Shame, and eternall shame, nothing but shame,
Let vs dye in once more backe againe,
And he that will not follow Burbon now,
Let him go hence, and with his cap in hand
Like a base Pander hold the Chamber doore,
Whilst a base slave, no gender then my dagge,
His fairest daughter is contaminated.

Con. Disorder that hath spoyl'd vs, friend vs now,
Let vs on heaps go offer vp our lives.

Orl. We are enough yet living in the Field,
To smother vp the English in our throngs,
If any order might be thought vpon.

Bur. The diavell take Order now, I'le to the throng;
Let life be short, else shame will be too long. Exit.

Alarum. Enter the King and his traynes, with Prisoners.

King. Well have we done, thrice-valiant Countrimen,
But all's not done, yet keepe the French the field.

Exe. The D. of York commends him to your Maiesty

King. Lives he good Vncle: thrice within this hour
I saw him downe; thrice vp againe, and fighting,
From Helmet to the spurre, all blood he was.

Exe. In which array (brave Soldier) doth he lye,
Larding the plaine: and by his bloody side,
(Yoake-fellow to his honour-owing-wounds)
The Noble Earle of Suffolke also lyes.
Suffolke first dyed, and Yorke all hagled over
Comes to him, where in gore he lay insterced,
And takes him by the Beard, kisses the gashes
That bloodily did yawne vpon his face.
He cryes aloud; Tarry my Cosin Suffolke,
My soule shall thine keepe company to heaven:
Tarry (sweet soule) for mine, then fly a-breth:
As in this glorious and well-foughten field
We kept together in our Chiualrie.
Vpon these words I came, and cheer'd him vp,
He smil'd me in the face, raught me his hand,
And with a feeble gripe, says: Dere my Lord,
Commend my service to my Soueraigne.
So did he turne, and over Suffolkes neche
He threw his wounded arme, and kist his lippes,
And so espous'd to death, with blood he seal'd
A Testament of Noble-ending-loue:
The pretie and sweet manner of it forc'd
Those waters from me, which I would haue stop'd,
But I had not so much of man in mee,
And all my mother came into mine eyes,
And gaue me vp to teares.

King. I blame you not,
For hearing this, I must perforce compound
With mistfull eyes, or they will issue too. Alarum.
But hearke, what new alarum is this same?
The French haue re-enforc'd their scatter'd men:
Then every soldiour kill his Prisoners,
Give the word through. Exit.

Actus Quartus.

Enter Flueller and Gower.

Flu. Kill the poyes and the luggage, 'Tis expresly against the Law of Armes, 'tis an arrant a peece of knauery marke you now, as can bee offert in your Conscience now, is it not?

Gow. 'Tis certaine, there's not a boy left alive, and the Cowardly Rascalls that ranne from the battaile ha' done this slaughter: besides they haue burned and carried away all that was in the Kings Tent, wherefore the King most worthily hath caus'd every soldiour to cut his prisoners throat. O 'tis a gallant King.

Flu. I, hee was porne at Monmouth Captaine Gower: What call you the Townes name where Alexander the pig was borne?

Gow. Alexander the Great.

Flu. Why I prey you, is not pig, great? The pig, or the great, or the mighty, or the huge, or the magnanimous, are all one reckonings, save the phrase is a little variations.

Gower. I thinke Alexander the Great was borne in Macedon, his Father was called Philip of Macedon, as I take it.

Flu. I thinke it is in Macedon where Alexander is porne.

porne: I tell you Captaine, if you looke in the Maps of the Orld, I warrant you sall finde in the comparisons betweene Macedon & Monmouth, that the situations looke you, is both alike. There is a Riuer in Macedon, & there is also moreouer a Riuer at Monmouth, it is call'd Wye at Monmouth: but it is out of my prames, what is the name of the other Riuer: but 'tis all one, tis alike as my fingers is to my fingers, and there is Salmons in both. If you marke Alexanders life well, Harry of Monmouthes life is comes after it indifferent well, for there is figures in all things. Alexander God knowes, and you know, in his rages, and his furies, and his wraths, and his chollers, and his moodes, and his displeasures, and his indignations, and also being a little intoxicates in his prames, did in his Ales and his angers (looke you) kill his best friend Clytus.

Gow. Our King is not like him in that, he never kill'd any of his friends.

Flu. It is not well done (marke you now) to take the tales out of my mouth, ere it is made and finished. I speak but in the figures, and comparisons of it: as Alexander kild his friend Clytus, being in his Ales and his Cuppes; so also Harry Monmouth being in his right wittes, and his good iudgements, turn'd away the fat Knight with the great belly doublet: he was full of iests, and gypes, and knauerries, and mockes, I have forgot his name.

Gow. Sir John Fallstaffe.

Flu. That is he: I le tell you, there is good men porne at Monmouth.

Gow. Here comes his Maiesty

Alarum. Enter King Harry and Burbon with prisoners. Flourish.

King. I was not angry since I came to France,
Vntill this instant. Take a Trumpet Herald,
Ride thou vnto the Horsemen on yond hill:
If they will fight with vs, bid them come downe,
Or voyde the field: they do offend our sight,
If they'l do neither, we will come to them,
And make them sker away, as swift as stones
Enforced from the old Assyrian slings:
Besides, wee'l cut the throats of those we haue,
And not a man of them that we shall take,
Shall taste our mercy. Go and tell them so.

Enter Montioy.

Exe. Here comes the Herald of the French, my Liege

Glou. His eyes are humbler then they vs'd to be.

King. How now, what mennes this Herald? Knowst thou not,
That I haue fin'd these bones of mine for ransome?
Com'st thou againe for ransome?

Her. No great King:
I come to thee for charitable License,
That we may wander ore this bloody field,
To booke our dead, and then to bury them,
To sort our Nobles from our common men.
For many of our Princes (woe the while)
Lye drown'd and soak'd in mercenary blood:
So do our vulgar drench their peasant limbes
In blood of Princes, and with wounded steeds
Fret fet-locke deepe in gore, and with wilde rage
Yerke out their armed heeles at their dead masters,
Killing them twice. O giue vs leaue great King,
To view the field in safety, and dispose
Of their dead bodies.

Kin. I tell thee truly Herald,
I know not if the day be ours or no,
For yet a many of your horsemen peere,
And gallop ore the field.

Her. The day is yours.

Kin. Praised be God, and not our strength for it:
What is this Castle call'd that stands hard by.

Her. They call it Agincourt.

King. Then call we this the field of Agincourt,
Fought on the day of Crispin Crispianus.

Flu. Your Grandfather of famous memory (an't please your Maiesty) and your great Vncle Edward the Placke Prince of Wales, as I haue read in the Chronicles, fought a most prave pattle here in France.

Kin. They did Fluellen.

Flu. Your Maiesty sayes very true: If your Maiesties is remembred of it, the Welchmen did good seruice in a Garden where Leekes did grow, weaning Leekes in their Monmouth caps, which your Maiesty know to this houre is an honourable badge of the seruice: And I do beleeue your Maiesty takes no scorne to weare the leeke vppon S. Tauies day.

King. I weare it for a memorable honor:
For I am Welch you know good Countrymen.

Flu. All the water in Wye, cannot wash your Maiesties Welsh pleod out of your body, I can tell you that: God pless it, and preserue it, as long as it pleases his Grace, and his Maiesty too.

Kin. Thankes good my Countrymen.

Flu. By Iesus, I am your Maiesties Countreyman. I care not who know it: I will confesse it to all the Orld, I need not to be ashamed of your Maiesty, praised be God so long as your Maiesty is an honest man.

King. Good keepe me so.

Enter Williams.

Our Heralds go with him,
Bring me iust notice of the numbered dead
On both our parts. Call yonder fellow hither.

Exe. Souldier, you must come to the King.

Kin. Souldier, why wear'st thou that Glouve in thy Cappe?

Will. And's please your Maiesty, tis the gage of one that I should fight withall, if he be aliue.

Kin. An Englishmen?

Will. And's please your Maiesty, a Rascall that swagger'd with me last night: who if aliue, and euer dare to challenge this Glouve, I haue sworne to take him a boxe a'th eare: or if I can see my Glouve in his cappe, which he swore as he was a Souldier he would weare (if aliue) I will strike it out soundly.

Kin. What think you Captaine Flueller, is it fit this souldier keepe his oath.

Flu. Hee is a Crauen and a Villaine else, an's pease your Maiesty in my conscience.

King. It may be, his enemy is a Gentleman of great sort quite from the answer of his degree.

Flu. Though he be as good a Gentleman as the diuel is, as Lucifer and Beltzebub himselfe, it is necessary (looke your Grace) that he keepe his vow and his oath: If hee be perior'd (see you now). his reputation is as arrant a villaine and a Iacke sauce, as euer his blacke shoo would vpon Gods ground, and his earth, in my conscience law

King. Then keepe thy vow sirrah, when thou meet'st the fellow.

Will. So, I will my Liege, as I liue.

King. Who sew'st thou vnder?

Will.

Wil. Vnder Captaine Gower, my Liege.

Fla. Gower is a good Captaine, and is good knowledge and literatured in the Wares.

King. Call him hither to me, Souldier.

Wil. I will my Liege. Exit.

King. Here Flueller, were thou this fauour for me, and sticke it in thy Cappe: when Alanson and my selfe were downe together, I plucke this Glouc from his Helme: If any man challenge this, hee is a friend to Alanson, and an enemy to our Person; if thou encounter any such, apprehend him, and thou do'st me loue.

Fla. Your Grace doe's me as great Honors as can be desir'd in the hearts of his Subiects: I would faine see the man, that ha's but two legges, that shall find himselfe agreeful at this Gloue; that is all: but I would faine see it once, and please God of his grace that I might see.

King. Know'st thou Gower?

Fla. He is my deare friend, and please y ..

King. Pray thee goe seeke him, and bring him to my Tent.

Fla. I will seeke him. Exit.

King. My Lord of Warwick, and my Brother Glester, Follow Flueller closely at the heeles.
The Gloue which I haue giuen him for a fauour,
May haply purchase him a box a'th'eare.
It is the Souldiers: I by bargaine should
Weare it my selfe. Follow good Cousin Warwick,
If that the Souldier strike him, as I iudge
By his blunt bearing, he will keepe his word;
Some sodaine mischiefe may arise of it:
For I doe know Flueller valiant,
And touche with Choler, hot as Gunpowder,
And quickly will returne an injurie.
Follow, and see there be no harme betweene them.
Goe you with me, Vncle of Exeter. Exeunt.

Enter Gower and Williams.

Wil. I warrant it is to Knight you, Captaine.

Enter Flueller.

Fla. Gods will, and his pleasure, Captaine, I beseech you now, come space to the King: there is more good toward you peradventure, than is in your knowledge to dreame of.

Wil. Sir, know you this Gloue?

Fla. Know the Gloue? I know the Gloue is a Gloue.

Wil. I know this, and thus I challenge it. Strikes him.

Fla. 'Sblud, an arrant Traytor as anyes in the Vniuersall World, or in France, or in England.

Gower. How now Sir? you Villaine.

Wil. Doe you thinke I'le be forsworne?

Fla. Stand away Captaine Gower, I will give Traytors his payment into plowes, I warrant you.

Wil. I am no Traytor.

Fla. That's a Lye in thy Throat. I charge you in his Maiesties Name apprehend him, he's a friend of the Duke Alanson.

Enter Warwick, and Glouster.

War. How now, how now, what's the matter?

Fla. My Lord of Warwick, heere is, praised be God for it, a most contagious Treason come to light, looke you, as you shall desire in a Summers day. Heere is his Maiestie. Enter King and Bayter.

King. How now, what's the matter?

Fla. My Liege, heere is a Villaine, and a Traytor, that looke your Grace, ha's stroake the Gloue which your Maiestie is take out of the Helmet of Alanson.

Wil. My Liege, this was my Gloue, heere is the fellow of it: and he that I gaue it to in change, promis'd to weare it in his Cappe: I promis'd to strike him, if he did: I met this man with my Gloue in his Cappe, and I haue beene as good as my word.

Fla. Your Maiestie heare now, saving your Maiesties Manhood, what an arrant, rascally, beggerly, lowsie Knaue it is: I hope your Maiestie is peare me testimonie and witnesse, and will auouchsafe, that this is the Gloue of Alanson, that your Maiestie is giue me, in your Conscience now.

King. Giue me thy Gloue Souldier;
Looke, heere is the fellow of it:
'Twas I indeed thou promised'st to strike,
And thou hast giuen me most bitter termes.

Fla. And please your Maiestie, let his Neck answere for it, if there is any Marshall Law in the World.

King. How canst thou make me satisfaction?

Wil. All offences, my Lord, come from the heart: never came any from mine, that might offend your Maiestie.

King. It was our selfe thou did'st abuse.

Wil. Your Maiestie came not like your selfe: you appear'd to me but as a common man; witnesse the Night, your Garments, your Lowlinesse: and what your Highnesse suffer'd vnder that shape, I beseech you take it for your owne fault, and not mine: for had you beene as I tooke you for, I made no offence; therefore I beseech your Highnesse pardon me.

King. Here Vncle Exeter, fill this Gloue with Crowns,
And giue it to this fellow. Keepe it fellow,
And weare it for an Honor in thy Cappe,
Till I doe challenge it. Giue him the Crowns:
And Captaine, you must needs be friends with him.

Fla. By this Day and this Light, the fellow ha's mettell enough in his belly: Hold, there is twelue-pence for you, and I pray you to serue God, and keepe you out of prawles and prabbles, and quarrels and disensions, and I warrant you it is the better for you.

Wil. I will none of your Money.

Fla. It is with a good will: I can tell you it will serue you to mend your shoes: come, wherefore should you be so pashfull, your shoes is not so good: 'tis a good silling I warrant you, or I will change it.

Enter Herauld.

King. Now Herauld, are the dead numbred?

Herald. Heere is the number of the slaughter'ed French.

King. What Prisoners of good sort are taken, Vncle?

Ren. Charles Duke of Orleance, Nephew to the King,
John Duke of Bartbon, and Lord Boucqualt:
Of other Lords and Barons, Knights and Squires,
Full fifteene hundred, besides common men.

King. This Note doth tell me of ten thousand French
That in the field lye slaine: of Princes in this number,
And Nobles bearing Banners, there lye dead
One hundred twentie six: added to these,
Of Knights, Esquires, and gallant Gentlemen,
Eight thousand and foure hundred: of the which,
Fiue hundred were but yesterday dubb'd Knights.
So that in these ten thousand they haue lost,
There are but sixteene hundred Mercenaries:
The rest are Princes, Barons, Lords, Knights, Squires,

And

And Gentlemen of blood and qualitie.
The Names of those their Nobles that lye dead:
Charles Delabreth, High Constable of France,
Iaques of Chatillon, Admirall of France,
The Master of the Crosse-bowes, Lord Rambures,
Great Master of France, the brave Sir Guschard Dauphin,
John Duke of Alanson, Anthonie Duke of Brabant,
The Brother to the Duke of Burgundie,
And Edward Duke of Barr: of lustie Earles,
Grandpre and Roussi, Fauconbridge and Foyes,
Beaumont and Marle, Vaudemont and Lestrale.
Here was a Royall fellowship of death.
Where is the number of our English dead?
Edward the Duke of Yorke, the Earle of Suffolke,
Sir Richard Ketly, Davy Gam Esquire:
None else of name: and of all other men,
But fine and twentie.
O God, thy Arme was here:
And not to vs, but to thy Arme alone,
Ascribe we all: when, without stratagem,
But in plaine shock, and even play of Battaile,
Was ever knowne so great and little loss?
On one part and on th'other, take it God,
For it is none but thine.
Exet. 'Tis wonderfull.
King. Come, goe we in procession to the Village:
And be it death proclaymed through our Host,
To boast of this, or take that praise from God,
Which is his onely.
Fla. Is it not lawfull and please your Maiestie, to tell how many is kill'd?
King. Yes Captaine: but with this acknowledgement,
That God fought for vs.
Fla. Yes, my conscience, he did vs great good.
King. Doe we all holy Rites:
Let there be sung Non nobis, and Te Deum,
The dead with charitie enclos'd in Clay:
And then to Calliee, and to England then,
Where ne're from France arriv'd more happy men.
Exeunt.

Actus Quintus.

Enter Chorus.

Vouchsafe to those that have not read the Story,
That I may prompt them: and of such as have,
I humbly pray them to admit th'excuse
Of time, of numbers, and due course of things,
Which cannot in their huge and proper life,
Be here presented. Now we beare the King
Toward Calliee: Grant him there; there seene,
Heave him away upon your winged thoughts,
Athwart the Sea: Behold the English beach
Pales in the flood; with Men, Wives, and Boyes,
Whose shouts & claps out-voyce the deep-mouth'd Sea,
Which like a mightie Whiffler 'fore the King,
Seemes to prepare his way: So let him land,
And solemnly see him set on to London.
So swift a pace hath Thought, that even now
You may imagine him upon Black-Heath:
Where, that his Lords desire him, to have borne
His bruised Helmet, and his bended Sword
Before him, through the Citie: he forbids it,
Being free from vain-nesse, and selfe-glorious pride;
Giving full Trophee, Signall, and Ostent,
Quite from himselfe, to God. But now behold,
In the quick Forge and working-house of Thought,
How London doth powre out her Citizens,
The Maior and all his Brethren in best sort,
Like to the Senatours of th'antique Rome,
With the Plebeians swarming at their heeles,
Goe forth and fetch their Conqu'ring Cæsar in:
As by a lower, but by louing likelyhood,
Were now the Generall of our gracious Empresse,
As in good time he may, from Ireland comming,
Bringing Rebellion broached on his Sword;
How many would the peacefull Citie quit,
To welcome him? much more, and much more cause,
Did they this Harry. Now in London place him.
As yet the lamentation of the French
Inuites the King of Englands stay at home:
The Emperour's comming in behalfe of France,
To order peace betweene them: and omit
All the occurrences, what euer chance,
Till Harryes backe returne againe to France:
There must we bring him; and my selfe haue play'd
The interim, by remembring you 'tis past
Then brooke abridgement, and your eyes aduance,
After your thoughts, straight backe againe to France.
Exit.

Enter Fluellen and Gower.

Gower. Nay, that's right: but why weare you your Leeke to day? S. Davies day is past.
Flu. There is occasions and causes why and wherefore in all things: I will tell you asse my friend, Captaine Gower; the rascally, scauld, beggerly, lowsie, pragging Knaue Pistoll, which you and your selfe, and all the World, know to be no petter then a fellow, looke you now, of no merits: hee is come to me, and prings me pread and sault yesterday, looke you, and bid me eate my Leeke: it was in a place where I could not breed no contention with him; but I will be so bold as to weare it in my Cap till I see him once againe, and then I will tell him a little piece of my desires.

Enter Pistoll.

Gower. Why heere hee comes, swelling like a Turky-cock.
Flu. 'Tis no matter for his swellings, nor his Turky-cocks. God pleesse you aunchient Pistoll: you scurule lowsie Knaue, God pleesse you.
Pist. Ha, art thou bedlum? doest thou thirst, base Troian, to haue me fold vp Parcas fatall Web? Hence; I am qualmish at the smell of Leeke.
Flu. I pesecech you heartily, scurule lowsie Knaue, at my desires, and my requests, and my petitions, to eate, looke you, this Leeke; because, looke you, you doe not loue it, nor your affections, and your appetites and your digestions doe's not agree with it, I would desire you to eate it.
Pist. Not for Cadwallader and all his Goats.
Flu. There is one Goat for you. Strikes him. Will you be so good, scould Knaue, as eate it?
Pist. Base Troian, thou shalt dye.
Flu. You say very true, scould Knaue, when Gods will is: I will desire you to liue in the meane time, and eate your Victuals: come, there is sweete for it. You call'd me yesterday Mountaine-Squier, but I will make you to day a squire of low degree. I pray you fall too, if you can mocke a Leeke, you can eate a Leeke.

Gow. Enough Captaine, you haue astonisht him.

Flu. I say, I will make him eate some part of my leeke, or I will peste his pate foure dayes: bite I pray you, it is good for your greene wound, and your ploodie Coxecombe.

Pist. Must I bite.

Flu. Yes certainly, and out of doubt and out of question too and ambiguities.

Pist. By this Leeke, I will most horribly reuenge I eate and eate I sweare.

Flu. Eate I pray you, will you haue some more sauce to your Leeke: there is not enough Leeke to sweare by.

Pist. Qe es thy Cudgell, thou dost see I eate.

Flu. Much good do you scald knaue, heartily. Nay, pray you throw none away, the skinne is good for your broken Coxcombe; when you take occasions to see Leekes hereafter, I pray you mocke at 'em, that is all.

Pist. Good.

Flu. I, Leekes is good: hold you, there is a groat to heale your pate.

Pist. Me a groat?

Flu Yes verily, and in truth ye shall take it, or I haue another Leeke in my pocket, which you shall eate.

Pist. I take thy groat in earnest of reuenge.

Flu. If I owe you any thing, I will pay you in Cudgels, you shall be a Woodmonger, and buy nothing of me but cudgels: God bu'y you, and keepe you, & heale your pate. Exit

Pist. All hell shall stirre for this.

Gow. Go, go, you are a counterfeit cowardly Knaue, will you mocke at an ancient Tradition begun vppon an honourable respect, and worne as a memorable Trophee of predeceased valor, and dare not mouch in your deeds any of your words. I haue seene you gleeking & galling at this Gentleman twice or thrice. You thought, because he could not speake English in the native garb, he could not therefore handle an English Cudgell: you finde it otherwise, and henceforth let a Welsh correction teach you a good English condition, fare ye well. Exit

Pist. Doeth fortune play the huswife with me now? Newes haue I that my Doll is dead i'th Spittle of a malady of France, and there my rendezvous is quite cut off: Old I do waxe, and from my weare limbes honour is Cudgeld. Well, Bawd Ile turne, and something leane to Cut-purse of quicke hand: To England will I steale, and there Ile steale:

And pitches will I get vnto these cudgeld scarres,
And swore I got them in the Gallia warres. Exit.

Enter at one doore, King Henry, Exeter, Bedford, Warwicke, and other Lords. At another, Queene Isabel, the King, the Duke of Burgoyne, and other French.

King. Peace to this meeting, wherefore we are met;
Vnto our brother France, and to our Sister
Health and faire time of day: Ioy and good wishes
To our most faire and Princely Cosine Katherine:
And as a branch and member of this Royalty,
By whom this great assembly is contrib'd,
We do salute you Duke of Burgogne,
And Princes French and Peeres health to you all.

Fra. Right ioyous are we to behold your face,
Most worthy brother England, fairely met,
So are you Princes (English) every one.

Quee. So happy be the Issue brother Ireland
Of this good day, and of this gracious meeting,
As we are now glad to behold your eyes,
Your eyes which hitherto haue borne
In them against the French that met them in their bent,
The fatall Balls of murthering Basilisks:
The venome of such Lookes we fairely hope
Haue lost their qualitie, and that this day
Shall change all griefes and quarrels into loue.

Eng. To cry Amen to that, thus we appeare.

Quee. You English Princes all, I doe salute you.

Burg. My duetie to you both, oh equall loue,
Great Kings of France and England: that I haue labour'd
With all my wits, my paines, and strong endeuors,
To bring your most Imperiall Maiesties
Vnto this Barre, and Royall enterview;
Your Mightinesse on both parts best can witnesse.
Since then my Office hath so farre preuayl'd,
That Face to Face, and Royall Eye to Eye,
You haue congreeted: let it not disgrace me,
If I demand before this Royall view,
What Rub, or what Impediment there is,
Why that the naked, poore, and mangled Peace,
Deare Nourse of Arts, Plentyes, and ioyfull Births,
Should not in this best Garden of the World,
Our fertile France, put vp her louely Visage?
Alas, thee hath from France too long been chas'd,
And all her Husbandry doth lye on heapes,
Corrupting in it owne fertilitie.
Her Vine, the merry chearer of the heart,
Vnpruned, dyes: her Hedges euen pleach'd,
Like Prisoners wildly ouer-growne with hayre,
Put forth disorder'd Twigs: her fallow Leas,
The Darnell, Hemlock, and rankе Fetchetary,
Doth root vpon; while that the Culter rusts,
That should deracinate such Sauagery:
The euen Meade, that erst brought sweetly forth
The freckled Cowslip, Burnet and greene Clouer,
Wanting the Sythe, wishall vncorrected, rankes
Conceiues by idlenesse, and nothing teemes,
But hatefull Docks, rough Thistles, Kexiyes, Burres,
Loosing both beautie and vtilitie;
And all our Vineyards, Fallowes, Meades, and Hedges,
Defective in their natures, grow to wildnesse.
Euen so our Houses, and our selues, and Children,
Haue lost, or doe not learne, for want of time,
The Sciences that should become our Country;
But grow like Sauages, as Souldiers will,
That nothing doe, but meditate on Blood,
To Swearing, and stern Lookes, defus'd Attyre,
And every thing that seemes vnnaturall.
Which to reduce into our former fauour,
You are assembled: and my speech entreats,
That I may know the Let, why gentle Peace
Should not expell these inconueniences,
And blesse vs with her former qualities.

Eng. If Duke of Burgoyne, you would the Peace,
Whose want gaues growth to th'imperfections
Which you haue cited, you must buy that Peace
With full accord to all our iust demands,
Whose Tenures and particular effects
You haue enschedul'd briefely in your hands.

Burg. The King hath heard them: to the which, as yet
There is no Answer made.

Eng. Well then: the Peace which you before so vrg'd,
Lyes in his Answer.

France: I have but with a cursenie eye
O're-glance the Articles: Pleasesh your Grace
To appoint some of your Councell presently
To sit with vs once more, with better heed
To re-survey them; we will suddenly
Passe our accept and peremptorie Answer.

England. Brother we shall. Goe Vncle Exeter,
And Brother Clarence, and you Brother Gloucester,
Warwick, and Huntington, goe with the King,
And take with you free power, to ratifie,
Augment, or alter, as your Wisdomes best
Shall see advantageable for our Dignitie,
Any thing in or out of our Demands,
And we'le consigne thereto. Will you, faire Sister,
Goe with the Princes, or stay here with vs?

Quee. Our gracious Brother, I will goe with them:
Happily a Womans Voyce may doe some good,
When Articles too nicely vrg'd, be stood on.

England. Yet leave our Cousin Katherine here with vs,
She is our capitall Demand, compris'd
Within the fore-ranke of our Articles.

Quee. She hath good leave. Exeunt omnes.

Manet King and Katherine.

King. Faire Katherine, and most faire,
Will you vouchsafe to teach a Souldier teames,
Such as will enter at a Ladyes eare,
And plead his Loue-suit to her gentle heart.

Kath. Your Maestie shall mock at me, I cannot speake your England.

King. O faire Katherine, if you will loue me soundly with your French heart, I will be glad to heere you confesse it brokenly with your English Tongue. Doe you like me, Kate?

Kath. Pardonne moy, I cannot tell wat is like me.

King. An Angell is like you Kate, and you are like an Angell.

Kath. Que dit il que je suis semblable a les Anges?

Lady. Ouy vrayment (sauf vostre Grace) ainsi dit il.

King. I did so, deare Katherine, and I must not blush to affirme it.

Kath. O bon Dieu, les langues des hommes sont pleines de tromperies.

King. What sayes she, faire one? that the tongues of men are full of deceits?

Lady. Ouy, dat de tongues of de mans is be full of deceits: dat is de Princesse.

King. The Princesse is the better English-woman: yfaith Kate, my wooing is fit for thy vnderstanding, I am glad thou canst speake no better English, for if thou could'st, thou would'st finde me such a plaine King, that thou would'st thinke, I had sold my Farme to buy my Crowne. I know no wayes to mince it in loue, but directly to say, I loue you; then if you vrge me farther, then to say, Do you in faith? I weare out my suite: Give me your answer, yfaith doe, and so clap hands, and a bargaine: how say you, Lady?

Kath. Sauf vostre honneur, me vnderstand well.

King. Marry, if you would put me to Verses, or to Dance for your sake, Kate, why you vndid me: for the one I haue neither words nor measure; and for the other, I haue no strength in measure, yet a reasonable measure in strength. If I could winne a Lady at Leape-frogge, or by vaulting into my Saddle, with my Armour on my backe; vnder the correction of bragging be it spoken. I should quickly leape into a Wife: Or if I might buffet for my Loue, or bound my Horse for her fauours, I could lay on like a Butcher, and sit like a Iack an Apes, neuer off. But before God Kate, I cannot looke greenely, nor gaspe out my eloquence, nor I haue no cunning in protestation; onely downe-right Oathes, which I neuer vse till vrg'd, nor neuer breake for vrging. If thou canst loue a fellow of this temper, Kate, whose face is not worth Sunne-burning? that neuer lookes in his Glasse, for loue of any thing he sees there? let thine Eye be thy Cooke. I speake to thee plaine Souldier: If thou canst loue me for this, take me? if not? to say to thee that I shall dye, is true; but for thy loue, by the L. No: yet I loue thee too. And while thou liu'st, deare Kate, take a fellow of plaine and vncoyned Constancie, for he perforce must do thee right, because he hath not the gift to woo in other places: for these fellowes of infinit tongue, that can rime themselues into Ladyes fauours, they doe alwayes reason themselues out againe. What? a speaker is but a prater, a Ryme is but a Ballad; a good Legge will fall, a strait Backe will stoope, a blacke Beard will turne white, a curl'd Pate will grow bald, a faire Face will wither, a full Eye will wax hollow: but a good Heart, Kate, is the Sunne and the Moone, or rather the Sunne, and not the Moone; for it shines bright, and neuer changes, but keepes his course truly. If thou would haue such a one, take me? and take me; take a Souldier: take a Souldier; take a King. And what say st thou then to my Loue? speake my faire, and fairely, I pray thee.

Kath. Is it possible dat I sould loue de enemie of France?

King. No, it is not possible you should loue the Enemie of France, Kate; but in louing me, you should loue the Friend of France: for I loue France so well, that I will not part with a Village of it; I will haue it all mine: and Kate, when France is mine, and I am yours; then yours is France, and you are mine.

Kath. I cannot tell wat is dat.

King. No, Kate? I will tell thee in French, which I am sure will hang vpon my tongue, like a new-married Wife about her Husbands Neck, hardly to be shooke off; Je quand sur le possession de France, & quand vous avez le possession de moy, (Let mee see, what then? Saint Denis bee my speede) Donc vostre est France, & vous estes mienne. It is as easie for me, Kate, to conquer the Kingdome, as to speake so much more French: I shall neuer moue thee in French, vnlesse it be to laugh at me.

Kath. Sauf vostre honeur, le Francois que vous parlais, il est meilleur que l'Anglois le quel Je parle.

King. No faith is't not, Kate: but thy speaking of my Tongue, and I thine, most truely falsely, must needes be graunted to be much at one. But Kate, doe'st thou vnderstand thus much English? Canst thou loue mee?

Kath. I cannot tell.

King. Can any of your Neighbours tell, Kate? Ile aske them. Come, I know thou loues'st me: and at night when you come into your Closet, you'le question this Gentlewoman about me; and I know, Kate, you will to her dispraise those parts in me, that you loue with your heart: but good Kate, mocke me mercifully, the rather gentle Princesse, because I loue thee cruelly. If ever thou beest mine, Kate, as I haue a saueing Faith within me tells me thou shalt; I get thee with skambling, and thou must therefore needes proue a good Souldier-breeder: Shall not thou and I, between Saint Denis and Saint George, compound a Boy, half French half English, that shall goe to Constantinople, and take the Turke by th Beard. Shall wee not? what say'ſt thou, my faire Flower-de-Luce.

Kate. I doe not know dat.

King. No: 'tis hereafter to know, but now to promiſe: doe but now promiſe Kate, you will endeavour for your French part of ſuch a Boy; and for my Engliſh moytie, take the Word of a King, and a Batchelor. How anſwer you. Le plus belle Katherine du monde mon treſcher & diuin deeſſe.

Kath. Your Maieſtee ave fauſe Frenche enough to deceive de moſt ſage Damoiſell dat is en Fraunce.

King. Now fye vpon my falſe French: by mine Honor in true Engliſh, I loue thee Kate; by which Honor, I dare not ſweare thou loueſt me, yet my blood begins to flatter me, that thou doo'ſt; notwithſtanding the poore and vnpartering effect of my Viſage. Now beſhrew my Fathers Ambition, hee was thinking of Civill Warres when hee got me, therefore was I created with a ſtubborne out-ſide, with an aſpect of Iron, that when I come to wooe Ladyes, I fright them: but in faith Kate, the elder I wax, the better I ſhall appeare. My comfort is, that Old Age, that ill layer vp of Beautie, can doe no more ſpoyle vpon my Face. Thou haſt me, if thou haſt me, at the worſt; and thou ſhalt weare me, if thou weare me, better and better: and therefore tell me, moſt faire Katherine, will you haue me? Put off your Maiden Blushes, anouch the Thoughts of your Heart with the Lookes of an Empreſſe, take me by the Hand, and ſay, Harry of England, I am thine: which Word thou ſhalt no ſooner bleſſe mine Eare withall, but I will tell thee aloud, England is thine, Ireland is thine, France is thine, and Henry Plantagenet is thine; who, though I ſpeake it before his Face, if he be not Fellow with the beſt King, thou ſhalt finde the beſt King of Good-fellowes. Come, your Anſwer in broken Muſick; for thy Voyce is Muſick, and thy Engliſh broken: Therefore Queene of all, Katherine, breake thy minde to me in broken Engliſh; wilt thou haue me?

Kath. Dat is as it ſhall pleaſe de Roy mon pere.

King. Nay, it will pleaſe him well, Kate; it ſhall pleaſe him, Kate.

Kath. Den it ſall alſo content me.

King. Vpon that I kiſſe your Hand, and I call you my Queene.

Kath. Laiſſe mon Seigneur, laiſſe, laiſſe, mon foy: Ie ne veux point que vous abbaiſſe voſtre grandeur, en baiſant la main d'une noſtre Seigneur indegnie ſeruiteur excuſe moy. Ie vous ſupplie mon treſ-puiſſant Seigneur.

King. Then I will kiſſe your Lippes, Kate.

Kath. Les Dames & Damoiſells pour eſtre baiſes deuant leur mariage il ne pas le coſtume de Fraunce.

King. Madame, my Interpreter, what ſayes ſhee?

Lady. Dat it is not be de fashon pour le Ladies of France; I cannot tell wat is buiſſe en Engliſh.

King. To kiſſe.

Lady. Your Maieſtee entendre bettre que moy.

King. It is not a fashion for the Maids in France to kiſſe before they are marryed, would ſhe ſay?

Lady. Oui vraiement.

King. O Kate, nice Cuſtomes curſie to great Kings. Deare Kate, you and I cannot bee confin'd within the weake Lyſt of a Countreyes fashion: wee are the makers of Manners, Kate; and the libertie that followes our Places, ſtoppes the mouth of all finde-faults, as I will doe yours, for vpholding the nice fashion of your Country, in denying me a Kiſſe: therefore patiently, and yeelding. You haue Witch-craft in your Lippes, Kate: there is more eloquence in a Sugar touch of them, then in the Tongues of the French Councell; and they ſhould ſooner perſwade Harry of England, then a generall Petition of Monarchs. Heere comes your Father.

Enter the French Power, and the Engliſh Lords.

Burg. God ſaue your Maieſtie, my Royall Couſin, teach you our Princeſſe Engliſh?

King. I would haue her learne, my faire Couſin, how perfectly I loue her, and that is good Engliſh.

Burg. Is ſhee not apt?

King. Our Tongue is rough, Coze, and my Condition is not ſmooth: ſo that having neyther the Voyce nor the Heart of Flatterie about me, I cannot ſo conjure vp the Spirit of Loue in her, that hee will appeare in his true likeneſſe.

Burg. Pardon the frankneſſe of my mirth, if I anſwer you for that. If you would conjure in her, you muſt make a Circle: if conjure vp Loue in her in his true likeneſſe, hee muſt appeare naked, and blinde. Can you blame her then, being a Maid, yet roſed ouer with the Virgin Crimſon of Modeſtie, if ſhee deny the appearance of a naked blinde Boy in her naked ſeeing ſelfe? It were (my Lord) a hard Condition for a Maid to conſigne to.

King. Yet they doe winke and yield, as Loue is blind and enforces.

Burg. They are then excus'd, my Lord when they ſee not what they doe.

King. Then good my Lord, teach your Couſin to conſent winking.

Burg. I will winke on her to conſent, my Lord, if you will teach her to know my meaning: for Maides well Sommer'd, and warme kept, are like Flyes at Bartholomew-tyde, blinde, though they haue their eyes, and then they will endure handling, which before would not abide looking on.

King. This Morall tyes me over to Time, and a hot Sommer; and ſo I ſhall catch the Flye, your Couſin, in the latter end, and ſhee muſt be blinde to.

Burg. As Loue is my Lord, before it loues.

King. It is ſo: and you may, ſome of you, thanke Loue for my blindneſſe, who cannot ſee many a faire French Citie for one faire French Maid that ſtands in my way.

French King. Yes my Lord, you ſee them perſpectively: the Cities turn'd into a Maid; for they are all girdled with Maiden Walls, that Warre hath entred.

England. Shall Kate be my Wife?

France. So pleaſe you.

England. I am content, ſo the Maiden Cities you talke of, may wait on her: ſo the Maid that ſtood in the way for my Wiſh, ſhall ſhew me the way to my Will.

France. We haue conſented to all termes of reaſon.

England. It's ſo, my Lords of England?

Weſt. The King hath granted every Article:
His Daughter firſt; and in ſequele, all,
According to their firme propoſed natures.

Exet. Only

Eng. Onely he hath not yet subscribed this:
Where your Maiestie demands, That the King of France having any occasion to write for matter of Grant, shall name your Highnesse in this forme, and with this addition, in French: Nostre trescher fils Henry Roy d'Angleterre Heritiere de France: and thus in Latine; Præclarissimus filius noster Henricus Rex Anglia & Hæres Franciæ.

France. Nor this I have not Brother so deny'd,
But your request shall make me let it passe.

England. I pray you then, in loue and dearе allyance,
Let that one Article rank with the rest,
And thereupon giue me your Daughter.

France. Take her faire Sonne, and from her blood raise vp
Issue to me, that the contending Kingdomes
Of France and England, whose very shores look pale,
With emy of each others happinesse,
May cease their hatred; and this dearе Coniunction
Plant Neighbour-hood and Christian-like accord
In their sweet Bosomes: that never Warre aduance
His bleeding Sword 'twixt England and faire France.

Lords. Amen.

Kng. Now welcome Kate: and bearе me witnesse all,
That here I kisse her as my Soueraigne Queene.

Flourish.

Que. God, the best maker of all Marriages,
Combine your hearts in one, your Realmes in one:
As Man and Wife being two, are one in loue,
So be there 'twixt your Kingdomes such a Spousall,
That never may ill Office, or fell Iealousie,
Which troubles oft the Bed of blessed Marriage,
Thrust in betweene the Paiion of these Kingdomes,
To make diuorce of their incorporate League:
That English may as French, French Englishmen,
Receiue each other. God speake this Amen.

All. Amen.

Kng. Prepare we for our Marriage: on which day,
My Lord of Burgundy we'le take your Oath
And all the Peeres, for surety of our Leagues.
Then shall I sweare to Kate, and you to me,
And may our Oathes well kept and prosp'rous be.

Sound Exeunt

Enter Chorus

Thus farre with rough, and all-vnable Pen,
Our bending Author hath pursu'd the Story,
In little roome confining mightie men,
Mangling by starts the full course of their glory
Small time: but in that small, most greatly lued
This Starre of England. Fortune made his Sword;
By which, the Worlds best Garden he atchieued:
And of it left his Sonne Imperiall Lord
Henry the Sixt, in Infant Bands crown'd King
Of France and England, did this King succeed:
Whose State so many had the managing,
That they lost France, and made his England bleed:
Which oft our Stage hath showne; and for their sake,
In your faire minds let this acceptance take.

FINIS.

The first Part of Henry the Sixt.

Actus Primus Scæna Prima.

Dead March.

Enter the Funerall of King Henry the Fift, attended on by the Duke of Bedford, Regent of France; the Duke of Glester, Protector; the Duke of Exeter Warwicke, the Bishop of Winchester, and the Duke of Somerset.

Bedford.

Hung be the heauens with black, yield day to night;
Comets importing change of Times and States,
Brandish your crystall Tresses in the Skie,
And with them scourge the bad reuoking Stars,
That haue contriued vnto Harries death:
King Henry the Fift, too famous to liue long,
England ne're lost a King of so much worth.
Glost. England ne're had a King vntill his time:
Vertue he had, deserving to command,
His brandisht Sword did blinde men with his beames,
His Armes spred wider then a Dragons Wings:
His sparkling Eyes, replete with wrathfull fire,
More dazled and drouse back his Enemies,
Then mid-day Sunne, fierce bent against their faces.
What should I say? his Deeds exceed all speech:
He ne're lift vp his Hand, but conquered.
Exe. We mourne in black, why mourn we not in blood?
Henry is dead, and never shall reuiue:
Vpon a Wooden Coffin we attend;
And Death dishonourable Victorie,
We with our stately presence glorifie,
Like Captiues bound to a Triumphant Car.
What? shall we curse the Planets of Mishap,
That plotted thus our Glories earthdown?
Or shall we thinke the subtle-witted French,
Conjurers and Sorcerers, that afraid of him,
By Magick Verses haue contriu'd his end.
Winch. He was a King, blest of the King of Kings.
Vnto the French, the dreadfull Iudgement-Day
So dreadfull will not be, as was his sight.
The Battelles of the Lord of Hosts he fought:
The Churches Prayers made him so prosperous
Glost. The Church? where is it?
Had not Church-men pray'd,
His thread of Life had not so soone decay'd.
None doe you like, but an effeminate Prince,
Whom like a Schoole-boy you may ouer-awe.
Winch. Glester, what ere we like, thou art Protector,
And lookest to command the Prince and Realme
Thy Wife is proud, she holdeth thee in awe,
More then God or Religious Church-men may.
Glost. Name not Religion, for thou loa'st the Flesh,
And ne're throughout the yeare to Church thou go'st,
Except it be to pray against thy foes.
Bed. Cease, cease these Iarres, & rest your minds in peace:
Let's to the Altar: Heralds wayt on vs;
In stead of Gold, we'le offer vp our Armes,
Since Armes auayle not, now that Henry's dead,
Posterizie await for wretched yeares,
When at their Mothers moistned eyes, Babes shall suck,
Our Ile be made a Nourish of salt Teares,
And none but Women left to wayle the dead.
Henry the Fift, thy Ghost I inuocate:
Prosper this Realme, keepe it from Ciuill Broyles,
Combat with aduerse Planets in the Heauens;
A fairer more glorious Starre thy Soule will make,
Then Iulius Cæsar, or bright----.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My honourable Lords, health to you all.
Sad tidings bring I to you out of France,
Of loss, of slaughter, and discomfiture:
Guyen, Champaigne, Rheimes, Orleance,
Paris, Guysors, Poictiers, are all quite lost.
Bed. What say'st thou man, before dead Henry's Corse?
Speake softly, or the loss of those great Townes
Will make him burst his Lead, and rise from death.
Glost. Is Paris lost? is Rouen yeelded vp?
If Henry were recall'd to life again,
These news would cause him once more yeeld the Ghost.
Exe. How were they lost? what treacherie was vs'd?
Mess. No treacherie, but want of Men and Money.
Amongst the Souldiers this is mutterred,
That here you maintaine sine seuerall Factions:
And whilst a Field should be dispatcht and fought,
You are disputing of your Generals.
One would haue lingring Warres, with little cost;
Another would fly swift, but wanteth Wings:
A third thinkes, without expence at all,
By guilefull faire words, Peace may be obtayn'd.
Awake, awake, English Nobilitie,
Let not sloath dimme your Honors, new begot;
Crope are the Flower-de-Luces in your Armes
Of Englands Coat, one halfe is cut away.
Exe. Were ouer Teares wanting to this Funerall,
These Tidings would call forth her flowing Tides.
Bed. Me they concerne, Regent I am of France:
Giue me my fleeted Coat, I'le fight for France.
Away with these disgracefull wayling Robes;
Wounds will I lend the French, in stead of Eyes,
To weepe their intermissiue Miseries.

Enter to them another Messenger.

Mess. Lords view these Letters, full of bad mischance.
France is revolted from the English quite,
Except some petty Townes, of no import.
The Dolphin Charles is crowned King in Rheimes:
The Bastard of Orleance with him is joyn'd:
Reynold, Duke of Anjou, doth take his part,
The Duke of Alanson flyeth to his side. Exit.

Exe. The Dolphin crown'd King? all flye to him?
O whither shall we flye from this reproach?

Glos. We will not flye, but to our enemies throats.
Bedford, if thou be flacke. Ile fight it out.

Bed. Gloster, why doubtst thou of my forwardnesse?
An Army have I mustor'd in my thoughts,
Wherewith already France is over-run.

Enter another Messenger.

Mess. My gracious Lords, to adde to your laments,
Wherewith you now bedew King Henries hearse,
I must informe you of a dismall fight,
Betwixt the stout Lord Talbot, and the French.

Wor. What? wherein Talbot overcame, is't so?

3. Mess. O no: wherein Lord Talbot was o'rethrown:
The circumstance I le tell you more at large.
The tenth of August last, this dreadfull Lord,
Retyring from the Siege of Orleance,
Having full scarce six thousand in his troupe,
By three and twentie thousand of the French
Was round incompassed, and set vpon:
No leysure had he to enrenke his men.
He wanted Pikes to set before his Archers:
Instead whereof, sharpe Stakes pluckt out of Hedges
They pitched in the ground confusedly,
To keepe the Horsemen off, from breaking in.
More then three houres the fight continued:
Where valiant Talbot, above humane thought,
Enacted wonders with his Sword and Lance.
Hundreds he sent to Hell, and none durst stand him:
Here, there, and every where enrage'd, he slew.
The French exclaym'd, the Devill was in Armes,
All the whole Army stood agast'd on him.
His Souldiers spying his vndaunted Spirit,
A Talbot, a Talbot, cry'd out amaine,
And rusht into the Bowels of the Battaile.
Here had the Conquest fully been seal'd vp,
If Sir Iohn Fastolfe had not play'd the Coward.
He being in the Vanward, plac'd behinde,
With purpose to relieue and follow them,
Cowardly fled, not having struck one stroke.
Hence grew the generall wreck and massacre:
Enclosed were they with their Enemies.
A base Wallon, to win the Dolphins grace,
Thrust Talbot with a Speare into the Back,
Whom all France, with their chiefe assembled strength,
Durst not presume to looke once in the face.

Bedf. Is Talbot slaine then? I will slay my selfe,
For living idly here, in pompe and ease,
Whil'st such a worthy Leader, wanting ayd,
Vnto his dastard foe-men is betray'd.

3. Mess. O no, he lives, but is tooke Prisoner,
And Lord Scales with him, and Lord Hungerford:
Most of the rest slaughter'd, or tooke likewise.

Bedf. His Ransome there is none but I shall pay
Ile hale the Dolphin headlong from his Throne,
His Crowne shall be the Ransome of my friend:
Foure of their Lords Ile change for one of ours.
Farwell my Masters, to my Tasks will I.
Bonfires in France forthwith I am to make,
To keepe our great Saint Georges Feast withall.
Ten thousand Souldiers with me I will take,
Whose bloody deeds shall make all Europe quake.

3. Mess. So you had need, for Orleance is besieg'd,
The English Army is growne weake and faint:
The Earle of Salisbury craueth supply,
And hardly keepes his men from mutinie,
Since they so few, watch such a multitude.

Exe. Remember Lords your Oathes to Henry sworne:
Either to quell the Dolphin vtterly,
Or bring him in obedience to your yoake.

Bedf. I doe remember it, and here take my leave,
To goe about my preparation. Exit Bedford.

Glos. Ile to the Tower with all the hast I can,
To view th'Artillerie and Munition,
And then I will proclayme young Henry King.
Exit Gloster.

Exe. To Eltam will I, where the young King is,
Being ordayn'd his speciall Governor,
And for his safetie there Ile best deuise. Exit.

Wor. Each hath his Place and Function to attend:
I am left out; for me nothing remaines:
But long I will not be Iack out of Office.
The King from Eltam I intend to send,
And sit at chiefest Sterne of publique Weale.
Exit.

Sound a Flourish.

Enter Charles, Alanson, and Reignier, marching with Drum and Souldiers.

Charles. Mars his true moaning, even as in the Heauens,
So in the Earth, to this day is not known.
Late did he shine vpon the English side:
Now we are Victors, vpon vs he smiles.
What Townes of any moment, but we haue?
At pleasure here we lye, neere Orleance:
Otherwhiles, the famisht English, like pale Ghosts,
Faintly beliege vs one houre in a moneth.

Alan. They want their Porredge, & their fat Bul Beeues:
Either they must be dyeted like Mules,
And haue their Prouender ty'd to their mouthes,
Or pitteous they will looke, like drowned Mice.

Reignier. Let's rayse the Siege: why lie we idly here?
Talbot is taken, whom we want to feare:
Remayneth none but mad-brayn'd Salisbury,
And he may well in fretting spend his gall,
Nor men nor Money hath he to make Warre.

Charles. Sound, sound Alarum, we will rush on them.
Now for the honour of the forlorne French:
Him I forgive my death, that killeth me,
When he sees me goe back one foot, or flye. Exeunt.

Here Alarum, they are beaten back by the English, with great loss.

Enter Charles, Alanson, and Reignier.

Charles. Who ever saw the like? what men have I?
Dogges, Cowards, Dastards: I would ne're have fled,
But that they left me 'midst my Enemies.

Reignier. Salisbury is a desperate Homicide,
He fightetth as one weary of his life:
The other Lords, like Lyons wanting foode,
Doe rush vpon vs as their hungry prey.

Alanson. Proffard, a Countreyman of ours, recorde,
England all Olivers and Rowlands breed,
During the time Edward the third did raigne:
More truly now may this be verified;
For none but Samsons and Goliasses
It sendeth forth to skirmish: one to ten?
Lean raw-bon'd Rascals, who would e're suppose,
They had such courage and audacitie?
Charles. Let's leave this Towne,
For they are hayre-brayn'd Slaues,
And hunger will enforce them to be more eager:
Of old I know them; rather with their Teeth
The Walls they'le teare downe, then forsake the Siege.
Reignier. I thinke by some odde Gimmors or Deuice
Their Armes are set, like Clocks, still to strike on;
Else no're could they hold out so as they doe:
By my consent, wee'le even let them alone.
Alanson. Be it so.

Enter the Bastard of Orleance.

Bastard. Where's the Prince Dolphin? I haue newes for him.
Dolph. Bastard of Orleance, thrice welcome to vs.
Bast. Me thinks your looks are sad, your cheer appal'd.
Hath the late ouerthrow wrought this offence?
Be not dismay'd, for succour is at hand:
A holy Maid hither with me I bring,
Which by a Vision sent to her from Heauen,
Ordayned is to raysé this tedious Siege,
And driue the English forth the bounds of France:
The spirit of deepe Prophecie she hath,
Exceeding the nine Sibyls of old Rome:
What's past, and what's to come, she can descry.
Speake, shall I call her in? believe my words,
For they are certaine, and vnfallible.
Dolph. Goe call her in: but first, to try her skill,
Reignier stand thou as Dolphin in my place;
Question her prouidly, let thy Looke be sterne,
By this meanes shall we sound what skill she hath.

Enter Ioane Pucel.

Reignier. Faire Maid, is't thou wilt doe these wondrous feats?
Pucel. Reignier, is't thou that thinkest to beguile me?
Where is the Dolphin? Come, come from behinde,
I know thee well, though never seene before.
Be not amaz'd, there's nothing hid from me;
In priuate will I talke with thee apart:
Stand back you Lords, and giue vs leaue a while.
Reignier. She takes vpon her bravely at first doth.
Pucel. Dolphin, I am by birth a Shepheards Daughter,
My wit vntrayn'd in any kind of Art:
Heauen and our Lady gracious hath it pleas'd
To shine on my contemptible estate.
Loe, whilest I wayted on my tender Lambes,
And to Sunnes parching heat display'd my cheekes,
Gods Mother deigned to appeare to me,
And in a Vision full of Maiestie,
Will'd me to leaue my base Vocation,
And free my Countrey from Calamitie:
Her ayde she promis'd, and assur'd successe.
In compleat Glory thee reveal'd her selfe:
And whereas I was black and swart before,
With those cleare Rayes, which thee infus'd on me,
That beautie am I blest with, which you may see.
Aske me what question thou canst possible,
And I will answer vnpremeditated:
My Courage try by Combat, if thou dar'st,
And thou shalt finde that I exceed my Sex.
Resolue on this, thou shalt be fortunate,
If thou receiue me for thy Warlike Mate.
Dolph. Thou hast astonisht me with thy high termes:
Only this proofe Ile of thy Valour make,
In single Combat thou shalt buckle with me;
And if thou vanquishest, thy words are true,
Otherwise I renounce all confidence.
Pucel. I am prepar'd: here is my keene-edg'd Sword,
Deckt with fine Flowers-de-Luces on each side,
The which at Touraine, in S. Katherines Church-yard,
Out of a great deale of old Iron, I chose forth.
Dolph. Then come a Gods name, I feare no woman.
Pucel. And while I liue, Ile ne're flye from a man.
Here they fight, and Ioane de Pucel conquers.
Dolph. Stay, stay thy hands, thou art an Amazon,
And fightest with the Sword of Deborra.
Pucel. Christs Mother helpes me, else I were too weake.
Dolph. Who e're helpe thee, 'tis thou that must help me:
Impatiently I burne with thy desire,
My heart and hands thou hast at once subdu'd.
Excellent Pucel, if thy name be so,
Let me thy seruant, and not Soueraigne be,
'Tis the French Dolphin sueth to thee thus.
Pucel. I must not yeeld to any rights of Loue,
For my Profession's sacred from above:
When I haue chased all thy Foes from hence,
Then will I thinke vpon a recompence.
Dolph. Meane time looke gracious on thy prostrate Thrall.
Reignier. My Lord me thinkes is very long in talke.
Alanson. Doubtlesse he shriues this woman to her smock,
Else no're could he so long protract his speech.
Reignier. Shall wee disturbe him, since hee keepes no meane?
Alan. He may meane more then we poor men do know,
These women are shrewd tempters with their tongues.
Reignier. My Lord, where are you? what decide you on?
Shall we giue o're Orleance, or no?
Pucel. Why no, I say: distrestfull Recreants,
Fight till the last gaspe: Ile be your guard.
Dolph. What she sayes, Ile confirme: we'le fight it out.
Pucel. Assign'd am I to be the English Scourge.
This night the Siege assuredly Ile raysé:
Expect Saint Martins Summer, Halcyons dayes,
Since I haue entred into these Warres.
Glory is like a Circle in the Water,
Which never ceaseth to enlarge itselfe,
Till by broad spreading, it disperse to nought.
With Henries death, the English Circle ends,
Dispersed are the glories it included:
Now am I like that proud insulting Ship,
Which Cæsar and his fortune bare at once.
Dolph. Was Mahomet inspired with a Doue?
Thou with an Eagle art inspired then.
Helen, the Mother of Great Constantine,
Nor yet S. Philips daughters were like thee.
Bright Starre of Venus, fallne downe on the Earth,
How may I reuerently worship thee enough?
Alanson. Leaue off delayes, and let vs raysé the Siege.

Reignier. Wo-

Reignier. Woman, do what thou canst to save our honors,
Drive them from Orleance, and be immortalz'd.
Dolph. Presently we'le try: come, let's away about it,
No Prophet will I trust, if thee prove false. Exeunt.

Enter Gloster with his Serving-men.

Glost. I am come to survey the Tower this day;
Since Henries death, I feare there is Conveyance:
Where be these Warders, that they wait not here?
Open the Gates, 'tis Gloster that calls.
1. Warder. Who's there, that knocks so imperiously?
Glost. 1. Man. It is the Noble Duke of Gloster.
2. Warder. Who ere he be, you may not be let in.
1. Man. Villaines, answer you so the Lord Protector?
1. Warder. The Lord protect him, so we answer him,
We doe no otherwise than wee are will'd.
Glost. Who willed you? or whose will stands but mine?
There's none Protector of the Realme, but I:
Breake vp the Gates, Ile be your warrantize;
Shall I be flouted thus by dunghill Groomes?

Gloster's men rush at the Tower Gates, and Woodvile the Lieutenant speaks within.

Woodville. What noyse is this? what Traytors haue wee here?
Glost. Lieutenant, is it you whose voyce I heare?
Open the Gates, here's Gloster that would enter.
Woodvile. Haue patience Noble Duke, I may not open,
The Cardinall of Winchester forbids:
From him I haue expresse commandement,
That thou nor none of thine shall be let in.
Glost. Faint-hearted Woodvile, prize me'll him fore me?
Arrogant Winchester, that haughtie Prelate,
Whom Henry our late Soueraigne ne're could brooke?
Thou art no friend to God, or to the King:
Open the Gates, or Ile shut thee out shortly.
Seruingmen. Open the Gates vnto the Lord Protector,
Or we'le burst them open, if that you come not quickly.

Enter to the Protector at the Tower Gates Winchester and his men in Tawny Coates.

Winchester. How now ambitious Vmphrey, what meanes this?
Glost. Piel'd Priest, doe'st thou command me to be shut out?
Winch. I doe, thou most vsurping Proditor,
And not Protector of the King or Realme.
Glost. Stand back thou manifest Conspirator,
Thou that contriued'st to murther our dead Lord,
Thou that giu'st Whores Indulgences to sinne,
Ile canuas thee in thy broad Cardinalls Hat,
If thou proceed in this thy insolence.
Winch. Nay, stand thou back, I will not budge a foot:
This be Damascus, be thou cursed Cain,
To slay thy Brother Abel, if thou wilt.
Glost. I will not slay thee, but Ile driue thee back:
Thy Scarlet Robes, as a Childs bearing Cloth,
Ile vse, to carry thee out of this place.
Winch. Doe what thou dar'st, I beard thee to thy face.
Glost. What? am I dar'd, and bearded to my face?
Draw men, for all this priuiledged place,
Blew Coats to Tawny Coats. Priest, beware your Beard,
I meane to tugge it, and to cuffe you soundly.
Vnder my feet I stampe thy Cardinalls Hat:
In spight of Pope, or dignities of Church,
Here by the Cheeks Ile drag thee vp and downe.
Winch. Gloster, thou wilt answere this before the Pope.
Glost. Winchester Goose, I cry, a Rope, a Rope.
Now beat them hence, why doe you let them stay?
Thee Ile chase hence, thou Wolfe in Sheepes array.
Out Tawney-Coates, out Scarlet Hypocrite.

Here Gloster's men beat out the Cardinalls men, and enter in the hurly-burly the Maior of London, and his Officers.

Maior. Fye Lords that you being supreme Magistrates,
Thus contumeliously should breake the Peace.
Glost. Peace Maior, thou know'st little of my wrongs:
Here's Beauford, that regards not God nor King,
Hath here distroyn'd the Tower to his vse.
Winch. Here's Gloster, a Foe to Citizens,
One that still motions Warre, and neuer Peace,
O're-charging your free Purses with large Fines;
That seekes to ouerthrow Religion,
Because he is Protector of the Realme;
And would haue Armour here out of the Tower,
To Crowne himselfe King, and suppresse the Prince.
Glost. I will not answer thee with words, but blowes.

Here they skirmish again.

Maior. Naught rests for me, in this tumultuous strife,
But to make open Proclamation.
Come Officer, as lowd as e're thou canst, cry:
All manner of men, assembled here in Armes this day, against Gods Peace and the Kings, we charge and command you, in his Highnesse Name, to repaire to your seuerall dwelling places, and not to weare, beaire, or vse any Sword, Weapon, or Dagger henceforward, vpon paine of death.
Glost. Cardinall, Ile be no breaker of the Law:
But we shall meet, and breake our minds at large.
Winch. Gloster, we'le meet to thy cost, be sure:
Thy heart-blood I will haue for this dayes worke.
Maior. Ile call for Clubs, if you will not away:
This Cardinall's more haughtie then the Deuill.
Glost. Maior farewell: thou doo'st but what thou may'st.
Winch. Abhominable Gloster, guard thy Head,
For I intend to haue it ere long. Exeunt.
Maior. See the Coast clear'd, and then we will depart
Good God, these Nobles should such stomacks beare,
I my selfe fight not once in fortie yeere. Exeunt.

Enter the Master Gunner of Orleance, and his Boy.

M. Gunner. Sirrha, thou know'st how Orleance is besieg'd,
And how the English haue the Suburbs wonne.
Boy. Father I know, and oft haue shot at them,
How e're vnfortunate, I miss'd my ayme.
M. Gunner. But now thou shalt not. Be thou rul'd by me:
Chiefe Master Gunner am I of this Towne,
Something I must doe to procure me grace:
The Princes espyals haue informed me,
How the English, in the Suburbs close entrenche,
Went though a secret Grate of Iron Barres,
In yonder Tower, to ouer-peere the Citie,
And thence discouer, how with most aduantage
They may vex vs with Shot or with Assault.
To intercept this inconuenience,
A Peece of Ordnance 'gainst it I haue plac'd,

And

And even these three dayes haue I watcht,
If I could see them. Now doe thou watch,
For I can stay no longer.
If thou spy'st any, runne and bring me word,
And thou shalt finde me at the Gouernors. Exit.

Boy. Father, I warrant you, take you no care,
Ile neuer trouble you, if I may spye them. Exit.

Enter Salisbury and Talbot on the Turrets, with others.

Salisb. Talbot, my life, my loy, again return'd?
How wert thou handled, being Prisoner?
Or by what meanes got's thou to be releas'd?
Discourse I prethee on this Turrets top.

Talbot. The Earle of Bedford had a Prisoner,
Call'd the braue Lord Ponton de Santrayle,
For him was I exchang'd, and ransom'd,
But with a baser man of Armes by farre.
Once in contempt they would haue barter'd me:
Which I disdaining, scorn'd, and craued death,
Rather then I would be so pil'd esteem'd:
In fine, redeem'd I was as I desir'd.
But O, the treacherous Falstaffe wounds my heart,
Whom with my bare fists I would execute,
If I now had him brought into my power.

Salisb. Yet tell'st thou not, how thou wert entertain'd.

Tal. With scoffes and scornes, and contumelious taunts,
In open Market-place produc't they me,
To be a poblique spectacle to all:
Here, say'd they, is the Terror of the French,
The Scare-Crow that affrights our Children so.
Then broke I from the Officers that led me,
And with my nayles digg'd stones out of the ground,
To hurle at the beholders of my shame.
My grisly countenance made others fly,
None durst come neere, for feare of suddaine death.
In Iron Walls they deem'd me not secure:
So great feare of my Name 'mongst them were spread,
That they suppos'd I could rend Barres of Steele,
And spurne in pieces Posts of Adamant.
Wherefore a guard of chosen Shot I had,
That walkt about me every Minute while:
And if I did but stirre out of my Bed,
Ready they were to shoot me to the heart.

Enter the Boy with a Linstock.

Salisb. I grieue to heare what torments you endur'd,
But we will be reuenge'd sufficiently.
Now it is Supper time in Orleance:
Here, through this Grate, I count each one,
And view the Frenchmen how they fortifie:
Let vs looke in, the sight will much delight thee:
Sir Thomas Gargrave, and Sir William Glansdale,
Let me haue your expresse opinions,
Where is best place to make our Batt'ry next?

Gargrave. I thinke at the North Gate, for there stands Lords.

Glansdale. And I heere, at the Bulwarke of the Bridge.

Talb. For ought I see, this Citie must be fortifie,
Or with light Skirmishes enfeebled. Here they shot, and Salisbury falls downe.

Salisb. O Lord haue mercy on vs, wretched sinners.

Garg. O Lord haue mercy on me, vrofull man.

Talb. What chance is this, that suddenly hath cross'd vs?
Speake Salisbury; at least, if thou canst, speake:
How far'st thou, Mirror of all Martiall men?
One of thy Eyes, and thy Cheeke side struck off?
Accursed Tower, accursed fatall Hand,
That hath countrin'd this woefull Tragedie.
In thirteene Battailes, Salisbury o'recame:
Henry the Fift he first trayn'd to the Warres,
Whil'st any Trumpe did sound, or Drum struck vp,
His Sword did ne're leaue striking in the field.
Yet liu'st thou Salisbury? though thy speech doth fayle,
One Eye thou hast to looke to Heauen for grace.
The Sonne with one Eye viewsth all the World,
Heauen be thou gracious to none alive,
If Salisbury wants mercy at thy hands.
Beare hence his Body, I will helpe to bury it.
Sir Thomas Gargrave, hast thou any life?
Speake vnto Talbot, nay, looke vp to him.
Salisbury cheere thy Spirit with this comfort,
Thou shalt not dye whiles——
He beckons with his hand, and smiles on me:
As who should say, When I am dead and gone,
Remember to auenge me on the French.
Plantagenet I will, and like thee,
Play on the Lute, beholding the Townes burne:
Wretched shall France be onely in my Name.

Here an Alarum, and a Thunder and Lightning.

What stirre is this? what tumult's in the Heauens?
Whence commeth this Alarum, and the noyse?

Enter a Messenger.

Mes. My Lord, my Lord, the French haue gather'd head:
The Dolphin, with one Ioane de Pucel joyn'd,
A holy Prophetesse, new risen vp,
Is come with a great Power, to rayse the Siege.

Here Salisbury lifteth himselfe vp, and groanes.

Talb. Heare, heare, how dying Salisbury doth groane
It irkes his heart he cannot be reuenge'd.
Frenchmen, Ile be a Salisbury to you.
Pucel or Pusel, Dolphin or Dog-fish,
Your hearts Ile stampe out wi'my Horses heeles,
And make a Quagmire of your mingled brains.
Conuey we Salisbury into his tent,
And then wee'le try what these dastard Frenchmen dare.
Alarum. Exeunt.

Here an Alarum again, and Talbot pursueth the Dolphin, and drieth him: Then enter Ioane de Pucel, driuing Englishmen before her. Then enter Talbot.

Talb. Where is my strength, my valour, and my force?
Our English Troupes retyre, I cannot stay them,
A Woman clad in Armour chaseth them.

Enter Pucel.

Here, here shee comes. Ile haue a bout with thee:
Deuill, or Deuils Dam, Ile coniure thee:
Blood will I draw on thee, thou art a Witch,
And straightway give thy Soule to him thou seru'st.

Pucel. Come, come, 'tis onely I that must disgrace thee.

Here they fight.

Talb. Heauens, can you suffer Hell so to preuayle?
My breast Ile burst with straining of my courage,
And from my shoulders crack my Armes asunder,
But I will chastise this high-minded Strumpet.

They fight again.

Pucel. Talbot farwell, my hour is not yet come,
I must goe Victuall Orleance forthwith:

A short Alarum: then enter the Towne with Souldiers.

O're-take me if thou canst, I scorne thy strength.
Goe, goe, cheare vp thy hungry-starued men,
Helpe Salisbury to make his Testament,
This Day is ours, as many more shall be. Exu.
Tall. My thoughts are whirled like a Potters Wheele,
I know not where I am, nor what I doe:
A Witch by feare, not force, like Hannibal,
Drioes back our troupes, and conquers as she lists:
So Bees with smoake, and Doues with noysome stench,
Are from their Hyues and Houses driuen away.
They call'd vs, for our fierceneſſe, English Dogges,
Now like to Whelpes, we crying runne away.
A short Alarum.
Hearke Countreymen, either renew the fight,
Or tearre the Lyons out of Englands Coat;
Renounce your Soyle, giue Sheepe in Lyons stead:
Sheepe run not halfe so treacherous from the Wolfe,
Or Horse or Oxen from the Leopard,
As you flye from your oft-subdued slaues.
Alarum. Here another Skirmish.
It will not be, retyre into your Trenches:
You all consented vnto Salisburies death,
For none would strike a stroke in his reuenge.
Pucell is entered into Orleance,
In spight of vs, or ought that we could doe
O would I were to dye with Salisbury,
The shame hereof, will make me hide my head.
Exit Talbot.
Alarum, Retreat, Flourish.

Enter on the Walls, Pucell, Dolphin, Reignier, Alanson, and Souldiers.

Pucell. Adeauance our waning Colours on the Walls,
Rescu'd is Orleance from the English.
Thus Ioane de Pucell hath perform'd her word.
Dolph. Diuinest Creature, Astræa's Daughter,
How shall I honour thee for this successe?
Thy promises are like Adonis Garden,
That one day bloom'd, and fruitfull were the next.
France, triumph in thy glorious Prophetesse,
Recouer'd in the Towne of Orleance,
More blessed hap did ne're befall our State.
Reignier. Why ring not out the Bells aloud,
Throughout the Towne?
Dolphin commaud the Citizens make Bonfires,
And feast and banquet in the open streets,
To celebrate the ioy that God hath giuen vs.
Alanso. All France will be replent with mirth and ioy,
When they shall heare how we haue play'd the men.
Dolph. 'Tis Ioane, not we, by whom the day is wonne:
For which, I will diuide my Crowne with her,
And all the Priests and Fryers in my Realme,
Shall in procession sing her endlesse praise.
A stately Pyramis to her I'le reare,
Then Rhodophis or Memphis euer was.
In memorie of her, when she is dead,
Her Ashes, in an Vrne more precious
Then the rich-iewel'd Coffer of Darius,
Transported, shall be at high Festiuals
Before the Kings and Queenes of France.
No longer on Saint Denis will we cry,
But Ioane de Pucell shall be France's Saint.
Come in, and let vs Banquet Royally,
After this Golden Day of Victorie.
Flourish. Exeunt.

Actus Secundus. Scena Prima.

Enter a Sergeant of a Band, with two Sentinels.

Ser. Sirs, take your places, and be vigilant:
If any noyse or Souldier you perceiue
Neere to the walles, by some apparant signe
Let vs haue knowledge at the Court of Guard.
Sent. Sergeant you shall. Thus are poore Seruitors
(When others sleepe vpon their quiet beds)
Constrain'd to watch in darknesse, raine, and cold.

Enter Talbot, Bedford, and Burgundy, with scaling Ladders: Their Drummes beating a Dead March.

Tal. Lord Regent, and redoubted Burgundy,
By whose approach, the Regions of Artois,
Walon, and Picardy, are friends to vs:
This happy night, the Frenchmen are secure,
Hauing all day carowsd and banquetted,
Embrace we then this opportunitie,
As fitting best to quittance their deceiue,
Contriu'd by Art, and baleful Sorcerie.
Bed. Coward of France, how much he wrongs his fame,
Dispairing of his owne armes fortitude,
To ioyne with Witches, and the helpe of Hell.
Bur. Traitors haue never other company.
But what's that Pucell whom they tearme so pure?
Tal. A Maid, they say.
Bed. A Maid? And be so martiall?
Bur. Pray God she proue not masculine ere long:
If vnderneath the Standard of the French
She carry Armour, as she hath begun.
Tal. Well, let them practise and conuerse with spirits.
God is our Fortresse, in whose conquering name
Let vs resolue to scale their flinty bulwarkes.
Bed. Ascend brauе Talbot, we will follow thee.
Tal. Not altogether: Better farre I guesse,
That we do make our entrance seuerall wayes:
That if it chance the one of vs do faile,
The other yet may rise against their force.
Bed. Agreed; I'le to yond corner.
Bur. And I to this.
Tal. And heere will Talbot mount, or make his graue
Now Salisbury, for thee and for the right
Of English Henry, shall this night appeare
How much in duty, I am bound to both.
Sent. Arme, arme, the enemy doth make assault.
Cry, S. George, A Talbot.

The French leape ouer the walles in their shirts. Enter seuerall ways, Bedford, Alanson, Reignier, half ready, and half vnready.

Alan. How now my Lords? what all vnready so?
Bast. Vnready? I and glad we scap'd so well.
Reig. Twas time (I trow) to wake and leaue our beds,
Hearing Alarums at our Chamber doores.
Alan. Of all exploits since first I follow'd Armes,
Nere heard I of a warlike enterprise

More

More venturous, or desperate then this.

Bast. I thinke this Talbot be a Friend of Hell.

Reg. If not of Hell, the Heauens sure fauour him.

Alanf. Here cometh Charles, I marrell how he sped?

Enter Charles and Iaume.

Bast. Tut, holy Iaume was his defensiue Guard.

Charl. Is this thy cunning, thou deceitfull Dame?
Didst thou at first, to flatter vs withall,
Make vs partakers of a little gayne,
That now our losse might be ten times so much?

Iaume. Wherefore is Charles impatient with his friend?
At all times will you haue my Power alike?
Sleeping or waking, must I still preuayle,
Or will you blame and lay the fault on me?
Improuident Souldiors, had your Watch been good,
This sudden Mischiefe neuer could haue falne.

Charl. Duke of Alanson, this was your defaule,
That being Captaine of the Watch to Night,
Did looke no better to that weightie Charge.

Alanf. Had all your Quarters been so safely kept,
As that whereof I had the gouernment,
We had not beene thus shamefully surprie'd.

Bast. Mine was secure.

Reg. And so was mine, my Lord.

Charl. And for my selfe, most part of all this Night
Within her Quarter, and mine owne Precinct,
I was imploy'd in passing to and fro,
About relieuing of the Centinels.
Then how, or which way, should they first breake in?

Iaume. Question (my Lords) no further of the case,
How or which way; 'tis sure they found some place,
But weakely guarded, where the breach was made:
And now there rests no other shift but this,
To gather our Souldiors, scatter'd and perec't,
And lay new Plat-formes to endamage them.

Exeunt.

Alarum. Enter a Souldier, crying, a Talbot, a Talbot: they fly, leauing their Clothes behind.

Sould. Ile be so bold to take what they haue left:
The Cry of Talbot serues me for a Sword,
For I haue loaden me with many Spoyles,
Vsing no other Weapon but his Name. Exit.

Enter Talbot, Bedford, Burgundie.

Bedf. The Day begins to breake, and Night is fled,
Whose pitchy Mantle ouer-vey'l d the Earth.
Here sound Retreat, and cease our hot pursuit. Retreat.

Talb. Bring forth the Body of old Salisbury,
And here aduance it in the Market-Place,
The middle Centure of this cursed Towne.
Now haue I pay'd my Vow vnto his Soulet
For every drop of blood was drawne from him,
There hath at least fiue Frenchmen dyed to night,
And that hereafter Ages may behold
What ruine happened in reuenge of him,
Within their chiefest Temple Ile erect
A Tombe, wherein his Corps shall be intern'd:
Vpon the which, that every one may reade,
Shall be engrau'd the sacke of Orleance,
The treacherous manner of his mournefull death,
And what a terror he had beene to France.
But Lords, in all our bloudy Massacre,
I muse we met not with the Dolphins Grace,
His new-come Champion, vertuous Ioane of Acre,
Nor any of his false Confederates.

Bedf. Tis thought Lord Talbot, when the fight began,
Rows'd on the sudden from their drowsie Beds,
They did amongst the troupes of armed men,
Leape ore the Walls for refuge in the field.

Burg. My selfe, as farre as I could well discerne,
For smoake and dusky vapours of the night,
Am sure I scar'd the Dolphin and his Trull,
When Arme in Arme they both came swiftly running,
Like to a payre of loving Turtle-Doues,
That could not liue asunder day or night.
After that things are set in order here,
We'le follow them with all the power we haue.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. All hayle, my Lords: which of this Princely traynne
Call ye the Warlike Talbot, for his Acts
So much applauded through the Realme of France?

Talb. Here is the Talbot, who would speak with him?

Mess. The vertuous Lady, Countesse of Ouergne,
With modestie admiring thy Renowne,
By me entreats (great Lord) thou would'st vouchsafe
To visit her poore Castle where she lyes,
That she may boast she hath beheld the man,
Whose glory fills the World with loud report.

Burg. Is it euen so? Nay, then I see our Warres
Will turne vnto a peaceful Comick sport,
When Ladyes craue to be encountred with.
You may not (my Lord) despise her gentle suit.

Talb. Ne're trust me then: for when a World of men
Could not preuayle with all their Oratorie,
Yet hath a Woman kindnesse ouer-rul'd:
And therefore tell her, I returne great thanks,
And in submission will attend on her.
Will not your Honors beare me company?

Bedf. No, truly, 'tis more then manners will.
And I haue heard it sayd, Vnbidden Guests
Are often welcommest when they are gone.

Talb. Well then, alone (since there's no remedie)
I meane to proue this Ladyes courtesie.
Come hither Captaine, you perceiue my minde.

whispers.

Cape. I doe my Lord, and meane accordingly.

Exeunt.

Enter Countesse.

Count. Porter, remember what I gaue in charge,
And when you haue done so, bring the Keyes to me.

Port. Madame, I will. Exit.

Count. The Plot is layd, if all things fall out right,
I shall as famous be by this exploit,
As Scythian Tomyris by Cyrus death.
Great is the rumour of this dreadfull Knight,
And his achieuements of no lesse account:
Faine would mine eyes be witnesse with mine eares,
To giue their censure of these rare reports.

Enter Messenger and Talbot.

Mess. Madame, according as your Ladyship desir'd,
By Message crau'd, so is Lord Talbot come.

Count. And he is welcome: what? is this the man?

Mess. Madame, it is.

Count. Is this the Scourge of France?
Is this the Talbot, so much fear'd abroad?
That with his Name the Mothers still their Babes?
I see Report is fabulous and false.

I

I thought I should haue seene some Hercules,
A second Hector, for his grim aspect.
And large proportion of his strong knit Limbes.
Alas, this is a Child, a silly Dwarfe:
It cannot be, this weake and writhled shrimpe
Should strike such terror to his Enemies.

Talb. Madame, I haue beene bold to trouble you:
But since your Ladyship is not at leysure,
I'le sort some other time to visit you.

Countess. What meanes he now?
Goe aske him, whither he goes?

Mess. Say my Lord Talbot, for my Lady craues,
To know the cause of your abrupt departure?

Talb. Marry, for that shee's in a wrong beleefe,
I goe to certifie her Talbot's here.

Enter Porter with Keyes.

Countess. If thou be he, then art thou Prisoner.

Talb. Prisoner? to whom?

Countess. To me, blood-thirstie Lord:
And for that cause I trayn'd thee to my House.
Long time thy shadow hath been thrall to me,
For in my Gallery thy Picture hangs:
But now the substance shall endure the like,
And I will chayne these Legges and Armes of thine,
That hast by Tyrannie these many yeeres
Wasted our Countrey, slaine our Citizens,
And sent our Sonnes and Husbands captiuate.

Talb. Ha, ha, ha.

Countess. Laughest thou Wretch?
Thy mirth shall turne to moane.

Talb. I laugh to see your Ladyship so fond,
To thinke, that you haue ought but Talbots shadow,
Whereon to practise your seueritie.

Countess. Why art not thou the man?

Talb. I am indeede.

Countess. Then haue I substance too.

Talb. No, no, I am but shadow of my selfe:
You are deceiu'd, my substance is not here;
For what you see, is but the smallest part,
And least proportion of Humanitie:
I tell you Madame, were the whole Frame here,
It is of such a spacious lofty pitch,
Your Roofe were not sufficient to contayn't.

Countess. This is a Riddling Merchant for the nonce,
He will be here, and yet he is not here:
How can these contrarieties agree?

Talb. That will I shew you presently.

Winds his Horne, Drummes strike vp, a Peale of Ordnance: Enter Souldiers.

How say you Madame? are you now perswaded,
That Talbot is but shadow of himselfe?
These are his substance, sinewes, armes, and strength,
With which he yoaketh your rebellious Necks,
Raseth your Cities, and subuerts your Townes,
And in a moment makes them desolate.

Countess. Victorious Talbot, pardon my abuse,
I finde thou art no lesse then Fame hath bruited,
And more then may be gathered by thy shape.
Let my presumption not prouoke thy wrath,
For I am sorry, that with reuerence
I did not entertaine thee as thou art.

Talb. Be not dismay'd, faire Lady, nor misconster
The minde of Talbot, as you did mistake
The outward composition of his body.
What you haue done, hath not offended me:
Nor other satisfaction doe I crauc,
But onely with your patience, that we may
Taste of your Wine, and see what Cates you haue,
For Souldiers stomacks alwayes serue them well.

Countess. With all my heart, and thinke me honored,
To feast so great a Warrior in my House. Exeunt.

Enter Richard Plantagenet, Warwick, Somerset, Poole, and others.

Yorke. Great Lords and Gentlemen,
What meanes this silence?
Dare no man answer in a Case of Truth?

Suff. Within the Temple Hall we were too loud,
The Garden here is more conuenient.

Yorke. Then say at once, if I maintain'd the Truth:
Or else was wrangling Somerset in th'errot?

Suff. Faith I haue beene a Truant in the Law,
And never yet could frame my will to it,
And therefore frame the Law vnto my will.

Som. Iudge you, my Lord of Warwicke, then betweene vs.

Warw. Between two Hawks, which flyes the higher pitch,
Between two Dogs, which hath the deeper mouth,
Between two Blades, which beares the better temper,
Between two Horses, which doth beare him best,
Between two Girles, which hath the merryest eye,
I haue perhaps some shallow spirit of Iudgement:
But in these nice sharpe Quillets of the Law,
Good faith I am no wiser then a Daw.

Yorke. Tut, tut, here is a mannerly forbearance:
The truth appeares so naked on my side,
That any purblind eye may find it out.

Som. And on my side it is so well apparell'd,
So cleare, so shining, and so euident,
That it will glimmer through a blind-mans eye.

Yorke. Since you are tongue-ty'd, and so loth to speake,
In dumbe significants proclayme your thoughts:
Let him that is a true-borne Gentleman,
And stands vpon the honor of his birth,
If he suppose that I haue pleaded truth,
From off this Bryer pluck a white Rose with me.

Som. Let him that is no Coward, nor no Flatterer,
But dare maintaine the partie of the truth,
Pluck a red Rose from off this Thorne with me.

War. I loue no Colours: and without all colour
Of base insinuating flatterie,
I pluck this white Rose with Plantagenet.

Suff. I pluck this red Rose, with young Somerset,
And say withall, I thinke he held the right.

Vernon. Stay Lords and Gentlemen, and pluck no more
Till you conclude, that he vpon whose side
The fewest Roses are crept from the Tree,
Shall yeeld the other in the right opinion.

Som. Good Master Vernon, it is well obiected:
If I haue fewest, I subscribe in silence.

Yorke. And I.

Vernon. Then for the truth, and plainnesse of the Case,
I pluck this pale and Maiden Blossome here,
Giuing my Verdict on the white Rose side.

Som. Prick not your finger as you pluck it off,
Least bleeding, you doe paint the white Rose red,
And fall on my side so against your will.

Vernon. If I, my Lord, for my opinion bleed,
Opinion shall be Surgeon to my hurt,
And keepe me on the side where still I am.

Som. Well, well, come on, who else?

Lawyer. Va-

Lawyer. Vnlesse my Studie and my Bookes be false,
The argument you held, was wrong in you;
In signe whereof, I pluck a white Rose too.
Torky. Now Somerset, where is your argument?
Som. Here in my Scabbard, meditating, that Shall dye your white Rose in a bloody red.
York. Meane time your cheeks do counterfeit our Roses:
For pale they looke with feare, as witnessing
The truth on our side.
Som. No Plantagenet:
'Tis not for feare, but anger, that thy cheekes
Blush for pure shame, to counterfeit our Roses,
And yet thy tongue will not confesse thy error.
Torky. Hath not thy Rose a Canker, Somerset?
Som. Hath not thy Rose a Thorne, Plantagenet?
Torky. I, sharpe and pierciug to maintaine his truth,
Whiles thy consuming Canker eates his falsehood.
Som. Well, Ile find friends to weare my bleeding Roses,
That shall maintaine what I have said is true,
Where false Plantagenet dare not be seene.
Torky. Now by this Maiden Blossome in my hand,
I scorne thee and thy fashion, peevish Boy.
Suff. Turne not thy scornes this wayes, Plantagenet.
Torky. Prowd Poole, I will, and scorne both him and thee.
Suff. Ile turne my part thereof into thy throat.
Som. Away, away, good William de la Poole,
We grace the Yeoman, by conversing with him.
Warw. Now by Gods will thou wrong'st him, Somerset:
His Grandfather was Lyonel Duke of Clarence,
Third Sonne to the third Edward King of England:
Spring Crestless Yeomen from so deepe a Root?
Torky. He beares him on the place's Priviledge,
Or durst not for his craven heart say thus.
Som. By him that made me, Ile maintaine my words
On any Plot of Ground in Christendome.
Was not thy Father, Richard, Earle of Cambridge,
For Treason executed in our late Kings dayes?
And by his Treason, stand'st not thou attainted,
Corrupted, and exempt from ancient Gentry?
His Trespas yet lives guilte in thy blood,
And till thou be restor'd, thou art a Yeoman.
Torky. My Father was attached, not attainted,
Condemn'dso dye for Treason, but no Traytor;
And that Ile prove on better men than Somerset,
Were growing time once ripened to my will.
For your partaker Poole, and you your selfe,
Ile note you in my Booke of Memorie,
To scourge you for this apprehension:
Looke to it well, and say you are well warn'd.
Som. Ah, thou shalt finde vs ready for thee still:
And know vs by these Colours for thy Foes,
For these my friends in spight of thee shall weare.
Torky. And by my Soule, this pale and angry Rose,
As Cognizance of my blood-drinking hate,
Will I for ever, and my Faction weare,
Vntill it wither with me to my Grave,
Or flourish to the height of my Degree.
Suff. Goe forward, and be choak'd with thy ambition:
And so farewell, vntill I meet thee next. Exit.
Som. Have with thee Poole: Farwell ambitious Richard. Exit.
Torky. How I am brav'd, and must perforce endure it?
Warw. This blot that they object against your House,
Shall be wipt out in the next Parliament,
Call'd for the Truce of Winchester and Glouester:
And if thou be not then crowned Torky,
I will not live to be accounted Warwicke.
Meane time, in signe of my love to thee,
Against proud Somerset, and William Poole,
Will I upon thy party weare this Rose.
And here I prophecie: this brawle to day,
Growne to this faction in the Temple Garden,
Shall send betweene the Red-Rose and the White,
A thousand Soules to Death and deadly Night.
Torky. Good Master Vernon, I am bound to you,
That you on my behalfe would pluck a Flower.
Ver. In your behalfe still will I weare the same.
Lawyer. And so will I.
Torky. Thankes gentle.
Come, let vs feaste to Dinner: I dare say,
This Quarrell will drinke Blood another day.
Exeunt.

Enter Mortimer, brought in a Chayre, and Lyeters.

Mort. Kind Keepers of my weake decaying Age,
Let dying Mortimer here rest himselfe.
Even like a man new haled from the Wrack,
So fare my Limbes with long imprisonment:
And these grey Locks, the Pursuivants of death,
Nestor-like aged, in an Age of Care,
Argue the end of Edmund Mortimer.
These Eyes, like Lampes, whose wasting Oyle is spent,
Waxe dimme, as drawing to their Exigent.
Weake Shoulders, over-borne with burthening Griefe,
And pith-lesse Armes, like to a withered Vine,
That droopes his sapp-lesse Branches to the ground.
Yet are these Feet, whose strength-lesse stay is numme,
(Vnable to support this Lampe of Clay)
Swift-winged with desire to get a Grave,
As witing I no other comfort have.
But tell me, Keeper, will my Nephew come?
Keeper. Richard Plantagenet, my Lord, will come:
We sent vnto the Temple, vnto his Chamber,
And answer was return'd, that he will come.
Mort. Enough: my Soule shall then be satisfied.
Poore Gentleman, his wrong doth equall mine.
Since Henry Monmouth first began to reigne,
Before whose Glory I was great in Armes,
This loathsome sequestration have I had;
And even since then, hath Richard beene obscur'd,
Deprin'd of Honour and Inheritance.
But now, the Arbitrator of Despaires,
Just Death, kinde Vmpire of mens miseries,
With sweet enlargement doth dismisse me hence:
I would his troubles likewise were expir'd,
That so he might recover what was lost.

Enter Richard.

Keeper. My Lord, your loving Nephew now is come.
Mor. Richard Plantagenet, my friend. is he come?
Rich. I, Noble Vncle, thus ignoble vs'd,
Your Nephew, late despised Richard, comes.
Mort. Direct mine Armes, I may embrace his Neck,
And in his Bosom spend my latter gasp.
Oh tell me when my Lippes doe touch his Cheeke,
That I may kindly give one fainting Kiss.
And now declare sweet Stem from Yorke great Stock,
Why dost thou say of late thou wert despis'd?

Rich. Fitzhaume thine aged Back against mine Arme,
And in that ease, I'le tell thee my Disease.
This day in argument upon a Case,
Some words there grew 'twixt Somerset and me:
Among which termes, he vs'd his lauish tongue,
And did vpbraid me with my Fathers death;
Which obloquie set barres before my tongue,
Else with the like I had requited him.
Therefore good Vncle, for my Fathers sake,
In honor of a true Plantagenet,
And for Alliance sake, declare the cause
My Father, Earle of Cambridge, lost his Head.
Mort. That cause (faire Nephew) that imprison'd me,
And hath detayn'd me all my flowring Youth,
Within a loathsome Dungeon, there to pyne,
Was cursed Instrument of his decease.
Rich. Discouer more at large what cause that was,
For I am ignorant, and cannot guesse
Mort. I will, if that my fading breath permit,
And Death approach not, ere my Tale be done.
Henry the Fourth, Grandfather to this King,
Depos'd his Nephew Richard, Edwards Sonne,
The first begotten, and the lawfull Heire
Of Edward King, the Third of that Descent.
During whose Reigne, the Percies of the North,
Finding his Vsurpation most vniust,
Endeuour'd my aduancement to the Throne.
The reason mou'd these Warlike Lords to this,
Was, for that (young Richard thus remou'd,
Leaving no Heire begotten of his Body)
I was the next by Birth and Parentage:
For by my Mother, I derived am
From Lionel Duke of Clarence, third Sonne
To King Edward the Third; whereas he,
From John of Gaunt doth bring his Pedigree,
Being but fourth of that Heroick Lyne.
But mark: as in this haughtie great attempt,
They laboured, to plant the rightfull Heire,
I lost my Libertie, and they their Liues.
Long after this, when Henry the Fift
(Succeeding his Father Bolingbroke) did reigne;
Thy Father, Earle of Cambridge, then deriu'd
From famous Edmund Langley, Duke of Yorke,
Marrying my Sister, that thy Mother was;
Again, in pity of my hard distresse,
Leuied an Army, meaning to redeeme,
And haue installd me in the Diademe:
But as the rest, so fell that Noble Earle,
And was beheaded. Thus the Mortimers,
In whom the Title rested, were suppreſt.
Rich. Of which, my Lord, your Honor is the last.
Mort. True; and thou seest, that I no Issue haue,
And that my fainting words doe warrant death:
Thou art my Heire; the rest, I wish thee gather:
But yet be wary in thy studious care.
Rich. Thy grave admonishments preuayle with me:
But yet me thinkes, my Fathers execution
Was nothing lesse then bloody Tyranny.
Mort. With silence, Nephew, be thou politick,
Strong fiend is the House of Lancaster,
And like a Mountaine, not to be remou'd.
But now thy Vncle is removing hence,
As Princes doe their Courts, when they are cloy'd
With long continuance in a setled place.
Rich. O Vncle, would some part of my young yeares
Might bee vnto you the passage of your Age.
Mort. Thou do'st then wrong me, as y Slaughterer doth,
Which giueth many Wounds, when one will kill.
Mourne not, except thou sorrow for my good,
Onely giue order for my Funerall.
And so farewell, and faire be all thy hopes,
And prosperous be thy Life in Peace and Warre. Dyes.
Rich. And Peace, no Warre, befall thy parting Soule.
In Prison hast thou spent a Pilgrimage,
And like a Hermite ouer-past thy dayes.
Well, I will locke his Councell in my Breast,
And what I doe imagine, let that rest.
Keepers conuey him hence, and I my selfe
Will see his Buryall better then his Life. Exit
Here dyes the duskie Torch of Mortimer,
Choakt with Ambition of the meaner sort.
And for those Wrongs, those bitter Iniuries,
Which Somerset hath offer'd to my House,
I doubt not, but with Honor to redresse.
And therefore haste I to the Parliament,
Eyther to be restored to my Blood,
Or make my will th'aduantage of my good. Exit.

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Flourish. Enter King, Exeter, Glocster, Winchester, Warwick, Somerset, Suffolk, Richard Plantagenet. Glocster offers to put vp a Bill: Winchester snatches it, tears it.

Winch. Com'st thou with deepe premeditated Lines?
With written Pamphlets, studiously deuis'd?
Humfrey of Glocster, if thou canst accuse,
Or ought intend'st to lay vnto my charge,
Doe it without inuention, suddenly,
As I with sudden, and extempore all speech,
Purpose to answer what thou canst obiect.
Glo. Presumptuous Priest, this place commands my patience,
Or thou should'st finde thou hast dis-honor'd me.
Think not, although in Writing I preferr'd
The manner of thy vile outrageous Crymes,
That therefore I haue forg'd, or am not able
Verbatim to rehearse the Methods of my Penne.
No Prelate, such is thy audacious wickednesse,
Thy lewd, pestiferous, and dissentious pranckes,
As very Infants prattle of thy pride.
Thou art a most pernitious Vsurer,
Froward by nature, Enemie to Peace,
Lascivious, wanton, more then well beseames
A man of thy Profession, and Degree.
And for thy Treacherie, what's more manifest?
In that thou layd'st a Trap to take my Life,
As well at London Bridge, as at the Tower.
Beside, I feare me, if thy thoughts were sifted,
The King, thy Soueraigne, is not quite exempt
From enuious malice of thy swelling heart.
Winch. Glocster, I doe defie thee. Lords vouchsafe
To giue me hearing what I shall reply.
If I were couetous, ambitious, or peruerse,
As he will haue me: how am I so poore?
Or how haps it, I seeke not to aduance
Or raise my selfe? but keepe my wonted Calling.
And for Dissention, who preferreth Peace
More then I doe? except I be prouok'd.
No, my good Lords, it is not that offends,
It is not that, that hath incens'd the Duke:
It is because no one should sway but her,
No one, but he, should be about the King;
And that engenders Thunder in his breast,

And makes him more these Accusations forth.
But he shall know I am as good.
Glost. As good?
Thou Bastard of my Grandfather.
Winch. I, Lordly Sir: for what are you, I pray,
But one imperious in anothers Throne?
Glos. Am I not Protector, sawcie Priest?
Winch. And am not I a Prelate of the Church?
Glos. Yes, as an Out-law in a Castle keepes,
And vseth it, to patronage his Theft.
Winch. Vnreuerent Gloster.
Glos. Thou art reuerent,
Touching thy Spirituall Function, not thy Life.
Winch. Rome shall remedie this.
Warw. Roame thither then.
My Lord, it were your duetie to forbeare.
Som. I, see the Bishop be not ouer-borne:
Me thinkes my Lord should be Religious,
And know the Office that belongs to such.
Warw. Me thinkes his Lordship should be humbler,
It fitteth not a Prelate so to plead.
Som. Yes, when his holy State is touche so neere.
Warw. State holy, or vnhallow'd, what of that?
Is not his Grace Protector to the King?
Rich. Plantagenet I see must hold his tongue,
Least it be said, Speake Sirrha when you should:
Must your bold Verdict enter talke with Lords?
Else would I haue a fling at Winchester.
King. Vncles of Gloster, and of Winchester,
The speciall Watch-men of our English Weale,
I would preuayle, if Prayers might preuayle,
To ioyne your hearts in loue and amitie.
Oh, what a Scandall is it to our Crowne,
That two such Noble Peeres as ye should iarre?
Beleeue me, Lords, my tender yeeres can tell,
Ciuill diffention is a viperous Worme,
That gnawes the Bowels of the Common-wealth.

A noyse within, Downe with the Tawny-Coats.

King. What tumult's this?
Warw. An Vproare, I dare warrant,
Begun through malice of the Bishops men.

A noyse again, Stones, Stones.

Enter Maior.

Maior. Oh my good Lords, and vertuous Henry,
Pitty the Citie of London, pitty vs:
The Bishop, and the Duke of Glosters men,
Forbidden late to carry any Weapon,
Haue fill'd their Pockets full of peeble stones;
And banding themselues in contrary parts,
Doe pelt so fast as one anothers Pate,
That many haue their giddy braynes knockt out:
Our Windowes are broke downe in every Street,
And we, for feare, compell'd to shut our Shops.

Enter in skirmish with bloody Pates.

King. We charge you, on allegeance to our selfe,
To hold your slaughtring hands, and keepe the Peace:
Pray' Vncle Gloster mitigate this strife.
1. Seruing. Nay, if we be forbidden Stones, we're fall to it with our Teeth.
2. Seruing. Doe what ye dare, we are as resolute.

Skirmish again.

Glos. You of my household, leaue this peeuish broyle,
And fall this vnaccustom'd fight aside.
3. Serv. My Lord, we know your Grace to be a man
Just, and vpright; and for your Royall Birth,
Inferior to none, but to his Maiestie:
And are that we will suffer such a Prince,
So kinde a Father of the Common-weale,
To be disgraced by an Inke-horne Mate,
We and our Wiues and Children all will fight,
And haue our bodyes slaughtered by thy foes.
1. Serv. I, and the very parings of our Nayles
Shall pitch a Field when we are dead.

Begin again.

Glos. Stay, stay, I say:
And if you loue me, as you say you doe,
Let me perswade you to forbeare a while.
King. Oh, how this discord doth afflict my Soule.
Can you, my Lord of Winchester, behold
My sighes and teares, and will not once relent?
Who should be pittifull, if you be not?
Or who should study to preferre a Peace,
If holy Church-men take delight in broyles?
Warw. Yeld my Lord Protector, yeld Winchester,
Except you meane with obstinate repulse
To slay your Soueraigne, and destroy the Realme.
You see what Mischiefe, and what Murther too,
Hath beene enacted through your enmitie:
Then be at peace except ye thirst for blood.
Winch. He shall submit, or I will neuer yeld.
Glos. Compassion on the King commands me stoupe.
Or I would see his heart out, ere the Priest
Should euer get that priuiledge of me.
Warw. Behold my Lord of Winchester, the Duke
Hath banisht moodie discontented fury,
As by his smoothed Browes it doth appeare:
Why looke you still so sterne, and tragicall?
Glos. Here Winchester, I offer thee my Hand.
King. Fie Vncle Beaufort, I haue heard you preach,
That Malice was a great and grieuous sinne:
And will not you maintaine the thing you teach?
But proue a chiefe offender in the same.
Warw. Sweet King: the Bishop hath a kindly gyrd:
For shame my Lord of Winchester relent;
What, shall a Child instruct you what to doe?
Winch. Well, Duke of Gloster, I will yeeld to thee
Loue for thy Loue, and Hand for Hand I giue.
Glos. I, but I feare me with a hollow Heart.
See here my Friends and loiuing Countreymen,
This token serueth for a Flagge of Truce,
Betwixt our selues, and all our followers:
So helpe me God, as I dissemble not.
Winch. So helpe me God, as I intend it not.
King. Oh loiuing Vncle, kinde Duke of Gloster,
How ioyfull am I made by this Contract.
Away my Masters, trouble vs no more,
But ioyne in friendship, as your Lords haue done.
1. Serv. Content, I'le to the Surgeons.
2. Serv. And so will I.
3. Serv. And I will see what Physick the Tuttons afforde.

Exeunt.

Warw. Accept this Scrowle, most gracious Soueraigne,
Which in the Right of Richard Plantagenet,
We doe exhibite to your Maiestie.
Glo. Well vrg'd, my Lord of Warwick: for sweet Prince,
And if your Grace marke every circumstance,
You haue great reason to doe Richard right,
Especially for those occasions
At Eltam Place I told your Maiestie.

King. And

King. And those occasions, Vockie, were of force:
Therefore my loving Lords, our pleasure is,
That Richard be restored to his Blood.
Warw. Let Richard be restored to his Blood,
So shall his Fathers wrongs be recompence'd.
Wiltsh. As will the rest, so willeth Wiltshiere.
King. If Richard will be true, not that alone,
But all the whole Inheritance I give,
That doth belong unto the House of Yorke,
From whence you spring, by Lineall Descent.
Rich. Thy humble servant vowes obedience,
And humble service, till the point of death.
King. Stoope then, and set your Knee against my Foot,
And in reguerdon of that duine done,
I gyrt thee with the valiant Sword of Yorke.
Rise Richard, like a true Plantagenet,
And rise created Princely Duke of Yorke.
Rich. And so thrive Richard, as thy foes may fall,
And as my duties springs, so perish they,
That grudge one thought against your Maiesty.
All. Welcome high Prince, the mighty Duke of Yorke.
Som. Perish base Prince, ignoble Duke of Yorke.
Glost. Now will it best suzile your Maiestie,
To crosse the Seas, and to be Crown'd in France:
The presence of a King engenders love
Amongst his Subiects, and his loyall Friends,
As it dis-animates his Enemies.
King. When Glester sayes the word, King Henry goes,
For friendly counsaile cuts off many Foes.
Glost. Your Ships alreadie are in readinesse.
Sound Flourish. Exeunt.

Manet Exeter.

Exet. I, we may march in England, or in France,
Not fearing what is likely to ensue:
This late dissention growne betwixt the Peeres,
Burnes under feigned ashes of forg'd loue,
And will at last breake out into a flame,
As festred members rot but by degree,
Till bones and flesh and sinewes fall away,
So will this base and enuious discord breed.
And now I feare that fatall Prophecie,
Which in the time of Henry, nam'd the Fift,
Was in the mouth of every sucking Babe,
That Henry borne at Monmouth should winne all,
And Henry borne at Windsor, loose all:
Which is so plaine, that Exeter doth wish,
His dayes may finish, ere that hapleffe time. Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Pucell disguis'd, with foure Souldiers with Sacks upon their backs.

Pucell. These are the Citie Gates, the Gates of Roan,
Through which our Policy must make a breach.
Take heed, be wary how you place your words,
Talke like the vulgar sort of Market men,
That come to gather Money for their Corne.
If we haue entrance, as I hope we shall,
And that we finde the slouthfull Watch but weake,
Ile by a signe give notice to our friends,
That Charles the Dolphin may encounter them.
Souldier. Our Sacks shall be a meane to sack the City,
And we be Lords and Rulers ouer Roan,
Therefore wee'le knock. Knock.
Watch. Qui la.
Pucell. Paysans, la pauure gens de France,
Poore Market folkes that come to sell their Corne.
Watch. Enter, goe in, the Market Bell is rung.
Pucell. Now Roan, Ile shake thy Bulwarkes to the ground. Exeunt.

Enter Charles, Bastard, Alanson.

Charles. Saint Denis blesse this happy Stratagame,
And once againe wee'le sleepe secure in Roan.
Bastard. Here earred Pucell, and her Practisants:
Now she is there, how will she specifie?
Here is the best and safest passage in.
Reig. By threasting out a Torch from yonder Tower,
Which once discern'd, shewes that her meaning is,
No way to that (for weakneffe) which she entred.

Enter Pucell on the top, thrusting out a Torch burning.

Pucell. Behold, this is the happy Wedding Torch,
That ioyneth Roan vnto her Countreymen,
But burning fatall to the Talbonites
Bastard. See Noble Charles the Beacon of our friend,
The burning Torch in yonder Turret stands.
Charles. Now shine it like a Comet of Revenge,
A Prophet to the fall of all our Foes.
Reig. Deferre no time, delayes haue dangerous ends,
Enter and cry, the Dolphin, presently,
And then doe execution on the Watch. Alarum.

An Alarum. Talbot in an Excursion.

Talb. France, thou shalt rue this Treason with thy teares,
If Talbot but survive thy Treacherie.
Pucell that Witch, that damned Sorceresse,
Hath wrought this Hellish Mischiefe vnawares,
That hardly we escap'd the Pride of France. Exit.

An Alarum: Excursions. Bedford brought in sicke in a Chayre.

Enter Talbot and Burgoyne without: within, Pucell, Charles, Bastard, and Reignier on the Walls.

Pucell. God morrow Gallants, want ye Corn for Bread?
I thinke the Duke of Burgoyne will fast,
Before hee'le buy againe at such a rate,
'Twas full of Darnell: doe you like the taste?
Burg. Scoffe on vile Fiend, and shameleffe Curtizan,
I trust ere long to choake thee with thine owne,
And make thee curse the Harvest of that Corne.
Charles. Your Grace may starue (perhaps) before that time.
Bedf. Oh let no words, but deedes, revenge this Treason.
Pucell. What will you doe, good grey-beard?
Breake a Launce, and runne a-Tilt at Death,
Within a Chayre.
Talb. Foule Fiend of France, and Hag of all despight,
Incompass'd with thy lustfull Paramours,
Becomes it thee to taunt his valiant Age,
And twit with Cowardise a man halfe dead?
Damsell, Ile beat a bowt with you againe,
Or else let Talbot perish with this shame.
Pucell. Are ye so hot, Sir: yet Pucell hold thy peace,
If Talbot doe but Thunder, Raine will follow.
They whisper together in counsell.
God speed the Parliament; who shall be the Speaker?

Talb. Dare yee come forth, and meet vs in the field?
Pucell. Belike your Lordship takes vs then for fooles,
To try if that our owne be ours, or no.
Talb. I speake not to that raying Hearse,
But vnto thee Alanson, and the rest.
Will ye, like Souldiers, come and fight it out?
Alanso. Seignior no.
Talb. Seignior hang: base Muleters of France,
Like Peasant foot-Boyes doe they keepe the Walls,
And dare not take vp Armes, like Gentlemen.
Pucell. Away Captaines, let's get vs from the Walls,
For Talbot meanes no goodnesse by his Lookes.
God b'uy my Lord, we came but to tell you
That wee are here. Exeunt from the walls.
Talb. And there will we be too, ere it be long,
Or else reproach be Talbots greatest fame.
Vow Burgoyne, by honor of thy House,
Prickt on by publike Wrongs sustain'd in France,
Either to get the Towne againe, or dye.
And I, as sure as English Henry liues,
And as his Father here was Conqueror;
As sure as in this late betrayed Towne,
Great Cordelions Heart was buryed;
So sure I sweare, to get the Towne, or dye.
Burg. My Vowes are equall partners with thy Vowes.
Talb. But ere we goe, regard this dying Prince,
The valiant Duke of Bedford: Come my Lord,
We will bestow you in some better place,
Fitter for sicknesse, and for crazie age.
Bedf. Lord Talbot, doe not so dishonour me:
Here will I sit, before the Walls of Roan,
And will be partner of your weale or woe.
Burg. Couragious Bedford, let vs now perswade you
Bedf. Not to be gone from hence: for once I read,
That stout Pendragon, in his Litter sick,
Came to the field, and vanquished his foes.
Me thinkes I should reuiue the Souldiers hearts,
Because I euer found them as my selfe.
Talb. Vndaunted spirit in a dying breast,
Then be it so: Heauens keepe old Bedford safe.
And now no more adoe, braue Burgoyne,
But gather we our Forces out of hand,
And set vpon our boasting Enemie. Exit.

An Alarum. Excursions. Enter Sir Iohn Falstaffe, and a Captaine.

Cap. Whither away Sir Iohn Falstaffe, in such hastes?
Falst. Whither away? to saue my selfe by flight,
We are like to haue the ouerthrow againe.
Cap. What? will you flye, and leaue Lord Talbot?
Falst. I, all the Talbots in the World, to saue my life. Exit.
Cap. Cowardly Knight, ill fortune follow thee. Exit.

Retreat. Excursions. Pucell, Alanson, and Charles flye.

Bedf. Now quiet Soule, depart when Heauen please,
For I haue seene our Enemies ouerthrow.
What is the trust or strength of foolish man?
They that of late were daring with their scoffes,
Are glad and faine by flight to saue themselues.
Bedford dies, and is carryed in by two in his Chaire.

An Alarum. Enter Talbot, Burgoyne, and the rest.

Talb. Lost, and recouered in a day againe,
This is a double Honor, Burgoyne:
Yet Heauens haue glory for this Victorie.
Burg. Warlike and Martiall Talbot, Burgoyne
Inlaideth thee in his heart, and there erects
Thy noble Deeds, as Valors Monuments.
Talb. Thanks gentle Duke: but where is Pucel now?
I thinke her old Familiar is asleepe.
Now where's the Bastards braues, and Charles his gibes?
What all amort? Roan hangs her head for griefe,
That such a valiant Company are fled.
Now will we take some order in the Towne,
Placing therein some expert Officers,
And then depart to Paris, to the King.
For there young Henry with his Nobles lye.
Burg. What wills Lord Talbot, pleaseth Burgoyne.
Talb. But yet before we goe, let's not forget
The Noble Duke of Bedford, late deceas'd,
But see his Exequies fulfill'd in Roan.
A braver Souldier neuer couched Launce,
A gentler Heart did neuer sway in Court.
But Kings and mightiest Potentates must die,
For that's the end of humane miserie. Exeunt.

Scæna Tertia.

Enter Charles, Bastard, Alanson, Pucell.

Pucell. Dismay not (Princes) at this accident,
Nor grieue that Roan is so recouered:
Care is no cure, but rather corrosiue,
For things that are not to be remedy'd.
Let frantike Talbot triumph for a while,
And like a Peacock sweepe along his tayle,
We'le pull his Plumes, and take away his Troyne,
If Dolphin and the rest will be but rul'd.
Charles. We haue been guided by thee hitherto,
And of thy Cunning had no diffidence,
One sudden Foyle shall never breed distrust.
Bastard. Search out thy wit for secret policies,
And we will make thee famous through the World.
Alanso. Wee'le get thy Statue in some holy place,
And haue thee reuerenc'd like a blessed Saint.
Employ thee then, sweet Virgin, for our good.
Pucell. Then thus it must be, this doth Ioane deuise
By faire perswasions, mixt with sugred words,
We will entice the Duke of Burgoyne
To leaue the Talbot, and to follow vs.
Charles. I marry Sweeting, if we could doe that,
France were no place for Henryes Warriors,
Nor should that Nation boast it so with vs,
But be extirped from our Prouinces.
Alanso. For euer should they be expulsed from France,
And not haue Title of an Earledome here.
Pucell. Your Honors shall perceiue how I will worke,
To bring this matter to the wished end.
Drummes sounds a farre off.
Hearke, by the sound of Drumme you may perceiue
Their Powers are marching vnto Paris-ward.
Here sound an English March.
There goes the Talbot, with his Colours spread,
And all the Troupes of English after him.
French

Pucell March.

Now in the Rereward comes the Duke and his:
Fortune in favor makes him lagge behinde.
Summon a Parley, we will talke with him.

Trumpets sound a Parley.

Charles. A Parley with the Duke of Burgonie.

Burg. Who comes a Parley with the Burgonie?

Pucell. The Princely Charles of France, thy Countrey-man.

Burg. What say'st thou Charles? for I am marching hence.

Charles. Speake Pucell, and enchaunt him with thy words.

Pucell. Brave Burgonie, vndoubted hope of France,
Stay, let thy humble Hand-maid speake to thee.

Burg. Speake on, but be not over-tedious.

Pucell. Looke on thy Country, look on fertile France,
And see the Cities and the Townes defac'd,
By wasting Ruine of the cruell Foe,
As looke to the Mother on her lowly Babe,
When Death doth close his tender-dying Eyes.
See, see the pining Maladie of France;
Behold the Wounds, the most vnnaturall Wounds,
Which thou thy selfe hast given her woefull Brest.
Oh turne thy edged Sword another way,
Strike those that hurt, and hurt not those that helpe:
One drop of Blood drawne from thy Countries Bosome,
Should grieve thee more then streames of forraine gore.
Returne thee therefore with a flood of Teares,
And wash away thy Countries stayned Spots.

Burg. Either she hath bewitcht me with her words,
Or Nature makes me suddenly relent.

Pucell. Besides, all French and France exclaimes on thee
Doubting thy Birth and lawfull Progenie.
Who joyn'st thou with, but with a Lordly Nation,
That will not trust thee, but for profits sake?
When Talbot hath set footing once in France,
And fashion'd thee that Instrumente of Ill,
Who then, but English Henry, will be Lord,
And thou be thrust out, like a Fugitive?
Call we to minde, and marke but this for proofe:
Was not the Duke of Orleance thy Foe?
And was he not in England Prisoner?
But when they heard he was thine Enemie,
They set him free, without his Ransome pay'd,
In spight of Burgonie and all his friends.
See then, thou fight'st against thy Countreymen,
And joyn'st with them: will be thy slaughter-men.
Come, come, returne; returne thou wandering Lord,
Charles and the rest will take thee in their armes.

Burg. I am vanquished:
These haughtie wordes of hers
Haue batt'red me like roaring Cannon-shot,
And made me almost yeeld vpon my knees.
Forgiue me Country, and sweet Countreymen:
And Lords accept this hearte kind embrace.
My Forces and my Power of Men are yours.
So farewell Talbot, I'le no longer trust thee.

Pucell. Done like a Frenchman: turne and turne again.

Charles. Welcome brave Duke, thy friendship makes vs fresh.

Bastard. And doth beget new Courage in our Breasts.

Alanson. Pucell hath bravely play'd her part in this,
And doth deserve a Coronet of Gold.

Charles. Now let vs on, my Lords,
And joyne our Powers,
And seeke how we may prejudice the Foe. Exeunt.

Scœna Quarta.

Enter the King, Glouster, Winchester, Yorke, Suffolke, Somerset, Warwicke, Exeter: To them, with his Souldiers, Talbot.

Talb. My gracious Prince, and honorable Peeres,
Hearing of your arriuall in this Realme,
I haue a while given Truce vnto my Warres,
To doe my duteie to my Soueraigne.
In signe whereof, this Arme, that hath reclaym'd
To your obedience, fifteie Forrresses,
Twelue Cities, and seuen walled Towners of strength,
Beside fiue hundred Prisoners of esteeme;
Lets fall his Sword before your Highnesse feet:
And with submisse loyaltie of heart
Ascribes the Glory of his Conquest got,
First to my God, and next vnto your Grace.

King Is this the Lord Talbot, Vncle Glouster,
That hath so long beene resident in France?

Glost. Yes, if it please your Maiestie, my Liege.

King. Welcome brave Captaine, and victorious Lord.
When I was young (as yet I am not old)
I doe remember how my Father said,
A stouter Champion never handled Sword.
Long since we were resolued of your truth,
Your faithfull seruice, and your toyle in Warre:
Yet never haue you tasted our Reward,
Or beene regarded'd with so much as Thanks,
Because till now, we never saw your face.
Therefore stand vp, and for these good deserts,
We here create you Earle of Shrewsbury,
And in our Coronation take your place.

Sonet. Flourish. Exeunt.

Manet Vernon and Basset.

Vern. Now Sir, to you that were so hot at Sea,
Disgracing of these Colours that I weare,
In honor of my Noble Lord of Yorke
Dar'st thou maintaine the former words thou spak'st?

Bas. Yes Sir, as well as you dare patronage
The enuious barking of your saucie Tongue,
Against my Lord the Duke of Somerset.

Vern. Sirrha, thy Lord I honour as he is.

Bas. Why, what is he? as good a man as Yorke.

Vern. Hearke yee: not so: in witnesse take ye that.

Strikes him.

Bas. Villaine, thou knowest
The Law of Armes is such,
That who so drawes a Sword, 'tis present death,
Or else this Blow should broach thy dearest Bloud.
But I'le vnto his Maiestie, and craue,
I may haue liberties to venge this Wrong,
When thou shalt see, I'le meet thee to thy cost.

Vern. Well miscreant, I'le be there as soone as you,
And after meete you, sooner then you would.

Exeunt.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter King, Glocester, Winchester, Yorke, Suffolke, Somerset, Warwicke, Talbot, and Comenor Exeter.

Glo. Lord Bishop set the Crowne vpon his head.

Win. God saue King Henry of that name the sixt.

Glo. Now Gouernour of Paris take your oath,
That you elect no other King but him;
Esteeme none Friends, but such as are his Friends,
And none your Foes, but such as shall pretend
Malicious practises against his State:
This shall ye do, so helpe you righteous God.

Enter Falstaffe.

Fal. My gracious Soueraigne, as I rode from Calice,
To haste vnto your Coronation:
A Letter was deliuer'd to my hands,
Writ to your Grace, from th'Duke of Burgundy.

Tal. Shame to the Duke of Burgundy, and thee:
I vow'd (base Knight) when I did meete the next,
To teare the Garter from thy Crauens legge,
Which I haue done, because (vnworthily)
Thou was't installed in that High Degree.
Pardon me Princely Henry, and the rest:
This Dastard, at the battell of Poitiers,
When (but in all) I was sixe thousand strong,
And that the French were almost ten to one,
Before we met, or that a stroke was giuen,
Like to a trusty Squire, did run away.
In which assault, we lost twelue hundred men
My selfe, and diuers Gentlemen beside,
Were there surpris'd, and taken prisoners.
Then iudge (great Lords) if I haue done amisse:
Or whether that such Cowards ought to weare
This Ornament of Knighthood, yea or no?

Glo. To say the truth, this fact was infamous,
And ill beseeming any common man;
Much more a Knight, a Captaine, and a Leader.

Tal. When first this Order was ordain'd my Lords,
Knights of the Garter were of Noble birth;
Valiant, and Vertuous, full of haughtie Courage,
Such as were growne to credit by the warres:
Not fearing Death, nor shrinking for Distresse,
But alwayes resolute, in most extreames.
He then, that is not furnish'd in this sort,
Doth but vsurpe the Sacred name of Knight,
Prophaning this most Honourable Order,
And should (if I were worthy to be Iudge)
Be quite degraded, like a Hedge-borne Swaine,
That doth presume to boast of Gentle blood.

K. Staine to thy Countrymen, thou hear'st thy doom:
Be packing therefore, thou that was't a knight:
Henceforth we banish thee on paine of death.
And now Lord Protector, view the Letter
Sent from our Vncle Duke of Burgundy.

Glo. What meanes his Grace, that he hath chaung'd his Stile?
No more but plaine and bluntly? (To the King.)
Hath he forgot he is his Soueraigne?
Or doth this churlish Superscription
Pretend some alteration in good will?
What's heere? I haue vpon special cause,
Mou'd with compassion of my Countries wracke,
Together with the pitiful complaints
Of such as your oppression feeds vpon,
Forsaken your pernicious Faction,
And ioyn'd with Charles, the rightfull King of France.
O monstrous Treachery. Can this be so?
That in alliance, amity, and oathes,
There should be found such false dissembling guile?

King. What? doth my Vncle Burgundy reuolt?

Glo. He doth my Lord, and is become your foe.

King. Is that the worst this Letter doth containe?

Glo. It is the worst, and all (my Lord) he writes.

King. Why then Lord Talbot there shal talk with him,
And giue him chastisement for this abuse.
How say you (my Lord) are you not content?

Tal. Content, my Liege? Yes. But y I am preuented,
I should haue begg'd I might haue bene employd.

King. Then gather strength, and march vnto him straight:
Let him perceiue how ill we brooke his Treason,
And what offence it is to flout his Friends.

Tal I go my Lord, in heart desiring still
You may behold confusion of your foes.

Enter Vernon and Basse.

Ver. Grant me the Combate, gracious Soueraigne.

Bas. And me (my Lord) grant me the Combate too

Yorke. This is my Seruant, beare him Noble Prince.

Som. And this is mine (sweet Henry) fauour him.

King. Be patient Lords, and giue them leaue to speak.
Say Gentlemen, what makes you thus exclaime,
And wherefore craue you Combate? Or with whom?

Ver. With him (my Lord) for he hath done me wrong.

Bas. And I with him, for he hath done me wrong.

King. What is that wrong, whereof you both complain
First let me know, and then I'le answer you.

Bas. Crossing the Sea, from England into France,
This Fellow heere with enuious carping tongue,
Vpbraided me about the Rose I weare,
Saying, the sanguine colour of the Leaues
Did represent my Masters blushing cheekes:
When stubbornly he did repugne the truth,
About a certaine question in the Law,
Argu'd betwixt the Duke of Yorke, and him.
With other vile and ignominious termes.
In confutation of which rude reproach,
And in defence of my Lords worthinesse,
I craue the benefit of Law of Armes.

Ver. And that is my petition (Noble Lord:)
For though he seeme with forged quaint conceite
To set a glosse vpon his bold intent,
Yet know (my Lord) I was prouok'd by him,
And he first tooke exceptions at this badge,
Pronouncing that the paleness of this Flower,
Bewray'd the faintnesse of my Masters heart.

Yorke. Will not this malice Somerset be left?

Som. Your priuate grudge my Lord of York, will out,
Though ye're so cunningly you smother it.

King. Good Lord, what madnesse rules in brainsicke men,
When for so slight and friuolous a cause,
Such fachous emulations shall arise?
Good Cosins both of Yorke and Somerset,
Quiet your selues (I pray) and be at peace.

Yorke. Let this dissention first be tried by fight,
And then your Highnesse shall command a Peace.

Som. The quarrell toucheth none but vs alone,
Betwixt our selues let vs decide it then.

Yorke. There is my pledge, accept it Somerset.

Ver. Nay, let it rest where it began at first.

Bas.

Bas. Confirme it so, mine honourable Lord.
Glo. Confirme it so? Confounded be your strife,
And perish ye with your audacious prate,
Presumptuous vassals, are you not asham'd
With this immodest clamorous outrage,
To trouble and disturbe the King, and Vs?
And you my Lords, me thinkes you do not well
To beare with their perverse Objections:
Much lesse to take occasion from their mouthes,
To raise a mutiny betwixt your selves.
Let me perswade you take a better course.
Exet. It greeues his Highnesse,
Good my Lords, be Friends.
King. Come hither you that would be Combatants:
Henceforth I charge you, as you love our fauour,
Quite to forget this Quarrell, and the cause.
And you my Lords: Remember where we are,
In France, amongst a fickle wauering Nation:
If they perceyue dissention in our looks,
And that within our selues we disagree;
How will their grudging stomackes be prouok'd
To willfull Disobedience, and Rebell?
Beside, What infamy will there arise,
When Forraigne Princes shall be certified,
That for a toy, a thing of no regard,
King Henries Peeres, and cheefe Nobility,
Destroy'd themselues, and lost the Realme of France?
Oh thinke vpon the Conquest of my Father,
My tender yeares, and let vs not forgoe
That for a trifle, that was bought with blood.
Let me be Vmpier in this doubtfull strife:
I see no reason if I weare this Rose,
That any one should therefore be suspitious
I more incline to Somerset, then Yorke:
Both are my kinsmen, and I love them both.
As well they may vpbray'd me with my Crowne,
Because (forsooth) the King of Scots is Crown'd.
But your discretions better can perswade,
Then I am able to instruct or teach:
And therefore, as we hither came in peace,
So let vs still continue peace, and loue.
Cosin of Yorke, we institute your Grace
To be our Regent in these parts of France:
And good my Lord of Somerset, vnite
Your Troopes of horsemen, with his Bands of foote,
And like true Subjects, sonnes of your Progenitors,
Go cheerefully together, and digest
Your angry Choller on your Enemies.
Our Selfe, my Lord Protector, and the rest,
After some respit, will returne to Calice;
From thence to England, where I hope ere long
To be presented by your Victories,
With Charles, Alanson, and that Traiterous rout
Exeunt. Manet Turby, Warwick, Exeter, Vernon.
War. My Lord of Yorke, I promise you the King
Prettily (me thought) did play the Orator.)
Turby. And so he did, but yet I like it not,
In that he weares the badge of Somerset.
War. Tush, that was but his fancie, blame him not,
I dare presume (sweet Prince) he thought no harme.
Turb. And if I wish he did. But let it rest,
Other affayres must now be managed. Exeunt.
Flourish. Manet Exeter.
Exe Well diddst thou Richard to suppresse thy voice:
For had the passions of thy heart burst out,
I feare we should haue seene decipher'd there
More rancorous spighte, more furious raging broyles,
Then yet can be imagin'd or suppos'd:
But howsoere, no simple man that sees
This iarring discord of Nobilitie,
This shouldering of each other in the Court,
This factious bandying of their Fauourites,
But that it doth presage some ill euent.
'Tis much, when Scepters are in Childrens hands:
But more, when Enuy breeds vnkinde deuision,
There comes the ruine, there begins confusion. Exit

Enter Talbot with Trumpe and Drummer, before Bordeaux.

Tal. Go to the Gates of Bordeaux Trumpeter, Summon their Generall vnto the Wall. Sounds.
Enter Generall aloft.
English John Talbot (Captaines) call you forth,
Seruant in Armes to Harry King of England,
And thus he would. Open your Citie Gates,
Be humble to vs, call my Soueraigne yours,
And do him homage as obedient Subiects,
And I'le withdraw me, and my bloody power.
But if you frowne vpon this proffer'd Peace,
You tempt the fury of my three attendants,
Leane Famine, quartering Steele, and climbing Fire,
Who in a moment, euen with the earth,
Shall lay your stately, and syre-breaning Towers,
If you forsake the offer of their loue.
Cap. Thou ominous and fearefull Owle of death,
Our Nations terror, and their bloody scourge,
The period of thy Tyranny approacheth,
On vs thou canst not enter but by death:
For I protest we are well fortified,
And strong enough to issue out and fight.
If thou retire, the Dolphin well appointed,
Stands with the snares of Warre to tangle thee.
On either hand thee, there are squadrons pitcht,
To wall thee from the liberty of Flight;
And no way canst thou turne thee for redresse,
But death doth front thee with apparant spoyle,
And pale destruction meets thee in the face:
Ten thousand French haue taste the Sacrament,
To rynse their dangerous Artillerie
Vpon no Christian soule but English Talbot:
Loe, there thou standst a breathing valiant man
Of an inuincible vnconquer'd spirit:
This is the latest Glorie of thy praise,
That I thy enemy dew thee withall:
For ere the Glasse that now begins to runne,
Finish the processe of his sandy houre,
These eyes that see thee now well coloured,
Shall see thee withered, bloody, pale, and dead.
Drum a farre off.
Harke, harke, the Dolphins drumme, a warning bell,
Sings heauy Musicke to thy timorous soule,
And mine shall ring thy dire departure out. Exit
Tal. He Fables not, I heare the enemie:
Out some light Horsemen, and perusse their Wings.
O negligent and heedlesse Discipline,
How are we park'd and bounded in a pale?
A little Heard of Englands timorous Deere,
Mas'd with a yelping kennell of French Curres.
If we be English Deere, be then in blood,
Not Raskall-like to fall downe with a pinch,
But rather moodie mad: And desperate Stagges,

Turne

Turne on the bloody Hounds with heads of Steele,
And make the Cowards stand aloofe at bay:
Sell every man his life as deare as mine,
And they shall finde deare Deare of vs my Friends.
God, and S. George, Talbot and Englands right,
Prosper our Colours in this dangerous fight.

Enter a Messenger that meets Yorke. Enter Yorke with Trumpet, and many Souldiers.

Yorke. Are not the speedy scouts return'd againe,
That dog'd the mighty Army of the Dolphin?
Mess. They are return'd my Lord, and gaue it out,
That he is march'd to Bordeaux with his power
To fight with Talbot as he march'd along.
By your espyals were discouered
Two mightier Troopes then that the Dolphin led,
Which joyn'd with him, and made their march for (Bordeaux
Yorke. A plague vpon that Villaine Somerset,
That thus delayes my promised supply
Of horsemen, that were leuied for this siege.
Renowned Talbot doth expect my ayde,
And I am lowsed by a Traitor Villaine,
And cannot helpe the noble Chiualier:
God comfort him in this necessity:
If he miscarry, farewell Wartes in France.

Enter another Messenger.

2. Mes. Thou Princely Leader of our English strength,
Never so needfull on the earth of France,
Spurre to the resque of the Noble Talbot,
Who now is gleaded with a waste of Iron,
And hem'd about with grim destruction:
To Bordeaux warlike Duke, to Bordeaux Yorke,
Else farwell Talbot, France, and Englands honor.
Yorke. O God, that Somerset who in proud heart
Doth stop my Cornets, were in Talbots place,
So should wee saue a valiant Gentleman,
By forfeiting a Traitor, and a Coward:
Mad ire, and wrathfull fury makes me weepe,
That thus we die, while remisse Traitors sleepe.
Mes. O send some succour to the distrest Lord.
Yorke. He dies, we loose: I breake my warlike word:
We mourne, France smiles: We loose, they daily get,
All long of this vile Traitor Somerset.
Mes. Then God take mercy on braue Talbots soule,
And on his Sonne yong John, who two houres since,
I met in trauaile towards his warlike Father;
This seuen yeeres did not Talbot see his sonne,
And now they meete where both their liues are done.
Yorke. Alas, what ioy shall noble Talbot haue,
To bid his yong sonne welcome to his Graue:
Away, vexation almost stoppes my breath,
That sundred friends greete in the houre of death.
Lucie farewell, no more my fortune can,
But curse the cause I cannot ayde the man.
Maine, Blois, Poytiers, and Tourrs, are wonne away,
Long all of Somerset, and his delay. Exit
Mes. Thus while the Vulture of sedition,
Feeds in the bosome of such great Commanders,
Sleeping neglection doth betray to losse:
The Conquest of our scarse-cold Conqueror,
That euer-liuing man of Memorie,
Henrie the fift: Whiles they each other crosse,
Lines, Honours, Lands, and all, hastie to losse.

Enter Somerset with his Armie.

Som. It is too late, I cannot send them now:
This expedition was by Yorke and Talbot,
Too rashly plotted. All our generall force,
Might with a sally of the very Towne
Be buckled with: the ouer-daring Talbot
Hath sullied all his gloss of former Honor
By this vnheedfull, desperate, wilde aduenture:
Yorke set him on to fight, and dye in shame,
That Talbot dead, great Yorke might beare the name.
Cap. Here is Sir William Lucie, who with me
Set from our ore-match forces forth for ayde.
Som. How now Sir William, whether were you sent?
Lu. Whether my Lord, from bought & sold L. Talbot,
Who ring'd about with bold aduersitie,
Cries out for noble Yorke and Somerset,
To beate assayling death from his weake Regiments,
And whiles the honourable Captaine there
Drops bloody sweat from his warre-wearied limbes,
And in aduantage lingring looks for rescue,
You his false hopes, the trust of Englands honor,
Keepe off aloofe with worthlesse emulation:
Let not your priuate discord keepe away
The leuied succours that should send him ayde,
While he renowned Noble Gentleman
Yeeld vp his life vnto a world of odds.
Orleance the Bastard, Charles, Burgundie,
Alanson, Reignard, compasse him about,
And Talbot perisheth by your default.
Som. Yorke set him on, Yorke should haue sent him
ayde.
Lue. And Yorke as fast vpon your Grace exclaimes,
Swearing that you with-hold his leuied hoast,
Collected for this expedition.
Som. York lyes: He might haue sent, & had the Horse
I owe him little Duties, and lesse Loue,
And take foule scorne to fawne on him by sending.
Lu. The fraud of England, not the force of France,
Hath now intrapt the Noble-minded Talbot:
Never to England shall he beare his life,
But dies betrayd to fortune by your strife.
Som. Come go, I will dispatch the Horsemen straits:
Within fiue houres, they will be at his ayde.
Lu. Too late comes rescue, he is tane or slaine,
For flye he could not, if he would haue fled:
And flye would Talbot never though he might.
Som. If he be dead, braue Talbot then adieu.
Lu. His Fame lives in the world. His Shame in you.
Exeunt.

Enter Talbot and his Sonne.

Tal. O yong John Talbot, I did send for thee
To tutor thee in stratagems of Warre,
That Talbots name might be in thee reuiu'd,
When sapless Age, and weake vnable limbes
Should bring thy Father to his drooping Chaire.
But O malignant and ill-bouding Starres,
Now thou art come vnto a Feast of death,
A terrible and vnauoyded danger:
Therefore deare Boy, mount on my swiftest horse,
And I'le direct thee how thou shalt escape
By sodaine flight. Come, dally not, be gone.
John. Is my name Talbot? and am I your Sonne?
Shall

And shall I flye? O, if you loue my Mother,
Dishonor not her Honorable Name,
To make a Bastard, and a Slaue of me:
The World will say, he is not Talbots blood,
That basely fled, when Noble Talbot stood.
Talb. Flye, to reuenge my death, if I be slaine.
Iohn. He that flyes so, will ne're returne again.
Talb. If we both stay, we both are sure to dye.
Iohn. Then let me stay, and Father doe you flye:
Your loss is great, so your regard should be;
My worth vnknowne, no loss is knowne in me.
Vpon my death, the French can little boast;
In yours they will, in you all hopes are lost.
Flight cannot stayne the Honor you haue wonne,
But mine it will, that no Exploit haue done
You fled for Vantage, every one will sweare:
But if I bow, they'le say it was for feare.
There is no hope that euer I will stay,
If the first howre I shrinke and run away:
Here on my knee I begge Mortalitie,
Rather then Life, preserr'd with Infamie.
Talb. Shall all thy Mothers hopes lye in one Tombe?
Iohn. I rather then she shame my Mothers Wombe.
Talb. Vpon my Blessing I commaund thee goe.
Iohn. To fight I will, but not to flye the Foe.
Talb. Part of thy Father may be saf'd in thee.
Iohn. No part of him, but will be shame in mee.
Talb. Thou neuer hadst Renowne, nor canst not lose it.
Iohn. Yes, your renowned Name: shall flight abuse it?
Talb. Thy Fathers charge shall cleare thee from y staine.
Iohn. You cannot witnesse for me, being slaine.
If Death be so apparant, then both flye.
Talb. And leaue my followers here to fight and dye?
My Age was never tainted with such shame.
Iohn. And shall my Youth be guiltie of such blame?
No more can I be sincered from your side,
Then can your selfe, you selfe in swaine diuide:
Stay, goe, doe what you will, the like doe I;
For liue I will not, if my Father dye.
Talb. Then here I take my leaue of thee, faire Sonne,
Borne to eclipse thy Life this afternoone:
Come, side by side, together liue and dye,
And Soule with Soule from France to Heauen flye. Exit.

Alarum: Excursions, wherein Talbots Sonne is hemm'd about, and Talbot rescues him.

Talb. Saint George, and Victory; fight Souldiers, fight:
The Regent hath with Talbot broke his word,
And left vs to the rage of France his Sword.
Where is Iohn Talbot? pause, and take thy breath,
I gaue thee Life, and rescu'd thee from Death.
Iohn. O twice my Father, twice am I thy Sonne:
The Life thou gau'st me first, was lost and done,
Till with thy Warlike Sword, despight of Fate,
To my determin'd time thou gau'st new date.
Talb. When from the Dolphins Crest thy Sword struck fire,
It warm'd thy Fathers heart with proud desire
Of bold-fac'd Victorie. Then Leaden Age,
Quicken'd with Youthfull Spleene, and Warlike Rage,
Beat downe Alanson, Orleance, Burgundie,
And from the Pride of Gallia rescued thee.
The ireful Bastard Orleance, that drew blood
From thee my Boy, and had the Maidenhood
Of thy first fight, I soone encountred,
And interchanging blowes, I quickly shed
Some of his Bastard blood, and in disgrace
Bespoke him thus: Contaminated, base,
And mis-begotten blood, I spill of thine,
Meane and right poore, for that pure blood of mine,
Which thou didst force from Talbot, my brauе Boy.
Here purposing the Bastard to destroy,
Came in strong rescue. Speake thy Fathers care:
Art thou not wearie, Iohn? How dost thou fare?
Wilt thou yet leaue the Battaile, Boy, and flie,
Now thou art seal'd the Sonne of Chiualrie?
Flye, to reuenge my death when I am dead,
The helpe of one stands me in little stead.
Oh, too much folly is it, well I wot,
To hazard all our lines in one small Boot.
If I go dry dye not with Frenchmens Rage,
To morrow I shall dye with mickle Age.
By me they nothing gaine, and if I stay,
'Tis but the shortning of my Life one day.
In thee thy Mother dyes, our Households Name,
My Deaths Reuenge, thy Youth, and Englands Fame:
All these, and more, we hazard by thy stay;
All these are saf'd, if thou wilt flye away.
Iohn. The Sword of Orleance hath not made me smart,
These words of yours draw Life-blood from my Heart.
On that aduantage, bought with such a shame,
To saue a paltry Life, and slay bright Fame,
Before young Talbot from old Talbot flye,
The Coward Horse that beares me, fall and dye:
And like me to the peasant Boyes of France,
To be Shames scorne, and subiect of Mischance.
Surely, by all the Glorie you haue wonne,
And if I flye, I am not Talbots Sonne.
Then talke no more of flight, it is no boot,
If Sonne to Talbot, dye at Talbots foot.
Talb. Then follow thou thy desp'rate Syre of Cares,
Thou learns thy Life to me is sweet:
If thou wilt fight, fight by thy Fathers side,
And commendable prou'd, let's dye in pride. Exit.

Alarum. Excursions. Enter old Talbot led.

Talb. Where is my other Life? mine owne is gone.
O, where's young Talbot? where is valiant Iohn?
Triumphant Death, smear'd with Captiuitie,
Young Talbots Valour makes me smile at thee.
When he perceiu'd me shrinke, and on my Knee,
His bloodie Sword he brandisht ouer mee,
And like a hungry Lyon did commence
Rough deeds of Rage, and sterne Impatience:
But when my angry Guardant stood alone,
Tendring my ruine, and assayl'd of none,
Dizzie-ey'd Furie, and great rage of Heart,
Suddenly made him from my side to start
Into the clustring Battaile of the French:
And in that Sea of Blood, my Boy did drench
His ouer-mounting Spirit; and there di'de
My learns, my Blossome, in his pride.

Enter with Iohn Talbot, borne.

Serv. O my deare Lord, loe where your Sonne is borne.
Tal. Thou antique Death, which laugh'st vs here to scorn,
Anon from thy insulting Tyrannie,
Coupled in bonds of perpetuitie,
Two Talbots winged through the lither Skie,
In thy despight shall scape Mortalitie.

O thou whose wounds become hard fauoured death,
Speake to thy father, ere thou yeeld thy breath,
Braue death by speaking, whether he will or no:
Imagine him a Frenchman, and thy Foe.
Poore Boy, he smiles, me thinkes, as who should say,
Had Death bene French, then Death had dyed to day.
Come, come, and lay him in his Fathers armes.
My spirit can no longer beare these harmes.
Souldiers adieu: I haue what I would haue,
Now my old armes are yong Iohn Talbots graue. Dyes

Enter Charles, Alanson, Burgundie, Bastard, and Pucell.

Char. Had Yorke and Somerset brought rescue in,
We should haue found a bloody day of this.
Bast. How the yong whelpe of Talbots raging wood,
Did flesh his puame-sword in Frenchmens blood.
Puc. Once I encountred him, and thus I said:
Thou Maiden youth, be vanquisht by a Maide.
But with a proud Maiesticall high scorne
He answer'd thus: Yong Talbot was not borne
To be the pillage of a Giglot Wench:
So rushing in the bowels of the French,
He left me proudly, as vnworthy fight.
Bur. Doubtlesse he would haue made a noble Knight:
See where he lyes inhearced in the armes
Of the most bloody Nurser of his harmes.
Bast. Hew them to peeces, hack their bones asunder,
Whose life was Englands glory, Gallia's wonder.
Char. Oh no forbeare: For that which we haue fled
During the life, let vs not wrong it dead.

Enter Lucie.

Lu. Herald, conduct me to the Dolphins Tent,
To know who hath obtain'd the glory of the day.
Char. On what submissiue message art thou sent?
Lucy Submission Dolphin? 'Tis a meere French word.
We English Warriours wot not what it meanes.
I come to know what Prisoners thou hast tane,
And to survey the bodies of the dead.
Char. For prisoners asks't thou? Hell our prison is.
But tell me whom thou seek'st?
Lu. But where's the great Alcides of the field,
Valiant Lord Talbot Earle of Shrewsbury?
Created for his rare successe in Armes,
Great Earle of Wat ford, Waterford, and Valence,
Lord Talbot of Goudrig and Urchinfield,
Lord Strange of Blackmere, Lord Verdun of Alton,
Lord Cromwell of Wingefield, Lord Furnivall of Sheffield,
The thrice victorious Lord of Falconbridge,
Knight of the Noble Order of S. George,
Worthy S. Michael, and the Golden Fleece,
Great Marshall to Henry the sixt,
Of all his Warres within the Realme of France.
Puc. Heere's a silly stately stile indeede:
The Turke that two and fifteene Kingdomes hath,
Writes not so tedious a Stile as this.
Him that thou magnifi'st with all these Titles,
Stinking and fly-blowne lyes heere at our feete.
Lucy. Is Talbot slaine, the Frenchmens only Scourge,
Your Kingdomes terror, and blacke Nemesis?
Oh were mine eye-balles into Bullets turn'd,
That I in rage might shoot them at your faces.
Oh, that I could but call these dead to life,
It were enough to fright the Realme of France.
Were but his Picture left amongst you here,
It would amaze the prowdest of you all.
Giue me their Bodyes, that I may beare them hence,
And giue them Buriall, as beseemes their worth.
Pucel. I thinke this vpstart is old Talbots Ghost,
He speakes with such a proud commanding spirit:
For Gods sake let him haue him, to keepe them here,
They would but stinke, and putrifie the ayre.
Char. Go take their bodies hence.
Lucy. Ile beare them hence: but from their ashes shall be reard
A Phoenix that shall make all France afear'd.
Char So we be rid of them, do with him what y wilt.
And now to Paris in this conquering vaine,
All will be ours, now bloody Talbots slaine. Exeu.

Scena secunda.

SENNET.

Enter King, Glocester, and Exeter.

King. Haue you perus'd the Letters from the Pope,
The Emperor, and the Earle of Armiack?
Glo. I haue my Lord, and their intent is this,
They humbly sue vnto your Excellence,
To haue a godly peace concluded of,
Betweene the Realmes of England, and of France
King. How doth your Grace affect their motion?
Glo. Well (my good Lord) and as the only meanes
To stop effusion of our Christian blood,
And stablish quietnesse on every side.
King. I marry Vncle, for I alwayes thought
It was both impious and vnnaturall,
That such immanity and bloody strife
Should reagne among Professors of one Faith.
Glo. Besides my Lord, the sooner to effect,
And surer bind this knot of amitie,
The Earle of Armiack neere kinn to Charles,
A man of great Authoritie in France,
Proffers his onely daughter to your Grace,
In marriage, with a large and sumptuous Dowrie.
King Marriage Vncle? Alas my yeares are yong:
And fitter is my studie, and my Bookes,
Than wanton dallyance with a Paramour.
Yet call th'Embassadors, and as you please,
So let them haue their answeres every one:
I shall be well content with any choyce
Tends to Gods glory, and my Countries weale.

Enter Winchester, and three Ambassadors.

Exet. What, is my Lord of Winchester installd,
And call'd vnto a Cardinalls degree?
Then I perceiue, that will be verified
Henry the Fift did sometime prophesie.
If once he come to be a Cardinall,
He'l make his cap coequall with the Crowne.
King My Lords Ambassadors, your seuerall suites
Haue bin consider'd and debated on,
Your purpose is both good and reasonable:
And therefore are we certainly resolu'd,
To draw conditions of a friendly peace.

Which

Which by my Lord of Winchester we meane
Shall be transported presently to France.
Glo. And for the proffer of my Lord your Master,
I have inform'd his Highnesse so at large,
As liking of the Ladies vertuous gifts,
Her Beauty, and the value of her Dower,
He doth intend she shall be Englands Queene.
King. In signe whereof, and proofe of which contract,
Bear her this Jewell, pledge of my affection.
And so my Lord Protector see them guarded,
And safely brought to Dover, wherein ship'd
Commit them to the fortune of the sea. Exeunt.
Win. Stay my Lord Legate, you shall first receive
The summe of money which I promised
Should be delivered to his Holinesse,
For clouching me in these grave Ornaments.
Legat. I will attend vpon your Lordships leysure.
Win. Now Winchester will not submit, I trow,
Or be inferiour to the proudest Peere;
Humfrey of Gloster, thou shalt well perceive,
That neither in birth, or for authoritie,
The Bishop will be ouer-borne by thee:
Ile either make thee stoope, and bend thy knee,
Or sacke this Country with a mutiny. Exeunt

Scœna Tertia.

Enter Charles, Burgundy, Alanson, Bastard, Reignier, and Joan.

Char. These newes (my Lords) may cheare our drooping spirits:
'Tis said, the stout Parisians do reuolt,
And turne again vnto the warlike French.
Alan. Then march to Paris Royall Charles of France,
And keepe not backe your powers in dallyance.
Pucel. Peace be amongst them if they turne to vs,
Else ruine combate with their Palaces.
Enter Scout.
Scout. Successe vnto our valiant Generall,
And happinesse to his accomplices.
Char. What tidings send our Scouts? I prethee speak.
Scout. The English Army that diuided was
Into two parties, is now conioyn'd in one,
And means to give you battell presently.
Char. Somewhat too sodaine Sirs, the warning is,
But we will presently provide for them.
Bur. I trust the Ghost of Talbot is not there:
Now he is gone my Lord, you needs not feare.
Pucel. Of all base passions, Feare is most accurst.
Command the Conquest Charles, it shall be thine:
Let Henry fret, and all the world repine.
Char. Then on my Lords, and France be fortunate.
Exeunt Alarum. Excursions.

Enter Joan de Pucell.

Pur. The Regent conquers, and the Frenchmen fly,
Now help ye charming Spellies and Periapts,
And ye choise Spirits that admonish me,
And give me signes of future accidents. Thunder.
You speedy helpers, that are substitutes
Vnder the Lordly Monarch of the North,
Appeare, and aide me in this enterprize.
Enter Fiends.
This speedy and quicke appearance argues proofe
Of your accustom'd diligence to me.
Now ye Familiar Spirits, that are cull'd
Out of the powerfull Regions vnder earth,
Helpe me this once, that France may get the field.
They walke, and speake not.
Oh hold me not with silence ouer-long:
Where I was wont to feed you with my blood,
Ile lop a member off, and give it you,
In earnest of a further benefit:
So you do condiscend to helpe me now.
They hang their heads.
No hope to haue redresse? My body shall Pay recompence, if you will grant my suite.
They shake their heads.
Cannot my body, nor blood-sacrifice,
Intreate you to your wonted furtherance?
Then take my soule; my body, soule, and all,
Before that England give the French the foyle.
They depart.
See, they forsake me. Now the time is come,
That France must vale her lofty plumed Crest,
And let her head fall into Englands lappe.
My ancient Incantations are too weake.
And hell too strong for me to buckle with:
Now France, thy glory droopeth to the dust. Exit.

Excursions. Burgundie and Yorke fight hand to hand. French fly.

Yorke. Damzell of France, I thinke I haue you fast,
Vnchaine your spirits now with spelling Charmes,
And try if they can gaine your liberty.
A goodly prize, fit for the diuels grace.
See how the vgly Witch doth bend her browes,
As if with Circe, she would change my shape.
Pur. Chang'd to a worser shape thou canst not be.
Yor. Oh, Charles the Dolphin is a proper man,
No shape but his can please your dainty eye.
Pur. A plaguing mischeefe light on Charles, and thee,
And may ye both be suddenly surprizd
By bloudy hands, in sleeping on your beds.
Yorke. Fell banning Hagge, inchantresse hold thy tongue.
Pur. I prethee give me leyse to curse awhile.
Yorke. Curse Miscreant, when thou comest to the stake.
Exeunt.

Alarum. Enter Suffolke with Margaret in his hand.

Suf. Be what thou wilt, thou art my prisoner.
Gazes on her.
Oh Fairest Beauty, do not feare, nor fye:
For I will touch thee but with reuerend hands.
I kisse these fingers for eternall peace,
And lay them gently on thy tender side.
Who art thou, say? that I may honor thee.
Mar. Margaret my name, and daughter to a King,
The King of Naples, who so ere thou art.
Suf. An Earle I am, and Suffolke am I call'd
Be not offended Natures myracle,
Thou art ordered to be tane by me:
So doth the Swan her downie Signets saue,

Oh fear,

Keeping them prisoner vnderneath his wings:
Yet if this seruile vsage once offend,
Go, and be free againe, as Suffolkes friend. She is going
Oh stay: I haue no power to let her passe,
My hand would free her, but my heart sayes no.
As playes the Sunne vpon the glassie streames,
Twinkling another counterfetted beame,
So seemes this gorgeous beauty to mine eyes,
Faine would I woe her, yet I dare not speake:
Ile call for Pen and Inke, and write my minde:
Fye De la Pole, disable not thy selfe:
Hast not a Tongue? Is she not heere?
Wilt thou be daunted at a Womans sight?
I: Beauties Princely Maiesty is such,
Confounds the tongue, and makes the senses rough.
Mar. Say Earle of Suffolke, if thy name be so,
What ransome must I pay before I passe?
For I perceiue I am thy prisoner.
Suf. How canst thou tell she will deny thy suite,
Before thou make a triall of her loue?
M. Why speak'st thou not? What ransom must I pay?
Suf. She's beautifull; and therefore to be Wooed:
She is a Woman; therefore to be Wonne.
Mar. Wilt thou accept of ransome, yea or no?
Suf. Fond man, remember that thou hast a wife,
Then how can Margaret be thy Paramour?
Mar. I were best to leaue him, for he will not heare.
Suf. There all is marr'd: there lies a cooling card.
Mar. He talkes at random: sure the man is mad.
Suf. And yet a dispensation may bee had.
Mar. And yet I would that you would answer me.
Suf. Ile win this Lady Margaret. For whom?
Why for my King: Tush, that's a woodden thing.
Mar He talkes of wood: It is some Carpenter.
Suf. Yet so my fancy may be satisfied,
And peace establisht betweene these Realmes.
But there remaines a scruple in that too:
For though her Father be the King of Naples,
Duke of Anion and Maine, yet is he poore,
And our Nobility will scorne the match.
Mar. Heare ye Captaine? Are you not at leysure?
Suf. It shall be so, disdaine they ne're so much:
Henry is youthfull, and will quickly yeeld.
Madam, I haue a secret to reueale.
Mar. What though I be inthral'd, he seeme a knight
And will not any way dishonor me.
Suf. Lady, vouchsafe to listen what I say.
Mar. Perhaps I shall be rescu'd by the French,
And then I need not crauie his curtesie.
Suf. Sweet Madam, giue me hearing in a cause.
Mar. Tush, women haue beene captiuate ere now.
Suf. Lady, wherefore talke you so?
Mar. I cry you mercy, 'tis but Quid for Quo.
Suf. Say gentle Princesse, would you not suppose
Your bondage happy, to be made a Queene?
Mar. To be a Queene in bondage, is more vile,
Than is a slaue, in base seruilitie:
For Princes should be free.
Suf. And so shall you,
If happy Englands Royal) King be free.
Mar. Why what concernes his freedome vnto me?
Suf. Ile vndertake to make thee Henries Queene,
To put a Golden Sceptre in thy hand,
And set a precious Crowne vpon thy head,
If thou wilt condiscend to be my——
Mar What?
Suf. His loue.
Mar. I am vnworthy to be Henries wife.
Suf. No gentle Madam, I vnworthy am
To woe so faire a Dame to be his wife,
And haue no portion in the choice my selfe.
How say you Madam, are ye so content?
Mar. And if my Father please, I am content.
Suf. Then call our Captaines and our Colonels forth,
And Madam, at your Fathers Castle walles,
We'l crauie a parley, to conferre with him.
Sound. Enter Reignier on the walles.
See Reignier see, thy daughter prisoner.
Reig. To whom?
Suf. To me.
Reig. Suffolke, what remedy?
I am a Souldier, and vnapt to weepe,
Or to exclaime on Fortunes fickleneſſe.
Suf. Yes, there is remedy enough my Lord,
Consent, and for thy Honor giue consent,
Thy daughter shall be wedded to my King.
Whom I with paine haue wooed and wonne thereto:
And this her easie held imprisonment,
Hath gain'd thy daughter Princely libertie.
Reig. Speaker Suffolke as he thinkes?
Suf. Faire Margaret knowes,
That Suffolke doth not flatter, face, or faine.
Reig. Vpon thy Princely warrant, I descend,
To giue thee answer of thy iust demand.
Suf. And heere I will expect thy comming.

Trumpets sound. Enter Reignier.

Reig. Welcome braue Earle into our Territories,
Command in Anion what your Honor pleases.
Suf. Thanks Reignier, happy for so sweet a Childe,
Fit to be made companion with a King:
What answer makes your Grace vnto my suite?
Reig. Since thou dost deigne to woe her little worth,
To be the Princely Bride of such a Lord:
Vpon condition I may quietly
Enioy mine owne, the Country Maine and Anion,
Free from oppression, or the stroke of Warre,
My daughter shall be Henries, if he please.
Suf. That is her ransome, I deliver her,
And those two Counties I will vndertake
Your Grace shall well and quietly enioy.
Reig. And I again in Henries Royall name,
As Deputy vnto that gracious King,
Giue thee her hand for signe of plighted faith.
Suf. Reignier of France, I giue thee Kingly thanks,
Because this is in Traffickes of a King.
And yet me thinkes I could be well content
To be mine owne Attorney in this case.
Ile ouer then to England with this newes,
And make this marriage to be solemnis'd:
So farewell Reignier, lo this Diamond safe
In Golden Palaces as it becomes.
Reig. I do embrace thee, as I would embrace
The Christian Prince King Henrie were he heere.
Mar. Farewell my Lord, good wishes, praise, & prayers,
Shall Suffolke euer haue of Margaret. She is going.
Suf. Farwell sweet Madam: but hearke you Margaret,
No Princely commendations to my King.
Mar. Such commendations as becomes a Maide,
A Virgin, and his Seruant, say to him.
Suf. Words sweetly plac'd, and modestie directed,

But Madame, I must trouble you again,
No loving Token to his Maiestie?
Mar. Yes, my good Lord, a pure vnspotted heart,
Never yet taint with loue, I send the King.
Suf. And this withall. Kisse her.
Mar. That for thy selfe, I will not so presume,
To send such peeuish tokens to a King.
Suf. Oh wert thou for my selfe: but Suffolke stay,
Thou mayest not wander in that Labyrinth,
There Minotaurs and vgly Treasons lurke,
Solicite Henry with her wonderous praise.
Bethinke thee on her Vertues that surmount,
Mad naturall Graces that extinguish Art,
Repeate their semblance often on the Sea,
That when thou com'st to kneele at Henries feete,
Thou mayest bereaue him of his wits with wonder. Exit

Enter Yorke, Warwicke, Shepheard, Pucell.

Yor. Bring forth that Sorceresse condemn'd to burne.
Shep. Ah Ioan, this kills thy Fathers heart outright,
Haue I sought every Country farre and neere,
And now it is my chance to finde thee out,
Must I behold thy timelesse cruell death:
Ah Ioan, sweet daughter Ioan, I'le die with thee.
Pucel. Decrepit Miser, base ignoble Wretch,
I am descended of a gentler blood.
Thou art no Father, nor no Friend of mine.
Shep. Out, out: My Lords, and please you, 'tis not so
I did beget her, all the Parish knowes:
Her Mother liueth yet, can testifie
She was the first fruite of my Bach'lership.
War. Graceless, wilt thou deny thy Parentage?
Yorke. This argues what her kinde of life hath beene,
Wicked and vile, and so her death concludes.
Shep. Fye Ioan, that thou wilt be so obstacle.
God knowes, thou art a collop of my flesh,
And for thy sake haue I shed many a teare:
Deny me not, I prythee, gentle Ioan.
Pucel. Peasant auant. You haue suborn'd this man
Of purpose, to obscure my Noble birth.
Shep. 'Tis true, I gaue a Noble to the Priest,
The morne that I was wedded to her mother.
Kneele downe and take my blessing, good my Girle.
Wilt thou not stoope? Now curse d be the time
Of thy nativitie: I would the Milke
Thy mother gaue thee when thou suck'd her brest,
Had bin a little Rats-bane for thy sake.
Or else, when thou didst keepe my Lambes a-field,
I wish some ravenous Wolfe had eaten thee.
Doest thou deny thy Father, cursed Drab?
O burne her, burne her, hanging is too good. Exit.
Yorke. Take her away, for she hath liu'd too long,
To fill the world with vicious qualities.
Pur. First let me tell you whom you haue condemn'd;
Not me, begotten of a Shepheard Swaine,
But issued from the Progeny of Kings.
Vertuous and Holy, chosen from aboue,
By inspiration of Celestiall Grace,
To worke exceeding miracles on earth.
I never had to do with wicked Spirits.
But you that are polluted with your lusts,
Seam'd with the guiltlesse blood of Innocents,
Corrupt and tainted with a thousand Vices:
Because you want the grace that others haue,
You judge it straight a thing impossible
To compasse Wonders, but by helpe of diuels.
No misconceyued, Ioan of Arc hath beene
A Virgin from her tender infancie,
Chaste, and immaculate in very thought,
Whose Maiden-blood thus rigorously effus'd,
Will cry for Vengeance, at the Gates of Heauen.
Yorke. Lay away with her to execution.
War. And beare ye sirs: because she is a Maide,
Spare for no Faggots, let there be enow:
Place barrelles of pitch vpon the fatall stake,
That so her torture may be shortned.
Pur. Will nothing turne your vnrelenting hearts?
Then Ioan discouer thine infirmity,
That warranteth by Law, to be thy priuiledge.
I am with childe ye bloody Homicides
Murther not then the Fruite within my Wombe,
Although ye hale me to a violent death.
Yor. Now heauen forfend, the holy Maid with child?
War. The greatest miracle that ere ye wrought,
Is all your strict precisenesse come to this?
Yorke. She and the Dolphin haue bin iogling,
I did imagine what would be her refuge.
War. Well go too, we'll haue no Bastards liue.
Especially since Charles must Father it.
Pur. You are deceyu'd, my childe is none of his,
It was Alanson that inioy'd my loue.
Yorke. Alanson that notorious Machevile?
It dyes, and if it had a thousand liues.
Pur. Oh gree me leaue, I haue deluded you,
'Twas neyther Charles, nor yet the Duke I nam'd,
But Reignier King of Naples that preuayl'd
War. A married man, that's most intolerable.
Yor. Why here's a Gyrle: I think she knowes not well
(There were so many) whom she may accuse.
War. It's signe she hath beene liberall and free
Yor. And yet forsooth she is a Virgin pure.
Strumpet, thy words condemne thy Brat, and thee.
Vse no intreaty, for it is in vaine
Pu. Then lead me hence: with whom I leaue my curse.
May never glorious Sunne reflex his beames
Vpon the Country where you make abode.
But darknesse, and the gloomy shade of death
Inuiron you, till Mischeefe and Dispaire,
Driue you to break your necks, or hang your selues. Exit

Enter Cardinall.

Yorke. Breake thou in peeces, and consume to ashes,
Thou sowle accursed minister of Hell.
Car. Lord Regent, I do greete your Excellence
With Letters of Commission from the King.
For know my Lords, the States of Christendome,
Mou'd with remorse of these outrageous broyles,
Haue earnestly implor'd a generall peace.
Betwixt our Nation, and the aspiring French;
And heere at hand, the Dolphin and his Traine
Approacheth, to conferre about some matter.
Yorke. Is all our cruell toyl turn'd to this effect,
After the slaughter of so many Peeres,
So many Captaines, Gentlemen, and Soldiers,
That in this quarrell haue beene overthrowne,
And sold their bodyes for their Country's benefit,
Shall we at last conclude effeminate peace?
Haue we not lost most part of all our Towns,
By Treason, Falshood, and by Treachery,
Our great Progenitors had conquered:
Oh Warwicke, Warwicke, I foresee with greefe
The vtter losse of all the Realme of France.
War. Be patient Yorke, If we conclude a Peace

It shall be with such strict and seuere Couenants,
As little shall the Frenchmen gaine thereby.

Enter Charles, Alanson, Bastard, Reignier.

Char. Since Lords of England, it is thus agreed,
That peaceful truce shall be proclaim'd in France,
We come to be informed by your selues,
What the conditions of that league must be.
Yorks. Speake Winchester, for boyling choller chokes
The hollow passage of my poyson'd voyce,
By sight of these our baleful enemies.
Win. Charles, and the rest, it is enacted thus:
That in regard King Henry giues consent,
Of meere compassion, and of lenity,
To ease your Countrie of distressefull Warre,
And suffer you to breath in fruitfull peace,
You shall become true Liegemen to his Crowne.
And Charles, vpon condition thus wilt sweare
To pay him tribute, and submit thy selfe,
Thou shalt be plac'd as Viceroy vnder him,
And still enioy thy Regall dignity.
Alan. Must he be then as shadow of himselfe?
Adorne his Temples with a Coronet,
And yet in substance and authority,
Retaine but priuiledge of a priuate man?
This proffer is absurd, and reasonlesse.
Char. Tis knowne already that I am possest
With more then halfe the Gallian Territories,
And therein reuerenc'd for their lawfull King.
Shall I for lucre of the rest vn-vanquisht,
Detract so much from that prerogatiue,
As to be call'd but Viceroy of the whole?
No Lord Ambassador, I'le rather keepe
That which I haue, than coueting for more
Be cast from possibility of all.
Yorke. Insulting Charles, hast thou by secret meanes
Vs'd intercession to obtaine a league.
And now the matter growes to compremize,
Stand'st thou aloofe vpon Comparison.
Either accept the Title thou vsurp'st,
Of benefit proceeding from our King,
And not of any challenge of Desert,
Or we will plague thee with incessant Warres
Reig. My Lord, you do not well in obstinacy,
To cauill in the course of this Contract:
If once it be neglected, ten to one
We shall not finde like opportunity.
Alan. To say the truth, it is your policie,
To saue your Subiects from such massacre
And ruthlesse slaughters as are dayly seene
By our proceeding in Hostility,
And therefore take this compact of a Truce,
Although you breake it, when your pleasure serues.
War. How sayst thou Charles?
Shall our Condition stand?
Char. It Shall:
Onely reserv'd, you claime no interest
In any of our Townes of Garrison.
Yor. Then sweare Allegeance to his Maiesty,
As thou art Knight, never to disobey,
Nor be Rebellious to the Crowne of England,
Thou nor thy Nobles, to the Crowne of England.
So, now dismisse your Army when ye please:
Hang vp your Ensignes, let your Drummes be still,
For heere we entertaine a solemne peace. Exeunt

Actus Quintus.

Enter Suffolke in conference with the King, Gloucester, and Exeter.

King. Your wondrous rare description (noble Earle)
Of beauteous Margaret hath astonish'd me:
Her vertues graced with externall gifts,
Do breed Loues settled passions in my heart,
And like as rigour of tempestuous gusts
Prouokes the mightiest Hulke against the tide,
So am I driuen by breath of her Renowne,
Either to suffer Shipwracke, or arriue
Where I may haue fruition of her Loue.
Suf. Tush my good Lord, this superficiall tale,
Is but a preface of her worthy praise:
The chiefe perfections of that louely Dame,
(Had I sufficient skill to vtter them)
Would make a volume of inticing lines,
Able to rauish any dull conceit.
And which is more, she is not so Diuine,
So full replete with choice of all delights,
But with as humble lowlinesse of minde,
She is content to be at your command:
Command I meane, of Vertuous chaste intents,
To Loue, and Honor Henry as her Lord.
King. And otherwise, will Henry ne're presume:
Therefore my Lord Protector, giue consent,
That Marg'ret may be Englands Royall Queene.
Glo. So should I give consent to flatter sinne.
You know (my Lord) your Highnesse is betroth'd
Vnto another Lady of esteeme,
How shall we then dispense with that contract,
And not deface your Honor with reproach?
Suf. As doth a Ruler with vnlawfull Oathes,
Or one that at a Triumph, having vow'd
To try his strength, forsaketh yet the Lists
By reason of his Aduersaries odds.
A poore Earles daughter is vnequall odds,
And therefore may be broke without offence.
Gloucester. Why what (I pray) is Margaret more than that?
Her Father is no better than an Earle,
Although in glorious Titles he excell.
Suf. Yes my Lord, her Father is a King,
The King of Naples, and Ierusalem,
And of such great Authoritie in France,
As his alliance will confirme our peace,
And keepe the Frenchmen in Allegeance.
Glo. And so the Earle of Arminiacke may doo.
Because he is neere Kinsman vnto Charles.
Exet. Besides, his wealth doth warrant a liberal dower,
Where Reignier sooner will receyue, than giue.
Suf. A Dowre my Lords? Disgrace not so your King,
That he should be so abiect, base, and poore,
To choose for wealth, and not for perfect Loue.
Henry is able to enrich his Queene,
And not to seeke a Queene to make him rich,
So worthlesse Peasants bargaine for their Wiues,
As Marketmen for Oxen, Sheepe, or Horse.
Marriage is a matter of more worth,
Then to be dealt in by Attorney-ship:
Not whom we will, but whom his Grace affects,

Must

Must be companion of his Nuptiall bed.
And therefore Lords, since he affects her most,
Most of all these reasons bindeth vs,
In our opinions she should be preferr'd.
For what is wedlocke forced, but a Hell,
An Age of discord and continuall strife,
Whereas the contrarie bringeth bliss,
And is a pattern of Celestiall peace.
Whom should we match with Henry being a King,
But Margaret, that is daughter to a King:
Her peerelesse feature, joyned with her birth,
Approues her fit for none, but for a King.
Her valiant courage, and vndaunted spirit,
(More then in women commonly is seene)
Will answer our hope in issue of a King.
For Henry, sonne vnto a Conqueror,
Is likely to beget more Conquerors,
If with a Lady of so high resolue,
(As is faire Margaret) he be link'd in loue.
Then yeild my Lords, and here conclude with me,
That Margaret shall be Queene, and none but shee.

King. Whether it be through force of your report,
My Noble Lord of Suffolke: Or for that
My tender youth was neuer yet attaint
With any passion of inflaming loue,
I cannot tell: but this I am assur'd,
I feele such sharpe dissension in my breast,
Such fierce alarums both of Hope and Feare,
As I am sicke with working of my thoughts.
Take therefore shipping, poste my Lord to France,
Agree to any couenants, and procure
That Lady Margaret do vouchsafe to come
To crosse the Sea to England, and be crown'd
King Henries faithfull and anointed Queene.
For your expences and sufficient charge,
Among the people gather vp a tenth.
Be gone I say, for till you do returne,
I rest perplexed with a thousand Cares.
And you (good Vncle) banish all offence:
If you do censure me, by what you were,
Not what you are, I know it will excuse
This sodaine execution of my will.
And so conduct me, where from company,
I may reuolue and ruminate my greefe. Exit.

Glo. I greefe I feare me, both at first and last.
Exit Gloucester.

Suf. Thus Suffolke hath preuail'd, and thus he goes
As did the youthfull Paris once to Greece,
With hope to finde the like event in loue,
But prosper better than the Troian did:
Margaret shall now be Queene, and rule the King:
But I will rule both her, the King, and Realme. Exit

FINIS.

The ſecond Part of Henry the Sixt, with the death of the Good Duke HVMFREY.

Actus Primus. Scœna Prima.

Flourish of Trumpets: Then Hoboyes.

Enter King, Duke Humfrey, Salisbury, Warwicke, and Beaufordon the one ſide.
The Queene, Suffolke, Yorke, Somerſet, and Buckingham, on the other.

Suffolke.

AS by your high Imperiall Maieſty,
I had in charge at my depart for France,
As Procurator to your Excellence,
To marry Princes Margaret for your Grace;
So in the Famous Ancient City, Tours,
In preſence of the Kings of France, and Sicill,
The Dukes of Orleance, Calabor, Britaigne, and Alanſon,
Seuen Earles, twelue Barons, & twenty reuerend Biſhops
I haue perform'd my Taſke, and was eſpous'd,
And humbly now vpon my bended knee,
In ſight of England, and her Lordly Peeres,
Deliuer vp my Title in the Queene
To your moſt gracious hands, that are the Subſtance
Of that great Shadow I did repreſent:
The happieſt Gift, that euer Marquiſſe gaue,
The Faireſt Queene, that euer King receiu'd.

King. Suffolke ariſe. Welcome Queene Margaret,
I can expreſſe no kinder ſigne of Loue
Then this kinde kiſſe: O Lord, that lend me life,
Lend me a heart replete with thankfulneſſe:
For thou haſt giuen me in this beauteous Face
A world of earthly bleſſings to my ſoule,
If Simpathy of Loue vnite our thoughts.

Queen. Great King of England, & my gracious Lord,
The mutuall conference that my minde hath had,
By day, by night; waking, and in my dreames,
In Courtly company, or at my Beades,
With you mine Alder liefeſt Soueraigne,
Makes me the bolder to ſalute my King,
With rudeſt termes, ſuch as my wit affoords,
And euer ioy of heart doth miniſter.

King. Her ſight did rauiſh, but her grace in Speech,
Her words yclad with wiſedomes Maieſty,
Makes me from Wondring, fall to Weeping ioyes,
Such is the Fulneſſe of my hearts content.
Lords, with one cheerefull voice, Welcome my Loue.

All Peers. Long liue Qu. Margaret, Englands happiness.

Queen. We thanke you all. Florſh

Suf. My Lord Protector, ſo it pleaſe your Grace,
Heere are the Articles of contracted peace,
Betweene our Soueraigne, and the French King Charles,
For eighteene moneths concluded by conſent.

Glo. Reads. Inprimis, It is agreed between the French K. Charles, and William de la Pole Marquiſſe of Suffolke, Ambaſſador for Henry King of England, That the ſaid Henry ſhal eſpouſe the Lady Margaret, daughter vnto Reignier King of Naples, Sicillia, and Ierueſalem, and Crowne her Queene of England, ere the thirtieth of May next enſuing.

Item, That the Dutchy of Anion, and the County of Maine, ſhall be releaſed and deliuered to the King her father.

King. Vncle, how now?

Glo. Pardon me gracious Lord,
Some ſodaine qualme hath ſtrucke me at the heart,
And dim'd mine eyes, that I can reade no further.

King. Vncle of Winchester, I pray read on.

Win. Item, It is further agreed between them, That the Dutchyes of Anion and Maine, ſhall be releaſed and delivered over to the King her Father, and ſent over of the King of Englands own proper Coſt and Charges, without hauing any Dowry.

King. They pleaſe vs well. Lord Marquis kneel down.
We heere create thee the firſt Duke of Suffolke,
And girt thee with the Sword. Coſin of Yorke,
We heere discharge your Grace from being Regent
I'th parts of France, till terme of eighteene Moneths
Be full expyr'd. Thankes Vncle Winchester,
Gloſter, Yorke, Buckingham, Somerſet,
Salisburie, and Warwicke.
We thanke you all for this great fauour done,
In entertainment to my Princely Queene.
Come, let vs in, and with all ſpeede prouide
To see her Coronation be perform'd.

Exit King, Queene, and Suffolke.

Manet the rest.

Glo. Braue Peeres of England, Pillars of the State,
To you Duke Humfrey must vnlood his greefe:
Your greefe, the common greefe of all the Land.
What? did my brother Henry ſpend his youth,
His valour, coine, and people in the warres?
Did he ſo often lodge in open field:
In Winters cold, and Summers parching heate,
To conquer France, his true inheritance?
And did my brother Bedford toyle his wits,

To

To keepe by policy what Henrie got:
Have you your selues, Somerset, Buckingham,
Brave Yorke, Salisbury, and victorious Warwicke,
Received deepe scarres in France and Normandie:
Or hath mine Vncle Beaufort, and my selfe,
With all the Learned Counsell of the Realme,
Studied so long, sat in the Councell house,
Early and late, debating too and fro
How France and Frenchmen might be kept in awe,
And hath his Highnesse in his infancie,
Crowned in Paris in despight of foes,
And shall these Labours, and these Honours dye?
Shall Henries Conquest, Bedfords vigilance,
Your Deeds of Warre, and all our Counsell dye?
O Peeres of England, shamefull is this League,
Fatall this Marriage, cancelling your Fame,
Blotting your names from Bookes of memory,
Raising the Characters of your Renowne,
Defacing Monuments of Conquest'd France,
Vndoing all as all had never bin.

Car. Nephew, what meanes this passionate discourse?
This preamble with such circumstance:
For France, 'tis ours; and we will keepe it still.

Glo. I Vncle, we will keepe it, if we can:
But now it is impossible we should.
Suffolke, the new made Duke that rules the rest,
Hath given the Dutchy of Anion and Mayne,
Vnto the poore King Reignier, whose large style
Agrees not with the leanenesse of his purse.

Sal. Now by the death of him that dyed for all,
These Countries were the Keyes of Normandie:
But wherefore weepes Warwicke, my valiant sonne?

War. For greefe that they are paid recouerie.
For were there hope to conquer them againe,
My sword should shed hot blood, mine eyes no teares.
Anion and Maine? My selfe did win them both:
Those Provinces, these Armes of mine did conquer,
And are the Cities that I got with wounds,
Deliver'd vp againe with peacefull words?
Mort Dieu.

Yor. For Suffolkes Duke, may he be suffocate,
That dims the Honor of this Warlike Ile:
France should have torne and rent my very heart,
Before I would have yeelded to this League.
I never read but Englands Kings have had
Large summes of Gold, and Dowries with their wives,
And our King Henry gives away his owne,
To match with her that brings no vantages.

Glo. A proper iest, and a strange heard before,
That Suffolke should demand a whole Fifteenth,
For Costs and Charges in transporting her:
She should have staid in France, and starv'd in France
Before——

Car. My Lord of Gloster, now ye grow too hot,
It was the pleasure of my Lord the King.

Glo. My Lord of Winchester I know your minde.
'Tis not my speeches that you do mislike:
But 'tis my presence that doth trouble ye,
Rancour will out, proud Prelate, in thy face
I see thy furie: If I longer stay,
We shall begin our ancient bickerings:
Lordings farewell, and say when I am gone,
I prophesied, France will be lost ere long. Exit Humfrey.

Car. So, there goes our Protector in a rage:
'Tis known to you he is mine enemy:
Nay more, an enemy vnto you all,
And no great friend, I feare me to the King:
Consider Lords, he is the next of blood,
And heyre apparant to the English Crowne.
Had Henrie got an Empire by his marriage,
And all the wealthy Kingdomes of the West,
There's reason he should be displeas'd at it:
Looke to it Lords, let not his smoothing words
Bewitch your hearts, be wise and circumspect.
What though the common people favour him,
Calling him, Humfrey the good Duke of Gloster,
Clapping their hands, and crying with loud voyce,
Iesu maintaine your Royall Excellence,
With God preserue the good Duke Humfrey:
I feare me Lords, for all this flattering glosse,
He will be found a dangerous Protector.

Buc. Why should he then protect our Soueraigne?
He being of age to governe of himselfe.
Cosin of Somerset, joyne you with me,
And altogether with the Duke of Suffolke,
We'l quickly hoyse Duke Humfrey from his seat.

Car. This weighty business will not brooke delay,
Ile to the Duke of Suffolke presently. Exit Cardinall.

Som. Cosin of Buckingham, though Humfries pride
And greatnesse of his place be greefe to vs,
Yet let vs watch the haughtie Cardinall,
His insolence is more intollerable
Then all the Princes in the Land beside,
If Gloster be displac'd, he'l be Protector.

Buc. Or thou, or I Somerset will be Protectors,
Despite Duke Humfrey, or the Cardinall.
Exit Buckingham, and Somerset.

Sal. Pride went before, Ambition follows him.
While these do labour for their owne preferment,
Behooves it vs to labor for the Realme.
I never saw but Humfrey Duke of Gloster,
Did bearе him like a Noble Gentleman:
Oft have I seene the haughty Cardinall,
More like a Souldier then a man o'th'Church,
As stout and proud as he were Lord of all,
Sweare like a Ruffian, and demeane himselfe
Vnlike the Ruler of a Common-weale.
Warwicke my sonne, the comfort of my age,
Thy deeds, thy plainnesse, and thy house-keeping,
Hath wonne the greatest favour of the Commons,
Excepting none but good Duke Humfrey.
And Brother Yorke, thy Acts in Ireland,
In bringing them to civill Discipline:
Thy late exploits done in the heart of France,
When thou wert Regent for our Soueraigne,
Have made thee fear'd and honor'd of the people,
Joyne we together for the publike good,
In what we can, to bridle and suppresse
The pride of Suffolke, and the Cardinall,
With Somersets and Buckinghams Ambition,
And as we may, cherish Duke Humfries deeds,
While they do tend the profit of the Land.

War. So God helpe Warwicke, as he loves the Land,
And common profit of his Country.

Yor. And so sayes Yorke,
For he hath greatest cause.

Salisbury. Then lets make haste away,
And looke vnto the maine.

Warwick. Vnto the maine?
O Father, Maine is lost,
That Maine, which by maine force Warwicke did winne,
And would have kept, so long as breath did last
Main

Main-chance father you meane, but I meant Maine,
Which I will win from France, or else be slaine.

Exit Warwicke, and Salisbury. Manet Yorke.

Yorke. Anjou and Maine are given to the French,
Paris is lost, the state of Normandie
Stands on a tickle point, now they are gone:
Suffolke concluded on the Articles,
The Peeres agreed, and Henry was well pleas'd,
To change two Dukedomes for a Duke faire daughter.
I cannot blame them all, what is't to them?
'Tis thine they give away, and not their owne.
Pirates may make cheape pennyworths of their pillage,
And purchase Friends, and give to Curtezans,
Still revelling like Lords till all be gone,
While as the silly Owner of the goods
Weepes over them, and wringes his hapleſse hands,
And ſhakes his head, and trembling ſtands aloofe,
While all is ſhar'd, and all is borne away,
Ready to ſtarve, and dare not touch his owne.
So Yorke muſt ſit, and fret, and bite his tongue,
While his owne Lands are bargain'd for, and ſold:
Me thinkes the Realmes of England, France, & Ireland,
Bear this proportion to my flesh and blood,
As did the fatall brand Althea burnt,
Vnto the Princes heart of Calidon:
Anjou and Maine both given vnto the French?
Cold newes for me: for I had hope of France,
Even as I have of fertile Englands ſoile.
A day will come, when Yorke ſhall claime his owne,
And therefore I will take the Nevils parts,
And make a ſhew of love to proud Duke Humfrey,
And when I ſpy advantage, claime the Crowne,
For that's the Golden marke I ſeeke to hit:
Nor ſhall proud Lancaſter vſurpe my right,
Nor hold the Scepter in his childiſh Fiſt,
Nor weare the Diadem vpon his head,
Whoſe Church-like humors fits not for a Crowne.
Then Yorke be ſtill a-while, till time do ſerve:
Watch thou, and wake when others be aſleepe,
To pry into the ſecrets of the State,
Till Henrie ſurfetting in loyes of loue,
With his new Bride, & Englands deere bought Queen,
And Humfrey with the Peeres be falſe at iarres:
Then will I raiſe aloft the Milke-white-Roſe,
With whoſe ſweet ſmell the Ayre ſhall be perfum'd,
And in in my Scandard beare the Armes of Yorke,
To grapple with the houſe of Lancaſter,
And force perforce I'le make him yeeld the Crowne,
Whoſe bookiſh Rule, hath pull'd faire England downe.

Exit Yorke.

Enter Duke Humfrey and his wife Eleanor.

Ele. Why droopes my Lord like over-ripen'd Corn,
Hanging the head at Ceres plenteous load?
Why doth the Great Duke Humfrey knit his browes,
As frowning at the Peeres of the world?
Why are thine eyes fixt to the fullen earth,
Gazing on that which ſeemes to diſmiſſe thy ſight?
What ſeeſt thou there? King Henries Diadem,
Inchac'd with all the Honors of the world?
If ſo, Gaze on, and groveil on thy face,
Vntill thy head be circled with the ſame.
Put forth thy hand, reach at the glorious Gold.
What, is't too ſhort? I'le lengthen it with mine,
And having both together heav'd it vp,
We'l both together lift our heads to heaven,
And never more abaſe our ſight ſo low,
As to vouchſafe one glance vnto the ground.

Hum. O Nell, ſweet Nell, if thou doſt loue thy Lord,
Baniſh the Canker of ambitious thoughts:
And may that thought, when I imagine ill
Againſt my King and Nephew, vertuous Henry,
Be my laſt breathing in this mortall world.
My troublous dreames this night, doth make me ſad.

El. What dream'd my Lord, tell me, and I'le requeſt it
With ſweet rehearſall of my mornings dreame?

Hum. Me thought this ſtaffe mine Office-badge in Court
Was broke in twaine: by whom, I have forget,
But as I think, it was by th Cardinall,
And on the pieces of the broken Wand
Were plac'd the heads of Edmund Duke of Somerſet,
And William de la Pole firſt Duke of Suffolke.
This was my dreame, what it doth bode God knowes.

El. Tut, this was nothing but an argument,
That he that breakes a ſticke of Glosters grove,
Shall looſe his head for his preſumption.
But liſt to me my Humfrey, my ſweete Duke:
Me thought I ſate in Seate of Maieſty,
In the Cathedrall Church of Weſtminſter,
And in that Chaire where Kings & Queene were crowned,
Where Henrie and Dame Margaret kneel'd to me,
And on my head did ſet the Diadem.

Hum. Nay Eleanor, then muſt I chide outright:
Preſumptuous Dame, ill-nurtur'd Eleanor,
Art thou not ſecond Woman in the Realme?
And the Protectors wife below'd of him?
Haſt thou not worldly pleaſure at command,
Above the reach or compaſſe of thy thought?
And wilt thou ſtill be hammering Treachery,
To tumble downe thy husband, and thy ſelfe,
From top of Honor, to Diſgraces feete?
Away from me, and let me heare no more.

Ele. What, what, my Lord? Are you ſo choleriche
With Eleanor, for telling but her dreame?
Next time I'le keepe my dreames vnto my ſelfe,
And not be check'd.

Hum. Nay be not angry, I am pleas'd againe.

Enter Meſſenger.

Meſſ. My Lord Protector, 'tis his Highnes pleaſure,
You do prepare to ride vnto S. Albons,
Where as the King and Queene do meane to Hawke.

Ele. I go. Come Nel thou wilt ride with vs? Ex. Eleno.

El. Yes my good Lord, I'le follow preſently.
Follow I muſt, I cannot go before,
While Gloſter bears this baſe and humble minde.
Were I a Man, a Duke, and next of blood,
I would remoue theſe tedious ſtumbling blocks,
And ſmooth my way vpon their headlieſt necks.
And being a woman, I will not be ſlacke
To play my part in Fortunes Pageant.
Where are you there? Sir John; nay feare not man,
We are alone, here's none but thee, & I. Enter Iohn.

Hume. Ieſus preſerve your Royall Maieſty.

Ele. What ſaid thou? Maieſty? I am but Grace.

Hume. But by the grace of God, and Humes advice,
Your Graces Title ſhall be multiplied.

Ele. What ſaid thou man? Hath thou as yet conferr'd
With Margaret Iordane the cunning Witch,
With Roger Bollingbroke the Conjurer?
And will they vndertake to do me good?

Hume. This they have promiſed to ſhew your Highnes
A Spirit rais'd from depth of vnder ground,

Thee

That shall make answere to such Questions,
As by your Grace shall be propounded him.

Eleanor. It is enough, I'le thinke vpon the Questions:
When from Saint Albones we doe make returne,
We'le set these things effected to the full.
Here Hume, take this reward, make merry man
With thy Confederates in this weighsie cause.

Exit Eleanor.

Hume. Hume must make merry with the Duchesse Gold:
Marry and shall Hume know how sayes, Sir Iohn Hume?
Seale vp your Lips, and giue no words but Mum,
The business asketh silent secrecie.
Dame Eleanor gives Gold, to bring the Witch:
Gold cannot come amisse, were she a Deuill,
Yet haue I Gold flyes from another Coast:
I dare not say, from the rich Cardinall,
And from the great and new-made Duke of Suffolke;
Yet I doe finde it so: for to be plaine,
They (knowing Dame Eleanor's aspiring humor)
Haue hyred me to vnder-mine the Duchesse,
And buzza these Conjurations in her brayne.
They say, A crafty Knaue do's need no Broker,
Yet am I Suffolke and the Cardinalls Broker.
Hume, if you take not heed, you shall goe neere
To call them both a payre of crafty Knaues.
Well, so it stands: and thou I feare at last,
Hume Knauerie will be the Duchesse Wracke,
And her Attainture will be Humphreyes fall:
Sort how it will, I shall haue Gold for all. Exit.

Enter three or foure Petitioners, for Armours Man being one.

1. Pet. My Masters, let's stand close, my Lord Protector will come this way by and by, and then wee may deliuer our Supplications in the Quill.

2. Pet. Marry the Lord protect him, for he's a good man, Iesu bless him.

Enter Suffolke, and Queene.

Peter. Here a comes me thinkes, and the Queene with him: Ile be the first sure.

2. Pet. Come backe foole, this is the Duke of Suffolk, and not my Lord Protector.

Suff. How now fellow, would'st any thing with me?

1. Pet. I pray my Lord pardon me, I tooke ye for my Lord Protector.

Queene. To my Lord Protector? Are your Supplications to his Lordship? Let me see them: what is thine?

1. Pet. Mine is, and't please your Grace, against Iohn Goodman, my Lord Cardinals Man, for keeping my House, and Lands, and Wife and all, from me.

Suff. Thy Wife too? that's some Wrong indeede. What's yours? What's heere? Against the Duke of Suffolke, for enclosing the Commons of Melforde. How now, Sir Knaue?

2. Pet. Alas Sir, I am but a poore Petitioner of our whole Township.

Peter. Against my Master Thomas Horner, for saying, That the Duke of Yorke was rightfull Heire to the Crowne.

Queene. What say'st thou? Did the Duke of Yorke say, hee was rightfull Heire to the Crowne?

Peter. That my Mistresse was? No forsooth: my Master said, That he was, and that the King was an Vsurper.

Suff. Who is there?

Enter Seruant.

Take this fellow in, and send for his Master with a Pursiuant presently: we'le heare more of your master before the King. Exit.

Queene. And as for you that loue to be protected
Vnder the Wings of our Protectors Grace,
Begin your Suites anew, and sue to him.

Teare the Supplication.

Away, base Cullions! Suffolke let them goe.

All. Come, let's be gone. Exit.

Queene. My Lord of Suffolke, say, Is this the guise?
Is this the Fashions in the Court of England?
Is this the Gouernment of Britaines Ile?
And this the Royaltie of Albions King?
What, shall King Henry be a Pupill still,
Vnder the surly Glosters Gouernance?
Am I a Queene in Title and in State,
And must be made a Subiect to a Duke?
I tell thee Poole, when in the Citie Tours
Thou ran'st a-tilt in honor of my Loue,
And stol'st away the Ladies hearts of France;
I thought King Henry had resembled thee,
In Courage, Courtship, and Proportion:
But all his minde is bent to Holinesse,
To number Aue-Marie on his Beades:
His Champions are the Prophets and Apostles
His Weapons, holy Saws of sacred Writ,
His Speare is his Tilt-yard, and his Loues
Are brazen Images of Canonized Saints.
I would the Colledge of the Cardinalls
Would chuse him Pope, and carry him to Rome,
And set the Triple Crowne vpon his Head;
That were a State fit for his Holinesse.

Suff. Madame be patient: as I was cause
Your Highnesse came to England, so will I
In England worke your Graces full content.

Queene. Beside the haughtie Protector, haue we Beaufort
The imperious Churchman; Somerset, Buckingham,
And grumbling Yorke; and not the least of these,
But can doe more in England then the Noble:
Salisbury and Warwick are no simple Peeres.

Queene. Not all these Lords do vex me half so much,
As that proud Dame, the Lord Protector's Wife:
She sweepes it through the Court with troops of Ladies,
More like an Emperesse, then Duke Humphreyes Wife:
Strangers in Court, doe take her for the Queene:
She beares a Duke's Reuenewes on her backe,
And in her heart she scornes our Pouertie:
Shall I not liue to be auenged on her?
Contemptuous base-borne Callot as she is,
She vaunted 'mongst her Minions t'other day,
The very traine of her worst wearing Gowne,
Was better worth then all my Fathers Lands,
Till Suffolke gaue two Dukedomes for his Daughter.

Suff. Madame, my selfe haue lym'd a Bush for her,
And plac'd a Quiere of such enticing Birds,
That she will light to listen to the Layes,
And never mount to trouble you againe.
So let her rest: and Madame list to me,
For I am bold to counsaile you in this;
Although she fancie not the Cardinall,
Yet must we joyne with him and with the Lords,
Till we haue brought Duke Humphrey in disgrace.

As for the Duke of Yorke, this late Complaint
Will make but little for his benefit:
So one by one we'le weed them all at last,
And you your selfe shall steere the happy Helme. Exit.

Sound a Sonnet.

Enter the King, Duke Humfrey, Cardinall, Buckingham, Yorke, Salisbury, Warwicke, and the Duchesse.

King. For my part, Noble Lords, I care not which,
Or Somerset, or Yorke, all's one to me.
Yorke. If Yorke have ill demean'd himselfe in France,
Then let him be denay'd the Regent-ship.
Som. If Somerset be vnworthy of the Place,
Let Yorke be Regent, I will yeeld to him.
Warw. Whether your Grace be worthy, yea or no,
Dispute not that, Yorke is the worthyer.
Card. Ambitious Warwicke, let thy betters speake.
Warw. The Cardinall's not my better in the field.
Buck. All in this presence are thy betters, Warwicke.
Warw. Warwicke may liue to be the best of all.
Salisb. Peace Sonne, and shew some reason Buckingham
Why Somerset should be preferr'd in this?
Queene. Because the King forsooth will haue it so.
Humf. Madame, the King is old enough himselfe
To giue his Censure: These are no Womens matters.
Queene. If he be old enough, what needs your Grace
To be Protector of his Excellence?
Humf. Madame, I am Protector of the Realme,
And at his pleasure will resigne my Place.
Suff. Resigne it then, and leaue thine insolence.
Since thou wert King; as who is King, but thou?
The Common-wealth hath dayly run to wreck,
The Dolphin hath preuayl'd beyond the Sea,
And all the Peeres and Nobles of the Realme
Haue beene as Bond-men to thy Soueraignetie.
Card. The Commons hast thou rackt, the Clergies Bags
Are lanke and leane with thy Extortions.
Som. Thy sumptuous Buildings, and thy Wiues Attyre
Haue cost a masse of publique Treasurie.
Buck. Thy Cruelties in execution
Vpon Offendors, hath exceeded Law,
And left thee to the mercy of the Law.
Queene. Thy sale of Offices and Tytles in France,
If they were know'ne, as the suspect is great,
Would make thee quickly hop without thy Head.
Exit Humfrey.
Giue me my Fanne: what, Minion, can ye not?
She gives the Duchesse a box on the eare.
I cry you mercy, Madame: was it you?
Duch. Was't I? yea, I it was, proud French-women:
Could I come neere your Beautie with my Nayles,
I could set my ten Commandements in your face.
King. Sweet Aunt be quiet, 'twas against her will.
Duch. Against her will, good King? looke to't in time
She'le hamper thee, and dandle thee like a Baby:
Though in this place most Master weare no Breeches,
She shall not strike Dame Eleanor vnreuenged.
Exit Eleanor.
Buck. Lord Cardinall, I will follow Eleanor,
And listen after Humfrey, how he proceedes:
She's tickled now, her Fume needs no spurres,
She's gallop farre enough to her destruction.
Exit Buckingham.

Enter Humfrey.

Humf. Now Lords, my Choller being ouer-blowne,
With walking once about the Quadrangle,
I come to talke of Common-wealth Affayres.
As for your spiteful false Obiections,
Prouse them, and I lye open to the Law:
But God in mercie so deale with my Soule,
As I in duie loue my King and Country.
But to the matter that we haue in hand:
I say, my Soueraigne, Yorke is meetest man
To be your Regent in the Realme of France.
Suff. Before we make election, giue me leaue
To shew some reason, of no little force,
That Yorke is most vnmeet of any man.
Yorke. Ile tell thee, Suffolke, why I am vnmeet.
First, for I cannot flatter thee in Pride:
Next, if I be appointed for the Place,
My Lord of Somerset will keepe me here,
Without Discharge, Money, or Furniture,
Till France be wonne into the Dolphins hands:
Last time I dan'c't attendance on his will,
Till Paris was besieg'd, famisht, and lost.
Warw. That can I witnesse, and a fouler fact
Did neuer Traytor in the Land commit.
Suff. Peace head-strong Warwicke.
Warw. Image of Pride, why should I hold my peace?

Enter Armorer and his Man.

Suff. Because here is a man accused of Treason,
Pray God the Duke of Yorke excuse himselfe.
Yorke. Doth any one accuse Yorke for a Traytor?
King. What mean'st thou, Suffolke? tell me, what are these?
Suff. Please it your Maiestie, this is the man
That doth accuse his Master of High Treason;
His words were these: That Richard, Duke of Yorke,
Was rightfull Heire vnto the English Crowne,
And that your Maiestie was an Vsurper.
King. Say man, were these thy words?
Armorer. And't shall please your Maiestie, I neuer (God not thought any such matter: God is my witnesse, I am falsely accus'd by the Villaine.
Peter. By these ten bones, my Lords, he did speake them to me in the Garret one Night, as we were scouring my Lord of Yorkes Armor.
Yorke. Base Dunghill Villaine, and Mechanicall
Ile haue thy Head for this thy Traytorous speech:
I doe beseech your Royall Maiestie,
Let him haue all the rigor of the Law.
Armorer. Alas, my Lord, hang me if euer I spake the words: my accuser is my Prentice, and when I did correct him for his fault the other day, he did vow vpon his knees he would be euen with me: I haue good witnesse
of this; therefore I beseech your Maiestie, doe not cast away an honest man for a Villaines accusation.
King. Vncle, what shall we say to this in law?
Humf. This doome, my Lord, if I may judge:
Let Somerset be Regent o're the French,
Because in Yorke this breedes suspition;
And let these haue a day appointed them
For single Combat, in conuenient place,
For he hath witnesse of his seruants malice:
This is the Law, and this Duke Humfreys doome.

Sam. I humbly thanke your Royall Maiestie.

Armurer. And I accept the Combat willingly.

Peter. Alas, my Lord, I cannot fight; for Gods sake pitty my case: the spight of man preuayleth against me. O Lord haue mercy vpon me, I shall neuer be able to fight a blow: O Lord my heart.

Hume. Sirrha, or you must fight, or else be hang'd.

King. Away with them to Prison: and the day of Combat, shall be the last of the next moneth. Come Somerset, wee'le see thee sent away.

Flourish. Exeunt.

Enter the Witch, the two Priests, and Bullingbrooke.

Hume. Come my Masters, the Duchesse I tell you expects performance of your promises.

Bulling. Master Hume, we are therefore prouided: will her Ladyship behold and heare our Exorcismes?

Hume. I, what else? feare you not her courage.

Bulling. I haue heard her reported to be a Woman of an inuincible spirit: but it shall be conuenient, Master Hume, that you be by her aloft, while wee be busie below; and so I pray you goe in Gods Name, and leaue vs.

Exit Hume.

Mother Iordan, be you prostrate, and grouell on the Earth; Iohn Southwell reade you, and let vs to our worke.

Enter Eleanor aloft.

Eleanor. Well said my Masters, and welcome all: To this geere, the sooner the better.

Bullen. Patience, good Lady, Wizards know their times: Deepe Night, darke Night, the silent of the Night, The time of Night when Troy was set on fire, The time when Screech-owles cry, and Bandogs howle, And Spirits walke, and Ghosts breake vp their Graues; That time best fits the worke we haue in hand. Madame, sit you, and feare not: whom wee raise, Wee will make fast within a hallow'd Verge.

Here doe the Ceremonies belonging, and make the Circle, Bullingbrooke or Southwell reades, Conjuro te, &c. It Thunders and Lightens terribly: then the Spirit riseth.

Spirit. Ad sum.

Witch. Asmath, by the eternall God, Whose name and power thou trembleest at, Answere that I shall aske: for till thou speake, Thou shalt not passe from hence.

Spirit. Aske what thou wilt; that I had sayd, and done.

Bulling. First of the King: What shall of him become?

Spirit. The Duke yet liues, that Henry shall depose: But him out-liue, and dye a violent death.

Bulling. What fates await the Duke of Suffolke?

Spirit. By Water shall he dye, and take his end.

Bulling. What shall befall the Duke of Somerset?

Spirit. Let him shun Castles, Safer shall he be vpon the sandie Plaines, Then where Castles mounted stand. Haue done, for more I hardly can endure.

Bulling. Discend to Darknesse, and the burning Lake: False Fiend auoide.

Thunder and Lightning. Exit Spirit.

Enter the Duke of Yorke and the Duke of Buckingham with their Guard, and breake in.

Yorke. Lay hands vpon these Traytors, and their trash: Beldam I thinke we watch'd you at an inch. What Madame, are you there? the King & Commonweale Are deeply indebted for this peece of paines; My Lord Protector will, I doubt it not, See you well guerdon'd for these good deserts.

Eliznor. Not halfe so bad as thine to Englands King, Iniurious Duke, that threatest where's no cause.

Buck. True Madame, none at all: what call you this? Away with them, let them be clapt vp close, And kept asunder: you Madame shall with vs. Stafford take her to thee. We'le see your Trinkets here all forth-comming. All away. Exit

Yorke. Lord Buckingham, me thinks you watch'd her well: A pretty Plot, well chosen to build vpon. Now pray my Lord, let's see the Deuils Writ. What haue we here? Reades.

The Duke yet liues, that Henry shall depose:
But him out-liue, and dye a violent death.

Why this is just Aio Æacida Romanos vincere posse.
Well, to the rest:
Tell me what fate awaits the Duke of Suffolke?
By Water shall he dye, and take his end.
What shall betide the Duke of Somerset?
Let him shunne Castles,
Safer shall he be vpon the sandie Plaines,
Then where Castles mounted stand.
Come, come, my Lords,
These Oracles are hardly attain'd,
And hardly vnderstood.
The King is now in progresse towards Saint Albanes,
With him, the Husband of this louely Lady:
Thither goes these Newes,
As fast as Horse can carry them:
A sorry Breakfast for my Lord Protector.

Buck. Your Grace shal giue me leaue, my Lord of Yorke, To be the Poste, in hope of his reward.

Yorke. At your pleasure, my good Lord. Who's within there, hoe?

Enter a Seruingman.

Inuite my Lords of Salisbury and Warwick To suppe with me to morrow Night. Away.

Exeunt.

Enter the King, Queene, Protector, Cardinall, and Suffolke, with Faulkners hallowing.

Queene. Beleeue me Lords, for flying at the Brooke, I saw not better sport these seuen yeeres day: Yet by your leaue, the Winde was very high, And ten to one, old Ioane had not gone out.

King. But what a point, my Lord, your Faulcon made, And what a pytch she flew aboue the rest: To see how God in all his Creatures workes, Yea Man and Birds are fayne of climbing high.

Suff. No marueil, and it like your Maiestie, My Lord Protectors Hawkes doe towre so well, They know their Master loues to be aloft, And beares his thoughts aboue his Faulcons Pitch.

Glost. My Lord, 'tis but a base ignoble mynde, That mounts no higher then a Bird can soare.

Card. I thought as much, he would be above the Clouds.

Glos. I my Lord Cardinall, how thinke you by that? Were it not good your Grace could flye to Heauen?

King. The Treasurie of everlasting Ioy.

Card. Thy Heauen is on Earth, thine Eyes & Thoughts Beat on a Crowne, the Treasure of thy Heart, Pernitious Protector, dangerous Peere, That smooth'st it so with King and Common-weale.

Glos. What, Cardinall? Is your Priest-hood growne peremptorie?

Tantæne animis Cælestibus iræ, Church-men so hot? Good Vncle hide such malice:
With such Holynesse can you doe it?

Suff. No malice Sir, no more then well becomes So good a Quarrell, and so bad a Peere.

Glos. As who, my Lord?

Suff. Why, as you, my Lord, Ant like your Lordly Lords Protectorship.

Glos. Why Suffolke, England knowes thine insolence.

Queene. And thy Ambition, Gloster.

King. I prythee peace, good Queene, And whet not on these furious Peeres, For blessed are the Peace-makers on Earth.

Card. Let me be blessed for the Peace I make Against this proud Protector with my Sword.

Glos. Faith holy Vncle, would't were come to that.

Card. Marry, when thou dar'st.

Glos. Make vp no factious numbers for the matter, In thine owne person answere thy abuse.

Card. I, where thou dar'st not peepe: And if thou dar'st, this Euening, On the East side of the Grouе.

King. How now, my Lords?

Card. Believe me, Cousin Gloster, Had not your man put vp the Fowle so suddenly, We had had more sport. Come with thy two-hand Sword.

Glos. True Vncle, are ye aduis'd? The East side of the Grouе:
Cardinall, I am with you.

King. Why how now, Vncle Gloster?

Glos. Talking of Hawking; nothing else, my Lord. Now by Gods Mother, Priest, I'le shaue your Crowne for this, Or all my Fence shall fayle.

Card. Medice teipsum, Protector see to't well, protect your selfe.

King. The Winds grow high, So doe your Stomacks, Lords: How irksome is this Musick to my heart? When such Strings iarre, what hope of Harmony? I pray my Lords let me compound this strife.

Enter one crying a Miracle.

Glos. What meanes this noyse? Fellow, what Miracle do'st thou proclayme?

One. A Miracle, a Miracle.

Suffolke. Come to the King, and tell him what Miracle.

One. Forsooth, a blinde man at Saint Albones Shrine, Within this halfe houre hath receiu'd his sight, A man that ne're saw in his life before.

King. Now God be prays'd, that to beleeuing Soules Gives Light in Darknesse, Comfort in Despaire.

Enter the Maior of Saint Albones, and his Brethren, bearing the man between two in a Chayre.

Card. Here comes the Towne-men, on Procession, To present your Highnesse with the man.

King. Great is his comfort in this Earthly Vale, Although by his sight his sinne be multiplyed.

Glos. Stand by, my Masters, bring him neere the King, His Highnesse pleasure is to talke with him.

King. Good-fellow, tell vs here the circumstance, That we for thee may glorifie the Lord. What, hast thou beene long blinde, and now restor'd?

Simp. Borne blinde, and't please your Grace.

Wife. I indeede was he.

Suf. What Women is this?

Wife. His Wife, and't like your Worship.

Glos. Hadst thou been his Mother, thou could'st haue better told.

King. Where wert thou borne

Simp. At Berwick in the North, and't like your Grace.

King. Poore Soule, Gods goodnesse hath beene great to thee: Let neuer Day nor Night vnhallowed passe, But still remember what the Lord hath done.

Queene. Tell me, good-fellow, Cam'st thou here by Chance, or of Deuotion, To this holy Shrine:

Simp. God knowes of pure Deuotion, Being call'd a hundred times, and ofter, In my sleepe, by good Saint Albon: Who said; Symon, come; come offer at my Shrine, And I will helpe thee.

Wife. Most true, forsooth: And many time and oft my selfe hath heard a Voyce, To call him so.

Card. What, art thou lame?

Simp. I, God Almightie helpe me.

Suf. How cam'st thou so?

Simp. A fall off of a Tree.

Wife. A Plum-tree, Master.

Glos. How long hast thou beene blinde?

Simp. O borne so, Master.

Glos. What, and would'st climbe a Tree?

Simp. But that in all my life, when I was a youth.

Wife. Too true, and bought his climbing very dearе.

Glos. Mastie, thou lou'dst Plummes well, that would'st venture so.

Simp. Alas, good Master, my Wife desired some Damsons, and made me climbe, with danger of my Life.

Glos. A subtill Knaue, but yet it shall not serue: Let me see thine Eyes: winck now, now open them, In my opinion, yet thou seest not well.

Simp. Yes Master, cleere as day, I thanke God and Saint Albones.

Glos. Say'st thou me so: what Colour is this Cloake of?

Simp. Red Master, Red as Blood.

Glos. Why that's well said: What Colour is my Gowne of?

Simp. Black forsooth, Coale-Black, as Iet.

King. Why then, thou know'st what Colour Iet is of?

Suf. And yet I thinke, Iet did he neuer see.

Glos. But

Glos. But Cloaths and Gowns, before this day, a many.

Wife. Never before this day, in all his life.

Glos. Tell me Sirrha, what's my Name?

Simp. Alas Master, I know not.

Glos. What's his Name?

Simp. I know not.

Glos. Nor his?

Simp. No indeede, Master.

Glos. What's thine owne Name?

Simp. Saunder Simpcox, and if it pleale you, Master

Glos. Then Saunder, sit there,
The lying'st Knave in Christendome.
If thou hadst been borne blinde,
Thou mightst as well have knowne all our Names,
As thus to name the severall Colours we doe weare.
Sight may distinguish of Colours:
But suddenly to nominate them all,
It is impossible.
My Lords, Saint Albons here hath done a Miracle:
And would ye not thinke it, Cousning to be great,
That could restore this Cripple to his Legges again.

Simp. O Master, that you could?

Glos. My Masters of Saint Albons,
Have you not Beadles in your Towne,
And Things call'd Whippers?

Maior. Yes, my Lord, if it please your Grace.

Glos. Then send for one presently.

Maior. Sirrha, goe fetch the Beadle hither straight.

Exit.

Glos. Now fetch me a Stoole hither by and by.
Now Sirrha, if you meane to save your selfe from Whipping, leape me over this Stoole, and runne away.

Simp. Alas Master, I am not able to stand alone:
You goe about to torture me in vaine.

Enter a Beadle with Whippes.

Glos. Well Sir, we must have you finde your Legges.
Sirrha Beadle, whippe him till he leape over that same Stoole.

Beadle. I will, my Lord.
Come on Sirrha, off with your Doublet, quickly.

Simp. Alas Master, what shall I doe? I am not able to stand.

After the Beadle hath hit him once, he leapes over the Stoole, and runnes away: and they follow, and cry, A Miracle.

King. O God, seest thou this, and bearest so long?

Queene. It made me laugh, to see the Villaine runne.

Glos. Follow the Knave, and take this Drab away.

Wife. Alas Sir, we did it for pure need.

Glos. Let thé be whipt through every Market Towne,
Till they come to Berwick, from whence they came.

Exit.

Card. Duke Humfrey has done a Miracle to day.

Suff. True: made the Lame to leape and flye away.

Glos. But you have done more Miracles than I:
You made in a day, my Lord, whole Townes to flye.

Enter Buckingham.

King. What Tidings with our Cousin Buckingham?

Buck. Such as my heart doth tremble to unfold:
A sort of naughtie persons, lewdly bent,
Under the Countenance and Confederacie
Of Lady Eleanor, the Protectors Wife,
The Ring-leader and Head of all this Rout,
Have preadis'd dangerously against your State,
Dealing with Witches and with Conjurers,
Whom we have apprehended in the Fact,
Raysing up wicked Spirits from under ground,
Demanding of King Henries Life and Death,
And other of your Highnesse Princie Councell,
As more at large your Grace shall understand.

Card. And so my Lord Protector, by this meanes
Your Lady is forth-comming, yet at London.
This Newes I thinke hath turn'd your Weapons edge;
'Tis like, my Lord, you will not keepe your hoare.

Glos. Ambitious Churchman, leave to afflict my heart:
Sorrow and griefe have vanquisht all my powers;
And vanquisht as I am, I yeild to thee,
Or to the meanest Groome.

King. O God, what mischiefes worke the wicked ones?
Heaping confusion on their owne heads thereby.

Queene. Glostar, see here the Tainture of thy Nest,
And leaste thy selfe be guiltlesse, thou were best.

Glos. Madame, for my selfe, to Heaven I doe appeale,
How I have lov'd my King, and Common-weale:
And for my Wife, I know not how it stands,
Sorry I am to heare what I have heard.
Noble she is: but if shes have forgot
Honor and Vertue, and convers't with such,
As like to Pytch, defile Nobilitie;
I banish her my Bed, and Companie,
And give her as a Prey to Law and Shame,
That hath dis-honored Glostar's honest Name.

King. Well, for this Night we will repose vs here:
To morrow toward London, back again,
To looke into this Businesse thoroughly,
And call these foule Offenders to their Answeres;
And poyse the Cause in Justice equall Scales,
Whose Beame stands sure, whose rightful cause prevailes.

Flourish. Exeunt.

Enter Yorke, Salisbury, and Warwick.

Yorke. Now my good Lords of Salisbury & Warwick,
Our simple Supper ended, give me leave,
In this close Walke, to satisfie my selfe,
In craving your opinion of my Title,
Which is infallible, to Englands Crowne.

Salisb. My Lord, I long to heare it at full.

Warw. Sweet Yorke begin: and if thy clayme be good,
The Nevils are thy Subjects to command.

Yorke. Then thus:
Edward the third, my Lords, had seven Sonnes:
The first, Edward the Black-Prince, Prince of Wales;
The second, William of Hatfield; and the third,
Lionel, Duke of Clarence; next to whom,
Was John of Gaunt, the Duke of Lancaster;
The fift, was Edmund Langley, Duke of Yorke;
The first, was Thomas of Woodstock, Duke of Glostar;
William of Windsor was the seventh, & last.
Edward the Black-Prince dyed before his Father,
And left behinde him Richard, his onely Sonne,
Who after Edward the third's death, reign'd as King,
Till Henry Bullingbrooke, Duke of Lancaster,
The eldest Sonne and Heire of John of Gaunt,
Crown'd by the Name of Henry the fourth,
Seiz'd on the Realme, depos'd the rightfull King,
Sent his poore Queene to France, from whence she came,

And

And him to Pumfret; where, as all you know,
Harmelesse Richard was murthered traiterously.
Warw. Father, the Duke hath told the truth;
Thus got the House of Lancaster the Crowne.
Yorke. Which now they hold by force, and not by right:
For Richard, the first Sonnes Heire, being dead,
The Issue of the next Sonne should haue reign'd.
Salisb. But William of Hatfield dyed without an Heire.
Yorke. The third Sonne, Duke of Clarence,
From whose Line I clayme the Crowne,
Had Issue Phillip, a Daughter,
Who married Edmond Mortimer, Earle of March:
Edmond had Issue, Roger, Earle of March;
Roger had issue, Edmond, Anne, and Eleanor.
Salisb. This Edmond, in the Reigne of Bullingbrooke,
As I haue read, layd clayme vnto the Crowne,
And but for Owen Glendower, had beene King;
Who kept him in Captiuitie, till he dyed.
But, to the rest.
Yorke. His eldest Sister, Anne,
My Mother, being Heire vnto the Crowne,
Merryed Richard, Earle of Cambridge,
Who was to Edmonds Longlye,
Edward the thirds fift Sonnes Sonne;
By her I clayme the Kingdome:
She was Heire to Roger, Earle of March,
Who was the Sonne of Edmond Mortimer,
Who married Phillip, sole Daughter
Vnto Lionel, Duke of Clarence.
So, if the Issue of the elder Sonne
Succeed before the younger, I am King.
Warw. What plaine proceedings is more plain then this?
Henry doth clayme the Crowne from Iohn of Gaunt,
The fourth Sonne, Yorke claymes it from the third:
Till Lionels Issue fayles, his should not reigne.
It fayles not yet, but flourishes in thee,
And in thy Sonnes, faire slippes of such a Stock.
Then Father Salisbury, kneele we together,
And in this priuate Plot be we the first,
That shall salute our rightefull Soueraigne
With honor of his Birth-right to the Crowne.
Both. Long liue our Soueraigne Richard, Englands King.
Yorke. We thanke you Lords:
But I am not your King, till I be Crown'd,
And that my Sword be stayn'd
With heart-blood of the House of Lancaster.
And that's not suddenly to be perform'd,
But with aduice and silent secrecie.
Doe you as I doe in these dangerous dayes,
Winke at the Duke of Suffolkes insolence,
At Beaufords Pride, at Somersets Ambition,
At Buckingham, and all the Crew of them,
Till they haue snar'd the Shepheard of the Flock,
That vertuous Prince, the good Duke Humfrey:
'Tis that they seeke; and they, in seeking that,
Shall finde their deaths, if Yorke can prophesie.
Salisb. My Lord, breake we off; we know your minde at full.
Warw. My heart assures me, that the Earle of Warwick
Shall one day make the Duke of Yorke a King.
Yorke. And Neuill, this I doe assure my selfe,
Richard shall liue to make the Earle of Warwick
The greatest man in England, but the King.
Exeunt.

Sound Trumpets. Enter the King and State, with Guard, to banish the Duchess.

King. Stand forth Dame Eleanor Cobham,
Gloster's Wife:
In sight of God, and vs, your guilt is great,
Receiue the Sentence of the Law for sinne,
Such as by Gods Booke are adiudg'd to death.
You foure from hence to Prison, back againe;
From thence, vnto the place of Execution.
The Witch in Smithfield shall be burnt to ashes,
And you three shall be strangled on the Gallowes.
You Madame, for you are more Nobly borne,
Despoyled of your Honor in your Life,
Shall, after three dayes open Penance done,
Liue in your Countrey here, in Banishment,
With Sir Iohn Stanly, in the Ile of Man.
Eleanor. Welcome is Banishment, welcome were my Death.
Glost. Eleanor, the Law thou seest hath iudged thee,
I cannot iustifie whom the Law condemnes:
Mine eyes are full of teares, my heart of griefe.
Ah Humfrey, this dishonor in thine age,
Will bring thy head with sorrow to the ground.
I beseech your Maiestie giue me leaue to goe;
Sorrow would solace, and mine Age would ease.
King. Stay Humfrey, Duke of Gloster,
Ere thou goe, giue vp thy Staffe,
Henry will to himselfe Protector be,
And God shall be my hope, my stay, my guide,
And Lanthorne to my feete:
And goe in peace, Humfrey, no lesse belou'd,
Then when thou wert Protector to thy King.
Queene. I see no reason, why a King of yeeres
Should be to be protected like a Child,
God and King Henry gouerne Englands Realme:
Giue vp your Staffe, Sir, and the King his Realme.
Glost. My Staffe? Here, Noble Henry, is my Staffe:
As willingly doe I the same resigne,
As ere thy Father Henry made it mine;
And euen as willingly at thy feete I leaue it,
As others would ambitiously receiue it.
Farewell good King: when I am dead, and gone,
May honourable Peace attend thy Throne.
Exit Gloster.
Queene. Why now is Henry King, and Margaret Queene,
And Humfrey, Duke of Gloster, scarce himselfe,
That bestes so shrewd a maynes: two Pulls at once;
His Lady banisht, and a Limbe lopt off
This Staffe of Honor raught, there let it stand,
Where it best fits to be, in Henries hand.
Suff. Thus droopes this loftie Pyne, & hangs his sprayes,
Thus Eleanors Pride dyes in her youngest dayes.
Yorke. Lords, let him goe. Please it your Maiestie,
This is the day appointed for the Combat,
And ready are the Appellant and Defendant,
The Armorer and his Man, to enter the Lists,
So please your Highnesse to behold the fight.
Queene. I, good my Lords; for purposely therefore Left I the Court, to see this Quarrell tryde.
King. A Gods Name see the Lyfts and all things fit,
Here let them end it, and God defend the right.
Yorke. I never saw a fellow worse bestead,
Or more afraid to fight, then is the Appellant,
The seruant of this Armorer, my Lords.

Enter

Enter at one Doore the Armorer and his Neighbours drinking to him so much, that he is drunke; and he enters with a Drummer before him, and his Staffe, with a Sand-bagge fastned to it: and at the other Doore his Man, with a Drummer and Sand-bagge, and Prentices drinking to him.

1. Neighbor. Here Neighbour Horner, I drinke to you in a Cup of Sack; and feare not Neighbor, you shall doe well enough.

2. Neighbor. And here Neighbour, here's a Cuppe of Charneco.

3. Neighbor. And here's a Pot of good Double-Beare Neighbor: drinke, and feare not your Man.

Armorer. Let it come yfaith, and I le pledge you all, and a figge for Peter.

1. Prent. Here Peter, I drinke to thee, and be not afraid.

2. Prent. Be merry Peter, and feare not thy Master, Fight for credit of the Prentices.

Peter. I thanke you all: drinke, and pray for me, I pray you, for I thinke I have taken my last Draught in this World. Here Robin, and if I dye, I give thee my Aporne; and Will, thou shalt have my Hammer: and here Tom, take all the Money that I have. O Lord blesse me, I pray God, for I am never able to deale with my Master, he hath learnt so much fence already.

Salsb. Come, leave your drinking, and fall to blowes. Sirrha, what's thy Name?

Peter. Peter forsooth.

Salsb. Peter? what more?

Peter. Thumpe.

Salsb. Thumpe? Then see thou thumpe thy Master well.

Armorer. Masters, I am come hither as it were vpon my Mans instigation, to prove him a Knave, and my selfe an honest man: and touching the Duke of Yorke, I will take my death, I never meant him any ill, nor the King, nor the Queene: and therefore Peter have at thee with a downe-right blow.

Yorke. Dispatch, this Knaves tongue begins to double. Sound Trumpets, Alarum to the Combattants.

They fight, and Peter strikes him downe.

Armorer. Hold Peter, hold, I confesse, I confesse Treason.

Yorke. Take away his Weapon: Fellow thanke God, and the good Wine in thy Masters way.

Peter. O God, have I overcome mine Enemies in this presence? O Peter, thou hast prevayl'd in right.

King. Goe, take hence that Traytor from our sight,
For by his death we doe perceive his guilt,
And God in Justice hath reveal'd to vs
The truth and innocence of this poore fellow,
Which he had thought to have murther'd wrongfully.
Come fellow, follow vs for thy Reward.

Sound a flourish. Exeunt.

Enter Duke Humfrey and his Men in Mourning Cloakes.

Glos. Thus sometimes hath the brightest day a Cloud:
And after Summer, evermore succeedes
Barren Winter, with his wrathfull nipping Cold;
So Cares and Joyes abound, as Seasons fleet.
Sirs, what's a Clock?

Serv. Tenne, my Lord.

Glos. Tenne is the houre that was appointed me,
To watch the comming of my punisht Duchesse:
Vneath may shee endure the flinte Streets,
To tread them with her tender-feeling feet.
Sweet Nell, ill can thy Noble Minde abrooke
The abject People, gazing on thy face,
With enuious Lookes laughing at thy shame,
That erst did follow thy prowd Chariot-Wheeles,
When thou didst ride in triumph through the streets.
But soft, I thinke she comes, and I le prepare
My teare-stayn'd eyes, to see her Miseries.

Enter the Duchesse in a white Sheet, and a Taper burning in her hand, with the Sheriffe and Officers.

Serv. So please your Grace, we'le take her from the Sherife.

Glos. No, stirre not for your lives, let her passe by.

Eleanor. Come you, my Lord, to see my open shame?
Now thou do'st Penance too. Looke how they gaze,
See how the giddy multitude doe point,
And nodde their heads, and throw their eyes on thee.
Ah Glester, hide thee from their hatefull looks,
And in thy Closet pent vp, rue my shame,
And banne thine Enemies, both mine and thine.

Glos. Be patient, gentle Nell, forget this griefe.

Eleanor. Ah Glester, teach me to forget my selfe:
For whilest I thinke I am thy married Wife,
And thou a Prince, Protector of this Land;
Me thinkes I should not thus be led along,
Mayl'd vp in shame, with Papers on my back,
And follow'd with a Rabble, that rejoyce
To see my teares, and heare my deepe-fet groanes.
The ruthlesse Flint doth cut my tender feet,
And when I start, the enuious people laugh,
And bid me be aduised how I tread.
Ah Humfrey, can I beare this shamefull yoake?
Trowest thou, that e're I le looke vpon the World,
Or count them happy, that enjoyes the Sunne?
No: Darke shall be my Light, and Night my Day.
To thinke vpon my Pompe, shall be my Hell.
Sometime I le say, I am Duke Humfreys Wife,
And he a Prince, and Ruler of the Land:
Yet so he rul'd, and such a Prince he was,
As he stood by, whilest I, his forlorne Duchesse,
Was made a wonder, and a pointing stock
To every idle Rascall follower.
But be thou milde, and blush not at my shame,
Nor stirre at nothing, till the Axe of Death
Hang over thee, as sure it shortly will.
For Suffolke, he that can doe all in all
With her, that hateth thee and hates vs all,
And Yorke, and impious Beaufort, that false Priest,
Haue all lym'd Bushes to betray thy Wings,
And flye thou how thou canst, they'le tangle thee.
But feare not thou, until thy foot be fast'd,
Nor never seeke prevention of thy foes.

Glos. Ah Nell, forbeare: thou workest all awry.
I must offend, before I be attainted:
And had I twentie times so many foes,
And each of them had twentie times their power,
All these could not procure me any scathe,
So long as I am loyall, true, and crimeless.
Would'st haue me rescue thee from this reproach?

Why yet thy scandall were not wipt away,
But I in danger for the breach of Law.
Thy greatest helpe is quiet, gentle Nell:
I pray thee sort thy heart to patience,
These few dayes wonder will be quickly worne.

Enter a Herald.

Her. I summon your Grace to his Maiesties Parliament,
Holden at Bury, the first of this next Moneth.

Glos. And my consent ne're ask'd herein before?
This is close dealing. Well, I will be there.
My Nell, I take my leave: and Master Sheriffe,
Let not her Penance exceede the Kings Commission.

Sh. And't please your Grace, here my Commission stayes:
And Sir John Stanly is appointed now,
To take her with him to the Ile of Man.

Glos. Must you, Sir John, protect my Lady here?

Stanly. So am I given in charge, may't please your Grace.

Glos. Entreat her not the worse, in that I pray
You vse her well: the World may langh againe,
And I may live to doe you kindnesse, if you doe it her.
And so Sir John, farewell.

Eleanor What, gone my Lord, and bid me not farewell?

Glos. Witnesse my teares, I cannot stay to speake.

Exit Glester.

Eleanor. Art thou gone so? all comfort goe with thee,
For none abides with me: my loy, is Death;
Death, at whose Name I oft haue beene afear'd,
Because I wish'd this World's eternitie.
Stanley, I prethee goe, and take me hence,
I care not whither, for I begge no fauor;
Onely conuey me where thou art commanded.

Stanley. Why, Madame, that is to the Ile of Man,
There to be vs'd according to your State.

Eleanor. That's bad enough, for I am but reproach:
And shall I then be vs'd reproachfully?

Stanley. Like to a Duchesse, and Duke Humfreys Lady,
According to that State you shall be vs'd.

Eleanor. Sheriffe farewell, and better than I fare,
Although thou hast beene Conduct of my shame.

Sheriffe. It is my Office, and Madame pardon me.

Eleanor. I, I, farewell, thy Office is discharg'd:
Come Stanley, shall we goe?

Stanley. Madame, your Penance done,
Throw off this Sheet,
And goe we to attyre you for our Iourney.

Eleanor. My shame will not be shifted with my Sheet:
No, it will hang vpon my richest Robes,
And shew it selfe, attyre me how I can.
Goe, leade the way, I long to see my Prison. Exeunt

Sound a Sonet. Enter King, Queene, Cardinall, Suffolke, Yorke, Buckingham, Salisbury, and Warwicke, to the Parliament.

King. I muse my Lord of Glester is not come:
'Tis not his wont to be the hindmost man,
What e're occasion keepes him from vs now.

Queene. Can you not see? or will ye not observe
The strangenesse of his alter'd Countenance?
With what a Maiestie he beares himselfe,
How insolent of late he is become,
How proud, how peremptorie, and vnlike himselfe.
We know the time since he was milde and affable,
And if we did but glance a farre-off Looke,
Immediately he was vpon his Knee,
That all the Court admir'd him for submission.
But meet him now, and be it in the Morne,
When every one will give the time of day,
He knits his Brow, and shewes an angry Eye,
And passeth by with stiffe vnbowed Knee,
Disdaining duetie that to vs belongs.
Small Corres are not regarded when they grynne,
But great men tremble when the Lyon roares,
And Humfrey is no little Man in England.
First note, that he is neere you in discent,
And should you fall, he is the next will mount.
Me seemeth then, it is no Policie,
Respecting what a rancorous minde he beares,
And his aduantage following your decease,
That he should come about your Royall Person,
Or be admitted to your Highnesse Counsell.
By flatterie hath he wonne the Commons hearts:
And when he please to make Commotion,
'Tis to be fear'd they all will follow him.
Now 'tis the Spring, and Weeds are shallow-rooted,
Suffer them now, and they'le o're-grow the Garden,
And choake the Herbes for want of Husbandry.
The reuerent care I beare vnto my Lord,
Made me collect these dangers in the Duke.
If it be fond, call it a Women feare:
Which feare, if better Reasons can supplant,
I will subscribe, and say I wrong'd the Duke.
My Lord of Suffolke, Buckingham, and Yorke,
Reprooue my allegation, if you can,
Or else conclude my words effectuall.

Suff. Well hath your Highnesse seene into this Duke:
And had I first beene put to speake my minde,
I thinke I should haue told your Graces Tale.
The Duchesse, by his subornation,
Vpon my Life began her diuellish practises:
Or if he were not priuie to those Faults,
Yet, by reputing of his high discent,
As next the King, he was successiue Heire,
And such high vaunts of his Nobilitie,
Did instigate the Bedlam braine-sick Duchesse,
By wicked meanes to frame our Soueraignes fall.
Smooth runnes the Water, where the Brooke is deepe,
And in his simple shew he harbours Treason.
The Fox barkes not, when he would steale the Lambe.
No, no, my Soueraigne, Glester is a man
Vnsounded yet, and full of deepe deceit.

Card. Did he not, contrary to forme of Law,
Deuise strange deaths, for small offences done?

Yorke. And did he not, in his Protectorship,
Leuie great summes of Money through the Realme,
For Souldiers pay in France, and never sent it?
By meanes whereof, the Townes each day reuolted.

Buck. Tut, these are petty faults to faults vnknown,
Which time will bring to light in smooth Duke Humfrey.

King. My Lords at once: the care you haue of vs,
To mowe downe Thornes that would annoy our Foot,
Is worthy praysse: but shall I speake my conscience,
Our Kinsman Glester is as innocent,
From meaning Treason to our Royall Person,
As is the sucking Lambe, or harmelesse Doue:
The Duke is vertuous, milde, and too well given,
To dreame on euill, or to worke my downefall.

Qu. Ah what's more dangerous, then this fond affiance?
Seemes he a Doue? his feathers are but borrow'd,
For he's disposed as the hateful Raven.
Is he a Lambe? his Skinne is surely lent him,

For

For hee's enclin'd as is the ravenous Wolves.
Who cannot steale a shape, that means deceit?
Take head, my Lord, the welfare of vs all,
Hangs on the cutting short that fraudfull man.

Enter Somerset.

Som. All health vnto my gracious Soueraigne.
King. Welcome Lord Somerset: What Newes from France?
Som. That all your Interest in those Territories,
Is vtterly bereft you: all is lost.
King. Cold Newes, Lord Somerset: but Gods will be done.
Yorke. Cold Newes for me: for I had hope of France,
As firmely as I hope for fertile England.
Thus are my Blossomes blasted in the Bud,
And Caterpillers eate my Leaues away:
But I will remedie this geere ere long,
Or sell my Title for a glorious Graue.

Enter Gloucester.

Glos. All happinesse vnto my Lord the King:
Pardon, my Liege, that I haue stay'd so long.
Suf. Nay Gloster, know that thou art come too soone,
Vnlesse thou were more loyall than thou art:
I doe arreest thee of High Treason here.
Glos. Well Suffolke, thou shalt not see me blush,
Nor change my Countenance for this Arrest:
A Heart vnspotted, is not easily daunted.
The purest Spring is not so free from mudde,
As I am cleare from Treason to my Soueraigne.
Who can accuse me? wherein am I guilty?
Yorke. 'Tis thought, my Lord,
That you tooke Bribes of France,
And being Protector, stay'd the Souldiers pay,
By meanes whereof, his Highnesse hath lost France.
Glos. Is it but thought so?
What are they that thinke it?
I never tob'd the Souldiers of their pay,
Nor ever had one penny Bribe from France.
So helpe me God, as I haue watcht the Night,
I, Night by Night, in studying good for England.
That Dore that ere I wrested from the King,
Or any Grosse I hoarded to my vse,
Be brought against me at my Tryall day.
No: many a Pound of mine owne proper store,
Because I would not taxe the needie Commons,
Haue I dis-persed to the Garrisons,
And never ask'd for restitution.
Card. It serues you well, my Lord, to say so much.
Glos. I say no more than truth, so helpe me God.
Yorke. In your Protectorship, you did deuise
Strange Tortures for Offenders, never heard of,
That England was defam'd by Tyrannie.
Glos. Why 'tis well known, that whiles I was Protector,
Pitie was all the fault that was in me:
For I should melt at an Offenders teares,
And lowly words were Ransome for their fault:
Vnlesse it were a bloody Murtherer,
Or foule felonious Theefe, that fleec'd poore passengers,
I never gaue them condigne punishment.
Murther indeede, that bloudie sinne, I tortur'd
Above the Felon, or what Trespas else.
Suf. My Lord, these faults are easie, quickly answer'd
But mightier Crimes are lay'd vnto your charge,
Whereof you cannot easily purge your selfe.
I doe arreest you in his Highnesse Name,
And here commit you to my Lord Cardinall
To keepe, vntill your further time of Tryall.
King. My Lord of Gloster, 'tis my speciall hope,
That you will cleare your selfe from all suspence,
My Conscience tells me you are innocent.
Glos. Ah gracious Lord, these dayes are dangerous:
Vertue is choakt with foule Ambition,
And Charitie chas'd hence by Rancours hand;
Foule Subornation is predominant,
And Equitie exil'd your Highnesse Land.
I know, their Complot is to haue my Life:
And if my death might make this Iland happy,
And prove the Period of their Tyrannie,
I would expend it with all willingnesse.
But mine is made the Prologue to their Play:
For thousands more, that yet suspect no perill,
Will not conclude their plotted Tragedie.
Beaufords red sparkling eyes blab his hearts malice,
And Suffolks cloudie Brow his stormie hate;
Sharpe Buckingham vnburthens with his tongue,
The enuious Lord that lyes vpon his heart:
And dogged Yorke, that reaches at the Moone,
Whose ouer-weening Arme I haue plucke back,
By false accuse doth levell at my Life.
And you, my Soueraigne Lady, with the rest,
Causeless haue lay'd disgraces on my head,
And with your best endeauour haue stirr'd vp
My tiedest Liege to be mine Enemie:
I, all of you haue lay'd your heads together,
My selfe had notice of your Conuenticles,
And all to make away my guiltlesse Life.
I shall not want false Witnesse, to condemne me,
Nor store of Treasons, to augment my guilt:
The ancient Proverbe will be well effected,
A Staffe is quickly found to beat a Dogge.
Card. My Liege, his raying is intolerable.
If those that care to keepe your Royall Person
From Treasons secret Knife, and Traytors Rage,
Be thus vpbraydad, chid, and rated at,
And the Offendor graunted scope of speech,
'Twill make them coole in zeale vnto your Grace.
Suf. Hath he not twit our Soueraigne Lady here
With ignominious words, though Clarkely couch't?
As if she had suborned some to sweare
False allegations, to o'erthrow his state.
Qu. But I can giue the loser leaue to chide.
Glos. Faire Queen speake thou meant: I lose indeede,
Beftrew the winners, for they play'd me false.
And well such losers may haue leaue to speake.
Buck. He'le wrest the sence, and hold vs here all day.
Lord Cardinall, he is your Prisoner.
Card. Sirs, take away the Duke, and guard him sure.
Glost. Ah, thus King Henry throwes away his Crutch,
Before his Legges be growne to beare his Body.
Thus is the Shepheard beaten from thy side,
And Wolues are gnarling, who shall gnaw thee first.
Ah thus my feare were false, ah thus it were;
For good King Henry, thy decay I feare. Exit Gloster.
King. My Lords, what to your wisdomes seemeth best,
Doe, or vndoe, as if our selfe were here.
Queene. What, will your Highnesse leaue the Parliament?
King. I Margaret: my heart is drown'd with griefe,
Whose flood begins to flowe within mine eyes;
My Body round engyrt with miseries:

For what's more miserable then Discontent?
Ah Vncle Humfrey, in thy face I see
The Map of Honor, Truth, and Loyaltie.
And yet, good Humfrey, in the houre to come,
That ere I prou'd thee false, or fear'd thy faith.
What lowring Starre now enuies thy estate?
That these great Lords, and Margaret our Queene,
Doe seeke subuersion of thy harmelesse Life.
Thou neuer didst them wrong, nor no man wrong:
And as the Butcher takes away the Calfe,
And binds the Wretch, and bears it when it crayes,
Bearing it to the bloody Slaughter-house;
Euen so remorselesse haue they borne him hence:
And as the Damme runnes lowing vp and downe,
Looking the way her harmelesse young one went,
And can doe naught but wayle her Darling's losse,
Euen so my selfe bewayles good Glosters case
With sad vnhelpefull teares, and with dim'd eyes;
Looke after him, and cannot doe him good:
So mightie are his vowed Enemies.
His fortunes I will weepe, and 'twixt each groane,
Say, who's a Traytor? Glester he is none. Exit.

Queene. Free Lords·
Cold Snow melts with the Sonnes hot Beames:
Henry, my Lord, is cold in great Affaires,
Too full of foolish pittie: and Glosters shew
Beguiles him, as the mournefull Crocodile
With sorrow snares relenting passengers;
Or as the Snake, rol'd in a flowring Banke,
With shining checker'd slough doth sting a Child,
That for the beautie thinkes it excellent.
Believe me Lords, were none more wise then I,
And yet herein I judge mine own Wit good;
This Glester should be quickly rid the World,
To rid vs from the feare we haue of him.

Card. That he should dye, is worthie policie,
But yet we want a Colour for his death:
'Tis meet he be condemn'd by course of Law.

Suff. But in my minde, that were no policie:
The King will labour still to saue his Life,
The Commons haply rise, to saue his Life;
And yet we haue but trivial argument,
More than mistrust, that shewes him worthy death.

Yorke. So that by this, you would not haue him dye.

Suff. Ah Yorke, no man alive, so faine as I.

Yorke. 'Tis Yorke that hath more reason for his death.
But my Lord Cardinall, and you my Lord of Suffolke,
Say as you thinke, and speake it from your Soules:
Were't not all one, an empty Eagle were set,
To guard the Chicken from a hungry Kite,
As place Duke Humfrey for the Kings Protector?

Queene. So the poore Chicken should be sure of death.

Suff. Madame 'tis true: and were't not madnesse then,
To make the Fox surveyor of the Fold?
Who being accust'd a crafty Murtherer,
His guilt should be but idly posted ouer,
Because his purpose is not executed.
No: let him dye, in that he is a Fox,
By nature prou'd an Enemie to the Flock.
Before his Chaps be stayn'd with Crimson blood,
As Humfrey prou'd by Reasons to my Liege.
And doe not stand on Quillets how to slay him:
Be it by Gyonces, by Snares, by Subtletie,
Sleeping, or Waking, 'tis no matter how,
So he be dead; for that is good deceit,
Which mates him first, that first intends deceit.

Queene. Thrice Noble Suffolke, 'tis resolutely spoke.

Suff. Not resolute, except so much were done,
For things are often spoke, and seldome meant,
But that my heart accordeth with my tongue,
Seeing the deed is meritorious,
And to preserue my Soueraigne from his Foe,
Say but the word, and I will be his Priest.

Card. But I would haue him dead, my Lord of Suffolke,
Ere you can take due Orders for a Priest:
Say you consent, and censure well the deed,
And I'le prouide his Executioner,
I tender so the safetie of my Liege.

Suff. Here is my Hand, the deed is worthy doing.

Queene. And so say I.

Yorke. And I: and now we three haue spoke it,
It skills not greatly who impugnes our doome.

Enter a Post.

Post. Great Lords, from Ireland am I come amaine,
To signifie, that Rebels there are vp,
And put the Englishmen vnto the Sword.
Send Succours (Lords) and stop the Rage betime,
Before the Wound doe grow vncurable;
For being greene, there is great hope of helpe.

Card. A Breach that craues a quick expedient stoppe.
What counsaile giue you in this weightie cause?

Yorke. That Somerset be sent as Regent thither:
'Tis meet that lockie Ruler be imploy'd,
Wittnesse the fortune he hath had in France.

Som. If Yorke, with all his farre-fet policie,
Had beene the Regent there, in stead of me,
He neuer would haue stay'd in France so long.

Yorke. No, not to lose it all, as thou hast done.
I rather would haue lost my Life betimes,
Then bring a burthen of dis-honour home,
By staying there so long, till all were lost.
Shew me one scarre, character'd on thy Skinne,
Mens flesh preserv'd so whole, doe seldome winne.

Qu. Nay then, this sparke will proue a raging fire,
If Wind and Fuell be brought, to feed it with:
No more, good Yorke; sweet Somerset be still.
Thy fortune, Yorke, hadst thou beene Regent there,
Might happily haue prou'd farre worse then his.

Yorke. What, worse then naught? nay, then a flinne take all.

Somerset. And in the number, thee, that wishest shame.

Card. My Lord of Yorke, trie what your fortune is:
Th'vncivill Kernes of Ireland are in Armes,
And temper Clay with blood of Englishmen.
To Ireland will you leade a Band of men,
Collected choycely, from each Countie some,
And trie your hap against the Irishmen?

Yorke. I will, my Lord, so please his Maiestie.

Suff. Why, our Authoritie is his consent,
And what we doe establish, he confirmes:
Then, Noble Yorke, take thou this Taske in hand.

Yorke. I am content: Prouide me Souldiers, Lords,
Whiles I take order for mine owne affaires.

Suff. A charge, Lord Yorke, that I will see performd.
But now returne we to the false Duke Humfrey.

Card. No more of him: for I will deale with him,
That henceforth he shall trouble vs no more:
And so breake off, the day is almost spent,
Lord Suffolke, you and I must talke of that anon.

Yorke. My

Yorke. My Lord of Suffolke, within fourteene dayes
At Bristow I expect my Souldiers,
For there I'le shippe them all for Ireland.
Suf. Ile see it truly done, my Lord of Yorke. Exeunt.

Manet Yorke.

Yorke. Now Yorke, or neuer, steele thy fearfull thoughts
And change misdoubt to resolution;
Be that thou hop'st to be, or what thou art;
Resigne to death, it is not worth th'enioying:
Let pale-fac'd feare keepe with the meane-borne man,
And finde no harbor in a Royall heart.
Faster the Spring-time showres, comes thoghts on thoghts,
And not a thought, but thinkes on Dignitie.
My Brayne, more busie then the laboring Spidet,
Weaues tedious Snares to trap mine Enemies.
Well Noble, well: 'tis politikely done,
To send me packing with an Hoast of men:
I feare me, you but warme the starued Snake,
Who cherisht in your breasts, will sting your hearts.
'Twas men I lackt, and you will give them me;
I take it kindly: yet be well assur'd,
You put sharpe Weapons in a mad-mens hands.
Whiles I in Ireland nourish a mightie Band,
I will stiere vp in England some black Storme,
Shall blowe ten thousand Soules to Heaven, or Hell:
And this fell Tempest shall not cease to rage,
Vntill the Golden Circuit on my Head,
Like to the glorious Sunnes transparant Beames,
Doe calme the furie of this mad-bred Flawe.
And for a minister of my intent,
I have seduc'd a head-strong Kentishman,
Iohn Cade of Ashford,
To make Commotion, as full well he can,
Vnder the Title of Iohn Mortimer.
In Ireland have I seene this stubborne Cade
Oppose himselfe against a Troope of Kernes,
And sought so long, till that his thighes with Darts
Were almost like a sharpe-quill'd Porpentine:
And in the end being rescued, I have seene
Him caper vpright, like a wilde Morisco,
Shaking the bloody Darts, as he his Bells.
Full often, like a shag-hair'd crafte Kerne,
Hath he conuersed with the Enemie,
And vndiscouer'd, come to me againe,
And given me notice of their Villanies.
This Deuill here shall be my substitute;
For that Iohn Mortimer, which now is dead,
In face, in gate, in speech he doth resemble.
By this, I shall perceiue the Commons minde,
How they affect the House and Clayme of Yorke.
Say he be taken, rackt, and tortured;
I know, no paine they can inflict vpon him,
Will make him say, I mou'd him to those Armes.
Say that he thriue, as 'tis great like he will,
Why then from Ireland come I with my strength,
And reape the Harueft which that Rascall sow'd.
For Humfrey; being dead, as he shall be,
And Henry put apart: the next for me. Exit.

Enter two or three running over the Stage, from the Murthers of Duke Humfrey.

1. Runne to my Lord of Suffolke: let him know
We have dispatcht the Duke, as he commanded.
2. Oh, that it were to doe: what have we done?
Didst euer heare a man so penitent? Enter Suffolke.
1. Here comes my Lord.

Suf. Now Sirs, have you dispatcht this thing?
1. I, my good Lord, he's dead.
Suf. Why that's well said. Goe, get you to my House,
I will reward you for this venturous deed:
The King and all the Peeres are here at hand.
Haue you layd faire the Bed? Is all things well,
According as I gaue directions?
1. 'Tis, my good Lord.
Suf. Away, be gone. Exeunt.

Sound Trumpets. Enter the King, the Queene, Cardinall, Suffolke, Somerset, with Attendants.

King. Goe call our Vncle to our presence straight:
Say, we intend to try his Grace to day,
If he be guiltie, as 'tis published.
Suf. Ile call him presently, my Noble Lord. Exit.
King. Lords take your places: and I pray you all
Proceed no straiter 'gainst our Vncle Glaster,
Then from true euidence, of good esteeme,
He be approu'd in practise culpable.
Queene God forbid any Malice should preuayle,
That faultlesse may condemne a Noble man:
Pray God he may acquit him of suspition.
King. I thanke thee Nell, these wordes content mee much.

Enter Suffolke.

How now? why look'st thou pale? why trembleft thou?
Where is our Vncle? what's the matter, Suffolke?
Suf. Dead in his Bed, my Lord: Glaster is dead.
Queene. Marry God forbid.
Card. Gods secret Iudgement: I did dreame to Night,
The Duke was dumbe, and could not speake a word. King swounds.
Qu. How fares my Lord? Helpe Lords, the King is dead.
Som. Rere vp his Body, wring him by the Nose.
Qu. Runne, goe, helpe, helpe: Oh Henry ope thine eyes.
Suf. He doth reuiue again, Madame be patient.
King. Oh Heauenly God.
Qu. How fares my gracious Lord?
Suf. Comfort my Soueraigne, gracious Henry comfort.
King. What, doth my Lord of Suffolke comfort me?
Came he right now to sing a Raueens Note,
Whose dismall tune bereft my Vitall powres:
And thinkes he, that the chirping of a Wren,
By crying comfort from a hollow breast,
Can chase away the first-conceiued sound?
Hide not thy poyson with such sugred words,
Lay not thy hands on me: forbeare I say,
Their touch affrights me as a Serpents sting.
Thou baleful Messenger, out of my sight:
Vpon thy eye-balls, murderous Tyrannie
Sits in grim Maiestie, to fright the World.
Looke not vpon me, for thine eyes are wounding;
Yet doe not goe away: come Basilisike,
And kill the innocent gazer with thy sight:
For in the shade of death, I shall finde ioy;
In life, but double death, now Glaster's dead.
Queene. Why do you rere my Lord of Suffolke thus?
Although the Duke was enemie to him,
Yet he most Christian-like laments his death:
And for my selfe, Foe as he was to me,
Might liquid teares, or heart-offending groanes,
Or blood-consuming sighes recall his Life;

I would be blinde with weeping, sicke with groanes,
Looke pale as Prim-rose with blood-drinking sighes,
And all to haue the Noble Duke alive.
What know I how the world may deeme of me?
For is is knowne we were but hollow Friends:
It may be iudg'd I made the Duke away,
So shall my name with Slanders tongue be wounded,
And Princes Courts be fill'd with my reproach:
This gez I by his death: Aye me vnhappie,
To be a Queene, and Crown'd with infamie.

King. Ah woe is me for Glofter, wretched man.

Queen. Be woe for me, more wretched then he is.
What, Doſt thou turne away, and hide thy face?
I am no loathſome Leaper, looke on me.
Whatz Art thou like the Adder waxen deafe?
Be poyſonous too, and kill thy forlorne Queene.
Is all thy comfort ſhut in Gloſters Tombe?
Why then Dame Eleanor was neere thy loy.
Erect his Statue, and worſhip it,
And make my Image but an Ale-houſe ſigne.
Was I for this nye wrack'd vpon the Sea,
And twice by aukward winde from Englands banke
Droue backe againe vnto my Native Clime.
What boaded this? but well ſore-warning winde
Did ſeeme to ſay, ſeeke not a Scorpions Neſt,
Nor ſet no footing on this vnkinde Shore.
What did I then? But curſt the gentle guſts,
And he that loos'd them forth their Brazen Caues,
And bid them blow towards Englands bleſſed ſhore,
Or ſtrane our Sterne vpon a dreadfull Rocke:
Yet Æolus would not bee murtherer,
But left that hatefull office vnto thee.
The prettie vaulting Sea refin'd to drowne me.
Knowing that thou wouldſt haue me drown'd on ſhore
With teares as ſalt as Sea, through thy vnkindneſſe.
The ſplitting Rockes cowr'd in the ſinking ſands,
And would not daſh me with their ragged ſides,
Because thy flinty heart more hard then they,
Might in thy Palace, periſh Eleanor.
As ſwiſt as I could ken thy Chalky Cliffes,
When from thy Shore, the Tempeſt beate vs backe,
I ſtood vpon the Hatches in the ſtorme:
And when the duskie ſky, began to rob
My earneſt-geping-ſight of thy Lands view,
I tooke a coſtly Iewell from my neeke,
A Heart it was bound in with Diamonds,
And threw it towards thy Land: The Sea receiu'd it,
And ſo I wiſh'd thy body might my Heart:
And even with this, I loſt faire Englands view,
And bid mine eyes be packing with my Heart,
And call'd them blinde and dankie Spectacles,
For loeſing ken of Albione wiſhed Coaſt.
How often haue I tempted Suffolkes tongue
(The agent of thy ſoule inconſtancie)
To ſit and watch me as Aſcanius did,
When he to madding Dido would vnfold
His Fathers Acts, commaunc'd in burning Troy.
Am I not witche like her? Or thou not falſe like him?
Aye me, I can no more: Dye Eleanor,
For Henry weepes, that thou doſt liue ſo long.

Noiſe within. Enter Warwicke, and many Commons.

War. It is reported, mighty Soueraigne,
That good Duke Humfrey Traiterouſly is murdred
By Suffolke, and the Cardinall Beaufords meanes:
The Commons like an angry Hiue of Bees
That want their Leader, ſcatter vp and downe,
And care not who they ſting in his reuenge.
My ſelfe haue calm'd their ſpleenfull mutinie,
Vntill they heare the order of his death.

King. That he is dead good Warwick, 'tis too true,
But how he dyed, God knowes, not Henry:
Enter his Chamber, view his breathleſſe Corpes,
And comment then vpon his ſodaine death.

War. That ſhall I do my Liege: Stay Salsburie
With the rude multitude, till I returne.

King. O thou that iudgeſt all things, ſtay my thoghes:
My thoughes, that labour to perſwade my ſoule,
Some violent hands were laid on Humfries life:
If my ſuſpect be falſe, forgiue me God,
For iudgement onely doth belong to thee:
Faine would I go to chaſe his paliſe lips,
With twenty thouſand kiſſes, and to drains
Vpon his face an Ocean of ſalt teares,
To tell my loue vnto his dumbe deafe trunke,
And with my fingers ſeeke his hand, vnfeeling:
But all in vaine are theſe meane Obſequies,
Bed put forth.
And to ſurvey his dead and earthy Image:
What were it but to make my ſorrow greater

Warw. Come hither gracious Soueraigne, view this body.

King. That is to ſee how deepe my grave is made,
For with his ſoule fled all my worldly ſolace:
For ſeeing him, I ſee my life in death.

War. As ſurely as my ſoule intends to liue
With that dread King that tooke our ſtate vpon him,
To free vs from his Fathers wrathfull curſe,
I do beleeue that violent hands were laid
Vpon the life of this thrice-famed Duke.

Suf. A dreadfull Oath, ſworne with a ſolemn tongue:
What inſtance gives Lord Warwicke for his vow.

War. See how the blood is ſettled in his face.
Oft haue I ſeene a timely-parted Ghoſt,
Of aſhy ſemblance, meager, pale, and bloodleſſe,
Being all deſcended to the labouring heart,
Who in the Conflict that it holds with death,
Attracts the ſoone for ayduance 'gainſt the enemy,
Which with the heart there cooles, and ne're returneth,
To blaſh and beautifie the Cheeke againe.
But ſee, his face is blacke, and full of blood:
His eye-balles further out, than when he liued,
Staring full gaſtly, like a ſtrangled man:
His hayre vp reare'd, his noſtrils ſtrutche with ſtruggling:
His hands abroad diſplay'd, as one that graſpt
And mugg'd for Life, and was by ſtrength ſubdude.
Looke on the ſheets his haire (you ſee) is ſticking.
His well proportion'd Beard, made ruſte and rugged,
Like to the Summers Corne by Tempeſt lodged:
It cannot be but he was murdred heere,
The leaſt of all theſe ſignes were probable.

Suf. Why Warwicke, who ſhould do the Duke death?
My ſelfe and Beaufort had him in protection,
And we I hope ſir, are no murtherers.

War. But both of you were vowed D. Humfries foes,
And you (forſooth) had the good Duke to keepe:
'Tis like you would not feaſt him like a friend,
And 'tis well ſeene, he found an enemy.

Queen. Then you belike ſuſpect theſe Noblemen,
As guilty of Duke Humfries timeleſſe death.

War.

Wary. Who finds the Heyrer dead, and bleeding fresh,
And sees fast-by, a Butcher with an Axe,
But will suspect, 'twas he that made the slaughter?
Who finds the Partridge in the Puttocks Nest,
But may imagine how the Bird was dead,
Although the Kyte soare with vnbloodied Beaks?
Even so suspitious is this Tragedie.

Qu. Are you the Butcher, Suffolk? where's your Knife?
Is Beaufort term'd a Kyte? where are his Tallons?

Suff. I wearе no Knife, to slaughter sleeping men,
But here's a vengefull Sword, rusted with ease,
That shall be scowred in his rancorous heart,
That slanders me with Murthers Crimson Badge.
Say, if thou dar'st, proud Lord of Warwickshire,
That I am guiltie in Duke Humfreys death.

Warw. What dares not Warwick, if false Suffolk dare him?

Qu. He dares not calme his contumelious Spirit,
Nor cease to be an arrogant Controller,
Though Suffolk dare him twentie thousand times.

Warw. Madame be still: with reverence may I say,
For every word you speake in his behalfe,
Is slander to your Royall Dignitie.

Suff. Blunt-witted Lord, ignoble in demeanor,
If ever Lady wrong'd her Lord so much,
Thy Mother tooke into her blameless Bed
Some heere vnknown'd Charle; and Noble Stock
Was graft with Crab-tree slippe, whose Fruit thou art,
And never of the Nevils Noble Race.

Warw. But that the guilt of Murther bucklers thee,
And I should rob the Death-man of his Fee,
Quitting thee thereby of ten thousand shames,
And that my Soueraigns presence makes me milde,
I would, false murd'rous Coward, on thy Knee
Make thee begge pardon for thy passed speech,
And say, it was thy Mother that thou meant'st,
That thou thy selfe wast borne in Bastardie;
And after all this fearefull Homage done,
Give thee thy hyre, and send thy Soule to Hell,
Pernicious blood-sucker of sleeping men.

Suff. Thou shalt be waiting, while I shed thy blood,
If from this presence thou dar'st goe with me.

Warw. Away even now, or I will drag thee hence:
Vnworthy though thou art, I'le cope with thee,
And doe some service to Duke Humfreys Ghost.

Exeunt.

King. What stronger Breast-plate then a heart vncalmed?
Thrice is he arm'd, that hath his Quarrell iust;
And he but naked, though locks vp in Steele,
Whose Conscience with Iniustice is corrupted.

A noyse within.

Queene. What noyse is this?

Enter Suffolke and Warwicke, with their Weapons drawne.

King. Why how now Lords?
Your wrathfull Weapons drawne,
Here in our presence? Dare you be so bold?
Why what tumultuous clamor haue we here?

Suff. The traytrous Warwick, with the men of Bury,
Set all vpon me, mighty Soueraigne.

Enter Salisbury.

Sals. Sirs stand apart, the King shall know your minde.
Dread Lord, the Commons send you word by me,
Vnless Lord Suffolke straight be done to death,
Or banished faire Englands Territories,
They will by violence teare him from your Palace,
And torture him with grieuous lingring death.
They say, by him the good Duke Humfrey dy'de:
They say, in him they feare your Highnesse death;
And mere instinct of Loue and Loyaltie,
Free from a stubborne opposite intent,
As being thought to contradict your liking,
Makes them thus forward in his Banishment.
They say, in care of your most Royall Person,
That if your Highnesse should intend to sleepe,
And charge, that no man should disturbe your rest,
In paine of your dislike, or paine of death;
Yet notwithstanding such a strait Edict,
Were there a Serpent seene, with forked Tongue,
That slyly glyded towards your Maiestie,
It were but necessarie you were wak'e.
Least being suffer'd in that harmefull slumber,
The mortall Worme might make the sleepe eternall.
And therefore doe they cry, though you forbid,
That they will guard you, where you will, or no,
From such fell Serpents as false Suffolke is;
With whose inuenomed and fatall sting,
Your loving Vncle, twentie times his worth,
They say is shamefully bereft of life.

Commons within. An answer from the King, my Lord of Salisbury.

Suff. 'Tis like the Commons, rude vnpolisht Hindes,
Could send such Message to their Soueraigne:
But you, my Lord, were glad to be imploy'd,
To shew how quaint an Orator you are.
But all the Honest Salisbury hath worne,
Is, that he was the Lord Ambassador,
Sent from a sort of Tinkers to the King.

within. An answer from the King, or wee will all breake in.

King. Goe Salisbury, and tell them all from me,
I thanke them for their tender loving care;
And had I not beene cited so by them,
Yet did I purpose as they doe entreat:
For sure, my thoughts doe hourely prophecie,
Mischance vnto my State by Suffolks meanes.
And therefore by his Maiestie I sweare,
Whose sacre-vnworthie Deputie I am,
He shall not breathe infection in this aire,
But three daysies longer, on the paine of death.

Qu. Oh Henry, let me plaide for gentle Suffolke.

King. Vngentle Queene, to call him gentle Suffolke.
No more I say: if thou dost plaide for him,
Thou wilt but adde encrease vnto my Wrath.
Had I but said, I would haue kept my Word;
But when I sweare, it is irreuocable:
If after three daysies space thou here bee'st found,
On any ground that I am Ruler of,
The World shall not be Ransome for thy Life.
Come Warwick, come good Warwick, goe with mee,
I haue great matters to impart to thee.

Exit.

Qu. Mischance and Sorrow goe along with you,
Hearts Discontent, and sowre Affliction,
Be play-fellowes to keepe you companie:
There's two of you, the Deuill make a third,
And three-fold Vengeance send vpon your steps.

Suff. Cease, gentle Queene, these Execrations,
And let thy Suffolke take his heauie leaue.

Quen. Fye Couward woman, and soft hearted wretch,
Hast thou not spirit to curse thine enemy.
Suf. A plague vpon them: wherefore should I curse them?
Would curses kill, as doth the Mandrakes grone,
I would inuent as bitter searching termes,
As curst, as harsh, and horrible to heare,
Deliuer'd strongly through my fixed teeth,
With full as many signes of deadly hate,
As leane-fac'd enuy in her loathsome cane.
My tongue should stumble in mine earnest words,
Mine eyes should sparkle like the beaten Flint,
Mine haire be fixt an end, as one distract:
I, every loynt should seeme to curse and ban,
And euen now my burthen'd heart would breake
Should I not curse them. Poyson be their drinke.
Gall, worse then Gall, the daintiest that they taste:
Their sweetest shade, a grouie of Cypresse Trees:
Their cheerest Prospect, murd'ring Basilishes:
Their softest Touch, as smart as Lyzards stings:
Their Musicke, frightfull as the Serpents hisse,
And boading Screech-Owles, make the Consort full.
All the foule terrors in darke seated hell———
Q. Enough sweet Suffolke, thou torment'st thy selfe,
And these dread curses like the Sunne 'gainst glasse,
Or like an ouer-charged Gun, recoile,
And turnes the force of them vpon thy selfe.
Suf. You bad me ban, and will you bid me leaue?
Now by the ground that I am banish'd from,
Well could I curse away a Winters night,
Though standing naked on a Mountaine top,
Where byting cold would never let grasse grow,
And thinke it but a minute spent in sport.
Qu. Oh, let me intreat thee cease, giue me thy hand,
That I may dew it with my mournfull tea es:
Nor let the raine of heauen wet this place,
To wash away my wofull Monumentes.
Oh, could this kisse be printed in thy hand,
That thou mightst thinke vpon these by the Seale,
Through whom a thousand sighes are breath'd for thee.
So get thee gone, that I may know my greefe,
'Tis but surmiz'd, whiles thou art standing by,
As one that surfeits, thinking on a want:
I will repeale thee, or be well assur'd,
Adventure to be banished my selfe:
And banished I am, if but from thee.
Go, speake not to me; even now be gone.
Oh go not yet. Even thus, two Friends condemn'd,
Embrace, and kisse, and take ten thousand leaues,
Loather a hundred times to part then dye;
Yet now farewell, and farewell Life with thee.
Suf. Thus is poore Suffolke ten times banished,
Once by the King, and three times thrice by thee.
'Tis not the Land I care for, wer't thou thence,
A Wilderness is populous enough,
So Suffolke had thy heauenly company:
For where thou art, there is the World it selfe,
With every seuerall pleasure in the World:
And where thou art not, Desolation.
I can no more: Liue thou to ioy thy life;
My selfe no ioy in nought, but that thou liu'st.

Enter Vaux.

Quene. Whether goes Vaux so fast? What newes I prethee?
Vaux. To signifie vnto his Maiesty,
That Cardinall Beauford is at point of death:
For sodainly a greeuous sicknesse tooke him,
That makes him gasp, and stare, and catch the aire,
Blaspheming God, and cursing men on earth.
Sometime he talkes, as if Duke Humfrey Ghost
Were by his side: Sometime, he calles the King,
And whispers to his pillow, as to him,
The secrets of his ouer-charged soule,
And I am sent to tell his Maiestie,
That euen now he cries aloud for him.
Qu. Go tell this heauy Message to the King. Exit
Aye me! What is this World? What newes are these?
But wherefore greeue I at an houres poore loss,
Omitting Suffolkes exile, my soules Treasure?
Why onely Suffolke mourne I not for thee?
And with the Southerne clouds, contend in teares?
Theirs for the earths increase, mine for my sorrowes.
Now get thee hence, the King thou know'st is comming.
If thou be found by me, thou art but dead.
Suf. If I depart from thee, I cannot liue.
And in thy sight to dye, what were it else,
But like a pleasant slumber in thy lap?
Heere could I breath my soule into the ayre,
As milde and gentle as the Cradle-babe,
Dying with mothers dugge betweene its lips.
Where from thy sight, I should be raging mad,
And cry out for thee to close vp mine eyes:
To haue thee with thy lippes to stop my mouth:
So should'st thou eyther turne my flying soule,
Or I should breathe it so into thy body,
And then it liu'd in sweete Elizium.
To dye by thee, were but to dye in iest,
From thee to dye, were torture more then death:
Oh let me stay, befall what may befall.
Quen. Away: Though parting be a fretfull corosiue,
It is applyed to a deathfull wound.
To France sweet Suffolke: Let me heare from thee:
For wherefoere thou art in this worlds Globe,
Ile haue an Iris that shall finde thee out.
Suf. I go.
Qu. And take my heart with thee.
Suf. A Iewell locke into the wofull Casket,
That euer did containe a thing of worth,
Euen as a splitted Barke, so sunder we:
This way fall I to death.
Qu. This way for me. Exeunt

Enter the King, Salisbury, and Warwicke, to the Cardinal in bed.

King. How fare's my Lord? Speake Beauford to thy Soueraigne.
Ca. If thou beest death, Ile giue thee Englands Treasure,
Enough to purchase such another Island,
So thou wilt let me liue, and feele no paine.
King. Ah, what a sigue it is of euill life,
Where death's approach is seene so terrible.
War. Beauford it is thy Soueraigne speakes to thee.
Beau. Bring me vnto my Triall when you will.
Dy'de he not in his bed? Where should he dye?
Can I make men liue where they will or no?
Oh torture me no more, I will confesse.
Alive againe? Then shew me where he is,
Ile give a thousand pound to looke vpon him.
He hath no eyes, the dust hath blinded them.

Comb

Combe downe his haire; looke, looke, it stands vpright,
Like Lime-twigs set to catch my winged soule.
Give me some drinke, and bid the Apothecarie
Bring the strong poyson that I bought of him.
King. Oh thou eternall mouer of the heauens,
Looke with a gentle eye vpon this Wretch,
Oh beate away the busie meddling Fiend,
That layes strong siege vnto this wretches soule,
And from his bosome pengs this blacke disparre.
War. See how the pangs of death do make him grin.
Sal. Disturbe him not, let him passe peaceably.
King. Peace to his soule, if Gods good pleasure be.
Lord Cardinall, if thou think'st on heauens blisse,
Hold vp thy hand, make signall of thy hope.
He dies and makes no signe: Oh God forgiue him.
War. So bad a death, argues a monstrous life.
King. Forbeare to iudge, for we are sinners all.
Close vp his eyes, and draw the Curtaine close,
And let vs all to Meditation. Exeunt.

Alarum. Fights at Sea. Ordnance goes off.

Enter Lieutenant, Souldier, and others.

Lieu. The gaudy blabbing and remorsefull day,
Is crept into the bosome of the Sea:
And now load howling Wolves arouse the Iades
That dragge the Tragicke melancholy night:
Who with their drowsie, slow, and flagging wings
Cleape dead-mens graues, and from their misty Iawes,
Breath foule contagious darknesse in the ayre:
Therefore bring forth the Souldiers of our prize,
For whilst our Pinnace Anchors in the Downes,
Heere shall they make their ransome on the sand,
Or with their blood staine this discoloured shore.
Maister, this Prisoner freely give I thee,
And thou that art his Mate, make boote of this:
The other Walter Whitmore is thy share.
1. Gent. What is my ransome Master, let me know.
Mas. A thousand Crownes, or else lay down your head
Mate. And so much shall you give, or off goes yours.
Lieu. What thinke you much to pay 2000. Crownes,
And leave the name and port of Gentlemen?
Cut both the Villaines throates, for dy you shall:
The lives of those which we haue lost in fight,
Be counter-poys'd with such a petitie summe.
1. Gent. I'le give it sir, and therefore spare my life.
2. Gent. And so will I, and write home for it straight.
Whitm. I lost mine eye in laying the prize aboard,
And therefore to reuenge it, shalt thou dye,
And so should these, if I might haue my will.
Lieu. Be not so rash, take ransome, let him liue.
Saf. Looke on my George, I am a Gentleman,
Rate me at what thou wilt, thou shalt be payed.
Whit. And so am I: my name is Walter Whitmore.
How now? why starts thou? What doth death affright?
Saf. Thy name affrights me, in whose sound is death:
A cunning man did calculate my birth,
And told me that by Water I should dye:
Yet let not this make thee be bloody-minded,
Thy name is Gualtier, being rightly sounded.
Whit. Gualtier or Walter, which it is I care not,
Never yet did base dishonour blurre our name,
But with our sword we wip'd away the blot.
Therefore, when Merchant-like I sell reuenge,
Broke be my sword, my Armes torne and defac'd,
And I proclaim'd a Coward through the world.
Saf. Stay Whitmore, for thy Prisoner is a Prince,
The Duke of Suffolke, William de La Pole.
Whit. The Duke of Suffolke, muffled vp in ragges?
Saf. I, but these ragges are no parr of the Duke.
Lieu. But Iouer was never slaine as thou shalt be,
Obstrues sad lowlie Swaine, King Henries blood.
Saf. The honourable blood of Lancaster
Must not be shed by such a iaded Groome:
Hast thou not kist thy hand, and held my stirrop?
Bare-headed plodded by my foot-cloth Mule,
And thought thee happy when I shooke my head.
How often hast thou waited at my cup,
Fed from my Trencher, kneel'd downe at the board,
When I have feasted with Queene Margaret?
Remember it, and let it make thee Crest-falne,
I, and slay this thy abortiue Pride:
How in our voyding Lobby hast thou stood,
And duly waited for my comming forth?
This hand of mine hath writ in thy behalfe,
And therefore shall it charme thy riotous tongue.
Whit. Speak Captaine, shall I stab the forlorn Swain.
Lieu. First let my words stab him, as he hath me.
Saf. Base slaue, thy words are blunt, and so art thou.
Lieu. Conuey him hence, and on our long boats side,
Strike off his head. Saf. Thou dar'st not for thy owne
Lieu. Poole, Sir Poole? Lord,
I kennell, puddle, sinke, whose filth and dirt
Troubles the siluer Spring, where England drinkes:
Now will I dam vp this thy yawning mouth,
For swallowing the Treasure of the Realme.
Thy lips that kist the Queene, shall sweepe the ground:
And thou that smil'dst at good Duke Humfries death,
Against the senselesse winds shall grin in vaine,
Who in contempt shall hisse at thee againe.
And wedded be thou to the Hagges of hell,
For daring to ally a mighty Lord
Vnto the daughter of a worthlesse King,
Having neyther Subiect, Wealth, nor Diadem.
By diuellish policy art thou growne great,
And like ambitious Sylla euer-gorg'd,
With gobbets of thy Mother-bleeding heart.
By thee Anion and Maine were sold to France.
The false reuolting Normans thorough thee,
Disdaine to call vs Lord, and Picardie
Hath slaine their Governors, surprizd our Forts,
And sent the ragged Souldiers wounded home.
The Princely Warwicke, and the Nauils all,
Whose dreadfull swords were never drawne in vaine,
As hating thee, and rising vp in armes.
And now the House of Yorke thrust from the Crowne,
By shamefull murther of a guiltlesse King,
And lofty proud incroaching tyranny,
Burnes with reuenging fire, whose hopefull colours
Aduance our half-fac'd Sunne, striuing to shine;
Vnder the which is writ, Iustitia nobilem.
The Commons heere in Kent are vp in armes,
And to conclude, Reproach and Beggerie,
Is crept into the Palace of our King,
And all by thee: away, conuey him hence.
Saf. O that I were a God, to shoot forth Thunder
Vpon these paltry, seruile, abiect Drudges:
Small things make base men proud. This Villaine heere,
Being Captaine of a Pinnace, threatens more
Then Bargulus the strong Illyrian Pyrate.
Drones suckt not Eagles blood, but rob Bee-hiues:
It is impossible that I should dye

By

By such a lowly Vassall as thy selfe.
Thy words moue Rage, and not remorse in me:
I go of Message from the Queene to France:
I charge thee waft me safely cross the Channell.

Lam. Water: W. Come Suffolke, I must waft thee to thy death.

Saf. Pine galidus timor occupat artus, it is thee I feare.

Wal. Thou shalt haue cause to feare before I leaue thee. What, are ye dunced now? Now will ye stoope.

1. Gent. My gracious Lord intreat him, speak him fair

Saf. Suffolkes Imperiall tongue is sterne and rough:
Vs'd to command, vntaught to pleade for fauour.
Forre be it, we should honor such as these
With humble suits: no, rather let my head
Stoope to the blocke, then these knees bow to any,
Saue to the God of heauen, and to my King:
And sooner dance vpon a bloody pole,
Then stand vncouer'd to the Vulgar Groome.
True Nobility, is exempt from feare:
More can I beare, then you dare execute.

Lam. Hale him away, and let him talke no more:
Come Souldiers, shew what cruelty ye can.

Saf. That this my death may neuer be forgot.
Great men oft dye by vilde Bezonions.
A Romane Sworder, and Bandetto slaue
Murder'd sweet Tully Brutus Bastard hand
Stab'd Iulius Cæsar. Sauage Islanders
Pompey the Great, and Suffolke dyes by Pyrats.

Exit Water with Suffolke.

Lam. And as for these whose ransome we haue set,
It is our pleasure one of them depart:
Therefore come you with vs, and let him go.

Exit Lieutenant, and the rest.

Manet the first Gent. Enter Walter with the body.

Wal. There let his head, and liueless bodie lye, Vntill the Queene his Mistris bury it. Exit Walter.

1. Gent. O barbarous and bloody spectacle,
His body will I beare vnto the King:
If he reuenge it not, yet will his Friends,
So will the Queene, that liuing, held him deere.

Enter Bawe, and Iohn Holland.

Bawe. Come and get thee a sword, though made of a Lath, they haue bene vp these two dayes.

Hol. They haue the more neede to sleepe now then.

Bawe. I tell thee, Iacky Cade the Clothier, meanes to dresse the Common-weath and sweepe it, and set a new nap vpon it.

Hol. So he had need, for 'tis thred-bare. Well, I say, it was neuer merrie world in England, since Gentlemen came vp.

Bawe. O miserable Age: Vertue is not regarded in Handy-crafts men.

Hol. The Nobilitie thinke scorne to goe in Leather Aprons.

Bawe. Nay more, the Kings Counsell are no good Workemen.

Hol. True: and yet it is said, Labour in thy Vocation: which is as much to say, as let the Magistrates be labouring men, and therefore should we be Magistrates.

Bawe. Thou hast hit it: for there's no better signe of a braue minde, then a hard hand.

Hol. I see them, I see them: There's Bayes Sonne, the Tanner of Wingham.

Bawe. He shall haue the skinnes of our enemies, to make Dogges Leather of.

Hol. And Dicke the Butcher.

Bawe. Then is sin struck downe like an Ox, and iniquities throate cut like a Calfe.

Hol. And Smith the Weauer.

Bau. Argo, their thred of life is spun.

Hol. Come, come, let's fall in with them.

Drumme. Enter Cade, Dicke Butcher, Smith the Weauer, and a Sawyer, with infinite numbers.

Cade. We Iohn Cade, so termed of our supposed Father.

Bu. Or rather of stealing a Cade of Herrings.

Cade. For our enemies shall faile before vs, inspired with the spirit of putting down Kings and Princes. Command silence.

Bu. Silence.

Cade. My Father was a Mortimer.

Bu. He was an honest man, and a good Bricklayer.

Cade. My mother a Plantagenet.

Butch. I knew her well, she was a Midwife.

Cade. My wife descended of the Lacies.

Bu. She was indeed a Pedlers daughter, & sold many Laces.

Weauer. But now of late, not able to trauell with her furr'd Packe, she washes bucks here at home.

Cade. Therefore am I of an honorable house.

Bu. I by my faith, the field is honourable, and there was he borne, vnder a hedge: for his Father had never a house but the Cage.

Cade. Valiant I am.

Weauer. A man of needs, for beggery is valiant.

Cade. I am able to endure much.

Bu. No question of that: for I haue seene him whipt three Market dayes together.

Cade. I feare neither sword, nor fire.

Wea. He needs not feare the sword, for his Coate is of proofe.

Bu. But me thinks he should stand in feare of fire, being burnt i'th hand for stealing of Sheepe.

Cade. Be brusse then, sue your Copsaine in Brusse, and Vowes Reformation. There shall be in England, seuen halfe penny Loaues sold for a penny: the three hoop'd pot, shall haue ten hoopes, and I wil make it Felony to drink small Beere. All the Realme shall be in Common, and in Cheapside shall my Palfrey go to graze: and when I am King, as King I will be.

All. God saue your Maiesty.

Cade. I thanke you good people. There shall bee no money, all shall eate and drinke on my score, and I will apparrell them all in one Liuery, that they may agree like Brothers, and worship me their Lord.

Bu. The first thing we do, let's kill all the Lawyers.

Cade. Nay, that I meane to do. Is not this a lamentable thing, that of the skin of an innocent Lambe should be made Parchment; that Parchment being scribbled on, should vndoe a man. Some say the Bee stings, but I say, tis the Bees waxe: for I did but seale once to a thing, and I was neuer mine owne man since. How now? Who's there?

Enter a Clerke.

Weauer. The Clerke of Chartam: hee can writes and reade, and cast accompt.

Cade. O monstrous.

Wea. We tooke him setting of boyes Copies.

Cade.

Cade. Here's a Villaine.

Iron. He's a Booke in his pocket with red Letters in't

Cade. Nay then he is a Conjurer.

Bur. Nay, he can make Obligations, and write Court hand.

Cade. I am sorry for't: The man is a proper man of mine Honour: vnlesse I finde him guilty, he shall not die. Come hither sirrah, I must examine thee: What is thy name?

Clerke. Emanuel.

Bur. They vse to writ it on the top of Letters: 'Twill go hard with you.

Cade. Let me alone: Dost thou vse to write thy name? Or hast thou a marke to thy selfe, like a honest plain dealing man?

Clerke. Sir I thanke God, I haue bin so well brought vp, that I can write my name.

All. He hath confest: away with him: he's a Villaine and a Traitor.

Cade. Away with him I say: Hang him with his Pen and Inke-horne about his necke.

Exit one with the Clerke

Enter Michael.

Mich. Where's our Generall?

Cade. Heere I am thou particular fellow.

Mich. Fly, fly, fly, Sir Humfrey Stafford and his brother are hard by, with the Kings Forces.

Cade. Stand villaine, stand, or I'le fell thee downe: he shall be encountred with a man as good as himselfe. He is but a Knight, is a?

Mich. No.

Cade. To equall him I will make my selfe a knight presently; Rise vp Sir John Mortimer. Now haue at him.

Enter Sir Humfrey Stafford, and his Brother, with Drum and Souldiers.

Staf. Rebellious Hinds, the filth and scum of Kent,
Mark'd for the Gallowes: Lay your Weapons downe,
Home to your Cottages: forsake this Groome.
The King is merciffull, if you resolve.

Bro. But angry, wreakfull, and inclin'd to blood,
If you go forward: therefore yeeld, or dye.

Cade. As for these silken-coated slaues I passe not,
It is to you good people, that I speake,
Ouer whom (in time to come) I hope to raigne:
For I am rightfull heyre vnto the Crowne.

Staf. Villaine, thy Father was a Plasterer,
And thou thy selfe a Shearerman, art thou not?

Cade. And Adam was a Gardiner.

Bro. And what of that?

Cade. Marry, this Edmund Mortimer Earle of March, married the Duke of Clarences daughter, did he not?

Staf. I sir.

Cade. By her he had two children at one birth.

Bro. That's false.

Cade. I, there's the question; But I say, 'tis true:
The elder of them being put to nurse,
Was by a beggar-woman stolne away,
And ignorant of his birth and parentage,
Became a Bricklayer, when he came to age.
His sonne am I, deny it if you can.

Bur. Nay, 'tis too true, therefore he shall be King.

Wo. Sir, he made a Chimney in my Fathers house, & the bricks are alive at this day to testifie it: therefore deny it not.

Staf. And will you credit this base Drudges Words, that speakes he knowes not what.

All. I marry will we: therefore get ye gone.

Bro. Iacke Cade, the Duke of York hath taught you this.

Cade. He lyes, for I inuented it my selfe. Go too Sirrah, tell the King from me, that for his Fathers sake Henry the fift, (in whose time, boyes went to Span-counter for French Crownes) I am content he shall raigne, but I'le be Protector ouer him;

Butcher. And furthermore, we'l haue the Lord Saye head, for selling the Dukedome of Maine.

Cade And good reason: for thereby is England main'd
And faine to go with a staffe, but that my puissance holds it vp. Fellow-Kings, I tell you, that that Lord Say hath gelded the Commonwealth, and made it an Eunuch: & more then that, he can speake French, and therefore he is a Traitor.

Staf. O grosse and miserable ignorance.

Cade. Nay answer if you can: The Frenchmen are our enemies: go too then, I ask but this: Can he that speaks with the tongue of an enemy, be a good Counsellour, or no?

All. No, no, and therefore we'l haue his head.

Bro. Well, seeing gentle words will not preuayle,
Assaile them with the Army of the King.

Staf. Herald away, and throughout every Towne,
Proclaime them Traitors that are vp with Cade,
That those which flye before the battell ends,
May euen in their Wiues and Childrens sighs,
Be hang'd vp for example at their doores:
And you that be the Kings Friends follow me. Exit.

Cade. And you that loue the Commons, follow me:
Now shew your selues men, 'tis for Liberty.
We will not leaue one Lord, one Gentleman:
Spare none, but such as go in cloured shooes,
For they are thrifty honest men, and such
As would (but that they dare not) take our parts.

Bur. They are all in order, and march toward vs.

Cade. But then are we in order, when we are most out of order. Come, march forward.

Alarums to the fight, wherein both the Staffords are slaine. Enter Cade and the rest.

Cade. Where's Dicke, the Butcher of Ashford?

Bu. Heere sir.

Cade. They fell before thee like Sheepe and Oxen, & thou behaued'st thy selfe, as if thou hadst beene in thine owne Slaughter-house: Therefore thus will I reward thee, the Lent shall bee as long againe as it is, and thou shalt haue a License to kill for a hundred lacking one.

Bur. I desire no more.

Cade. And to speake truth, thou deserr'st no less.
This Monument of the victory will I beare, and the bodies shall be dragg'd at my horse heeles, till I do come to London, where we will haue the Maiors sword borne before vs.

Bur. If we meane to thriue, and do good, breake open the Gaoles, and let out the Prisoners.

Cade. Fease not that I warrant thee. Come, let's march towards London. Exeunt.

Enter the King with a Supplication, and the Queene with Suffolks head, the Duke of Buckingham, and the Lord Say.

Queene. Of this I heard that grosse fortune the mind,
And

And makes it fearefull and degenerate,
Thinke therefore on reuenge, and cease to weepe.
But who can cease to weepe, and looke on this.
Heere may his head lye on my throbbing breft:
But where's the body that I should embrace?

Bue. What answer makes your Grace to the Rebells Supplication?

King. Ile send some holy Bishop to intreat:
For God forbid, so many simple soules
Should perish by the Sword. And I my selfe,
Rather then bloody Warre shall cut them short,
Will parley with Iacky Cade their Generall,
But stay, Ile read it ouer once againe.

Qu. Ah barbarous villaines: Hath this louely face,
Rul'd like a wandering Planet ouer me,
And could it not inforce them to relent,
That were vnworthy to behold the same.

King. Lord Say, Iacky Cade hath sworne to haue thy head.

Say. I, but I hope your Highnesse shall haue his.

King. How now Madam?
Still lamenting and mourning for Suffolkes death?
I feare me (Loue) if that I had beene dead,
Thou would'st not haue mourn'd so much for me.

Qu. No my Loue, I should not mourne, but dye for thee.

Enter a Messenger.

King. How now? What newes? Why com'st thou in such haste?

Mes. The Rebels are in Southwarke: Fly my Lord:
Iacky Cade proclaimes himselfe Lord Mortimer,
Descended from the Duke of Clarences house,
And calles your Grace Vsurper, openly.
And vowes to Crowne himselfe in Westminster.
His Army is a ragged multitude
Of Hindes and Peasants, rude and merciless:
Sir Humfrey Stafford, and his Brothers death,
Hath giuen them heart and courage to procede:
All Schollers, Lawyers, Courtiers, Gentlemen,
They call false Caterpillers, and intend their death.

Kin. Oh graceless men: they know not what they do.

Buck. My gracious Lord, retire to Killingworth,
Vntill a power be rais'd to put them downe.

Qu. Ah were the Duke of Suffolke now alive,
These Kentish Rebels would be soone appeas'd.

King. Lord Say, the Traitors hateth thee,
Therefore away with vs to Killingworth.

Say. So might your Graces person be in danger:
The sight of me is odious in their eyes:
And therefore in this City will I stay,
And line alone as secret as I may.

Enter another Messenger.

Mes. Iacky Cade hath gotten London-bridge.
The Citizens fly and forsake their houses:
The Rascall people, thirsting after prey,
Ioyne with the Traitor, and they loyntly sweare
To spoyle the City, and your Royall Court.

Buc. Then linger not my Lord, away, take horse.

King. Come Margaret, God our hope will succor vs.

Qu. My hope is gone, now Suffolke is deceast.

King. Farewell my Lord, trust not the Kentish Rebels

Buc. Trust no body for feare you betrayd.

Say. The trust I haue, is in mine innocence,
And therefore am I bold and resolute. Exeunt.

Enter Lord Scales vpon the Tower walking. Then enters two or three Citizens below.

Scales. How now? Is Iacky Cade slaine?

1. Cit. No my Lord, nor likely to be slaine
For they haue wonne the Bridge,
Killing all those that withstand them:
The L. Maior craues aydof your Honor from the Tower
To defend the City from the Rebels.

Scales. Such aydas I can spare you shall commaund,
But I am troubled heere with them my selfe,
The Rebels haue assay'd to win the Tower.
But get you to Smithfield, and gather head,
And thither I will send you Matthew Gosse.
Fight for your King, your Country, and your Lives,
And so farwell, for I must hence againe. Exeunt

Enter Iacky Cade and the rest, and strikes his staffe on London stone.

Cade. Now is Mortimer Lord of this City,
And heere sitting vpon London Stone,
I charge and commaund, that of the Cities cost
The pissing Conduit run nothing but Claret Wine
This first yeare of our raigne.
And now henceforward it shall be Treason for any,
That calles me other then Lord Mortimer.

Enter a Souldier running.

Sou. Iacky Cade, Iacky Cade.

Cade. Knocke him downe there. They kill him.

Bot. If this Fellow be wise, he'l never call you Iacky Cade more, I thinke he hath a very faire warning.

Dick. My Lord, there's an Army gathered together in Smithfield.

Cade. Come, then let's go fight with them:
But first, go and set London Bridge on fire,
And if you can, burne downe the Tower too.
Come, let's away. Exeunt omnes.

Mortimer. Matthew Gosse is slain, and all the rest.
Then enter Iacky Cade, with his Company.

Cade. So sirs: now go some and pull down the Savoy:
Others to'th Innes of Court, downe with them all.

Bot. I haue a suite vnto your Lordship.

Cade. Boy it is Lordshippe, thou shalt haue it for that word.

Bot. Only that the Lawes of England may come out of your mouth.

Iohn. Mass 'twill be sore Law then, for he was thrust in the mouth with a Speare, and 'tis not whole yet.

Smith. Nay Iohn, it will be stinking Law, for his breath stinkes with eating rotten cheese.

Cade. I haue thought vpon it, it shall bee so. Away, burne all the Records of the Realme, my mouth shall be the Parliament of England.

Iohn. Then we are like to haue biting Statutes
Vnlesse his teeth be pull'd out.

Cade. And hence-forward all things shall be in Common. Enter a Messenger.

Mes. My Lord, a prize, a prize, heere's the Lord Say, which sold the Towns in France. He that made vs pay one and twenty Fifteenes, and one shilling to the pound, the last Subsidie.

Enter

Enter George, with the Lord Say.

Cade. Well, hee shall be beheaded for it ten times: Ah thou Say, thou Serge, nay thou Buckram Lord, now art thou within point-blanke of our Iurisdiction Regall. What canst thou answer to my Maiesty, for giuing vp of Normandie vnto Mounsieur Basimecu, the Dolphine of France? Be it knowne vnto thee by these presence, even the presence of Lord Mortimer, that I am the Beesome that must sweepe the Court cleane of such filth as thou art: Thou hast most traiterously corrupted the youth of the Realme, inerecting a Grammar Schoole: and whereas before, our Fore-fathers had no other Bookes but the Score and the Tally, thou hast caused printing to be vs'd, and contrary to the King, his Crowne, and Dignity, thou hast built a Paper-Mill. It will be prooued to thy Face, that thou hast men about thee, that vsually talke of a Noune and a Verbe, and such abhominable words, as no Christian eare can endure to heare. Thou hast appointed Iustices of Peace, to call poore men before them about matters they were not able to answer. Moreouer, thou hast put them in prison, and because they could not reade, thou hast hang'd them, when (indeede) only for that cause they haue beene most worthy to liue. Thou dost ride in a foot-cloth, dost thou not?

Say. What of that?

Cade. Marry, thou ought'st not to let thy horse weare a Cloake, when honester men then thou go in their Hose and Doublets.

Dicky. And worke in their shirt too, as my selfe for example, that am a butcher.

Say. You men of Kent.

Dic. What say you of Kent.

Say. Nothing but this: 'Tis bona terra, mala gens.

Cade. Away with him, away with him, he speaks Latine.

Say. Heare me but speake, and bestow mee wher'e you will:
Kent, in the Commentaries Caesar writ,
Is term'd the civil'st place of all this Ile:
Sweet is the Country, because full of Riches,
The People Liberall, Valiant, Active, Wealthy,
Which makes me hope you are not void of pitty.
I sold not Maine, I lost not Normandie,
Yet to recouer them would loose my life:
Iustice with fauour haue I always done,
Prayres and Teares haue mou'd me, Gifts could never.
When haue I ought exacted at your hands?
Kent to maintaine, the King, the Realme and you,
Large gifts haue I bestow'd on learned Clearkes,
Because my Booke preferr'd me to the King.
And seeing Ignorance is the curse of God,
Knowledge the Wing wherewith we flye to heauen.
Vnlesse you be possest with diuellish spirits,
You cannot but forbeare to murther me:
This Tongue hath parlied vnto Forraigne Kings
For your behoofe.

Cade. Tut, when struck'st thou one blow in the field?

Say. Great men haue reaching hands: oft haue I struck
Those that I never saw, and struck them dead.

Gen. O monstrous Coward! What, to come behinde Folkes?

Say. These clowtes are pole for watching for your good

Cade. Giue him a box o'th'eare, and that will make 'em red againe.

Say. Long sitting to determine poore mens causes,
Hath made me full of sicknesse and disease.

Cade. Ye shall haue a hempen Candle then, & the help of hatchet.

Dicky. Why dost thou quiuer man?

Say. The Palsie, and not feare prouokes me.

Cade. Nay, he nodded at vs, as who should say, Ile be even with you. Ile see if his head will stand steddier on a pole, or no: Take him away, and behead him.

Say. Tell me: wherein haue I offended most?
Haue I affected wealth, or honor? Speake.
Are my Chests fill'd vp with extorted Gold?
Is my Apparell sumptuous to behold?
Whom haue I injur'd, that ye seeke my death?
These hands are free from guiltlesse bloodshedding,
This breast from harbouring foule deceitfull thoughts.
O let me liue.

Cade. I feele remorse in my selfe with his words: but Ile bridle it: he shall dye, and it bee but for pleading so well for his life. Away with him, he has a Familiar vnder his Tongue, he speakes not a Gods name. Goe, take him away I say, and strike off his head presently, and then breake into his Sonne in Lawes house, Sir James Cromer, and strike off his head, and bring them both vppon two poles hither.

All. It shall be done.

Say. Ah Countrimen: If when you make your prair's,
God should be so obdurate as your selues:
How would it fare with your departed soules.
And therefore yet relent, and saue my life.

Cade. Away with him, and do as I command ye: the proudest Peere in the Realme, shall not weare a head on his shoulders, vnlesse he pay me tribute: there shall not a maid be married, but she shall pay to me her Maydenhead ere they bed it: Men shall hold of mee in Capite. And we charge and command, that their wiues be as free as heart can wish, or tongue can tell.

Dicky. My Lord,
When shall we go to Cheapside, and take vp commodities vpon our billes?

Cade. Marry presently.

All. O brauo.

Enter one with the heads.

Cade. But is not this braue?
Let them kisse one another: For they lou'd well
When they were aliue. Now part them againe,
Least they consult about the giuing vp
Of some more Townes in France. Soldiers,
Deferre the spoile of the Citie vntill night:
For with these borne before vs, in stead of Maces,
Will we ride through the streets, & at every Corner
Haue them kisse. Away. Exit

Alarum, and Retreat. Enter again Cade, and all his rabblement.

Cade. Vp Fish-street, downe Saint Magnes corner, kill and knocke downe, throw them into Thames:

Sound a parley

What noise is this I heare?
Dare any be so bold to sound Retreat or Parley
When I command them kill?

Enter

Enter Buckingham, and old Clifford.

Buc. I beere they be, that dare and will disturb thee:
Know Cade, we come Ambassadors from the King
Vnto the Commons, whom thou hast misled,
And beere pronounce free pardon to them all,
That will forsake thee, and go home in peace.

Clif. What say ye Countrymen, will ye relent
And yeeld to mercy, whil'st 'tis offered you,
Or let a rabble leade you to your deaths.
Who loues the King, and will imbrace his pardon,
Fling vp his cap, and say, God saue his Maiesty.
Who hateth him, and honors not his Father,
Henry the fift, that made all France to quake,
Shake he his weapon at vs, and passe by.

All. God saue the King, God saue the King.

Cade. What Buckingham and Clifford are ye so brauе?
And you base Peasants, do ye believe him, will you needs be hang'd with your Pardons about your neckes? Hath my sword therefore broke through London gates, that you should leave me at the White-heart in Southwarke.
I thought ye would never have giuen out these Armes til you had recouered your ancient Freedome. But you are all Recreants and Dastards, and delight to liue in slauerie to the Nobility. Let them breake your backes with burthens, take your houses over your heads, rauish your Wiues and Daughters before your faces. For me, I will make shift for one, and so Gods Curse light vppon you all.

All. We'l follow Cade,
We'l follow Cade.

Clif. Is Cade the sonne of Henry the fift,
That thus you do exclaime you'l go with him.
Will he conduct you through the heart of France,
And make the meanest of you Earles and Dukes?
Alas, he hath no home, no place to flye too:
Nor knowes he how to liue, but by the spoile,
Vnleesse by robbing of your Friends, and vs.
Wer't not a shame, that whilst you liue at iarre,
The fearfull French, whom you late vanquished
Should make a start ore-seas, and vanquish you?
Me thinkes alreadie in this ciuill broyle,
I see them Lording it in London streets,
Crying Villiago vnto all they meete.
Better ten thousand base-borne Cades miscarry,
Then you should stoope vnto a Frenchmans mercy.
To France, to France, and get what you haue lost:
Spare England, for it is your Natiue Coast:
Henry hath money, you are strong and manly:
God on our side, doubt not of Victorie.

All. A Clifford, a Clifford,
We'l follow the King, and Clifford.

Cade. Was euer Feather so lightly blowne too & fro, as this multitude? The name of Henry the fift, hales them to an hundred mischiefes, and makes them leave me dessolate. I see them lay their heades together to surprize me. My sword make way for me, for here is no staying:
in despight of the diuels and hell, have through the verie middest of you, and heauens and honor be witnesse, that no want of resolution in me, but onely my Followers base and ignominious treasons, makes me betake mee to my heeles. Exit

Buck. Whoe, is he fled? Go some and follow him,
And he that brings his head vnto the King,
Shall haue a thousand Crownes for his reward.

Exeunt some of them.

Follow me souldiers, wee'l deuise a meane,
To reconcile you all vnto the King. Exeunt omnes.

Sound Trumpets. Enter King, Queene, and Somerset on the Tarrace.

King. Was euer King that ioy'd an earthly Throne,
And could commaund no more content then I?
No sooner was I crept out of my Cradle,
But I was made a King, at nine moneths olde.
Was neuer Subiect long'd to be a King,
As I do long and wish to be a subiect.

Enter Buckingham and Clifford.

Buc. Health and glad tydings to your Maiesty.

King. Why Buckingham, is the Traitor Cade surprise'd?
Or is he but retir'd to make him strong?

Enter Multitude with Halters about their Necks.

Clif. He is fled my Lord, and all his powers do yeeld,
And humbly thus with halters on their neckes,
Expect your Highnesse doome of life, or death.

King. Then heauen set ope thy euerlasting gates,
To entertaine my vowes of thankes and praise,
Souldiers, this day haue you redeem'd your liues,
And shew'd how well you loue your Prince & Country
Continue still in this so good a minde,
And Henry though he be infortunate,
Assure your selues will neuer be vnkinde:
And so with thankes, and pardon to you all,
I do dismisse you to your seuerall Countries.

All. God saue the King, God saue the King.

Enter a Messenger.

Mes. Please it your Grace to be aduertised,
The Duke of Yorke is newly come from Ireland,
And with a puissant and a mighty power
Of Gallow-glasses and stout Kernes,
Is marching hitherward in proud array,
And still proclaimeth as he comes along.
His Armes are onely to remoue from thee
The Duke of Somerset, whom he tearmes a Traitor.

King. Thus stands my state, 'twixt Cade and Yorke distrest,
Like to a Ship, that hauing scap'd a Tempest,
Is straight way calme, and boarded with a Pyrate.
But now is Cade driuen backe, his men dispierc'd,
And now is Yorke in Armes, to second him.
I prey thee Buckingham go and meete him,
And aske him what's the reason of these Armes:
Tell him, I'le send Duke Edmund to the Tower,
And Somerset we will commit thee thither,
Vntill his Army be dismisst from him.

Somerset. My Lord,
I'le yeelde my selfe to prison willingly,
Or vnto death, to do my Country good.

King. In any case, be not too rough in termes,
For he is fierce, and cannot brooke hard Language.

Buc. I will my Lord, and doubt not so to deale,
As all things shall redound vnto your good.

King. Come wife, let's in, and learne to gouern better,
For yet may England curse my wretched raigne.

Flourish. Exeunt

Enter

Enter Cade.

Cade. Fye on Ambitious: fie on my state, that bare a sword, and yet am ready to famish. These five daies have I hid me in these Woods, and durst not peepe out, for all the Country is laid for me: but now am I so hungry, that if I might have a Lease of my life for a thousand yeares, I could stay no longer. Wherefore on a Bricke wall have I climb'd into this Garden, to see if I can eate Grasse, or picke a Sallet another while, which is not amiss to coole a mans stomacke this hot weather: and I think this word Sallet was borne to do me good. for many a time but for a Sallet, my braine-pan had bene cleft with a brown Bill; and many a time when I have beene dry, & brauely marching, it hath serv'd me instead of a quart pot to drinke in: and now the word Sallet must serve me to feed on.

Enter Idem.

Idem. Lord, who would live turmoyled in the Court,
And may enjoy such quiet walkes as these?
This small inheritance my Father left me,
Contenteth me, and worth a Monarchy.
I seeke not to waxe great by others warning,
Or gather wealth I care not with what envy:
Sufficeth, that I have maintaines my state,
And sends the poore well pleased from my gate.

Cade. Heere's the Lord of the soile come to seize me for a stray, for entering his Fee-simple without leave. A Villaine, thou wilt betray me, and get a 1000. Crownes of the King by carrying my head to him, but I'le make thee eate Iron like an Ostridge, and swallow my Sword like a great pin ere thou and I part.

Idem. Why rude Companion, whatsoere thou be,
I know thee not, why then should I betray thee?
Is't not enough to breake into my Garden,
And like a Theefe to come to rob my grounds:
Climbing my walles inspight of me the Owner,
But thou will brave me with these sawcie termes?

Cade. Brave thee? I by the best blood that ever was breach'd, and beard thee to. Looke on mee well, I have eate no meate these five dayes, yet come thou and thy five men, and if I doe not leave you all as dead as a doore naile, I pray God I may never eate grasse more.

Idem. Nay, it shall ere be said, while England stands,
That Alexander Idem an Esquire of Kent,
Tooke odds to combate a poore famished man.
Oppose thy stedfast gazing eyes to mine,
See if thou canst out-face me with thy looks:
Set limbe to limbe, and thou art farre the lesse:
Thy hand is but a finger to my fist,
Thy legge a sticke compared with this Truncheon,
My foote shall fight with all the strength thou hast,
And if mine arme be heaved in the Ayre,
Thy grave is digg'd already in the earth:
As for words, whose greatnesse answer's words,
Let this my sword report what speech forbeares.

Cade. By my Valour: the most complete Champion that ever I heard. Steele, if thou turne the edge, or cut not out the burly bon'd Clowne in chines of Beefe, ere thou sleepe in thy Sheath, I beseech Iove on my knees thou mayst be turn'd to Hobnailes.

Here they fight.

Ore sunshine Fortune and no other hath faine me, let ten thousand diuelles come against me, and give me but ten mankes I have lost, and I'de defie them all. Wilt Garden, and be henceforth a burying place to all that dwell in this house, because the vnconquered soule Cade is fled.

Idem. Is't Cade that I have slain, that monstrous traitor
Sword, I will hallow thee for this thy deede,
And hang thee o're my Tombe, when I am dead.
Ne're shall this blood be wiped from thy point,
But thou shalt weare it as a Heralds coate,
To emblaze the Honor that thy Master got.

Cade. Idem farewell, and be proud of thy victory: Tell Kent from me, she hath lost her best men, and exhorts the World to be Cowards: For I that never feared any men vanquished by Famine, not by Valour. Dyes.

Id. How much thou wrong'st me, heaven be my judge,
Die damned Wretch, the curse of her that bare thee:
And as I thrust thy body in with my sword,
So wish I, I might thrust thy soule to hell.
Hence will I dragge thee headlong by the heeles
Vnto a dunghill, which shall be thy grave,
And there cut off thy most vngracious head,
Which I will beare in triumph to the King,
Leaving thy trunke for Crowes to feed vpon. Exit.

Enter Yorke, and his Army of Irish, with Drum and Colours.

Yor. From Ireland thus comes York to claim his right
And pluckle the Crowne from feeble Henries head.
Ring Bells aloud, burne Bonfires cleare and bright
To entertaine great Englands lawfull King.
Ah Sancta Maiestas! who would not buy thee deere?
Let them obey, that knowes not how to Rule.
This hand was made to handle nought but Gold.
I cannot give due action to my words,
Except a Sword or Scepter balance it.
A Scepter shall it have, have I a soule,
On which I'le toss the Fleure-de-Lace of France.

Enter Buckingham.

Whom have we heere? Buckingham to disturbe me?
The king hath sent him sure: I must dissemble.

Yor. Yorke, if thou meanest well, I greet thee well.

Yor. Humfrey of Buckingham, I accept thy greeting
Art thou a Messenger, or come of pleasure.

Bu. A Messenger from Henry, our dread Liege,
To know the reason of these Armes in peace.
Or why, thou being a Subiect, as I am,
Against thy Oath, and true Allegeance sworne,
Should raise so great a power without his leave?
Or dare to bring thy Force so neere the Court?

Yor. Scarce can I speake, my Choller is so great.
Oh I could hew vp Rocks, and fight with Flint,
I am so angry at these abiect yeares,
And now like Ayre Talamonius,
On Sheepe or Oxen could I spend my furie.
I am farre better borne then is the king:
More like a King, more Kingly in my thoughts.
But I must make faire weather yet a while,
Till Henry be more weake, and I more strong.
Buckingham, I prethee pardon me,
That I have given no answer all this whiles
My minde was troubled with deepe Melancholly.
The cause why I have brought this Armie hither,

Is to remoue proud Somerset from the King,
Seditious to his Grace, and to the State.

War. That is too much presumption on thy part:
But if thy Armes be to no other end,
The King hath yelded vnto thy demand;
The Duke of Somerset is in the Tower.

Yorke. Vpon inine Honor he is Prisoner?

Buck. Vpon mine Honor he is Prisoner.

Yorke. Then Buckingham I do dismisse my Powers.
Souldiers, I thanke you all: disperse your selues:
Meet me to morrow in S. Georges Field,
You shall haue pay, and every thing you wish.
And let my Soueraigne, vertuous Henry,
Commend my eldest sonne, my all my sonnes,
As pledges of my Feaelte and Loue,
Ile send them all as willing as I liue:
Lands, Goods, Horse, Armor, any thing I haue
Is his to vse, so Somerset may die.

War. Yorke, I commend this kinde submission,
We twaine will go into his Highnesse Tent.

Enter King and Attendants.

King. Buckingham, doth Yorke intend no harme to vs
That thus he marcheth with thee arme in arme?

Yorke. In all submission and humility,
Yorke doth present himselfe vnto your Highnesse.

K. Then what intends these Forces thou doth bring?

Yor. To heaue the Traitor Somerset from hence,
And fight against that monstrous Rebell Cade,
Who since I heard to be discomfited.

Enter Idan with Cades head

Idan. If one so rude, and of so mean condition
May passe into the presence of a King:
Lo, I present your Grace a Traitors head,
The head of Cade, whom I in combat slew.

King. The head of Cade? Great God, how iust art thou?
Oh let me view his Visage being dead,
That liuing wrought me such exceeding trouble.
Tell me my Friend, art thou the man that slew him?

Idan. I was, an't like your Maiesty.

King. How art thou call'd? And what is thy degree?

Idan. Alexander Idan, that's my name,
A poore Esquire of Kent, that loues his King.

Buc. So please it you my Lord, 't were not amisse
He were created Knight for his good seruice.

King. Idan, kneele downe, rise vp a Knight:
We giue thee for reward a thousand Markes,
And will, that thou henceforth attend on vs.

Idan. May Idan liue to merit such a bounte,
And never liue but true vnto his Liege.

Enter Queene and Somerset.

K. See Buckingham, Somerset comes with th'Queene
Go bid her hide him quickly from the Duke.

Qu. For thousand Yorkes he shall not hide his head,
But boldly stand, and front him to his face.

Yor. How ouert is Somerset in libertie?
Then Yorke vnloose thy long imprisoned thoughes,
And let thy tongue be equall with thy heart.
Shall I endure the sight of Somerset?
False King, why hast thou broken faith with me,
Knowing how hardly I can brooke abuse?
King did I call thee? Not thou art not King:
Not fit to gouerne and rule multitudes,
Which dar'st not, no nor canst not rule a Traitor.
That Head of thine doth not become a Crowne:
Thy Hand is made to grasp a Palmers staffe,
And not to grace an awefull Princely Sceptor.
That Gold, must round engirt these browes of mine,
Whose smile and Frowne, like to Achilles Speare
Is able with the change, to kill and cure.
Heere is a hand to hold a Sceptor vp,
And with the same to aide controlling Lawes:
Giue place: by heauen thou shalt rule no more
O'er him, whom heauen created for thy Ruler.

Som. O monstrous Traitor! I arrest thee Yorke
Of Capitall Treason 'gainst the King and Crowne:
Obey audacious Traitor, kneele for Grace.

Yorke. Would'st haue me kneele? First let me ask of thee,
If they can brooke I bow a knee to man:
Sirrah, call in my sonne to be my bale:
I know ere they will haue me go to Ward,
They'l pawne their swords of my infranchisement.

Qu. Call hither Clifford, bid him come amaine,
To say, if that the Bastard boyes of Yorke
Shall be the Surety for their Traitor Father.

Yorke. O blood-bespotted Neopolitan,
Out-cast of Naples, Englands bloody Scourge,
The sonnes of Yorke, thy betters in their birth,
Shall be their Fathers baile, and bane to those
That for my Surety will refuse the Boyes.

Enter Edward and Richard.

See where they come, Ile warrant they'l make it good.

Enter Clifford.

Qu. And here comes Clifford to deny their baile.

Clif. Health, and all happinesse to my Lord the King.

Yor. I thanke thee Clifford: Say, what newes with thee?
Nay, do not fright vs with an angry looke:
We are thy Soueraigne Clifford, kneele againe;
For thy mistaking so, We pardon thee.

Clif. This is my King Yorke, I do not mistake,
But thou mistakes me much to thinke I do,
To Bedlem with him, is the man goowne mad.

King. I Clifford, a Bedlem and ambitious humor
Makes him oppose himselfe against his King.

Clif. He is a Traitor, let him to the Tower,
And chop away that factious pate of his.

Qu. He is arrested, but will not obey:
His sonnes (he sayes) shall giue their words for him.

Yor. Will you not Sonnes?

Edw. I Noble Father, if our words will serue.

Rich. And if words will not, then our Weapons shal.

Clif. Why what a brood of Traitors haue we heere?

Yorke. Looke in a Glasse, and call thy image so.
I am thy King, and thou a false-heart Traitor:
Call hither to the stake my two brave Beares,
That with the very shaking of their Chaines,
They may astonish these fell-lurking Curres,
Bid Salsbury and Warwicke come to me.

Enter the Earles of Warwicke, and Salsbury.

Clif. Are these thy Beares? We'l beat thy Beares to death,
And manacle the Berard in their Chaines,
If thou dar'st bring them to the baiting place.

Rich. Oft haue I seene a hot ore-weening Cur,
Run backe and bite, because he was with-held,
Who being suffer'd with the Beares fell paw,
Hath clapt his taile, betweene his legges and cride,
And such a peece of seruice will you do,

If you oppose your selues to march Lord Warwicke.

Clif. Hence heaps of wrath, foule indigested lumpe,
As crooked in thy manners, as thy shape.

Yor. Nay we shall heare you thereonly anon.

Clif. Take heede least by your heare you burne your selues:

King. Why Warwicke, hath thy knee forgot to bow?
Old Salsbury, shame to thy silver haire,
Thou mad misleader of thy brain-sicke sonne,
What wilt thou on thy death-bed play the Ruffian?
And seeke for sorrow with thy Spectacles?
Oh where is Faith? Oh, where is Loyalty?
If it be banisht from the frostie head,
Where shall it finde a harbour in the earth?
Wilt thou go digge a grave to finde out Warre,
And shame thine honourable Age with blood?
Why art thou old, and wanst st experience?
Or wherefore doest abuse it, if thou hast it?
For shame in duetie bend thy knee to me.
That bowes vnto the grave, with sickle age.

Sal. My Lord, I have considered with my selfe
The Title of this most renowned Duke,
And in my conscience, do repute his grace
The rightfull heyre to Englands Royall seate.

King. Hast thou not sworne Allegiance vnto me?

Sal. I have.

Kl. Canst thou dispense with heaven for such an oath?

Sal. It is great sinne, to swere vnto a sinne:
But greater sinne to keepe a sinfull oath:
Who can be bound by any solemne Vow
To do a murd'rous deede, to rob a man,
To force a spotlesse Virgine Chastitie,
To reave the Orphan of his Patrimonie,
To wring the Widdow from her custom'd right,
And have no other reason for this wrong,
But that he was bound by a solemne Oath?

Qu. A subtle Traitor needs no Sophister.

King. Call Buckingham, and bid him arme himselfe.

Yorke. Call Buckingham, and all the friends thou hast,
I am resolu'd for death and dignitie.

Old Clif. The first I warrant thee, if dreames prove true

War. You were best to go to bed, and dreame againe,
To keepe thee from the Tempest of the field.

Old Clif. I am resolu'd to bearre a greater storme,
Then any thou canst conceive or see day:
And that I'le write vpon thy Burgonet.
Might I but know thee by thy house Badge.

War. Now by my Fathers badge, old Nevill Crest,
The rampant Beare chain'd to the ragged staffe,
This day I'le weare aloft my Burgonet,
As on a Mountaine top, the Cedar shewes,
That keepes his leaves in spight of any storme,
Even to affright thee with the view thereof.

Old Clif. And from thy Burgonet I'le rend thy Beare,
And tread it vnder foot with all contempt,
Despight the Bearard, that protects the Beare.

Yo.Clif. And so to Armes victorious Father,
To quell the Rebels, and their Complices.

Rut. Fie, Clarrickie for shame, speake not in spight,
For you shall sup with Iesu Christ to night.

Yo Clif. Foule stygmaticke that's more then thou canst tell.

Rut. If not in heaven, you'l surely sup in hell. Exeunt

Enter Warwicke.

War. Clifford of Cumberland, 'tis Warwicke calles:
And if thou doest not hide thee from the Beare,
Now when the angrie Trumpet sounds alarum,
And dead mens cries do fill the emptie aire,
Clifford I say, come forth and fight with me,
Proud Northerne Lord, Clifford of Cumberland,
Warwicke is hoarse with calling thee to armes.

Enter Yorke.

War. How now my Noble Lord? What all a-foot.

Yor. The deadly handed Clifford slew my Steed:
But match to match I have encountred him,
And made a prey for Carrion Kytes and Crowes
Euen of the bonnie beast he loved so well.

Enter Clifford.

War. Of one or both of vs the time is come.

Yor. Hold Warwick seek thee out some other chece
For I my selfe must hunt this Deere to death.

War. Then noble Yorke, 'tis for a Crowne thou fightest:
As I intend Clifford to thrive to day,
It greeves my soule to leave thee vnassail'd. Exit War.

Clif. What feest thou in me Yorke?
Why doest thou pause?

Yorke. With thy brawne bearing shoulds I be in loue,
But that thou art so fast mine enemie.

Clif. Nor should thy prowesse want praise & esteeme,
But that 'tis shewne ignoble, and in Treason.

Yorke. So let it helpe me now against thy sword,
As I in iustice, and true right expresse it.

Clif. My soule and bodie on the action both.

Yor. A dreadfull lay, addresse thee instantly.

Clif. La fin Corrone les euuvres.

Yor. These Warre hath giuen thee peace, for ý art still,
Peace with his soule, heaven if it be thy will.

Enter young Clifford.

Clif. Shame and Confusion all is on the rout,
Feare frames disorder, and disorder wounds
Where it should guard. O Warre, thou sonne of hell,
Whom angry heavens do make their minister,
Throw in the frozen bosomes of our part,
Hot Coales of Vengeance. Let no Souldier flye.
He that is truly dedicate to Warre,
Hath no self-loue: nor he that loues himselfe,
Hath not essentially, but by circumstance
The name of Valour. O let the vile world end,
And the premised Flames of the Last day,
Knit earth and heaven together.
Now let the generall Trumpet blow his blast,
Particularities, and petrie sounds
To cease. Wast thou ordain'd (deere Father)
To loose thy youth in peace, and to atchieue
The Silver Liverry of aduised Age,
And in thy Reuerence, and thy Chaire-dayes, thus
To die in Ruffian battell? Euen at this sight,
My heart is turn'd to stone: and while 'tis mine,
It shall be stony. Yorke, not our old men spares:
No more will I their Babes, Teares Virginall,
Shall be to me, even as the Dew to Fire,
And Beautie, that the Tyrant oft reclaimes,
Shall to my flaming wrath, be Oyle and Flax:
Henceforth, I will not haue to do with pity.
Meet I an infant of the house of Yorke,
Into as many gobbets will I cut it
As wilde Medea yong Absyrtis did.
In cruelty, will I seeke out my Fame.
Come thou new ruine of olde Cliffords house:
As did Aeneas old Anchyses beare,
So bears I thee vpon my manly shoulders:
But then, Aeneas bare a living loade;

Nothing so beauy as these woes of mine.

Enter Richard, and Somerset to fight.

Rich. So lye thou there:
For vnderneath an Ale-house paltry signe,
The Castle in S. Albons, Somerset
Hath made the Wizard famous in his death:
Sword, hold thy temper; Heart, be wrathfull still:
Priests pray for enemies, but Princes kill.
Fight. Exeunt omnes.

Enter King, Queene, and others.

Qu. Away my Lord, you are slow, for shame away.
King. Can we outrun the Heauens? Good Margaret stay.
Qu. What are you made of? You'l nor fight nor fly:
Now is it manhood, wisedome, and defence,
To giue the enemy way, and to secure vs
By what we can, which can no more but flye.
Alarum a farre off.
If you be tane, we then should see the bottome
Of all our Fortunes: but if we haply scape,
(As well we may, if not through your neglect)
We shall to London get, where you are lou'd,
And where this breach now in our Fortunes made
May readily be stopt.

Enter Clifford.

Clif. But that my hearts on future mischeefe set,
I would speake blasphemy ere bid you flye:
But flye you must: Vncureable discomfite
Reignes in the hearts of all our present parts.
Away for your releefe, and we will liue
To see their day, and them our Fortune giue.
Away my Lord, away. Exeunt

Alarum. Retreat. Enter Yorke, Richard, Warwicke, and Souldiers, with Drum & Colours.

Yorke. Of Salisbury, who can report of him,
That Winter Lyon, who in rage forgets
Aged contusions, and all brush of Time:
And like a Gallant, in the brow of youth,
Repaires him with Occasion. This happy day
Is not it selfe, nor haue we wonne one foot,
If Salisbury be lost.
Rich. My Noble Father:
Three times to day I holpe him to his horse,
Three times bestrid him: Thrice I led him off,
Perswaded him from any further act:
But still where danger was, still there I met him,
And like rich hangings in a homely house,
So was his Will, in his old feeble body,
But Noble as he is, looke where he comes.
Enter Salisbury.
Sal. Now by my Sword, well hast thou fought to day
By th'Masse so did we all. I thanke you Richard
God knowes how long it is I haue to line:
And it hath pleas'd him that three times to day
You haue defended me from imminent death.
Well Lords, we haue not got that which we haue,
'Tis not enough our foes are this time fled,
Being opposites of such repayring Nature.
York. I know our safety is to follow them,
For (as I heare) the King is fled to London,
To call a present Court of Parliament:
Let vs pursue him ere the Writs go forth.
What saysn Lord Warwicke, shall we after them?
War. After them: nay before them if we can:
Now by my hand (Lords) 'twas a glorious day.
Saint Albons battell wonne by famous Yorke,
Shall be eternis'd in all Age to come.
Sound Drumme and Trumpets, and to London all,
And more such dayes as these, to vs befall. Exeunt

FINIS.

The third Part of Henry the Sixt, with the death of the Duke of YORKE.

Actus Primus. Scæna Prima.

Alarum.
Enter Plantagenet, Edward, Richard, Norfolke, Mountagues, Warwicke, and Souldiers.

Warwicke.
Wonder how the King escap'd our hands?
PL. While we pursu'd the Horsmen of North,
He slyly stole away, and left his men:
Whereat the great Lord of Northumberland,
Whose Warlike eares could never brooke retreat,
Chear'd vp the drooping Army, and himselfe,
Lord Clifford and Lord Stafford all a-breft
Chaeg'd our maine Battailes Front: and breaking in,
Were by the Swords of common Souldiers slaine.
Edw. Lord Staffords Father, Duke of Buckingham,
Is either slaine or wounded dangerous.
I cleft his Beauer with a down-right blow:
That this is true (Father) behold his blood.
Mount. And Brother, here's the Earle of Wiltshires blood
Whom I encountred as the Battels ioyn'd.
Rich. Speake thou for me, and tell them what I did.
Plan. Richard hath best deseru'd of all my sonnes:
But is your Grace dead, my Lord of Somerset?
Nor. Such hope haue all the line of John of Gaunt.
Rich. Thus do I hope to shake King Henries head.
Warw. And so doe I, victorious Prince of Yorke.
Before I see thee seated in that Throne,
Which now the House of Lancaster vsurpes,
I vow by Heauen, these eyes shall neuer close.
This is the Pallace of the fearefull King,
And this the Regall Seat: possesse it Yorke,
For this is thine, and not King Henries Heires.
Plant. Assist me then, sweet Warwick, and I will,
For hither we haue broken in by force.
Norf. We'le all assist you: he that flyes, shall dye.
Plant. Thanks gentle Norfolke, stay by me my Lords,
And Souldiers stay and lodge by me this Night.
They goe vp.
Warw. And when the King comes, offer him no violence,
Vnlesse he seeke to thrust you out perforce.
Plant. The Queene this day here holds her Parliament,
But little thinkes we shall be of her counsaile,
By words or blowes here let vs winne our right.
Rich. Arm'd as we are, let's stay within this House.
Warw. The bloody Parliament shall this be call'd,
Vnlesse Plantagenet, Duke of Yorke, be King,
And bashfull Henry depos'd, whose Cowardize
Hath made vs by-words to our enemies.
Plant. Then leaue me not, my Lords be resolute,
I meane to take possession of my Right.
Warw. Neither the King, nor he that loues him best,
The prowdest hee that holds vp Lancaster,
Dares stirre a Wing, if Warwick shake his Bells.
Ile plant Plantagenet, root him vp who dares:
Resolue thee Richard, clayme the English Crowne.

Flourish. Enter King Henry, Clifford, Northumberland, Westmerland, Exeter, and the rest.

Henry. My Lords, looke where the sturdie Rebell sits,
Euen in the Chayre of State: belike he meanes,
Backt by the power of Warwicke, that false Peere,
To aspire vnto the Crowne, and reigne as King.
Earle of Northumberland, he slew thy Father,
And thine, Lord Clifford, & you both haue vow'd reuenge
On him, his sonnes, his fauorites, and his friends.
Northumb. If I be not, Heauens be reuenge'd on me.
Clifford. The hope thereof, makes Clifford mourne in Steele.
Westm. What, shall we suffer this? lets pluck him down,
My heart for anger burnes, I cannot brooke it.
Henry. Be patient, gentle Earle of Westmerland.
Clifford. Patience is for Poultroones, such as he:
He durst not sit there, had your Father liu'd.
My gracious Lord, here in the Parliament
Let vs assayle the Family of Yorke.
North. Well hast thou spoken, Cousin be it so.
Henry. Ah, know you not the Citie fauours them,
And they haue troopes of Souldiers at their beck?
Westm. But when the Duke is slaine, they'le quickly fye.
Henry. Farre be the thoughts of this from Henries heart,
To make a Shambles of the Parliament House.
Cousin of Exeter, frowns, words, and threats,
Shall be the Warre that Henry meanes to vse.
Thou factious Duke of Yorke descend my Throne,
And kneele for grace and mercie at my feet,
I am thy Soueraigne.
Yorke. I am thine.
Exet. For shame come downe, he made thee Duke of Yorke.
Yorke. It was my Inheritance, as the Earledome was.
Exet. Thy

Exet. Thy Father was a Traytor to the Crowne.
Warw. Exeter thou art a Traytor to the Crowne,
In following this vsurping Henry.
Clifford. Whom should he follow, but his naturall King?
Warw. True Clifford, that's Richard Duke of Yorke.
Henry. And shall I stand, and thou sit in my Throne?
Yorke. It must and shall be so, content thy selfe.
Warw. Be Duke of Lancaster, let him be King.
Westm. He is both King, and Duke of Lancaster,
And that the Lord of Westmerland shall maintaine.
Warw. And Warwick shall disproue it. You forget,
That we are those which chas'd you from the field,
And slew your Fathers, and with Colours spread
Marcht through the Citie to the Palace Gates.
Northumb. Yes Warwicke, I remember it to my griefe,
And by his Soule, thou and thy House shall rue it.
Westm. Plantagenet, of thee and these thy Sonnes,
Thy Kinsmen, and thy Friends, Ile haue more liues
Then drops of blood were in my Fathers Veines.
Clif. Vrge it no more, least that instead of words,
I send thee, Warwicke, such a Messenger,
As shall reuenge his death, before I stirre.
Warw. Poore Clifford, how I scorne his worthlesse
Threats.
Plant. Will you we shew our Title to the Crowne?
If not, our Swords shall plead it in the field.
Henry. What Title hast thou Traytor to the Crowne?
My Father was as thou art, Duke of Yorke,
Thy Grandfather Roger Mortimer, Earle of March.
I am the Sonne of Henry the Fift,
Who made the Dolphin and the French to stoupe,
And seiz'd vpon their Townes and Prouinces.
Warw. Talke not of France, sith thou hast lost it all.
Henry. The Lord Protector lost it, and not I:
When I was crown'd, I was but nine moneths old.
Rich. You are old enough now,
And yet me thinkes you loose:
Father teare the Crowne from the Vsurpers Head.
Edward. Sweet Father doe so, set it on your Head.
Mont. Good Brother,
As thou lou'st and honorest Armes,
Let's fight it out, and not stand cauilling thus.
Richard. Sound Drummes and Trumpets, and the King will fye.
Plant. Sonnes peace.
Henry. Peace thou, and giue King Henry leaue to speake.
Warw. Plantagenet shal speake first: Heare him Lords,
And be you silent and attentiue too,
For he that interrupts him, shall not liue.
Hen. Think'st thou, that I will leaue my Kingly Throne,
Wherein my Grandfire and my Father sat?
No: first shall Warre vnpeople this my Realme;
I, and their Colours often borne in France,
And now in England, to our hearts great sorrow,
Shall be my Winding-sheet. Why faint you Lords?
My Title's good, and better farre then his.
Warw. Prouse it Henry, and thou shalt be King.
Hen. Henry the Fourth by Conquest got the Crowne.
Plant. 'Twas by Rebellion against his King.
Henry. Iknow not what to say, my Titles weake:
Tell me, may not a King adopt an Heire?
Plant. What then?
Henry. And if he may, then am I lawfull King:
For Richard, in the view of many Lords,
Resign'd the Crowne to Henry the Fourth,
Whose Heire my Father was, and I am his.
Plant. He rose against him, being his Soueraigne,
And made him to resigne his Crowne perforce.
Warw. Suppose, my Lords, he did it vnconstrayn'd,
Thinke you 'twere prejudicial to his Crowne?
Exet. No: for he could not so resigne his Crowne,
But that the next Heire should succeed and reigne.
Henry. Art thou against vs, Duke of Exeter?
Exet. His is the right, and therefore pardon me.
Plant. Why whisper you, my Lords, and answer not?
Exet. My Conscience tells me he is lawfull King.
Henry. All will reuolt from me, and come to him.
Northumb. Plantagenet, for all the Clayme thou lay'st,
Thinke not, that Henry shall be so depos'd.
Warw. Depos'd he shall be, in despight of all.
Northumb. Thou art deceiu'd:
'Tis not thy Southerne power
Of Essex, Norfolke, Suffolke, nor of Kent,
Which makes thee thus presumptuous and proud,
Can set the Duke vp in despight of me.
Clifford. King Henry, be thy Title right or wrong,
Lord Clifford vowes to fight in thy defence:
May that ground gape, and swallow me alive,
Where I shall kneele to him that slew my Father.
Henry. Oh Clifford, how thy words reuiue my heart.
Plant. Henry of Lancaster, resigne thy Crowne:
What mutter you, or what conspire you Lords?
Warw. Doe right vnto this Princely Duke of Yorke,
Or I will fill the House with armed men,
And ouer the Chayre of State, where now he sits,
Write vp his Title with vsurping blood.
He stampes with his foot, and the Souldiers show themselues.
Henry. My Lord of Warwick, heare but one word,
Let me for this my life time reigne as King.
Plant. Confirme the Crowne to me and to mine Heires,
And thou shalt reigne in quiet while thou liu'st.
Henry. I am content: Richard Plantagenet
Enioy the King doome after my decease.
Clifford. What wrong is this vnto the Prince, your Sonne?
Warw. What good is this to England, and himselfe?
Westm. Base, fearefull, and despayring Henry.
Clifford. How hast thou iniur'd both thy selfe and vs?
Westm. I cannot stay to heare these Articles.
Northumb. Nor I.
Clifford. Come Cousin, let vs tell the Queene these Newes.
Westm. Farwell faint-hearted and degenerate King,
In whose cold blood no sparke of Honor bides.
Northumb. Be thou a prey vnto the House of Yorke,
And dye in Bands, for this vnmanly deed.
Clif. In dreadfull Warre may'st thou be ouercome,
Or liue in peace abandon'd and despis'd.
Warw. Turne this way Henry, and regard them not.
Exeter. They seeke reuenge, and therefore will not yeeld.
Henry. Ah Exeter.
Warw. Why should you sigh, my Lord?
Henry. Not for my selfe Lord Warwick, but my Sonne,
Whom I vnnaturally shall dis-inherite.
But be it as it may: I here entayle
The Crowne to thee and to thine Heires for euer,
Conditionally, that here thou take an Oath,
To cease this Ciuill Warre: and whilst I liue,

To

To honor me as thy King, and Soueraigne:
And neyther by Treason nor Hostilitie,
To seeke to put me downe, and reigne thy selfe.

Plant. This Oath I willingly take, and will performe.

Warw. Long liue King Henry: Plantagenet embrace him.

Henry. And long liue thou, and these thy forward Sonnes.

Plant. Now Yorke and Lancaster are reconcil'd.

Exet. Accurst be he that seekes to make them foes.

Sonn. Here they come downe.

Plant. Farewell my gracious Lord, Ile to my Castle.

Warw. And Ile keepe London with my Souldiers.

Norf. And I to Norfolke with my followers.

Mount. And I vnto the Sea, from whence I came.

Henry. And I with griefe and sorrow to the Court.

Enter the Queene.

Exeter. Heere comes the Queene,
Whose Lookes bewray her anger:
Ile steale away.

Henry. Exeter so will I.

Queene. Nay, goe not from me, I will follow thee.

Henry. Be patient gentle Queene, and I will stay.

Queene. Who can be patient in such extremes?
Ah wretched man, would I had dy'de a Maid?
And never seene thee, never borne thee Sonne,
Seeing thou hast prou'd so vnnaturall a Father.
Hath he deserv'd to loose his Birth-right thus?
Hadst thou but lou'd him halfe so well as I,
Or felt that paine which I did for him once,
Or nourisht him, as I did with my blood;
Thou would'st haue left thy dearest heart-blood there,
Rather then haue made that savage Duke thine Heire,
And dis-inherited thine onely Sonne.

Prince. Father, you cannot dis-inherite me:
If you be King, why should not I succeede?

Henry. Pardon me Margaret, pardon me sweet Sonne,
The Earle of Warwick and the Duke enforc't me.

Queen. Enforc't thee? Art thou King, and wilt be forc'd?
I shame to heare thee speake: ah timorous Wretch,
Thou hast vndone thy selfe, thy Sonne, and me,
And giu'n vnto the House of Yorke such head,
As thou shalt reigne but by their sufferance.
To entayle him and his Heires vnto the Crowne,
What is it, but to make thy Sepulcher,
And creepe into it farre before thy time?
Warwick is Chancellor, and the Lord of Calliee,
Stern Falconbridge commands the Narrow Seas,
The Duke is made Protector of the Realme,
And yet shalt thou be safe? Such fortune finde
The trembling Lambe, inuironed with Wolues.
Had I beene there, which am a silly Woman,
The Souldiers should haue toss'd me on their Pikes,
Before I would haue graunted to that Act.
But thou prefer'st thy Life, before thine Honor.
And seeing thou do'st, I here diuorce my selfe,
Both from thy Table Henry, and thy Bed,
Vntill that Act of Parliament be repeal'd,
Whereby my Sonne is dis-inherited.
The Northerne Lords, that have forsworne thy Colours,
Will follow mine, if once they see them spread:
And spread they shall be, to thy foule disgrace,
And vtter ruine of the House of Yorke.
Thus do I leaue thee: Come Sonne, let's away,
Our Army is ready; come, we'le after them.

Henry. Stay gentle Margaret, and heare me speake.

Queene. Thou hast spoke too much already: get thee gone.

Henry. Gentle Sonne Edward, thou wilt stay me?

Queene. I, to be murther'd by his Enemies.

Prince. When I returne with victorie to the field,
Ile see your Grace: till then, Ile follow her.

Queene. Come Sonne away, we may not linger thus.

Henry. Poore Queene,
How loue to me, and to her Sonne,
Hath made her breake out into termes of Rage.
Reueng'd may she be on that hatefull Duke,
Whose haughtie spirit, winged with desire,
Will cost my Crowne, and like an emptie Eagle,
Tyre on the flesh of me, and of my Sonne.
The loss of those three Lords torments my heart:
Ile write vnto them, and entreat them faire;
Come Cousin, you shall be the Messenger.

Exet. And I, I hope, shall reconcile them all. Exit.

Flourish. Enter Richard, Edward, and Mountague.

Richard. Brother, though I bee youngest, give mee leaue.

Edward. No, I can better play the Orator.

Mount. But I haue reasons strong and forceable.

Enter the Duke of Yorke.

Yorke. Why how now Sonnes, and Brother, at a strife?
What is your Quarrell? how began it first?

Edward. No Quarrell, but a slight Contention.

Yorke. About what?

Rich. About that which concerneth your Grace and vs,
The Crowne of England, Father, which is yours.

Yorke. Mine Boy? not till King Henry be dead.

Richard. Your Right depends not on his life, or death.

Edward. Now you are Heire, therefore enioy it now:
By giving the House of Lancaster leaue to breathe,
It will cost-vnsure you, Father, in the end.

Yorke. I tooke an Oath, that hee should quietly reigne.

Edward. But for a Kingdome any Oath may be broken:
I would breake a thousand Oathes, to reigne one yeare.

Richard. No: God forbid your Grace should be forsworne.

Yorke. I shall be, if I claime by open Warre.

Richard. Ile prooue the contrary, if you'le heare mee speake.

Yorke. Thou canst not, Sonne: it is impossible.

Richard. An Oath is of no moment, being not took
Before a true and lawfull Magistrate,
That hath authoritie ouer him that sweares.
Henry had none, but did vsurpe the place.
Then seeing 'twas he that made you to depose,
Your Oath, my Lord, is vaine and friuolous.
Therefore to Armes: and Father doe but think,
How sweet a thing it is to weare a Crowne,
Within whose Circuit is Elizium,
And all that Poets feine of Blisse and Ioy.
Why doe we linger thus? I cannot tell.
Vntill the White Rose that I weare, be dy'de
Even in the luke-warm blood of Henries heart.

Yorke. Richard enough: I will be King, or dye.
Brother, thou shalt to London preiently,
And whet on Warwick to this Enterprise.

Thou

Thou Richard shalt to the Duke of Norfolke,
And tell him priuily of our intent.
You Edward shall vnto my Lord Cobham,
With whom the Kentishmen will willingly rise.
In them I trust: for they are Souldiers,
Witty, courteous, liberall, full of spirit.
While you are thus imploy'd, what resteth more?
But that I seeke occasion how to rise,
And yet the King not priuie to my Drift,
Nor any of the House of Lancaster.

Enter Gabriel.

But stay, what Newes? Why comm'st thou in such poste?

Gabriel. The Queene,
With all the Northerne Earles and Lords,
Intend here to besiege you in your Castle.
She is hard by, with twentie thousand men:
And therefore fortifie your Hold, my Lord.

Yorke. I, with my Sword.
What? think'st thou, that we feare them?
Edward and Richard, you shall stay with me,
My Brother Montague shall poste to London.
Let Noble Warwicke, Cobham, and the rest,
Whom we haue left Protectors of the King,
With powrefull Policie strengthen themselues,
And trust not simple Henry, nor his Oathes.

Mont. Brother, I goe: I'le winne them, feare it not
And thus most humbly I doe take my leaue.

Exit Montague.

Enter Mortimer, and his Brother.

York. Sir John, and Sir Hugh Mortimer, mine Vncles
You are come to Sandall in a happie houre.
The Armie of the Queene meane to besiege vs.

John. Shee shall not needs, we'le meete her in the field.

Yorke. What, with fiue thousand men?

Richard. I, with fiue hundred, Father, for a needs.
A Woman's generall: what should we feare?

A March afarre off.

Edward. I heare their Drummes:
Let's sire out men in order,
And issue forth, and bid them Battaile straight.

Yorke. Fiue men to twentie: though the odds be great,
I doubt not, Vnckle, of our Victorie.
Many a Battaile haue I wonne in France,
When as the Enemie hath beene tenne to one:
Why should I not now haue the like successe?

Alarum. Exit.

Enter Rutland, and his Tutor.

Rutland. Ah, whither shall I flye, to scape their hands
Ah Tutor, looke where bloody Clifford comes.

Enter Clifford.

Clifford. Chaplaine away, thy Priesthood saues thy life
As for the Brat of this accursed Duke,
Whose Father slew my Father, he shall dye.

Tutor. And I, my Lord, will beare him company.

Clifford. Souldiers, away with him.

Tutor. Ah Clifford, murther not this innocent Child,
Least thou be hated both of God and Man Exit.

Clifford. How mean'st he dead alreadie?
Or is it feare, that makes him close his eyes?
I'le open them.

Rutland. So looks the pens-vp Lyon o're the Wretch,
That trembles vnder his deuouring Paws.
And so he walkes, insulting o're his Prey,
And so he comes, to rend his Limbes asunder.
Ah gentle Clifford, kill me with thy Sword,
And not with such a cruell threatning Looke.
Sweet Clifford heare me speake, before I dye:
I am too meane a subiect for thy Wrath,
Be thou reuenge'd on man, and let me liue.

Clifford. In vaine thou speak'st, poore Boy:
My Fathers blood hath stopt the passage
Where thy words should enter.

Rutland. Then let my Fathers blood open it again,
He is a man, and Clifford cope with him.

Clifford. Had I thy Brethren here, their lives and thine
Were not reuenge sufficient for me:
No, if I digg'd vp thy fore-fathers Graues,
And hung their rotten Coffins vp in Chaynes,
It could not slake mine ire, nor ease my heart.
The sight of any of the House of Yorke,
Is as a fiurie to torment my Soule:
And till I root out their accursed Line,
And leaue not one aliue, I liue in Hell.
Therefore——

Rutland. Oh let me pray, before I take my death:
To thee I pray; sweet Clifford pitty me.

Clifford. Such pitty as my Rapiers point affords.

Rutland. I never did thee harme: why wilt thou slay me?

Clifford. Thy Father hath.

Rutland. But 'twas ere I was borne.
Thou hast one Sonne, for his sake pitty me,
Least in reuenge thereof, (sith God is iust,
He be as miserably slaine as I.
Ah, let me liue in Prison all my dayes,
And when I giue occasion of offence,
Then let me dye, for now thou hast no cause.

Clifford. No cause? thy Father slew my Father, therefore dye.

Rutland. Dij faciant laudis summa sit ista tua.

Clifford. Plantagenet, I come Plantagenet:
And this thy Sonnes blood cleansing to my Blade,
Shall rust vpon my Weapon, till thy blood
Congeal'd with this, doe make me wipe off both. Exit.

Alarum. Enter Richard, Duke of Yorke.

Yorke. The Armie of the Queene hath got the field:
My Vncles both are slaine, in rescuing me;
And all my followers, to the eager foe
Turne back, and flye, like Ships before the Winde,
Or Lambes pursu'd by hunger-starued Wolues.
My Sonnes, God knowes what hath bechanced them:
But this I know, they haue demean'd themselues
Like men borne to Renowme, by Life or Death.
Three times did Richard make a Lane to me,
And thrice cry'de, Courage Father, fight it out:
And full as oft came Edward to my side,
With Purple Faulchion, painted to the Hilt,
In blood of those that had encountred him:
And when the hardyest Warriors did retyre,
Richard cry'de Charge, and giue no foot of ground,
And cry'de, A Crowne, or else a glorious Tombe,

A Scepter, or an Earthy Sepulchre.
With this we charg'd againe: but crue alas,
We bodg'd againe, as I have seene a Swan
With bootless labour swimme against the Tyde,
And spend her strength with over-matching Waues.
A short Alarum within.
Ah hearke, the fatall followers doe pursue,
And I am faint, and cannot flye their furie:
And were I strong, I would not shunne their furie.
The Sands are numbred, that makes vp my Life,
Here must I stay, and here my Life must end.

Enter the Queene, Clifford, Northumberland, the young Prince, and Souldiers.

Come bloody Clifford, rough Northumberland,
I dare your quenchlesse furie to more rage.
I am your Butt, and I abide your Shot.
Northumb. Yeeld to our mercy, proud Plantagenet.
Clifford. I, to such mercy, as his ruthlesse Arme
With downe-right payment, shew'd vnto my Father.
Now Phaeton hath tumbled from his Carre,
And made an Euening at the Noone-tide Prick.
Yorke. My ashes, as the Phoenix, may bring forth
A Bird, that will reuenge vpon you all:
And in that hope, I throw mine eyes to Heauen,
Scorning what ere you can afflict me with.
Why come you not? what, multitudes, and feare?
Clif. So Cowards fight, when they can flye no further,
So Doues doe peck the Fauleons piercing Tallons,
So desperate Theeues, all hopelesse of their Liues,
Breathe out Inuectiues 'gainst the Officers.
Yorke. Oh Clifford, but bethinke thee once against,
And in thy thought o're-run my former time:
And if thou canst, for blushing, view this face,
And bite thy tongue, that slanders him with Cowardice,
Whose frowne hath made thee faint and flye ere this.
Clifford. I will not bandie with thee word for word,
But buckler with thee blowes twice two for one.
Queene. Hold valiant Clifford, for a thousand causes
I would prolong a while the Traytors Life:
Wrath makes him deafe; speake thou Northumberland.
Northumb. Hold Clifford, doe not honor him so much,
To prick thy finger, though to wound his heart.
What valour were it, when a Curre doth grunne,
For one to thrust his Hand betweene his Teeth,
When he might spurne him with his Foot away?
It is Warres prize, to take all Vantages,
And ranne to one, is no impeach of Valour.
Clifford. I, I, so strues the Woodcocke with the Gyrne.
Northumb. So doth the Connie struggle in the Net.
York. So triumph Theeues vpon their conquer'd Booty,
So True men yeeld with Robbers, so o're-matche.
Northumb. What would your Grace haue done vnto him now?
Queene. Braue Warriors, Clifford and Northumberland,
Come make him stand vpon this Mole-hill here,
That raught at Mountaines with out-stretched Armes,
Yet parted but the shadow with his Hand.
What, was it you that would be Englands King?
Was't you that reuell'd in our Parliament,
And made a Preachment of your high Descent?
Where are your Messe of Sonnes, to back you now
The wanton Edward, and the lusty George?
And where's that valiant Crook-back Prodigie,
Dickie, your Boy, that with his grumbling voyce
Was wont to cheare his Dad in Mutinies?
Or with the rest, where is your Darling, Rutland?
Looke Yorke, I stayn'd this Napkin with the blood
That valiant Clifford, with his Rapiers point,
Made issue from the Bosome of the Boy.
And if thine eyes can water for his death,
I give thee this to drie thy Cheeke withall
Alas poore Yorke, but that I hate thee deadly,
I should lament thy miserable state
I prythee grieue, to make me merry, Yorke.
What, hath thy fierie heart so parcht thine entrayles,
That not a Teare can fall, for Rutlands death?
Why art thou patient, man? thou should'st be mad:
And I, to make thee mad, doe mock thee thus.
Stampe, rave, and fret, that I may sing and dance.
Thou would'st be fee'd, I see, to make me sport:
Yorke cannot speake, vnlesse he weare a Crowne.
A Crowne for Yorke; and Lords, bow lowe to him:
Hold you his hands, whilest I doe set it on.
I marry Sir, now lookes he like a King.
I, this is he that tooke King Henries Chaire,
And this is he was his adopted Heire.
But how is it, that great Plantagenet
Is crown'd so soone, and broke his solemne Oath?
As I bethinke me you should not be King.
Till our King Henry had shooke hands with Death.
And will you pale your head in Henries Glory,
And rob his Temples of the Diademe,
Now in his Life, against your holy Oath?
Oh 'tis a fault too too vnpardonable.
Off with the Crowne; and with the Crowne, his Head,
And whilest we breathe, take time to doe him dead.
Clifford. That is my Office, for my Fathers sake.
Queene. Nay stay, let's heare the Orizons he makes Yorke. Shee-Wolfe of France,
But worse than the Wolues of France.
Whose Tongue more poysons then the Addets Tooth:
How ill-beseeming is it in thy Sex,
To triumph like an Amazonian Trull,
Vpon their Woes, whom Fortune captiuates?
But that thy Face is Vizard-like, vnchanging,
Made impudent with vse of euill deeds.
I would affay, proud Queene, to make thee blush.
To tell thee whence thou cam'st, of whom deriu'd,
Were shame enough, to shame thee,
Were thou not shamelesse.
Thy Father beares the type of King of Naples,
Of both the Sicils, and Ierusalem,
Yet not so wealthie as an English Yeoman.
Hath that poore Monarch taught thee to insult?
It needes not, nor it beotes thee not, proud Queene,
Vnlesse the Adage must be verify'd,
That Beggers mounted, runne their Horse to death.
'Tis Beauty that doth oft make Women proud,
But God he knowes, thy share thereof is small.
'Tis Vertue, that doth make them most admir'd,
The contrary, doth make thee wondred at.
'Tis Gouernment that makes them seeme Diuine,
The want thereof, makes thee abhominable.
Thou art as opposite to every good,
As the Antipodes are vnto vs,
Or as the South to the Septentrion.
Oh Tygres Heart, wrapt in a Women Hide,

How

How could'ſt thou drayne the Life-blood of the Child,
To bid the Father wipe his eyes withall,
And yet be ſeene to bearе a Womans face?
Women are ſoft, milde, pittifull, and flexible;
Thou ſterne, obdurate, flinte, rough, remorſeleſſe.
Bidſt thou me rage? why now thou haſt thy wiſh.
Would'ſt haue me weepe? why now thou haſt thy will.
For raging Wind blowes vp increſſant ſhowers,
And when the Rage allayes, the Raine begins.
Theſe Teares are my ſweet Rutlands Obſequies,
And every drop cryes vengeance for his death,
'Gainſt thee fell Clifford, and thee falſe French-woman.
Northumb. Beſhrew me, but his paſſions moues me ſo,
That hardly can I check my eyes from Teares.
Yorke. That Face of his,
The hungry Cannibalis would not haue touche,
Would not haue ſtayn'd with blood:
But you are more inhumane, more inexorable,
Oh, tenne times more then Tygers of Hyrcania.
See, ruthleſſe Queene, a hapleſſe Fathers Teares:
This Cloth thou dipd'ſt in blood of my ſweet Boy,
And I with Teares doe waſh the blood away.
Keepe thou the Napkin, and goe boaſt of this,
And if thou tell'ſt the beaute ſtorie right,
Vpon my Soule, the hearers will ſhed Teares:
Yea, euen my Foes will ſhed faſt-falling Teares,
And ſay, Alas, it was a pittious deed.
There, take the Crowne, and with the Crowne, my Curſe,
And in thy need, ſuch comfort come to thee,
As now I reape at thy too cruell hand.
Hard-hearted Clifford, take me from the World,
My Soule to Heauen, my Blood vpon your Heads.
Northumb. Had he been ſlaughter-man to all my Kinne,
I ſhould not for my Life but weepe with him,
To ſee how inly Sorrow gripes his Soule.
Queen. What, weeping ripe, my Lord Northumberland?
Thinke but vpon the wrong he did vs all,
And that will quickly drie thy melting Teares.
Clifford. Here's for my Oath, here's for my Fathers Death.
Queen. And here's to right our gentle-hearted King.
Yorke. Open thy Gate of Mercy, gracious God,
My Soule flyes through theſe wounds, to ſeeke out thee.
Queen. Off with his Head, and ſet it on Yorke Gates,
So Yorke may ouer-looke the Towne of Yorke.
Flourish. Exit.

A March. Enter Edward, Richard, and their power.

Edward. I wonder how our Princely Father ſcap't:
Or whether he be ſcap't away, or no,
From Cliffords and Northumberlands purſuit?
Had he been ta'ne, we ſhould haue heard the newes;
Had he beene ſlaine, we ſhould haue heard the newes:
Or had he ſcap't, me thinkes we ſhould haue heard
The happy tidings of his good eſcape.
How fares my Brother? why is he ſo ſad?
Richard. I cannot joy, vntill I be reſolu'd
Where our right valiant Father is become.
I ſaw him in the Battelle range about,
And watcht him how he ſingled Clifford forth.
Me thought he bore him in the thickeſt troupe,
As doth a Lyon in a Heard of Neat,
Or as a Beare encompaſs'd round with Dogges:
Who having pinch'd a few, and made them cry,
The reſt ſtand all aloofe, and barke at him.
So far'd our Father with his Enemies,
So fled his Enemies my Warlike Father:
Me thinkes 'tis prize enough to be his Sonne.
See how the Morning opes her golden Gates,
And takes her farwell of the glorious Sunne.
How well reſembles it the prime of Youth,
Trimm'd like a Yonker, prancing to his Loue?
Ed. Dazle mine eyes, or doe I ſee three Sunnes?
Rich. Three glorious Sunnes, each one a perfect Sunne,
Not ſeparated with the racking Clouds,
But ſeuer'd in a pale cleare-ſhining Skye.
See, ſee, they loyne, embrace, and ſeeme to kiſſe,
As if they vow'd ſome League inuiolable.
Now are they but one Lampe, one Light, one Sunne:
In this, the Heauen figures ſome event.
Edward. 'Tis wondrous ſtrange,
The like yet never heard of.
I think it cites vs (Brother) to the field,
That we, the Sonnes of beaute Plantagenet,
Each one already blazing by our meedes,
Should not withſtanding joyne our Lights together,
And ouer-ſhine the Earth, as this the World.
What ere it bodes, henceforward will I beare
Vpon my Target three faire ſhining Sonnes.
Richard. Nay, bearе three Daughters:
By your leaue, I ſpeake it,
You loue the Breeder better then the Male.

Enter one blowing.

But what art thou, whoſe heauie Looks foretell
Some dreadfull ſtory hanging on thy Tongue?
Meſſ. Ah, one that was a woefull looker on,
When as the Noble Duke of Yorke was ſlaine,
Your Princely Father, and my loating Lord.
Edward. Oh ſpeake no more, for I haue heard too much.
Richard. Say how he dy'de, for I will heare it all.
Meſſ. Environed he was with many foes,
And ſtood againſt them, as the hope of Troy
Againſt the Greekes, that would haue entred Troy.
But Hercules himſelfe muſt yeeld to odds:
And many ſtrokes, though with a little Axe,
Hewes downe and fells the hardeſt-ſtymbor'd Oake.
By many hands your Father was ſubdu'd,
But only ſlaughter'red by the irefull Arme
Of vn-releeting Clifford, and the Queene:
Who crown'd the gracious Duke in high deſpight,
Laugh'd in his face: and when with griefe he wept,
The ruthleſſe Queene gaue him, to dry his Cheeke,
A Napkin, ſtepped in the harmleſſe blood
Of ſweet young Rutland, by rough Clifford ſlaine:
And after many ſcornes, many ſoule taunts,
They tooke his Head, and on the Gates of Yorke
They ſet the ſame, and there it doth remaine,
The ſaddeſt ſpectacle that eue I view'd.
Edward. Sweet Duke of Yorke, our Prop to leane vpon,
Now thou art gone, we haue no Staffe, no Stay.
Oh Clifford, boaſt'ſt thou Clifford thou haſt ſlaine
The flowre of Europe, for his Chiualrie,
And treacherouſly haſt thou vanquiſht him,
For hand to hand he would haue vanquiſht thee.
Now my Soules Palace is become a Priſon:
Ah, would ſhe breake from hence, that this my body

Might

Might in the ground be closed vp in rest:
For never henceforth shall I joy again:
Never, oh never shall I see more joy.

Rich. I cannot weepe: for all my bodies moysture
Scarce serues to quench my Furnace-burning hart:
Nor can my tongue vnloade my hearts great burthen,
For selfe-same winde that I should speake withall,
Is kindling coales that fires all my breft,
And burnes me vp with flames, that tears would quench.
To weepe, is to make less the depth of greefe:
Teares then for Babes; Blowes, and Reuenge for men.
Richard, I beare thy name, Ile venge thy death,
Or dye renowned by attempting it.

Ed. His name that valiant Duke hath left with thee:
His Dukedome, and his Chaire with me is left.

Rich. Nay, if thou be that Princely Eagles Bird,
Shew thy descent by gazing 'gainst the Sunne:
For Chaire and Dukedome, Throne and Kingdome say,
Either that is thine, or else thou wer't not his.

March. Enter Warwick, Marquiss Montacute, and their Army.

Warwick. How now faire Lords? What fare? What newes abroad?

Rich. Great Lord of Warwicke, if we should recount
Our baleful newes, and at each words deliuerance
Stab Poniards in our flesh, till all were told,
The words would adde more anguish than the wounds.
O valiant Lord, the Duke of Yorke is slaine.

Edw. O Warwicke, Warwicke, that Plantagenet
Which held thee dearely, as his Soules Redemption,
Is by the sterne Lord Clifford done to death.

War. Ten dayes ago, drown'd these newes in teares
And now to adde more measure to your woes,
Ie come to tell you things sith then befalne.
After the bloody Fray at Wakefield fought,
Where your brave Father breath'd his latest gasp,
Tydings, as swiftly as the Posses could runne,
Were brought me of your Losse, and his Depart.
I then in London, keeper of the King,
Mustr'd my Soldiers, gathered flockes of Friends,
Marcht toward S. Albons, to intercept the Queene,
Bearing the King in my behalfe along:
For by my Scouts, I was aduertised
That she was comming with a full intent
To dash our late Decree in Parliament,
Touching King Henries Oath, and your Succession:
Short Tale to make; we at S. Albons met,
Our Battailes joyn'd, and both sides fiercely fought:
But whether 'twas the coldnesse of the King,
Who look'd full gently on his warlike Queene,
That robb'd my Soldiers of their hested Spleene.
Or whether 'twas report of her sorcerie,
Or more then common feare of Cliffords Rigour,
Who thunders to his Captiues, Blood and Death,
I cannot iudge: but to conclude with truth,
Their Weapons like to Lightning, came and went:
Our Souldiers like the Night-Owles lazie flight,
Or like a lazie Thresher with a Flaile,
Fell gently downe, as if they struck their Friends.
I cheer'd them vp with iustice of our Cause,
With promise of high pay, and great Rewards:
But all in vaine, they had no heart to fight,
And we (in them) no hope to win the day,
So that we fled: the King vnto the Queene,
Lord George, your Brother, Norfolke, and my Selfe,
In haste, post haste, are come to joyne with you:
For in the Marches heere we heard you were,
Making another Head, to fight againe.

Ed. Where is the Duke of Norfolke, gentle Warwick?
And when came George from Burgundy to England?

War. Some fix miles off the Duke is with the Soldiers,
And for your Brother he was lately sent
From your kinde Aunt Duchesse of Burgundie,
With ayde of Souldiers to this needfull Warre.

Rich. 'Twas odds belike, when valiant Warwick fled;
Oft heare I heard his praises in Parlaiet,
But ne're till now, his Scandall of Retire.

War. Nor now my Scandall Richard, dost thou heare:
For thou shalt know this strong right hand of mine,
Can pluckle the Diadem from faine Henries head,
And wring the awfull Scepter from his Fist,
Were he as famous, and as bold in Warre,
As he is famed for Mildnesse, Peace, and Prayer.

Rich. I know it well Lord Warwick, blame me not,
'Tis loue I beare thy glories make me speake:
But in this troublous time, what't'o be done?
Shall we go throw away our Coates of Steele,
And wrap our bodies in blacke mourning Gownes,
Numb'ring our Ave-Maries with our Beads?
Or shall we on the Helmets of our Foes
Tell our Deuotion with rauengefull Armes?
If for the last, say I, and to it Lords.

War. Why therefore Warwick came to seek you out,
And therefore comes my Brother Montague:
Attend me Lords, the proud insulting Queene,
With Clifford, and the haught Northumberland,
And of their Feather, many moe proud Birds,
Haue wrought the easie-melting King, like Wax.
He swore consent to your Succession,
His Oath enrolled in the Parliament.
And now to London all the crew are gone,
To frustrate both his Oath, and what beside
May make against the house of Lancaster.
Their power (I thinke) is thirty thousand strong:
Now, if the helpe of Norfolke, and my selfe,
With all the Friends that thou brave Earle of March,
Among'st the loving Welshmen can'st procure,
Will but amount to five and twenty thousand,
Why Vis, to London will we march,
And once againe, bestride our foaming Steeds,
And once againe cry Charge vpon our Foes,
But neuer once againe turne backe and flye.

Rich. I, now me thinks I heare great Warwick speake:
Ne're may he liue to see a Sun-shine day,
That cries Retire, if Warwicke bid him stay.

Ed. Lord Warwicke, on thy shoulder will I leane,
And when thou fail'st (as God forbid the houre)
Must Edward fall, which perill heauen forefend.

War. No longer Earle of March, but Duke of Yorke:
The next degree, is Englands Royall Throne:
For King of England shalt thou be proclaim'd
In every Burrough as we passe along,
And he that throwes not vp his cap for joy,
Shall for the Fault make forfeit of his head.
King Edward, valiant Richard Montague:
Stay we no longer, dreaming of Renowne,
But sound the Trumpets, and about our Taske.

Rich. Then Clifford, were thy heart as hard as Steele,
As thou hast shewne it flinty by thy deeds,
I come to pierce it, or to giue thee mine.

Ed. Then strike vp Drums, God and S. George for vs

Enter a Messenger.

War. How now? what newes?

Mes. The Duke of Norfolke sends you word by me,
The Queene is comming with a puissant Hoast,
And craves your company, for speedy counsell.

War. Why then it sorts, brave Warriors, let's away.

Exeunt Omnes.

Flourish. Enter the King, the Queene, Clifford, Northumberland, Yong Prince, with Drumme and Trumpetts.

Qu. Welcome my Lord, to this brave town of Yorke,
Yonders the head of that Arch-enemy,
That sought to be incompast with your Crowne.
Doth not the object cheere your heart, my Lord.

K. I, as the rocke cheares them that feare their wrack,
To see this sight, it irkes my very soule:
With hold revenge (deere God) 'tis not my fault,
Nor wittingly haue I infring'd my Vow.

Clif. My gracious Liege, this too much lenity
And harmfull pitty must be layd aside:
To whom do Lyons cast their gentle Looks?
Not to the Beast, that would vsurpe their Den.
Whose hand is that the Forrest Beare doth licke?
Not his that spoyles her yong before her face.
Who scapes the lurking Serpents mortall sting?
Not he that sets his foot vpon her backe.
The smallest Worme will turne, being trodden on,
And Doues will pecke in safegard of their Brood.
Ambitious Yorke, did level at thy Crowne,
Thou smiling, while he knit his angry browes.
He but a Duke, would haue his Sonne a King,
And raise his issue like a loving Sire.
Thou being a King, blest with a goodly sonne,
Did'st yeeld consent to disinherit him:
Which argued thee a most louloing Father.
Unreasonable Creatures feed their young,
And though mans face be fearefull to their eyes,
Yet in protection of their tender ones,
Who hath not seene them euen with those wings,
Which sometime they haue vs'd with fearfull flight,
Make warre with him that climb'd vnto their nest,
Offering their owne liues in their yongs defence?
For shame, my Liege, make them your President:
Were it not pitty that this goodly Boy
Would loose his Birth-right by his Fathers fault,
And long hereafter say vnto his childe,
What my great Grandfather, and Grandsire got,
My careless Father fondly gave away.
Ah, what a shame were this? Looke on the Boy,
And let his manly face, which promiseth
Successefull Fortune steele thy melting heart,
To hold thine owne, and leave thine owne with him.

King. Full well hath Clifford plaid the Orator,
Inferring arguments of mighty force:
But Clifford tell me, did'st thou never heare,
That things ill got, had euer bad successe.
And happy always was it for that Sonne,
Whose Father for his hoarding went to hell?
I leave my Sonne my Vertuous deeds behinde,
And would my Father had left me no more:
For all the rest is held at such a Rate,
It brings a thousand fold more care to keepe,
Then in possession any iot of pleasure.
Ah Cosin Yorke, would thy best Friends did know,
How it doth grieue me that my head is heere.

Qu. My Lord cheere vp your spirits, our foes are nye,
And this soft courage makes your Followers faint:
You promist Knighthood to our forward sonne,
Vnsheath your Sword, and dub him presently.
Edward, kneele downe.

King. Edward Plantagenet, arise a Knight,
And learne this Lesson, Draw thy Sword in right.

Prin. My gracious Father, by your Kingly leaue,
Ile draw it as Apparant to the Crowne,
And in that quarrell, vse it to the death.

Clif. Why that is spoken like a toward Prince.

Enter a Messenger.

Mes. Royall Commanders, be in readinesse,
For with a Band of thirty thousand men,
Comes Warwicke backing of the Duke of Yorke,
And in the Townes as they do march along,
Proclaimes him King, and many fye to him,
Darraigne your battell, for they are at hand.

Clif. I would your Highnesse would depart the field,
The Queene hath best successe when you are absent.

Qu. I good my Lord, and leaue vs to our Fortune.

King. Why, that's my fortune too, therefore Ile stay.

North. Be it with resolution then to fight.

Prin. My Royall Father, cheere these Noble Lords,
And hearten those that fight in your defence:
Vnsheath your Sword, good Father: Cry S. George.

March. Enter Edward, Warwicke, Richard, Clarence, Norfolke, Mountague, and Souldiers.

Edw. Now perisht Henry, wilt thou kneel for grace?
And set thy Diadem vpon my head?
Or bide the mortall Fortune of the field.

Qu. Go rate thy Minions, proud insolent Boy.
Becomes it thee to be thus bold in termes,
Before thy Soueraigne, and thy lawfull King?

Ed. I am his King, and he should bow his knee:
I was adopted Heire by his consent.

Cla. Since when, his Oath is broke: for as I heare,
You that are King, though he do weare the Crowne,
Haue cous'd him by new Act of Parliament,
To blot out me, and put his owne Sonne in.

Clif. And reason too,
Who should succeede the Father, but the Sonne.

Rich. Are you there Butcher? O, I cannot speake.

Clif. I Crooke-back, here I stand to answer thee.
Or any he, the proudest of thy sort.

Rich. 'Twas you that kill'd young Rutland, was it not?

Clif. I, and old Yorke, and yet not satisfied.

Rich. For Gods sake Lords give signall to the fight.

War. What say'st thou Henry,
Wilt thou yeeld the Crowne? (you speake

Qu. Why how now long-tongu'd Warwicke, dare
When you and I, met at St. Albans last,
Your legges did better seruice than your hands.

War. Then 'twas my turne to fly, and now 'tis thine:

Clif. You said so much before, and yet you fled.

War. 'Twas not your valor Clifford drove me thence.

Nor. No, nor your manhood that durst make you stay.

Rich. Northumberland, I hold thee reuerently,
Breake off the parley, for scarse I can refraine
The execution of my big-swolne heart
Vpon that Clifford, that cruell Child-killer.

Clif. I slew thy Father, call'st thou him a Child?

Rich.

Rich. I like a Dastard, and a treacherous Coward,
As thou didd'st kill our tender Brother Rutland,
But ere Sunset, I'le make thee curse the deed.

King. Have done with words (my Lords) and heare me speake.

Qu. Defie them then, or else hold close thy lips.

King. I prythee give no limits to my Tongue,
I am a King, and priuiledg'd to speake.

Clif. My Liege, the wound that bred this meeting here
Cannot be cur'd by Words, therefore be still.

Rich. Then Executioner vnsheath thy sword:
By him that made vs all, I am resolu'd,
That Cliffords Manhood, lyes vpon his tongue.

Ed. Say Henry, shall I haue my right, or not
A thousand men haue broke their Pates to day,
That we're shall dine, vnlesse thou yeild the Crowne.

War. If thou deny, their Blood vpon thy head,
For Yorke in iustice put's his Armour on.

Pr. Ed. If that be right, which Warwick saies is right,
There is no wrong, but every thing is right.

War. Whoever got thee, there thy Mother stands,
For well I wot, thou hast thy Mothers tongue.

Qu. But thou art neyther like thy Sire nor Dammes,
But like a foule mishapen Stygmaticke,
Mark'd by the Destinies to be auoided,
As venoume Toades, or Lizards dreadfull stings.

Rich. Iron of Naples, hid with English gilt,
Whose Father beares the Title of a King,
(As if a Channell should be call'd the Sea)
Sham'st thou not, knowing whence thou art extraught,
To let thy tongue detect thy base-borne heart.

Ed. A wispe of straw were worth a thousand Crowns,
To make this shamelesse Callet know her selfe:
Helen of Greece was fayrer farre then thou,
Although thy Husband may be Menelaus;
And ne're was Agamemnon Brother wrong'd
By that false Woman, as this King by thee.
His Father reuel'd in the heart of France,
And tam'd the King, and made the Dolphin stoope:
And had he match'd according to his State,
He might haue kept that glory to this day.
But when he tooke a beggar to his bed,
And gra'c'd thy poore Sire with his Bridall day,
Even then that Sun-shine brew'd a showre for him,
That wash't his Fathers fortunes forth of France,
And heap'd sedition on his Crowne at home:
For what hath broach'd this tumult but thy Pride?
Had'st thou bene meeke, our Title still had slept,
And we in pitty of the Gentle King,
Had slept our Claime, vntill another Age.

Cla. But when we saw, our Sunshine made thy Spring,
And that thy Summer bred vs no increase,
We set the Axe to thy vsurping Roots:
And though the edge hath something bit our selues,
Yet know thou, since we haue begun to strike,
We'l never leaue, till we haue hewne thee downe,
Or bath'd thy growing, with our heated bloods.

Edw. And in this resolution, I defie thee,
Not willing any longer Conference,
Since thou denied'st the gentle King to speake.
Sound Trumpets, let our bloody Colours waue,
And either Victorie, or else a Grauе.

Qu. Stay Edward.

Ed. No wrangling Woman, we'l no longer stay,
These words will cost ten thousand lives this day.

Exeunt omnes.

Alarum. Excursions. Enter Warwick.

War. Foro-spent with Toile, as Runners with a Race,
I lay me downe a little while to breath:
For strokes receiu'd, and many blowes repaid,
Haue robb'd my strong knit sinewes of their strength,
And spight of spight, needs must I rest a-while.

Enter Edward running.

Ed. Smile gentle heauen, or strike vngentle death,
For this world frowneth, and Edwards Sunne is clouded.

War. How now my Lord, what hope? what hope of good?

Enter Clarence.

Cla. Our hap is losse, our hope but sad despaire,
Our ranks are broke, and ruine followes vs.
What counsaile giue you? whether shall we flye?

Ed. Boodless is flight, they follow vs with Wings,
And weake we are, and cannot shun pursuite.

Enter Richard.

Rich. Ah Warwicke, why hast't wished-vnto thy selfe?
Thy Brothers blood the thirsty earth hath drunk,
Broach'd with the Steely point of Cliffords Launce:
And in the very pangs of death, he cryde,
Like to a dismall Clangor heard from farre,
Warwicke, reuenge; Brother, reuenge my death.
So vnderneath the belly of their Steeds,
That slain'd their Fetlocks in his smoaking blood,
The Noble Gentleman gaue vp the ghost.

War. Then let the earth be drunken with our blood:
Ile kill my Horse, because I will not flye:
Why stand we like soft-hearted women here,
Wayling our losses, whiles the Foe doth Rage,
And looke vpon, as if the Tragedie
Were plaid in iest, by counterfeiting Actors.
Heere on my knee, I vow to God above,
Ile never pawse againe, never stand still,
Till either death hath clos'd these eyes of mine,
Or Fortune given me measure of Reuenge.

Ed. Oh Warwicke, I do bend my knee with thine,
And in this vow do chaine my soule to thine:
And ere my knee rise from the Earths cold face,
I throw my hands, mine eyes, my heart to thee,
Thou setter vp, and plucker downe of Kings:
Beseeching thee (if with thy will it stands)
That to my Foes this body must be prey,
Yet that thy brazen gates of heauen may ope,
And giue sweet passage to my sinfull soule.
Now Lords, take leaue vntill we meete againe,
Where ere it be, in heauen, or in earth.

Rich. Brother,
Giue me thy hand, and gentle Warwicke,
Let me imbrace thee in my weary armes:
I that did never weepe, now melt with woe,
That Winter should cut off our Spring-time so.

War. Away, away:
Once more sweet Lords farwell.

Cla. Yet let vs altogether to our Troopes,
And giue them leaue to flye, that will not stay:
And call them Pillers that will stand to vs:
And if we thriue, promise them such rewards
As Victors weare at the Olympian Games.
This may plant courage in their quailing breasts,
For yet is hope of Life and Victory:

Forslow no longer, make we hence amaine. Exeunt

Excursions. Enter Richard and Clifford.

Rich. Now Clifford, I haue singled thee alone,
Suppose this arme is for the Duke of Yorke,
And this for Rutland, both bound to reuenge,
Wer't thou inuiron'd with a Brazen wall.

Clif. Now Richard, I am with thee here alone,
This is the hand that stabb'd thy Father Yorke,
And this the hand, that slew thy Brother Rutland,
And here's the heart, that triumphs in their death,
And cheares these hands, that slew thy Sire and Brother,
To execute the like vpon thy selfe,
And so haue at thee.

They fight, Warwicke comes, Clifford flies.

Rich. Nay Warwicke, single out some other Chace,
For I my selfe will hunt this Wolfe to death. Exeunt.

Alarum. Enter King Henry alone.

Hen. This battell fares like to the mornings Warre,
When dying clouds contend, with growing light,
What time the Shepheard blowing of his nailes,
Can neither call it perfect day, nor night.
Now sways it this way, like a Mighty Sea,
Forc'd by the Tide, to combat with the Winde:
Now sways it that way, like the selfe-same Sea,
Forc'd to retyre by furie of the Winde.
Sometime, the Flood prouailes; and then the Winde:
Now, one the better: then, another best;
Both tugging to be Victors, breft to breft:
Yet neither Conqueror, nor Conquered.
So is the equall poise of this fell Warre.
Heere on this Mole-hill will I sit me downe,
To whom God will, there be the Victorie:
For Margaret my Queene, and Clifford too
Haue chid me from the Battell: Swearing both,
They prosper best of all when I am thence.
Would I were dead, if Gods good will were so;
For what is in this world, but Greefe and Woe.
Oh God! me thinkes it were a happy life,
To be no better then a homely Swaine,
To sit vpon a hill, as I do now,
To carue out Dials quaintly, point by point,
Thereby to see the Minutes how they runne:
How many makes the Houre full complete,
How many Houres brings about the Day,
How many Dayes will finish vp the Yeare,
How many Yeares, a Mortall man may liue.
When this is knowne, then to diuide the Times:
So many Houres, must I tend my Flocke;
So many Houres, must I take my Rest:
So many Houres, must I Contemplate:
So many Houres, must I Sport my selfe:
So many Dayes, my Ewes haue beene with young:
So many weeke, ere the poore Fooles will Eanes:
So many yeares, ere I shall sheare the Fleece:
So Minutes, Houres, Dayes, Moneths, and Yeares,
Past ouer to the end they were created,
Would bring white haires, vnto a Quiet grave.
Ah! what a life were this? How sweet? how louely?
Gives not the Hawthorne bush a sweeter shade
To Shepheards, looking on their silly Sheepe,
Then doth a rich Imbroider'd Canopie
To Kings, that feare their Subiects treacherie?
Oh yes, it doth; a thousand fold it doth.
And to conclude, the Shepherds homely Curds.
His cold thinne drinke out of his Leather Bottle,
His wonted sleepe, vnder a fresh trees shade,
All which secure, and sweetly he enioyes,
Is farre beyond a Princes Delicates:
His Viands sparkling in a Golden Cup,
His bodie couched in a curious bed,
When Care, Mistrust, and Treason waits on him.

Alarum. Enter a Sonne that hath kill'd his Father, at one dore: and a Father that hath kill'd his Sonne at another dore.

Son. Ill blowes the winde that profits no body,
This man whom hand to hand I slew in fight,
May be possessed with some store of Crowns,
And I that (haply) take them from him now,
May yet (ere night) yeeld both my Life and them
To some man else, as this dead man doth me.
Who's this? Oh God! It is my Fathers face,
Whom in this Conflict, I (vnwares) haue kill'd:
Oh heavy times! begetting such Events.
From London, by the King was I prest forth,
My Father being the Earle of Warwickes man,
Came on the part of Yorke, prest by his Master:
And I, who at his hands receiu'd my life,
Haue by my hands, of Life bereaued him.
Pardon me God, I knew not what I did:
And pardon Father, for I knew not thee.
My Teares shall wipe away these bloody markes:
And no more words, till they haue flow'd their fill.

King. O piteous spectacle! O bloody Times!
Whiles Lyons Warre, and battaile for their Dennes,
Poore harmlesse Lambes abide their enmity.
Weepe wretched man: I'le ayde thee Teare for Teare,
And let our hearts and eyes, like Ciuill Warre,
Be blinde with teares, and break ore-charg'd with griefe.

Enter Father, bearing of his Sonne.

Fa. Thou that so stoutly hath resisted me,
Giue me thy Gold, if thou hast any Gold:
For I haue bought it with an hundred blowes.
But let me see: Is this our Foe-mans face?
Ah, no, no, no, it is mine onely Sonne.
Ah Boy, if any life be left in thee,
Throw vp thine eye: see, see, what showres arise,
Blowne with the windie Tempest of my heart,
Vpon thy wounds, that killes mine Eye, and Heart.
O pitty God, this miserable Age!
What Stratagems, how fell? how Butcherly?
Erroneous, mutinous, and vnnaturall,
This deadly quarrell daily doth beget?
O Boy! thy Father gaue thee life too soone,
And hath bereft thee of thy life too late.

King. Wo aboue wo griefe, more the common griefe
O that my death would stay these ruthfull deeds:
O pitty, pitty, gentle heauen pitty:
The Red Rose and the White are on his face,
The fatall Colours of our strikiug Houses:
The one, his purple Blood right well resembles,
The other his pale Cheekes (me thinkes) presageth:
Wither one Rose, and let the other flourish:
If you contend, a thousand liues must wither.

Son. How will my Mother, for a Fathers death
Take on with me, and ne're be satisfi'd?

Fa. How will my Wife, for slaughter of my Sonne,
Shed sea of Teares, and ne're be satisfi'd?

King. How will the Country, for these woefull chances,
Mis-thinke

Mis-shaine the King, and not be satisfied?

Son. Was ever sonne, so rew'd a Fathers death?

Fath. Was ever Father so bemoan'd his Sonne?

Hen. Was ever King so grean'd for Subiects woe?
Much is your sorrow; Mine, ten times so much.

Son. Ile beare thee hence, where I may weepe my fill.

Fath. These armes of mine shall be thy winding sheet:
My heart (sweet Boy) shall be thy Sepulchre,
For from my heart, thine Image ne're shall go.
My sighing breft, shall be thy Funerall bell;
And so obsequious will thy Father be,
Men for the loss of thee, having no more,
As Priam was for all his Valiant Sonnes,
Ile beare thee hence, and let them fight that will,
For I have murthered where I should not kill. Exit

Hen. Sad-hearted-men, much overgone with Care;
Heare sits a King, more wofull then you are.

Alarums. Excursions. Enter the Queen, the Prince, and Exeter.

Prin. Fly Father, flye: for all your Friends are fled,
And Warwicke rages like a chafed Bull:
Away, for death doth hold vs in pursuite.

Qu. Mount you my Lord, towards Barwicke post a-maine:
Edward and Richard like a brace of Grey-hounds,
Having the fearfull flying Hare in sight,
With fiery eyes, sparkling for very wrath,
And bloody steele grasp't in their yrefull hands
Are at our backes, and therefore hence amaine.

Exet. Away: for vengeance comes along with them.
Nay, stay not to expostulate, make speed,
Or else come after, Ile away before.

Hen. Nay take me with thee, good sweet Exeter:
Not that I feare to stay, but loue to go
Whether the Queene intends. Forward, away. Exeunt

A lond alarum. Enter Clifford Wounded.

Clif. Heere burnes my Candle out; I, heere it dies,
Which whiles it lasted, gaue King Henry light.
O Lancaster! I feare thy overthrow,
More then my Bodies parting with my Soule:
My Loue and Feare, glew'd many Friends to thee,
And now I fall. Thy tough Commixtures melts,
Impairing Henry, strength'ning misproud Yorke;
And whether flye the Gnats, but to the Sonne?
And who shines now, but Henries Enemies?
O Phœbus! had'ft thou never given consent,
That Phaeton should checke thy fiery Steeds,
Thy burning Carre never had scorch'd the earth.
And Henry, had'ft thou sway'd as Kings should do,
Or as thy Father, and his Father did,
Giving no ground vnto the house of Yorke,
They never then had sprung like Sommer Flyes:
I, and ten thousand in this luckleffe Realme,
Had left no mourning Widdowes for our death,
And thou this day, had'ft kept thy Choice in peace.
For what doth cherrish Weeds, but gentle ayre?
And what makes Robbers bold, but too much lenity?
Boothesse are Plaines, and Carelesse are my Wounds:
No way to flye, nor strength to hold out flight:
The Foe is merciless, and will not pitty:
For at their hands I have deserv'd no pitty.
The ayre hath got into my deadly Wounds,
And much effuse of blood, doth make me faint:
Come Yorke, and Richard, Warwicke, and the rest,
I stab'd your Fathers bosomes, Split my breft.

Alarum & Retreat. Enter Edward, Warwicke, Richard, and Souldiers, Montague, & Clarence.

Ed. Now breath we Lords, good fortune bids vs pause,
And smooth the frowns of War, with peaceful looks:
Some Troopes pursue the bloody-minded Queene,
That led calme Henry, though he were a King,
As doth a Saile, fill'd with a fresing Gust
Command an Argosie to stemme the Waues.
But thinke you (Lords) that Clifford fled with them?

War. No, 'tis impossible he should escape:
(For though before his face I speake the words)
Your Brother Richard markt him for the Grave.
And wherefoere he is, hee's surely dead. Clifford groans

Rich. Whose soule is that which takes his heavy leave?
A deadly groan, like life and death departing.
See who it is.

Ed. And now the Battaile ended,
If Friend or Foe, let him be gently vsed.

Rich. Reuoke that doome of mercy, for 'tis Clifford,
Who not contented that he lopp'd the Branch
In hewing Rutland, when his leaues put forth,
But set his murth'ring knife vnto the Roote,
From whence that tender spray did sweetly spring,
I meane our Princely Father, Duke of Yorke.

War. From off the gates of Yorke, fetch down the head,
Your Fathers head, which Clifford placed there:
In stead whereof, let this supply the roome,
Measure for measure, must be answered.

Ed. Bring forth that fatall Schreechowle to our house,
That nothing sang but death, to vs and ours:
Now death shall stop his dismall threatning sound,
And his ill-boding tongue, no more shall speake.

War. I thinke it vnderstanding is bereft:
Speake Clifford, dost thou know who speakes to thee?
Darke cloudy death ore-shades his beames of life,
And he nor sees, nor heares vs, what we say.

Rich. O would he did, and so (perhaps) he doth,
'Tis but his policy to counterfeit,
Because he would auoid such bitter taunts
Which in the time of death he gaue our Father.

Cla. If so thou think'st,
Vex him with eager Words.

Rich. Clifford, ask mercy, and obtaine no grace.

Ed. Clifford, repent in bootlesse penitance.

War. Clifford, deuise excuses for thy faults.

Cla. While we deuise fell Tortures for thy faults.

Rich. Thou didd'st loue Yorke, and I am son to Yorke.

Edw. Thou pitied'st Rutland, I will pitty thee.

Cla. Where's Captaine Margaret, to fence you now?

War. They mocke thee Clifford,
Swearre as thou was't wont.

Rich. What, not an Oath? Nay then the world go's hard
When Clifford cannot spare his Friends an oath:
I know by that he's dead, and by my Soule,
If this right hand would buy two hours life,
That I (in all despight) might rayle at him,
This hand should chop it off: & with the issuing Blood
Stifle the Villaine, whose vnstanched thirst
Yorke, and young Rutland could not satisfie

War. I, but he's dead. Of with the Traitors head,
And rear it in the place your Fathers stands.
And now to London with Triumphant march,

There to be crowned Englands Royall King:
From whence, shall Warwicke cut the Sea to France,
And take the Ladie Bona for thy Queene:
So shalt thou sinow both these Lands together,
And having France thy Friend, thou shalt not dread
The scattred Foe, that hopes to rise againe:
For though they cannot greatly sting to hurt,
Yet looke to haue them buz to offend thine eares:
First, will I see the Coronation,
And then to Britanny Ile crosse the Sea,
To effect this marriage, so it please my Lord.

Ed. Even as thou wilt sweet Warwicke, let it bee:
For in thy shoulder do I builde my Seate;
And neuer will I vndertake the thing
Wherein thy counsaile and consent is wanting:
Richard, I will create thee Duke of Gloucester,
And George of Clarence; Warwicke as our Selfe,
Shall do, and vndo as him pleaseth best.

Rich. Let me be Duke of Clarence, George of Gloster,
For Glosters Dukedome is too ominous.

War. Tut, that's a foolish obseruation:
Richard, be Duke of Gloster: Now to London,
To see these Honors in possession. Exeunt

Enter Stanley, and Humfrey, with Crosse-bows in their hands.

(ouer selues:

Stan. Vnder this thicke growne brake, wee'l shroud
For through this Land soon the Deere will come,
And in this couert will we make our Stand,
Calling the principall of all the Deere.

Hum. Ile stay aboue the hill, so both may shoot.

Stan. That cannot be, the noise of thy Crosse-bow
Will scarre the Heard, and so my shoot is lost:
Heere stand we both, and synne we at the best:
And for the time shall not seeme tedious,
Ile tell thee what befell me on a day,
In this selfe-place, where now we mesne to stand.

Stan. Heere comes a man, let's stay till he be past:

Enter the King with a Prayer booke.

Hen. From Scotland am I stolne euen of pure loue,
To greet mine owne Land with my wishfull sight:
No Harry, Harry, 'tis no Land of thine,
Thy place is fill'd, thy Scepter wrung from thee,
Thy Balme washt off, wherewith thou was Annointed:
No bending knee will call thee Cæsar now,
No humble suters presse to speake for right:
No, not a man comes for redresse of thee:
For how can I helpe them, and not my selfe?

Stan. I, heere's a Deere, whose skin's a Keepers fee:
This is the quondam King; Let's seize vpon him.

Hen. Let me embrace the sower Aduersaries,
For Wise men say, it is the wiseft course.

Hum. Why linger we? Let vs lay hands vpon him.

Stan. Forbeare a-while, wee'l heare a little more.

Hen. My Queene and Son are gone to France for aid:
And (as I heare) the great Commending Warwicke
I: thither gone, to crauе the French King: Sister
To wife for Edward. If this newes be true,
Poore Queene, and Sonne, your labour is but lost:
For Warwicke is a subtle Orator:
And Lewis a Prince soone wonne with moeuing words:
By this account then, Margaret may winne him,
For she's a woman to be pitied much
Her sighes will make a batt'ry in his breast,
Her teares will pierce into a Marble heart:
The Tyger will be milde, whiles she doth moeune;
And Nero will be tainted with remorse,
To heare and see her plaints, her Brinish Teares.
I, but shee's came to begge, Warwicke to gine:
Shee on his left side, craueing syde for Henrie;
He on his right, asking a wife for Edward.
Shee Weepes, and sayes, her Henry is depos'd:
He Smiles, and sayes, his Edward is instaul'd;
That she (poore Wretch) for grefe can speake no more.
Whiles Warwicke tels his Title, smoothe the Wrong,
Inferreth arguments of mighty strength,
And in conclusion winnes the King from her,
With promise of his Sister, and what else,
To strengthen and support King Edwards place.
O Margaret, thus 'twill be, and thou (poore soule)
Art then forsaken, as thou went'st forlorne.

Hum. Say, what art thou talk'st of Kings & Queenes?

King. More then I seeme, and lesse then I was born to:
A man at least, for lesse I should not be:
And men may talke of Kings, and why not I?

Hum. I, but thou talk'st, as if thou wer't a King.

King. Why so I am (in Minde) and that's enough.

Hum. But if thou be a King, where is thy Crowne?

King. My Crowne is in my heart, not on my head:
Not deck'd with Diamonds, and Indian stones:
Nor to be seene: my Crowne, is call'd Content,
A Crowne it is, that seldome Kings enioy.

Hum. Well, if you be a King crown'd with Content,
Your Crowne Content, and you, must be contented
To go along with vs. For (as we thinke)
You are the king King Edward hath depos'd:
And we his Subiects, sworne in all Allegeance,
Will apprehend you, as his Enemie.

King But did you neuer sweare, and breake an Oath.

Hum. No, neuer such an Oath, nor will not now.

King. Where did you dwell when I was K. of England?

Hum. Heere in this Country, where we now remaine.

King. I was annointed King at nine months old,
My Father, and my Grandfather were Kings:
And you were sworne true Subiects vnto me:
And tell me then, haue you not broke your Oathes?

Sin. No, for we were Subiects, but while you wer king

King. Why? Am I dead? Do I not breath a Man?
Ah simple men, you know not what you sweare:
Looke, as I blow this Feather from my Face,
And as the Ayre blowes it to me againe,
Obeying with my winde when I do blow,
And yeelding to another, when it blowes,
Commanded always by the greater gust:
Such is the lightnesse of you, common men.
But do not breake your Oathes, for of thes sinne,
My milde intreatie shall not make you guiltie.
Go where you will, the king shall be commanded,
And be you kings, command, and Ile obey.

Stanley. We are true Subiects to the king,
King Edward.

King. So would you be againe to Henrie,
If he were seated as king Edward is.

Stanley. We charge you in Gods name & the Kings,
To go with vs vnto the Officers.

King. In Gods name lead, your Kings name be obeyd,
And what God will, that let your King performe,
And what he will, I humbly yeeld vnto. Exeunt

Enter K. Edward, Glester, Clarence, Lady Grey.

King. Brother of Glester, at S. Albons field

This

This Ladyes Husband, Sir Richard Grey, was slaine,
His Land then seiz'd on by the Conqueror,
Her suit is now, to repossesse those Lands,
Which wee in Iustice cannot well deny,
Because in Quarrell of the House of Yorke,
The worthy Gentleman did lose his Life.

Rich. Your Highnesse shall doe well to grant her suit:
It were dishonor to deny it her.

King. It were no lesse, but you Ile make a pause.

Rich. Yea, is it so:
I see the Lady hath a thing to grant,
Before the King will grant her humble suit.

Clarence. Hee knowes the Game, how true hee keepes the winde?

Rich. Silence.

King. Widow, we will consider of your suit,
And come some other time to know our minde.

Wid. Right gracious Lord, I cannot brooke delay:
May it please your Highnesse to resolue me now,
And what your pleasure is, shall satisfie me.

Rich. I Widow? then Ile warrant you all your Lands,
And if what pleases him, shall pleasure you:
Fight closer, or good faith you'le catch a Blow.

Clarence. I feare her not, vnlessie he chance to fall.

Rich. God forbid that, for hee'le take vantages.

King. How many Children hast thou, Widow? tell me.

Clarence. I thinke he meanes to begge a Child of her.

Rich Nay then whip me: hee'le rather giue her two.

Wid. Three, my most gracious Lord.

Rich. You shall haue foure, if you'le be rul'd by him.

King. Twere pittie they should lose their Fathers Lands.

Wid. Be pitifull, dread Lord, and grant it then.

King. Lords giue vs leaue, Ile try this Widowes wit.

Rich. I, good leaue haue you, for you will haue leaue
Till Youth take leaue, and leaue you to the Crutch.

King. Now tell me, Madame, doe you loue your Children?

Wid. I, full as dearely as I loue my selfe.

King. And would you not doe much to doe them good?

Wid. To doe them good, I would sustayne some harme.

King. Then get your Husbands Lands, to doe them good.

Wid. Therefore I came vnto your Maiestie.

King. Ile tell you how these Lands are to be got.

Wid. So shall you bind me to your Highnesse seruice.

King. What seruice wilt thou doe me, if I giue them?

Wid. What you command, that rests in me to doe.

King. But you will take exceptions to my Boone.

Wid. No, gracious Lord, except I cannot doe it.

King. I, but thou canst doe what I meane to aske.

Wid. Why then I will doe what your Grace commands.

Rich. Hee plyes her hard, and much Raine weares the Marble.

Clar. As red as fire? nay then, her Wax must melt.

Wid. Why stoppes my Lord? shall I not heare my Taske?

King. An easie Taske, 'tis but to loose a King.

Wid. That's soone perform'd, because I am a Subiect.

King. Why then, thy Husbands Lands I freely giue thee.

Wid. I take my leaue with many thousand thankes.

Rich. The Match is made, shee seales it with a Cursie.

King. But stay thee, 'tis the fruits of loue I meane.

Wid. The fruits of Loue, I meane, my loving Liege.

King. I, but I feare me in another sense.
What Loue, think'st thou, I sue so much to get?

Wid. My loue till death, my humble thanks, my prayers,
That loue which Vertue begges, and Vertue graunts.

King. No, by my troth, I did not meane such loue.

Wid. Why then you meane not, as I thought you did.

King. But now you partly may perceiue my minde.

Wid. My minde will never graunt what I perceiue
Your Highnesse aymes at, if I aymse aright.

King. To tell thee plaine, I aymse to lye with thee.

Wid. To tell you plaine, I had rather lye in Prison.

King. Why then thou shalt not haue thy Husbands Lands.

Wid. Why then mine Honestie shall be my Dower,
For by that loss, I will not purchase them.

King. Therein thou wrong'st thy Children mightily.

Wid. Herein your Highnesse wrongs both them & me:
But mightie Lord, this merry inclination
Accords not with the sadnesse of my suit:
Please you dismisse me, eyther with I, or no.

King. I, if thou wilt say I to my request:
No, if thou do'st say No to my demand.

Wid. Then No, my Lord: my suit is at an end.

Rich. The Widow likes him not, shee knits her Browes.

Clarence. Hee is the bluntest Wooer in Christendome.

King. Her Looks doth argue her replete with Modesty,
Her Words doth shew her Wit incomparable,
All her perfections challenge Soueraignetie,
One way, or other, shee is for a King,
And shee shall be my Loue, or else my Queene.
Say, that King Edward take thee for his Queene?

Wid. 'Tis better said then done, my gracious Lord:
I am a subiect fit to iest withall,
But farre vnfit to be a Soueraigne.

King. Sweet Widow, by my State I sweare to thee,
I speake no more then what my Soule intends,
And that is, to enioy thee for my Loue.

Wid. And that is more then I will yeeld vnto:
I know, I am too meane to be your Queene,
And yet too good to be your Concubine.

King. You cauill, Widow, I did meane my Queene.

Wid. 'Twill grieue your Grace, my Sonnes should call you Father.

King. No more, then when my Daughters
Call thee Mother.
Thou art a Widow, and thou hast some Children,
And by Gods Mother, I being but a Batchelor,
Haue other-some. Why, 'tis a happy thing,
To be the Father vnto many Sonnes:
Answer no more, for thou shalt be my Queene.

Rich. The Ghostly Father now hath done his Shriffe.

Clarence. When hee was made a Shriuer, 'twas for shift.

King. Brothers, you muse what Chat wee two haue had.

Rich. The Widow likes it not, for shee looks very sad.

King. You'ld thinke it strange, if I should marrie her.

Clarence. To who, my Lord?

King. Why Clarence, to my selfe.

Rich. That

Rich. That would be terme dayes wonder at the least.
Clarence. That's a day longer then a Wonder lasts.
Rich. By so much is the Wonder in extremes.
King. Well, leaft on Brothers: I can tell you both,
Her suit is grounded for her Husbands Lands.

Enter a Noble man.

Nob. My gracious Lord, Henry your Foe is taken,
And brought your Prisoner to your Palace Gate.
King. See that he be conuey'd vnto the Tower:
And goe wee Brothers to the man that sooke him,
To question of his apprehension.
Widow goe you along: Lords vse her honourable.
Exeunt.

Manet Richard.

Rich. I, Edward will vse Women honourably:
Would he were wasted, Marrow, Bones, and all,
That from his Loynes no hopefull Branch may spring,
To crosse me from the Golden time I looke for:
And yet, but weeme my Soules desire, and me,
The lastfull Edwards Title buryed,
Is Clarence, Henry, and his Sonne young Edward,
And all the vnlook'd-for Issue of their Bodies,
To take their Roomes, ere I can place my selfes
A cold premeditation for my purpose.
Why then I doe but dreame on Soueraignetie,
Like one that stands vpon a Promontorie,
And spyes a farre-off shore, where hee would tread,
Wishing his foot were equall with his eye,
And chides the Sea, that sunders him from thence,
Saying hee'le lade it dry, to haue his way:
So doe I wish the Crowne, being so farre off,
And so I chide the meanes that keepes me from it,
And so (I say) I'le cut the Causes off,
Flattering me with impossibilities:
My Eyes too quicke, my Heart o're-weenes too much,
Vnlesse my Hand and Strength could equall them.
Well, say there is no Kingdome then for Richard:
What other Pleasure can the World afford?
I'le make my Heaven in a Ladies Lappe,
And decke my Body in gay Ornaments,
And witch sweet Ladies with my Words and Looke.
Oh miserable Thought! and more vnlikely,
Then to accomplish twentie Golden Crownes.
Why Loue forswore me in my Mothers Wombe:
And for I should not deale in her soft Lawes,
She did corrupt frayle Nature with some Bribe,
To shrinke mine Arme vp like a wither'd Shrub,
To make an enuious Mountaine on my Back,
Where sits Deformitie to mocke my Body;
To shape my Legges of an vnequall size,
To dis-proportion me in every part:
Like to a Chaos, or an vn-lick'd Beare-whelpe,
That carryes no impression like the Dammes,
And am I then a man to be belou'd?
Oh monstrous fault, to harbour such a thought.
Then since this Earth affoords no Ioy to me,
But to commaund, to check, to o're-beare such,
As are of better Person then my selfe:
I'le make my Heaven, to dreame vpon the Crowne,
And whiles I liue, t'account this World but Hell,
Vntill my mis-shap'd Trunke, that beares this Head,
Be round impaled with a glorious Crowne.
And yet I know not how to get the Crowne,
For many Liues stand between me and home:
And I, like one lost in a Thornie Wood,
That rents the Thornes, and is rent with the Thornes,
Seeking a way, and straying from the way,
Not knowing how to finde the open Ayre,
But toyling desperately to finde it out,
Torment my selfe, to catch the English Crowne;
And from that torment I will free my selfe,
Or hew my way out with a bloody Axe.
Why I can smile, and murther whiles I smile,
And cry, Content, to that which grieues my Heart,
And wet my Cheekes with artificiall Teares,
And frame my Face to all occasions.
I'le drowne more Saylers then the Mermaid shall,
I'le slay more gazers then the Basilisks,
I'le play the Orator as well as Nestor,
Deceiue more slyly then Vlysses could,
And like a Sinon, take another Troy.
I can add Colours to the Camelion,
Change shapes with Proteus, for aduantages,
And set the murtherous Machiuell to Schoole.
Can I doe this, and cannot get a Crowne?
Tut, were it farther off, I'le pluck it downe. Exit.

Flourish.

Enter Lewis the French King, his Sister Bona, his Admirall, call'd Bourbon: Prince Edward, Queene Margaret, and the Earle of Oxford. Lewis sits, and riseth vp again.

Lewis. Faire Queene of England, worthy Margaret,
Sit downe with vs: it ill befits thy State,
And Birth, that thou should'st stand, while Lewis doth sit.
Marg. No, mightie King of France: now Margaret
Must strike her sayle, and learne a while to serue,
Where Kings command. I was (I must confesse)
Great Albions Queene, in former Golden dayes:
But now mischance hath trod my Title downe,
And with dis-honor layd me on the ground,
Where I must take like Sea-mate my fortune,
And to my humble Seat conforme my selfe.
Lewis. Why say, faire Queene, whence springe this deepe despaire?
Marg. From such a cause, as fills mine eyes with teares,
And stops my tongue, while heart is drown'd in care.
Lewis. What ere it be, be thou still like thy selfe,
And sit thee by our side. Seats her by him.
Yeild not thy necke to Fortunes yoake,
But let thy dauntlesse minde still ride in triumph,
Ouer all mischance.
Be plaine, Queene Margaret, and tell thy griefe,
It shall be eas'd, if France can yeild reliefe.
Marg. Those gracious words
Reuiue my drooping thoughts,
And giue my tongue-ty'd sorrowes leaue to speake.
Now therefore be it knowne to Noble Lords,
That Henry, sole possessor of my Loue,
Is, of a King, become a banished man,
And forc'd to liue in Scotland a Forlorne;
While proud ambitious Edward, Duke of Yorke,
Vsurpes the Regall Title, and the Seat
Of Englands true anointed lawfull King.
This is the cause that I, poore Margaret,
With this my Sonne, Prince Edward, Heaven Heire,
Am come to craue thy iust and lawfull ayde:
And if thou faile vs, all our hope is done.
Scotland hath will to helpe, but cannot helpe:

Our People, and our Peeres, are both mis-led,
Our Treasure seiz'd, our Souldiers put to flight,
And (as thou seest) our selves in beaule plight.
Lewis. Renowned Queene,
With patience calme the Storme,
While we bethinke a meanes to breake it off.
Marg. The more wee stay, the stronger growes our foe.
Lewis. The more I stay, the more Ile succour thee.
Marg. O, but impatience waiteth on true sorrow.
And see where comes the breeder of my sorrow.

Enter Warwicke.

Lewis. What's hee approacheth boldly to our presence?
Marg. Our Earle of Warwicke, Edwards greatest Friend.
Lewis. Welcome brave Warwicke, what brings thee to France? She descends. She arises.
Marg. I now begins a second Storme to rise,
For this is hee that moves both Winde and Tyde.
Warw. From worthy Edward, King of Albion,
My Lord and Soueraigne, and thy vowed Friend,
I come (in Kindnesse, and vnfayned Loue)
First, to doe greetings to thy Royall Person,
And then to crave a League of Amitie:
And lastly, to confirme that Amitie
With Nuptiall Knot, if thou vouchsafe to grant
That vertuous Lady Bona, thy faire Sister,
To Englands King, in lawfull Marriage.
Marg. If that goe forward, Henries hope is done.
Warw. And gracious Madame, Speaking to Bona.
In our Kings behalfe,
I am commanded, with your leave and fauor,
Humbly to kisse your Hand, and with my Tongue
To tell the passion of my Soueraignes Heart;
Where Fame, late entering at his heedfull Eares,
Hath plac'd thy Beauties Image, and thy Vertue.
Marg. King Lewis, and Lady Bona, heare me speake,
Before you answer Warwicke. His demand
Springs not from Edwards well-meant honest Loue,
But from Deceit, bred by Necessitie:
For how can Tyrants safely gouerne home,
Vnlesse abroad they purchase great allyance?
To proue him Tyrant, this reason may suffice,
That Henry liueth still: but were hee dead,
Yet here Prince Edward stands, King Henries Sonne.
Looke therefore Lewis, that by this League and Mariage
Thou draw not on thy Danger, and Dis-honor:
For though Vsurpers sway the rule a while,
Yet Heau'ns are iust, and Time suppressesth Wrongs.
Warw. Iniurious Margaret.
Edw. And why not Queene?
Warw. Because thy Father Henry did vsurpe,
And thou no more art Prince, then shee is Queene.
Oxf. Then Warwicke disapprouls great Iohn of Gaunt,
Which did subdue the greatest part of Spaine;
And after Iohn of Gaunt, Henry the Fourth,
Whose Wisdome was a Mirror to the wisest:
And after that wise Prince, Henry the Fift,
Who by his Prowesse conquered all France:
From these, our Henry lineally descends.
Warw. Oxford, how haps it in this smooth discourse,
You told not how Henry the Sixt hath lost
All that, which Henry the Fift had gotten:
Me thinkes these Peeres of France should smile at that.
But for the rest: you tell a Pedigree
Of threescore and two yeeres, a silly time
To make prescription for a Kingdomes worth.
Oxf. Why Warwicke, canst thou speak against thy Liege
Whom thou obeyd'st thirtie and six yeeres,
And not bewray thy Treason with a Blush?
Warw. Can Oxford, that did euer fence the right,
Now buckler Falsehood with a Pedigree?
For shame leaue Henry, and call Edward King.
Oxf. Call him my King, by whose iniurious doome
My elder Brother, the Lord Aubrey Vere
Was done to death? and more then so, my Father,
Euen in the downe-fall of his mellow'd yeeres,
When Nature brought him to the doore of Death?
No Warwicke, no while Life vpholds this Arme,
This Arme vpholds the House of Lancaster.
Warw. And I the House of Yorke.
Lewis. Queene Margaret, Prince Edward, and Oxford,
Vouchsafe at our request, to stand aside,
While I vse further conference with Warwicke.
They stand aloofe.
Marg. Heauens graunt, that Warwickes wordes be witch him not.
Lew. Now Warwicke, tell me euen vpon thy conscience
Is Edward your true King? for I were loth
To linke with him, that were not lawfull chosen.
Warw. Thereon I pawne my Credit, and mine Honor.
Lewis. But is hee gracious in the Peoples eye?
Warw. The more, that Henry was vnfortunate.
Lewis. Then further: all dissembling set aside,
Tell me for truth, the measure of his Loue
Vnto our Sister Bona.
Warw. Such it seemes,
As may beseeme a Monarch like himselfe.
My selfe haue often heard him say, and sweare,
That this his Loue was an eternall Plant,
Whereof the Root was fixt in Vertues ground,
The Leaues and Fruit maintain'd with Beauties Sunne,
Exempt from Enuy, but not from Disdaine,
Vnlesse the Lady Bona quit his paine.
Lewis. Now Sister, let vs heare your firme resolue.
Bona. Your graunt, or your denyall, shall be mine.
Yet I confesse, that often ere this day, Speaks to Wa.
When I haue heard your Kings desert recounted,
Mine eare hath tempted iudgement to desire.
Lewis. Then Warwicke, thus:
Our Sister shall be Edwards.
And now forthwith shall Articles be drawne,
Touching the Iointure that your King must make,
Which with her Downe shall be counter-poys'd:
Draw neare, Queene Margaret, and be a witnesse,
That Bona shall be Wife to the English King.
Pr. Edw. To Edward, but not to the English King
Marg. Deceitfull Warwicke, it was thy deuice,
By this alliance to make void my suit:
Before thy comming, Lewis was Henries friend.
Lewis. And still is friend to him, and Margaret.
But if your Title to the Crowne be weake,
As may appeare by Edwards good successe:
Then 'tis but reason, that I be releas'd
From giuing aydc, which late I promised.
Yet shall you haue all kindnesse at my hand,
That your Estate requires, and mine can yeeld.
Warw. Henry now liues in Scotland, at his ease;

When

Where having nothing, nothing can he lose.
And as for you your selfe (our quondam Queene)
You haue a Father able to maintaine you,
And better 'twere, you troubled him, then France.
Mar. Peace impudent, and shamelesse Warwicke,
Proud setter vp, and puller downe of Kings,
I will not hence, till with my Talke and Teares
(Both full of Truth) I make King Lewis behold
Thy sly conueyance, and thy Lords false loue,
Post blowing a horne within.
For both of you are Birds of selfe-same Feather.
Lewis. Warwicke, this is some post to vs, or thee.
Enter the Post.
Post. My Lord Ambassador,
These Letters are for you. Speaks to Warwick.
Sent from your Brother Marquesse Montague.
These from our King, vnto your Maiesty. To Lewis.
And Madam, these for you: To Margaret.
From whom, I know not.
They all reade their Letters.
Oxf. I like it well, that our faire Queene and Mistris
Smiles at her newes, while Warwicke frownes at his.
Prince Ed. Nay marke how Lewis stampes as he were nettled. I hope, all's for the best.
Lew. Warwicke, what are thy Newes?
And yours, faire Queene.
Mar. Mine such, as fill my heart with vnhop'd Ioyes.
War. Mine full of Sorrow, and heart's discontent.
Lew. What? has your King married the Lady Grey?
And now to sooth your Forgery, and his,
Sends me a Paper to perswade me Patience?
Is this th'Alliance that he seekes with France?
Dare he presume to scorne vs in this manner?
Mar. I told your Maiesty as much before:
This proueth Edwards Loue, and Warwickes honesty.
War. King Lewis, I heere protest in sight of heauen,
And by the hope I haue of heauenly blisse,
That I am cleere from this misdeed of Edwards;
No more my King, for he dishonors me,
But most himselfe, if he could see his shame.
Did I forget, that by the House of Yorke
My Father came vntimely to his death?
Did I let passe th'abuse done to my Neece?
Did I impale him with the Regall Crowne?
Did I put Henry from his Natiue Right?
And am I guerdon'd at the last, with Shame?
Shame on himselfe, for my Desert is Honor.
And to repaire my Honor lost for him,
I heere renounce him, and returne to Henry.
My Noble Queene, let former grudges passe,
And henceforth, I am thy true Seruitour:
I will reuenge his wrong to Lady Bona,
And replant Henry in his former state.
Mar. Warwicke,
These words haue turn'd my Hate, to Loue;
And I forgiue, and quite forget old faults,
And loy that thou becom'st King Henries Friend.
War. So much his Friend, I, his vnfained Friend,
That if King Lewis vouchsafe to furnish vs
With some few Bands of chosen Soldiours,
Ile vndertake to Land them on our Coast,
And force the Tyrant from his seat by Warre.
'Tis not his new-made Bride shall succour him.
And as for Clarence, as my Letters tell me,
Hee's very likely now to fall from him,
For matching more for wanton Lust, then Honor,
Or then for strength and safety of our Country.
Bona. Deere Brother, how shall Bona be reueng'd,
But by thy helpe to this distressed Queene?
Mar. Renowned Prince, how shall Poore Henry liue,
Vnlesse thou rescue him from foule dispaire?
Bona. My quarrel, and this English Queene, are one.
War. And mine faire Lady Bona, ioynes with yours.
Lew. And mine, with hers, and thine, and Margarets.
Therefore, at last, I firmely am resolu'd
You shall haue ayde.
Mar. Let me giue humble thankes for all, at once.
Lew. Then Englands Messenger, returne in Posse,
And tell false Edward, thy supposed King,
That Lewis of France, is sending ouer Maskers
To reuell it with him, and his new Bride.
Thou seest what's past, go feare thy King withall.
Bona. Tell him, in hope he'l prouse a widower shortly
I weare the Willow Garland for his sake.
Mar. Tell him, my mourning weeds are layde aside,
And I am ready to put Armor on.
War. Tell him from me, that he hath done me wrong,
And therefore Ile vn-Crowne him, ere't be long.
There's thy reward, be gone. Exit Post.
Lew. But Warwicke,
Thou and Oxford, with fiue thousand men
Shall crosse the Seas, and bid false Edward battaile:
And as occasion serues, this Noble Queen
And Prince, shall follow with a fresh Supply.
Yet ere thou go, but answer me one doubt.
What Pledge haue we of thy firme Loyalty?
War. This shall assure my constant Loyalty,
That if our Queene, and this young Prince agree,
Ile ioyne mine eldest daughter, and my Ioy,
To him forthwith, in holy Wedlocke bands.
Mar. Yes, I agree, and thanke you for your Motion.
Sonne Edward, she is Faire and Vertuous,
Therefore delay not, giue thy hand to Warwicke,
And with thy hand, thy faith irreuocable,
That onely Warwickes daughter shall be thine.
Prin. Ed. Yes, I accept her, for she well deserues it,
And heere to pledge my Vow, I giue my hand.
He giues his hand to Warw.
Lew. Why stay we now? These soldiers shalbe leuied,
And thou Lord Bourbon, our High Admirall
Shall wast them ouer with our Royall Fleete.
I long tall Edward fall by Warres mischance,
For mocking Marriage with a Dame of France.
Exeunt. Manet Warwicke.
War. I came from Edward as Ambassador,
But I returne his sworne and mortall Foe:
Matter of Marriage was the charge he gaue me,
But dreadfull Warre shall answer his demand.
Had he none else to make a stale but me?
Then none but I, shall turne his Iest to Sorrow.
I was the Cheefe that rais'd him to the Crowne,
And Ile be Cheefe to bring him downe againe:
Not that I pitty Henries misery,
But seeke Reuenge on Edwards mockery. Exit.

Enter Richard, Clarence, Somerset, and Montague.

Rich. Now tell me Brother Clarence, what thinke you
Of this new Marriage with the Lady Grey?
Hath not our Brother made a worthy choice?
Cla. Alas, you know, 'tis farre from hence to France.
How

How could he stay till Warwicke made returne?

Som. My Lords, forbeare this talke: here comes the King.

Flourish.

Enter King Edward, Lady Grey, Pembroke, Stafford, Hastings: foure stand on one side, and foure on the other.

Rich. And his well-chosen Bride.

Clarence. I minde to tell him plainly what I thinke.

King. Now Brother of Clarence,
How like you our Choyce,
That you stand pensiue, as halfe malecontent?

Clarence. As well as Lewis of France,
Or the Earle of Warwicke,
Which are so weake of courage, and in iudgement,
That they le take no offence at our abuse.

King. Suppose they take offence without a cause
They are but Lewis and Warwicke, I am Edward,
Your King and Warwicke's, and must haue my will.

Rich. And shall haue your will, because our King:
Yet hastie Marriage seldome proueth well.

King. Yes, Brother Richard, are you offended too?

Rich. Not I: no:
God forbid, that I should wish them seuer'd,
Whom God hath ioyn'd together:
I, and 'twere pittie, to sunder them,
That yoake so well together.

King. Setting your scornes, and your mislike aside,
Tell me some reason, why the Lady Grey
Should not become my Wife, and Englands Queene?
And you too Somerset, and Mountagne,
Speake freely what you thinke.

Clarence. Then this is mine opinion:
That King Lewis become your Enemie,
For mocking him about the Marriage
Of the Lady Bona.

Rich. And Warwicke, doing what you gaue in charge,
Is now dis-honored by this new Marriage.

King. What, if both Lewis and Warwick be appeas'd,
By such inuention as I can deuise?

Mount. Yet, to haue ioyn'd with France in such alliance,
Would more haue strength'ned this our Commonwealth
'Gainst forraine stormes, then any home-bred Marriage.

Hast. Why, knowes not Mountagne, that of it selfe,
England is safe, if true within it selfe?

Mount. But the safer, when 'tis back'd with France.

Hast. 'Tis better vsing France, then trusting France:
Let vs be back'd with God, and with the Seas,
Which he hath giu'n for fence impregnable,
And with their helpes, onely defend our selues:
In them, and in our selues, our safetie lyes.

Clar. For this one speech, Lord Hastings well deserues
To haue the Heire of the Lord Hungerford.

King. I, what of that? it was my will, and graunt,
And for this once, my Will shall stand for Law.

Rich. And yet me thinks, your Grace hath not done well,
To giue the Heire and Daughter of Lord Scales
Vnto the Brother of your loeing Bride;
Shee better would haue fitted me, or Clarence:
But to your Bride you bure Brotherhood.

Clar. Or else you would not haue bestow'd the Heire
Of the Lord Bonuill on your new Wiues Sonne,
And leaue your Brothers to goe speede elsewhere.

King. Alas poore Clarence: is it for a Wife
That thou art malecontent? I will prouide thee.

Clarence. In choosing for your selfe,
You shew'd your iudgement:
Which being shallow, you shall giue me leaue
To play the Broker in mine owne behalfe;
And to that end, I shortly minde to leaue you.

King. Leaue me, or tarry, Edward will be King,
And not be ty'd vnto his Brothers will.

Lady Grey. My Lords, before it pleas'd his Maiestie
To raise my State to Title of a Queene,
Doe me but right, and you must all confesse,
That I was not ignoble of Descent,
And meaner then my selfe haue had like fortune
But as this Title honors me and mine,
So your dislikes, to whom I would be pleasing,
Doth cloud my ioyes with danger, and with sorrow.

King. My Loue, forbeare to fawne vpon their frownes.
What danger, or what sorrow can befall thee,
So long as Edward is thy constant friend,
And their true Soueraigne, whom they must obey?
Nay, whom they shall obey, and loue thee too,
Vnlesse they seeke for hatred at my hands:
Which if they doe, yet will I keepe thee safe,
And they shall feele the vengeance of my wrath.

Rich. I heare, yet say not much, but thinke the more.

Enter a Post.

King. Now Messenger, what Letters, or what Newes from France?

Post. My Soueraigne Liege, no Letters, & few words,
But such, as I (without your speciall pardon)
Dare not relate.

King. Goe too, wee pardon thee:
Therefore, in briefe, tell me their words,
As neere as thou canst guesse them.
What answer makes King Lewis vnto our Letters?

Post. As my depart, these were his very words:
Goe tell false Edward, the supposed King,
That Lewis of France is sending over Maskers,
To reuell it with him, and his new Bride.

King. Is Lewis so brauo? belike he thinkes me Henry.
But what said Lady Bona to my Marriage?

Post. These were her words, vtt'red with mild disdaine
Tell him, in hope he'le prouo a Widower shortly,
Ile weare the Willow Garland for his sake.

King. I blame not her; she could say little lesse:
She had the wrong. But what said Henry's Queene?
For I haue heard, that she was there in place.

Post. Tell him (quoth she)
My mourning Weedes are done,
And I am readie to put Armour on.

King. Belike she minde to play the Amazon.
But what said Warwicke to these iniuries?

Post. He, more incens'd against your Maiestie,
Then all the rest, discharg'd me with these words:
Tell him from me, that he hath done me wrong,
And therefore Ile vncrowne him, ere't be long.

King. Ha! durst the Traytor breath out so proud words?
Well, I will arme me, being thus forewarn'd:
They shall haue Wars, and pay for their presumption.
But say, is Warwicke friends with Margaret?

Post. I, gracious Soueraigne,
They are so link'd in friendship,
That yong Prince Edward marryes Warwick's Daughter.

Clarence. Belike, the elder;
Clarence will haue the younger.

Now

Now Brother King farewell, and sit you fast,
For I will hence to Warwicks other Daughter,
That though I want a Kingdome, yet in Marriage
I may not prove inferior to your selfe.
You that love me, and Warwicke, follow me.
Exit Clarence, and Somerset follows.

Rich. Not I:
My thoughts aymes as a further matter:
I stay not for the love of Edward, but the Crowne.

King. Clarence and Somerset both gone to Warwicke?
Yet am I armd against the worst can happen:
And hastie is needfull in this desperate case.
Pembrooke and Stafford, you in our behalfe
Goe levie men, and make prepare for Warre;
They are alreadie, or quickly will be landed:
My selfe in person will straight follow you.
Exeunt Pembrooke and Stafford.

But ere I goe, Hastings and Mountagne
Resolve my doubt: you twaine, of all the rest,
Are neere to Warwicke, by blood, and by allyance:
Tell me, if you love Warwicke more then me;
If it be so, then both depart to him:
I rather wish you foes, then hollow friends.
But if you minde to hold your true obedience,
Give me assurance with some friendly Vow,
That I may never have you in suspect.

Mount. So God helpe Mountagne, as he proves true.

Hast. And Hastings, as he favours Edwards cause.

King. Now, Brother Richard, will you stand by vs?

Rich. I, in despight of all that shall withstand you.

King. Why so: then am I sure of Victorie.
Now therefore let vs hence, and lose no houre,
Till wee meet Warwicke, with his forreine powre.
Exeunt.

Enter Warwicke and Oxford in England, with French Souldiers.

Warw. Trust me, my Lord, all hitherto goes well,
The common people by numbers swarme to vs.
Enter Clarence and Somerset.
But see where Somerset and Clarence comes:
Speake suddenly, my Lords, are wee all friends?

Clar. Feare not that, my Lord.

Warw. Then gentle Clarence, welcome vnto Warwicke,
And welcome Somerset: I hold it cowardize,
To rest mistrustfull, where a Noble Heart
Hath pawn'd an open Hand, in signe of Love;
Else might I thinke, that Clarence, Edwards Brother,
Were but a feined friend to our proceedings:
But welcome sweet Clarence, my Daughter shall be thine.
And now, what rests? but in Nights Coverture,
Thy Brother being carelessly encamp'd,
His Souldiers lurking in the Towne about,
And but attended by a simple Guard,
Wee may surprize and take him at our pleasure,
Our Scouts have found the adventure very easie:
That as Vlysses, and stout Diomede,
With sleight and manhood stole to Rhesus Tents,
And brought from thence the Thracian fatall Steeds;
So wee, well cover'd with the Nights black Mantle,
At vnawares may beat downe Edwards Guard,
And seize himselfe: I say not, slaughter him,
For I intend but onely to surprize him.
You that will follow me to this attempt
Applaud the Name of Henry, with your Leader.

They all cry, Henry.

Why then, let's on our way in silent sort,
For Warwicke and his friends, God and Saint George.
Exeunt.

Enter three Watchmen to guard the King's Tent.

1. Watch. Come on my Masters, each man take his stand,
The King by this, is fast him downe to sleepe.

2. Watch. What, will he not to Bed?

1. Watch. Why, no: for he hath made a solemne Vow,
Never to lye and take his naturall Rest,
Till Warwicke, or himselfe, be quite suppreft.

3. Watch. To morrow then belike shall be the day,
If Warwicke be so neere as men report.

3. Watch. But say, I pray, what Noble man is that,
That with the King here reposes in his Tent?

1. Watch. 'Tis the Lord Hastings, the Kings chiefest friend.

3. Watch. O, is it so? but why commands the King,
That his chiefe followers lodge in Townes about him,
While he himselfe keepes in the cold field?

2. Watch. 'Tis the more honour, because more dangerous.

3. Watch. I, but give me worship, and quietnesse,
I like it better then a dangerous honor.
If Warwicke knew in what estate he stands,
'Tis to be doubted he would waken him.

1. Watch. Vnlesse our Halberds did shut vp his passage.

2. Watch. I: wherefore else guard we his Royall Tent,
But to defend his Person from Night-foes?

Enter Warwicke, Clarence, Oxford, Somerset, and French Souldiers, silent all.

Warw. This is his Tent, and see where stand his Guard:
Courage my Masters: Honor now, or never:
But follow me, and Edward shall be ours.

1. Watch. Who goes there?

2. Watch. Stay, or thou dyest.
Warwicke and the rest cry all, Warwicke, Warwicke, and set vpon the Guard, who fye, crying, Arme, Arme, Warwicke and the rest following them.

The Drumme playing, and Trumpet sounding.
Enter Warwicke, Somerset, and the rest, bringing the King out in his Gowne, sitting in a Chaire: Richard and Hastings flyes over the Stage.

Som. What are they that flye there?

Warw. Richard and Hastings: let them goe, heere is the Duke.

K. Edw. The Duke?
Why Warwicke, when wee parted,
Thou call'dst me King.

Warw. I, but the case is alter'd,
When you disgrac'd me in my Embassade,
Then I degraded you from being King,
And come now to create you Duke of Yorke.
Alas, how should you governe any Kingdome,
That know not how to vse Embassadors,
Nor how to be contented with one Wife,
Nor how to vse your Brothers Brotherly,
Nor how to studie for the Peoples Welfare,
Nor how to shroud your selfe from Enemies?

K. Edw. Yes,

K. Edw. Yea, Brother of Clarence,
Art thou here too?
Nay then I see, that Edward needs must downe.
Yet Warwicke, in despight of all mischeance,
Of thee thy wife, and all thy Complices,
Edward will always bear himselfe as King:
Though Fortune malice overthrow my State,
My minde exceedes the compasse of her Wheele.
War. Then for his minde, be Edward Englands King.

Takes off his Crowne.

But Henry now shall weare the English Crowne,
And be true King indeede: thou but the shadow.
My Lord of Somerset, at my request,
See that forthwith Duke Edward be conveyd
Unto my Brother Arch-Bishop of Yorke:
When I have fought with Pembroke, and his fellowes,
I'le follow you, and tell what answer
Lewis and the Lady Bona send to him.
Now for a-while farewell good Duke of Yorke.
They leade him out forcibly.
K. Ed. What Fates impose, that men must needs abide
It boots not to resist both winde and tide. Exeunt
Oxf. What now remaines my Lords for vs to do,
But march to London with our Soldiers?
War. I, that's the first thing that we have to do,
To free King Henry from imprisonment,
And see him seated in the Regall Throne. exeu.

Enter Rivers, and Lady Grey.

Riv. Madam, what makes you in this sodain change?
Grey. Why Brother Rivers, are you yet to learne
What late misfortune is befalne King Edward?
Riv. What loss of some pitche battell
Against Warwicke?
Grey. No, but the loss of his owne Royall person.
Riv. Then is my Soueraigne slaine?
Grey. I almost feare, for he is taken prisoner,
Either betrayd by falshood of his Guard,
Or by his Foe surpris'd at vnawares:
And as I further have to vnderstand,
Is new committed to the Bishop of Yorke,
Fell Warwickes Brother, and by that our Foe.
Riv. These Newes I must confesse are full of griefe,
Yet gracious Madam, bear it as you may.
Warwicke may loose that now hath wonne the day.
Grey. Till then, faire hope must hinder lives decay:
And I the rather wisse me from dispaire
For love of Edwards Off-spring in my wombe:
This is it that makes me bridle passion,
And beare with Mildnesse my misfortunes crosse:
I, I, for this I draw in many a teare,
And stop the rising of blood-sucking sighes,
Lest with my sighes or teares, I blast or drowne
King Edwards Fruite, true heyre to th'English Crowne.
Riv. But Madam,
Where is Warwicke then become?
Grey. I am informd that he comes towards London
To set the Crowne once more on Henries head,
Guesse thou the rest. King Edwards Friends must downe
But to prevent the Tyrants violence,
(For trust not him that hath once broken Faith)
I'le hence forthwith vnto the Sanctuary,
To save (at least) the heire of Edwards right:
There shall I rest secure from force and fraud:
Come therefore let vs flye, while we may flye,
If Warwicke take vs, we are sure to dye. exeunt.

Enter Richard, Lord Hastings, and Sir William Stanley.

Rich. Now my Lord Hastings, and Sir William Stanley
Leave off to wonder why I drew you hither,
Into this cheerefull Thicket of the Parke.
Thus stand the case: you know our King, my Brother,
Is prisoner to the Bishop here, at whose hands
He hath good vsage, and great liberty,
And often but attended with weake guard,
Come hunting this way to disport himselfe.
I have advertis'd him by secret messes,
That if about this houre he make this way,
Under the colour of his vsuall game,
He shall heere finde his Friends with Horse and Men,
To set him free from his Captivitie.

Enter King Edward, and a Huntsman with him.

Huntsman. This way my Lord,
For this way lies the Game.
King Edw. Nay this way man,
See where the Huntsmen stand.
Now Brother of Glofter, Lord Hastings, and the rest,
Stand you thus close to steale the Bishops Deere?
Rich. Brother, the time and case, requireth haste,
Your horse stands ready at the Parke-corner.
King Ed. But whether shall we then?
Hast. To Lyn my Lord,
And ship from thence to Flanders.
Rich. Wel guest believe me, for that was my meaning.
K. Ed. Stanley, I will requite thy forwardnesse.
Rich. But wherefore stay we? 'tis no time to talke.
K. Ed. Huntsman, what say'st thou?
Wilt thou go along?
Hunts. Better do so, then tarry and be hang'd.
Rich. Come then away, lets ha no more adoe.
K. Ed. Bishop farewell,
Shield thee from Warwicke frowne,
And pray that I may re-possesse the Crowne. exeunt

Flourish. Enter King Henry the sixt, Clarence, Warwicke, Somerset, young Henry, Oxford, Montague, and Lieutenant.

K. Hen. M. Lieutenant, now that God and Friends
Have shaken Edward from the Regall seate,
And turn'd my captive state to libertie,
My feare to hope, my sorrowes vnto joyes,
At our enlargement what are thy due Fees?
Lieu. Subjects may challenge nothing of their Sou'raine
But, if an humble prayer may preuaile,
I then crave pardon of your Maiestie.
K. Hen. For what, Lieutenant? For well vsing me?
Nay, be thou sure, I'le well requite thy kindnesse.
For that it made my imprisonment, a pleasure:
I, such a pleasure, as incaged Birds
Conceiue, when after many moody Thoughts,
At last, by Notes of Houshold harmonie,
They quite forget their loss of Libertie.

But Warwicke, after God, thou set'st me free.
And chiefely therefore, I thanke God, and thee,
He was the Author, thou the Instrument.
Therefore that I may conquer Fortunes spight,
By living low, where Fortune cannot hurt me,
And that the people of this blessed Land
May not be punisht with my thwarting starres.
Warwicke, although my Head still weare the Crowne,
I here resigne my Gouernment to thee,
For thou art fortunate in all thy deeds.

War. Your Grace hath still beene fam'd for vertuous,
And now may seeme as wise as vertuous.
By spying and auoiding Fortunes malice,
For few men rightly temper with the Starres:
Yet in this one thing let me blame your Grace,
For chusing me, when Clarence is in place.

Clar. No Warwicke, thou art worthy of the sway,
To whom the Heau'ns in thy Nativitie,
Adiudg'd an Olive Branch, and Lawrell Crowne,
As likely to be blest in Peace and Warre:
And therefore I yeeld thee my free consent.

War. And I chuse Clarence onely for Protector.

King. Warwick and Clarence, giue me both your Hands:
Now ioyne your Hands, & with your Hands your Hearts,
That no dissention hinder Gouernment:
I make you both Protectors of this Land,
While I my selfe will lead a priuate Life,
And in deuotion spend my latter dayes,
To sinnes rebuke, and my Creators prayse.

War. What answeres Clarence to his Soueraignes will?

Clar. That he consents, if Warwicke yeeld consent,
For on thy fortune I repose my selfe.

War. Why then, though loth, yet must I be content:
We'le yoake together, like a double shadow
To Henries Body, and supply his place;
I meane, in bearing weight of Gouernment,
While he enioyes the Honor, and his ease.
And Clarence, now then it is more then needfull,
Forthwith that Edward be pronounc'd a Traytor,
And all his Lands and Goods confiscate.

Clar. What else? and that Succession be determined.

War. I, therein Clarence shall not want his part.

King. But with the first, of all your chiefe affaires,
Let me entreat (for I command no more)
That Margaret your Queene, and my Sonne Edward,
Be sent for, to returne from France with speed:
For till I see them here, by doubtfull feare,
My ioy of libertie is halfe eclips'd.

Clar. It shall bee done, my Soueraigne, with all speede.

King. My Lord of Somerset, what Youth is that,
Of whom you seeme to haue so tender care?

Somerset. My Liege, it is young Henry, Earle of Richmond.

King. Come hither, Englands Hope:
Layes his Hand on his Head.
If secret Powers suggest but truth
To my diuining thoughts,
This pretie Lad will prouе our Countries blisse.
His Lookes are full of peacefull Maiestie,
His Head by nature fram'd to weare a Crowne,
His Hand to wield a Scepter, and himselfe
Likely in time to blesse a Regall Throne.
Make much of him, my Lords; for this is he Must helpe you more, then you are hurt by mee.

Enter a Post.

War. What newes, my friend?

Post. That Edward is escaped from your Brother,
And fled (as hee heares since) to Burgundie.

War. Vnsauoric newes. but how made he escape?

Post. He was conuey'd by Richard, Duke of Glouster,
And the Lord Hastings, who attended him
In secret ambush, on the Forrest side,
And from the Bishops Huntsmen rescu'd him.
For Hunting was his daily Exercise.

War. My Brother was too carelesse of his charge.
But let vs hence, my Soueraigne, to prouide
A salue for any sore, that may betide. Exeunt.

Manet Somerset, Richmond, and Oxford.

Som. My Lord, I like not of this flight of Edward.
For doubtlesse, Burgundie will yeeld him helpe,
And we shall haue more Warres before't be long.
As Henries late presaging Prophecie
Did glad my heart, with hope of this young Richmond:
So doth my heart misgiue me, in these Conflicts,
What may befall him, to his harme and ours.
Therefore, Lord Oxford, to preuent the worst,
Forthwith wee'le send him hence to Brittanie,
Till stormes be past of Ciuill Enmitie.

Oxf. I: for if Edward re-possesse the Crowne,
'Tis like that Richmond, with the rest, shall downe.

Som. It shall be so. he shall to Brittanie.
Come therefore, let's about it speedily. Exeunt.

Flourish. Enter Edward, Richard, Hastings, and Souldiers.

Edw. Now Brother Richard, Lord Hastings, and the rest,
Yet thus farre Fortune maketh vs amends,
And sayes, that once more I shall enterchange
My wained state, for Henries Regall Crowne.
Well haue we pass'd, and now re-pass'd the Seas,
And brought desired helpe from Burgundie.
What then remaines, we being thus arriu'd
From Ravenspurre Hauen, before the Gates of Yorke,
But that we enter, as into our Dukedome?

Rich. The Gates made fast?
Brother, I like not this.
For many men that stumble at the Threshold,
Are well fore-told, that danger lurkes within.

Edw. Tush man, aboadments must not now affright vs:
By faire or foule meanes we must entre in,
For hither will our friends repaire to vs.

Hast. My Liege, Ile knocke once more, to summon them.

Enter on the Walls, the Maior of Yorke, and his Brethren.

Maior. My Lords,
We were fore-warned of your comming,
And shut the Gates, for safeste of our selues;
For now we owe allegeance vnto Henry.

Edw. But, Master Maior, if Henry be your King,
Yet Edward, at the least, is Duke of Yorke.

Maior. True, my good Lord, I know you for no lesse.

Edw. Why, and I challenge nothing but my Dukedome,
As being well content with that alone.

Rich. But

Rich. But when the Fox hath once got in his Nolt,
Hee'le soone finde meanes to make the Body follow.
Hast. Why, Master Maior, why stand you in a doubt?
Open the Gates, we are King Henries friends.
Maior. I, say you so? the Gates shall then be opened.
He descends.
Rich. A wise stout Captaine, and soone perswaded.
Hast. The good old man would fame that all were wel,
So 'twere not long of him: but being enter'd,
I doubt not I, but we shall soone perswade
Both him, and all his Brothers, vnto reason.

Enter the Maior, and two Aldermen.

Edw. So, Master Maior: these Gates must not be shut,
But in the Night, or in the time of Warre.
What, feare not man, but yeeld me vp the Keyes,
Takes his Keyes.
For Edward will defend the Towne, and thee,
And all those friends, that deine to follow mee.

March. Enter Montgomery, with Drumme and Souldiers.

Rich. Brother, this is Sir John Mo ntgomery,
Our trustie friend, vnlesse I be deceiu'd.
Edw. Welcome Sir John: but why come you in Armes?
Mont. To helpe King Edward in his time of storme,
As every loyall Subiect ought to doe.
Edw. Thankes good Montgomerie
But we now forget our Title to the Crowne,
And onely clayme our Dukedome,
Till God pleale to send the rest.
Mont. Then fare you well, for I will hence againe,
I came to serue a King, and not a Duke:
Drummer strike vp, and let vs march away.
The Drummer begins to march.
Edw. Nay stay, Sir John, a while, and wee'le debate
By what safe meanes the Crowne may be recouer'd.
Mont. What talke you of debating? in few words,
If you'le not here proclaime your selfe our King,
I'le leaue you to your fortune, and be gone,
To keepe them back, that come to succour you.
Why shall we fight, if you pretend no Title?
Rich. Why Brother, wherefore stand you on nice points?
Edw. When wee grow stronger,
Then wee'le make our Clayme:
Till then, 'tis wisdome to conceale our meaning.
Hast. Away with scrupulous Wit, now Armes must rule.
Rich. And feare lesse minds clyme soonest vnto Crowns.
Brother, we will proclaime you out of hand,
The bruit thereof will bring you many friends.
Edw. Then be it as you will. for 'tis my right,
And Henry but vsurpes the Diademe.
Mont. I, now my Soueraigne speaketh like himselfe,
And now will I be Edwards Champion.
Hast. Sound Trumpet, Edward shal be here proclaim'd:
Come, fellow Souldier, make thou proclamation.
Flourish. Sound.
Sol. Edward the Fourth, by the Grace of God, King of England and France, and Lord of Ireland, &c.
Mont. And whoso're gainsayes King Edwards right,
By this I challenge him to single fight.
Throwes downe his Gantlet.
All Long liue Edward the Fourth.
Edw. Thankes brave Montgomery,
And thankes vnto you all:
If fortune serue me, I'le requite this kindnesse.
Now for this Night, let's harbor here in Yorke:
And when the Morning Sonne shall rayse his Carre
Above the Border of this Horizon,
Wee'le forward towards Warwicke, and his Mates;
For well I wot, that Henry is no Souldier.
Ah froward Clarence, how euill it beseemes thee,
To flatter Henry, and forsake thy Brother?
Yet as wee may, wee'le meet both thee and Warwicke.
Come on brave Souldiers: doubt not of the Day,
And that once gotten, doubt not of large Pay. Exeunt.

Flourish. Enter the King, Warwicke, Montague, Clarence, Oxford, and Somerset.

War. What counsaile, Lords? Edward from Belgia,
With hastie Germanes, and blunt Hollanders,
Hath pass'd in safetie through the Narrow Seas,
And with his troupes doth march amaine to London,
And many giddie people flock to him.
King Let's leaue men, and beat him backe againe.
Clar. A little fire is quickly trodden out,
Which being suffer'd, Riuers cannot quench.
War. In Warwickshire I haue true-hearted friends,
Not mutinous in peace, yet bold in Warre,
Those will I muster vp: and thou Sonne Clarence
Shalt stirre vp in Suffolke, Norfolke, and in Kent,
The Knights and Gentlemen, to come with thee.
Thou Brother Montague, in Buckingham,
Northampton, and in Leicestershire, shalt find
Men well enclin'd to heare what thou command'st.
And thou, brave Oxford, wondrous well belou'd,
In Oxfordshire shalt muster vp thy friends.
My Soueraigne, with the loiuing Citizens,
Like to his Island, girt in with the Ocean,
Or modest Dyan, circled with her Nymphs,
Shall rest in London, till we come to him:
Faire Lords take leaue, and stand not to reply.
Farewell my Soueraigne.
King. Farewell my Hector and my Troyes true hope.
Clar. In signe of truth, I kisse your Highnesse Hand.
King. Well-minded Clarence, be thou fortunate.
Mont. Comfort, my Lord, and so I take my leaue.
Oxf. And thus I seale my truth, and bid adieu.
King. Sweet Oxford, and my loiuing Montague,
And all at once, once more a happy farewell.
War. Farewell, sweet Lords, let's meet at Couentry.
Exeunt.
King. Here at the Palace will I rest a while.
Cousin of Exeter, what thinkes your Lordship?
Me thinkes, the Power that Edward hath in field,
Should not be able to encounter mine.
Exet. The doubt is, that he will seduce the rest.
King. That's not my feare, my meed hath got me fame:
I haue not stopt mine eares to their demands,
Nor posted off their suites with slow delayes,
My pitie hath beene balme to heale their wounds,
My mildnesse hath allay'd their swelling griefes,
My mercie dry'd their water-flowing teares.
I haue not been desirous of their wealth,
Nor much oppressiue them with great Subsidies,
Nor forward of reuenge, though they much err'd,
Then why should they loue Edward more then me?
No Exeter, these Graces challenge Grace:

And when the Lyon fawnes vpon the Lambe,
The Lambe will never cease to follow him.

Shout within, A Lancaster, A Lancaster.

Exet. Heaske, heaske, my Lord, what Shouts are these?

Enter Edward and his Souldiers.

Edw. Seize on the shamefac'd Henry, beare him hence,
And once againe proclaime vs King of England.
You are the Fount that makes small Brookes to flow,
Now stops thy Spring, my Sea shall suck them dry,
And swell so much the higher, by their ebbe.
Hence with him to the Tower, let him not speake.

Exit with King Henry.

And Lords, towards Coventry bend we our course,
Where peremptorie Warwicke now remaines:
The Sunne shines hot, and if we vse delay,
Cold biting Winter marres our hop'd-for Hay.

Rich. Away betimes, before his forces joyne,
And take the great-growne Traytor vnawares:
Braue Warriors, march amaine towards Coventry.

Exeunt.

Enter Warwicke, the Maior of Coventry, two Messengers, and others vpon the Walls.

War. Where is the Post that came from valiant Oxford?
How farre hence is thy Lord, mine honest fellow?

Mess. 1. By this at Dunsmore, marching hitherward.

War. How farre off is our Brother Montague?
Where is the Post that came from Montague?

Mess. 2. By this at Daintry, with a puissant troope.

Enter Somervile.

War. Say Somervile, what sayes my loving Sonne?
And by thy guesse, how nigh is Clarence now?

Somer. At Southam I did leaue him with his forces,
And doe expect him here some two houres hence.

War. Then Clarence is at hand, I heare his Drummes.

Somer. It is not his, my Lord, here Southam lyes:
The Drum your Honor heares, marcheth from Warwicke.

War. Who should that be? belike vnlook'd for friends.

Somer. They are at hand, and you shall quickly know.

March. Flourish. Enter Edward, Richard, and Souldiers.

Edw. Goe, Trumpet, to the Walls, and sound a Parle.

Rich. See how the surly Warwicke mans the Wall.

War. Oh vabid spight, is sportfull Edward come?
Where slept our Scouts, or how are they sedue'd,
That we could heare no newes of his repayre.

Edw. Now Warwicke, wilt thou ope the Citie Gates,
Speake gentle words, and humbly bend thy Knee,
Call Edward King, and at his hands begge Mercy,
And he shall pardon thee these Outrages?

War. Nay rather, wilt thou draw thy forces hence,
Confesse who set thee vp, and plack'd thee downe,
Call Warwicke Patron, and be penitent,
And thou shalt still remaine the Duke of Yorke.

Rich. I thought at least he would haue said the King,
Or did he make the lest against his will?

War. In neet a Dukedome, Sir, a goodly gift?

Rich. I, by my faith, for a poore Earle to give,
Ile doe thee service for so good a gift.

War. 'Twas I that gaue the Kingdome to thy Brother.

Edw. Why then 'tis mine, if but by Warwicke's gift.

War. Thou art no Atlas for so great a weight:
And Weakeling, Warwicke takes his gift againe,
And Henry is my King, Warwicke his Subiect.

Edw. But Warwicke's King is Edwards Prisoner:
And gallant Warwicke, doe but answer this,
What is the Body, when the Head is off?

Rich. Alas, that Warwicke had no more fore-cast,
But whiles he thought to steale the single Ten,
The King was slyly fingar'd from the Deck:
You left poore Henry at the Bishops Pallace,
And tenne to one you'le meet him in the Tower.

Edw. 'Tis euen so, yet you are Warwicke still.

Rich. Come Warwicke,
Take the time, kneele downe, kneele downe:
Nay when? strike now, or else the Iron cooles.

War. I had rather chop this Hand off at a blow,
And with the other, fling it at thy face,
Then beare so low a sayle, to strike to thee.

Edw. Sayle how thou canst,
Have Winde and Tyde thy friend,
This Hand, full wound about thy coale-black hayre,
Shall, whiles thy Head is warme, and new cut off,
Write in the dust this Sentence with thy blood,
Wind-changing Warwicke now can change no more.

Enter Oxford, with Drummes and Colours.

War. Oh cheerefull Colours, see where Oxford comes.

Oxf. Oxford, Oxford, for Lancaster.

Rich. The Gates are open, let vs enter too.

Edw. So other foes may set vpon our backs.
Stand we in good array: for they no doubt
Will issue out againe, and bid vs battaile;
If not, the Citie being but of small defence,
We'le quickly rouse the Traitors in the same.

War. Oh welcome Oxford, for we want thy helpe.

Enter Montague, with Drummes and Colours.

Mont. Montague, Montague, for Lancaster.

Rich. Thou and thy Brother both shall buy this Treason
Even with the deerest blood your bodies breeds.

Edw. The harder match, the greater Victorie,
My minde presageth happy gaine, and Conquest.

Enter Somerset, with Drummes and Colours.

Som. Somerset, Somerset, for Lancaster.

Rich. Two of thy Name, both Dukes of Somerset,
Have sold their Lives vnto the House of Yorke,
And thou shalt be the third, if this Sword hold.

Enter Clarence, with Drummes and Colours.

War. And lo, where George of Clarence sweepes along,
Of force enough to bid his Brother Battaile:
With whom, in vprightnesse of a right, preuailes
More then the nature of a Brothers Loue.
Come Clarence, come: thou wilt, if Warwicke call.

Clar. Father of Warwick, know you what this means?
Looke here, I throw my infamie at thee:
I will not ruinate my Fathers House,
Who gaue his blood to lyme the stones together,
And set vp Lancaster. Why, trowest thou, Warwicke,
That Clarence is so harsh, so blunt, vnnatural,
To bend the fatall Instruments of Warre

Against

Against his Brother, and his lawfull King.
Perhaps thou wilt object my holy Oath:
To keepe that Oath, were more impiety,
Then Iephah, when he sacrific'd his Daughter.
I am so sorry for my Trespas made,
That so desirous well as my Brothers hands,
I here proclaime my selfe thy mortall foe:
With resolution, wherefoe're I meet thee,
(As I will meet thee, if thou stirre abroad)
To plague thee, for thy foule mis-leading me.
And so, proud-hearted Warwicke, I defie thee,
And to my Brother turne my blushing Cheekes.
Pard on me Edward, I will make amends:
And Richard, doe not frowne vpon my faults,
For I will henceforth be no more vnconstant.

Edw. Now welcome more, and ten times more beloe'd,
Then if thou never hadst deserv'd our hate.

Rich. Welcome good Clarence, this is Brother-like.

War. Oh passing Traytor, perjur'd and vnkind.

Edw. What Warwicke,
Wilt thou leave the Towne, and fight?
Or shall we beat the Stones about thine Eares?

War. Alas, I am not coop'd here for defence:
I will away towards Barnet presently,
And bid thee Battaile, Edward, if thou dar'st.

Edw. Yes Warwicke, Edward dares, and leads the way:
Lords to the field: Saint George, and Victorie. Exeunt.

March. Warwicke and his company follows.

Alarum, and Excursions. Enter Edward bringing forth Warwicke wounded.

Edw. So, lye thou there: dye thou, and dye our feare,
For Warwicke was a Bugge that fear'd vs all.
Now Montagew sit fast, I seeke for thee,
That Warwicke's Bones may keepe thine companie. Exit.

War. Ah, who is nigh? come to me, friend, or foe,
And tell me who is Victor, Yorke, or Warwicke?
Why ask I that? my mangled body shewes,
My blood, my want of strength, my sicke heart shewes,
That I must yeeld my body to the Earth,
And by my fall, the conquest to my foe.
Thus yeelds the Cedar to the Axes edge,
Whose Armes gave shelter to the Princely Eagle,
Under whose shade the ramping Lyon slept,
Whose top-branch over-peer'd Iouis spreading Tree,
And kept low Shrubs from Winters pow'rfull Winde.
These Eyes, that now are dim'd with Death's black Veyle,
Have been as piercing as the Mid-day Sunne,
To search the secret Treasons of the World:
The Wrinckles in my Browes, now fill'd with blood,
Were lik'ned oft to Kingly Sepulchers:
For who liu'd King, but I could digge his Grave?
And who durst smile, when Warwicke bent his Browe?
Lee, now my Glory smear'd in dust and blood.
My Parkes, my Walkes, my Manors that I had,
Even now forsake me; and of all my Lands,
Is nothing left me, but my bodies length.
Why, what is Pompe, Rule, Reigne, but Earth and Dust?
And liue we how we can, yet dye we must.

Enter Oxford and Somerset.

Som. Ah Warwicke, Warwicke, wert thou as we are,
We might recouer all our Loss againe:
The Queene from France hath brought a puissant power.
Even now we heard the newes: ah, could'st thou flye.

War. Why then I would not flye. Ah Montagew,
If thou be there, sweet Brother, take my Hand,
And wish thy Lippes keepe in my Soule a while.
Thou lost'st me not: for, Brother, if thou didst,
Thy teares would wash this cold congealed blood,
That glewes my Lippes, and will not let me speake.
Come quickly Montagew, or I am dead.

Som. Ah Warwicke, Montagew hath breath'd his last,
And to the latest gaspe, cry'd out for Warwicke:
And said, Commend me to my valiant Brother.
And more he would haue said, and more he spoke,
Which sounded like a Cannon in a Vault,
That mought not be distinguished: but at last
I well might heare, deliuered with a groane,
Oh farewell Warwicke.

War. Sweet rest his Soule:
Flye Lords, and save your selues,
For Warwicke bids you all farewell, to meet in Heaven.

Oxf. Away, away, to meet the Queenes great power.
Here they bear away his Body. Exeunt.

Flourish. Enter King Edward in triumph, with Richard, Clarence, and the rest.

King. Thus farre our fortune keepes an vpward course,
And we are grac'd with wreaths of Victorie:
But in the midst of this bright-shining Day,
I spy a black suspicious threatning Cloud,
That will encounter with our glorious Sunne,
Ere he attaine his easefull Welterne Bed:
I meane, my Lords, those powers that the Queene
Hath rais'd in Gallia, have arriued our Coast,
And, as we heare, march on to fight with vs.

Clar. A little gale will soone disperse that Cloud,
And blow it to the Source from whence it came,
Thy very Beames will dry those Vapours vp,
For every Cloud engenders not a Storme.

Rich. The Queene is valued thirtie thousand strong,
And Somerset, with Oxford, fled to her:
If she have time to breathe, be well assur'd
Her faction will be full as strong as ours.

King. We are aduertis'd by our loyaing friends,
That they doe hold their course towards Tewksbury.
We having now the best at Barnet field,
Will thither straight, for willingnesse rids way,
And as we march, our strength will be augmented:
In every Countie as we goe along,
Strike vp the Drummes, cry courage, and away. Exeunt.

Flourish. March. Enter the Queene, young Edward, Somerset, Oxford, and Souldiers.

Qu. Great Lords, wise men ne'r sit and waile their losse,
But cheerely seeke how to redresse their harmes.
What though the Mast be now blowne over-board,
The Cable broke, the holding-Anchor lost,
And halfe our Saylors swallow'd in the flood?
Yet liues our Pilot still. Is't meet, that he Should leave the Helme, and like a fearefull Lad,
With tearefull Eyes adde Water to the Sea,
And give more strength to that which hath too much,
Whiles in his moane, the Ship splits on the Rock,
Which Industrie and Courage might haue saw'd?
Ah what a shame, ah what a fault were this.
Say Warwicke was our Anchor: what of that?

And Mountague our Top-Maſt: what of him?
Our ſlaughter'ed friends, the Tackles: what of theſe?
Why is not Oxford here, another Anchor?
And Somerſet, another goodly Maſt?
The friends of France our Shrowds and Tacklings?
And though vnskilfull, why not Ned and I,
For once allow'd the skilfull Pilots Charge?
We will not from the Helme, to ſit and weepe,
But keepe our Courſe (though the rough Winde ſay no)
From Shelues and Rocks, that threaten vs with Wreck.
As good to chide the Waues, as ſpeake them faire.
And what is Edward, but a ruthleſſe Sea?
What Clarence, but a Quick-ſand of Deceit?
And Richard, but a raged fatall Rocke?
All theſe, the Enemies to our poore Barke.
Say you can ſwim, alas 'tis but a while:
Tread on the Sand, why there you quickly ſinke,
Beſtride the Rock, the Tyde will waſh you off,
Or elſe you ſamiſh, that's a three-fold Death.
This ſpeake I (Lords) to let you vnderſtand,
If caſe ſome one of you would fly from vs,
That there's no hop'd-for Mercy with the Brothers,
More then with ruthleſſe Waues, with Sands and Rocks.
Why courage then, what cannot be auoided,
Twere childiſh weakneſſe to lament, or feare.

Prince. Me thinkes a Woman of this valiant Spirit,
Should, if a Coward heard her ſpeake theſe words,
Infuſe his Breaſt with Magnanimitie,
And make him, naked, foyle a man at Armes.
I ſpeake not this, as doubting any here:
For did I but ſuſpect a fearefull man,
He ſhould haue leaue to goe away betimes,
Leaſt in our need he might infect another,
And make him of like ſpirit to himſelfe.
If any ſuch be here, as God forbid,
Let him depart, before we neede his helpe.

Orf. Women and Children of ſo high a courage,
And Warriors faint, why 'twere perpetuall ſhame.
Oh braue young Prince: thy famous Grandfathers
Doth liue againe in thee; long may'ſt thou liue,
To beare his Image, and renew his Glories.

Som. And he that will not fight for ſuch a hope,
Goe home to Bed, and like the Owle by day,
If he ariſe, be mock'd and wondred at.

Qu. Thankes gentle Somerſet, ſweet Oxford thankes.

Prince. And take his thankes, that yet hath nothing elſe.

Enter a Meſſenger.

Meſſ. Prepare you Lords, for Edward is at hand,
Readie to fight: therefore be reſolute.

Orf. I thought no leſſe: it is his Policie,
To haſte thus faſt, to finde vs vnprouided.

Som. But hee's deceiu'd, we are in readineſſe.

Qu. This cheares my heart, to ſee your forwardneſſe.

Orf. Here pitch our Battaile, hence we will not budge.

Flourish, and march. Enter Edward, Richard, Clarence, and Souldiers.

Edw. Braue followers, yonder ſtands the thornie Wood,
Which by the Hewsners aſſiſtance, and your ſtrength,
Muſt by the Roots be hew'ne vp yet ere Night.
I need not adde more fuell to your fire,
For well I wot, ye blaze, to burne them out:
Giue ſignall to the fight, and to it Lords.

Qu. Lords, Knights, and Gentlemen, what I ſhould ſay,
My teares gaine-ſay: for every word I ſpeake,
Ye ſee I drinke the water of my eye.
Therefore no more but this: Henry your Souraigne
Is Priſoner to the Foe, his State vſurp'd,
His Realme a ſlaughter-houſe, his Subiects ſlaine,
His Statutes cancell'd, and his Treaſure ſpent:
And yonder is the Wolfe, that makes this ſpoyle.
You fight in Iuſtice: then in Gods Name, Lords,
Be valiant, and giue ſignall to the fight.

Alarum, Retreat, Excurſions. Exeunt.

Flourish. Enter Edward, Richard, Queene, Clarence, Oxford, Somerſet

Edw. Now here a period of tumultuous Broyles.
Away with Oxford to Hames Caſtle ſtraight:
For Somerſet, off with his guiltie Head
Goe beare them hence, I will not heare them ſpeake.

Orf. For my part, Ile not trouble thee with words.

Som. Nor I, but ſtoope with patience to my fortune.

Exeunt.

Qu. So part we ſadly in this troublous World,
To meet with Ioy in ſweet Ieruſalem.

Edw. Is Proclamation made, That who finds Edward,
Shall haue a high Reward, and he his Life?

Rich. It is, and lot where youthfull Edward comes.

Enter the Prince.

Edw. Bring forth the Gallant, let vs heare him ſpeake.
What? can ſo young a Thorne begin to prick?
Edward, what ſatisfaction canſt thou make,
For bearing Armes, for ſtirring vp my Subiects,
And all the trouble thou haſt turn'd me to?

Prince. Speake like a Subiect, proud ambitious Yorke.
Suppoſe that I am now my Fathers Mouth,
Reſigne thy Chayre, and where I ſtand, kneele thou,
Whil'ſt I propoſe the ſelfe-ſame words to thee,
Which (Traytor) thou would'ſt haue me anſwer to.

Qu. Ah, that thy Father had beene ſo reſolu'd.

Rich. That you might ſtill haue worne the Petticoat,
And ne're haue ſtolne the Breech from Lancaſter.

Prince. Let Aeſop fable in a Winters Night,
His Currſh Riddles ſorts not with this place.

Rich. By Heauen, Brat, I'le plague ye for that word.

Qu. I, thou wart borne to be a plague to men.

Rich. For Gods ſake, take away this Captiue Scold.

Prince. Nay, take away this ſcolding Crooke-backe, rather.

Edw. Peaſe-wiſſell Boy, or I will charme your tongue.

Clar. Vntutor'd Lad, thou art too malapert.

Prince. I know my duties, you are all vndutifull:
Laſciuious Edward, and thou periur'd George,
And thou miſ-ſhapen Dick, I tell ye all,
I am your better, Traytors as ye are,
And thou vſurp'ſt my Fathers right and mine.

Edw. Take that, the likeneſſe of this Rayler here.

Stabs him.

Rich. Sprawl'ſt thou? take that, to end thy agonie.

Rich. ſtabs him.

Clar. And there's for twitting me with perfidie.

Clar. ſtabs him.

Qu. Oh, kill me too.

Rich. Marry, and ſhall. Offers to kill her.

Edw. Hold, Richard, hold, for we haue done too much.

Rich. Why

Rich. Why should shee liue, to fill the World with words.

Edw. What? doth shee swowne? vse meanes for her recouerie.

Rich. Clarence excuse me to the King my Brother: Ile hence to London on a serious matter, Ere ye come there, be sure to heare some newes.

Cla. What? what?

Rich Tower, the Tower. Exit.

Qu. Oh Ned, sweet Ned, speake to thy Mother Boy. Can'st thou not speake? O Traitors, Murtherers! They that stabb'd Cæsar, shed no blood at all: Did not offend, nor were not worthy Blame, If this foule deed were by, to equall it. He was a Man; this (to respect) a Childe, And Men, ne're spend their fury on a Childe. What's worse then Murtherer, that I may name it? No, no, my heart will burst, and if I speake, And I will speake, that so my heart may burst. Butchers and Villaines, bloudy Cerballes, How sweet a Plant haue you vnkindly cropt: You haue no children (Butchers) if you had, The thought of them would haue stirr'd vp remorse, But if you euer chance to haue a Childe, Looke in his youth to haue him so cut off. As deathsmen you haue rid this sweet yong Prince.

King. Away with her, go beare her hence perforce.

Qu. Nay, neuer beare me hence, dispatch me heere: Here sheath thy Sword, Ile pardon thee my death: What? wilt thou not? Then Clarence do it thou.

Cla. By heauen, I will not do thee so much ease.

Qu. Good Clarence do: sweet Clarence do thou do it.

Cla. Did'st thou not heare me (sweare I would not do it?

Qu. I, but thou vsest to forsweare thy selfe. 'Twas Sin before, but now 'tis Charity. What wilt ye not? Where is that diuels butcher Richard? Hard fauor'd Richard? Richard, where art thou? Thou art not heere; Murther is thy Almes-deed: Petitioners for Blood, thou ne're put'st backe.

Ed. Away I say, I charge ye beare her hence.

Qu. So come to you, and yours, as to this Prince. Exit Queene.

Ed. Where's Richard gone.

Cla. To London all in post, and as I guesse, To make a bloody Supper in the Tower.

Ed. He's sodaine if a thing comes in his head. Now march we hence, discharge the common sort With Pay and Thankes, and let's away to London, And see our gentle Queene how well she fares, By this (I hope) she hath a Sonne for me. Exit.

Enter Henry the sixt, and Richard, with the Lieutenant on the Walles.

Rich. Good day, my Lord, what at your Booke so hard?

Hen. I my good Lord: my Lord I should say rather. 'Tis sinne to flatter. Good was little better: 'Good Gloster, and good Deuill, were alike, And both preposterous therefore, not Good Lord.

Rich. Sirra, leaue vs to our selues, we must conferre.

Hen. So flies the reckless shepherd from ye Wolfe: So first the harmlesse Sheepe doth yeeld his Fleece, And next his Throate, vnto the Butchers Knife. What Scene of death hath Roscius now to Acte?

Rich. Suspition alwayes haunts the guilty minde, The Theefe doth feare each bush an Officer.

Hen. The Bird that hath bin limed in a bush, With trembling wings misdoubteth euery bush; And I the hapless Male to one sweet Bird, Haue now the fatall Object in my eye, Where my poore yong was lim'd, was caught, and kill'd.

Rich. Why what a peeuish Foole was that of Creet, That taught his Sonne the office of a Fowle, And yet for all his wings, the Foole was drown'd.

Hen. I Dedalus, my poore Boy Icarus, Thy Father Minos, that dem'de our course, The Sunne that sear'd the wings of my sweet Boy. Thy Brother Edward, and thy Selfe, the Sea Whose enuious Gulfe did swallow vp his life: Ah, kill me with thy Weapon, not with words, My breast can better brooke thy Daggers point, Then can my eares that Tragicke History. But wherefore dost thou come? Is't for my Life?

Rich. Think'st thou I am an Executioner?

Hen. A Persecutor I am sure thou art, If murthering Innocents be Executing, Why then thou art an Executioner.

Rich. Thy Son I kill'd for his presumption.

Hen. Hadst thou bin kill'd, when first ye didst presume. Thou had'st not liu'd to kill a Sonne of mine: And thus I prophesie, that many a thousand, Which now mistrust no parcell of my feare, And many an old mans sighe, and many a Widdowes, And many an Orphans water-standing-eye, Men for their Sonnes, Wiues for their Husbands, Orphans, for their Parents timeles death, Shall rue the houre that euer thou was't borne. The Owle shriek'd at thy birth, an euill signe, The Night-Crow cry'de, abeding luckless time, Dogs howl'd, and hideous Tempest shook down Trees: The Rauen rook'd her on the Chimnies top, And chatt ring Pies in dismall Discords sung: Thy Mother felt more then a Mothers paine, And yet brought forth lesse then a Mothers hope, To wit, an indigested and deformed lumpe, Not like the fruit of such a goodly Tree. Teeth had'st thou in thy head, when thou was't borne, To signifie, thou cam'st to bite the world: And if the rest be true, which I haue heard, Thou cam'st———

Rich. Ile heare no more:
Dye Prophet in thy speech, Stabbes him.
For this (among'st the rest) was I ordain'd.

Hen. I, and for much more slaughter after this. O God forgiue my sinnes, and pardon thee. Dyes.

Rich. What? will the aspiring blood of Lancaster Sinke in the ground? I thought it would haue mounted. See how my sword weepes for the poore Kings death. O may such purple teares be alway shed From those that wish the downfall of our house. If any sparke of Life be yet remaining, Downe, downe to hell, and say I sent thee thither. Stabs him again.

I that haue neyther pitty, loue, nor feare, Indeed 'tis true that Henry told me of: For I haue often heard my Mother say, I came into the world with my Legges forward. Had I not reason (thinke ye) to make haste, And seeke their Ruine, that vsurp'd our Right? The Midwife wonder'd, and the Women cri'de O Iesus blesse vs, he is borne with teeth.

And

And so I was, which plainly signified,
That I should snarle, and bite, and play the dogge:
Then since the Heavens have shap'd my Body so,
Let Hell make crook'd my Minde to answer it.
I have no Brother, I am like no Brother:
And this word [Loue] which Grey-beards call Diuine,
Be resident in men like one another,
And not in me: I am my selfe alone.
Clarence beware, thou keep'st me from the Light,
But I will sore a pitchy day for thee:
For I will buzze abroad such Prophesies,
That Edward shall be feareful of his life,
And then to purge his feare, Ile be thy death.
King Henry, and the Prince his Son are gone,
Clarence thy turne is next, and then the rest,
Counting my selfe but bad, till I be best.
Ile throw thy body in another roome,
And Triumph Henry, in thy day of Doome. Exit

Flourish. Enter King, Queene, Clarence, Richard, Hastings, Norfolk, and Attendants.

King. Once more we sit in Englands Royall Throne,
Re-purchac'd with the Blood of Enemies:
What valiant Foe-men, like to Autumnes Corne,
Haue we mow'd downe in tops of all their pride?
Three Dukes of Somerset, threefold Renowme,
For hardy and vndaunted Champions:
Two Clifords, as the Father and the Sonne,
And two Northumberlands: two braue men,
Ne're spurr'd their Coursers at the Trumpets sound.
With them, the two braue Beares, Warwick & Montague,
That in their Chaines fetter'd the Kingly Lyon,
And made the Forrest tremble when they roar'd.
Thus haue we swept Suspicion from our Seate,
And made our Footstoole of Security.
Come hither Bess, and let me kisse my Boy:
Kong Ned, for thee, thine Vncles, and my selfe,
Haue in our Armors watcht the Winters night,
Went all afoote in Summers scalding heate,
That thou might'st repossesse the Crowne in peace,
And of our Labours thou shalt reape the gaine.
Rich. Ile blast his Harvest, if your head were laid,
For yet I am not look'd on in the world.
This shoulder was ordain'd so thicke, to heave,
And heave it shall some waight, or breake my backe,
Work thou the way, and that shalt execute.
King. Clarence and Glester, loue my louely Queene,
And 'tis your Princely Nephew Brothers both.
Cla. The duty that I owe vnto your Maiesty,
I Seale vpon the lips of this sweet Babe.
Cla. Thanke Noble Clarence, worthy brother thanks.
Rich. And that I loue the tree frō whence ſ spring'ſt
Witnesse the louing kisse I giue the Fruite,
To say the truth, so Iudas kist his master,
And cried all haile, when as he meant all harme.
King. Now am I seated as my soule delights,
Having my Countries peace, and Brothers loues.
Cla. What will your Grace haue done with Margaret,
Reyner her Father, to the King of France
Hath pawn'd the Sicile and Ierusalem,
And hither haue they sent it for her ransome.
King. Away with her, and waft her hence to France:
And now what rests, but that we spend the time
With stately Triumphes, mirthfull Comicke shewes,
Such as beseeme the pleasure of the Court.
Sound Drums and Trumpets, farwell sowre annoy,
For heere I hope begins our lasting ioy Exeunt omnes

FINIS.

The Tragedy of Richard the Third: with the Landing of Earle Richmond, and the Battell at Bosworth Field.

Actus Primus. Scæna Prima.

Enter Richard Duke of Glester solus.

NOw is the Winter of our Discontent,
Made glorious Summer by this Son of Yorke:
And all the clouds that lowr'd vpon our house
In the deepe bosome of the Ocean buried.
Now are our browes bound with Victorious Wreathes,
Our bruised armes hung vp for Monuments;
Our sterne Alarums chang'd to merry Meetings;
Our dreadfull Marches, to delightfull Measures.
Grim-visag'd Warre, hath smooth'd his wrinkled Front:
And now, in stead of mounting Barbed Steeds,
To fright the Soules of fearfull Aduersaries,
He capers nimbly in a Ladies Chamber,
To the lascinious pleasing of a Lute.
But I, that am not shap'd for sportiue tricks,
Nor made to court an amorous Looking-glasse:
I, that am Rudely stamp, and want loues Maiesty,
To strut before a wanton ambling Nymph:
I, that am curtail'd of this faire Proportion,
Cheated of Pleasure by dissembling Nature,
Deform'd, vn-finish'd, sent before my time
Into this breathing World, scarse half made vp,
And that so lamely and vnfashionable,
That dogges barke at me, as I halt by them.
Why I (in this weake piping time of Peace)
Haue no delight to passe away the time,
Vnlesse to see my Shadow in the Sunne,
And descant on mine owne Deformity.
And therefore, since I cannot proue a Lover,
To entertaine these faire well spoken dayes,
I am determined to proue a Villaine,
And hate the idle pleasures of these dayes.
Plots haue I laide, Inductions dangerous,
By drunken Prophecies, Libels, and Dreames,
To set my Brother Clarence and the King
In deadly hate, the one against the other:
And if King Edward be as true and iust,
As I am Subtle, False, and Treacherous,
This day should Clarence closely be mew'd vp
About a Prophesie, which sayes that G,
Of Edwards heyres the murtherer shall be.
Dyue thoughts downe to my soule. here Clarence comes.

Enter Clarence and Brakenbury, guarded.

Brother, good day: What means this armed guard
That waites vpon your Grace?
Cla. His Maiesty tendring my persons safety,
Hath appointed this Conduct, to conuey me to th'Tower
Rich. Vpon what cause?
Cla. Because my name is George.
Rich. Alas, my Lord, that fault is none of yours:
He should for that commit your Godfathers.
O belike, his Maiesty hath some intent,
That you should be new Christned in the Tower.
But what's the matter Clarence, may I know?
Cla. Yes Richard, when I know: but I protest
As yet I do not: But as I can learne,
He harkens after Prophesies and Dreames,
And from the Crosse-row plucke the letter G:
And sayes, a Wizard told him, that by G,
His issue disinherited should be.
And for my name of George begins with G,
It followes in his thought, that I am he.
These (as I learne) and such like toyes as these,
Hath moou'd his Highnesse to commit me now.
Rich. Why this it is, when men are rul'd by Women
'Tis not the King that sends you to the Tower,
My Lady Grey his Wife, Clarence 'tis shee,
That tempts him to this harsh Extremity.
Was it not shee, and that good man of Worship,
Anthony Woodeuile her Brother there,
That made him send Lord Hastings to the Tower?
From whence this present day he is deliuered?
We are not safe Clarence, we are not safe.
Cla. By heauen, I thinke there is no man secure
But the Queenes Kindred, and night-walking Heralds,
That trudge betwixt the King, and Mistris Shore.
Heard you not what an humble Suppliant
Lord Hastings was, for her deliuery?
Rich. Humbly complaining to her Deitie,
Got my Lord Chamberlaine his libertie
I'le tell you what, I thinke it is our way,
If we will keepe in fauour with the King,
To be her men, and weare her Liuery.
The iealous o're-worne Widdow, and her selfe,
Since that our Brother dub'd them Gentlewomen,
Are mighty Gossips in our Monarchy.
Bra. I beseech your Graces both to pardon me,
His Maiesty hath straightly giuen in charge,
That no man shall haue priuate Conferences
(Of what degree soeuer) with your Brother.

Rich.

Rich. Even so, and please your Worship Brakenbury,
You may partake of any thing we say:
We speake no Treason men; We say the King
Is wise and vertuous, and his Noble Queene
Well stroake in yeares, faire, and not iealious.
We say, that Shores Wife hath a pretty Foot,
A cherry Lip, a bonny Eye, a pleasing pleasing tongue:
And that the Queenes Kindred are made gentle Folkes.
How say you sir? can you deny all this?
Bra. With this (my Lord) my selfe haue nought to doo.
Rich. Naught to do with Mistris Shore?
I tell thee Fellow, he that doth naught with her
(Excepting one) were best to do it secretly alone.
Bra. What one, my Lord?
Rich. Her Husband Knaue, would'st thou betray me?
Bra. I do beseech your Grace
To pardon me, and withall forbeare
Your Conference with the Noble Duke.
Cla. We know thy charge Brakenbury, and wil obey.
Rich. We are the Queenes abiects, and must obey.
Brother farewell, I will vnto the King,
And whatsoe're you will imploy me in,
Were it to call King Edwards Widdow, Sister,
I will performe it to infranchise you.
Meane time, this deepe disgrace in Brotherhood,
Touches me deeper then you can imagine.
Cla. I know it pleaseth neither of vs well.
Rich. Well, your imprisonment shall not be long,
I will deliuer you, or else lye for you:
Meane time, haue patience.
Cla. I must perforce: Farewell. Exit Clar.
Rich Go tread the path that thou shalt ne're return:
Simple plaine Clarence, I do loue thee so,
That I will shortly send thy Soule to Heauen,
If Heauen will take the present at our hands.
But who comes heere? the new deliuered Hastings?

Enter Lord Hastings.

Has. Good time of day vnto my gracious Lord.
Rich. As much vnto my good Lord Chamberlaine:
Well are you welcome to this open Ayre,
How hath your Lordship brook'd imprisonment?
Has. With patience (Noble Lord) as prisoners must:
But I shall liue (my Lord) to giue them thankes
That were the cause of my imprisonment.
Rich. No doubt, no doubt, and so shall Clarence too,
For they that were your Enemies, are his,
And haue preuail'd as much on him, as you.
Has. More pitty, that the Eagles should be mew'd,
Whiles Kites and Buzzards play at liberty.
Rich. What newes abroad?
Has. No newes so bad abroad, as this at home:
The King is sickly, weake, and melancholly,
And his Physitians feare him mightily.
Rich. Now by S. John, that Newes is bad indeed.
O he hath kept an euill Diet long,
And ouer-much consum'd his Royall Person:
'Tis very grieuous to be thought vpon.
Where is he, in his bed?
Has. He is.
Rich. Go you before, and I will follow you.
Exit Hastings.
He cannot liue I hope, and must not dye,
Till George be pack'd with post-horse vp to Heauen.
Ile in to vrge his hatred more to Clarence,
With Lyes well steel'd with weighty Arguments,
And if I fail not in my deepe intent,
Clarence hath not another day to liue:
Which done, God take King Edward to his mercy,
And leaue the world for me to buisle in.
For then, Ile marry Warwickes youngest daughter.
What though I kill'd her Husband, and her Father,
The readiest way to make the Wench amends,
Is to become her Husband, and her Father:
The which will I, not all so much for loue,
As for another secret close intent,
By marrying her, which I must reach vnto;
But yet I run before my horse to Market:
Clarence still breathes, Edward still liues and raigns,
When they are gone, then must I count my gaines. Exit

Scena Secunda.

Enter the Corse of Henrie the sixt with Halberds to guard it, Lady Anne being the Mourner.

Anne. Set downe, set downe your honourable load,
If Honor may be shrouded in a Herse;
Whil'st I a-while obsequiously lament
Th'vntimely fall of Vertuous Lancaster.
Poore key-cold Figure of a holy King,
Pale Ashes of the House of Lancaster;
Thou bloodlesse Remnant of that Royall Blood,
Be it lawfull that I inuocate thy Ghost,
To hearc the Lamentations of poore Anne,
Wife to thy Edward, to thy slaughtered Sonne,
Stab'd by the selfesame hand that made these wounds.
Loe, in these windowes that let forth thy life,
I powre the helplesse Balme of my poore eyes.
O cursed be the hand that made these holes:
Cursed the Heart, that had the heart to do it:
Cursed the Blood, that let this blood from hence:
More direfull hap betide that hated Wretch
That makes vs wretched by the death of thee,
Then I can wish to Wolues, to Spiders, Toades,
Or any creeping venom'd thing that lives.
If euer he haue Childe, Abortiue be it,
Prodigious, and vntimely brought to light,
Whose vgly and vnnaturall Aspect
May fright the hopefull Mother at the view,
And that be Heyre to his vnhappinesse.
If euer he haue Wife, let her be made
More miserable by the death of him,
Then I am made by my young Lord, and thee.
Come now towards Chertsey with your holy Lode,
Taken from Paules, to be interred there.
And still as you are weary of this weight,
Rest you, whiles I lament King Henries Corse.

Enter Richard Duke of Glocester

Rich. Stay you that beare the Corse, & set it down.
An. What blacke Magitian coniures vp this Fiend,
To stop deuoted charitable deeds?
Rich. Villaines set downe the Corse, or by S. Paul,
Ile make a Corse of him that disobeyes.

Gen. My Lord stand backe, and let the Coffin passe.
Rich. Vnmanner'd Dogge,
Stand'st thou when I commaund:
Advance thy Halbert higher then my breft,
Or by S. Paul Ile strike thee to my Foote,
And spurne vpon thee Begger for thy boldnesse.
Anne. What do you trembler? are you all afraid?
Alas, I blame you not, for you are Mortall,
And Mortall eyes cannot endure the Diuell.
Auaunt thou dreadfull minister of Hell;
Thou had'st but power ouer his Mortall body,
His Soule thou canst not haue: Therefore be gone.
Rich. Sweet Saint, for Charity, be not so curst.
An. Foule Diuell,
For Gods sake hence, and trouble vs not,
For thou hast made the happy earth thy Hell:
Fill'd it with cursing cries, and deepe exclaimes:
If thou delight to view thy heynous deeds,
Behold this pattern of thy Butcheries.
Oh Gentlemen, see, see dead Henries wounds,
Open their congeal'd mouthes, and bleed afresh.
Blush, blush, thou lampe of foule Deformitie:
For 'tis thy presence that exhales this blood
From cold and empty Veines where no blood dwells.
Thy Deeds inhumane and vnnaturall,
Prouokes this Deluge most vnnaturall.
O God! which this Blood mad'st, reuenge his death:
O Earth! which this Blood drink'st, reuenge his death.
Either Heau'n with Lightning strike the murth'rer dead:
Or Earth gape open wide, and eate him quicke,
As thou dost swallow vp this good Kings blood,
Which his Hell-gouern'd arme hath butchered.
Rich. Lady, you know no Rules of Charity,
Which renders good for bad, Blessings for Curses.
An. Villaine, thou know'st nor law of God nor Man,
No Beast so fierce, but knowes some touch of pitty.
Rich. But I know none, and therefore am no Beast.
An. O wonderfull, when diuels tell the truth!
Rich. More wonderfull, when Angels are so angry:
Vouchsafe (diuine perfection of a Woman)
Of these supposed Crimes, to giue me leaue
By circumstance, but to acquit my selfe.
An. Vouchsafe (defus'd infection of man)
Of these knowne euils, but to giue me leaue
By circumstance, to curse thy cursed Selfe.
Rich. Fairer then tongue can name thee, let me haue
Some patient leysure to excuse my selfe.
An. Fouler then heart can thinke thee,
Thou can'st make no excuse currant,
But to hang thy selfe.
Rich. By such disposition, I should accuse my selfe.
An. And by disposing shalt thou stand excused,
For doing worthy Vengeance on thy selfe,
That did'st vnworthy slaughter vpon others.
Rich. Say thou I slew them not.
An. Then say they were not slaine:
But dead they are, and diuellish slaue by thee.
Rich. I did not kill your Husband.
An. Why then he is aliue.
Rich. Nay, he is dead, and slaine by Edwards hands.
An. In thy foule throat thou Ly'st,
Queene Margaret saw
Thy mand'rous Faulchion smoaking in his blood:
The which, thou once didd'st bend against her breft,
But that thy Brothers beate aside the point.
Rich. I was prouoked by her sland'rous tongue,
That laid their guilt, vpon my guiltlesse Shoulders.
An. Thou was't prouoked by thy bloody minde,
That neuer dream'st on ought but Butcheries:
Did'st thou not kill this King?
Rich. I graunt ye.
An. Do'st grant me Hedge-hogge,
Then God graunt me too
Thou may'st be damned for that wicked deede,
O he was gentle, milde, and vertuous.
Rich. The better for the King of heauen that hath him.
An. He is in heauen, where thou shalt never come.
Rich. Let him thanke me, that holpe to send him thither:
For he was fitter for that place then earth.
An. And thou vnfit for any place, but hell.
Rich. Yes one place else, if you will heare me name it.
An. Some dungeon.
Rich. Your Bed-chamber.
An. Ill rest betide the chamber where thou lyest.
Rich. So will it Madam, till I lye with you.
An. I hope so.
Rich. I know so. But gentle Lady Anne,
To leaue this keene encounter of our wittes,
And fall something into a slower method.
Is not the causer of the timeless deaths
Of these Plantagenet, Henrie and Edward,
As blamefull as the Executioner.
An. Thou was't the cause, and most accurst effect.
Rich. Your beauty was the cause of that effect:
Your beauty, that did haunt me in my sleepe,
To vndertake the death of all the world,
So I might liue one houre in your sweet bosome.
An. If I thought that, I tell thee Homicide,
These Nailes should rent that beauty from my Cheekes.
Rich. These eyes could not endure y beauties wreck,
You should not blemish it, if I stood by;
As all the world is cheared by the Sunne,
So I by thee: It is my day, my life.
An. Blacke night ore-shade thy day, & death thy life.
Rich. Curse not thy selfe faire Creature,
Thou art both.
An. I would I were, to be reuenge'd on thee.
Rich. It is a quarrell most vnnaturall,
To be reuenge'd on him that loueth thee.
An. It is a quarrell iust and reasonable,
To be reuenge'd on him that killd my Husband.
Rich. He that bereft the Lady of thy Husband,
Did it to helpe thee to a better Husband.
An. His better doth not breath vpon the earth.
Rich. He liues, that loues thee better then he could.
An. Name him.
Rich. Plantagenet.
An. Why that was he.
Rich. The selfesame name, but one of better Nature.
An. Where is he?
Rich. Heere: Spits at him.
Why dost thou spit at me.
An. Would it were mortall poyson, for thy sake.
Rich. Never came poyson from so sweet a place.
An. Never hung poyson on a fowler Toade.
Out of my sight, thou dost infect mine eyes.
Rich. Thine eyes (sweet Lady) haue infected mine.
An. Would they were Basilisks, to strike thee dead.
Rich. I would they were, that I might dye at once:
For now they kill me with a liuing death.
These eyes of thine, from mine haue drawne salt Teares;

For

Sham'd thyne Aspects with store of childish drops:
These eyes, which never shed remorseless teare,
No, when my Father Yorke, and Edward wept,
To heare the pittious moane that Rutland made
When blacke-fac'd Clifford shooke his sword at him.
Nor when thy warlike Father like a Childe,
Told the sad storie of my Fathers death,
And twenty times, made pause to sob and weepe:
That all the standers by had wet their cheekes
Like Trees bedash'd with raine. In that sad time,
My manly eyes did scorne an humble teare:
And what these sorrowes could not thence exhale,
Thy Beauty hath, and made them blinde with weeping.
I never sued to Friend, nor Enemy:
My Tongue could never learne sweet smoothing word.
But now thy Beauty is proposed my Foe,
My proud heart sues, and prompts my tongue to speake.
She looks scornfully at him.
Teach not thy lip such Scorne; for it was made
For kissing Lady, not for such contempt.
If thy resentefull heart cannot forgive,
Lo heere I lend thee this sharpe-pointed Sword,
Which if thou please to hide in this true breft,
And let the Soule forth that adoreth thee,
I lay it naked to the deadly stroke,
And humbly begge the death vpon my knee.
He lays his breft open, she offers at with his sword.
Nay do not pause: For I did kill King Henrie,
But 'twas thy Beauty that provoked me.
Nay now dispatch: 'Twas I that stabb'd yong Edward,
But 'twas thy Heavenly face that sax me on.
She falls the Sword.
Take vp the Sword againe, or take vp me.
An. Arise Dissembler, though I wish thy death,
I will not be thy Executioner.
Rich. Then bid me kill my selfe, and I will do it.
An. I have already.
Rich. That was in thy rage:
Speake it againe, and even with the word,
This hand, which for thy love, did kill thy Love,
Shall for thy love, kill a farre truer Love,
To both their deaths shalt thou be accessary.
An. I would I knew thy heart.
Rich. 'Tis figur'd in my tongue.
An. I feare me, both are false.
Rich. Then never Man was true.
An. Well, well, put vp your Sword.
Rich. Say then my Peace is made.
An. That shalt thou know heereafter.
Rich. But shall I live in hope.
An. All men I hope live so.
Vouchsafe to weare this Ring.
Rich. Looke how my Ring incompasseth thy Finger,
Even so thy Breft incloseth my poore heart:
Weare both of them, for both of them are thine.
And if thy poore devoted Servant may
But beg one favour at thy gracious hand,
Thou dost confirme his happinesse for ever.
An. What is it?
Rich. That it may please you leave these sad designes,
To him that hath most cause to be a Mourner,
And presently repayre to Crosbie House:
Where (after I have solemnly interr'd
At Chertsey Monast'ry this Noble King,
And wet his Grave with my Repentant Teares)
I will with all expedient duty see you.
For divers unknowne Reasons, I beseech you,
Grant me this Boon.
An. With all my heart, and much it joyes me too,
To see you are become so penitent.
Tressel and Berkley, go along with me.
Rich. Bid me farwell.
An. 'Tis more then you deserve:
But since you teach me how to flatter you,
Imagine I have said farewell already.
Exit two with Anne.
Gent. Towards Chertsey, Noble Lord?
Rich. Not to White Friars, there stand my attendants.
Exit Gent.
Was ever woman in this humour woo'd?
Was ever woman in this humour wonne?
Ile have her, but I will not keepe her long.
What? I that kill'd her Husband, and his Father,
To take her in her heart extremest hate,
With curses in her mouth, Teares in her eyes,
The bleeding witnesse of my hatred by,
Having God, her Conscience, and these bars against me,
And I, no Friends to backe my suite withall,
But the plaine Devill, and dissembling looks?
And yet to winne her? All the world is nothing.
Hah!
Hath she forgot already that brave Prince,
Edward, her Lord, whom I (some three monthes since)
Stab'd in my angry mood, at Tewkesbury?
A sweeter, and a lovelier Gentleman,
Fram'd in the prodigality of Nature:
Yong, Valiant, Wise, and (no doubt) right Royall,
The spacious World cannot againe afford:
And will she yet abase her eyes on me,
That crept the Golden prime of this sweet Prince,
And made her Widdow to a woefull Bed?
On me, whose All not equals Edwards Moyety?
On me, that halts, and am misshapen thus?
My Dukedome, to a Beggerly denier!
I do mistake my person all this while:
Vpon my life she finds (although I cannot)
My selfe to be a marv'llous proper man.
Ile be at Charges for a Looking-glasse,
And entertaine a score or two of Tylors,
To study fashions to adorne my body:
Since I am crept in favour with my selfe,
I will maintaine it with some little cost.
But first Ile turne yon Fellow in his Grave,
And then returne lamenting to my Love.
Shine out faire Sunne, till I have bought a glasse,
That I may see my Shadow as I passe. exit.

Scena Tertia.

Enter the Queene Mother, Lord Rivers, and Lord Grey.

Riv. Have patience Madam, ther's no doubt his Maiesty
Will soone recover his accustom'd health.
Grey. In that you brooke it ill, it makes him worse,
Therefore for Gods sake entertaine good comfort,
And cheere his Grace with quicke and merry eyes.
Qu. If he were dead, what would betide on me?
Grey.

If he were dead, what would betide on me?
Grey. No other harme, but losse of such a Lord.
Qu. The losse of such a Lord, includes all harmes.
Grey. The Heavens have blest you with a goodly Son,
To be your Comforter, when he is gone.
Qu. Ah! he is yong; and his minority
Is put vnto the trust of Richard Glouster,
A man that loues not me, nor none of you.
Rip. Is it concluded he shall be Protector?
Qu. It is determin'd, not concluded yet:
But so it must be, if the King miscarry.

Enter Buckingham and Derby.

Grey. Here comes the Lord of Buckingham & Derby.
Buc. Good time of day vnto your Royall Grace.
Der. God make your Maiesty ioyful, as you haue bin
Qu. The Countesse Richmond, good my Lord Derby.
To your good prayer, will scarsely say, Amen.
Yet Derby, notwithstanding shee's your wife,
And loues not me, be you good Lord assur'd,
I hate not you for her proud arrogance.
Der. I do beseech you, either not beleeue
The enuious slanders of her false Accusers:
Or if she be accus'd on true report,
Beare with her weaknesse, which I thinke proceeds
From wayward sicknesse, and no grounded malice.
Qu. Saw you the King to day my Lord of Derby.
Der. But now the Duke of Buckingham and I,
Are come from visiting his Maiesty.
Qu. What likelyhood of his amendment Lords.
Buc. Madam good hope, his Grace speaks chearfully.
Qu. God grant him health, did you confer with him?
Buc. I Madam, he desires to make attonement
Betweene the Duke of Glouster, and your Brothers,
And betweene them, and my Lord Chamberlaine,
And sent to warne them to his Royall presence.
Qu. Would all were well, but that will neuer be,
I feare our happinesse is at the height.

Enter Richard.

Rich. They do me wrong and I will not indure it,
Who is it that complaines vnto the King,
That I (forsooth) am sterne, and loue them not?
By holy Paul, they loue his Grace but lightly.
That fill his eares with such dissentious Rumors.
Because I cannot flatter, and looke faire,
Smile in mens faces, smooth, deceiue, and cogge,
Ducke with French nods, and Apish curtesie,
I must be held a rancorous Enemy.
Cannot a plaine man liue, and thinke no harme,
But thus his simple truth must be abus'd,
With silken, sly, insinuating Iackes?
Grey. To who in all this presence speaks your Grace?
Rich. To thee, that hast not Honesty, nor Grace:
When haue I iniur'd thee? When done thee wrong?
Or thee? or thee? or any of your Faction?
A plague vpon you all. His Royall Grace
(Whom God preserue better then you would wish)
Cannot be quiet scarse a breathing while,
But you must trouble him with lewd complaints.
Qu. Brother of Glouster, you mistake the matter:
The King on his owne Royall disposition,
(And not prouok'd by any Suitor else)
Aiming (belike) at your interiour hatred,
That in your outward action shewes it selfe
Against my Children, Brothers, and my Selfe,
Makes him to send, that he may learne the ground.
Rich. I cannot tell, the world is growne so bad,
That Wrens make prey, where Eagles dare not peirch.
Since euerie Iacke became a Gentleman,
There's many a gentle person made a Iacke.
Qu. Come, come, we know your meaning Brother
You enuy my aduancement, and my friends: (Glouster
God grant we neuer may haue neede of you.
Rich. Meane time, God grants that I haue need of you.
Our Brother is imprison'd by your meanes,
My selfe disgrac'd, and the Nobilitie
Held in contempt, while great Promotions
Are daily giuen to ennoble those
That scarse some two dayes since were worth a Noble.
Qu. By him that rais'd me to this carefull height,
From that contented hap which I inioy'd,
I neuer did incense his Maiestie
Against the Duke of Clarence, but haue bin
An earnest aduocate to plead for him.
My Lord you do me shamefull iniurie,
Falsely to draw me in these vile suspects.
Rich. You may deny that you were not the meane
Of my Lord Hastings late imprisonment.
Riu. She may my Lord, for———
Rich. She may Lord Riuers. why who knowes not so?
She may do more sir then denying that:
She may helpe you to many faire preferments,
And then deny her ayding hand therein,
And lay those Honors on your high desert.
What may she not, she may, I marry may she.
Riu. What marry may she?
Rich. What marrie may she? Marrie with a King,
A Batcheller, and a handsome stripling too,
I wis your Grandam had a worser match.
Qu. My Lord of Glouster, I haue too long borne
Your blunt vpbraidings, and your bitter scoffes:
By heauen, I will acquaint his Maiestie
Of those grosse taunts that oft I haue endur'd.
I had rather be a Countrie seruant maide
Then a great Queene, with this condition,
To be so baited, scorn'd, and stormed at,
Small ioy haue I in being Englands Queene.

Enter old Queene Margaret.

Mar. And lesse be that small, God I beseech him,
Thy honor, state, and seate, is due to me.
Rich. What? threat you me with telling of the King?
I will auouch't in presence of the King:
I dare adventure to be sent to th'Towre.
'Tis time to speake,
My paines are quite forgot.
Margaret. Out Diuell,
I do remember them too well:
Thou killd'st my Husband Henrie in the Tower,
And Edward my poore Son, at Tewkesburie.
Rich. Ere you were Queene,
I, or your Husband King:
I was a packe-horse in his great affaires:
A weeder out-of his proud Aduersaries,
A liberall rewarder of his Friends,
To royalize his blood. I spent mine owne.
Margaret. I and much better blood
Then his, or thine.

Rich. In all which time, you and your Husband Grey
Were factious, for the House of Lancaster;
And Rivers, so were you: Was not your Husband,
In Margarets Battaile, at Saint Albans, slaine?
Let me put in your minides, if you forget
What you have beene ere thisy and what you are:
Withall, what I have beene, and what I am.

Q.M. A murtherous Villaine, and so still thou art.

Rich. Poore Clarence did forsake his Father Warwicke,
I, and forswore himselfe (which Iesu pardon.)

Q.M. Which God revenge.

Rich. To fight on Edwards partie, for the Crowne,
And for his meede, poore Lord, he is mewed up:
I would to God my heart were Flint, like Edwards,
Or Edwards soft and pittifull, like mine;
I am too childish foolish for this World.

Q.M. High thee to Hell for shame, & leave this World
Thou Cacodemon, there thy Kingdome is.

Riv. My Lord of Gloster: in those busie dayes,
Which here you vrge, to prove vs Enemies,
We follow'd then our Lord, our Soueraigne King,
So should we you, if you should be our King.

Rich. If I should be? I had rather be a Pedler:
Farre be it from my heart, the thought thereof.

Qu. As little ioy (my Lord) as you suppose
You should enioy, were you this Countries King,
As little ioy you may suppose in me,
That I enioy, being the Queene thereof.

Q.M. A little ioy enoyes the Queene thereof,
For I am shee, and altogether roylesse:
I can no longer hold me patient.
Heare me, you wrangling Pyrates, that fall out,
In sharing that which you have pill'd from me:
Which of you trembles not, that looks on me?
If not, that I am Queene, you bow like Subiects;
Yet that by you depos'd, you quake like Rebells.
Ah gentle Villaine, doe not turne away. (Sight?

Rich. Foule wrinckled Witch, what mak'st thou in my

Q.M. But repetition of what thou hast marr'd,
That will I make, before I let thee goe.

Rich. Wert thou not banished, on paine of death?

Q.M. I was: but I doe find more paine in banishment,
Than death can yeeld me here, by my abode.
A Husband and a Sonne thou ow'st to me,
And thou a Kingdome; all of you, allegeance:
This Sorrow that I have, by right is yours,
And all the Pleasures you vsurpe, are mine.

Rich. The Curse my Noble Father layd on thee,
When thou didst Crown his Warlike Brows with Paper
And with thy scornes drew'st Riuets from his eyes,
And then to dry them, gau'st the Duke a Clowt,
Steep'd in the faultlesse blood of pretie Rutland,
His Curses then, from bitternesse of Soule,
Denounc'd against thee, are all falne vpon thee:
And God, not we, hath plagu'd thy bloody deed.

Qu. So just is God, to right the innocent.

Hast. O, 'twas the foulest deed to slay that Babe,
And the most merciless, that ere was heard of.

Riv. Tyrants themselues wept when it was reported.

Dorf. No man but prophecied reuenge for it.

Buck. Northumberland, then present, wept to see it.

Q.M. What? were you snarling all before I came,
Ready to catch each other by the throat,
And turne you all your hatred now on me?
Did Yorks dread Curse preuaile so much with Heaven,
That Henrys death, my louely Edwards death,
Their Kingdomes losse, my wofull Banishment,
Should all but answer for that peeuish Brat?
Can Curses pierce the Clouds, and enter Heauen?
Why then glaze wry dull Clouds to my quick Curses.
Though not by Warre, by Surfet dye your King,
As ours by Murther, to make him a King.
Edward thy Sonne, that now is Prince of Wales,
For Edward our Sonne, that was Prince of Wales,
Dye in his youth, by like extremely violence.
Thy selfe a Queene, for me that was a Queene,
Out-lue thy glory, like my wretched selfe:
Long may'st thou liue, to wayle thy Childrens death,
And see another, as I see thee now,
Deck'd in thy Rights, as thou art stall'd in mine.
Long dye thy happie dayes, before thy death,
And after many length'ned hours of griefe,
Dye neyther Mother, Wife, nor Englands Queene.
Rivers and Dorset, you were standers by,
And so wast thou, Lord Hastings, when my Sonne
Was stab'd with bloody Daggers: God, I pray him,
That none of you may liue his naturall age,
But by some vnlook'd accident cut off.

Rich. Haue done thy Charme, thou hateful wither'd Hagge.

Q.M. And leaue out thee? stay Dog, for thou shalt heare me.
If Heauen haue any grieuous plagues in store,
Exceeding those that I can wish vpon thee,
O let them keepe it, till thy sinnes be ripe,
And then harle downe their indignation
On thee, the troubler of the poore World's peace.
The Worme of Conscience still begnaw thy Soule.
Thy Friends suspect for Traytors while thou liu'st,
And take deepe Traytors for thy dearest Friends.
No sleepe close vp that deadly Eye of thine,
Vnlesse it be while some tormenting Dreame
Affrights thee with a Hell of ougly Deuills.
Thou elvish mark'd, abortiue rooting Hagge,
Thou that wast seal'd in thy Nativitie
The slaue of Nature, and the Sonne of Hell:
Thou slander of thy heauie Mothers Wombe,
Thou loathed Issue of thy Fathers Loynes,
Thou Ragge of Honor, thou detested—

Rich. Margaret.

Q.M. Richard. Rich. Ha.

Q.M. I call thee title.

Rich. I cry thee mercie then: for I did thinke,
That thou hadst call'd me all these bitter names.

Q.M. Why so I did, but look'd for no reply.
Oh let me make the Period to my Curse.

Rich. 'Tis done by me, and ends in Margaret.

Qu. Thus haue you breath'd your Curse against your self.

Q.M. Poore painted Queene, vain flourish of my fortune,
Why strew'st thou Sugar on that Bottel'd Spider,
Whose deadly Web ensnareth thee about?
Foole, foole, thou whet'st a Knife to kill thy selfe:
The day will come, that thou shalt wish for me,
To helpe thee curse this poysonous Bunch-backt Toade.

Hast. False boding Woman, end thy frantick Curse,
Least to thy harme, thou moue our patience.

Q.M. Foule shame vpon you, you haue all moy'd mine.

Ri. Were you well serv'd, you would be taught your duty.

Q.M. To serue me well, you all should do me duty,
Teach me to be your Queene, and you my Subiects:
O serue me well, and teach yourselues that duty.

Dorf. Dispute not with her, shee is lunaticke.

Q.M. Peace Master Marquesse, you are malapert,
Your first-new stampe of Honor is scarce current.

O that your young Nobility could iudge
What 'twere to lose it, and be miserable.
They that stand high, haue many blasts to shake them,
And if they fall, they dash themselues to peeces.
Rich. Good counsaile marry, learne it, learne it Marquesse.
Dor. It touches you my Lord, as much as me.
Rich. I, and much more: but I was borne so high:
Our aerie buildeth in the Cedars top,
And dallies with the winde, and scornes the Sonne.
Mar. And turnes the Sun to shade: alas, alas,
Witnesse my Sonne, now in the shade of death,
Whose bright out-shining beames, thy cloudy wrath
Hath in eternall darknesse folded vp.
Your aery buildeth in our aeries Nest:
O God that seest it, do not suffer it,
As it is wonne with blood, lost be it so.
Bur. Peace, peace for shame: If not, for Charity.
Mar. Vrge neither charity, nor shame to me:
Vncharitably with me haue you deale,
And shamefully my hopes (by you) are butcher'd.
My Charity is outrage, Life my shame,
And in that shame, still liue my sorrowes rage.
Bur. Haue done, haue done.
Mar. O Princely Buckingham, Ile kisse thy hand,
In signe of League and amity with thee:
Now faire befall thee, and thy Noble house:
Thy Garments are not spotted with our blood:
Nor thou within the compasse of my curse.
Bur. Nor no one heere: for Curses neuer passe
The lips of those that breech them in the syre.
Mar. I will not thinke but they ascend the sky,
And there awake Gods gentle sleeping peace.
O Buckingham, take heede of yonder dogge:
Looke when he fawnes, he bites; and when he bites,
His venom tooth will rankle to the death.
Haue not to do with him, beware of him,
Sinne, death, and hell haue set their markes on him,
And all their Ministers attend on him.
Rich. What doth she say, my Lord of Buckingham.
Bur. Nothing that I respect my gracious Lord.
Mar. What doest thou scorne me
For my gentle counsell?
And sooth the diuell that I warne thee from.
O but remember this another day:
When he shall split thy very heart with sorrow:
And say (poore Margaret) was a Prophetesse:
Liue each of you the subiects to his hate,
And he to yours, and all of you to Gods. Exit.
Bur. My haire doth stand an end to heare her curses.
Ru. And so doth mine, I muse why she's at liberte.
Rich. I cannot blame her, by Gods holy mother,
She hath had too much wrong, and I repent
My part thereof, that I haue done to her.
Mar. I never did her any to my knowledge.
Rich. Yet you haue all the vantage of her wrong:
I was too hot, to do somebody good,
That is too cold in thinking of it now:
Marry as for Clarence, he is well repayed:
He is frank'd vp to fatting for his paines,
God pardon them, that are the cause thereof.
Riu. A vertuous, and a Christian-like conclusion
To pray for them that haue done scath to vs.
Rich. So do I euer, being well aduis'd.
Speakes to himselfe.
For had I curst now, I had curst my selfe

Enter Cateby.

Cate. Madam, his Maiesty doth call for you,
And for your Grace, and yours my gracious Lord.
Qu. Cateby I come, Lords will you go with me.
Riu. We wait vpon your Grace.

Exeunt all but Glester.

Rich. I do the wrong, and first begin to beare.
The secret Mischeefes that I set abroach,
I lay vnto the grieuous charge of others.
Clarence, who I indeede haue cast in darknesse,
I do beweepe to many simple Gulles,
Namely to Derby, Hastings, Buckingham,
And tell them 'tis the Queene, and her Allies,
That stirre the King against the Duke my Brother.
Now they believe it, and withall whet me
To be reuenge'd on Riuers, Dorset, Grey.
But then I sigh, and with a peece of Scripture,
Tell them that God bids vs do good for euill:
And thus I clothe my naked Villanie
With odde olde ends, stolne forth of holy Writ,
And seeme a Saint, when most I play the deuill.

Enter two murtherers.

But soft, heere come my Executioners,
How now my hardy stout resolued Mates,
Are you now going to dispatch this thing?
1. Vil. We are my Lord, and come to haue the Warrant,
That we may be admitted where he is.
Rich. Well thought vpon, I haue it heere about me:
When you haue done, repayre to Crosby place;
But firs be sodaine in the execution,
Withall obdurate, do not heare him plaide,
For Clarence is well spoken, and perhappes
May moue your hearts to pitty, if you marke him.
1. Vil. Tut, tut, my Lord, we will not stand to pitty,
Talkers are no good doeers, be assur'd:
We go to vse our hands, and not our tongues.
Rich. Your eyes drop Mill-stones, when Fooles eyes fall Teares:
I like you Lads, about your businesse straight.
Go, go, dispatch.
1. Vil. We will my Noble Lord.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Clarence and Keeper.

Keep. Why looke you Grace so heauily to day.
Cla. O, I haue past a miserable night,
So full of fearefull Dreames, of vgly sights,
That as I am a Christian faithfull man,
I would not spend another such a night
Though 'twere to buy a world of happy dayes:
So full of dismall terror was the time.
Keep. What was your dream my Lord, I pray you tell me
Cla. Me thoughts that I had broken from the Tower,
And was embark'd to crosse to Burgundy,
And in my company my Brother Glouster,
Who from my Cabin tempted me to walke,
Vpon the Hatches: There we look'd toward England,
And cited vp a thousand heavy times,

During the warres of Yorke and Lancaster
That had befalne vs. As we pas'd along
Vpon the giddy footing of the Hatches,
Me thought that Gloucester stumbled, and in falling
Strooke me (that thought to stay him) over-board,
Into the tumbling billowes of the maine.
O Lord, me thought what paine it was to drowne,
What dreadfull noise of water in mine eares,
What sights of vgly death within mine eyes.
Me thoughts, I saw a thousand fearfull wrackes:
A thousand men that Fishes gnaw'd vpon:
Wedges of Gold, great Anchors, heapes of Pearle,
Inestimable Stones, vnvalued Iewels,
All scattred in the bottome of the Sea,
Some lay in dead-mens Sculles, and in the holes
Where eyes did once inhabite, there were crept
(As 'twere in scorne of eyes) reflecting Gemmes,
That woo'd the slimy bottome of the deepe,
And mock'd the dead bones that lay scattred by.

Keep. Had you such leysure in the time of death
To gaze vpon these secrets of the deepe?

Cla. Me thought I had, and often did I strive
To yeeld the Ghoft: but still the enuious Flood
Stop'd in my soule, and would not let it forth
To find the empty, vast, and wanne ring ayre:
But smother'd it within my panting bulke,
Who almost burst, to belch it in the Sea.

Keep. Awak'd you not in this sore Agony?

Clar. No, no, my Dreame was lengthen'd after life.
O then, began the Tempest to my Soule.
I past (me thought) the Melancholy Flood,
With that sowre Ferry-man which Poets write of,
Vnto the Kingdome of perpetuall Night.
The first that there did greet my Stranger-soule,
Was my great Father-in-Law, renowned Warwicke,
Who spake aloud: What scourge for Periurie,
Can this dark Monarchy afford false Clarence?
And so he vanish'd. Then came wand'ring by,
A Shadow like an Angell, with bright hayre
Dabbled in blood, and he shriek'd out aloud
Clarence is come, false, fleeting, perior'd Clarence,
That stabb'd me in the field by Tewkesbury:
Seize on him Furies, take him vnto Torment.
With that (me thought) a Legion of foule Fiends
Inuiron'd me, and howled in mine eares
Such hiddeous cries, that with the very Noise,
I (trembling) wak'd, and for a season after,
Could not beleeue, but that I was in Hell,
Such terrible Impression made my Dreame.

Keep No marvell Lord, though it affrighted you,
I am afraid (me thinkes) to heare you tell it.

Cla. Ah Keeper, Keeper, I have done these things
(That now give euidence against my Soule)
For Edwards sake, and see how he requites me.
O God! if my deepe prayers cannot appease thee,
But thou wilt be auenge'd on my misdeeds,
Yet execute thy wrath in me alone:
O spare my guiltlesse Wife, and my poore children.
Keeper, I prythee sit by me a-while,
My Soule is heavy, and I faine would sleepe.

Keep. I will my Lord, God give your Grace good rest.

Enter Brakenbury the Lieutenant.

Bra. Sorrow breakes Seasons, and repoising hours,
Makes the Night Morning, and the Noon-tide night:
Princes have but their Titles for their Glosses,
An outward Honor, for an inward Toyle,
And for vsefull Imaginations
They often feale a world of restlesse Cares:
So that betweene their Titles, and low Name,
There's nothing differs, but the outward fame.

Enter two Murthurers.

1. Mur. Ho, who's heere?

Bra. What would'st thou Fellow? And how cam'st thou hither.

2. Mur. I would speak with Clarence, and I came hither on my Legges.

Bra. What so breefe?

1. 'Tis breeue (Sir) then so be tedious:
Let him see our Commission, and talke no more. Reads

Bra. I am in this, commanded to deliver
The Noble Duke of Clarence to your hands.
I will not reason what is meant hereby,
Because I will be guiltlesse from the meaning.
There lies the Duke asleepe, and there the Keyes.
Ile to the King, and signifie to him,
That thus I have resign'd to you my charge. Exit.

1. You may sir, 'tis a point of wisedome:
Fare you well.

2. What, shall we stab him as he sleepes.

1. No: but I say 'twas done cowardly, when he wakes

2. Why he shall never wake, vntill the great Iudgement day.

1. Why then he'l say, we stab'd him sleeping.

2. The vrging of that word Iudgement, hath bred a kinde of remorse in me.

1. What? art thou afraid?

2. Not to kill him, having a Warrant,
But to be damn'd for killing him, from the which
No Warrant can defend me.

1. I thought thou had'st bin resolute.

2. So I am, to let him live.

1. Ile backe to the Duke of Gloucster, and tell him so.

2. Nay, I prythee stay a little:
I hope this passionate humor of mine, will change,
It was wont to hold me but while one tells twenty.

1. How do'st thou feele thy selfe now?

2. Some certaine dregges of conscience are yet within mee.

1. Remember our Reward, when the deed's done.

2. Come, he dies: I had forgot the Reward.

1. Where's thy conscience now.

2. O, in the Duke of Gloucsters purse.

1. When he opens his purse to give vs our Reward, thy Conscience flyes out.

2. 'Tis no matter, let it goe: There's few or none will entertaine it.

1. What if it come to thee againe?

2. Ile not meddle with it, it makes a man a Coward:
A man cannot steale, but it accuseth him: A man cannot Sweare, but it Checkes him: A man cannot lye with his Neighbours Wife, but it detects him. 'Tis a blushing shamefac'd spirit, that mutinies in a mans bosome: It filles a man full of Obstacles. It made me once restore a Purse of Gold that (by chance) I found. It beggers any man that keepes it: It is turn'd out of Townes and Cities for a dangerous thing, and every man that means to live well, endeuours to trust to himselfe, and live without it.

1. 'Tis

1 'Tis euen now at my elbow, perswading me not to kill the Duke.

2 Take the diuell in thy minde, and beleeue him not: He would insinuate with thee but to make thee sigh.

1 I am strong fram'd, he cannot preuaile with me.

2 Spoke like a tall man, that respects thy reputation. Come, shall we fall to worke?

1 Take him on the Costard, with the hilts of thy Sword, and then throw him into the Malmesey-Butte in the next roome.

2 O excellent deuice; and make a sop of him.

1 Soft, he wakes.

2 Strike.

1 No, we'l reason with him.

Cla. Where art thou Keeper? Giue me a cup of wine.

2 You shall haue Wine enough my Lord anon.

Cla. In Gods name, what art thou?

1 A man, as you are.

Cla. But not as I am Royall.

1 Nor you as we are, Loyall.

Cla. Thy voice is Thunder, but thy looks are humble.

1 My voice is now the Kings, my looks mine owne.

Cla. How darkly, and how deadly dost thou speake? Your eyes do menace me: why looke you pale? Who sent you hither? Wherefore do you come?

2 To, to, to——

Cla. To murther me?

Both. I, I.

Cla. You scarsely haue the hearts to tell me so, And therefore cannot haue the hearts to do it. Wherein my Friends haue I offended you?

1 Offended vs you haue not, but the King.

Cla. I shall be reconcil'd to him againe.

2 Never my Lord, therefore prepare to dye.

Cla. Are you drawne forth among a world of men To slay the innocent? What is my offence? Where is the Euidence that doth accuse me? What lawfull Quest haue giuen their Verdict vp Vnto the frowning Iudge? Or who pronounc'd The bitter sentence of poore Clarences death, Before I be conuict by course of Law? To threaten me with death, is most vnlawfull. I charge you, as you hope for any goodnesse, That you depart, and lay no hands on me: The deed you vndertake is damnable.

1 What we will do, we do vpon command.

2 And he that hath commanded, is our King.

Cla. Erroneous Vassals, the great King of Kings Hath in the Table of his Law commanded That thou shalt do no murther. Will you then Spurne at his Edict, and fulfill a Man's? Take heed: for he holds Vengeance in his hand, To hurle vpon their heads that breake his Law.

2 And that same Vengeance doth he hurle on thee, For false Forswearing, and for murther too: Thou did'st receiue the Sacrament, to fight In quarrell of the House of Lancaster.

1 And like a Traitor to the name of God, Did'st breake that Vow, and with thy treacherous blade, Vntrip'st the Bowels of thy Sou'raignes Sonne.

2 Whom thou was't sworne to cherish and defend.

1 How canst thou vrge Gods dreadfull Law to vs, When thou hast broke it in such deere degree?

Cla. Alas! for whose sake did I that ill deede? For Edward, for my Brother, for his sake. He sends you not to murther me for this: For in that sinne, he is as deepe as I. If God will be auenged for the deed, O know you yet, he doth it publiquely, Take not the quarrell from his powerfull arme: He needs no indirect, or lawlesse course, To cut off those that haue offended him.

1 Who made thee then a bloody minister, When gallant springing brauе Plantagenet, That Princely Nouice was struck dead by thee?

Cla. My Brothers loue, the Diuell, and my Rage.

1 Thy Brothers Loue, our Duty, and thy Faults, Prouoke vs hither now, to slaughter thee.

Cla. If you do loue my Brother, hate not me: I am his Brother, and I loue him well. If you are hyr'd for meed, go backe againe, And I will send you to my Brother Gloucster: Who shall reward you better for my life, Then Edward will for tydings of my death.

2 You are deceiu'd, Your Brother Gloucster hates you.

Cla. Oh no, he loues me, and he holds me deere: Go you to him from me.

2 I so we will.

Cla. Tell him, when that our Princely Father Yorke, Blest his three Sonnes with his victorious Arme, He little thought of this diuided Friendship: Bid Gloucster thinke on this, and he will weepe.

1 I Millstones, as he lessoned vs to weepe.

Cla. O do not slander him, for he is kinde.

1 Right, as Snow in Harueſt: Come, you deceiue your selfe, 'Tis he that sends vs to destroy you heere.

Cla. It cannot be, for he bewept my Fortune, And hugg'd me in his armes, and swore with sobs, That he would labour my delivery.

1 Why so he doth, when he delivers you From this earths thraldome, to the ioyes of heaven.

2 Make peace with God, for you must die my Lord.

Cla. Haue you that holy feeling in your soules, To counsaile me to make my peace with God, And are you yet to your owne soules so blinde, That you will warre with God, by murd'ring me. O sirs consider, they that set you on To do this deede, will hate you for the deede.

2 What shall we do?

Clar. Relent, and saue your soules: Which of you, if you were a Princes Sonne, Being pent from Liberty, as I am now, If two such murtherers as your selues came to you, Would not intreat for life, as you would begge Were you in my distresse.

1 Relent? no: 'Tis cowardly and womanish.

Cla. Not to relent, is beastly, sauage, diuelish: My Friend, I spy some pitty in thy lookes: O, if thine eye be not a Flatterer, Come thou on my side, and intreate for mee, A begging Prince, what begger pitties not.

2 Looke behinde you, my Lord.

1 Take that, and that, if all this will not do. Stabs him. Ile drowne you in the Malmesey-But within. Exit.

2 A bloody deed, and desperately dispatch: How faine (like Pilate) would I wash my hands Of this most grieuous murther. Enter 1. Murtherer.

1 How now? what mean'st thou that thou help'st me not? By Heauen the Duke shall know how slacke you haue beene.

2. Mur. I would he knew that I had saw'd his brother,
Take thou the Fee, and tell him what I say,
For I repent me that the Duke is slaine. Exit.

1. Mur. So do not I: go Coward as thou art.
Well, Ile go hide the body in some hole,
Till that the Duke give order for his buriall:
And when I have my meede, I will away,
For this will out, and then I must not stay. Exit

Actus Secundus. Scena Prima.

Flourish.

Enter the King sick, the Queene, Lord Marquesse Dorset, Rivers, Hastings, Catesby, Buckingham, Woodvill.

King. Why so: now have I done a good dayes work.
You Peeres, continue this vnited League:
I, every day expect an Embassage
From my Redeemer, to redeeme me hence.
And more to peace my soule shall part to heaven,
Since I have made my Friends at peace on earth.
Dorset and Rivers, take each others hand,
Dissemble not your hatred, Sweare your loue.
Riv. By heaven, my soule is purg'd from grudging hate
And with my hand I seale my true hearts Loue.
Hast. So thrive I, as I truly sweare the like.
King. Take heed you dally not before your King,
Least he that is the supreme King of Kings
Confound your hidden falshood, and award
Either of you to be the others end.
Hast. So prosper I, as I sweare perfect loue.
Riv. And I, as I loue Hastings with my heart.
King. Madam, your selfe is not exempt from this:
Not you sonne Dorset, Buckingham nor you;
You have bene factious one against the other.
Wife, loue Lord Hastings, let him kisse your hand,
And what you do, do it vnfeignedly.
Qu. There Hastings, I will never more remember
Our former hatred, so thrive I, and mine.
King. Dorset, embrace him:
Hastings, loue Lord Marquesse.
Dor. This interchange of loue, I heare protest
Vpon my part, shall be inuiolable.
Hast. And so sweare I.
King. Now Princely Buckingham, seale ye this league
With thy embracements to my wives Allies,
And make me happy in your vnity.
Buc. When euer Buckingham doth turne his hate
Vpon your Grace, but with all duteous loue,
Doth cherish you, and yours, God punish me
With hate in those where I expect most loue,
When I haue most need to imploy a Friend,
And most assured that he is a Friend,
Deepe, hollow, treacherous, and full of guile,
Be he vnto me: This do I begge of heaven,
When I am cold in loue, to you, or yours. Embrace
King. A pleasing Cordiall, Princely Buckingham,
Is this thy Vow, vnto my sickly heart:
There wanteth now our Brother Gloster heere,
To make the blessed period of this peace.
Buc. And in good time,
Heere comes Sir Richard Ratcliffe, and the Duke.

Enter Ratcliffe, and Gloster.

Rich. Good morrow to my Soueraigne King & Queene
And Princely Peeres, a happy time of day.
King. Happy indeed, as we haue spent the day:
Gloster, we haue done deeds of Charity,
Made peace of enmity, faire loue of hate,
Betweene these swelling wrong vncensed Peeres.
Rich. A blessed labour my most Soueraigne Lord:
Among this Princely heape, if any heere
By false intelligence, or wrong surmize
Hold me a Foe. If I vnwittingly, or in my rage,
Haue ought committed that is hardly heare,
To any in this presence, I desire
To reconcile me to his Friendly peace:
'Tis death to me to be at enmitie:
I heere it, and desire all good mens loue,
First Madam, I intreate true peace of you,
Which I will purchase with my duteous seruice.
Of you my Noble Cosin Buckingham,
If euer any grudge were lodg'd betweene vs.
Of you and you, Lord Rivers and of Dorset,
That all without desert have frown'd on me:
Of you Lord Woodvill, and Lord Scales of you,
Dukes, Earles, Lords, Gentlemen, indeed of all,
I do not know that Englishman alive,
With whom my soule is any iot at odds,
More than the Infant that is borne to night:
I thanke my God for my Humility.
Qu. A holy day shall this be kept hereafter:
I would to God all strifes were well compounded.
My Soueraigne Lord, I do beseech your Highnesse
To take our Brother Clarence to your Grace.
Rich. Why Madam, haue I offred loue for this,
To be so flouted in this Royall presence?
Who knowes not that the gentle Duke is dead? They
You do him injurie to scorne his Corse. all frown.
King. Who knowes not he is dead?
Who knowes he is?
Qu. All-seeing heaven, what a world is this?
Buc. Looke I so pale Lord Dorset, as the rest?
Dor. I my good Lord, and no man in the presence,
But his red colour hath forsooke his cheeks.
King. Is Clarence dead? The Order was reuerst.
Rich. But he (poore man) by your first order dyed,
And that a winged Mercurie did beare:
Some tardie Cripple bare the Countermand,
That came too lagge to see him buried.
God grant, that some lesse Noble, and lesse Loyall,
Neerer in bloody thoughts, and not in blood,
Deserue not worse than wretched Clarence did,
And yet go cleare from Suspicion.

Enter Earle of Derby.

Der. A boone my Soueraigne for my seruice done.
King. I prethee peace, my soule is full of sorrow.
Der. I will not rise, vnlesse your Highnes heare me.
King Then say at once, what is it thou requests.
Der. The forfeit (Soueraigne) of my seruants life,
Who slew to day a Riotous Gentleman,
Lately attendant on the Duke of Norfolke.
King. Haue I a tongue to doome my Brothers death?
And shall that tongue giue pardon to a slaue?
My Brother kill'd no man, his fault was Thought,
And yet his punishment was bitter death.

Who

Who sued to me for him? Who (in my wrath)
Kneel'd and my feet, and bid me be adult'd?
Who spoke of Brother-hood? who spoke of loue?
Who told me how the poore soule did forsake
The mighty Warwicke, and did fight for me?
Who told me in the field at Tewkesbury,
When Oxford had me downe, he rescued me:
And said deare Brother liue, and be a King?
Who told me, when we both lay in the Field,
Frozen (almost) to death, how he did lap me
Euen in his Garments, and did giue himselfe
(All thin and naked) to the numbe cold night?
All this from my Remembrance, brutish wrath
Sinfully pluckt, and not a man of you
Had so much grace to put it in my minde.
But when your Carters, or your waying Vassalls
Haue done a drunken Slaughter, and defac'd
The precious Image of our deere Redeemer,
You straight are on your knees for Pardon, pardon,
And I (vniustly too) must grant it you.
But for my Brother, not a man would speake,
Nor I (vngracious) speake vnto my selfe
For him poore Soule. The proudest of you all,
Haue bin beholding to him in his life:
Yet none of you, would once begge for his life,
O God! I feare thy Iustice will take hold
On me, and you; and mine, and yours for this.
Come Hastings helpe me to my Closet.
Ah poore Clarence. Exeunt some with K. & Queene.
Rich. This is the fruits of rashnes: Marks you not,
How that the guilty Kindred of the Queene
Look'd pale, when they did heare of Clarence death.
O! they did vrge it still vnto the King,
God will reuenge it. Come Lords will you go,
To comfort Edward with our company.
Buc. We wait vpon your Grace. exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter the old Duchesse of Yorke, with the two children of Clarence.

Edw. Good Grandam tell vs, is our Father dead?
Dutch. No Boy.
Daugh. Why do weepe so oft? And beate your Brest?
And cry, O Clarence, my vnhappy Sonne.
Boy. Why do you looke on vs, and shake your head,
And call vs Orphans, Wretches, Castawayes,
If that our Noble Father were aliue?
Dut. My pretty Cosins, you mistake me both,
I do lament the sicknesse of the King,
As loath to lose him, not your Fathers death:
It were lost sorrow to waile one that's lost.
Boy. Then you conclude, (my Grandam) he is dead:
The King mine Vnckle is too blame for it.
God will reuenge it, whom I will importune
With earnest prayers, all to that effect.
Daugh. And so will I.
Dut. Peace children peace, the King doth loue you wel.
Incapeable, and shallow Innocents,
You cannot guesse who caus'd your Fathers death.
Boy. Grandam we cam for my good Vnkle Gloster
Told me, the King prouok'd to it by the Queene,
Deuis'd impeachments to imprison him;
And when my Vnckle told me so, he wept,
And pitied me, and kindly kist my cheeke;
Bad me rely on him, as on my Father,
And he would loue me deerely as a childe.
Dut. Ah! that Deceit should steale such gentle shape,
And with a vertuous Vizor hide deepe vice.
He is my sonne, I, and therein my shame,
Yet from my dugges, he drew not this deceit.
Boy. Thinke you my Vnkle did dissemble Grandam?
Dut. I Boy.
Boy. I cannot thinke it. Hearke, what noise is this?

Enter the Queene with her haire about her eares, Riuers & Dorset after her.

Qu. Ah! who shall hinder me to waile and weepe?
To chide my Fortune, and torment my Selfe.
Ile loyne with blacke dispaire against my Soule,
And to my selfe, become an enemie.
Dut. What meanes this Scene of rude impatience?
Qu. To make an act of Tragicke violence.
Edward my Lord, thy Sonne, our King is dead.
Why grow the Branches, when the Roote is gone?
Why wither not the leaues that want their sap?
If you will liue, Lament: if dye, be breefe,
That our swift-winged Soules may catch the Kings,
Or like obedient Subiects follow him,
To his new Kingdome of nere-changing night.
Dut. Ah so much interest haue in thy sorrow,
As I had Title in thy Noble Husband:
I haue bewept a worthy Husbands death,
And liu'd with looking on his Images:
But now two Mirrors of his Princely semblance,
Are crack'd in pieces, by malignant death,
And I for comfort, haue but one false Glasse,
That greeues me, when I see my shame in him.
Thou art a Widdow: yet thou art a Mother,
And hast the comfort of thy Children left,
But death hath snatch'd my Husband from mine Armes,
And pluckt two Crutches from my feeble hands,
Clarence, and Edward. O, what cause haue I,
(Thine being but a moity of my moane)
To ouer-go thy woes, and drowne thy cries.
Boy. Ah Aunt! you wept not for our Fathers death:
How can we ayde you with our Kindred teares?
Daugh. Our fatherlesse distresse was left vnmoan'd,
Your widdow-dolour, likewise be vnwept.
Qu. Giue me no helpe in Lamentation,
I am not barren to bring forth complaints:
All Springs reduce their currents to mine eyes,
That I being gouern'd by the waterie Moone,
May send forth plenteous teares to drowne the World.
Ah, for my Husband, for my deere Lord Edward.
Chil. Ah for our Father, for our deere Lord Clarence.
Dut. Alas for both, both mine Edward and Clarence.
Qu. What stay had I but Edward, and he's gone?
Chil. What stay had we but Clarence? and he's gone.
Dut. What stayes had I, but they? and they are gone.
Qu. Was neuer widdow had so deere a losse.
Chil. Were neuer Orphans had so deere a losse.
Dut. Was neuer Mother had so deere a losse.
Alas! I am the Mother of these Greefes,
Their woes are parcell'd, mine is generall.
She for an Edward weepes, and so do I;

For a Clarence weepes, so doth not shee:
These Babes for Clarence weepe, so do not they.
Alas! you three, on me threefold distrest:
Power all your teares, I am your sorrowes Nurse,
And I will pamper it with Lamentation.

Dor. Comfort deere Mother, God is much displeas'd,
That you take with vnthankfulnesse his doing.
In common worldly things, 'tis call'd vngratefull,
With dull vnwillingnesse to repay a debt,
Which with a bounteous hand was kindly lent:
Much more to be thus opposite with heauen,
For it requires the Royall debt it lent you.

Riuers. Madam, bethinke you like a carefull Mother
Of the young Prince your sonne: send straight for him,
Let him be Crown'd, in him your comfort liues.
Drowne desperate sorrow in dead Edwards grave,
And plant your ioyes in liuing Edwards Throne.

Enter Richard, Buckingham, Derbie, Hastings, and Ratcliffe.

Rich. Sister haue comfort, all of vs haue cause
To waile the dimming of our shining Starre:
But none can helpe our harmes by wayling them.
Madam, my Mother, I do cry you mercie,
I did not see your Grace. Humbly on my knee,
I craue your Blessing.

Dut. God blesse thee, and put meeknes in thy breast,
Loue Charity, Obedience, and true Duties.

Rich. Amen, and make me die a good old man,
That is the butt-end of a Mothers blessing;
I marueil that her Grace did leaue it out.

Buc. You cloudy-Princes, & hart-sorowing-Peeres,
That beare this heauie mutuall loade of Moane,
Now cheere each other, in each others Loue:
Though we haue spent our Harvest of this King,
We are to reape the Harvest of his Sonne.
The broken rancour of your high-swoln hates,
But lately splinter'd, knit, and ioyn'd together,
Must gently be preserv'd, cherish'd, and kept:
Me seemeth good, that with some little Traine,
Forthwith from Ludlow, the young Prince be fet
Hither to London, to be crown'd our King.

Riuers. Why with some little Traine,
My Lord of Buckingham?

Buc. Marrie my Lord, lest by a multitude,
The new-healed wound of Malice should breake out,
Which would be so much the more dangerous,
By how much the estate is greene, and yet vngouern'd.
Where every Horse beares his commanding Reine,
And may direct his course as please himselfe,
As well the feare of harme, as harme apparant,
In my opinion, ought to be preuented.

Rich. I hope the King made peace with all of vs,
And the compact is firme, and true in me.

Riu. And so in me, and so (I thinke) in all.
Yet since it is but greene, it should be put
To no apparant likely-hood of breach,
Which haply by much company might be vrg'd:
Therefore I say with Noble Buckingham,
That it is meete so few should fetch the Prince.

Hast. And so say I.

Rich. Then be it so, and go we to determine
Who they shall be that strait shall poste to London.
Madam, and you my Sister, will you go
To give your censures in this business.

Exeunt

Manet Buckingham, and Richard.

Buc. My Lord, who euer iourneies to the Prince,
For God sake let not vs two stay at home:
For by the way, I'le sort occasion,
As Index to the story we late talk'd of,
To part the Queenes proud Kindred from the Prince.

Rich. My other selfe, my Counsailes Consistory,
My Oracle, My Prophet, my deere Cosin,
I, as a childe, will go by thy direction,
Toward London then, for we'l not stay behinde. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter one Citizen at one doore, and another at the other.

1 Cit. Good morrow Neighbour, whether away so fast?

2 Cit. I promise you, I scarcely know my selfe:
Heare you the newes abroad?

1. Yes, that the King is dead.

2. Ill newes by'ladie, seldome comes the better:
I feare, I feare, 'twill prove a giddy world.

Enter another Citizen.

3. Neighbours, God speed.

1. Giue you good morrow sir.

3. Doth the newes hold of good king Edwards death

2. I sir, it is too true, God helpe the while.

3. Then Masters looke to see a troublous world.

1. No, no, by Gods good grace, his Son shall reigne.

3. Woe to that Land that's gouern'd by a Childe.

1. In him there is a hope of Gouernement,
Which in his nonage, counsell vnder him,
And in his full and ripened yeares, himselfe
No doubt shall then, and till then gouerne well.

1. So stood the State, when Henry the fift
Was crown'd in Paris, but at nine months old.

3. Stood the State so? No, no, good friends, God wot.
For then this Land was famously enrich'd
With politike grave Counsell; then the King
Had vertuous Vakles to protect his Grace.

1. Why so hath this, both by his Father and Mother

3. Better it were they all came by his Father:
Or by his Father there were none at all:
For emulation, who shall now be neerest,
Will touch vs all too neere, if God prevent not.
O full of danger is the Duke of Gloucster,
And the Queenes Sons, and Brothers, haught and proud
And were they to be rul'd, and not to rule,
This sickly Land, might solace as before.

1. Come, come, we feare the worst: all will be well.

3. When Clouds are seen, wise men put on their cloaks
When great leaues fall, then Winter is at hand;
When the Sun sets, who doth not looke for night?
Vntimely stormes, makes men expect a Dearth:
All may be well; but if God sort it so,
'Tis more then we deserue, or I expect.

2. Truly, the hearts of men are full of feare:
You cannot reason (almost) with a man,
That looketh not heavily, and full of dread

3. Before the dayes of Change, still is it so,
By a diuine instinct, men mindes mistrust

Ensuing

Pursuing danger: as by proofe we see
The Water swell before a boyst'rous storme:
But leave it all to God. Whither away?
2 Marry we were sent for to the Iustices.
3 And so was I: Ile beare you company. Exeunt

Scena Quarta.

Enter Arch-bishop, young Yorke, the Queene, and the Duchesse

Arch. Last night I heard they lay at Stony Stratford,
And at Northampton they do rest to night:
To morrow, or next day, they will be heere.
Duc. I long with all my heart to see the Prince:
I hope he is much growne since last I saw him.
Qu. But I heare no, they say my sonne of Yorke
He's almost outstrane him in his growth.
Yorke. I Mother, but I would not haue it so.
Duc. Why my good Cosin, it is good to grow.
Yor. Grandam, one night as we did sit at Supper,
My Vnkle Riuers talk'd how I did grow
More than my Brother. I, quoth my Vnkle Gloustier,
Small Herbes haue grace, great Weeds do grow space.
And since, me thinkes I would not grow so fast,
Because sweet Flowres are slow, and Weeds make hast.
Duc. Good faith, good faith, the saying did not hold
In him that did object the same to thee.
He was the wretched'st thing when he was yong,
So long a growing, and so leysurely,
That if his rule were true, he should be gracious.
Yor. And so no doubt he is, my gracious Madam.
Duc. I hope he is, but yet let Mothers doubt.
Yor. Now by my troth, if I had beene remembred,
I could haue given my Vnkles Grace, a flout,
To touch his growth, nearer then he touch'd mine.
Duc. How my young Yorke,
I prythee let me heare it.
Yor. Marry (they say) my Vnkle grew so fast,
That he could gnaw a crust at two houres old,
'Twas full two yeares ere I could get a tooth.
Grandam, this would haue beene a byting Iest.
Duc. I prythee pretty Yorke, who told thee this?
Yor. Grandam, his Nurse.
Duc. His Nurse? why she was dead, ere ye was borne.
Yor. If 'twere not she, I cannot tell who told me.
Qu. A parlous Boy: go too, you are too shrew'd.
Duc. Good Madam, be not angry with the Childe.
Qu. Pitchers haue eares.

Enter a Messenger.

Arch. Heere comes a Messenger: What Newes?
Mes. Such newes my Lord, as grieues me to report.
Qu. How doth the Prince?
Mes. Well Madam, and in health.
Duc. What is thy Newes?
Mes. Lord Riuers, and Lord Grey,
Are sent to Pomfret, and with them,
Sir Thomas Vaughan, Prisoners.
Duc. Who hath committed them?
Mes. The mighty Dukes, Gloustier and Buckingham.
Arch. For what offence?
Mes. The summe of all I can, I haue disclos'd:
Why, or for what, the Nobles were committed,
Is all vnknowne to me, my gracious Lord.
Qu. Aye me! I see the ruine of my House:
The Tyger now hath seiz'd the gentle Hinde,
Insulting Tiranny beginnes to Iutt
Vpon the innocent and sweetest Throne:
Welcome Destruction, Blood, and Massacre,
I see (as in a Map) the end of all.
Duc. Accursed, and vnquiet wrangling dayes,
How many of you haue mine eyes beheld?
My Husband lost his life, to get the Crowne,
And often vp and downe my sonnes were tost
For me to ioy, and weepe, their gaine and losse.
And being seated, and Domesticke broyles
Cleane ouer-blowne, themselues the Conquerors,
Make warre vpon themselues, Brother to Brother:
Blood to blood, selfe against selfe: O preposterous
And frantick outrage, end thy damned spleene,
Or let me dye, to looke on earth no more.
Qu. Come, come my Boy, we will to Sanctuary.
Madam, farwell.
Duc. Stay, I will go with you.
Qu. You haue no cause.
Arch. My gracious Lady go,
And thether bestow your Treasure and your Goodes,
For my part, Ile resigne vnto your Grace
The Seale I keepe, and so bestide to me,
As well I tender you, and all of yours.
Go, Ile conduct you to the Sanctuary. Exeunt

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

The Trumpets sound.
Enter young Prince, the Duke of Gloucester, and Buckingham, Lord Cardinall, with others.

Buc. Welcome sweete Prince to London,
To your Chamber.
Rich. Welcome deere Cosin, my thoughts Soueraign.
The wearie way hath made you Melancholly.
Prin. No Vnkle, but our crosses on the way,
Haue made it tedious, wearisome, and heauie.
I want more Vnkles heere to welcome me.
Rich. Sweet Prince, the vnstained vertue of your years
Hath not yet diu'd into the Worlds deceit:
No more can you distinguish of a man,
Then of his outward shew, which God he knowes,
Seldome or neuer iumpeth with the heart.
Those Vnkles which you want, were dangerous:
Your Grace attended to their Sugred words,
But look'd not on the poyson of their hearts:
God keepe you from them, and from such false Friends.
Prin. God keepe me from false Friends,
But they were none.
Rich. My Lord, the Maior of London comes to greet you.

Enter Lord Maior.

Lo. Maior. God bless your Grace, with health and happie dayes.
Prin. I thanke you, good my Lord, and thank you all:

I thought my Mother, and my Brother Yorke,
Would long, ere this, have met vs on the way.
Fie, what a Slug is Hastings, that he comes not
To tell vs, whether they will come, or no.

Enter Lord Hastings.

Buck. And in good time, heere comes the sweating Lord.
Prince. Welcome, my Lord: what, will our Mother come?
Has. On what occasion God he knowes, not I;
The Queene your Mother, and your Brother Yorke,
Haue taken Sanctuarie: The tender Prince
Would faine haue come with me, to meet your Grace,
But by his Mother was perforce with-held.
Buck. Fie, what an indirect and peeuish course
Is this of hers? Lord Cardinall, will your Grace
Perswade the Queene, to send the Duke of Yorke
Vnto his Princely Brother presently?
If she denie, Lord Hastings, goe with him,
And from her iealous Armes pluck him perforce.
Card. My Lord of Buckingham, if my weake Oratorie
Can frame his Mother winne the Duke of Yorke,
Anon expect him here: but if she be obdurate
To milde entreaties, God forbid
We should infringe the holy Priuiledge
Of blessed Sanctuarie: not for all this Land,
Would I be guilty of so great a sinne.
Buck. You are too senceless obstinate, my Lord,
Too ceremonious, and traditionall.
Weigh it but with the grossenesse of this Age,
You breake not Sanctuarie, in seizing him:
The benefit thereof is always granted
To those, whose dealings haue deseru'd the place,
And those who haue the wit to clayme the place:
This Prince hath neyther claym'd it, nor deseru'd it,
And therefore, in mine opinion, cannot haue it.
Then taking him from thence, that is not there,
You breake no Priuiledge, nor Charter there:
Oft haue I heard of Sanctuarie men,
But Sanctuarie children, ne're till now.
Card. My Lord, you shall o're-rule my mind for once.
Come on, Lord Hastings, will you goe with me?
Has. I goe, my Lord. Exit Cardinall and Hastings.
Prince. Good Lords, make all the speedie haste you may.
Say, Vncle Glocester, if our Brother come,
Where shall we sojourne, till our Coronation?
Glo. Where it think'st best vnto your Royall selfe.
If I may counsaile you, some day or two
Your Highnesse shall repose you at the Tower:
Then where you please, and shall be thought most fit
For your best health, and recreation.
Prince. I doe not like the Tower, of any place:
Did Iulius Cæsar build that place, my Lord?
Buck. He did, my gracious Lord, begin that place,
Which since, succeeding Ages haue re-edify'd.
Prince. Is it vpon record? or else reported
Successiuely from age to age, he built it?
Buck. Vpon record, my gracious Lord.
Prince. But say, my Lord, it were not registred,
Me thinkes the truth should liue from age to age,
As 'twere retyr'd to all posteritie,
Euen to the generall ending day.
Glo. So wise, so young, they say doe seldom liue long.
Prince. What say you, Vncle?
Glo. I say, without Characters, fame liues long.
Thus, like the formall Vice, Iniquitie,
I moralise two meanings in one word.
Prince. That Iulius Cæsar was a famous man,
With what his Valour did enrich his Wit,
His Wit set downe, to make his Valour liue:
Death makes no Conquest of his Conqueror,
For now he liues in Fame, though not in Life.
Ile tell you what, my Cousin Buckingham.
Buck. What, my gracious Lord?
Prince. And if I liue vntill I be a man,
Ile win our ancient Right in France againe,
Or dye a Souldier, as I liu'd a King.
Glo. Short Summers lightly haue a forward Spring.

Enter young Yorke, Hastings, and Cardinall.

Buck. Now in good time, heere comes the Duke of Yorke.
Prince. Richard of Yorke, how fares our Noble Brother?
Yorke. Well, my deare Lord, so must I call you now.
Prince. I, Brother, to our griefe, as it is yours:
Too late he dy'd, that might haue kept that Title,
Which by his death hath lost much Maiestie.
Glo. How fares our Cousin, Noble Lord of Yorke?
Yorke. I thanke you, gentle Vncle. O my Lord,
You said, that idle Weeds are fast in growth:
The Prince, my Brother, hath out-growne me heere.
Glo. He hath, my Lord.
Yorke. And therefore is he idle?
Glo. Oh my faire Cousin, I must not say so.
Yorke. Then he is more beholding to you, than I.
Glo. He may command me as my Soueraigne,
But you haue power in me, as in a Kinsman.
Yorke. I pray you, Vncle, give me this Dagger.
Glo. My Dagger, little Cousin? with all my heart.
Prince. A Beggar, Brother?
Yorke. Of my kind Vncle, that I know will give,
And being but a Toy, which is no griefe to give.
Glo. A greater gift than that, Ile give my Cousin.
Yorke. A greater gift? O, that's the Sword to it.
Glo. I gentle Cousin, were it light enough.
Yorke. O then I see, you will part but with light gifts,
In weightier things you'le say a Beggar nay.
Glo. It is too weightie for your Grace to weare.
Yorke. I weigh it lightly, were it heauier.
Glo. What, would you haue my Weapon, little Lord?
Yorke. I would that I might thanke you, as, as, you call me.
Glo. How?
Yorke. Little.
Prince. My Lord of Yorke will still be crosse in talke:
Vncle, your Grace knowes how to beare with him.
Yorke. You mean to beare me, not to beare with me:
Vncle, my Brother mockes both you and me,
Because that I am little, like an Ape,
He thinkes that you should beare me on your shoulders.
Buck. With what a sharpe prouided wit he reasons:
To mitigate the scorne he gives his Vncle,
He prettily and aptly taunts himselfe:
So cunning, and so young, is wonderfull.
Glo. My Lord, will please you passe along?
My selfe, and my good Cousin Buckingham,
Will to your Mother, to entreat of her
To meet you at the Tower, and welcome you.

Yorke. What.

Tyrel. What, will you goe vnto the Tower, my Lord?
Prince. My Lord Protector will have it so.
Tyrel. I shall not sleepe in quiet at the Tower.
Glo. Why, what should you feare?
Tyrel. Marry, my Vncle Clarence angry Ghost:
My Grandam told me he was murther'd there.
Prince. I feare no Vncles dead.
Glo. Nor none that liue, I hope.
Prince. And if they liue, I hope I need not feare.
But come my Lord: and with a heauie heart,
Thinking on them, goe I vnto the Tower.
A Sonnet. Exeunt Prince, Tyrel, Hastings, and Dorset.

Manet Richard, Buckingham, and Catesby.

Buck. Thinke you, my Lord, this little prating Tyrel
Was not incensed by his subtle Mother,
To taunt and scorne you thus opprobriously?
Glo. No doubt, no doubt: Oh 'tis a perillous Boy,
Bold, quicke, ingenious, forward, capable:
Hee is all the Mothers, from the top to toe.
Buck. Well, let them rest: Come hither Catesby,
Thou art sworne as deeply to effect what we intend,
As closely to conceale what we impart:
Thou know'st our reasons vrg'd vpon the way.
What think'st thou? is it not an easie matter,
To make William Lord Hastings of our minde,
For the installment of this Noble Duke
In the Seat Royall of this famous Ile?
Cates. He for his fathers sake so loues the Prince,
That he will not be wonne to ought against him.
Buck. What think'st thou then of Stanley? Will not hee?
Cates. Hee will doe all in all as Hastings doth.
Buck. Well then, no more but this:
Goe gentle Catesby, and as it were farre off,
Sound thou Lord Hastings,
How he doth stand affected to our purpose,
And summon him to morrow to the Tower,
To sigh about the Coronation.
If thou do'st finde him tractable to vs,
Encourage him, and tell him all our reasons:
If he be leaden, icie, cold, vnwilling,
Be thou so too, and so breake off the talke,
And gisse vs notice of his inclination:
For we to morrow hold diuided Councels,
Wherein thy selfe shalt highly be employ'd.
Rich. Commend me to Lord William: tell him Catesby,
His ancient Knot of dangerous Aduersaries
To morrow are let blood at Pomfret Castle,
And bid my Lord, for ioy of this good newes,
Giue Mistresse Shore one gentle Kisse the more.
Buck. Good Catesby, goe effect this businesse soundly.
Cates. My good Lords both, with all the heed I can.
Rich. Shall we heare from you, Catesby, ere we sleepe?
Cates. You shall, my Lord.
Rich. At Crosby House, there shall you find vs both.
Exit Catesby.
Buck. Now, my Lord,
What shall we doe, if we perceiue
Lord Hastings will not yeeld to our Complots?
Rich. Chop off his Head:
Something we will determine:
And look when I am King, claime thou of me
The Earldome of Hereford, and all the moueables
Whereof the King, my Brother, was possest.
Buck. Ile claime that promise at your Graces hand.
Rich. And looke to haue it yeelded with all kindnesse.
Come, let vs sappe betimes, that afterwards
We may digest our complots in some forme.
Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter a Messenger to the Doore of Hastings.

Mes. My Lord, my Lord.
Hast. Who knocks?
Mes. One from the Lord Stanley.
Has. What is't a Clocke?
Mes. Vpon the stroke of foure.

Enter Lord Hastings.

Has. Cannot my Lord Stanley sleepe these tedious
Nights?
Mes. So it appeares, by that I haue to say:
First, he commends him to your Noble selfe.
Has. What then?
Mes. Then certifies your Lordship, that this Night
He dreamt, the Bore had rased off his Helme:
Besides, he sayes there are two Councels kept;
And that may be determin'd at the one,
Which may make you and him to rue at th'other.
Therefore he sends to know your Lordships pleasure,
If you will presently take Horse with him,
And with all speed post with him toward the North,
To shun the danger that his Soule diuines.
Has. Goe fellow, goe, returne vnto thy Lord,
Bid him not feare the seperated Councell:
His Honor and my selfe are at the one,
And at the other, is my good friend Catesby:
Where nothing can proceede, that toucheth vs,
Whereof I shall not haue intelligence:
Tell him his Feares are shallow, without instance.
And for his Dreames, I wonder hee's so simple,
To trust the mock'ry of vnquiet slumbers.
To fly the Bore, before the Bore pursues,
Were to incense the Bore to follow vs,
And make pursuit, where he did meane no chase.
Goe, bid thy Master rise, and come to me,
And we will both together to the Tower,
Where he shall see the Bore will vse vs kindly
Mes. Ile goe, my Lord, and tell him what you say.
Exit.

Enter Catesby.

Cates. Many good morrowes to my Noble Lord.
Has. Good morrow Catesby, you are early stirring:
What newes, what newes, in this our tott'ring State?
Cates. It is a reeling World indeed, my Lord:
And I believe will never stand vpright,
Till Richard weare the Garland of the Realme.
Has. How weare the Garland?
Dost thou meane the Crowne?
Cates. I, my good Lord.
Has. Ile hew thy Crown of mine on fist my shoulders,
Before Ile see the Crowne so foule mis-plac'd:
But canst thou guesse, that he doth aspire to it?

Cates. I, on my life, and hopes to find you forward,
Vpon his partie, for the gaine thereof:
And thereupon he sends you this good newes,
That this same very day your enemies,
The Kindred of the Queene, must dye at Pomfret.
Hast. Indeed I am no mourner for that newes,
Because they haue beene still my aduersaries:
But, that I'le giue my voice on Richards side,
To barre my Masters Heires in true Descent,
God knowes I will not doe it, to the death.
Cates. God keepe your Lordship in that gracious minde.
Hast. But I shall laugh at this a twelue-month hence,
That they which brought me in my Masters hate,
I liue to looke vpon their Tragedie.
Well Catesby, ere a fort-night make me older,
I'le send some packing, that yet thinke not on't.
Cates. 'Tis a vile thing to dye, my gracious Lord,
When men are vnprepar'd, and looke not for it.
Hast. O monstrous, monstrous! and so falls it out
With Riuers, Vaughan, Grey: and so 'twill doe
With some men else, that thinke themselues as safe
As thou and I, who (as thou know'st) are deare
To Princely Richard, and to Buckingham.
Cates. The Princes both make high account of you,
For they account his Head vpon the Bridge.
Hast. I know they doe, and I haue well deserv'd it.

Enter Lord Stanley.

Come on, come on, where is your Bore-speare man?
Feare you the Bore, and goe so vnprouided?
Stan. My Lord good morrow, good morrow Catesby:
You may least on, but by the holy Rood,
I doe not like these seuerall Councels, I.
Hast. My Lord, I hold my Life as deare as yours,
And never in my dayes, I doe protest,
Was it so precious to me, as 'tis now:
Thinke you, but that I know our state secure,
I would be so triumphant as I am?
Sta. The Lords at Pomfret, when they rode from London,
Were iocund, and suppos'd their states were sure,
And they indeed had no cause to mistrust:
But yet you see, how soone the Day o're-cast.
This sudden stab of Rancour I misdoubt:
Pray God (I say) I proue a needlesse Coward.
What, shall we toward the Tower? the day is spent.
Hast. Come, come, haue with you:
Wot you what, my Lord,
To day the Lords you talke of, are beheaded.
Sta. They, for their crush, might better wear their Heads,
Then some that haue accus'd them, wear their Hats.
But come, my Lord, let's away

Enter a Pursuiuant.

Hast. Goe on before, I'le talke with this good fellow.
Exit Lord Stanley, and Catesby
How now, Sirrha? how goes the World with thee?
Purs. The better, that your Lordship please to aske.
Hast. I tell thee man, 'tis better with me now,
Then when thou met'st me last, where now we meet:
Then was I going Prisoner to the Tower,
By the suggestion of the Queenes Allyes.
But now I tell thee (keepe it to thy selfe)
This day those Enemies are put to death,
And I in better state then ere I was.
Purs. God hold it, to your Honors good content.
Hast. Gramercie fellow: there, drinke that for me.
Throwes him his Purse.
Purs. I thanke your Honor. Exit Pursuiuant.

Enter a Priest.

Priest. Well met, my Lord, I am glad to see your Honor.
Hast. I thanke thee, good Sir John, with all my heart.
I am in your debt, for your last Exercise:
Come the next Sabboth, and I will content you.
Priest. I'le wait vpon your Lordship.

Enter Buckingham.

Buc. What, talking with a Priest, Lord Chamberlaine?
Your friends at Pomfret, they doe need the Priest,
Your Honor hath no shriuing worke in hand.
Hast. Good faith, and when I met this holy man,
The men you talke of, came into my minde.
What, goe you toward the Tower?
Buc. I doe, my Lord, but long I cannot stay there:
I shall returne before your Lordship, thence.
Hast Nay like enough, for I stay Dinner there.
Buc. And Supper too, although thou know'st it not.
Come, will you goe?
Hast. I'le wait vpon your Lordship. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Sir Richard Ratcliffe, with Halberds, carrying the Nobles to death at Pomfret.

Riuers. Sir Richard Ratcliffe, let me tell thee this,
To day shalt thou behold a Subiect die,
For Truth, for Duties, and for Loyalties.
Grey. God bless the Prince from all the Pack of you,
A Knot you are, of damned Blood-suckers.
Vaugh. You liue, that shall cry woe for this hereafter.
Rat. Dispatch, the limit of your Liues is out.
Riuers. O Pomfret, Pomfret! O thou bloody Prison!
Fatall and ominous to Noble Peeres:
Within the guilty Closure of thy Walls,
Richard the Second here was hacks to death:
And for more slander to thy dismall Seat,
We giue to thee our guiltlesse blood to drinke.
Grey. Now Margaret: Curse is falne vpon our Heads,
When thee exclaim'd on Hastings, you, and I,
For standing by, when Richard stab'd her Sonne.
Riuers. Then curs'd thee Richard,
Then curs'd thee Buckingham.
Then curs'd thee Hastings. Oh remember God,
To heare her prayer for them, as now for vs:
And for my Sister, and her Princely Sonnes,
Be satisfy'd, deare God, with our true blood,
Which, as thou know'st, vnrutly must be spilt.
Rat. Make haste, the hours of death is expiate.
Riuers. Come Grey, come Vaughan, let vs here embrace:
Farewell, vntill we meet againe in Heaven.
Exeunt.

Scena

Scæna Quarta.

Enter Buckingham Darby, Hastings, Bishop of Ely, Norfolke, Ratcliffe, Lovell, with others, at a Table.

Hast. Now Noble Peeres, the cause why we are met,
Is to determine of the Coronation:
In Gods Name speake, when is the Royall day?
Buck. Is all things ready for the Royall time?
Derb. It is, and wants but nomination.
Ely. To morrow then I judge a happie day.
Buck. Who knowes the Lord Protectors mind herein?
Who is most inward with the Noble Duke?
Ely. Your Grace, we thinke, should soonest know his minde.
Buck. We know each others Faces: for our Hearts,
He knowes no more of mine, then I of yours,
Or I of his, my Lord, then you of mine:
Lord Hastings, you and he are neere in loue.
Hast. I thanke his Grace, I know he loues me well:
But for his purpose in the Coronation,
I haue not sounded him, nor he deliner'd
His gracious pleasure any way therein:
But you, my Honorable Lords, may name the time,
And in the Dukes behalfe I'le giue my Voice,
Which I presume he'le take in gentle part.

Enter Gloucester.

Ely. In happie time, here comes the Duke himselfe.
Rich. My Noble Lords, and Cousins all, good morrow:
I haue beene long a sleeper: but I trust,
My absence doth neglect no great designe,
Which by my presence might haue beene concluded.
Buck. Had you not come vpon your Q. my Lord,
William, Lord Hastings, had pronounc'd your part:
I meane your Voice, for Crowning of the King.
Rich. Then my Lord Hastings, no man might be bolder,
His Lordship knowes me well, and loues me well.
My Lord of Ely, when I was last in Holborne,
I saw good Strawberries in your Garden there,
I doe beseech you, send for some of them.
Ely. Marry and will, my Lord, with all my heart.
Exit Bishop.
Rich. Cousin of Buckingham, a word with you.
Catesby hath sounded Hastings in our businesse,
And findes the testie Gentleman so hot,
That he will lose his Head, ere giue consent
His Masters Child, as worthiphully he termes it,
Shall lose the Royaltie of Englands Throne.
Buck. Withdraw your selfe a while, I'le goe with you.
Exeunt.
Derb. We haue not yet set downe this day of Triumph:
To morrow, in my judgement, is too sudden,
For I my selfe am not so well prouided,
As else I would be, were the day prolong'd.

Enter the Bishop of Ely.

Ely. Where is my Lord, the Duke of Glosier?
I haue sent for these Strawberries.
Hast. His Grace looks cheerfully & smooth this morning,
There's some conceit or other likes him well,
When that he bids good morrow with such spirit.
I thinke there's neuer a man in Christendome
Can lesser hide his loue, or hate, then he,
For by his Face straight shall you know his Heart.
Derb. What of his Heart perceiue you in his Face,
By any liuelyhood he shew'd to day?
Hast. Marry, that with no man here he is offended:
For were he, he had shewne it in his Lookes.

Enter Richard, and Buckingham.

Rich. I pray you all, tell me what they deserue,
That doe conspire my death with diuellish Plots
Of damned Witchcraft, and that haue preuail'd
Vpon my Body with their Hellish Charmes.
Hast. The tender loue I beare your Grace, my Lord,
Makes me most forward, in this Princely presence,
To doome th'Offenders, whosoe're they be:
I say, my Lord, they haue deserued death.
Rich. Then be your eyes the witnesse of their euill.
Looke how I am bewitch'd: behold, mine Arme
Is like a blasted Sapling, wither'd vp:
And this is Edwards Wife, that monstrous Witch,
Consorted with that Harlot, Strumpet Shore,
That by their Witchcraft thus haue marked me.
Hast. If they haue done this deed, my Noble Lord.
Rich. If? thou Protector of this damned Strumpet,
Talk'st thou to me of If? thou art a Traytor,
Off with his Head; now by Saint Paul I sweare,
I will not dine, vntill I see the same.
Lovell and Ratcliffe, looke that it be done: Exeunt.
The rest that loue me, rise, and follow me.

Manet Lovell and Ratcliffe, with the Lord Hastings.

Hast Woe, woe for England, not a whit for me,
For I, too fond, might haue preuented this:
Stanley did dreame, the Bore did rowse our Helmes,
And I did scorne it, and disdaine to flye:
Three times to day my Foot-Cloth-Horse did stumble,
And started, when he look'd vpon the Tower,
As loth to beare me to the slaughter-house.
O now I need the Priest, that spake to me:
I now repent I told the Purseuiuant,
As too triumphing, how mine Enemies
To day at Pomfret bloodily were butcher'd,
And I my selfe secure, in grace and fauour.
Oh Margaret, Margaret, now thy heauie Curse
Is lighted on poore Hastings wretched Head.
Ra. Come, come, dispatch, the Duke would be at dinner:
Make a short Shrift, he longs to see your Head.
Hast. O momentarie grace of mortall men,
Which we more hunt for, then the grace of God!
Who builds his hope in ayre of your good Looks,
Lives like a drunken Sayler on a Mast,
Readie with every Nod to tumble downe,
Into the fatall Bowels of the Deepe.
Lov. Come, come, dispatch, 'tis bootlesse to exclaime.
Hast. O bloody Richard: miserable England,
I prophecie the fearefull'st time to thee,
That ever wretched Age hath look'd vpon.
Come, lead me to the Block, beare him my Head,
They smile at me, who shortly shall be dead.
Exeunt.

Enter Richard, and Buckingham, in rotten Armour, marvellous ill-favoured.

Richard. Come Cousin,
Canst thou quake, and change thy colour,
Murther thy breath in middle of a word,
And then againe begin, and stop againe,
As if thou were distraught, and mad with terror?

Buck. Tut, I can counterfeit the deepe Tragedian,
Speake, and looke backe, and pric on every side,
Tremble and start at wagging of a Straw:
Intending deepe suspition, gastly Looks
Are at my service, like enforced Smiles;
And both are readie in their Offices,
At any time to grace my Stratagemes.
But what, is Catesby gone?

Rich. He is, and see he brings the Maior along.

Enter the Maior, and Catesby.

Buck. Lord Maior.

Rich. Looke to the Draw-Bridge there.

Buck. Hearke, a Drumme.

Rich. Catesby, o're-looke the Walls.

Buck. Lord Maior, the reason we have sent.

Rich. Looke back, defend thee, here are Enemies.

Buck. God and our Innocencie defend, and guard vs.

Enter Lovell and Ratcliffe, with Hastings Head.

Rich. Be patient, they are friends: Ratcliffe, and Lovell.

Lovell. Here is the Head of that ignoble Traytor,
The dangerous and vnsuspected Hastings.

Rich. So deare I lou'd the man, that I must weepe:
I tooke him for the plainest harmlessle Creature,
That breath'd vpon the Earth, a Christian.
Made him my Booke, wherein my Soule recorded
The Historie of all her secret thoughts.
So smooth he dawb'd his Vice with shew of Vertue,
That his apparant open Guilt omitted,
I mean, his Conuersation with Shores Wife,
He lin'd from all attainder of suspects.

Buck. Well, well, he was the cowerd shelter'd Traytor
That ever liu'd.
Would you imagine, or almost beleeue,
Were not, that by great preseruation
We liue to tell it, that the subtill Traytor
This day had plotted, in the Councell-House,
To murther me, and my good Lord of Gloster.

Maior. Had he done so?

Rich. What? thinke you we are Turkes, or Infidels?
Or that we would, against the forme of Law,
Proceed thus rashly in the Villaines death,
But that the extreme perill of the case,
The Peace of England, and our Persons safetie,
Enforc'd vs to this Execution.

Maior. Now faire befall you, he deseru'd his death,
And your good Graces both haue well proceeded,
To warne false Traytors from the like Attempts.

Buck. I never look'd for better at his hands,
After he once fell in with Mistresse Shore:
Yet had we not determin'd he should dye,
Vntill your Lordship came to see his end,
Which now the loating haste of these our friends,
Something against our meanings, haue prevented;
Because, my Lord, I would haue had you heard
The Traytor speake, and timorously confesse
The manner and the purpose of his Treasons:
That you might well haue signify'd the same
Vnto the Citizens, who haply may
Misconster vs in him, and wayle his death.

Maior. But, my good Lord, your Graces words shall serue,
As well as I had seene, and heard him speake:
And doe not doubt, right Noble Princes both,
But I'le acquaint our dutious Citizens
With all your just proceedings in this case.

Rich. And to that end we wish'd your Lordship here,
T'auoid the Censures of the carping World.

Buck. Which since you come too late of our intent,
Yet witnesse what you heare we did intend:
And so, my good Lord Maior, we bid farwell.

Exit Maior.

Rich. Goe after, after, Cousin Buckingham.
The Maior towards Guild-Hall beas him in all pollie:
There, at your meetest vantage of the time,
Inferre the Bastardie of Edwards Children:
Tell them, how Edward put to death a Citizen,
Onely for saying, he would make his Sonne
Heire to the Crowne, meaning indeed his House,
Which, by the Signe thereof, was termed so.
Moreouer, vrge his hatefull Luxurie,
And bestiall appetite in change of Lust,
Which stretcht vnto their Seruants, Daughters, Wiues,
Euen where his raging eye, or sauage heart,
Without controll, lusted to make a prey.
Nay, for a need, thus farre come neere my Person:
Tell them, when that my Mother went with Child
Of that insatiate Edward, Noble Yorke,
My Princely Father, then had Warres in France,
And by true computation of the time,
Found, that the Issue was not his begot:
Which well appeared in his Lineaments,
Being nothing like the Noble Duke, my Father:
Yet touch this sparingly, as 'twere farre off,
Because, my Lord, you know my Mother liues.

Buck. Doubt not, my Lord, I'le play the Orator,
As if the Golden Fee, for which I pleed,
Were for my selfe: and so, my Lord, adieu.

Rich. If you thinke fit, bring them to Baynards Castle,
Where you shall finde me well accompanied
With reuerend Fathers, and well-learned Bishops.

Buck. I goe, and towards three or foure a Clocke
Looke for the Newes that the Guild-Hall affoords.

Exit Buckingham.

Rich. Goe Lovell with all speed to Doctor Shaw,
Goe thou to Fryer Perkin, bid them both
Meet me within this houre at Baynards Castle. Exit.
Now will I goe to take some priuie order,
To draw the Brats of Clarence out of sight,
And to giue order, that no manner person
Haue any time recourse vnto the Princes. Exeunt.

Enter a Scriuener.

Scr. Here is the Indictment of the good Lord Hastings,
Which in a fat Hand fairely is engrossed,
That it may be to day read o'er in Pauls.
And marke how well the sequell hangs together:
Eleuen houres I haue spent to write it ouer,
For yester-night by Catesby was it sent me,
The Precedent was full as long a doing,
And yet within these fiue houres Hastings liu'd,
Vnarraigned, vnexamin'd, free, at liberty.
Here's a good World the while.
Who is so gross, that cannot see this palpable deuice?

Yet

Yet who so bold, but says he sees it not?
Bad is the World, and all will come to nought,
When such ill dealing must be seene in thought. Exit.

Enter Richard and Buckingham at seuerall Doores.

Rich. How now, how now, what say the Citizens?
Buck. Now by the holy Mother of our Lord,
The Citizens are mum, say not a word.
Rich. Touche you the Bastardie of Edwards Children?
Buck. I did, with his Contract with Lady Lucy,
And his Contract by Deputie in France,
Th'vnsatiate greedinesse of his desire,
And his enforcement of the Citie Wiues,
His Tyrannie for Trifles, his own Bastardie,
As being got, your Father then in France,
And his resemblance, being not like the Duke.
Withall, I did inferre your Lineaments,
Being the right Idea of your Father,
Both in your forme, and Nobleness of Minde:
Laid open all your Victories in Scotland,
Your Discipline in Warre, Wisdome in Peace,
Your Bountie, Vertue, faire Humilitie:
Indeed, left nothing fitting for your purpose,
Vntouche, or slightly handled in discourse.
And when my Oratorie drew toward end,
I bid them that did loue their Countreys good,
Cry, God saue Richard, Englands Royall King.
Rich. And did they so?
Buck. No, so God helpe me, they spake not a word,
But like dombe Statues, or breathing Stones,
Star'd each on other, and look'd deadly pale:
Which when I saw, I reprehended them,
And ask'd the Maior, what meant this willfull silence?
His answer was, the people were not vsed
To be spoke to, but by the Recorder.
Then he was vrg'd to tell my Tale againe:
Thus saith the Duke, thus hath the Duke inferr'd,
But nothing spoke, in warrant from himselfe.
When he had done, some followers of mine owne,
At lower end of the Hall, hurld vp their Caps,
And some vttered voyces cry'd, God saue King Richard:
And thus I stoode the vantage of those few.
Thankes gentle Citizens, and friends, quoth I,
This generall applause, and chearefull shewes,
Argues your wisdome, and your loue to Richard:
And even here broke off, and came away.
Rich. What tongue-less Blockes were they,
Would they not speake?
Will not the Maior then, and his Brethren, come?
Buck. The Maior is here at hand: intend some feare,
Be not you spoke with, but by mightie suit:
And looke you get a Prayer-Booke in your hand,
And stand betweene two Church-men, good my Lord,
For on that ground Ile make a holy Descant:
And be not easily wonne to our requests,
Play the Maids part, still answer nay, and take it.
Rich. I goe: and if you plead as well for them,
As I can say nay to thee for my selfe,
No doubt we bring it to a happie issue.
Buck. Go, go vp to the Leads, the Lord Maior knocks.

Enter the Maior, and Citizens.

Welcome, my Lord, I dance attendance here,
I thinke the Duke will not be spoke withall.

Enter Catesby.

Buck. Now Catesby, what says your Lord to my request?
Catesby. He doth entreat your Grace, my Noble Lord,
To visit him to morrow, or next day:
He is wrapped, with two right reuerend Fathers,
Diuinely bent to Meditation,
And in no Worldly suites would he be mou'd,
To draw him from his holy Exercise.
Buck. Returne, good Catesby, to the gracious Duke,
Tell him, my selfe, the Maior and Aldermen,
In deepe designes, in matter of great moment,
No lesse importing then our generall good,
Are come to have some conference with his Grace.
Catesby. Ile signifie so much vnto him straight. Exit.
Buck. Ah ha, my Lord, this Prince is not an Edward,
He is not lolling on a lewd Loue-Bed,
But on his Knees, at Meditation:
Not dallying with a Brace of Cortizans,
But meditating with two deepe Diuines:
Not sleeping, to engrosse his idle Body,
But praying, to enrich his watchfull Soule.
Happie were England, would this vertuous Prince
Take on his Grace the Soueraignetie thereof.
But feare I feare we shall not winne him to it.
Maior. Marry God defend his Grace should say vs nay.
Buck. I feare he will: here Catesby comes againe.

Enter Catesby.

Now Catesby, what says his Grace?
Catesby. He wonders to what end you have assembled
Such troopes of Citizens, to come to him,
His Grace not being warn'd thereof before:
He feares, my Lord, you meane no good to him.
Buck. Sorry I am, my Noble Cousin should
Suspect me, that I meane no good to him:
By Heaven, we come to him in perfit loue,
And so once more returne, and tell his Grace. Exit.
When holy and deuout Religious men
Are at their Beades, 'tis much to draw them thence,
So sweet is zealous Contemplation.

Enter Richard aloft, betweene two Bishops.

Maior. See where his Grace stands, weene two Clergie men.
Buck. Two Props of Vertue, for a Christian Prince,
To stay him from the fall of Vanitie:
And see a Booke of Prayer in his hand,
True Ornaments to know a holy man.
Famous Plantagenet, most gracious Prince,
Lend fauourable eare to our requests,
And pardon vs the interruption
Of thy Deuotion, and right Christian Zeale.
Rich. My Lord, there needes no such Apologie:
I doe beseech your Grace to pardon me,
Who earnest in the seruice of my God,
Deferr'd the visitation of my friends.
But leaving this, what is your Graces pleasure?
Buck. Euen that (I hope) which pleaseth God thereon,
And all good men, of this vngouern'd Ile.
Rich. I doe suspect I haue done some offence,
That seemes disgracious in the Cities eye,
And that you come to reprehend my ignorance.

Buck. You bless, my Lord:
Would it might please your Grace,
On our entreaties, to amend your fault.
Rich. Else wherefore breathe I in a Christian Land.
Buck. Know then, it is your fault, that you resigne
The Supreme Seat, the Throne Maiesticall,
The Sceptred Office of your Ancestors,
Your State of Fortune, and your Draw of Birth,
The Lineall Glory of your Royall House,
To the corruption of a blemishe Stock;
Whiles in the mildnesse of your sleepie thoughts,
Which here we waken to our Countries good,
The Noble Ile doth want his proper Limmes:
His Face defac'd with skarres of Infamie,
His Royall Stock graft with ignoble Plants,
And almost shouldred in the swallowing Gulfe
Of darke Forgetfulnesse, and deepe Oblivion.
Which to recure, we heartily solicite
Your gracious selfe to take on you the charge
And Kingly Government of this your Land:
Not as Protector, Steward, Substitute,
Or lowly Factor, for anothers gaine;
But as successively, from Blood to Blood,
Your Right of Birth, your Empyrie, your owne.
For this, consorted with the Citizens,
Your very Worthiest full and loving friends,
And by their vehement instigation,
In this last Cause come I to move your Grace.
Rich. I cannot tell, if to depart in silence,
Or bitterly to speake in your reproofe,
Best fitteth my Degree, or your Condition.
If not to answer, you might haply thinke,
Tongue-ty'd Ambition, not replying, yeelded
To bear the Golden Yoake of Soueraignetie,
Which fondly you would here impose on me.
If to reproue you for this suit of yours,
So season'd with your faithfull loue to me,
Then on the other side I check'd my friends.
Therefore to speake, and to auoid the first,
And then in speaking, not to incurre the last,
Definitively thus I answer you.
Your loue deserues my thankes, but my desert
Vnremeritable, shunnes your high request.
First, if all Obstacles were cut away,
And that my Path were euen to the Crowne,
As the ripe Reuenue, and due of Birth:
Yet so much is my pouertie of spirit,
So mightie, and so manie my defects,
That I would rather hide me from my Greatnesse,
Being a Barke to brooke no mightie Sea;
Then in my Greatnesse coueting to be hid,
And in the vapour of my Glory smother'd.
But God be thank'd, there is no need of me,
And much I need to helpe you, were there need:
The Royall Tree hath left vs Royall Fruit,
Which mellow'd by the stealing howres of time,
Will well become the Seat of Maiestie,
And make (no doubt) vs happy by his Reigne.
On him I lay that, you would lay on me,
The Right and Fortune of his happie Starres,
Which God defend that I should wring from him.
Buck. My Lord, this argues Conscience in your Grace,
But the respects thereof are nice, and triuiall,
All circumstances well considered.
You say, that Edward is your Brothers Sonne,
So say we too, but not by Edwards Wife:
For first was he contract to Lady Lucy,
Your Mother liues a Witnesse to his Vow;
And afterward by substitute betroth'd
To Bona, Sister to the King of France.
These both put off, a poore Petitioner,
A Care-crs'd Mother to a many Sonnes,
A Beautie-waining, and distressed Widow,
Euen in the after-noone of her best dayes,
Made prize and purchase of his wanton Eye,
Seduc'd the pitch, and height of his degree,
To base declension, and loath'd Bigamie.
By her, in his vnlawfull Bed, he got
This Edward, whom our Manners call the Prince.
More bitterly could I expostulate,
Saue that for reuerence to some alme,
I give a sparing limit to my Tongue.
Then good, my Lord, take to your Royall selfe
This proffer'd benefit of Dignitie:
If not to blesse vs and the Land withall,
Yet to draw forth your Noble Ancestrie
From the corruption of abusing times,
Vnto a Lineall true deriued course.
Maior. Do good my Lord, your Citizens entreat you.
Buck. Refuse not, mightie Lord, this proffer'd loue.
Catesb. O make them loyfull, grant their lawfull suit.
Rich. Alas, why would you heape this Care on me?
I am vnfit for State, and Maiestie:
I doe beseech you take it not amisse,
I cannot, nor I will not yeeld to you.
Buck. If you refuse it, as in loue and zeale,
Loth to depose the Child, your Brothers Sonne,
As well we know your tendernesse of heart,
And gentle, kinde, effeminate remorse,
Which we haue noted in you to your Kindred,
And egally indeede to all Estates:
Yet know, where you accept our suit, or no,
Your Brothers Sonne shall never reigne our King,
But we will plant some other in the Throne,
To the disgrace and downe-fall of your House:
And in this resolution here we leaue you.
Come Citizens, we will entreat no more. Exeunt.
Catesb. Call him again, sweet Prince, accept their suit:
If you denie them, all the Land will rue it.
Rich. Will you enforce me to a world of Cares.
Call them againe, I am not made of Stones,
Not penetrable to your kinde entreaties,
Albeit against my Conscience and my Soule.
Enter Buckingham, and the rest.
Cousin of Buckingham, and sage grave men,
Since you will buckle fortune on my back,
To beare her burthen, where I will or no.
I must haue patience to endure the Load:
But if black Scandall, or foule-fac'd Reproach,
Attend the sequell of your Imposition,
Your meere enforcement shall acquittance me
From all the impure blots and staynes thereof;
For God doth know, and you may partly see,
How farre I am from the desire of this.
Maior. God blesse your Grace, wee see it, and will say it.
Rich. In saying so, you shall but say the truth.
Buck. Then I salute you with this Royall Title,
Long live King Richard, Englands worthie King.
All. Amen.
Buck. To morrow may it please you to be Crowne'd.
Rich. Even when you please, for you will haue it so.

Buck. To

Buck. To morrow then we will attend your Grace,
And so most ioyfully we take our leave.
Rich. Come, let vs to our holy Worke againe.
Farewell my Cousins, farewell gentle friends. Exeunt.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter the Queene, Anne Duchesse of Glouester, the Duchesse of Yorke, and Marquesse Dorset.

Duch. Yorke. Who meetes vs heere?
My Neece Plantagenet,
Led in the hand of her kind Aunt of Glester?
Now, for my Life, shee's wandring to the Tower,
On pure hearts loue, to greet the tender Prince.
Daughter, well met.
Anne. God giue your Graces both, a happie
And a ioyfull time of day.
Qu. As much to you, good Sister: whither away?
Anne. No farther then the Tower, and as I guesse,
Vpon the like deuotion as your selues,
To gratulate the gentle Princes there.
Qu. Kind Sister thankes, we'le enter all together:

Enter the Lieutenant.

And in good time, here the Lieutenant comes.
Master Lieutenant, pray you, by your leaue,
How doth the Prince, and my young Sonne of Yorke?
Lieu. Right well, deare Madame: by your patience,
I may not suffer you to visit them,
The King hath strictly charg'd the contrary.
Qu. The King? who's that?
Lieu. I meane, the Lord Protector.
Qu. The Lord protect him from that Kingly Title.
Hath he set bounds betweene their loue, and me?
I am their Mother, who shall barre me from them?
Duch. Yorke. I am their Fathers Mother, I will see them.
Anne. Their Aunt I am in law, in loue their Mother:
Then bring me to their sights, Ile beare thy blame,
And take thy Office from thee, on my peril.
Lieu. No, Madame, no; I may not leaue it so:
I am bound by Oath, and therefore pardon me.
Exit Lieutenant.

Enter Stanley.

Stanley. Let me but meet you Ladies one houres hence,
And Ile salute your Grace of Yorke as Mother,
And reuerend looker on of two faire Queenes.
Come Madame, you must straight to Westminster,
There to be crowned Richards Royall Queene.
Qu. Ah, cut my Lace asunder,
That my pent heart may haue some scope to beat,
Or else I swoone with this dead-killing newes.
Anne. Despightfull tidings, O vnpleasing newes.
Dorset. Be of good cheare: Mother, how fares your Grace?
Qu. O Dorset, speake not to me, get thee gone,
Death and Destruction dogges thee at thy heeles,
Thy Mothers Name is ominous to Children.
If thou wilt out-strip Death, goe crosse the Seas,
And liue with Richmond, from the reach of Hell.
Goe hye thee, hye thee from this slaughter-house,
Left thou encrease the number of the dead,
And make me dye the thrall of Margarets Curse,
Nor Mother, Wife, nor Englands counsed Queene.
Stanley. Full of wise care, is this your counsaile, Madame:
Take all the swift aduantage of the howres:
You shall haue Letters from me to my Sonne,
In your behalfe, to meet you on the way:
Be not ta'ne tardie by vnwisk delay.
Duch. Yorke. O ill dispersing Winde of Miserie,
O my accursed Wombe, the Bed of Death:
A Cockatrice hast thou hatcht to the World,
Whose vnauoided Eye is murtherous.
Stanley. Come, Madame, come, I in all haste was sent.
Anne. And I with all vnwillingnesse will goe.
O would to God, that the inclusive Verge
Of Golden Mettall, that must round my Brow,
Were red hot Steele, to seare me to the Braines,
Anointed let me be with deadly Venome,
And dye ere men can say, God saue the Queene.
Qu. Goe, goe, poore soule, I enuie not thy glory,
To feed my humor, wish thy selfe no harme.
Anne. Not why? When he that is my Husband now,
Came to me, as I follow'd Henrets Corse,
When scarce the blood was well washt from his hands,
Which issued from my other Angell Husband,
And that deare Saint, which then I weeping follow'd:
O, when I say I look'd on Richards Face.
This was my Wish: Be thou (quoth I) accurst,
For making me, so young, so old a Widow:
And when thou wed'st, let sorrow haunt thy Bed;
And be thy Wife, if any be so mad,
More miserable, by the Life of thee,
Then thou hast made me, by my deare Lords death.
Loe, ere I can repeat this Curse againe,
Within so small a time, my Womans heart
Grossly grew captiue to his honey words,
And prou'd the subiect of mine owne Soules Curse,
Which hitherto hath held mine eyes from rest:
For never yet one howre in his Bed
Did I enioy the golden dewe of sleepe,
But with his timorous Dreames was still awak'd.
Besides, he hates me for my Father Warwicke,
And will (no doubt) shortly be rid of me.
Qu. Poore heart adieu, I pitie thy complaining.
Anne. No more, than with my soule I mourne for yours.
Dorset. Farewell, thou woefull welcommer of glory.
Anne. Adieu, poore soule, that tak'st thy leaue of it.
Duch. Y. Go thou to Richmond, & good fortune guide thee,
Go thou to Richard, and good Angels tend thee,
Go thou to Sanctuarie, and good thoughts possesse thee,
I to my Grave, where peace and rest lye with me.
Eighteen odde yeares of sorrow haue I seene,
And each houres ioy wrackt with a weeke of teene.
Qu. Stay, yet looke backe with me vnto the Tower.
Pitty, you ancient Stones, those tender Babes,
Whom Enuie hath immur'd within your Walls,
Rough Cradle for such little prettie ones,
Rude ragged Nurse, old sullen Play-fellow,
For tender Princes: vse my Babies well;
So foolish Sorrowes bids your Stones farewell.
Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Sound a Sonnet. Enter Richard in pompe, Buckingham, Catesby, Ratcliffe, Louel.

Rich. Stand all apart. Cousin of Buckingham.
Buck. My gracious Soueraigne.
Rich. Giue me thy hand. Sound.
Thus high, by thy aduice, and thy assistance,
Is King Richard seated:
But shall we weare these Glories for a day?
Or shall they last, and we reioyce in them?
Buck. Still liue they, and for euer let them last.
Rich. Ah Buckingham, now doe I play the Touch,
To trie if thou be currant Gold indeed:
Young Edward liues, think now what I would speake.
Buck. Say on my loung Lord.
Rich. Why Buckingham, I say I would be King.
Buck. Why so you are, my thrice-renowned Lord.
Rich. Ha? am I King? 'tis so: but Edward liues.
Buck. True, Noble Prince.
Rich. O bitter consequence!
That Edward still should liue true Noble Prince.
Cousin, thou wast not wont to be so dull.
Shall I be plaine? I wish the Bastards dead,
And I would haue it suddenly perform'd.
What say'st thou now? speake suddenly, be briefe.
Buck. Your Grace may doe your pleasure.
Rich. Tut, tut, thou art all Ice, thy kindnesse freezes:
Say, haue I thy consent, that they shall dye?
Buc. Giue me some little breath, some pawse, deare Lord,
Before I positiuely speake in this:
I will resolue you herein presently. Exit Buck.
Catesby. The King is angry, see he gnawes his Lippe.
Rich. I will conuerse with Iron-witted Fooles,
And vnrespectiue Boyes: none are for me,
That looke into me with considerate eyes,
High-reaching Buckingham growes circumspect.
Boy.
Page. My Lord.
Rich. Know'st thou not any, whom corrupting Gold
Will tempt vnto a close exploit of Death?
Page. I know a discontented Gentleman,
Whose humble means match not his haughtie spirit:
Gold were as good as twentie Orators,
And will (no doubt) tempt him to any thing.
Rich. What is his Name?
Page. His Name, my Lord, is Tyrrell.
Rich. I partly know the man: goe call him hither,
Boy. Exit.
The deepe reuolting wittie Buckingham,
No more shall be the neighbor to my counsaile.
Hath he so long held out with me, vnyr'd,
And stops he now for breath? Well, be it so.

Enter Stanley.

How now, Lord Stanly, what's the newes?
Stanly. Know my loueing Lord, the Marquesse Dorset
As I heare, is fled to Richmond,
In the parts where he abides.
Rich. Come hither Catesby, rumor it abroad,
That Anne my Wife is very grieuous sicke,
I will take order for her keeping close.
Inquire me out some meane poore Gentleman,
Whom I will marry straight to Clarence Daughter:
The Boy is foolish, and I feare not him.
Looke how thou dream'st: I say again, giue out,
That Anne, my Queene, is sicke, and like to dye.
About it, for it stands me much vpon
To stop all hopes, whose growth may damnage me.
I must be married to my Brothers Daughter,
Or else my Kingdome stands on brittle Glasse:
Murther her Brothers, and then marry her,
Vncertaine way of gaine. But I am in
So farre in blood, that sinne will pluck on sinne,
Teare-falling Pitie dwells not in this Eye.

Enter Tyrrel.

Is thy Name Tyrrel?
Tyr. Iames Tyrrel, and your most obedient subiect.
Rich. Art thou indeed?
Tyr. Proue me, my gracious Lord.
Rich. Dar'st thou resolue to kill a friend of mine?
Tyr. Please you:
But I had rather kill two enemies.
Rich. Why then thou hast it: two deepe enemies,
Foes to my Rest, and my sweet sleepes disturbers,
Are they that I would haue thee deale vpon:
Tyrrel, I meane those Bastards in the Tower.
Tyr. Let me haue open meanes to come to them,
And soone lle rid you from the feare of them.
Rich. Thou sing'st sweet Musique:
Hearke, come hither Tyrrel,
Goe by this token: rise, and lend thine Eare, Whispers.
There is no more but so: say it is done,
And I will loue thee, and preferre thee for it.
Tyr. I will dispatch it straight. Exit.

Enter Buckingham.

Buck. My Lord, I haue consider'd in my minde,
The late request that you did sound me in.
Rich. Well, let that rest: Dorset is fled to Richmond.
Buck. I heare the newes, my Lord.
Rich. Stanley, he is your Wiues Sonne: well, looke vnto it.
Buck. My Lord, I claime the gift, my due by promise,
For which your Honor and your Faith is pawn'd,
Th'Earledome of Hertford, and the moueables,
Which you haue promised I shall possesse.
Rich. Stanley looke to your Wife: if she conuey
Letters to Richmond, you shall answer it.
Buck. What says your Highnesse to my iust request?
Rich. I doe remember me, Henry the Sixt
Did prophecie, that Richmond should be King,
When Richmond was a little peeuish Boy.
A King perhaps.
Buck. May it please you to resolue me in my suit.
Rich. Thou troublest me, I am not in the vaine. Exit.
Buck. And is it thus? repayes he my deepe seruice
With such contempt? made I him King for this?
O let me thinke on Hastings, and be gone
To Brecknock, while my fearefull Head is on. Exit.

Enter Tyrrel.

Tyr. The tyrannous and bloodie Act is done,
The most arch deed of pittious massacre

That euer yet this Land was guilty of:
Dighton and Forrest, who I did suborne
To do this peece of ruthfull Butchery,
Albeit they were flesh'e Villaines, bloody Dogges,
Melted with tenderneſſe, and milde compaſſion,
Wept like to Children, in their deathe ſad Story.
O thus (quoth Dighton) lay the gentle Babes:
Thus, thus (quoth Forreſt) girdling one another
Within their Alabaſter innocent Armes:
Their lips were foure red Roſes on a ſtalke,
And in their Summer Beauty kiſt each other.
A Booke of Prayers on their pillow lay,
Which one (quoth Forreſt) almoſt chang'd my minde:
But ohe the Diuell, there the Villaine ſtopt:
When Dighton thus told on, we ſmothered
The moſt repleniſhed ſweet worke of Nature,
That from the prime Creation ere ſhe framed.
Hence both are gone with Conſcience and Remorſe,
They could not ſpeake, and ſo I left them both,
To bearе this tydings to the bloody King.

Enter Richard.

And heere he comes. All health my Soueraigne Lord.
Ric. Kinde Torrell, am I happy in thy Newes.
Tir. If to heare doone the thing you gaue in charge,
Beget your happineſſe, be happy then,
For it is doone.
Rich. But did'ſt thou ſee them dead.
Tir. I did my Lord.
Rich. And buried gentle Torrell.
Tir. The Chaplaine of the Tower hath buried them,
But where (to ſay the truth) I do not know.
Rich. Come to me Torrel ſoone, and after Supper,
When thou ſhalt tell the proceſſe of their death.
Meane time, but thinke how I may do the good,
And be inheritor of thy deſire.
Farewell till then.
Tir. I humbly take my leaue.
Rich. The Sonne of Clarence haue I pent vp cloſe,
His daughter meanly haue I matche in marriage,
The Sonnes of Edward ſleepe in Abrahams bоſome,
And Anne my wife hath bid this world good night.
Now for I know the Britaine Richmond aymes
At yong Elizabeth my brothers daughter,
And by that knot looke proudly on the Crowne,
To her go I, a lolly thriuing wooer.

Enter Ratcliffe.

Rat. My Lord.
Rich. Good or bad newes, that thou com'ſt in ſo blunchy?
Rat. Bad news my Lord, Morton is fled to Richmond,
And Buckingham backt with the hardy Welſhmen
Is in the field, and ſtill his power encreaſeth.
Rich. Ely with Richmond troubles me more neere,
Then Buckingham and his rath leuied Strength.
Come, I haue learn'd, that fearfull commencing
Is leaden ſeruitor to dull delay.
Delay leds impotent and Snaile-pac'd Beggery:
Then fierie expedition be my wing,
Ioues Mercury, and Herald for a King:
Go muſter men: My counſaile is my Sheeld,
We muſt be breeſe, when Traitors braue the Field.

Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter old Queene Margaret.

Mar. So now proſperity begins to mellow,
And drop into the rotten mouth of death:
Heere in theſe Confines ſlily haue I lurkt,
To watch the waining of mine enemies.
A dire induction, am I witneſſe to,
And will to France, hoping the conſequence
Will proue as bitter, blacke, and Tragicall.
Withdraw thee wretched Margaret, who comes heere?

Enter Duchesse and Queene.

Qu. Ah my poore Princes! ah my tender Babes:
My vnblowed Flowres, new appearing ſweets:
If yet your gentle ſoules fly in the Ayre,
And be not fixt in doome perpetuall,
Houer about me with your aery wings,
And heare your mothers Lamentation.
Mar. Houer about her, ſay that right for right
Hath dim'd your Infant morne, to Aged night
Duc. So many miſeries haue crau'd my voyce,
That my woe-wearied tongue is ſtill and mute.
Edward Plantagenet, why art thou dead?
Mar. Plantagenet doth quit Plantagenet,
Edward for Edward, payes a dying debt.
Qu. Wilt thou, O God, flye from ſuch gentle Lambs,
And throw them in the intrailes of the Wolfe?
When didſt thou ſleepe, when ſuch a deed was done?
Mar. When holy Harry dyed, and my ſweet Sonne.
Duc Dead life, blind ſight, poore mortall liuing ghoſt,
Woes Scene, Worlds ſhame, Graues due, by life vſurpt,
Breefe abſtract and record of redious dayes,
Reſt thy vnreſt on Englands lawfull earth,
Vnlawfully made drunke with innocent blood.
Qu. Ah that thou would'ſt afloone afford a Grave,
As thou canſt yeeld a melancholly ſeate:
Then would I hide my bones, not reſt them heere,
Ah who hath any cauſe to mourne but wee?
Mar. If ancient ſorrow be moſt reuerent,
Giue mine the benefit of ſignoirie,
And let my greefes frowne on the vpper hand
If ſorrow can admit Society.
I had an Edward, till a Richard kill'd him:
I had a Husband, till a Richard kill'd him:
Thou had'ſt an Edward, till a Richard kill'd him:
Thou had'ſt a Richard, till a Richard kill'd him.
Duc. I had a Richard too, and thou did'ſt kill him;
I had a Rutland too, thou hop'ſt to kill him.
Mar. Thou had'ſt a Clarence too,
And Richard kill'd him.
From forth the kennell of thy wombe hath crept
A Hell-hound that doth hunt vs all to death:
That Dogge, that had his teeth before his eyes,
To worry Lambes, and lap their gentle blood:
That foule defacer of Gods handy worke:
That reignes in gauled eyes of weeping ſoules:
That excellent grand Tyrant of the earth,
Thy wombe let loſe to chaſe vs to our graues.
O vpright, juſt, and true-diſpoſing God,
How do I thanke thee, that this carnall Curre

Preyes

Prayes on the issue of his Mothers body,
And makes her Pue-fellow with others mone.

Dut. Oh Harries wife, triumph not in my woes:
God witnesse with me, I have wept for thine.

Mar. Beare with me: I am hungry for revenge,
And now I cloy me with beholding it.
Thy Edward he is dead, that kill'd my Edward,
The other Edward dead, to quit my Edward:
Yong Yorke, he is but boote, because both they
Matche not the high perfection of my losse.
Thy Clarence he is dead, that stab'd my Edward,
And the beholders of this frantick play,
Th'adulterate Hastings, Rivers, Vaughan, Grey,
Untimely smother'd in their dusky Graves.
Richard yet lives, Hels blacke Intelligencer,
Onely reserv'd their Factor, to buy soules,
And send them thither: But at hand, at hand
Infuses his pitiious and unpitied end.
Earth gapes, Hell burnes, Fiends roare, Saints pray,
To have him suddainly conuey'd from hence:
Cancell his bond of life, deare God I pray,
That I may live and say, The Dogge is dead.

Qu. O thou did'st prophesie, the time would come,
That I should wish for thee to helpe me curse
That bottel'd Spider, that foule bunch-back'd Toad.

Mar. I call'd thee then, vaine flourish of my fortune:
I call'd thee then, poore Shadow, painted Queen,
The presentation of but what I was;
The flattering Index of a direfull Pageant;
One heau'd a high, to be hurl'd downe below:
A Mother onely mockt with two faire Babes;
A dreame of what thou wast, a garish Flagge
To be the ayme of every dangerous Shot,
A signe of Dignity, a Breath, a Bubble;
A Queene in least, onely to fill the Scene.
Where is thy Husband now? Where be thy Brothers?
Where be thy two Sonnes? Wherein dost thou Joy?
Who sues, and kneeles, and sayes, God saue the Queene?
Where be the bending Peeres that flattered thee?
Where be the thronging Troopes that followed thee?
Decline all this, and see what now thou art.
For happy Wife, a most distressed Widdow:
For joyfull Mother, one that wailes the name:
For one being sued too, one that humbly sues:
For Queene, a very Caytiffe, crown'd with care:
For she that scorn'd at me, now scorn'd of me:
For she being feared of all, now fearing one:
For she commanding all, obey'd of none.
Thus hath the course of Iustice whirl'd about,
And left thee but a very prey to time,
Having no more but Thought of what thou wast.
To torture thee the more, being what thou art,
Thou didst vsurpe my place, and dost thou not
Vsurpe the iust proportion of my Sorrow?
Now thy proud Necke, beares halfe my burthen'd yoke,
From which, euen heere I slip my wearied head,
And leaue the burthen of it all, on thee.
Farwell Yorkes wife, and Queene of sad mischance,
These English woes, shall make me smile in France.

Qu. O thou well skill'd in Curses, stay a-while,
And teach me how to curse mine enemies.

Mar. Forbeare to sleepe the night, and fast the day:
Compare dead happinesse, with liuing woe:
Thinke that thy Babes were sweeter than they were,
And he that slew them fouler then he is:
Bett'ring thy losse, makes the bad causer worse,
Reuolving this, will teach thee how to Curse.

Qu. My words are dull, O quickken them with thine.

Mar. Thy woes will make them sharpe,
And pierce like mine. Exit Margaret.

Dut. Why should calamity be full of words?

Qu. Windy Attorneies to their Clients Woes,
Ayery succeeders of intestine Ioyes,
Poore breathing Orators of miseries,
Let them haue scope, though what they will impart,
Helpe nothing els, yet do they ease the hart.

Dut. If so then, be not Tongue-ty'd: go with me,
And in the breath of bitter words, let's smother
My damned Son, that thy two sweet Sonnes smother'd.
The Trumpet sounds, be copious in exclaimes.

Enter King Richard, and his Traine.

Rich. Who intercepes me in my Expedition?

Dut. O she, that might have intercepted thee
By strangling thee in her accursed wombe,
From all the slaughters (Wretch) that thou hast done.

Qu. Hid'st thou that Forhead with a Golden Crowne
Where't should be branded, if that right were right?
The slaughter of the Prince that ow'd that Crowne,
And the dyre death of my poore Sonnes, and Brothers.
Tell me thou Villaine-slaue, where are my Children?

Dut. Thou Toad, thou Toade,
Where is thy Brother Clarence?
And little Ned Plantagenet his Sonne?

Qu. Where is the gentle Rivers, Vaughan, Grey?

Dut. Where is kinde Hastings?

Rich. A flourish Trumpets, strike Alarum Drummes:
Let not the Heauens heare these Tell-tale women
Raile on the Lords Annointed. Strike I say.

Flourish. Alarums.

Either be patient, and intreat me fayre,
Or with the clamorous report of Warre,
Thus will I drowne your exclamations.

Dut. Art thou my Sonne?

Rich. I, I thanke God, my Father, and your selfe.

Dut. Then patiently heare my impatience.

Rich. Madam, I haue a touch of your condition,
That cannot brooke the accent of reproofe.

Dut. O let me speake.

Rich. Do then, but I'le not heare.

Dut: I will be milde, and gentle in my words.

Rich. And breefe (good Mother) for I am in hast.

Dut. Art thou so hasty? I haue staid for thee
(God knowes) in torment and in agony.

Rich. And came I not at last to comfort you?

Dut. No by the holy Rood, thou know'st it well,
Thou cam'st on earth, to make the earth my Hell.
A grevious burthen was thy Birth to me,
Teethy and wayward was thy Infancie.
Thy School-dayes frightfull, desp'rate, wilde, and furious,
Thy prime of Manhood, daring, bold, and vnruly,
Thy Age confirm'd, proud, subtle, slye, and bloody,
More milde, but yet more harmfull; Kinde in hatred:
What comfortable hour canst thou name,
That euer grac'd me with thy company?

Rich. Faith none, but Humfrey Hower,
That call'd your Grace
To Breakefast once, forth of my company.
If I be so disgracious in your eye,
Let me march on, and not offend you Madam.
Strike vp the Drummes.

Dut. I prythee heare me speake.

Rich. You speake too bitterly.
Dut. Heare me a word:
For I shall neuer speake to thee againe.
Rich. So.
Dut. Either thou wilt dye, by Gods iust ordinance
Ere from this warre thou turne a Conqueror:
Or I with greefe and extreame Age shall perish,
And neuer more behold thy face againe.
Therefore take with thee my most greeuous Curse,
Which in the day of Battell tyre thee more
Then all the complete Armour that thou wear'ſt.
My Prayers on the aduerse party fight,
And there the little soules of Edwards Children,
Whisper the Spirits of thine Enemies,
And promise them Successe and Victory:
Bloody thou art, bloody will be thy end:
Shame serues thy life, and doth thy death attend. Exit.
Qu. Though far more cause, yet much lesse spirit to curse
Abides in me, I say Amen to her.
Rich. Stay Madam, I must talke a word with you.
Qu. I haue no more sonnes of the Royall Blood
For thee to slaughter. For my Daughters (Richard)
They shall be praying Nunnes, not weeping Queenes:
And therefore lessell not to hit their lines.
Rich. You haue a daughter call'd Elizabeth,
Vertuous and Faire, Royall and Gracious?
Qu. And must she dye for this? O let her liue,
And I'le corrupt her Manners, staine her Beauty,
Slander my Selfe, as false to Edwards bed:
Throw ouer her the vaile of Infamy,
So she may liue vnscarr'd of bleeding slaughter,
I will confesse she was not Edwards daughter.
Rich. Wrong not her Byrth, she is a Royall Princesse.
Qu. To saue her life, I'le say she is not so.
Rich. Her life is safest only in her byrth.
Qu. And only in that safety, dyed her Brothers.
Rich. Loe at their Birth, good starres were opposite.
Qu. No, to their liues, ill friends were contrary.
Rich. All vnauoyded is the doome of Destiny.
Qu. True: when auoyded grace makes Destiny.
My Babes were destin'd to a fairer death,
If grace had blest thee with a fairer life.
Rich. You speake as if that I had slaine my Cosins?
Qu. Cosins indeed, and by their Vnckle cozzened,
Of Comfort, Kingdome, Kindred, Freedome, Life,
Whose hand soouer lanch'd their tender hearts,
Thy head (all indeerfly) gaue direction.
No doubt the murd'rous Knife was dull and blunt,
Till it was whetted on thy stone-hard heart,
To reuell in the Intrailes of my Lambes.
But that still vse of greefe, makes wilde greefe tame,
My tongue should to thy eares not name my Boyes,
Till that my Nayles were anchor'd in thine eyes:
And I in such a desp'rate Bay of death,
Like a poore Barke, of sailes and tackling reft,
Rush all to peeces on thy Rocky bosome.
Rich. Madam, so thriue I in my enterprise
And dangerous successe of bloody warres,
As I intend more good to you and yours,
Then euer you and yours by me were harm'd.
Qu. What good is couer'd with the face of heauen,
To be discouered, that can do me good.
Rich. Th'aduancement of your children, gentle Lady
Qu. Vp to some Scaffold, there to lose their heads.
Rich. Vnto the dignity and height of Fortune,
The high Imperiall Type of this earthe glory.
Qu. Flatter my sorrow with report of it:
Tell m , what State, what Dignity, what Honor,
Canst thou demise to any childe of mine.
Rich. Euen all I haue; I, and my selfe and all,
Will I withall indow a childe of thine:
So in the Lethe of thy angry soule,
Thou drowne the sad remembrance of those wrongs,
Which thou supposest I haue done to thee.
Qu. Be breefe, least that the processe of thy kindnesse
Last longer telling then thy kindnesse date.
Rich. Then know,
That from my Soule, I loue thy Daughter.
Qu. My daughters Mother thinkes it with her soule.
Rich. What do you thinke?
Qu. That thou dost loue my daughter from thy soule
So from thy Soules loue didst thou loue her Brothers,
And from my hearts loue, I do thanke thee for it.
Rich. Be not so hasty to confound my meaning:
I meane that with my Soule I loue thy daughter,
And do intend to make her Queene of England.
Qu. Well then, who dost I meane shall be her King.
Rich. Euen he that makes her Queene:
Who else should bee?
Qu. What, thou?
Rich. Euen so: How thinke you of it?
Qu. How canst thou woo her?
Rich. That I would learne of you,
As one being best acquainted with her humour.
Qu. And wilt thou learne of me?
Rich. Madam, with all my heart.
Qu. Send to her by the man that slew her Brothers,
A paire of bleeding hearts: thereon ingraue
Edward and Yorke, then happy will she weepe:
Therefore present to her, as sometime Margaret
Did to thy Father, steept in Rutlands blood,
A hand-kercheefe, which say to her did dreyne
The purple sappe from her sweet Brothers body,
And bid her wipe her weeping eyes withall.
If this inducement moue her not to loue,
Send her a Letter of thy Noble deeds:
Tell her, thou mad'ſt away her Vnckle Clarence,
Her Vnckle Riuers, I (and for her sake)
Mad'ſt quicke conueyance with her good Aunt Anne.
Rich. You mocke me Madam, this not the way
To win your daughter.
Qu. There is no other way,
Vnlesse thou could'ſt put on some other shape,
And not be Richard, that hath done all this.
Ric. Say that I did all this for loue of her.
Qu. Nay then indeed she cannot choose but hate thee
Having bought loue, with such a bloody spoyle.
Rich. Looke what is done, cannot be now amended:
Men shall deale vnadisedly sometimes,
Which after-hours giues leysure to repent.
If I did take the Kingdome from your Sonnes,
To make amends, I'le giue it to your daughter:
If I haue kill'd the issue of your wombe,
To quicken your encrease, I will beget
Mine issue of your blood, vpon your Daughter:
A Grandams name is little lesse in loue,
Then is the doting Title of a Mother;
They are as Children but one steppe below,
Euen of your mettall, of your very blood:
Of all one paine, save for a night of groanes
Endur'd of her, for whom you bid like sorrow.
Your Children were vexation to your youth,

But

But mine shall be a comfort to your Age,
The losse you have, is but a Sonne being King,
And by that losse, your Daughter is made Queene.
I cannot make you what amends I would,
Therefore accept such kindnesse as I can.
Dorset your Sonne, that with a fearfull soule
Leads discontented steppes in Forraine soyle,
This faire Alliance, quickly shall call home
To high Promotions, and great Dignity.
The King that calles your beauteous Daughter Wife,
Familiarly shall call thy Dorset, Brother:
Againe shall you be Mother to a King:
And all the Ruines of distressefull Times,
Repayr'd with double Riches of Content.
What? we have many goodly dayes to see:
The liquid drops of Teares that you have shed,
Shall come againe, transform'd to Orient Pearle,
Advantaging their Loue, with interest
Of ten-times double gaine of happinesse.
Go then (my Mother) to thy Daughter go,
Make bold her bashfull yeares, with your experience,
Prepare her eares to heare a Woers Tale.
Put in her tender heart, th'aspiring Flame
Of Golden Soueraignty: Acquaint the Princesse
With the sweet silent houres of Marriage loyes:
And when this Arme of mine hath chastised
The petty Rebell, dull-brain'd Buckingham,
Bound with Triumphant Garlands will I come,
And leade thy daughter to a Conqueror bed:
To whom I will retaile my Conquest wonne,
And she shalbe sole Victoresse, Cæsars Cæsar.
Qu. What were I best to say, her Fathers Brother
Would be her Lord? Or shall I say her Vnkle?
Or he that slew her Brothers, and her Vnkles?
Vnder what Title shall I woo for thee,
That God, the Law, my Honor, and her Loue,
Can make seeme pleasing to her tender yeares?
Rich. Inferre faire Englands peace by this Alliance.
Qu. Which she shall purchase with still lasting warre.
Rich. Tell her, the King that may command, intreats.
Qu. That at her hands, which the kings King forbids.
Rich. Say she shall be a High and Mighty Queene.
Qu. To vaile the Title, as her Mother doth.
Rich. Say I will loue her everlastingly.
Qu. But how long shall that title ever last?
Rich. Sweetly in force, vnto her faire lives end.
Qu. But how long fairely shall her sweet life last?
Rich. As long as Heaven and Nature lengthens it.
Qu. As long as Hell and Richard likes of it.
Rich. Say, I her Soueraigne, am her Subiect low.
Qu. But she your Subiect, loathes such Soueraignty.
Rich. Be eloquent in my behalfe to her.
Qu. An honest tale speeds best, being plainly told.
Rich. Then plainly to her, tell my louing tale.
Qu. Plaine and not honest, is too harsh a style.
Rich. Your Reasons are too shallow, and too quicke.
Qu. O no, my Reasons are too deepe and dead,
Too deepe and dead (poore Infants) in their graues.
Harpe on it still shall I, till heart-strings breake.
Rich. Harpe not on that string Madam, that is past.
Now by my George, my Garter, and my Crowne.
Qu. Prophan'd, dishonor'd, and the third vsurpt.
Rich. I swearre.
Qu. By nothing, for this is no Oath:
Thy George prophan'd, hath lost his Lordly Honor;
Thy Garter blemish'd, pawn'd his Knightly Vertue;
Thy Crowne vsurp'd, disgrac'd his Kingly Glory:
If something thou would'st sweare to be beleeu'd,
Sweare then by something, that thou hast not wrong'd.
Rich. Then by my Selfe.
Qu. Thy Selfe, is selfe-misvs'd.
Rich. Now by the World.
Qu. 'Tis full of thy foule wrongs.
Rich. My Fathers death.
Qu. Thy life hath it dishonor'd.
Rich. Why then, by Heaven.
Qu. Heauens wrong is most of all:
If thou didd'st feare to breake an Oath with him,
The vaine the King my husband made,
Thou had'st not broken, nor my Brothers died.
If thou had'st fear'd to breake an oath by him,
Th'Imperiall metteall, circling now thy head,
Had grac'd the tender temples of my Child,
And both the Princes had bene breathing heere,
Which now two tender Bed-fellowes for dust,
Thy broken Faith hath made the prey for Wormes.
What can'st thou sweare by now.
Rich. The time to come.
Qu. That thou hast wronged in the time ore-past:
For I my selfe have many teares to wash
Hereafter time, for time past, wrong'd by thee.
The Children liue, whose Fathers thou hast slaughter'd,
Vngotten'd youth, to waile it with their age:
The Parents liue, whose Children thou hast butcher'd,
Old barren Plants, to waile it with their Age.
Sweare not by time to come, for that thou hast
Misvs'd ere vs'd, by times ill-vs'd repast.
Rich. As I intend to prosper, and repent:
So thriue I in my dangerous Affayres
Of hostile Armes: My selfe, my selfe confound:
Heauen, and Fortune barre me happy houres:
Day, yeeld me not thy light; nor Night, thy rest.
Be opposite all Planets of good luckie
To my proceeding, if with deere hearts loue,
Immaculate deuotion, holy thoughts,
I tender not thy beauteous Princely daughter.
In her, consists my Happinesse, and thine:
Without her, followes to my selfe, and thee;
Her selfe, the Land, and many a Christian soule,
Death, Desolation, Ruine, and Decay:
It cannot be auoyded, but by this:
It will not be auoyded, but by this.
Therefore dearest Mother (I must call you so)
Be the Attorney of my loue to her:
Pleade what I will be, not what I haue done;
Not my desarts, but what I will deserue:
Vrge the Necessity and state of times,
And be not peeuish found, in great Designes.
Qu. Shall I be tempted of the Diuell thus?
Rich. I, if the Diuell tempt you to do good.
Qu. Shall I forget my selfe, to be my selfe.
Rich. I, if your selfes remembrance wrong your selfe.
Qu. Yet thou didst kil my Children.
Rich. But in your daughters wombe I bury them.
Where in that Nest of Spicery they will breed
Selues of themselues, to your recomforture.
Qu. Shall I go win my daughter to thy will?
Rich. And be a happy Mother by the deed.
Qu. I go, write to me very shortly,
And you shal vnderstand from me her mind. Exit Q.
Rich. Bearе her my true loues kisse, and so farewell.
Relenting Foole, and shallow-changing Woman.

How

How now, what newes?

Enter Ratcliffe.

Rat. Most mightie Soueraigne, on the Weſtone Coaſt
Rideth a puiſſant Nauie: to our Shores
Throng many doubtfull hollow-hearted friends,
Vnarm'd, and vnreſolu'd to beat them backe.
'Tis thought, that Richmond is their Admirall:
And theſe they hull, expecting but the aide
Of Buckingham, to welcome them aſhore.
Rich. Some light-foot friend poſt to § Duke of Norfolk:
Ratcliffe thy ſelfe, or Catesby, where is he?
Cat. Here, my good Lord.
Rich. Catesby, flye to the Duke.
Cat. I will, my Lord, with all conuenient haſte.
Rich. Catesby come hither, poſte to Salisbury:
When thou com'ſt thither: Dull vnmindfull Villaine,
Why ſtay'ſt thou here, and go'ſt not to the Duke?
Cat. First, mighty Liege, tell me your Highneſſe pleaſure,
What from your Grace I ſhall deliuer to him.
Rich. O true, good Catesby, bid him leuie ſtraight
The greateſt ſtrength and power that he can make,
And meet me ſuddenly at Salisbury.
Cat. I goe. Exit.
Rat. What, may it pleaſe you, ſhall I doe at Salisbury?
Rich. Why, what would'ſt thou doe there, before I goe?
Rat. Your Highneſſe told me I ſhould poſte before.
Rich. My minde is chang'd:

Enter Lord Stanley.

Stanley, what newes with you?
Sta. None, good my Liege, to pleaſe you with § hearing,
Nor none ſo bad, but well may be reported.
Rich. Hoyday, a Riddle, neither good nor bad:
What need'ſt thou runne ſo many miles about,
When thou mayeſt tell thy Tale the neareſt way?
Once more, what newes?
Sta. Richmond is on the Seas.
Rich. There let him ſinke, and be the Seas on him,
White-liuer'd Runnagate, what doth he there?
Sta. I know not, mightie Soueraigne, but by gueſſe.
Rich. Well, as you gueſſe.
Sta. Stirr'd vp by Dorſet, Buckingham, and Morton,
He makes for England, here to clayme the Crowne.
Rich. Is the Chayre emptie? is the Sword vnſway'd?
Is the King dead? the Empire vnpoſſeſt?
What Heire of Yorke is there aliue, but wee?
And who is Englands King, but great Yorkes Heire?
Then tell me, what makes he vpon the Seas?
Sta. Vnleſſe for that, my Liege, I cannot gueſſe.
Rich. Vnleſſe for that he comes to be your Liege,
You cannot gueſſe wherefore the Welchman comes.
Thou wilt reuolt, and flye to him, I feare.
Sta. No, my good Lord, therefore miſtruſt me not.
Rich. Where is thy Power then, to beat him back?
Where be thy Tenants, and thy followers?
Are they not now vpon the Weſterne Shore,
Safe-conducting the Rebels from their Shippes?
Sta. No, my good Lord, my friends are in the North.
Rich. Cold friends to me: what do they in the North,
When they ſhould ſerue their Soueraigne in the Weſt?
Sta. They haue not been commanded, mighty King:
Pleaſeth your Maieſtie to giue me leaue,
I'le muſter vp my friends, and meet your Grace,
Where, and what time your Maieſtie ſhall pleaſe.
Rich. I, thou would'ſt be gone, to ioyne with Richmond:
But I'le not truſt thee.
Sta. Moſt mightie Soueraigne,
You haue no cauſe to hold my friendſhip doubtfull,
I never was, nor never will be falſe.
Rich. Goe then, and muſter men: but leaue behind
Your Sonne George Stanley: looke your heart be firme,
Or elſe his Heads aſſeurance is but faine.
Sta. So deale with him, as I proue true to you.
Exit Stanley.

Enter a Meſſenger.

Meſſ. My gracious Soueraigne, now in Deuonſhire,
As I by friends am well aduertiſed,
Sir Edward Courtney, and the haughtie Prelate,
Biſhop of Exeter, his elder Brother,
With many moe Confederates, are in Armes.

Enter another Meſſenger.

Meſſ. In Kent, my Liege, the Guiſfords are in Armes,
And every hour more Competitors
Flocke to the Rebels, and their power growes ſtrong.

Enter another Meſſenger.

Meſſ. My Lord, the Armie of great Buckingham.
Rich. Out on ye, Owles, nothing but Songs of Death,
He ſtrikes him.
There, take thou that, till thou bring better newes.
Meſſ. The newes I haue to tell, your Maieſtie,
Is, that by ſudden Floods, and fall of Waters,
Buckingham's Armie is diſpers'd and ſcatter'd,
And he himſelfe wandred away alone,
No man knowes whither.
Rich. I cry thee mercie:
There is my Purſe, to cure that Blow of thine.
Hath any well-addiſed friend proclaym'd
Reward to him that brings the Traytor in?
Meſſ. Such Proclamation hath been made, my Lord.

Enter another Meſſenger.

Meſſ. Sir Thomas Louel, and Lord Marqueſſe Dorſet,
'Tis ſaid, my Liege, in Yorkeſhire are in Armes:
But this good comfort bring I to your Highneſſe,
The Brittaine Nauie is diſpers'd by Tempeſt.
Richmond in Dorſetſhire ſent out a Boat
Vnto the ſhore, to aſke thoſe on the Banks,
If they were his Aſſiſtants, yea, or no?
Who anſwer'd him, they came from Buckingham,
Vpon his partie: he miſtrueting them,
Hoys'd ſayle, and made his courſe againe for Brittaine.
Rich. March on, march on, ſince we are vp in Armes,
If not to fight with forraine Enemies,
Yet to beat downe theſe Rebels here at home.

Enter Catesby.

Cat. My Liege, the Duke of Buckingham is taken,
That is the beſt newes: that the Earle of Richmond

Is with a mighty power Landed at Milford,
Is ouldar Newes, but yet they must be told.
Rich. Away towards Salsbury, while we reason here,
A Royall battell might be woone and lost:
Some one take order Buckingham be brought To Salsbury, the rest march on with me. Florish. Exeunt

Scena Quarta.

Enter Derby, and Sir Christopher.

Der. Sir Christopher, tell Richmond this from me,
That in the stye of the most deadly Boore,
My Sonne George Stanley is franke vp in hold:
If I reuolt, off goes yong Georges head,
The feare of that, holds off my present ayde.
So get thee gone: commend me to thy Lord.
Withall say, that the Queene hath heartily consented
He should espouse Elizabeth her daughter.
But tell me, where is Princely Richmond now?
Chri. At Penbroke, or at Hertford West in Wales.
Der. What men of Name resort to him.
Chri. Sir Walter Herbert, a renowned Souldier,
Sir Gilbert Talbot, Sir William Stanley,
Oxford, redoubted Pembroke, Sir Iamer Blunt,
And Rice ap Thomas, with a valiant Crew,
And many other of great name and worth:
And towards London do they bend their power,
If by the way they be not fought withall.
Der. Well bye thee to thy Lord: I kisse his hand,
My Letter will resolue him of my minde.
Farewell. Exeunt

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter Buckingham with Halberds, led to Execution

Buc. Will not King Richard let me speake with him?
Sher. No my good Lord, therefore be patient.
Buc. Hastings, and Edwards children, Grey & Riuers,
Holy King Henry, and thy faire Sonne Edward,
Vaughan, and all that have miscarried
By vnder-hand corrupted foule iniustice,
If that your moody discontented soules,
Do through the clouds behold this present houre,
Euen for revenge mocke my destruction.
This is All-soules day (Fellow) is it not?
Sher. It is.
Buc. Why then All-soules day, is my bodies doomsday
This is the day, which in King Edwards time
I wish'd might fall on me, when I was found
False to his Children, and his Wiues Allies,
This is the day, wherein I wishe to fall
By the false Faith of him whom most I trusted.
This, this All-soules day to my fearfull Soule,
Is the determin'd respit of my wrongs.
That high All-seer, which I dallied with,
Hath turn'd my fained Prayer on my head,
And given in earnest, what I begg'd in iest.
Thus doth he force the swords of wicked men
To turne their owne points in their Masters bosomes.
Thus Margarets curse falles heavy on my neckt:
When he (quoth she) shall split thy heart with sorrow,
Remember Margaret was a Prophetesse:
Come leade me Officers to the blocke of shame,
Wrong hath but wrong, and blame the due of blame.
Exeunt Buckingham with Officers.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Richmond, Oxford, Blunt, Herbert, and others, with drum and colours.

Richm Fellowes in Armes, and my most louing Friends
Bruis'd vnderneath the yoake of Tyranny,
Thus farre into the bowels of the Land,
Haue we marcht on without impediment;
And heere receive we from our Father Stanley
Lines of faire comfort and encouragement:
The wretched, bloody, and vsurping Boare,
(That spoyl'd your Summer Fields, and fruitfull Vines)
Swilles your warm blood like wash, & makes his trough
In your embowel'd bosomes: This foule Swine
Is now euen in the Centry of this Isle,
Ne're to the Towne of Leicester, as we learne:
From Tamworth thither, is but one dayes march.
In Gods name cheerely on, courageous Friends,
To reape the Harvest of perpetuall peace,
By this one bloody tryall of sharpe Warre.
Oxf. Every mans Conscience is a thousand men,
To fight against this guilty Homicide.
Her. I doubt not but his Friends will turne to vs.
Blunt. He hath no friends, but what are friends for feare
Which in his deerest neede will flye from him.
Richm. All for our vantage, then in Gods name march,
True Hope is swift, and flyes with Swallowes wings,
Kings it makes Gods, and meaner creatures Kings.
Exeunt Omnes.

Enter King Richard in Armes with Norfolke, Ratcliffe, and the Earle of Surrey.

Rich. Here pitch our Tent, even here in Bosworth field.
My Lord of Surrey, why looke you so sad?
Sur. My heart is ten times lighter then my lookes.
Rich. My Lord of Norfolke.
Nor. Heere most gracious Liege.
Rich. Norfolke, we must haue knocks:
Ha, must we not?
Nor. We must both give and take my louing Lord.
Rich. Vp with my Tent, heere will I lye to night,
But where to morrow? Well, all's one for that.
Who hath deserted the number of the Traitors?
Nor Six or seuen thousand is their vtmost power.
Rich. Why our Battalia trebbles that accounts
Besides, the Kings name is a Tower of strength,
Which they vpon the aduerse Faction want.
Vp with the Tent: Come Noble Gentlemen,
Let vs survey the vantage of the ground.
Call for some men of sound direction:

Let's

Let's lacke no Discipline, make no delay,
For Lords, to morrow is a busie day. Exeunt

Enter Richmond, Sir William Brandon, Oxford, and Dorset.

Richm. The weary Sonne, hath made a Golden set,
And by the bright Tract of his fiery Carre,
Gives tokens of a goodly day to morrow.
Sir William Brandon, you shall beare my Standard:
Give me some Inke and Paper in my Tent:
I'le draw the Forme and Modell of our Battaile,
Limit each Leader to his severall Charge,
And part in just proportion our small Power.
My Lord of Oxford, you Sir William Brandon,
And your Sir Walter Herbert stay with me:
The Earle of Pembroke keepes his Regiment;
Good Captaine Blunt, beare my goodnight to him,
And by the second houre in the Morning,
Desire the Earle to see me in my Tent:
Yet one thing more (good Captaine) do for me:
Where is Lord Stanley quarter'd, do you know?
Blunt. Unlesse I have mistaine his Colours much,
(Which well I am assur'd I have not done)
His Regiment lies halfe a Mile at least
South, from the mighty Power of the King.
Richm. If without perill it be possible,
Sweet Blunt, make some good meanes to speak with him
And give him from me, this most needfull Note.
Blunt. Upon my life, my Lord, I'le undertake it,
And so God give you quiet rest to night.
Richm. Good night good Captaine Blunt:
Come Gentlemen,
Let vs consult upon to morrowes Businesse;
Into my Tent, the Dew is rawe and cold.
They withdraw into the Tent.

Enter Richard, Ratcliffe, Norfolke, & Catesby.

Rich. What is't a Clocke?
Cat. It's Supper time my Lord, it's nine a cloche.
King. I will not sup to night,
Give me some Inke and Paper:
What, is my Beaver easier then it was?
And all my Armour laid into my Tent?
Cat. It is my Liege: and all things are in readinesse.
Rich. Good Norfolke, hye thee to thy charge,
Vse carefull Watch, choose trusty Centinels.
Nor. I go my Lord.
Rich. Stir with the Larke to morrow, gentle Norfolk.
Nor. I warrant you my Lord. Exit
Rich. Ratcliffe.
Rat. My Lord.
Rich. Send out a Pursuivant at Armes
To Stanleys Regiment: bid him bring his power
Before Sun-rising, least his Sonne George fall
Into the blinde Cave of eternall night.
Fill me a Bowle of Wine: Give me a Watch,
Saddle white Surrey for the Field to morrow:
Look that my Staves be found, & not too heavy. Ratcliff.
Rat. My Lord.
Rich. Saw'st the melancholly Lord Northumberland?
Rat. Thomas the Earle of Surrey, and himselfe,
Much about Cockshut time, from Troope to Troope
Went through the Army, cheering vp the Souldiers.
King. So, I am satisfied: Give me a Bowle of Wine,
I have not that Alacrity of Spirit,
Nor cheere of Minde that I was wont to have.
Set it downe. Is Inke and Paper ready?
Rat. It is my Lord.
Rich. Bid my Guard watch. Leave me.
Ratcliffe, about the mid of night come to my Tent
And helpe to arme me. Leave me I say. Exit Ratcliff.

Enter Derby to Richmond in his Tent.

Der. Fortune, and Victory sit on thy Helme.
Rich. All comfort that the darke night can afford,
Be to thy Person, Noble Father in Law.
Tell me, how fares our Noble Mother?
Der. I by Attourney, blesse thee from thy Mother,
Who prayes continually for Richmonds good:
So much for that. The silent houres steale on,
And flaki'e darknesse breakes within the East.
In breefe, for so the season bids vs be,
Prepare thy Battell early in the Morning,
And put thy Fortune to th'Arbitrement
Of bloody strokes, and mortall staring Warre:
I, as I may, that which I would, I cannot,
With best advantage will deceive the time,
And styde thee in this doubtfull shocke of Armes.
But on thy side I may not be too forward,
Least being seene, thy Brother, tender George
Be executed in his Fathers sight.
Farewell: the leysure, and the fearfull time
Cuts off the ceremonious Vowes of Love,
And ample enterchange of sweet Discourse,
Which so long sundred Friends should dwell vpon:
God give vs leysure for these rites of Love.
Once more Adieu, be valiant, and speed well.
Richm. Good Lords conduct him to his Regiment:
I'le strive with troubled noise, to take a Nap,
Least leaden slumber poize me downe to morrow,
When I should mount with wings of Victory:
Once more, good night kinde Lords and Gentlemen.
Exeunt. Manet Richmond.
O thou, whose Captaine I account my selfe,
Looke on my Forces with a gracious eye:
Put in their hands thy bruising Irons of wrath,
That they may crush downe with a heavy fall,
Th'vsurping Helmets of our Adversaries:
Make vs thy ministers of Chastisement,
That we may praise thee in thy victory:
To thee I do commend my watchfull soule,
Ere I let fall the windowes of mine eyes:
Sleeping, and waking, oh defend me still. Sleeps.

Enter the Ghost of Prince Edward, Sonne to Henry the sixt.

Gh. to Ri. Let me sit heavy on thy soule to morrow:
Thinke how thou stab'st me in my prime of youth
At Tewkesbury: Dispaire therefore, and dye.
Ghost to Richm. Be cheerefull Richmond,
For the wronged Soules
Of butcher'd Princes, fight in thy behalfe:
King Henries issue Richmond comforts thee.

Enter the Ghost of Henry the sixt.

Ghost. When I was mortall, my Anointed body
By thee was punched full of holes;
Thinke on the Tower, and me: Dispaire, and dye,
Harry the sixt, bids thee dispaire, and dye.
To Richm. Vertuous and holy be thou Conqueror:
Harry that prophesied thou should'st be King,
Doth comfort thee in sleepe: Live, and flourish.

Enter the Ghost of Clarence.

Ghost. Let me sit heavy in thy soule to morrow.
I that was wash'd to death with Fulsome Wine:
Poore Clarence by thy guile betray'd to death:
To morrow in the battell thinke on me,
And fall thy edgelesse Sword, dispaire and dye.

To Richm. Thou off-spring of the house of Lancaster
The wronged heyres of Yorke do pray for thee,
Good Angels guard thy battell, Live and Flourish.

Enter the Ghosts of Rivers, Grey, and Vaughan.

Riv. Let me sit heavy in thy soule to morrow,
Rivers, that dy'de at Pomfret: dispaire, and dye.

Grey. Thinke vpon Grey, and let thy soule dispaire.

Vaugh. Thinke vpon Vaughan, and with guilty fears
Let fall thy Lance, dispaire and dye.

All to Richm. Awake,
And thinke our wrongs in Richards Bosome,
Will conquer him. Awake, and win the day.

Enter the Ghost of Lord Hastings.

Gho. Bloody and guilty: guiltily awake,
And in a bloody Battell end thy dayes.
Thinke on Lord Hastings: dispaire, and dye.

Hast. to Rich. Quiet vnrouobled soule,
Awake, awake:
Arme, fight, and conquer, for faire Englands sake.

Enter the Ghosts of the two young Princes.

Ghosts. Dreame on thy Cousins
Smothered in the Tower:
Let vs be laid within thy bosome Richard,
And weigh thee downe to ruine, shame, and death,
Thy Nephewes soule bids thee dispaire and dye.

Ghosts to Richm. Sleepe Richmond,
Sleepe in Peace, and wake in Ioy,
Good Angels guard thee from the Boares anoy,
Live, and beget a happy race of Kings,
Edwards vnhappy Sonnes, do bid thee flourish.

Enter the Ghost of Anne his Wife.

Ghost to Rich. Richard, thy Wife,
That wretched Anne thy Wife,
That never slept a quiet houre with thee,
Now fillies thy sleepe with perturbations,
To morrow in the Battaile, thinke on me,
And fall thy edgelesse Sword, dispaire and dye:

Ghost to Richm. Thou quiet soule,
Sleepe thou a quiet sleepe:
Dreame of Successe, and Happy Victory,
Thy Adversaries Wife doth pray for thee.

Enter the Ghost of Buckingham.

Ghost to Rich. The first was I
That help'd thee to the Crowne:
The last was I that felt thy Tyranny.
O, in the Battaile think on Buckingham,
And dye in terror of thy guiltinesse.
Dreame on, dreame on, of bloody deeds and death,
Fainting dispaire; dispairing yeeld thy breath.

Ghost to Richm. I dyed for hope
Ere I could lend thee Ayde:
But cheere thy heart, and be thou not dismayde:
God, and good Angels fight on Richmonds side,
And Richard fall in height of all his pride.

Richard starts out of his dreame.

Rich. Give me another Horse, bind vp my Wounds:
Have mercy Iesu. Soft, I did but dreame.
O coward Conscience! how dost thou afflict me?
The Lights burne blew. It is not dead midnight.
Cold feareful drops stand on my trembling flesh.
What? do I feare my Selfe? There's none else by,
Richard loves Richard, that is, I am I.
Is there a Murtherer heere? No; Yes, I am:
Then flye; What from my Selfe? Great reason: why?
Lest I Revenge. What? my Selfe vpon my Selfe?
Alacke, I love my Selfe. Wherefore? For any good
That I my Selfe, have done vnto my Selfe?
O no. Alas, I rather hate my Selfe,
For hatefull Deeds committed by my Selfe.
I am a Villaine: yet I Lye, I am not.
Fooles, of thy Selfe speake well: Fooles, do not flatter.
My Conscience hath a thousand severall Tongues,
And every Tongue brings in a severall Tale,
And every Tale condemnes me for a Villaine;
Perjurie, in the high'st Degree,
Murther, sterne murther, in the dyr'st degree,
All severall sinnes, all vs'd in each degree,
Throng all to'th Barre, crying all, Guilty, Guilty.
I shall dispaire, there is no Creature loves me;
And if I die, no soule shall pittie me.
Nay, wherefore should they? Since that I my Selfe,
Finde in my Selfe, no pittie to my Selfe.
Me thought, the Soules of all that I had murther'd
Came to my Tent, and every one did threate
To morrowes vengeance on the head of Richard.

Enter Ratcliffe.

Rat. My Lord.

King Who's there?

Rat. Ratcliffe my Lord, 'tis I: the early Village Cock
Hath twice done salutation to the Morne,
Your Friends are vp, and buckle on their Armour.

King. O Ratcliffe, I feare, I feare.

Rat. Nay good my Lord, be not affraid of Shadows.

King. By the Apostle Paul, shadowes to night
Have stroke more terror to the soule of Richard,
Then can the substance of ten thousand Souldiers
Armed in proofe, and led by shallow Richmond.
'Tis not yet neere day. Come go with me,
Vnder our Tents I'le play the Eaves-dropper,
To heare if any meane to shrinke from me.

Exeunt Richard & Ratcliffe.

Enter the Lords to Richmond sitting in his Tent.

Richm. Good morrow Richmond.

Rich. Cry mercy Lords, and watchfull Gentlemen,
That you have tane a tardie sluggard heere?

Lords. How have you slept my Lord?

Rich. The sweetest sleepe,
And fairest boding Dreames,
That ever entred in a drowsie head,
Have I since your departure had my Lords.
Me thought their Soules, whose bodies Rich. murther'd,
Came to my Tent, and cried on Victory:
I promise you my Heart is very iocund,
In the remembrance of so faire a dreame,
How farre into the Morning is it Lords?

Lor. Vpon the stroke of foure.

Rich. Why then 'tis time to Arme, and give direction.

His Oration to his Souldiers.

More than I have said, loving Countrymen,
The leysure and imperteynence of the time
Forbids to dwell vpon: yet remember this,

God

God, and our good cause, fight upon our side,
The Prayers of holy Saints and wronged soules,
Like high rear'd Bulwarkes, stand before our Faces.
(Richard except) those whom we fight against,
Had rather have vs win, then him they follow.
For, what is he they follow? Truly Gentlemen,
A bloody Tyrant, and a Homicide:
One rais'd in blood, and one in blood establish'd;
One that made meanes to come by what he hath,
And slaughter'd those that were the meanes to help him:
A base foule Stone, made precious by the foyle
Of Englands Chaire, where he is falsely set:
One that hath ever been Gods Enemy.
Then if you fight against Gods Enemy,
God will in Iustice ward you as his Souldiers.
If you do sweare to put a Tyrant downe,
You sleepe in peace, the Tyrant being slaine:
If you do fight against your Countries Foes,
Your Countries Fat shall pay your paines the hyre.
If you do fight in safeguard of your wives,
Your wives shall welcome home the Conquerors.
If you do free your Children from the Sword,
Your Childrens Children quites it in your Age.
Then in the name of God and all these rights,
Advance your Standards, draw your willing Swords.
For me, the ransome of my bold attempt,
Shall be this cold Corpse on the earth's cold face.
But if I thrive, the gaine of my attempt,
The least of you shall share his part thereof.
Sound Drummes and Trumpets boldly, and cheerefully,
God, and Saint George, Richmond, and Victory.

Enter King Richard, Ratcliffe, and Catesby.

K. What said Northumberland as touching Richmond?
Rat. That he was never trained vp in Armes.
King. He said the truth: and what said Surrey then?
Rat. He said'd and said, the better for our purpose.
King. He was in the right, and so indeed it is,
Tell the clocke there. Clocke strikes.
Give me a Kalender: Who saw the Sunne to day?
Rat. Not I my Lord.
King. Then he disdaines to shine: for by the Booke
He should have brav'd the East an houre ago,
A blacke day will it be to somebody. Ratcliffe.
Rat. My Lord.
King. The Sun will not be seene to day.
The sky doth frowne, and lowre vpon our Array.
I would these dewy teares were from the ground.
Not shine to day? Why, what is that to me
More then to Richmond? For the selfe-same Heaven
That frowneth on me, lookes sadly vpon him.

Enter Norfolke.

Nor. Arme, arme, my Lord: the foe vaunts in the field.
King. Come, bustle, bustle. Caparison my horse.
Call vp Lord Stanley, bid him bring his power,
I will leade forth my Souldiers to the plaine,
And thus my Battell shal be ordred.
My Forward shall be drawne in length,
Consisting equally of Horse and Foot:
Our Archers shall be placed in the mid'st:
Iohn Duke of Norfolke, Thomas Earle of Surrey,
Shall leade the leading of the Foot and Horse.
They thus directed, we will follow
In the maine Battell, whose puissance on either side
Shall be well-winged with our cheefest Horse:
This, and Saint George to boote.
What think'st thou Norfolke.
Nor. A good direction warlike Soueraigne.
This found I on my Tent this Morning.
Iockey of Norfolke, be not so bold,
For Dickon thy maister is bought and sold.
King. A thing devised by the Enemy.
Go Gentlemen, every man to his Charge,
Let not our babling Dreames affright our soules:
For Conscience is a word that Cowards vse,
Devis'd at first to keepe the strong in awe,
Our strong armes be our Conscience, Swords our Law.
March on, loyne bravely, let vs too't pell mell,
If not to heaven, then hand in hand to Hell.
What shall I say more then I have inferr'd?
Remember whom you are to cope withall,
A sort of Vagabonds, Rascals, and Run-awayes,
A scum of Brittaines, and base Lackey Peasants,
Whom their o're-cloyed Country vomits forth
To desperate Adventures, and assur'd Destruction.
You sleeping safe, they bring you to vnrest:
You having Lands, and blest with beauteous wives,
They would restraine the one, distaine the other,
And who doth leade them, but a paltry Fellow?
Long hope in Britaine as our Mothers cost,
A Milke-sop, one that never in his life
Felt so much cold, as over shooes in Snow:
Let's whip these straglers o'er the Seas againe,
Lash hence these over-weening Ragges of France,
These famish'd Beggers, weary of their lives,
Who (but for dreaming on this fond exploit)
For want of meanes (poore Rats) had hang'd themselves.
If we be conquered, let men conquer vs,
And not these bastard Britaines, whom our Fathers
Have in their owne Land beaten, bobb'd, and thump'd,
And on Record, left them the heires of shame.
Shall these enioy our Lands? lye with our Wives?
Ravish our daughters? Drum afarre off
Hearke, I heare their Drummes.
Right Gentlemen of England, fight boldly yoomen,
Draw Archers draw your Arrowes to the head,
Spurre your proud Horses hard, and ride in blood,
Amaze the welkin with your broken staves.
Enter a Messenger.
What sayes Lord Stanley, will he bring his power?
Mes. My Lord, he doth deny to come.
King. Off with his sonne George head.
Nor. My Lord, the Enemy is past the Marsh:
After the battaile, let George Stanley dye.
King. A thousand hearts are great within my bosom.
Advance our Standards, set vpon our Foes,
Our Ancient word of Courage, faire S. George
Inspire vs with the spleene of fiery Dragons:
Vpon them, Victorie sits on our helpes.

Alarum, excursion. Enter Catesby.

Cat. Relieve my Lord of Norfolke,
Relieve, Relieve:
The King enacts more wonders then a man,
Daring an opposite to every danger:
His horse is slaine, and all on foot he fights,
Seeking for Richmond in the throat of death:
Relieve faire Lord, or else the day is lost.
Alarum.

Enter Richard.

Rich. A Horse, a Horse, my Kingdome for a Horse.

Catesb. Withdraw my Lord, Ile helpe you to a Horse

Rich. Slaue, I haue set my life vpon a cast,
And I will stand the hazard of the Dye:
I thinke there be sixe Richmonds in the field,
Five haue I slaine to day, in stead of him.
A Horse, a Horse, my Kingdome for a Horse.

Alarum, Enter Richard and Richmond, they fight, Richard is slaine.

Retreat and Flourish. Enter Richmond, Derby bearing the Crowne, with diuers other Lords.

Richm. God, and your Armes
Be prais'd Victorious Friends;
The day is ours, the bloody Dogge is dead.

Der. Courageous Richmond,
Well hast thou acquit thee: Loe,
Heere these long vsurped Royalties,
From the dead Temples of this bloody Wretch,
Haue I pluck'd off, to grace thy Browes withall.
Weare it, and make much of it.

Richm. Great God of Heauen, say Amen to all.
But tell me, is yong George Stanley liuing?

Der. He is my Lord, and safe in Leicester Towne,
Whither (if you please) we may withdraw vs.

Richm. What men of name are slaine on either side?

Der. John Duke of Norfolke, Walter Lord Ferrers,
Sir Robert Brakenbury, and Sir William Brandon.

Richm. Interre their Bodies, as become their Births,
Proclaime a pardon to the Soldiers fled,
That in submission will returne to vs,
And then as we haue tane the Sacrament,
We will vnite the White Rose, and the Red.
Smile Heauen vpon this faire Conuiction,
That long haue frown'd vpon their Enmity:
What Traitor heares me, and sayes not Amen?
England hath long beene mad, and scarr'd her selfe;
The Brother blindely shed the Brothers blood;
The Father, rashly slaughtered his owne Sonne;
The Sonne compell'd, beene Butcher to the Sire;
All this diuided Yorke and Lancaster,
Diuided, in their dire Diuision.
O now, let Richmond and Elizabeth,
The true Succeeders of each Royall House,
By Gods fair ordinance, conioyne together:
And let thy Heires (God if thy will be so)
Enrich the time to come, with Smooth-fac'd Peace,
With smiling Plenty, and faire Prosperous dayes.
Abate the edge of Traitors, Gracious Lord,
That would reduce these bloody dayes againe.
And make poore England weepe in Streames of Blood;
Let them not liue to taste this Lands increase.
That would with Treason, wound this faire Lands peace.
Now Ciuill wounds are stopp'd, Peace liues agen;
That she may long liue heere. God say, Amen. Exeunt

FINIS.

The Famous History of the Life of King HENRY the Eight.

THE PROLOGUE.

Come no more to make you laugh, Things now,
That bear a Weighty, and a Serious Brow,
Sad, high, and working, full of State and woe:
Such Noble Scenes, as draw the Eye to flow
We now present. Those that can Pity, here
May (if they think it well) let fall a Teare,
The Subject will deserve it. Such as give
Their Money out of hope they may believe,
May here finde Truth too. Those that come to see
Onely a show or two, and so agree,
The Play may passe: If they be still, and willing,
I'le undertake may see away their shilling
Richly in two short houres. Onely they
That come to heare a Merry, Bawdy Play,
A noyse of Targets: Or to see a Fellow
In a long Motley Coate, garded with Yellow,
Will be deceyu'd. For gentle Hearers, know
To ranke our chosen Truth with such a show
As Fools, and Fight is, beside forfeiting
Our owne Brauns, and the Opinion that we bring
To make that onely true, we now intend,
Will leave us never an understanding Friend.
Therefore, for Goodnesse sake, and as you are known
The First and Happiest Hearers of the Towne,
Be sad, as we would make ye. Think ye see
The very Persons of our Noble Story,
As they were Liuing: Think you see them Great,
And follow'd with the generall throng, and sweat
Of thousand Friends: Then, in a moment, see
How soone this Mightinesse, meets Misery:
And if you can be merry then, I'le say,
A Man may weepe vpon his Wedding day.

Actus Primus. Scæna Prima.

Enter the Duke of Norfolke at one doore. At the other, the Duke of Buckingham, and the Lord Aberganiny.

Buckingham.

Good morrow, and well met. How haue ye done
Since last we saw in France?

Nor. I thanke your Grace:
Healthfull, and euer since a fresh Admirer
Of what I saw there.

Buck. An vntimely Ague
Staid me a Prisoner in my Chamber, when
Those Sunnes of Glory, those two Lights of Men
Met in the vale of Andren.

Nor. 'Twixt Guynes and Arde,
I was then present, saw them salute on Horseback,
Beheld them when they lighted, how they clung
In their Embracement, as they grew together,
Which had they,
What foure Thron'd ones could haue weigh'd
Such a compounded one?.

Buck. All the whole time
I was my Chambers Prisoner.

Nor. Then you lost
The view of earthly glory: Men might say
Till this time Pompe was single, but now married
To one aboue it selfe. Each following day
Became the next dayes master, till the last
Made former Wonders, it's. To day the French,
All Cinquant all in Gold, like Heathen Gods
Shone downe the English; and to morrow, they Made Britaine, India: Every man that stood,
Shew d like a Mine. Their Dwarfish Pages were
As Cherubins, all gilt: the Madams too,
Not vs'd to toyle, did almost sweat to beare
The Pride vpon them, that their very labour
Was to them, as a Painting. Now this Maske
Was cry'de incomparaleable; and th'ensuing night
Made it a Foole, and Begger. The two Kings
Equall in lustre, were now best, now worst
As presence did present them Him in eye,
Still him in praise, and being present both,
'Twas said they saw but one, and no Discerner
Durst wagge his Tongue in censure, when these Sunnes
(For so they phrase 'em) by their Heralds challeng'd
The Noble Spirits to Armes, they did performe

Beyond thoughts Compasse, that former fabulous Storie
Being now seene, possible enough, got credit
That Bassa was beleev'd.

Bur. Oh you go farre.

Nor. As I belong to worship, and affect
In Honor, Honesty, the tract of ev'ry thing,
Would bye a good Discourser loose some life,
Which Actions self, was tongue too.

Bur. All was Royall,
To the disposing of it nought rebell'd,
Order gaue each thing view. The Office did
Distinctly his full Function: who did guide,
I meane who set the Body, and the Limbes
Of this great Sport together?

Nor. As you guesse:
One certes, that promises no Element
In such a business.

Bur. I pray you who, my Lord?

Nor. All this was ordred by the good Discretion
Of the right Reuerend Cardinall of Yorke.

Bur. The diuell speed him: No man's Pye is freed
From his Ambitious finger. What had he
To do in these fierce Vanities? I wonder,
That such a Keech can with his very bulke
Take vp the Rayes o'th'beneficiall Sun,
And keepe it from the Earth.

Nor. Surely Sir,
There's in him stuffe, that put's him to these ends:
For being not prop't by Auncestry, whose grace
Chalkes Successors their way; nor call'd vpon
For high feats done to'th'Crowne; neither Allied
To eminent Assistants; but Spider-like
Out of his Self-drawing Web. O giues vs note,
The force of his owne merit makes his way
A gusht that heauen giues for him, which buyes
A place next to the King.

Aber. I cannot tell
What Heauen hath given him: let some Grauer eye
Pierce into that, but I can see his Pride
Peepe through each part of him: whence he's he that,
If not from Hell? The Diuell is a Niggard,
Or he's given all before, and he begins
A new Hell in himselfe.

Bur. Why the Diuell,
Vpon this French going out, took he vpon him
(Without the priuity o'th'King) t'appoint
Who should attend on him? He makes vp the File
Of all the Gentry; for the most part such
To whom as great a Charge, as little Honor
He meant to lay vpon; and his owne Letter
The Honourable Board of Councell, out
Must fetch him in, he Papers.

Aber. I do know
Kinsmen of mine, three at the least, that haue
By this, so sicken'd their Estates, that never
They shall abound as formerly.

Bur. O many
Haue broke their backes with laying Manners on 'em
For this great Iourney. What did this vanity
But minister communication of
A most poore issue.

Nor. Greeningly I thinke,
The Peace between the French and vs, not values
The Cost that did conclude it.

Bur. Every man,
After the hideous storme that follow'd, was
A thing inspir'd, and not consulting, broke
Into a generall Prophesie; That this Tempest
Dashing the Garment of this Peace, aboded
The sodaine breach on't.

Nor. Which is budded out,
For France hath flaw'd the League, and hath attach'd
Our Merchants goods at Bordeux.

Aber. Is it therefore?
Th'Ambassador is silence'd?

Nor. Marry is't.

Aber. A proper Title of a Peace, and purchas'd
At a superfluous rate.

Bur. Why all this Businesse
Our Reuerend Cardinall carried.

Nor. Like it your Grace,
The State takes notice of the priuate difference
Betwixt you, and the Cardinall. I aduise you
(And take it from a heart, that wishes towards you Honor, and plenteous safety) that you read
The Cardinals Malice, and his Potency
Together; To consider further, that
What his high Hatred would effect, wants not
A Minister in his Power. You know his Nature,
That he's Reuengefull; and I know, his Sword
Hath a sharpe edge: It's long, and't may be said
It reaches farre, and where 'twill not extend,
Thither he darts it. Bosome vp my counsell,
You'l finde it wholesome. Loe, where comes that Rock
That I aduise your shunning.

Enter Cardinall Wolsey, the Purse borne before him, certaine of the Guard, and two Secretaries with Papers: The Cardinall in his passage, fixeth his eye on Buckingham, and Buckingham on him, both full of disdaine.

Car. The Duke of Buckingham Surueyor? Ha?
Where's his Examination?

Secr. Heere so please you.

Car. Is he in person, ready?

Secr. I, please your Grace.

Car. Well, we shall then know more, & Buckingham
Shall lessen this bigge looke.

Exeunt Cardinall, and his Traine.

Bur. This Butchers Curre is venom'd-mouth'd, and I
Haue not the power to muzzle him, therefore best
Not wake him in his slumber. A Beggers booke,
Out-worths a Nobles blood.

Nor. What are you chaf'd?
Ask God for Temp'rance, that's th'appliance only
Which your disease requires.

Bur. I read in's looks
Matter against me, and his eye reuil'd
Me as his abect object, at this instant
He bores me with some tricke; He's gone to'th'King:
Ile follow, and out-stare him.

Nor. Stay my Lord,
And let your Reason with your Choller question
What 'tis you go about: to climbe steepe hilles
Requires slow pace at first. Anger is like
A full hot Horse, who being allow'd his way
Self-mettle tyres him: Not a man in England
Can aduise me like you: Be to your selfe,
As you would to your Friend.

Bur. Ile to the King,
And from a mouth of Honor, quite cry downe

This Insolent fellowes insolence; or proclaime,
There's difference in no persons.
Norf. Be advis'd;
Heat not a Furnace for your foe so hot
That it do singe your selfe. We may out-runne
By violent swiftnesse that which we run at,
And lose by over-running: know you not,
The fire that mounts the liquor th'run ore,
In seeming to augment it, wasts it. be advis'd;
I say againe there is no English Soule
More stronger to direct you then your selfe;
If with the tap of reason you would quench,
Or but allay the fire of passion.
Buck. Sir,
I am thankfull to you, and I'le goe along
By your prescription: but this top-proud fellow,
Whom from the flow of gall I name not, but
From sincere motions, by Intelligence,
And proofes as cleere as Foxes in Lady, when
We see each grosse Crime of greeds; I doe know
To be corrupt and treasonous.
Norf. Say not treasonous.
Buck. To th'King I'le say't, It make my vouch as strong
As shore of Rocks around. This holy Fox,
Or Wolfe, or both (for he is equall rav'nous
As he is subtile, and as prone to mischiefe,
As able to perform't) his minde, and place
Infecting one another, yes reciprocally,
Only to shew his pompe, as well in France,
As here at home, suggests the King our Master
To this last costly Treaty: Th'interview,
That swallowed so much treasure, and like a glasse
Did breake th'wrenching.
Norf. Faith, and so it did.
Buck. Pray give me favour Sir: This cunning Cardinall
The Articles o'th' Combination drew
As himselfe pleas'd; and they were ratified
As he cride thus let be, to as much end,
As give a Crutch to th'dead. But our Count-Cardinall
Has done this, and tis well: for worthy Wolsey
(Who cannot erre) he did it. Now this follows,
(Which as I take it, is a kinde of Puppe
To th'old dam Treason) Charles the Emperour,
Under pretence to see the Queene his Aunt,
(For twas indeed his colour, but he came
To whisper Wolsey) here makes visitation,
His feares were that the Interview betwixt
England and France, might through their amity
Breed him some prejudice: for from this Leaguo,
Peep'd harmes that menac'd him. Priestly
Deales with our Cardinal, and as I trow
Which I doe well; for I am sure the Emperour
Paid ere he promis'd, whereby his Suit was granted
Ere it was ask'd. But when the way was made
And paw'd with gold: the Emperor thus desir'd,
That he would please to alter the Kings course,
And breake the foresaid peace. Let the King know
(As soone he shall by me) that thus the Cardinall
Does buy and sell his Honour as he pleases,
And for his owne advantage.
Norf. I am sorry
To heare this of him; and could wish he were Something mistaken in't.
Buck. No, not a Scholler;
I doe pronounce him in that very shape
He shall appeare in proofe.

Enter Brandon, a Sergeant at Armes before him, and two or three of the Guard.

Brandon. Your Office Sergeant: execute it.
Sergeant. Sir,
My Lord the Duke of Buckingham and Earle
Of Hereford Stafford and Northampton, I
Arrest thee of High Treason, in the name
Of our most Soveraigne King.
Buck. Lo you my Lord,
The net has falne upon me, I shall perish
Under device, and practise.
Bran. I am sorry,
To see you tane from liberty, to looke on
The business present. To his Highness pleasure
You shall to th' Tower
Buck. It will helpe me nothing
To plead mine Innocence; for that dye is on me
Which makes my whit'st part, black. The will of Heav'n
Be done in this and all things: I obey.
O my Lord *Aberga*vy: Fare you well.
Bran. Nay, he must bear you company. The King
Is pleas'd you shall to th'Tower, till you know
How he determines further.
Aber. As the Duke said.
The will of Heaven be done, and the Kings pleasure
By me obey'd.
Bran. Here is a warrant from
The King, t'attach Lord Abergavenny, and the Bodies
Of the Dukes Confessor, John de la Car,
One Gilbert Peck, his Councellour.
Buck. So, so;
These are the limbs o'th' Plot: no more I hope.
Bra. A Monke o'th' Chartreux.
Buck. O Michaell Hopkins?
Bra. He.
Buck. My Surveyor is false. The ore-great Cardinall
Hath shew'd him gold; my life is spaed already:
I am the shadow of poore Buckingham,
Whose Figure even this instant Cloud puts on,
By Darkening my cleere Sunne. My Lords farewell. Exe.

Scena Secunda.

Cornets. Enter King Henry, leaning on the Cardinals shoulder, the Nobles, and Sir Thomas Lovell: the Cardinall places himselfe under the King's feete on his right side.

King. My life is selfe, and the best heart of it,
Thankes you for this great care. I stood i'th' lastll
Of a full-charg'd confederacie, and give thankes
To you that choak'd it. Let be call'd before vs
That Gentleman of Buckingham, in person,
Ile heare him his confeslions justifie,
And poine by point the Treasons of his Master,
He shall againe relate.
A noyse within crying room for the Queene, usher'd by the Duke of Norfolke. Enter the Queene, Norfolke and Suffolke: she kneels. King riseth from his State, takes her up, kisses and placeth her by him.
Queen. Nay, we must longer kneele; I am a Suitor.
King. Arise, and take place by vs: half your Suit
Never name to vs; you have half our power:

The

The other moity ere you aske is given,
Repent your will, and take it.

Quen. Thanke your Maiesty
That you would loue your selfe, and in that loue
Not vnconsidered leaue your Honour, nor
The dignity of your Office; is the poyst
Of my Petition.

Kin. Lady mine proceed.

Quen. I am solicited not by a few,
And those of true condition; That your Subiects
Are in great grieuance: There haue beene Commissions
Sent downe among 'em, which hath flaw'd the heart
Of all their Loyalties; wherein, although
My good Lord Cardinall, they vent reproches
Most bitterly on you, as putter on
Of these exactions: yet the King, our Maiſter (not
Whose Honor Heauen shield from soile; even he escapes
Language vnmannerly; yes, such which breakes
The sides of loyalty, and almost appeares
In lowd Rebellion.

Norf. Not almost appeares,
It doth appeare; for, vpon these Taxations,
The Clothiers all not able to maintaine
The many to them longing, haue put off
The Spinsters, Carders, Fullers, Weauers, who
Vnfit for other life, compeld by hunger
And lack of other meanes, in desperate manner
Daring th'event too th'teeth, are all in vproare,
And danger serues among them.

Kin. Taxation?
Wherein? and what Taxation? My Lord Cardinall,
You that are blam'd for it alike with vs,
Know you of this Taxation?

Card. Please you Sir,
I know but of a single part in ought
Pertaines to th'State; and front but in that File
Where others tell steps with me.

Quen. No, my Lord?
You know no more then others? But you frame
Things that are knowne alike, which are not wholsome
To those which would not know them, and yet must Perforce be their acquaintance. These exactions
(Whereof my Soueraigne would haue note) they are Most pestilent to th'hearing, and to beare 'em,
The Backe is Sacrifice to th'load; They say
They are deuis'd by you, or else you suffer
Too hard an exclamation.

Kin. Still Exaction:
The nature of it, in what kinde let's know,
Is this Exaction?

Quen. I am much too venturous
In tempting of your patience; but am boldned
Vnder your promis'd pardon. The Subiects griefe
Comes through Commissions, which compels from each
The first part of his Substance, to be leuied
Without delay; and the pretence for this
Is nam'd, your warres in France: this makes bold mouths,
Tongues spit their duties out, and cold hearts freeze
Allegeance in them; their curses now
Liue where their prayers did: and i'n come to passe,
This tractable obedience is a Slaue
To each incensed Will: I would your Highnesse
Would giue it quicke consideration; for
There is no primer basenesse.

Kin. By my life,
This is against our pleasure.

Card. And for me,
I haue no further gone in this, than by
A single voice, and that not past me, but
By learned approbation of the Iudges: If I am
Traduc'd by ignorant Tongues, which neither know
My faculties nor person, yet will be
The Chronicles of my doing: Let me say,
'Tis but the fate of Place, and the rough Brake
That Vertue must goe through: we must not stint
Our necessary actions, in the feare
To cope malicious Censurers, which ever,
As ran'nous Fishes doe a Vessell follow
That is new trim'd; but neither do further
Then vainly longing. What we oft doe best,
By sicke Interpreters (once weake ones) is
Not ours, or not allow'd; what worst, as oft
Hitting a greater quality, is cride vp
For our best Act: if we shall stand still,
In feare our motion will be mock'd, or carp'd at,
We should take root here, where we sit,
Or sit State-Statues onely.

Kin. Things done well,
And with a care, exempt themselues from feare:
Things done without example, in their issue
Are to be feat'd. Haue you a President
Of this Commission? I believe, not any.
We must, not read our Subiects from our Lowes,
And sticke them in our Will. Sixt part of each?
A trembling Contribution; why we take
From every Tree, lop, barke, and part o'th' Timber:
And though we leaue it with a root thus hacht,
The Apre will drinke the Sop. To every County
Where this is question'd, send our Letters, with Free pardon to each man that has denyde
The force of this Commission: pray looke too't,
I put it to your care.

Card. A word with you.
Let there be Letters writ to every Shire,
Of the Kings grace and pardon: the greeved Commons
Hardly conceiue of me. Let it be nois'd,
That through our Intercession, this Reuokement
And pardon comes: I shall anon acquaint you
Further in the proceeding. Exit Seruant.

Enter Surueyor.

Quen. I am sorry, that the Duke of Buckingham
Is run in your displeasure.

Kin. It grieues many:
The Gentleman is Learn'd, and a most rare Speaker,
To Nature none more bound; his training such,
That he may furnish and instruct great Teachers,
And neuer seeke for aid out of himselfe: yet see,
When these so Noble benefits shall prone
Not well dispos'd, the minde growing once corrupt,
They turne to vicious formes, ten times more vgly
Then euer they were faire. This man so complete,
Who was enroll'd 'mongst wonders; and when we
Almost with ravisht listning, could not finde
His houre of speech, a minute: He, (my Lady)
Hath into monstrous habits put the Graces
That once were his, and is become as blacke,
As if besmear'd in hell. Sit by Vs, you shall heare
(This was his Gentleman in trust) of him
Things to strike Honour sad. Bid him recount
The fore-recited practises, whereof
We cannot feele too little, heare too much.

Card.

Card. Stand forth, & with bold spirit relate what you
Most like a carefull Subject haue collected
Out of the Duke of Buckingham.
Kin. Speake freely.
Sur. First, it was vsuall with him; every day
It would infect his Speech: That if the King
Should without issue dye; hes'l carry it so
To make the Scepter his. These very words
I've heard him vtter to his Sonne in Law,
Lord Aburgany, to whom by oath he menac'd
Reuenge vpon the Cardinall.
Card. Please your Highnesse note
This dangerous conception in this point,
Not friended by his wish to your High person;
His will is most malignant, and is stretches
Beyond you to your friends.
Queen. My learn'd Lord Cardinall,
Deliuer all with Charity.
Kin. Speake on;
How grounded hee his Title to the Crowne
Vpon our faile; to this point hast thou heard him,
At any time speake ought?
Sur. He was brought to this,
By a vaine Prophesie of Nicholas Henton.
Kin. What was that Henton?
Sur. Sir, a Chartreuse Fryer,
His Confessor, who fed him every minute
With words of Soueraignty.
Kin. How know'st thou this?
Sur. Not long before your Hignesse sped to France,
The Duke being at the Rose, within the Parish
Saint Laurence Poultney, did of me demand
What was the speech among the Londoners,
Concerning the French Iourney. I replide,
Men feare the French would prouе perfidious
To the Kings danger: presently, the Duke
Said, 'twas the feare indeed, and that he doubted
'Twould prouе the verity of certaine words
Spoke by a holy Monke, that oft, sayes he,
Hath sent to me, wishing me to permit
John de la Car, my Chaplaine, a choyce howre
To heare from him a matter of some moment:
Whom after vnder the Commission Seale,
He solemnly had sworne, that what he spoke
My Chaplaine to no Creature living, but
To me, should vtter, with demure Confidence,
This pausingly ensu'de; neither the King, nor's Heyres
(Tell you the Duke) shall prosper, bid him strive
To the loue o'th' Commonalty, the Duke
Shall gouerne England.
Queen. If I know you well,
You were the Dukes Surueyor, and lost your Office
On the complaint o'th' Tenants; take good heed
You charge not in your spleene a Noble person,
And spoyle your nobler Soule; I say, take heed;
Yes, heartily beseech you.
Kin. Let him on: Goe forward.
Sur. On my Soule, I le speake but truth.
I told my Lord the Duke, by th'Diocls illasions
The Monke might be deceiu'd, and that 'twas dangerous
For this to ruminate on this so farre, vntill
It forg'd him some designe, which being beleeu'd
It was much like to doe: He answer'd, Tush,
It can doe me no damage; adding further,
That had the King in his last Sicknesse faild,
The Cardinals and Sir Thomas Louels heads
Should haue gone off.
Kin. Ha? What, so rancke? Ah, ha,
There's mischiefe in this man; canst thou say further?
Sur. I can my Liedge.
Kin. Proceed.
Sur. Being at Greenwich,
After your Highnesse had reprou'd the Duke
About Sir William Blomer (vaine.
Kin. I remember of such a time, being my sworn ser-
The Duke retain'd him his. But on: what hence?
Sur. If (quoth he) I for this had beene committed,
As to the Tower, I thought; I would haue plaid
The Part my Father meant to act vpon
Th'Vsurper Richard, who being at Salisbury,
Made suit to come in's presence; which if granted,
(As he made semblance of his duty) would
Haue put his knife into him.
Kin. A Gyant Traytor.
Card. Now Madam, may his Highnes liue in freedome,
And this man out of Prison.
Queen. God mend all. (say'st?
Kin. Ther's something more would out of thee; what
Sur. After the Duke his Father, with the knife
He stretch'd him, and with one hand on his dagger,
Another spread on's breast, mounting his eyes,
He did discharge a horrible Oath, whose tenor
Was, were he euill vs'd, he would outgoe
His Father, by as much as a performance
Do's an irresolute purpose.
Kin. There's his period,
To sheath his knife in vs: he is attach'd,
Call him to present tryall: if he may
Finde mercy in the Law, 'tis his; if none,
Let him not seek't of vs: By day and night
Hee's Traytor to th' height. Exeunt.

Scæna Tertia.

Enter L. Chamberlaine, and L. Sandys.

L. Ch. Is't possible the spels of France should iuggle
Men into such strange mysteries?
L. San. New customes,
Though they be neuer so ridiculous,
(Nay let 'em be vnmanly) yet are follow'd.
L. Ch. As farre as I see, all the good our English
Haue got by the late Voyage, is but meerely
A fit or two o'th' face, (but they are shrewd ones)
For when they hold 'em, you would sweare directly
Their very noses had been Counsellours
To Pepin or Clotharius, they keepe State so.
L. San. They haue all new legs,
And lame ones; one would take it,
That neuer see 'em pace before, the Spauen
A Spring-halt rain'd among 'em.
L. Ch. Death my Lord,
Their clothes are after such a Pagan cut too't,
That sure th'haue worne out Christen domesbow now!
What newes, Sir Thomas Louell?

Enter Sir Thomas Louell.

Louell. Faith my Lord,
I heare of none but the new Proclamation,
That's clapt vpon the Court Gate.

L. Cham.

L. Cham. What is't for?

Lou. The reformation of our travel'd Gallants,
That fill the Court with quarrels, talke, and Taylors.

L. Cham. I'm glad 'tis there;
Now I would pray our Monsieurs
To thinke an English Courtier may be wise,
And never see the Louure.

Lou. They must either
(For so run the Conditions) leave those remnants
Of Foole and Feather, that they got in France,
With all their honourable points of ignorance
Pertaining thereunto; as Fights and Fire-workes,
Abusing better men then they can be
Out of a forreigne wisedome, renouncing cleane
The faith they haue in Tennis and tall Stockings,
Short blistred Breeches, and those types of Trauell;
And vnderstand againe like honest men,
Or pack to their old Playfellowes; there, I take it.
They may Cum Priuilegio, wee away
The lag end of their lewdnesse, and be laugh'd at.

L. Sam. Tis time to giue 'em Physicke, their diseases
Are growne so catching.

L. Cham. What a loose out Ladies
Will haue of these trim vanities?

Louell. I marry,
There will be woe indeed Lords, the sly whoresons
Haue got a speeding tricke to lay downe Ladies.
A French Song, and a Fiddle, ha's no Fellow

L. Sam. The Diuell fiddle 'em,
I am glad they are going,
For sure there's no conuerting of 'em. now
An honest Country Lord as I am, beaten
A long time out of play, may bring his plaine song,
And haue an houre of hearing, and by't Lady
Held currant Musicke too.

L. Cham. Well said Lord Sands,
Your Coltstooth is not cast yet?

L. Sam. No my Lord,
Nor shall not while I haue a stumpe.

L. Cham. Sir Thomas,
Whither were you a going?

Lou. To the Cardinals;
Your Lordship is a guest too.

L. Cham. O, 'tis true;
This night he makes a Supper, and a great one,
To many Lords and Ladies; there will be
The Beauty of this Kingdome I'le assure you.

Lou. That Churchman
Beares a bounteous minde indeed,
A hand as fruitfull as the Land that feeds vs,
His dewes fall every where.

L. Cham. No doubt he's Noble;
He had a blacke mouth that said other of him.

L. Sam. He may my Lord,
Has wherewithall in him;
Sparing would shew a worse sinne, then ill Doctrine,
Men of his way, should be most liberall,
They are set heere for examples.

L. Cham. True, they are so;
But few now gue so great ones.
My Barge stayes;
Your Lordship shall along: Come, good Sir Thomas,
We shall be late else, which I would not be,
For I was spoke to, with Sir Henry Guilford
This night to be Comptrollers.

L. Sam. I am your Lordships. Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Hobnes. A fresh Table vnder a State for the Cardinall, a longer Table for the Guests. Then Enter Anne Bullen, and diuers other Ladies & Gentlewomen as Guests at one Door; at an other Door enter Sir Henry Guilford.

S. Hen. Guilf. Ladyes,
A generall welcome from his Grace
Salutes ye all; This Night he dedicates
To faire content, and you: None heere he hopes
In all this Noble Beuy, has brought with her
One care abroad: hee would haue all as merry:
As first, good Company, good wine, good welcome,
Can make good people.

Enter L. Chamberlain L. Sands and Louell.

O my Lord, y'are tardy;
The very thought of this faire Company,
Clapt wings to me.

Cham. You are young Sir Harry Guilford.

Sam. Sir Thomas Louell, had the Cardinall
But halfe my Lay-thoughts in him, some of these Should finde a running Banket, ere they rested,
I thinke would better please 'em: by my life,
They are a sweet society of faire ones.

Lou. O that your Lordship were but now Confessor,
To one or two of these.

Sam. I would I were,
They should finde easie penance.

Lou. Faith how easie?

Sam. As easie as a downe bed would afford it

Cham. Sweet Ladies will it please you sit; Sir Harry
Place you that side, I'le take the charge of this:
His Grace is entring. Nay, you must not freeze,
Two women plac'd together, makes cold weather:
My Lord Sands, you are one will keepe 'em waking:
Pray sit between these Ladies.

Sam. By my faith,
And thanke your Lordship: by your leaue sweet Ladies,
If I chance to talke a little wilde, forgiue me.
I had it from my Father.

An. Bul. Was he mad Sir?

Sam. O, very mad, exceeding mad, in loue too;
But he would bite none, just as I doe now,
He would Kisse you Twenty with a breath.

Cham. Well said my Lord:
So now y'are fairely seated: Gentlemen,
The penance lyes on you; if these faire Ladies
Passe away frowning.

Sam. For my little Care,
Let me alone.

Hobnes. Enter Cardinall Wolsey, and takes his Seate.

Card. Y'are welcome my faire Guests; that noble Lady
Or Gentleman that is not freely merry
Is not my Friend. This to confirme my welcome,
And to you all good health.

Sam. Your Grace is Noble.
Let me haue such a Bowle may hold my thanke,
And saue me so much talking.

Card. My Lord Sands,

I am beholdinge to you: cheere your neighbours:
Ladies you are not merry; Gentlemen.
Whose fault is this?
Sen. The red wine first must rise
In their faire cheekes my Lord, then wee shall heare 'em,
Talke vs to silence.
An. B. You are a merry Gamster
My Lord Sands.
Sen. Yes, if I make my play:
Here's to your Ladiship, and pledge it Madame
For tis to such a thing.
An. B. You cannot shew me.
Drum and Trumpet, Chambers discharged.
Sen. I told your Grace, they would talke anon.
Card. What's that?
Cham. Looke out there, some of ye.
Card. What warlike voyce,
And to what end is this? Nay, Ladies, feare not;
By all the lawes of Warre y'are priuileg'd.

Enter a Seruant.

Cham. How now, what is't?
Serv. A noble troope of Strangers,
For so they seeme; th'haue left their Barge and landed.
And hither make, as great Embassadors
From forraigne Princes.
Card. Good Lord Chamberlaine,
Go, giue 'em welcome; you can speake the French tongue
And pray receiue 'em Nobly, and conduct 'em
Into our presence, where this heauen of beauty
Shall shine at full vpon them. Some attend him.
All rise, and Tables remoued.
You haue now a broken Banket, but we'l mend it.
A good digestion to you all; and once more
I shower a welcome on ye: welcome all.

Hoboyes. Enter King and others as Maskers, habited like Shepheards, vsher'd by the Lord Chamberlaine. They passe directly before the Cardinall, and gracefully salute him.

A noble Company: what are their pleasures?
Cham. Because they speak no English, thus they praid
To tell your Grace: That hearing heard by fame
Of this so Noble and so faire assembly,
This night to meet heere they could doe no lesse,
(Out of the great respect they beare to beauty)
But leaue their Flocks, and vnder your faire Conduct
Crave leaue to view these Ladies, and entreat
An houre of Reuels with 'em.
Card. Say, Lord Chamberlaine,
They haue done my poore house grace:
For which I pay 'em a thousand thanks,
And pray 'em take their pleasures.
Choose Ladies, King and An Bullen.
King The fairest hand I euer touch'd: O Beauty,
Till now I never knew thee.
Musicke, Dance.
Card. My Lord.
Cham. Your Grace.
Card. Pray tell 'em thus much from me:
There should be one amongst 'em by his person
More worthy this place then my selfe, to whom
(If I but knew him) with my loue and duty
I would surrender it. whisper.
Cham. I will my Lord.
Card. What say they?
Cham. Such a one, they all confesse
There is indeed, which they would haue your Grace
Find out, and he will take it.
Card. Let me see then,
By all your good leaues Gentlemen; heere I'le make
My royall choyce.
Kin. Ye haue found him Cardinall,
You hold a faire Assembly; you doe well Lord:
You are a Churchman, or I'le tell you Cardinall,
I should iudge now vnhappily.
Card. I am glad
Your Grace is growne so pleasant.
Kin. My Lord Chamberlaine,
Prethee come hither, what faire Ladie's that?
Cham. An't please your Grace,
Sir Thomas Bullens Daughter, the Viscount Rochford,
One of her Highnesse women.
Kin. By Heauen she is a dainty one. Sweet heart,
I were vnmannerly to take you out,
And not to kisse you. A health Gentlemen,
Let it goe round.
Card. Sir Thomas Louell, is the Banket ready
I'th' Priuy Chamber?
Lou. Yet, my Lord.
Card. Your Grace
I feare, with dancing is a little heated.
Kin. I feare too much.
Card. There's fresher aire my Lord,
In the next Chamber.
Kin. Lead in your Ladies ev'ry one: Sweet Partner,
I must not yet forsake you: Let's be merry,
Good my Lord Cardinall: I haue halfe a dozen healths,
To drinke to these faire Ladies, and a measure
To lead 'em once againe, and then let's dreame
Who's best in fauour. Let the Musicke knock it.
Exeunt with Trumpets.

Actus Secundus. Scena Prima.

Enter two Gentlemen at seuerall Doores.

1. Whether a way so fast?
2. O, God saue ye:
Ee'n to the Hall, to heare what shall become
Of the great Duke of Buckingham.
1. I'le saue you
That labour Sir. All's now done but the Ceremony
Of bringing backe the Prisoner.
2. Were you there?
1. Yes indeed was I.
2. Pray speake what has happen'd.
1. You may guesse quickly what.
2. Is he found guilty?
1. Yes truely is he,
And condemn'd vpon't.
2. I am sorry for't.
1. So are a number more.
2. But pray how past it?
1. I'le tell you in a little. The great Duke
Came to the Bar; where, to his accusations
He pleaded still not guilty, and alledged
Many sharpe reasons to defeat the Law.
The Kings Attorney on the contrary,
Vrg'd on the Examinations, proofes, confessions

Of diuers witnesses, which the Duke desir'd
To him brought viua voce to his face;
At which appear'd against him, his Surueyor
Sir Gilbert Peck his Chancellour, and Iohn Car,
Confessor to him, with that Diuell Monke,
Hopkins, that made this mischiefe.

2. That was he
That fed him with his Prophecies.

1. The same,
All these accus'd him strongly, which he faine
Would haue flung from him; but indeed he couldnot;
And so his Peeres vpon this euidence,
Haue found him guilty of high Treason. Much
He spoke, and learnedly for life: But all
Was either pitied in him, or forgotten.

2. After all this, how did he beare himselfe?

1. When he was brought agen to th' Bar, to heare
His knell rung out, his Iudgement, he was stir'd
With such an Agony, he sweat extremly,
And sometimes spoke in choller, ill, and hastly:
But he fell to himselfe againe, and sweetly,
In all the rest shew'd a most Noble patience.

2. I doe not thinke he feares death.

1. Sure he does not,
He never was so womanish, the cause
He may a little grieue at.

2. Certainly.
The Cardinall is the end of this.

1. Tis likely,
By all conjectures: First Kildare Attendure,
Then Deputy of Ireland, who remou'd
Earle Surrey, was sent thither, and in hast too,
Lest he should helpe his Father.

2. That trickie of State
Was a deepe enuious one.

1. At his returne,
No doubt he will requite it; this is noted
(And generally) who euer the King fauours,
The Cardinall instantly will finde imployment,
And force enough from Court too.

2. All the Commons
Hate him perniciously, and o' my Conscience
With him ten fadom deepe: This Duke as much
They loue and doote on: call him bountiuous Buckingham,
The Mirror of all courtesie.

Enter Buckingham from his Arraignment, Tipstaues before him, the Axe with the edge towards him, Halberds on each side, accompanied with Sir Thomas Louell, Sir Nicholas Vaux, Sir Walter Sands, and common people, &c.

1. Stay there Sir,
And see the noble ruin'd man you speake of.

2. Let's stand close and behold him.

Buck. All good people,
You that thus sorre haue come to pitty me;
Heare what I say, and then goe home and lose me.
I haue this day receiu'd a Traitors iudgement,
And by that name must dye; yet Heaven beare witnes,
And if I haue a Conscience, let it cracke me,
Euen as the Axe falls, if I be not faithfull.
The Law I beare no malice for my death,
Thas done vpon the premises, but Iustice:
But those that sought it, I could wish more Christians:
(Be what they will) I heartily forgiue 'em;
Yet let 'em looke they glory not in mischiefe;
Nor build their euils on the graues of great men;
For then, my guiltlesse blood must cry against 'em.
For farther life in this world I ne've hope,
Nor will I sue, although the King haue mercies
More then I dare make faults.
You few that loe'd me,
And dare be bold to weepe for Buckingham,
His Noble Friends and Fellowes; whom to leaue
Is only bitter to him, only dying:
Goe with me like good Angels to my end,
And as the long diuorce of Soule falls on me,
Make of your Prayers one sweet Sacrifice,
And lift my Soule to Heaven.
Lead on a Gods name.

Louell. I doe beseech your Grace, for charity
If euer any malice in your heart
Were hid against me, now to forgiue me frankly.

Buck. Sir Thomas Louell, I as free forgiue you
As I would be forgiuen: I forgiue all.
There cannot be those numberlesse offences
Gainst me, that I cannot take peace with:
No blacke Enuy shall make my Grace,
Commend mee to his Grace:
And if he speake of Buckingham; pray well him,
You met him halfe in Heaven: my vowes and prayers
Yet are the Kings; and till my Soule forsake,
Shall cry for blessing on him. May he liue
Longer then I haue time to tell his yeares;
Ever beton'd and loaing, may his Rule be;
And when old Time shall lead him to his end,
Goodnesse and he, fill vp one Monument.

Lou. To th' water side I must conduct your Grace:
Then giue my Charge vp to Sir Nicholas Vaux,
Who vndertakes you to your end.

Vaux. Prepare there,
The Duke is comming. See the Barge be ready;
And fit it with such furniture as suites
The Greatnesse of his Person.

Buck. Nay, Sir Nicholas,
Let it alone; my State now will but mocke me.
When I came hither, I was Lord High Constable,
And Duke of Buckingham: now poore Edward Bohun;
Yet I am richer then my base Accusers,
That never knew what Truth meant: I now seale it;
And with that blood will make 'em one day groane for't.
My noble Father Henry of Buckingham,
Who first rais'd head against Vsurping Richard,
Flying for succour to his Seruant Banister,
Being distrest; was by that wretch betrai'd,
And without Tryall, fell; Gods peace be with him.
Henry the Seuenth succeeding, truly pitying
My Fathers losse; like a most Royall Prince
Restor'd me to my Honours: and out of ruines
Made my Name once more Noble. Now his Sonne,
Henry the Eight, Life, Honour, Name and all
That made me happy; at one stroake ha's taken
For euer from the World. I had my Tryall,
And must needs say a Noble one; which makes me
A little happier then my wretched Father:
Yet thus sorre we are one in Fortunes; both
Fell by our Seruants, by those Men we loe'd most:
A most vnnaturall and faithlesse Seruice.
Heaven ha's an end in all: yet, you that heare me,
This from a dying man receiue as certaine:
Where you are liberall of your loues and Counsels,
Be sure you be not loose; for those you make friends.

And

And give your hearts to; when they once perceiue
The least rub in your fortunes, fall away
Like water from ye, never found again
But where they meant to sinke ye: all good people
Pray for me, I must now forsake ye, the last houre
Of my long weary life is come vpon me:
Farewell; and when you would say something that is sad,
Speake how I fell.
I have done; and God forgiue me.

Exeunt Duke and Traine.

1. O, this is full of pity; Sir, it cals
I feare, too many curses on their heads
That were the Authors.
2. If the Duke be guiltlesse,
'Tis full of woe: yet I can giue you inkling
Of an enshing euill, if it fall,
Greater then this
1. Good Angels keepe it from vs:
What may it be? you doe not doubt my faith Sir?
3. This Secret is so weighty, 'twill require
A strong faith to conceale it.
1. Let me haue it:
I doe not talke much.
2. I am confident;
You shall Sir: Did you not of late dayes heare
A buzzing of a Separation
Between the King and Katherine?
1. Yes, but it held not;
For when the King once heard it, out of anger
He sent command to the Lord Mayor straight
To stop the rumor; and allay those tongues
That durst disperse it.
2. But that standed Sir,
It found a truth now: for it growes again
Fresher then e'ere it was; and held for certaine
The King will venture at it. Either the Cardinall,
Or some about him neere, haue out of malice
To the good Queene, possest him with a scruple
That will vndoe her: To confirme this too,
Cardinall Campeius is arriu'd, and lately,
As all thinke for this business.
1. Tis the Cardinall;
And merrily to reuenge him on the Emperour,
For not bestowing on him at his asking,
The Archbishoprieke of Toledo, this is purpos'd.
2. I thinke
You haue hit the marke; but is't not cruell,
That she should feele the smart of this? the Cardinall
Will haue his will, and she must fall.
1. 'Tis woefull.
Wee are too open heere to argue this:
Let's thinke in private more. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Lord Chamberlaine, reading this Letter.

My Lord, the Horses your Lordship sent for, with all the care I had, I saw well chosen, ridden, and furnish'd. They were young and handsome, and of the best breed in the North. When they were ready to set out for London, a man of my Lord Cardinals by Commission, and some more were stay'd from me, with that reason: his master would be seru'd before a Subiect, if not before the King, which I know his Sir.

I feare he will indeede; well, let him haue them; hee will haue all I thinke.

Enter to the Lord Chamberlaine, the Dukes of Norfolke and Suffolke.

Norf. Well met my Lord Chamberlaine.
Cham. Good day to both your Graces.
Suff. How is the King imployd?
Cham. I left him priuate,
Full of sad thoughts and troubles.
Norf. What's the cause?
Cham. It seemes the Marriage with his Brothers Wife
Has crept too neere his Conscience.
Suff. No, his Conscience
Has crept too neere another Ladie.
Norf. 'Tis so;
This is the Cardinals doing: The King-Cardinall,
That blinde Priest, like the eldest Sonne of Fortune,
Turnes what he list. The King will know him one day.
Suff. Pray God he doe,
He'l never know himselfe else.
Norf. How holily he works in all his business,
And with what zeale? For now he has crack'd the League
Between vs & the Emperor (the Queens great Nephew)
He dives into the Kings Soule, and there scatters
Dangers, doubts, wringing of the Conscience,
Feares, and despaires, and all these for his Marriage.
And out of all these, to restore the King,
He counsels a Diuorce, a loss of her
That like a Iewell, has hung twenty yeares
About his neche, yet never lost her lustre;
Of her that loues him with that excellence,
That Angels loue goodness with: Euen of her,
That when the greatest stroke of Fortune falls
Will blesse the King: and is not this course pious?
Cham. Heauen keep me from such counsels, most true
These newes are every where, every tongue speaks 'em,
And every true heart weepes for 't. All that dare
Looke into these affaires, see this main end,
The French Kings Sister. Heauen will one day open
The Kings eyes, that so long haue slept vpon
This bold bad man.
Suff. And free vs from his slauery.
Norf. We had need pray,
And heartily, for our deliuerance;
Or this imperious man will worke vs all
From Princes into Pages: all men honours
Lie like one lumpe before him, to be fashion'd
Into what pitch he please.
Suff. For me, my Lords,
I loue him not, nor feare him, there's my Creede:
As I am made without him, so I'le stand,
If the King please: his Curses and his blessings
Touch me alike: th'are breath I not believe in.
I knew him, and I know him: so I leaue him
To him that made him proud; the Pope.
Norf. Let's in;
And with some other business, put the King
From these sad thoughts, that work too much vpon him:
My Lord, you'le bear vs company?
Cham. Excuse me,
The King has sent me otherwhere: Besides
You'l finde a most vnfit time to disturbe him:
Health to your Lordships.

Norfolk. Thankes my good Lord Chamberlaine.
Exit Lord Chamberlaine, and the King drawes the Curtaine and sits reading pensively.
Suf. How sad he looke; sure he is much afflicted.
Kin. Who's there? Ha?
Norf. Pray God he be not angry. (Selects
Kin. Who's there I say? How dare you thrust your Into my priuate Meditations?
Who am I? Ha?
Norf. A gracious King, that pardons all offences
Malice ne're meant: Our breach of Duty this way.
Is businesse of Estate; in which, we come
To know your Royall pleasure.
Kin. Ye are too bold:
Go too; I'le make ye know your times of businesse:
Is this an houre for temporall affaires? Ha?
Enter Wolsey and Campeius with a Commission.
Who's there? my good Lord Cardinall? O my Wolsey,
The quiet of my wounded Conscience;
Thou art a cure fit for a King; you're welcome
Most learned Reuerend Sir, into our Kingdome.
Vse vs, and it: My good Lord, haue great care,
I be not found a Talker.
Wol. Sir, you cannot;
I would your Grace would giue vs but an houre
Of priuate conference.
Kin. We are busie; goe.
Norf. This Priest ha's no pride in him!
Suf. Not to speake of:
I would not be so sicke though for his place:
But this cannot continue.
Norf. If it doe, I'le venture one; haue at him.
Suf. I another.
Exeunt Norfolk and Suffolk.
Wol. Your Grace ha's given a President of wisdome
Above all Princes, in committing freely
Your scruple to the voyce of Christendome:
Who can be angry now? What Enuy reach you?
The Spaniard tide by blood and fauour to her,
Must now confesse, if they haue any goodnesse,
The Tryall, just and Noble. All the Clerkes,
(I meane the learned ones in Christian Kingdomes)
Haue their free voyces. Rome (the Nurse of Iudgement)
Inuited by your Noble selfe, hath sent
One generall Tongue vnto vs. This good man,
This just and learned Priest, Cardinall Campeius,
Whom once more, I present vnto your Highnesse.
Kin. And once more in mine armes I bid him welcome,
And thanke the holy Conclue for their loues,
They haue sent me such a Man. I would haue wish'd for.
Cam. Your Grace must needs deserue all strangers loues,
You are so Noble: To your Highnesse hand
I tender my Commission; by whose vertue,
The Court of Rome commanding. You my Lord
Cardinall of Yorke, are joyn'd with me their Seruant,
In the imperiall iudging of this Businesse. (and
Kin. Two equall men: The Queene shall be acquain-
Forthwith for what you come. Where's Gardiner?
Wol. I know your Maiesty, ha's always lou'd her
So deare in heart, not to deny her that
A Woman of less Place might aske by Law;
Schollers allow'd freely to argue for her:
Kin. I, and the best she shall haue; and my fauour
To him that does beat, God forbid els: Cardinall,
Prethee call Gardiner to me, my new Secretary.
I find him a fit fellow.

Enter Gardiner.
Wol. Giue me your hand: much ioy & fauour to you;
You are the Kings now.
Gard. But to be commanded
For euer by your Grace, whose hand ha's rais'd me.
Kin. Come hither Gardiner.
Walkes and whispers.
Camp. My Lord of Yorke, was not one Doctor Pace
In this meane place before him?
Wol. Yes, he was.
Camp. Was he not held a learned man?
Wol. Yes surely.
Camp. Beleeue me, there's an ill opinion spread then,
Euen of your selfe Lord Cardinall.
Wol. How? of me?
Camp. They will not stiche to say, you enuide him;
And fearing he would rise (he was so vertuous)
Kept him a forraigne man still, which so griev'd him,
That he ran mad, and dide.
Wol. Heau'ns peace be with him:
That's Christian care enough: for liuing Murmurers,
There's places of rebuke. He was a Foole;
For he would needs be vertuous. That good Fellow,
If I command him followes my appointment,
I will haue none so neere els. Learne this Brother,
We fine not to be grip'd by meaner persons.
Kin. Deliuer this with modesty to th' Queene.
Exit Gardiner.
The most conuenient place, that I can thinke of
For such receipt of Learning, is Black-Fryers:
There ye shall meete about this weighty busines.
My Wolsey, see it furnish'd, O my Lord,
Would it not grieue an able man to leaue
So sweet a Bedfellow? But Conscience, Conscience;
O 'tis a tender place, and I must leaue her. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Anne Bullen, and an old Lady.

An. Not for that neither; here's the pang that pinches.
His Highnesse, having liu'd so long with her, and she
So good a Lady, that no Tongue could euer
Pronounce dishonour of her; by my life,
She neuer knew harme-doing: Oh, now after
So many courses of the Sun enthroned,
Still growing in a Maiesty and pompe, the which
To leaue, a thousand fold more bitter, than
'Tis sweet at first t'acquire. After this Processe,
To giue her the auaunt, it is a pitty
Would moue a Monster.
Old La. Hearts of most hard temper
Melt and lamente for her.
An. Oh Gods will, much better
She ne're had knowne pompe; though't be temporall,
Yet if that quarrell Fortune, do diuorce
It from the bearer, 'tis a sufferance, panging
As soule and bodies seuering.
Old L. Alas poore Lady,
She's a stranger now againe.
An. So much the more
Must pity drop vpon her; verily
I swearre, 'tis better to be lowly borne,

And

And range with humble liuers in Content,
Then to be perk'd vp in a glistring griefe,
And weare a golden sorrow.
Old L. Our content
Is our best hauing.
Anne: By my troth, and Maidenhead,
I would not be a Queene.
Old. L. Beshrew me, I would,
And venture Maidenhead for't, and so would you
For all this spice of your Hipocrisie:
You that haue so faire parts of Woman on you,
Haue (too) a Woman heart, which euer yet
Affected Eminence, Wealth, Soueraignty;
Which, to say sooth, are Blessings; and which guifts
(Sauing your mincing) the capacity
Of your soft Cheuerell Conscience, would receiue,
If you might please to stretch it
Anne. Nay, good troth.
Old L. Yes troth, & troth; you would not be a Queen?
Anne. No, not for all the riches vnder Heauen.
Old. L. Tis strange; a threepence bow'd would hire me
Old as I am, to Queene it: but I pray you,
What thinke you of a Duchesse? Haue you limbs
To beare that load of Title?
An. No in truth.
Old. L Then you are weakly made pluckes off a little,
I would not be a young Count in your way,
For more then blushing comes to: If your backe
Cannot vouchsafe this burthen, tis too weake
Euer to get a Boy.
An. How you doe talke;
I swearе againe, I would not be a Queene,
For all the world:
Old. L. In faith, for little England
You'ld venture an emballing: I my selfe
Would for Carnarvanshire, although there long'd
No more to th' Crowne but that: Lo, who comes here?

Enter Lord Chamberlaine.

L. Cham. Good morrow Ladies; what wer't worth to (know
The secret of your conference?
An. My good Lord,
Not your demand; it values not your asking:
Our Mistris Sorrowes we were pittying.
Cham. It was a gentle businesse, and becomming
The action of good women, there is hope
All will be well.
An. Now I pray God, Amen.
Cham. You beare a gentle minde, & heau'nly blessings
Follow such Creatures That you may, faire Lady
Perceiue I speake sincerely, and high notes
Tane of your many vertues; the Kings Maiesty
Commends his good opinion of you, to you; and
Does purpose honour to you no lesse flowing,
Then Marchionesse of Pembrooke; to which Title,
A Thousand pound a yeare, Annuall support,
Out of his Grace, he adds.
An I doe not know
What kinde of my obedience, I should tender;
More then my All, is Nothing: Nor my Prayers
Are not words duely hallowed; nor my Wishes
More worth, then empty vanities; yet Prayers & Wishes
Are all I can returne. Beseech your Lordship,
Vouchsafe to speake my thankes, and my obedience,
As from a blushing Handmaid, to his Highnesse;
Whose health and Royalty I pray for.
Cham. Lady;
I shall not fails t'approue the faire conceit
The King hath of you. I haue perus'd her well,
Beauty and Honour in her are so mingled,
That they haue caught the King: and who knowes yet
But from this Lady, may proceed a Iemme,
To lighten all this Ile. I'le to the King,
And say I spoke with you.

Exit Lord Chamberlaine.

An. My honour'd Lord.
Old L. Why this it is: See, see,
I haue beene begging sixteene yeares in Court
(Am yet a Courtier beg gerly) not could Come pat betwixt too early, and too late
For any suit of pounds: and you, (oh fate)
A very fresh Fish heere; fye, fye, fye vpon
This compet'd fortune: haue your mouth fild vp,
Before you open it.
An. This is strange to me.
Old L. How tasts it? Is it bitter? Forty pence, no:
There was a Lady once (tis an old Story)
That would not be a Queene, that would she not
For all the mud in Egypt; haue you heard it?
An. Come you are pleasant.
Old. L. With your Theame, I could
O're-mount the Larke: The Marchionesse of Pembrooke?
A thousand pounds a yeere, for pure respect?
No other obligation? by my Life,
That promises no thousands: Honours traine
Is longer then his fore-skirt; by this time
I know your backe will beare a Duchesse. Say,
Are you not stronger then you were?
An. Good Lady,
Make your selfe mirth with your particular fancy,
And leaue me out on't. Would I had no being
If this saluе my blood a iot; it faints me
To thinke what follows.
The Queene is comfortlesse, and we forgetfull
In our long absence: pray doe not deliuer,
What heere y'haue heard to her.
Old L. What doe you thinke me —— Exeunt

Scena Quarta.

Trumpets, Sennet, and Cornets.

Enter two Vergers, with short siluer wands; next them two Scribes in the habit of Doctors; after them, the Bishop of Canterbury alone; after him, the Bishops of Lincoln, Ely, Rochester, and S. Asaph: Next them, with some small distance, followes a Gentleman bearing the Purse, with the great Seale, and a Cardinals Hat: Then two Priests bearing each a Siluer Crosse Then a Gentleman Vsher bare-headed, accompanied with a Sergeant at Armes, bearing a Siluer Mace: Then two Gentlemen bearing two great Siluer Pillers: After them, side by side, the two Cardinals, two Noblemen with the Sword and Mace. The King takes place vnder the Cloth of State The two Cardinalls sit vnder him as Iudges. The Queene takes place some distance from the King. The Bishops place themselues on each side the Court in manner of a Consistory; Below them the Scribes. The Lords sit next the Bishops. The rest of the Attendants stand in conuenient order about the Stage.

Car. Whil'ſt our Commiſſion from Rome is read,
Let ſilence be commanded.
King. What's the need?
It hath already publiquely bene read,
And on all ſides th'Authority allow'd,
You may then ſpare that time.
Car. Bee't ſo, proceed.
Scri. Say, Henry K. of England, come into the Court.
Crier. Henry King of England, &c.
King. Here.
Scribe. Say, Katherine Queene of England,
Come into the Court.
Crier. Katherine Queene of England, &c.
The Queene makes no anſwer, riſes out of her Chaire, goes about the Court, comes to the King, and kneeles at his Feete. Then ſpeakes.
Sir, I deſire you do me Right and Iuſtice,
And to beſtow your pitty on me; for
I am a moſt poore Woman, and a Stranger,
Borne out of your Dominions: having heere
No Iudge indifferent, nor no more aſſurance
Of equall Friendſhip and Proceeding. Alas Sir
In what haue I offended you? What cauſe
Hath my behaviour given to your diſpleaſure,
That thus you ſhould proceede to put me off.
And take your good Grace from me? Heaven witneſſe,
I haue bene to you, a true and humble Wife,
At all times to your will conformable:
Ever in feare to kindle your Diſlike,
Yea, ſubject to your Countenance: Glad, or ſorry,
As I ſaw it inclin'd? When was the houre
I ever contradicted your Deſire?
Or made it not mine too? Or which of your Friends
Haue I not ſtroue to loue, although I knew
He were mine Enemy? What Friend of mine,
That had to him deriu'd your Anger, did I
Continue in my Liking? Nay, gaue notice
He was from hence diſcharg'd? Sir, call to minde,
That I haue beene your Wife, in this Obedience,
Vpward of twenty yeares, and haue bene bleſt
With many Children by you. If in the courſe
And proceſſe of this time, you can report,
And proue it too, againſt mine Honor, aught;
My bond to Wedlocke, or my Loue and Dutie
Againſt your Sacred Perſon; in Gods name
Turne me away: and let the foul'ſt Contempt
Shut doore vpon me, and ſo give me vp
To the ſharp'ſt kinde of Iuſtice. Pleaſe you, Sir,
The King your Father, was reputed for
A Prince moſt Prudent; of an excellent
And vnmatch'd Wit, and Iudgement. Ferdinand
My Father, King of Spaine, was reckon'd one
The wiſeſt Prince, that there had reign'd, by many
A yeare before. It is not to be queſtion'd,
That they had gather'd a wiſe Councell to them
Of every Realme, that did debate this Buſineſſe,
Who deem'd our Marriage lawful. Wherefore I humbly
Beſeech you Sir, to ſpare me, till I may
Be by my Friends in Spaine, aduis'd; whoſe Counſaile
I will implore. If not, i'th'name of God
Your pleaſure be fulfill'd.
Wol. You haue heere Lady,
(And of your choice) theſe Reuerend Fathers, men
Of ſingular Integrity, and Learning;
Yea, the elect o'th'Land, who are aſſembled
To plead your Cauſe. It ſhall be therefore boorleſſe,
That longer you defire the Court, as well
For your owne quiet, as to rectifie
What is vnſettled in the King.
Camp. His Grace
Hath ſpoken well, and iuſtly: Therefore Madam,
It's fit this Royall Seſſion do proceed,
And that (without delay) their Arguments
Be now produc'd, and heard.
Qu. Lord Cardinall, to you I ſpeake.
Wol. Your pleaſure, Madam.
Qu. Sir, I am about to weepe; but thinking that
We are a Queene (or long haue dream'd ſo) certaine
The daughter of a King, my drops of teares,
Ile turne to ſparkes of fire.
Wol. Be patient yet.
Qu. I will, when you are humble; Nay before,
Or God will puniſh me. I do beleeue
(Induc'd by potent Circumſtances) that
You are mine Enemy, and make my Challenge,
You ſhall not be my Iudge. For it is you
Haue blowne this Coale, betwixt my Lord, and me;
(Which Gods dew quench) therefore, I ſay againe,
I vtterly abhorre; yea, from my Soule
Refuſe you for my Iudge, whom yet once more
I hold my moſt malicious Foe, and thinke not
At all a Friend to truth.
Wol. I do profeſſe
You ſpeake not like your ſelfe: who ever yet
Haue ſtood to Charity, and diſplayd th'effects
Of diſpoſition gentle, and of wiſedome,
Ore-topping woman's powre. Madam, you do me wrong
I haue no Spleene againſt you, nor iniuſtice
For you, or my: how fare I haue proceeded,
Or how fare further (Shall) is warranted
By a Commiſſion from the Conſiſtorie.
Yea, the whole Conſiſtorie of Rome. You charge me,
That I haue blowne this Coale: I do deny it,
The King is preſent: If it be knowne to him,
That I gainſay my Deed, how may he wound,
And worthily my Falſehood, yea, as much
As you haue done my Truth. If he know
That I am free of your Report, he knowes
I am not of your wrong. Therefore in him
It lies to cure me, and the Cure is to Remoue theſe Thoughts from you. The which before
His Highneſſe ſhall ſpeake in, I do beſeech
You (gracious Madam) to vnthinke your ſpeaking,
And to ſay ſo no more.
Quee. My Lord, my Lord,
I am a ſimple woman, much too weake
T'oppoſe your cunning. Y'are meek, & humble-mouth'd
You ſigne your Place, and Calling, in full ſeeming,
With Meekeneſſe and Humilitie: but your Heart
Is crammed with Arrogancie, Spleene, and Pride.
You haue by Fortune, and his Highneſſe fauors,
Gone ſlightly o're lowe ſteppes, and now are mounted
Where Powers are your Retainers, and your words
(Domeſticks to you) ſerue your will, as't pleaſe
Your ſelfe pronounce their Office. I muſt tell you,
You tender more your perſons Honor, than
Your high profeſſion Spirituall. That age
I do refuſe you for my Iudge, and heere
Before you all, Appeale vnto the Pope,
To bring my whole Cauſe 'fore his Holineſſe,
And to be iudg'd by him.
She Curſies to the King, and offers to depart.
Camp.

Camp. The Queene is obstinate,
Stubborne to Iustice, apt to accuse it, and
Disdainefull to be tride by't; tis not well.
Shee's going away.
Kin. Call her againe.
Crier. Katherine. Q. of England, come into the Court.
Gent. Ush. Madam, you are cald backe.
Que. What need you note it? pray you keep your way,
When you are cald returne. Now the Lord help,
They vexe me past my patience, pray you passe on;
I will not tarry; no, nor ever more
Vpon this business my appearance make,
In any of their Courts.
Exit Queene, and her Attendants.
Kin. Goe thy wayes Kate,
That man i'th' world, who shall report he has
A better Wife, let him in naughte be trusted,
For speaking false in thee; thou art alone
(If thy rare qualities, sweet gentlenesse,
Thy matchlesse Saint-like, Wife-like Government,
Obeying in commanding, and thy parts
Soueraigne and Pious etc. could speake thee out)
The Queene of earthly Queenes: She's Noble borne;
And like her true Nobility, she has Carried her selfe towards me.
Wol. Most gracious Sir,
In humblest manner I require your Highnes,
That it shall please you to declare in hearing
Of all these eares (for where I am rob'd and bound,
There must I be vnloos'd, although not there
At once, and fully satisfide) whether ever I
Did breach this business to your Highnes, or Laid any scruple in your way, which might Induce you to the question on'tour ever
Haue to you, but with thankes to God for such
A Royall Lady, spake one, the least word that might
Be to the prejudice of her present State,
Or touch of her good Person?
Kin. My Lord Cardinall,
I doe excuse you; yea, vpon mine Honour,
I free you from't: You are not to be taught
That you have many enemies, that know not
Why they are so; but like to Village Curres,
Barke when their fellowes doe. By some of these
The Queene is put in anger; y'are excus'd:
But will you be more iustifi'de? You ever
Haue wish'd the sleeping of this business, never desir'd
It to be stir'd; but ost haue hinched, ost
The pass gen made toward it; on my Honour,
I speake my good Lord Cardinall, to this point;
And thus farre cleare him.
Now, what mou'd me too't,
I will be bold with time and your attention: (too't:
Then marke th'inducement. Thus it came; give heede
My Conscience first receiu'd a tenderness,
Scruple, and pricke, on certaine Speeches vttere'd
By th' Bishop of Bayon, then French Embassador,
Who had beene hither sent on the debating
And Marriage 'twixt the Duke of Orleanse, and
Our Daughter Mary: I'th' Progresse of this business,
Ere a determinate resolution, he
(I meane the Bishop) did require a respite,
Wherein he might the King his Lord advertise,
Whether our Daughter were legitimate,
Respecting this our Marriage with the Dowager,
Sometimes our Brothers Wife. This respite shooke
The bosome of my Conscience, enter'd me;
Yea, with a splitting power and made to tremble
The region of my Breast, which forc'd such way,
That many mazed considerings, did throng
And preft in with this Caution. First, me thought
I stood not in the state of Heaven, who had Commanded Nature, that my Ladies wombe
If it conceiu'd a male-child by me, should
Doe no more Offices of life too't; then
The Grave does to th' dead: For her Male Issue,
Or di'de where they were made, or shortly after
This world had eyn'd them. Hence I tooke a thought,
This was a Iudgement on me, that my Kingdome
(Well worthy the best Heyre o'th' World) should not Be gladded in't by me. Then followes, that I weigh'd the danger which my Realmes stood in
By this my Issues faile, and that gave to me
Many a groaning throw: thus hulling in
The wild Sea of my Conscience, I did steere
Toward this remedy, whereupon we are
Now present heere together: that's to say,
I meane to rectifie my Conscience, which
I then did feele ful' sick, and yet not well,
By all the Reverend Fathers of the Land,
And Doctors learn'd. First I began in patience,
With you my Lord of Lincolne; you remember
How vnder my oppression I did reeke
When I first mou'd you.
B. Lin. Very well my Liege.
Kin. I have spoke long, be pleas'd your selfe to ly
How farre you satisfide me.
Lin. So please your Highnes,
The question did at first so stagger me,
Bearing a State of mighty moment in't,
And consequence of dread, that I committed
The daring'st Counsaile which I had to doubt,
And did entreate your Highnes to this course,
Which you are running heere.
Kin. I then mou'd you,
My Lord of Canterbury, and got your leave
To make this present Summons vnsolicited.
I left no Reverend Person in this Court;
But by particular consent proceeded
Vnder your hands and Seales; therefore goe on,
For no dislike i'th' world against the person
Of the good Queene; but the sharpe thorny points
Of my alledged reasons, drives this forward:
Prove but our Marriage lawfull, by my Life
And Kingly Dignity, we are contented
To weare our mortall State to come, with her,
(Katherine our Queene) before the primest Creature
That's Parragon'd o'th' World
Camp. So please your Highnes,
The Queene being absent, 'tis a needfull fitnesse,
That we adiourne this Court till further day;
Meane while, must be an earnest motion
Made to the Queene to call backe her Appeale
She intends vnto his Holinesse.
Kin. I may perceiue
These Cardinals trifle with me: I abhorre
This dilatory sloth, and trickes of Rome.
My learn'd and welbeloued Seruant Cranmer,
Prethee returne, with thy approch: I know,
My comfort comes along. breake vp the Court;
I say, set on.
Exeunt, in manner as they came'd.

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Enter Queene and her Women as at worke.

Queen. Take thy Lute wench,
My Soule growes sad with troubles,
Sing, and disperse 'em if thou canst: leave working.

SONG.

Orpheus with his Lute made Trees,
And the Mountaine tops that freeze,
Bow themselves when he did sing.
To his Musicke, Plants and Flowers
Ever spring; as Sunne and Showers,
There had made a lasting Spring.
Every thing that heard him play,
Even the billows of the Sea,
Hung their heads, & then lay by.
In sweet Musicke is such Art,
Killing care, & griefe of heart,
Fall asleepe, or hearing die.

Enter a Gentleman.

Queen. How now?
Gent. And't please your Grace, the two great Cardinals
Wait in the presence.
Queen. Would they speake with me?
Gent. They wil'd me say so Madam.
Queen. Pray their Graces
To come neere: what can be their business
With me, a poore weake woman, falne from favour?
I doe not like their comming; now I think on't,
They should be good men, their affaires as righteous:
But all Hoods, make not Monkes.
Enter the two Cardinals, Wolsey & Campian.
Wolf. Peace to your Highnesse.
Queen. Your Graces find me heere part of a Housewife,
(I would be all) against the worst may happen:
What are your pleasures with me, reverent Lords?
Wol. May it please you Noble Madam, to withdraw
Into your private Chamber; we shall give you
The full cause of our comming.
Queen. Speake it heere.
There's nothing I have done yet o' my Conscience
Deserves a Corner: would all other Women
Could speake this with as free a Soule as I doe.
My Lords, I care not (so much I am happy
Above a number) if my actions
Were tri'de by every tongue, every eye saw 'em,
Envy and base opinion set against 'em,
I know my life so even. If your business
Seeke me out, and that way I am Wife in;
Out with it boldly: Truth loves open dealing.
Card. Tanta est erga te mentis integritas Regina serenissima.
Queen. O good my Lord, no Latin;
I am not such a Truant since my comming,
As not to know the Language I have liv'd in: (ous:
A strange Tongue makes my cause more strange, suspit-
Pray speake in English; heere are some will thanke you,
If you speake truth, for their poore Mistris sake;
Believe me she has had much wrong. Lord Cardinall,
The willing'st sonne I ever yet committed,
May be absolu'd in English.
Card. Noble Lady,
I am sorry my integrity should breed,
(And service to his Majesty and you)
So deepe suspition, where all faith was meant;
We come not by the way of Accusation,
To taint that honour every good Tongue blesses;
Nor to betray you any way to sorrow;
You have too much good Lady: But to know
How you stand minded in the weighty difference
Between the King and you, and to deliver
(Like free and honest men) our just opinions,
And comforts to our cause.
Camp. Most honour'd Madam,
My Lord of Yorke, out of his Noble nature,
Zeale and obedience he still bore your Grace,
Forgetting (like a good man) your late Censure
Both of his truth and him (which was too farre)
Offers, as I doe, in a figure of peace,
His Service, and his Counsell.
Queen. To betray me.
My Lords, I thanke you both for your good wills,
Ye speake like honest men, (pray God ye prove so)
But how to make ye suddenly an Answere
In such a point of weight, so neere mine Honour,
(More neere my Life I feare) with my weake wit;
And to such men of gravity and learnings
In truth I know not. I was set at worke,
Among my Maids, full little (God knowes) looking
Either for such men, or such business;
For her sake that I have beene, for I feele
The last fit of my Greatnesse; good your Graces
Let me have time and Counsell for my Cause:
Alas. I am a Woman friendlesse, hopelesse.
Wol. Madam,
You wrong the Kings love with these fears,
Your hopes and friends are infinite.
Queen. In England,
But little for my profit: can you thinke Lords,
That any English man dare give me Counsell?
Or be a known friend 'gainst his Highnes pleasure,
(Though he be growne so desperate to be honest)
And live a Subject? Nay forsooth, my Friends,
They that must weigh out my afflictions,
They that my trust must grow on, live not heere.
They are (as all my other comforts) far hence
In mine owne Country Lords.
Camp. I would you Grace
Would leave your greefes, and take my Counsell.
Queen. How Sir?
Camp. Put your maine cause into the Kings protection,
He's loving and most gracious: 'twill be much,
Both for your Honour better, and your Cause:
For if the tryall of the Law o'rethrow ye,
You'l part away disgrac'd.
Wol. He tells you rightly.
Queen. Ye tell me what ye wish for both, my ruine:
Is this your Christian Counsell? Out upon ye.
Heaven is above all yet; there sits a Judge,
That no King can corrupt.
Camp. Your rage mistakes us.
Queen. The more shame for ye, holy men I thought ye,
Upon my Soule two reverend Cardinall Vertues:
But Cardinall Sins, and hollow hearts I feare ye:
Mend 'em for shame my Lords: Is this your comfort?
The Cardinall that ye bring a wretched Lady?
A woman lost among ye, laugh't at, scorned?
I will not wish ye halfe my miseries,

I have more Charity. But say I warn'd ye;
Take heed, for heauens sake take heed, least at once
The burthen of my sorrowes, fall vpon ye.
Car. Madam, this is a meere distraction,
You turne the good we offer, into enuy.
Quee. Ye turne me into nothing. Woe vpon ye,
And all such false Professors. Would you haue me
(If you haue any Iustice, any Pity,
If ye be any thing but Churchmens habits)
Put my sicke cause into his hands, that hates me?
Alas, ha's banish'd me his Bed already,
His Loue, too long ago. I am old my Lords,
And all the Fellowship I hold now with him
Is only my Obedience. What can happen
To me, above this wretchedness? All your Studies
Make me a Curse, like this.
Camp. Your fears are worse.
Qu. Have I liu'd thus long (let me speake my sele,
Since Vertue finds no friends) a Wife, a true one?
A Woman (I dare say without Vainglory)
Never yet branded with Suspition?
Haue I, with all my full Affections
Still met the King? Lou'd him next Heau'n? Obey'd him?
Bin (out of fondnesse) superstitious to him?
Almost forgot my Prayers to content him?
And am I thus rewarded? 'Tis not well Lords,
Bring me a constant woman to her Husband,
One that ne've dream'd a Ioy, beyond his pleasure;
And to that Woman (when she has done most)
Yet will I adde an Honor; a great Patience.
Car. Madam, you wander from the good
We ayme at.
Qu. My Lord,
I dare not make my selfe so guiltie,
To give vp willingly that Noble Title
Your Master wed me to: nothing but death
Shall e've diuorce my Dignities.
Car. Pray heare me.
Qu. Would I had never trod this English Earth,
Or felt the Flatteries that grow vpon it:
Ye haue Angels Faces; but Heauen knowes your hearts.
What will become of me now, wretched Lady?
I am the most vnhappy Woman liuing.
Alas (poore Wenches) where are now your Fortunes?
Shipwrack'd vpon a Kingdome, where no Pity,
No Friends, no Hope, no Kindred weepe for me?
Almost no Graue allow'd me? Like the Lilly
That once was Mistris of the Field, and flourish'd,
I'le hang my head, and perish.
Car. If your Grace
Could but be brought to know, our Ends are honest,
You'd feele more comfort. Why should we (good Lady)
Vpon what cause wrong you? Alas, our Places,
The way of our Profession is against it;
We are to Cure such sorrowes, not to sowe 'em.
For Goodnesse sake, consider what you do,
How you may hurt your selfe: I, vtterly
Grow from the Kings Acquaintance, by this Carriage.
The hearts of Princes kisse Obedience,
So much they loue it. But to stubborne Spirits,
They swell and grow, as terrible as stormes.
I know you haue a Gentle, Noble temper,
A Soule as even as a Calme; Pray thinke vs,
Those we professe, Peace-makers, Friends, and Seruants.
Camp. Madam, you'l finde it so:
You wrong your Vertues
With these weake Womens feares. A Noble Spirit
As yours was, put into you, ever casts
Such doubts as false Coine from it. The King loues you,
Beware you loose it not: For vs (if you please
To trust vs in your business) we are ready
To vse our vtmost endeuors, in your seruice.
Qu. Do what ye will, my Lords:
And pray forgiue me;
If I haue vs'd my selfe vnmannerly,
You know I am a Woman, lacking wit
To make a seemely answer to such persons.
Pray do my seruice to his Maiestie,
He has my heart yet, and shall haue my Prayers
While I shall haue my life. Come reuerend Fathers,
Bestow your Counsels on me. She now begges
That liule thought when she set footing heere,
She should haue bought her Dignities so deere. Exeunt

Scena Secunda.

Enter the Duke of Norfolke, Duke of Suffolke, Lord Surrey, and Lord Chamberlaine.

Norf. If you will now vnite in your Complaints,
And force them with a Constancy, the Cardinall
Cannot stand vnder them. If you omit
The offer of this time, I cannot promise,
But that you shall sustaine moe new disgraces,
With these you bear already.
Sur. I am loyfull
To meete the least occasion, that may give me
Remembrance of my Father-in-Law, the Duke,
To be reuenge'd on him.
Suf. Which of the Peeres
Haue vncontested gone by him, or at least
Strangely neglected? When did he regard
The stamp of Nobleness in any person
Out of himselfe?
Cham. My Lords, you speake your pleasures:
What he deserves of you and me, I know:
What we can do to him (though now the time Gives way to vs) I much feare. If you cannot Barre his access to th'King, never attempt
Any thing on him: for he hath a Witchcraft
Ouer the King in's Tongue.
Nor. O feare him not,
His spell in that is out: the King hath found
Matter against him, that for euer mares
The Hony of his Language. No, he's settled
(Not to come off) in his displeasure.
Sur. Sir,
I should be glad to heare such Newes as this
Once every houre.
Nor. Believe it, this is true.
In the Diuorce, his contrarie proceedings
Are all vnfolded: wherein he appeares,
As I would wish mine Enemy.
Sur. How came
His practices to light?
Suf. Most strangely.
Sur. O how? how?
Suf. The Cardinals Letters to the Pope miscarried,
And

And came to th'eye o th'King, wherein was read
How that the Cardinall did intreat his Holinesse
To stay the Iudgement o'th'Diuorce; for if
It did take place, I do (quoth he) perceiue
My King is tangled in affection, to
A Creature of the Queenes, Lady Anne Bullen.
Sur. Ha's the King this?
Suf. Believe it.
Sur. Will this worke?
Cham. The King in this perceiues him, how he coasts
And hedges his owne way. But in this point,
All his trickes founder, and he brings his Physicke
After his Patients death; the King already
Hath married the faire Lady.
Sur. Would he had.
Suf. May you be happy in your wish my Lord,
For I professe you haue it.
Sur. Now all my ioy
Trace the Conclusion.
Suf. My Amen too't.
Nor. All men.
Suf. There's order given for her Coronation:
Marry this is yet but young, and may be left
To some ears vnrecounted. But my Lords
She is a gallant Creature, and complete
In minde and feature. I persuade me, from her
Will fall some blessing to this Land, which shall
In it be memorized.
Sur. But will the King
Digest this Letter of the Cardinall?
The Lord forbid.
Nor. Marry Amen.
Suf. No, no:
There be moe Waspes that buz about his Nose,
Will make this sting the sooner. Cardinall Campeius,
Is stolne away to Rome, hath 'tane no leaue,
Ha's left the cause o'th'King vnhandled, and
Is posted as the Agent of our Cardinall,
To second all his plot. I do assure you,
The King cry'de Ha, at this.
Cham. Now God incense him,
And let him cry Ha, louder.
Norf. But my Lord
When returnes Cranmer?
Suf. He is return'd in his Opinions, which
Haue satisfied the King for his Diuorce,
Together with all famous Colledges
Almost in Christendome: shortly (I believe)
His second Marriage shall be published, and
Her Coronation. Katherine no more
Shall be call'd Queene, but Princesse Dowager,
And Widdow to Prince Arthur.
Nor. This same Cranmer's
A worthy Fellow, and hath tane much paine
In the Kings business.
Suf. He has, and we shall see him
For it, an Arch-bishop.
Nor. So I heare.
Suf. 'Tis so.
Enter Wolsey and Cromwell.
The Cardinall.
Nor. Obserue, obserue, he's moody.
Car. The Packet Cromwell,
Gaue't you the King?
Crom. To his owne hand, in's Bed-chamber.
Card. Look'd he o'th'inside of the Paper?
Crom. Presently
He did vnseale them, and the first he view'd,
He did it with a Serious minde; a heede
Was in his countenance. You he bad
Attend him here this Morning.
Card. Is he ready to come abroad?
Crom. I thinke by this he is.
Card. Leaue me a while. Exit Cromwell.
It shall be to the Duchess of Alanson,
The French Kings Sister; He shall marry her.
Anne Bullen? No: He no Anne Bullens for him,
There's more in't than fair Visage. Bullen?
No, we'l no Bullens: Speedily I wish
To heare from Rome. The Marchionesse of Pembroke?
Nor. He's discontented.
Suf. May be he hears the King
Does what his Anger to him.
Sur. Sharpe enough,
Lord for thy Iustice.
Car. The late Queenes Gentlewoman?
A Knights Daughter
To be her Mistris Mistris? The Queenes, Queene?
This Candle burnes not cleere, 'tis I must snuffe it,
Then out it goes. What though I know her vertuous
And well deseruing? yet I know her for
A spleeny Lutheran, and not wholsome to
Our cause, that she should lye i'th'bosome of
Our hard rul'd King. Anone, there is sprung vp
An Heretique, an Arch-one; Cranmer, one
Hath crawl'd into the fauour of the King,
And is his Oracle.
Nor. He is vex'd at something

Enter King, reading of a Scedule.

Sur. I would 'twere something that would fret the string,
The Master-cord on's heart.
Suf. The King, the King.
King. What pile of wealth hath he accumulated
To his owne portion? And what expence by th'houre
Seemes to flow from him? How, i'th'name of Thrift
Does he rake this together? Now my Lords,
Saw you the Cardinall?
Nor. My Lord, we haue
Stood here obseruing him. Some strange Commotion
Is in his braine: He bites his lip, and starts,
Stops on a suddaine, looke vpon the ground,
Then layes his finger on his Temple: straight
Springs out into fast gait, then stops again,
Strikes his breft hard, and anon, he casts
His eye against the Moone: In most strange Postures
We haue seene him set himselfe.
King. It may well be,
There is a mutiny in's minde. This morning
Papers of State he sent me, to peruse
As I requir'd; and wot you what I found
There (on my Conscience put vnwittingly)
Scrolles of a Inuentory, thus importing
The seuerall parcels of his Plate, his Treasure, Rich Stuffe, and Ornaments of Houshold, which
I find at such proud Rate, that it out-speakes
Possession of a Subiect.
Nor. It's Heauens will,
Some spirit put this paper in the Packet,
To bleeſſe your eye withall.
Kin. If we did think

His

His Contemplation were above the earth,
And fixt on Spiritual object, he should still Dwell in his Musings, but I am afraid
His Thinkings are below the Moone, not worth
His serious considering.

King takes his Seat, whispers Lovell, who goes to the Cardinall.

Car. Heaven forgive me.
Ever God blesse your Highnesse.
King. Good my Lord,
You are full of Heavenly stuffe, and bear the Inventory
Of your best Graces, in your mindes; the which
You were now running o're: you have scarce time
To steale from Spirituall leysure, a briefe span
To keepe your earthly Audit, sure in that
I deeme you an ill Husband, and am glad
To have you therein my Companion.
Car. Sir,
For Holy Offices I have a time; a time
To think upon the part of business, which
I bear i'th State: and Nature does require
Her times of preservation, which perforce
I her frale sonne, amongst my Brethren mortall,
Must give my tendance to
King. You have said well.
Car. And ever may your Highnesse yoke together,
(As I will lend you cause) my doing well,
With my well saying.
King. 'Tis well said again,
And 'tis a kinde of good deede to say well,
And yet words are no deeds. My Father lov'd you,
He said he did, and with his deed did Crowne
His word upon you. Since I had my Office,
I have kept you next my Heart, have not alone
Employ'd you where high Profits might come home,
But pur'd my present Havings, to bestow
My Bounties upon you.
Car. What should this meane?
Sur. The Lord increase this business.
King. Have I not made you
The prime man of the State? I pray you tell me,
If what I now pronounce, you have found true:
And if you may confesse it, say withall
If you are bound to us, or no. What say you?
Car. My Soveraigne, I confesse your Royall graces
Shower'd on me daily, have beene more than could
My studied purposes require, which were
Beyond all mans endeavors. My endeavors,
Have ever come too short of my Desires,
Yet fill'd with my Abilities: Mine owne ends
Have beene mine so, that evermore they pointed
To th'good of your most Sacred Person, and
The profit of the State. For your great Graces
Heap'd upon me (poore Undeserver) I
Can nothing render but Allegiant thankes,
My Prayers to heaven for you; my Loyalties
Which ever has, and ever shall be growing,
Till death (that Winter) kill it.
King. Fairly answer'd:
A Loyall, and obedient Subiect is
Therein illustrated, the Honor of it
Does pay the Act of it, as i'th'contrary
The foulnesse is the punishment. I professe,
That to my hand ha's open'd Bounty to you,
My heart drop'd Love, my powre rain'd Honor, more
On you, than any: So your Hand, and Heart,
Your Braine, and every Function of your power,
Should, notwithstanding that your bond of duty,
As 'twer in Loves particular, be more
To me your Friend, then any.
Car. I do professe,
That for your Highnesse good, I ever labour'd
More than mine owne: that am, have, and will be (Though all the world should crackt their duty to you,
And throw it from their Soule, though perils did Abound, as thick as thought could make 'em, and Appeare in formes more horrid) yet my Duty,
As doth a Rocke against the chiding Flood,
Should the approach of this wilde River breake,
And stand unshaken yours.
King. 'Tis Nobly spoken:
Take notice Lords, he ha's a Loyall breft,
For you have seene him open't. Read o're this,
And after this, and then to Breakfast with
What appetite you have.

Exit King, frowning upon the Cardinall, the Nobles throng after him, smiling, and whispering.

Car. What should this meane?
What sodaine Anger's this? How have I reap'd it?
He parted Frowning from me, as if Ruine
Leap'd from his Eyes. So looke the chafed Lyon
Upon the daring Huntsman that has gall'd him:
Then makes him nothing. I must read this paper:
I feare the Story of his Anger. 'Tis so:
This paper ha's undone me: 'Tis th'Accompt
Of all that world of Wealth I have drowne together
For mine owne ends, (Indeed to gaine the Popedome,
And see my Friends in Rome.) O Negligence!
Fit for a Fooole to fall by: What crosse Diuell
Made me put this maine Secret in the Packet
I sent the King? Is there no way to cure this?
No new device to beare this from his Braines?
I know 'twill stirre him strongly; yet I know
A way, if it take right, in spight of Fortune
Will bring me off againe. What's this? To th'Pope?
The Letter (as I live) with all the Businesse
I writ too's Holinesse. Nay then, farewell:
I have touch'd the highest point of all my Greatnesse,
And from that full Meridian of my Glory,
I haste now to my Setting. I shall fall
Like a bright exhalation in the Evening,
And no man see me more.

Enter to Wolsey, the Duke of Norfolke and Suffolke, the Earle of Surrey, and the Lord Chamberlaine.

Nor. Heare the Kings pleasure Cardinall,
Who commands you
To render up the Great Seale presently
Into our hands, and to Confine your selfe
To Asher-house, my Lord of Winchesters,
Till you heare further from his Highnesse.
Car. Stay:
Where's your Commission? Lords, words cannot carrie
Authority so weighty.
Suf. Who dare crosse 'em,
Bearing the Kings will from his mouth expressly?
Car. Till I finde more than will, or words to do it,
(I mean your malice) know, Officious Lords,
I dare, and must doay it. Now I feele
Of what coarse Mettle ye are moulded, Envy,
How eagerly ye follow my Disgraces

As

As if it fed ye, and how sleeke and wanton
Ye appeare in every thing may bring my ruine?
Follow your envious courses, men of Malice;
You have Christian warrant for 'em, and no doubt
In time will finde their fit Rewards. That Seale
You ask with such a Violence, the King
(Mine, and your Master) with his owne hand, gave me:
Bad me enjoy it, with the Place, and Honor
During my life; and to confirme his Goodnesse,
Tiede it by Letters Patents. Now, who'l take it?

Sur. The King that gave it.

Car. It must be himselfe then.

Sur. Thou art a proud Traitor, Priest.

Car. Proud Lord, thou lyest:
Within these forty houres, Surrey durst better
Have burnt that Tongue, than said so.

Sur. Thy Ambition
(Thou Scarlet sinne) robb'd this bewailing Land
Of Noble Buckingham, my Father-in-Law,
The heads of all thy Brother-Cardinals,
(With thee, and all thy best parts bound together)
Weigh'd not a hairs of his. Plague of your policie,
You sent me Deputie for Ireland,
Farre from his succour; from the King, from all
That might have mercie on the fault, thou gau'st him:
Whil'st your great Goodnesse, out of holy pity,
Absolv'd him with an Axe.

Wol. This, and all else
This talking Lord can lay upon my credit,
I answer, is most false. The Duke by Law
Found his desarts. How innocent I was
From any private malice in his end,
His Noble Iurie, and foule Cause can witnesse.
If I lov'd many words, Lord, I should tell you,
You have as little Honesty, as Honor,
That in the way of Loyaltie, and Truth,
Toward the King, my ever Royall Master,
Dare mate a sounder man than Surrie can be,
And all that love his follies.

Sur. By my Sonne,
Your long Coat (Priest) protects you,
Thou should'st feele
My Sword i'th'lifie blood of thee else. My Lords,
Can ye endure to heare this Arrogance?
And from this Fellow? if we live thus tamely,
To be thus Iaded by a peece of Scarlet,
Farewell Nobilitie: let his Grace go forward,
And dare us with his Cap, like Larkes.

Card. All Goodnesse
Is poyson to thy Stomacke.

Sur. Yes, that goodnesse
Of gleaning all the Lands wealth into one,
Into your owne hands (Card'nall) by Extortion:
The goodnesse of your intercepted Packets
You writ to th Pope, against the King: your goodnesse
Since you provoke me, shall be most notorious.
My Lord of Norfolke, as you are truly Noble,
As you respect the common good, the State
Of our despis'd Nobilitie, our Ilsues,
(Whom if he live, will scarse be Gentlemen)
Produce the grand summe of his sinnes, the Articles
Collected from his life. I'le starve you
Worse than the Sacring Bell, when the browne Wench
Lay kissing in your Armes, Lord Cardinall.

Car. How much me thinkes, I could despise this man,
But that I am bound in Charitie against it.

Nor. Those Articles, my Lord, are in the Kings hands:
But thus much, they are foule ones.

Wol. So much fairer
And spotlesse, shall mine Innocence arise,
When the King knowes my Truth.

Sur. This cannot save you:
I thinke my Memorie, I yet remember
Some of these Articles, and out they shall.
Now, if you can blush, and cry guiltie Cardinall,
You'l shew a little Honestie.

Wol. Speake on Sir,
I dare your worst Objections: If I blush,
It is to see a Nobleman want manners.

Sur. I had rather want those, than my head;
Have at you.
First, that without the Kings assent or knowledge,
You wrought to be a Legate, by which power
You maim'd the Iurisdiction of all Bishops.

Nor. Then, That in all you writ to Rome, or else
To Forraigne Princes, Ego & Rex meus
Was still inscrib'd: in which you brought the King
To be your Servant.

Suf. Then, that without the knowledge
Either of King or Counsell, when you went
Ambassador to the Emperor, you made bold
To carry into Flanders, the Great Seale.

Sur. Item, You sent a large Commission
To Gregory de Cassado, to conclude
Without the Kings will, or the States allowance,
A League betweene his Highnesse, and Ferrara.

Suf. That out of meere Ambition, you have caus'd
Your holy-Hat to be stampt on the Kings Coine.

Sur. Then, That you have sent innumerable substance,
(By what meanes got, I leave to your owne conscience)
To furnish Rome, and to prepare the ways
You have for Dignities, to the meere undoing
Of all the Kingdome. Many more there are,
Which since they are of you, and odious,
I will not taint my mouth with.

Cham. O my Lord,
Presse not a falling man too sore: 'tis Vertue:
His faults lye open to the Lawes, let them
(Not you) correct him. My heart weepes to see him
So little, of his great Self.

Sur. I forgive him.

Suf. Lord Cardinall, the Kings further pleasure is,
Because all those things you have done of late
By your power Legatine within this Kingdome,
Fall into th'compasse of a Premunire;
That therefore such a Writ be sued against you,
To forfeit all your Goods, Lands, Tenements,
Castles, and whatsoever, and to be
Out of the Kings protection. This is my Charge.

Nor. And so we'l leave you to your Meditations
How to live better. For your stubborne answer
About the giving backe the Great Seale to us,
The King shall know it, and (no doubt) shal thanke you.
So fare you well, my little good Lord Cardinall.

Exeunt all but Wolsey.

Wol. So farewell, to the little good you bare me.
Farewell? A long farewell to all my Greatnesse.
This is the state of Man; to day he puts forth
The tender Leaves of hopes, to morrow Blossomes,
And bears his blushing Honors thicke upon him:
The third day, comes a Frost; a killing Frost,
And when he thinkes, good easie man, full surely

His

His Greatneſſe is a ripening, nippes his roote,
And then he falls as I do. I have ventur'd
Like little wanton Boyes that ſwim on bladders;
This many Summers in a Sea of Glory,
But farre beyond my depth: my high-blowne Pride
At length broke vnder me, and now ha's left me
Weary, and old with Seruice, to the mercy
Of a rude ſtreame, that muſt for ever hide me.
Vaine pompe, and glory of this World, I hate ye,
I feele my heart new open'd. Oh how wretched
Is that poore man, that hangs on Princes fauours?
There is betwixt that ſmile we would aſpire too,
That ſweet Aſpect of Princes, and their ruine,
More pangs, and feares then warres, or women haue;
And when he falles, he falles like Lucifer,
Never to hope againe.

Enter Cromwell, ſtanding amazed.

Why how now Cromwell?

Crom. I haue no power to ſpeake Sir.

Car. What, amaz'd
At my misfortunes? Can thy Spirit wonder
A great man ſhould decline. Nay, and you weep
I am falne indeed.

Crom. How does your Grace.

Card. Why well:
Never ſo truly happy, my good Cromwell.
I know my ſelfe now, and I feele within me,
A peace aboue all earthly Dignities,
A ſtill, and quiet Conſcience. The King ha's ear'd me,
I humbly thanke his Grace: and from theſe ſhoulders
Theſe ruin'd Pillers, out of pitty, taken
A loade, would ſinke a Nauy, (too much Honor)
O 'tis a burden Cromwell, 'tis a burden
Too heauy for a man, that hopes for Heauen.

Crom. I am glad your Grace,
Ha's made that right vſe of it.

Card. I hope I haue:
I am able now (me thinkes)
(Out of a Fortitude of Soule, I feele)
To endure more Miſeries, and greater farre
Then my Weake-hearted Enemies, dare offer.
What Newes abroad?

Crom. The heauieſt, and the worſt,
Is your diſpleaſure with the King.

Card. God bleſſe him.

Crom. The next is, that Sir Thomas Moore is choſen
Lord Chancellor, in your place.

Card. That's ſomewhat ſadden
But he's a Learned man. May he continue
Long in his Highneſſe fauour, and do Iuſtice
For Truths-ſake, and his Conſcience; that his bones,
When he ha's run his courſe, and ſleepes in Bleſſings,
May haue a Tombe of Orphans teares wept on him.
What more?

Crom. That Cranmer is return'd with welcome;
Inſtall'd Lord Arch-byſhop of Canterbury.

Card. That's Newes indeed.

Crom. Laſt, that the Lady Anne,
Whom the King hath in ſecreſie long married,
This day was view'd in open, as his Queene,
Going to Chappell; and the voyce is now
Onely about her Coronation.

Card. There was the weight that pull'd me downe.
O Cromwell,
The King ha's gone beyond me: All my Glories
In that one woman, I haue loſt for ever.
No Sun, ſhall ever viſit earth more bright
Ot gilde againe the Noble Troopes that waighted
Vpon my ſmiles. Go get thee from me Cromwell,
I am a poore falne man, vnworthy now
To be thy Lord, and Maſter. Seeke the King
(That Sun, I pray may never ſet) I haue told him,
What, and how true thou art; he will aduance thee:
Some little memory of me, will ſtirre him
(I know his Noble Nature) not to let Thy hopefull ſeruice periſh too. Good Cromwell
Neglect him not; make vſe now, and prouide
For thine owne future ſafety.

Crom. O my Lord,
Muſt I then leaue you? Muſt I needes forgo
So good, ſo Noble, and ſo true a Maſter?
Beare witneſſe, all that haue not hearts of Iron,
With what a ſorrow Cromwell leaues his Lord.
The King ſhall haue my ſeruice; but my prayres
For ever, and for ever ſhall be yours.

Card. Cromwell, I did not thanke to ſhed a teare
In all my Miſeries: But thou haſt forc'd me
(Out of thy honeſt truth) to play the Woman.
Let's dry our eyes: And thus farre heare me Cromwell,
And when I am forgotten, as I ſhall be,
And ſleepe in dull cold Marble, where no mention
Of me, more muſt be heard of: Say I taught thee;
Say Wolſey, that once trod the wayes of Glory,
And ſounded all the Depths, and Shoales of Honor,
Found thee a way (out of his wracke) to riſe in:
A ſure, and ſafe one, though thy Maſter miſt it.
Marke but my Fall, and that that Ruin'd me:
Cromwell, I charge thee, fling away Ambition,
By that ſinne fell the Angels: how can man then
(The Image of his Maker) hope to win by it?
Loue thy ſelfe laſt, cheriſh thoſe hearts that hate thee;
Corruption wins not more then Honeſty.
Still in thy right hand, carry gentle Peace
To ſilence enuious Tongues. Be iuſt, and feare not;
Let all the ends thou aym'ſt at, be thy Countries,
Thy Gods, and Truths. Then if thou fall ſt (O Cromwell)
Thou fall'ſt a bleſſed Martyr.
Serue the King: And prythee leade me in:
There take an Inuentory of all I haue,
To the laſt peny, 'tis the Kings. My Robe,
And my Integrity to Heauen, is all.
I dare now call mine owne. O Cromwell, Cromwell,
Had I but ſerv'd my God, with halfe the Zeale
I ſerv'd my King: he would not in mine Age
Haue left me naked to mine Enemies.

Crom. Good Sir, haue patience.

Card. So I haue. Farewell
The Hopes of Court, my Hopes in Heauen do dwell.

Exeunt.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter two Gentlemen, meeting one another.

1 Y'are well met once againe

2 So are you.

1 You come to take your ſtand heere, and behold
The Lady Anne, paſſe from her Coronation.

2 'Tis

2 'Tis all my business. At our last encounter,
The Duke of Buckingham came from his Triall.
1 'Tis very true. But that time offer'd sorrow,
This generall joy.
2 'Tis well: The Citizens
I am sure have shewne at full their Royall minds,
As let 'em have their rights, they are ever forward
In Celebration of this day with Shewes,
Pageants, and Sighes of Honor.
1 Never greater,
Nor I'le assure you better taken Sir.
2 May I be bold to aske what that containes,
That Paper in your hand.
1 Yes, 'tis the List
Of those that claime their Offices this day,
By custome of the Coronation.
The Duke of Suffolke is the first, and claimes
To be high Steward; Next the Duke of Norfolke,
He to be Earle Marshall: you may reade the rest.
1 I thanke you Sir: Had I not known those customs,
I should have beene beholding to your Paper:
But I beseech you, what's become of Katherine
The Princesse Dowager? How goes her business?
1 That I can tell you too. The Archbishop
Of Canterbury, accompanied with other
Learned, and Reverend Fathers of his Order,
Held a late Court at Dunstable; five miles off
From Ampthill, where the Princesse lay, to which
She was often cyted by them, but appear'd not:
And to be short, for not Appearance, and
The Kings late Scrunle, by the maine assent
Of all these Learned men, she was divorc'd,
And the late Marriage made of none effect:
Since which, she was remov'd to Kymmalton,
Where she remaines now sicke.
2 Alas good Lady.
The Trumpets sound: Stand close,
The Queene is comming. Hautboys.

The Order of the Coronation.

1 A lively Flourish of Trumpets.
2 Then, two Judges
3 Lord Chancellor, with Purse and Mace before him.
4 Quirristers singing. Musicke
5 Maior of London, bearing the Mace. Then Garter, in his Coate of Armes, and on his head he wore a Gilt Copper Crowne.
6 Marquesse Dorset, bearing a Scepter of Gold, on his head, a Demy Coronall of Gold. With him, the Earle of Surrey, bearing the Rod of Silver with the Dove, Crowned with an Earles Coronet. Collars of Esses.
7 Duke of Suffolke, in his Robe of Estate, his Coronet on his head, bearing a long white Wand, as High Steward. With him, the Duke of Norfolke, with the Rod of Marshalsship, a Coronet on his head. Collars of Esses.
8 A Canopy, borne by foure of the Cinque-Ports, under it the Queene in her Robe, in her haire, richly adorned with Pearle, Crowned. On each side her, the Bishops of London, and Winchester.
9 The Olde Duchesse of Norfolke, in a Coronall of Gold, wrought with Flowers, bearing the Queenes Traine.
10 Certaine Ladies or Counsellors, with plaine Circlets of Gold, without Flowers.

Exeunt, first passing over the Stage in Order and State, and then A great Flourish of Trumpets.

2 A Royall Traine beleeme me: These I know:
Who's that that bears the Scepter?
1 Marquesse Dorset,
And that the Earle of Surrey, with the Rod.
2 A bold brave Gentleman. That should bee
The Duke of Suffolke.
1 'Tis the same: high Steward.
2 And that my Lord of Norfolke?
1 Yes.
2 Heaven blesse thee,
Thou hast the sweetest face I ever look'd on.
Sir, as I have a Soule, she is an Angell;
Our King has all the Indies in his Armes,
And more, and richer, when he strames that Lady,
I cannot blame his Conscience.
1 They that bearе
The Cloath of Honour over her, are foure Barons
Of the Cinque Ports.
2 Those men are happy,
And so are all, are neere her.
I take it, she that carries up the Traine,
Is that old Noble Lady, Duchesse of Norfolke.
1 It is, and all the rest are Countesses.
2 Their Coronets say so. These are Starres indeed,
And sometimes falling ones.
2 No more of that.
Enter a third Gentleman.
1 God save you Sir. Where have you been broiling?
3 Among the crow'd i'th'Abbey, where a finger
Could not be wedg'd in more: I am stifled
With the meere rankness of their joy.
2 You saw the Ceremony?
3 That I did.
1 How was it?
3 Well worth the seeing.
2 Good Sir, speake it to us?
3 As well as I am able. The rich streame
Of Lords, and Ladies, having brought the Queene
To a prepar'd place in the Quire, fell off
A distance from her; while her Grace sat downe
To rest a while, some halfe an houre, or so,
In a rich Chaire of State, opposing freely
The Beauty of her Person to the People.
Believe me Sir, she is the goodliest Woman
That ever lay by man: which when the people
Had the full view of, such a noyse arose,
As the shrowdes make at Sea, in a stiffe Tempest,
As loud, and to as many Tunes. Hats, Cloakes,
(Doublets, I thinke) flew up, and had their Faces
Ben loose, this day they had beene lost. Such joy
I never saw before. Great belly'd women,
That had not halfe a weeke to go, like Rammes
In the old time of Warre, would shake the preasse
And make 'em reele before 'em. No man living
Could say this is my wife there, all were woven
So strangely in one peece.
2 But what follow'd?
3 At length, her Grace rose, and with modest paces
Came to the Altar, where she knee'd, and Saint-like
Cast her faire eyes to Heaven and pray'd devoutly.
Then rose againe, and bow'd her to the people:
When by the Arch-bishop of Canterbury,
She had all the Royall makings of a Queene;
As holy Oyle, Edward Confessors Crowne,
The Rod, and Bird of Peace, and all such Emblemes
Laid Nobly on her: which perform'd, the Quire

With

With all the choyfest Muficke of the Kingdome,
Together fung Te Deum. So fhe parced,
And with the fame full State pac'd backe againe
To Yorke-Place, where the Feaft a held.
1 Sir,
You muft no more call it Yorke-place, that's paft:
For fince the Cardinall fell, that Titles loft,
'Tis now the Kings, and call'd Whitte-Hall.
3 I know it:
But 'tis fo lately alter'd, that the old name
Is freth about me.
2 What two Reverend Byfhops
Were thofe that went on each fide of the Queene?
3 Stokesly and Gardiner, the one of Winchefter,
Newly preferr'd from the Kings Secretary:
The other London.
1 He of Winchefter
Is held no great good lover of the Archbifhops.
The vertuous Cranmer.
3 All the Land knowes that:
How ever, yet there is no great breach, when it comes
Cranmer will finde a Friend will not fhrinke from him.
1 Who may that be, I pray you.
3 Thomas Cromwell,
A man in much efteeme with th'King, and truly
A worthy Friend. The King has made him
Mafter o'th'Iewell Houfe,
And one already of the Privy Counceill.
2 He will deferue more.
3 Yes without all doubt.
Come Gentlemen, ye fhall go my way,
Which is to'th Court, and there ye fhall be my Guefts:
Something I can commaund. As I walke thither,
I'le tell ye more.
Both. You may commaund vs Sir. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Katherine Dowager, ficke, led between Griffith, her Gentleman Vfher, and Patience her Woman.

Grif. How do's your Grace?
Kath. O Griffith, ficke to death:
My Legges like loaden Branches bow to'th'Earth,
Willing to leaue their burthen: Reach a Chaire,
So now (me thinkes) I feele a little eafe.
Did'ft thou not tell me Griffith, as thou lead'ft mee,
That the great Childe of Honor, Cardinall Wolfey
Was dead?
Grif. Yes Madam: but I thanke your Grace
Out of the paine you fuffer'd, gaue no care too'e.
Kath. Pre'thee good Griffith, tell me how he dy'de.
If well, he flept before me happily
For my example.
Grif. Well, the voyce goes Madam,
For after the ftout Earle Northumberland
Arreffed him at Yorke, and brought him forward
As a man forely tainted, to his Anfwer,
He fell ficke fudainly, and grew fo ill
He could not fit his Mule.
Kath. Alas poore man.
Grif. At laft, with eafe Rodes, he came to Leicefter,
Lodg'd in the Abbey; where the reverend Abbot
With all his Couent, honourably receiu'd him;
To whom he gaue thefe words. O Father Abbot,
An old man, broken with the ftormes of State,
Is come to lay his weary bones among yee:
Giue him a little earth for Charity.
So went to bed; where eagerly his ficknefte
Purfu'd him ftill, and three nights after this,
About the houre of eight, which he himfelfe
Foretold fhould be his laft, full of Repentance,
Continuall Meditations, Teares, and Sorrowes,
He gaue his Honors to the world agen,
His bleffed part to Heaven, and flept in peace.
Kath. So may he reft,
His Faults lye gently on him:
Yet thus farre Griffith, giue me leaue to fpeake him,
And yet with Charity. He was a man
Of an vnbounded ftomacke, ever ranking
Himfelfe with Princes. One that by fuggeftion
Ty'de all the Kingdome. Symonie, was fair play,
His owne Opinion was his Law. I'th'prefence
He would fay vntruths, and be ever double
Both in his words, and meaning. He was never
(But where he meant to Ruine) pitifull.
His Promifes, were as he then was, Mighty:
But his performance, as he is now, Nothing:
Of his owne body he was ill, and gaue
The Clergy ill example.
Grif. Noble Madam:
Mens euill manners, live in Braffe, their Vertues
We write in Water. May it pleafe your Highneffe
To heare me fpeake his good now?
Kath. Yes good Griffith,
I were malicious elfe.
Grif. This Cardinall,
Though from an humble Stocke, vndoubtedly
Was fafhion'd to much Honor. From his Cradle
He was a Scholler, and a ripe, and good one
Exceeding wife, fair fpoken, and perfwading:
Lofty, and fowre to them that lou'd him not:
But, to thofe men that fought him, fweet as Summer
And though he were vnfatisfied in getting,
(Which was a finne) yet in bestowing, Madam,
He was moft Princely: Ever witneffe for him
Thofe twinnes of Learning, that he rais'd in you,
Ipswich and Oxford; one of which, fell with him,
Vnwilling to out-live the good that did it.
The other (though vnfinifh'd) yet fo Famous,
So excellent in Art, and ftill fo rifing,
That Chriftendome fhall ever fpeake his Vertue.
His Overthrow, heap'd Hoppineffe vpon him:
For then, and not till then, he felt himfelfe,
And found the Bleffedneffe of being little.
And to adde greater Honors to his Age
Then man could giue him; he dy'de, fearing God.
Kath. After my death, I wifh no other Herald,
No other fpeaker of my living Actions,
To keepe mine Honor, from Corruption,
But fuch an honeft Chronicler as Griffith.
Whom I moft hated Living, thou haft made me
With thy Religious Truth, and Modeftie,
(Now in his Ashes) Honor: Peace be with him.
Patience, be neere me ftill, and fet me lower,
I haue not long to trouble thee. Good Griffith,
Cauſe the Muſicians play me that fad note
I nam'd my Knell; whil'ft I fit meditating

On that Celestiall Harmony I go too.

Sad and solemne Musicke.

Grif. She is asleep: Good wench, let's sit down quiet,
For feare we wake her. Softly, gentle Patience.

The Vision.

Enter solemnely tripping one after another, six Personages, clad in white Robes, wearing on their heades Garlands of Bayes, and golden Vizards on their faces, Branches of Bayes or Palme in their hands. They first Course unto her, then Dance: and at certaine Changes, the first two hold a spare Garland over her Head, at which the other foure make reverend Curtsies. Then the two that held the Garland, deliver the same to the other next two, who observe the same order in their Changes, and holding the Garland over her head. Which done, they deliver the same Garland to the last two: who likewise observe the same Order. At which (as it were by inspiration) she makes (in her sleepe) signes of rejoycing, and holdeth up her hands to heaven. And so, to their Dancing vanish, carrying the Garland with them. The Musicke continues.

Kath. Spirits of peace, where are you? Are ye all gone
And leave me heere in wretchednesse, behinde ye?

Grif. Madam, we are heere.

Kath. It is not you I call for,
Saw ye none enter since I slept?

Grif. None Madam.

Kath. No? Saw you not even now a blessed Troupe
Invite me to a Banquet, whose bright faces
Cast thousand beames upon me, like the Sun?
They promis'd me eternall Happinesse,
And brought me Garlands (Griffith which I feele
I am not worthy yet to weare: I shall assuredly.

Grif. I am most joyfull Madam, such good dreames
Possesse your Fancy.

Kath. Bid the Musicke leave,
They are harsh and heavy to me. Musicke ceases.

Pat. Do you note
How much her Grace is alter'd on the sodaine?
How long her face is drowne? How pale she looks,
And of an earthy cold? Marke her eyes?

Grif. She is going Wench. Pray, pray.

Pat. Heaven comfort her.

Enter a Messenger.

Mes. And't like your Grace——

Kath. You are a sawcy Fellow,
Deserve we no more Reverence?

Grif. You are too blame,
Knowing she will not loose her wonted Greatnesse
To use so rude behaviour. Go too, kneele.

Mes. I humbly do entreat your Highnesse pardon,
My haste made me unmannerly. There is staying
A Gentleman sent from the King, to see you.

Kath. Admit him entrance Griffith. But this Fellow
Let me ne're see again. Exit Messeng.

Enter Lord Capucius.

If my sight faile not,
You should be Lord Ambassador from the Emperor,
My Royall Nephew, and your name Capucius.

Cap. Madam the same. Your Servant.

Kath. O my Lord,
The Times and Titles now are alter'd strangely
With me, since first you know me.
But I pray you,
What's your pleasure with me?

Cap. Noble Lady,
First mine owne service to your Grace, the next
The Kings request, that I would visit you,
Who grieves much for your weaknesse, and by me
Sends you his Princely Commendations,
And heartily entreats you take good comfort.

Kath. O my good Lord, that comfort comes too late,
'Tis like a Pardon after Execution;
That gentle Physicke given in time, had cur'd me:
But now I am past all Comforts heere, but Prayers.
How does his Highnesse?

Cap. Madam, in good health.

Kath. So may he ever do, and ever flourish,
When I shall dwell with Wormes, and my poore name
Banish'd the Kingdome. Patience, is that Letter
I caus'd you write, yet sent away?

Pat. No Madam.

Kath. Sir, I most humbly pray you to deliver
This to my Lord the King.

Cap. Most willing Madam.

Kath. In which I have commended to his goodnesse
The Modell of our chaste loves: his young daughter,
The dewes of Heaven fall thicke in Blessings on her,
Beseeching him to give her vertuous breeding.
She is young, and of a Noble modest Nature,
I hope she will deserve well; and a little
To love her for her Mothers sake, that lov'd him,
Heaven knowes how dearely.
My next poore Petition,
Is, that his Noble Grace would have some pitie
Upon my wretched women, that so long
Have follow'd both my Fortunes, faithfully,
Of which there is not one, I dare avow
(And now I should not lye) but will deserve
For Vertue, and true Beauties of the Soule,
For honestie, and decent Carriage
A right good Husband (let him be a Noble)
And ferre these men are happy that shall have 'em.
The last is for my men, they are the poorest,
(But poverty could never draw 'em from me)
That they may have their wages, duly paid 'em,
And something over to remember me by.
If Heaven had pleas'd to have given me longer life
And able meanes, we had not parted thus.
These are the whole Contents, and good my Lord,
By that you love the dearest in this world,
As you wish Christian peace to soules departed,
Stand these poore peoples Friend, and urge the King
To do me this last right.

Cap. By Heaven I will,
Or let me loose the fashion of a man.

Kath. I thanke you honest Lord. Remember me
In all humilitie unto his Highnesse:
Say his long trouble now is passing
Out of this world. Tell him in death I bless him
(For so I will) mine eyes grow dimme. Farewell
My Lord. Griffith farewell. Nay Patience,
You must not leave me yet. I must to bed,
Call in more women. When I am dead, good Wench,
Let me be vs'd with Honor; strew me over
With Maiden Flowers, that all the world may know
I was a chaste Wife, to my Grave: Embalme me,
Then lay me forth (although unqueen'd) yet like
A Queene, and Daughter to a King inter me.
I can no more.

Exeunt leading Katherine.

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter Gardiner Bishop of Winchester, a Page with a Torch before him, met by Sir Thomas Lovell.

Gard. It's one a clocke Boy, is't not.
Boy. It hath strooke.
Gard. These should be hours for necessities,
Not for delights: Times so repeyre our Nature
With comforting repose, and not for vs
To waste these times. Good hours of night Sir Thomas:
Whether so late?
Lov. Came you from the King, my Lord?
Gar. I did Sir Thomas and left him at Primero
With the Duke of Suffolke.
Lov. I must to him too
Before he go to bed. Ile take my leave.
Gard. Not yet Sir Thomas Lovell: what's the matter?
It seemes you are in haste: and if there be
No great offence belongs too't, giue your Friend
Some touch of your late business: Affaires that walke
(As they say Spirits do) at midnight, haue
In them a wilder Nature, than the business
That seekes dispatch by day.
Lov. My Lord, I loue you;
And durst commend a secret to your eare
Much waightier then this worke. The Queens in Labor
They say in great Extremity, and fear'd
She'l with the Labour, end.
Gard. The fruite she goes with
I pray for heartily, that it may finde
Good time, and liue: but for the Stoothe Sir Thomas,
I wish it grubb'd vp now.
Lov. Me thinkes I could
Cry the Amen, and yet my Conscience sayes
She's a good Creature, and sweet-Ladie do's
Deserue our better wishes.
Gard. But Sir, Sir,
Heare me Sir Thomas, y'are a Gentleman
Of mine owne way. I know you Wise, Religious,
And let me tell you, it will ne're be well,
'Twill not Sir Thomas Lovell, tak't of me,
Till Cranmer, Cromwell, her two hands, and thee
Sleepe in their Graues.
Lovell. Now Sir, you speake of two
The most remark'd i'th'Kingdome: as for Cromwell,
Beside that of the Iewell-House, is made Master
O'th'Rolles, and the Kings Secretary. Further Sir,
Stands in the gap and Trade of more Preferments,
With which the time will loade him. Th'Archbyshop
Is the Kings hand, and tongue, and who dare speak
One syllable against him?
Gard. Yes, yes, Sir Thomas,
There are that Dare, and I my selfe haue ventur'd
To speake my minde of him: and indeed this day,
Sir (I may tell it you) I thinke I haue
Incrast the Lords o'th'Counsell, that he is
(For so I know he is, they know he is)
A most Arch-Heretique, a Pestilence
That does infect the Land: with which, they moued
Haue broken with the King, who hath so farre
Given eare to our Complaint, of his great Grace,
And Princely Care, fore-seeing those fell Mischiefes,
Our Reasons layd before him, hath commanded
To morrow Morning to the Councell Board
He be conuented. He's a ranke weed Sir Thomas,
And we must root him out. From your Affaires
I hinder you too long: Good night, Sir Thomas.
Exit Gardiner and Page.
Lov. Many good nights, my Lord, I rest your seruant.
Enter King and Suffolke.
King. Charles, I will play no more to night,
My minde's not on't, you are too hard for me.
Suff. Sir, I did neuer win of you before.
King. But little Charles,
Nor shall not when my Fancies on my play.
Now Lovel, from the Queene what is the Newes.
Lov. I could not personally deliuer to her
What you commanded me, but by her women,
I sent your Message, who return'd her thankes
In the great'st humblenesse, and desir'd your Highnesse
Most heartily to pray for her.
King. What say'st thou? Ha?
To pray for her? What, is she crying out?
Lov. So said her woman, and that her sufference made
Almost each pang, a death.
King. Alas good Lady.
Suf. God safely quit her of her Burthen, and
With gentle Trauaile, to the gladding of
Your Highnesse with an Heire.
King. 'Tis midnight Charles,
Prythee to bed, and in thy Prayres remember
Th'estate of my poore Queene. Leaue me alone,
For I must thinke of that, which company
Would not be friendly too.
Suf. I wish your Highnesse
A quiet night, and my good Mistris will Remember in my Prayers.
King. Charles good night. Exit Suffolke.
Well Sir, what followes?
Enter Sir Anthony Denny.
Den. Sir, I haue brought my Lord the Arch-byshop
As you commanded me.
King. Ha! Canterbury?
Den. I my good Lord.
King. 'Tis true: where is he Denny?
Den. He attends your Highnesse pleasure.
King. Bring him to Vs.
Lov. This is about that, which the Byshop spake,
I am happily come hither.
Enter Cranmer and Denny.
King. Auoyd the Gallery. Lovel seemes to stay.
Ha? I haue said. Be gone.
What? Exeunt Lovell and Denny.
Cran. I am fearefull: Wherefore frownes he thus?
'Tis his Aspect of Terror. All's not well.
King. How now my Lord?
You do desire to know wherefore
I sent for you.
Cran. It is my duetie
T'attend your Highnesse pleasure.
King. Pray you arise
My good and gracious Lord of Canterburie:
Come, you and I must walke a turne together:
I haue Newes to tell you.
Come, come, give me your hand.
Ah my good Lord, I greeue at what I speake,
And am right sorrie to repeat what followes.
I haue, and most vnwilligly of late

Heard many grievous. I do say my Lord
Grievous complaints of you; which being consider'd,
Have mov'd Vs, and our Councell, that you shall
This Morning come before vs, where I know
You cannot with such freedome purge your selfe,
But that till further Triall, in those Charges
Which will require your Answer, you must take
Your patience to you, and be well contented
To make your house our Towre: you, a Brother of vs
It fits we thus proceed, or else no witnesse
Would come against you.

Cran. I humbly thanke your Highnesse,
And am right glad to catch this good occasion
Most throughly to be winnowed, where my Chaffe
And Corne shall fye asunder. For I know
There's none stands vnder more calumnious tongues,
Then I my selfe, poore man.

King. Stand vp, good Canterbury,
Thy Truth, and thy Integrity is rooted
In vs thy Friend. Give me thy hand, stand vp,
Prythee let's walke. Now by my Holydame,
What manner of man are you? My Lord, I look'd
You would have given me your Petition, that
I should have ta'ne some paines, to bring together
Your selfe, and your Accusers, and to have heard you
Without indurance further.

Cran. Most dread Liege,
The good I stand on, is my Truth and Honestie:
If they shall fails, I with mine Enemies
Will triumph o're my person, which I weigh not,
Being of those Vertues vacant. I feare nothing
What can be said against me.

King. Know you not
How your state stands i'th'world, with the whole world?
Your Enemies are many, and not small; their practises
Must beare the same proportion, and not ever
The Iustice and the Truth o'th'question carries
The dew o'th'Verdict with it; at what ease
Might corrupt minds procure, Knaves as corrupt
To swearre against you: Such things have bene done.
You are Potently oppos'd, and with a Malice
Of as great Size. Weene you of better luck,
I meane in periur'd Witnesse, than your Master,
Whose Minister you are, whiles here he lin'd
Vpon this naughty Earth? Go too, go too,
You take a Precipit for no leape of danger,
And wot your owne destruction.

Cran. God, and your Maiesty
Protect mine innocence, or I fall into
The trap is laid for me.

King. Be of good cheere,
They shall no more prevaile, than we give way too:
Keepe comfort to you, and this Morning see
You do appeare before them. If they shall chance
In charging you with matters, to commit you:
The best persuasions to the contrary
Faile not to vse, and with what vehemencie
Th'occasion shall instruct you. If straines
Will reader you no remedy, this Ring
Deliver them, and your Appeale to vs
There make before them. Looke, she goodman weeps:
He's honest on mine Honor. Gods blest Mother,
I swearre he is true-hearted, and a foule
None better in my Kingdome. Get you gone,
And do as I have bid you. Exit Cranmer.
He has strangled his Language in his teares.

Enter Olde Lady.

Gent within. Come backe: what mean you?

Lady. I'le not come backe, the tydings that I bring
Will make my boldnesse, manners. Now good Angels
Fly o're thy Royall head, and shade thy person
Vnder their blessed wings.

King. Now by thy looks
I guesse thy Message. Is the Queene deliver'd?
Say I, and of a boy.

Lady. I, I my Liege,
And of a lusty Boy: the God of heaven
Both now, and ever blesse her! 'Tis a Gyrle
Promises Boyes hereafter. Sir, your Queen
Desires your Visitation, and to be
Acquainted with this stranger; 'tis as like you,
As Cherry, is to Cherry.

King. Lovell.

Lov. Sir.

King. Give her an hundred Markes.
Ile to the Queene. Exit King.

Lady. An hundred Markes? By this light, I'le ha more.
An ordinary Groome is for such payment.
I will have more, or scold it out of him.
Said I for this, the Gyrle was like to him? I'le
Have more, or else scolding's: and now, while 'tis hot,
I'le put it to the issue. Exit Lady.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Cranmer, Archbishop of Canterbury.

Cran. I hope I am not too late, and yet the Gentleman
That was sent to me from the Councell, pray'd me
To make great haste. All fast? What means this? Hoa?
Who waiters there? Sure you know me?

Enter Keeper.

Keep. Yes, my Lord:
But yet I cannot helpe you.

Cran. Why?

Keep. Your Grace must waiteill you be call'd in.

Enter Doctor Butts.

Cran. So.

Butts. This is a Peare of Malice: I am glad
I came this way so happily. The King
Shall understand it presently. Exit Butts.

Cran. 'Tis Butts.
The Kings Physitian, as he past along
How carefully he cast his eyes vponme:
Pray heaven he found not my disgrace: for certaine
This is of purpose laid by some that have me,
(God mend their hearts, I never sought their malice)
To quench mine Honor; they would shame to make me
Wait else at doore: a fellow Counsellor
'Mong Boyes, Grooms, and Lackeyes.
But their pleasures
Must be fulfill'd, and I attend with patience.

Enter the King, and Butts, at a Window above.

Butts. Ile shew your Grace the strangest sight.

King. What's that Butts?

Butts.

Butts. I thinke your Highneſſe saw this many a day.
Kin. Body a me: where is he?
Butts. There my Lord:
The high promotion of his Grace of Canterbury,
Who holds his State at dore 'mongſt Purſeuants,
Pages, and Foot-boyes.
Kin. Ha! 'Tis he indeed.
Is this the Honour they doe one another?
'Tis well there's one above 'em yet; I had thought
They had parted ſo much honeſtly among em,
At leaſt good manners; as not thus to ſuffer
A man of his Place, and ſo neere our favour
To dance attendance on their Lordſhips pleaſures,
And at the dore too, like a Poſt with Packets:
By holy Mary (Butts) there's knavery;
Let 'em alone, and draw the Curtaine cloſe:
We ſhall heare more anon.

A Councell Table brought in with Chayres and Stooles, and placed under the State. Enter Lord Chancellour, places himſelfe at the upper end of the Table, on the left hand: A Seate being left void above him, as for Canterbury's Seate. Duke of Suffolke, Duke of Norfolke, Surrey, Lord Chamberlaine, Gardiner, ſeat themſelves in Order on each ſide. Cromwell at lower end, as Secretary.

Cham. Speake to the buſineſſe, M. Secretary;
Why are we met in Councell?
Crom. Please your Honours,
The chiefe cauſe concernes his Grace of Canterbury.
Gard. Has'he had knowledge of it?
Crom. Yes.
Norf. Who waites there?
Kep. Without my Noble Lords?
Gard. Yes.
Kep. My Lord Archbiſhop:
And has's done halfe an houre to know your pleaſures.
Cham. Let him come in.
Kep. Your Grace may enter now.
Cranmer approches the Councell Table
Cham. My good Lord Archbiſhop, I'm very ſorry
To ſit heere at this preſent, and behold
That Chayre ſtand empty: But we all are men
In our owne natures frailе, and capable
Of our flеſh, few are Angels; out of which frailty
And want of wiſdome, you that beſt ſhould teach us,
Have miſdemean'd your ſelfe, and not a little:
Toward the King firſt, then his Lawes, in filling
The whole Realme, by your teaching & your Chaplaines
(For ſo we are inform'd) with new opinions,
Diuers and dangerous; which are Hereſies;
And not reform'd, may prooe pernicious.
Gard. Which Reformation muſt be ſodaine too
My Noble Lords; for thoſe that tame wild Horſes,
Pace 'em not in their hands to make 'em gentle;
But ſtop their mouthes with ſtubborn Bits & ſpurre 'em,
Till they obey the mannage. If we ſuffer
Out of our eaſineſſe and childiſh pitty
To one mans Honour, this contagious ſicknеſſe;
Farewell all Phyſicke: and what followes then?
Commotions, vproares, with a generall Taint
Of the whole State; as of late dayes our neighbours,
The vpper Germany can dearely witneſſe:
Yet freſhly pitied in our memories.
Cran. My good Lords; Hitherto, in all the Progreſſe
Both of my Life and Office, I haue labour'd,
And with ſo little ſtudy, that my teaching
And the ſtrong courſe of my Authority,
Might goe one way, and ſafely; and the end
Was ever to doe well: nor is there living,
(I ſpeake it with a ſingle heart, my Lords)
A man that more detests, more ſtirres againſt,
Both in his priuate Conſcience, and his place,
Defacers of a publique peace then I doe:
Pray Heauen the King may never find a heart
With leſſe Allegeance in it. Men that make
Enuy, and crooked malice, nourſhment;
Dare bite the beſt. I doe beſeech you Lordſhips,
That in this caſe of Iuſtice, my Accuſers,
Be what they will, may ſtand forth face to face,
And freely vrge againſt me.
Suff. Nay, my Lord,
That cannot be; you are a Counſellor,
And by that vertue no man dare accuſe you. (mens,
Gard. My Lord, because we haue buſiness of more mo-
We will be ſhort with you. 'Tis his Highneſſe pleaſure
And our conſent, for better tryall of you,
From hence you be committed to the Tower,
Where being but a priuate man againe,
You ſhall know many dare accuſe you boldly,
More then (I feare) you are prouided for.
Cran. Ah my good Lord of Winchester: I thanke you,
You are always my good Friend, if your will paſſe,
I ſhall both finde your Lordſhip, Iudge and Iuror,
You are ſo merciſull. I ſee your end,
'Tis my vndoing. Loue and meekeneſſe, Lord
Become a Churchman, better then Ambition:
Win ſtraying Soules with modeſty againe,
Caſt none away: That I ſhall cleere my ſelfe,
Lay all the weight ye can vpon my patience,
I make as little doubt as you doe conſcience,
In doing dayly wrongs. I could ſay more,
But reuerence to your calling, makes me modeſt.
Gard. My Lord, my Lord, you are a Sectary,
That's the plaine truth; your painted gloſſe diſcouers
To men that vnderſtand you, words and weakneſſe.
Crom. My Lord of Winchester, y'are a little,
By your good fauour, too ſharpe; Men ſo Noble,
However faultly, yet ſhould finde reſpect
For what they haue beene: 'tis a cruelty,
To load a falling man.
Gard. Good M. Secretary,
I cry your Honour mercie; you may worſt
Of all this Table ſay ſo.
Crom. Why my Lord?
Gard. Doe not I know you for a Fauourer
Of this new Sect? ye are not ſound.
Crom. Not ſound?
Gard. Not ſound I ſay.
Crom. Would you were halfe ſo honeſt:
Mens prayers then would ſeeke you, not their feares.
Gard. I ſhall remember this bold Language.
Crom. Doe.
Remember your bold life too.
Cham. This is too much;
Forbeare for ſhame my Lords.
Gard. I haue done.
Crom. And I.
Cham. Then thus for you my Lord, it ſtands agreed
I take it, by all voyces: That forthwith,
You be conuaid to th' Tower a Priſoner;
There to remaine till the Kings further pleaſure
Be knowne vnto vs: are you all agreed Lords.

All

All. We are.

Cran. Is there no other way of mercy,
But I must needs to th' Tower my Lords?

Gard. What other,
Would you expect? You are strangely troublesome:
Let some o'th' Guard be ready there.

Enter the Guard.

Cran. For me?
Must I goe like a Traytor thither?

Gard. Receive him,
And see him safe i'th' Tower.

Cran. Stay good my Lords,
I have a little yet to say. Looke there my Lords,
By vertue of that Ring, I take my cause
Out of the gripes of cruell men, and give it
To a most Noble Judge, the King my Master.

Cham. This is the Kings Ring.

Sur. 'Tis no counterfeit.

Suff. 'Ts the right Ring, by Heav'n: I told ye all,
When we first put this dangerous stone a rowling,
'Twold fall upon our selves.

Norf. Doe you thinke my Lords
The King will suffer but the little finger
Of this man to be vex'd?

Cham. 'Tis now too certaine;
How much more is his Life in value with him?
Would I were fairely out on't.

Cran. My mind gave me,
In seeking tales and Informations
Against this man, whose honesty the Diuell
And his Disciples onely envy at,
Ye blew the fire that burnes ye. now have at ye.

Enter King frowning on them, takes his Seate.

Gard. Dread Soueraigne,
How much are we bound to Heaven,
In daily thanks; that gave vs such a Prince;
Not onely good and wise, but most religious:
One that in all obedience, makes the Church
The chiefe ayme of his Honour, and to strengthen
That holy duty out of deare respect,
His Royall self in Iudgement comes to heare
The cause betwixt her, and this great offender.

Kin. You were ever good at sodaine Commendations,
Bishop of Winchester. But know I come not
To heare such flattery now, and in my presence
They are too thin, and base to hide offences,
To me you cannot reach. You play the Spaniell,
And thinke with wagging of your tongue to win me:
But whatsoere thou tak'st me for; I'm sure
Thou hast a cruell Nature and a bloody.
Good man sit downe: Now let me see the proudest
Hee, that dares most, but wag his finger at thee.
By all that's holy, he had better starve,
Then but on e thinke his place becomes thee not.

Sur. May it please your Grace; ——

Kin. No Sir, it doe's not please me,
I had thought, I had had men of some vnderstanding,
And wisedome of my Councell; but I finde none:
Was it discretion Lords, to let this man,
This good man (few of you deserue that Title)
This honest man, wait like a lowsie Foot-boy
At Chamber dore? and one, as great as you are?
Why, what a shame was this? Did my Commission
Bid ye so farre forget your selves? I gave ye
Power, as he was a Counsellour to try him,
Not as a Groome: There's some of ye, I see,
More out of Malice then Integrity.
Would trye him to the vttmost, had ye mesne,
Which ye shall never have while I live.

Cham. Thus farre
My most dread Soueraigne, may it like your Grace,
To let my tongue excuse all. What was purpos'd
Concerning his Imprisonment, was rather
(If there be faith in men) meant for his Tryall,
And fairer purgation to the world then malice,
I'm sure in me.

Kin. Well, well my Lords respect him,
Take him, and vse him well; he's worthy of it.
I will say thus much for him, if a Prince
May be beholding to a Subject; I
Am for his love and service, so to him.
Make me no more adoe, but all embrace him;
Be friends for shame my Lords: My Lord of Canterbury
I have a Suite which you must not deny me.
That is, a faire young Maid that yet wants Baptisme,
You must be Godfather, and answere for her.

Cran. The greatest Monarch now alive may glory
In such an honour: how may I deserue it,
That am a poore and humble Subject to you?

Kin. Come, come my Lord, you'd spare your spoones;
You shall have two noble Partners with you: the old
Duchesse of Norfolke, and Lady Marquesse Dorset: will these please you?
Once more my Lord of Winchester, I charge you
Embrace, and love this man.

Gard. With a true heart,
And Brother; love I doe it.

Cran. And let Heaven
Witnesse how deare, I hold this Confirmation. (heave,

Kin. Good Man, those ioyfull teares shew thy true
The common voyce I see is verified
Of thee, which sayes thus: Doe my Lord of Canterbury
A shrewd turne, and he's your friend for ever:
Come Lords, we trifle time away: I long
To have this young one made a Christian.
As I have made ye one Lords, one remaine:
So I grow stronger, you more Honour gaine. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Noyse and Tumult within: Enter Porter and his man.

Port. You'l leave your noyse anon ye Rascals: doe you take the Court for Parish Garden: ye rude Slaves, leave your goeing:

Man. Good M. Porter I belong to th' Larder.

Port. Belong to th Gallowes, and be hang'd ye Rogue: Is this a place to roare in? Fetch me a dozen Crab-tree staves, and strong ones: these are but switches to 'em: I'le scratch your heads: you must be seeing Christenings? Do you looke for Ale, and Cakes here, you rude Rosh alls?

Man. Pray Sir be patient; 'tis as much impossible, Vnlesse we sweepe 'em from the dore with Cannons, To scatter 'em, as 'tis to make 'em sleepe On May-day Morning, which will never be: We may as well push against Powles as stare 'em.

Por. How got they in, and be hang'd?

Man.

Man. Alas I know not, how gets the Tide in?
As much as one sound Cudgell of foure foote,
(You see the poore remainder) could distribute,
I made no spare Sir.

Por. You did nothing Sir.

Man. I am not Sampson, nor Sir Guy, nor Colbrand,
To mow 'em downe before me: but if I spar'd any
That had a head to hit, either young or old,
He or shee, Cuckold or Cuckold-maker:
Let me ne're hope to see a Chine againe,
And that I would not for a Cow, God saue her.

Wife. Do you heare M. Porter?

Por. I shall be with you presently, good M. Puppy,
Keepe the dore close Sirha.

Man. What would you haue me doe?

Por. What should you doe,
But knock 'em downe by th' dozens? Is this More fields to muster in? Or haue wee some strange Indian with the great Tooth, come to Court, the women so besiege vs?
Bless me, what a fry of Fornication is at dore! On my Christian Conscience this one Christening will beget a thousand, here will bee Father, God-father, and all together.

Man. The Spoones will be the bigger Sir: There is a fellow somewhat neere the doore, he should be a Brasier by his face, for o'my conscience twenty of the Dogdayes now reigne in's Nose; all that stand about him are vnder the Line, they need no other penance: that Fire-
Drake did I hit three tiches on the head, and three times was his Nose discharged against mee; hee stands there like a Morter-piece to blow vs. There was a Hobberde-shers Wife of small wit, neere him, that rail'd vpon me, till her pinck'd porrenger fell off her head, for kindling
such a combustion in the State. I miltt the Mettoe once, and hit that Woman, who cryed out Clubbes, when I might see from sarre, some forty Truncheoners draw to her succour, which were the hope o'th' Strond where she was quartered; they fell on, I made good my place; at length they came to th' broome staffe to me, I defide 'em still, when sodainly a File of Boyes behind 'em, loose shot, deliuer'd such a showre of Pibbles, that I was faine to draw mine Honour in, and let 'em win the Worke, the Diuell was amongst 'em I thinke surely.

Por. These are the youths that thunder at a Playhouse, and fight for bitten Apples, that no Audience but the tribulation of Tower Hill, or the Limbes of Limehouse, their deare Brothers are able to endure. I haue some of
'em in Limbo Patrum, and there they are like to dance these three dayes; besides the running Banquet of two Beadles, that is to come.

Enter Lord Chamberlaine.

Cham. Mercy o'me: what a Multitude are heere?
They grow still too; from all Parts they are comming,
As if we kept a Faire heere? Where are these Porters?
These lazy knaues? Y'haue made a fine hand fellowes?
There's a trim rabble let in: are all these
Your faithfull friends o'th' Suburbs? We shall haue
Great store of roome no doubt, left for the Ladies,
When they passe backe from the Christening?

Por. And't please your Honour,
We are but men; and what so many may doe,
Not being torne a pieces, we haue done:
An Army cannot rule 'em.

Cham. As I liue,
If the King blame me for't; Ile lay ye all
By th' heeles, and sodainly; and on your heads
Clap round Fines for neglect: y'are lazy knaues,
And heere ye lye baiting of Bombards, when
Ye should doe Seruice. Harke the Trumpets sound,
Th'are come already from the Christening,
Go breake among the prestlse, and finde away out
To let the Troope passe fairely; or Ile finde
A Marshalsey, shall hold ye play these two Monthes.

Por. Make way there, for the Princesse.

Man. You great fellow,
Stand close vp, or Ile make your head ake.

Por. You i'th' Chamblet, get vp o'th' raile,
Ile peche you o'ye the pates else. Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Trumpets sounding: Then two Aldermen, L. Maior, Garter, Cranmer, Duke of Norfolke with his Marshals Staffe, Duke of Suffolke, two Noblemen, bearing great standing Bowles for the Christening Gifts: Then seuen Noblemen bearing a Canopy, vnder which the Duchesse of Norfolke, Godmother, bearing the Childe richly habited in a Mantle, &c. Traine borne by a Lady: Then followes the Marchionesse Dorset, the other Godmother, and Ladies. The Troope passe once about the Stage, and Garter speakes.

Gart. Heauen
From thy endlesse goodnesse, send prosperous life,
Long and euer happie, to the high and Mighty
Princesse of England Elizabeth.

Flourish. Enter King and Guard.

Cran. And to your Royall Grace, & the good Queen,
My Noble Partners, and my selfe thus pray
All comfort, loy in this most gracious Lady,
Heauen euer laid vp to make Parents happy,
May hourely fall vpon ye.

Kin. Thanke you good Lord Archbishop:
What is her Name?

Cran. Elizabeth.

Kin. Stand vp Lord,
With this Kisse, take my Blessing: God protect thee,
Into whose hand, I giue thy Life.

Cran. Amen.

Kin. My Noble Gossips, y'haue beene too Prodigall,
I thanke ye heartily: So shall this Lady,
When she ha's so much English.

Cran. Let me speake Sir,
For Heauen now bids me; and the words I vtter,
Let none thinke Flattery; for they'l finde 'em Truth.
This Royall Infant, Heauen still move about her;
Though in her Cradle; yet now promises
Vpon this Land a thousand thousand Blessings,
Which Time shall bring to ripeness: She shall be,
(But few now liuing can behold that goodnesse)
A Pattern to all Princes liuing with her,
And all that shall succeed: Saba was never
More courteous of Wisdome, and faire Vertue
Then this pure Soule shall be. All Princely Graces
That mould vp such a mighty Piece as this is,
With all the Vertues that attend the good,
Shall still be doubled on her. Truth shall Nurse her,

Holy

Holy and Heauenly thoughts still Counsell her.
She shall be lou'd and fear'd. Her owne shall blesse her;
Her Foes shake like a Field of beaten Corne,
And hang their heads with sorrow.
Good growes with her.
In her dayes, Every Man shall eate in safety,
Vnder his owne Vine what he plants; and sing
The merry Songs of Peace to all his Neighbours.
God shall be truely knowne, and those about her,
From her shall read the perfect way of Honour,
And by those claime their greatnesse; not by Blood.
Nor shall this peace sleepe with her: But as when
The Bird of Wonder dyes, the Mayden Phoenix,
Her Ashes new create another Heyre,
As great in admiration as her selfe.
So shall she leaue her Blessednesse to One,
(When Heauen shal call her from this clowd of darknes)
Who, from the sacred Ashes of her Honour
Shall Star-like rise, as great in fame as she was,
And so stand fix'd. Peace, Plenty, Loue, Truth, Terror,
That were the Seruants to this chosen Infant,
Shall then be his, and like a Vine grow to him;
Where euer the bright Sunne of Heauen shall shine,
His Honour, and the greatnesse of his Name,
Shall be, and make new Nations. He shall flourish,
And like a Mountaine Cedar, reach his branches,
To all the Plaines about him: Our Childrens Children
Shall see this, and blesse Heauen.

Kin. Thou speakest wonders.

Cran. She shall be to the happinesse of England,
An aged Princesse; many dayes shall see her,
And yet no day without a deed to Crowne it.
Would I had knowne no more: But she must dye,
She must, the Saints must haue her; yet a Virgin,
A most vnspotted Lilly shall she passe
To th' ground, and all the World shall mourne her.

Kin. O Lord Archbishop
Thou hast made me now a man, neuer before
This happy Child, did I get any thing.
This Oracle of comfort, has so pleas'd me,
That when I am in Heauen, I shall desire
To see what this Child does, and praise my Maker.
I thanke ye all. To you my good Lord Maior,
And you good Brethren, I am much beholding:
I haue receiu'd much Honour by your presence,
And ye shall find me thankfull. Lead the way Lords,
Ye must all see the Queene, and she must thanke ye.
She will be sicke els. This day, no man thinke
'Has business at his house; for all shall stay:
This Little-One shall make it Holy-day. Exeunt.

The Epilogue.

'Tis ten to one, this Play can never please
All that are here: Some come to take their ease,
And sleepe an Act or two; but those we feare
We have frighted with our Trumpets: so 'tis cleare,
They'l say 'tis naught. Others to hear the City
Abus'd extremely, and to cry that's witty,
Which we haue not done neither; that I feare
All the expected good w'are like to heare,
For this Play at this time, is only in
The merciful construction of good women.
For such a one we shew'd 'em. If they smile,
And say twill do; I know within a while
All the best men are ours: for 'tis ill hap,
If they hold, when their Ladies bid 'em clap

FINIS.

The Prologue.

IN Troy there lyes the Scene: From Iles of Greece
The Princes Orgillous, their high blood chaf'd
Hane to the Port of Athens sent their shippes
Fraught with the ministers and instruments
Of cruell Warre: Sixty and nine that wore
Their Crownets Regall, from th' Athenian bay
Put forth toward Phrygia, and their vow is made
To ransacke Troy, within whose strong emures
The ravish'd Helen, Menelaus Queene,
With wanton Paris sleepes, and that's the Quarrell.
To Tenedos they come,
And the deepe-drawing Barke do there disgorge
Their warlike frautage: now on Dardan Plaines
The fresh and yet vnbruised Greekes do pitch
Their brave Pauillions. Priams six-gated City,
Dardan and Timbria, Helias, Chetas, Troien,
And Antenonidus with masiie Staples
And correspondent and fulfilling Bolts
Stirre vp the Sonnes of Troy.
Now Expectation tickling skittish spirits,
On one and other side, Troian and Greeke,
Sets all on hazard And hither am I come,
A Prologue arm'd, but not in confidence
Of Authors pen, or Actors voyce; but suited
In like conditions, as our Argument,
To tell you (faire Beholders) that our Play
Leapes ore the vauns and firstlings of those broyles,
Beginning in the middle. starting thence away,
To what may be digested in a Play:
Like, or finde fault, do as your pleasures are,
Now good, or bad, 'tis but the chance of Warre.

THE TRAGEDIE OF
Troylus and Cresida.

Actus Primus. Scœna Prima.

Enter Pandarus and Troylus.

Troylus.

All here my Varlet, I'le vnarme againe.
Why should I warre without the walls of Troy
That finde such cruell battell here within?
Each Troiso that is master of his heart,
Let him to field, Troylus alas hath none.

Pan. Will this geere ne're be mended?

Troy. The Greeks are strong, & skilful to their strength,
Fierce to their skill, and to their fiercenesse Valiant:
But I am weaker then a womans teare;
Tamer then sleepe, fonder then ignorance;
Lesse valiant then the Virgin in the night,
And skillesse as vnpractis'd Infancie.

Pan. Well, I have told you enough of this: For my part, I'le not meddle nor make no further. Heer that will have a Cake out of the Wheate, must needes tarry the grinding.

Troy. Have I not tarried?

Pan. I the grinding, but you must tarry the bolting.

Troy. Have I not tarried?

Pan. I the bolting; but you must tarry the leav'ning.

Troy Still have I tarried.

Pan. I, to the leavening; but heeres yet in the word hereafter, the Kneading, the making of the Cake, the heating of the Oven, and the Baking; nay, you must stay the cooling too, or you may chance to burne your lips.

Troy. Patience her selfe, what Goddesse ere she be,
Doth lesser blench at sufferance, then I doe:
At Priams Royall Table doe I sit;
And when faire Cressid comes into my thoughes,
So (Traitor) then she comes, when she is thence.

Pan. Well:
She look'd yesternight fairer, then ever I saw her looke,
Or any woman else.

Troy. I was about to tell thee, when my heart,
As wedged with a sigh, would rive in twaine,
Lest Hellor, or my Father should perceive me:
I have (as when the Sunne doth light a-scorne)
Buried this sigh, in wrinkle of a smile:
But sorrow, that is couch'd in seeming gladnesse,
Is like that mirth, Fate turnes to sudden sadnesse.

Pan. And her haire were not somewhat darker then Helens, (well go too, there were no more comparison betweene the Women. But for my part she is my Kinswoman, I would not (as they terme it) praise it, but I wold some-body had heard her talke yesterday as I did: I will not dispraise your sister Cassandra's wit, but———

Troy. Oh Pandarus! I tell thee Pandarus;
When I doe tell thee, there my hopes lye drown'd:
Reply not in how many Fadomes deepe
They lye indreach'd. I tell thee, I am mad
In Cressids loue. Thou answer'st she is Faire,
Pour'st in the open Vlcer of my heart.
Her Eyes, her Haire, her Cheeke, her Gaite, her Voice,
Handlest in thy discourse. O that her Hand
(In whose comparison, all whites are Inke)
Writing their owne reproach; to whose soft seizure,
The Cignets Downe is harsh, and spirit of Sense
Hard as the palme of Plough-man. This thou tel'st me;
As true thou tel'st me when I say I loue her:
But saying thus, instead of Oyle and Balme,
Thou lai'st in every gash that loue hath giuen me,
The Knife that made it.

Pan. I speake no more then truth.

Troy Thou do'st not speake so much.

Pan Faith, I'le not meddle in't: Let her be as shee is, if shee be faire, 'tis the better for her. and shee be not, shee ha's the mends in her owne hands.

Troy. Good Pandarus: How now Pandarus?

Pan. I have had my Labour for my travell, all thought on of her, and all thought on of you; Gone betweene and betweene, but small thankes for my labour.

Troy. What art thou angry Pandarus? what with me?

Pan. Because she's Kinne to me, therefore shee's not so faire as Helen, and she were not kin to me, she would be as faire on Friday, as Helen is on Sunday. But what care I? I care not and she were a Black-a Moore, 'tis all one to me.

Troy. Say I she is not faire?

Troy. I doe not care whether you doe or no. Shee's a Foole to stay behinde her Father: Let her to the Greeks, and so I'le tell her the next time I see her: for my part, I'le meddle nor make no more i'th'matter.

Troy. Pandarus? Pan. Not I.

Troy. Sweete Pandarus.

Pan. Pray you speake no more to me, I will leave all as I found it, and there an end. Exit Pand.

Sound Alarum

Tro. Peace you vnpraiseful Clamors, peace rude sounds,
Fooles on both sides, Helen must needs be faire,
When with your blood you daily paint her thus.
I cannot fight vpon this Argument:

It is too starv'd a subiect for my Sword,
But Pandarus. O Gods! How do you plague me?
I cannot come to Cressid but by Pandar,
And he's as teachy to be woo'd to woe,
As she is stubborne, chaste against all suite.
Tell me Apollo for thy Daphnes Loue
What Cressid is, what Pandar, and what we:
Her bed is India, there she lies, a Pearle,
Between our Ilium, and where shee resides
Let it be cald the wild and wandring flood,
Our selfe the Merchant, and this sayling Pandar,
Our doubtfull hope, our conuoy and our Barke.

Alarum. Enter Æneas.

Æne. How now Prince Troylus? Wherefore not a field?

Troy. Because not there; this womans answer sorts, For womanish it is to be from thence:
What newes Æneas from the field to day?

Æne. That Paris is returned home, and hurt.

Troy. By whom Æneas?

Æne. Troylus by Menelaus.

Troy. Let Paris bleed, 'tis but a scar to scorne, Paris is gor'd with Menelaus horne. Alarum.

Æne. Harke what good sport is out of Towne to day.

Troy. Better at home, if would I might were may: But to the sport abroad, are you bound thither?

Æne. In all swift haste.

Troy. Come go we then together. Exeunt.

Enter Cressid and her man.

Cre. Who were those wents by?

Man. Queene Hecuba, and Helen.

Cre. And whether go they?

Man. Vp to the Easterne Tower,
Whose height commands as subiect all the vale,
To see the battell: Hector whose patience,
Is as a Vertue fixt, to day was mou'd.
He chides Andromache and stroake his Armorer,
And like as there were husbandry in Warre
Before the Sunne rose, hee was harnest lyte,
And to the field goe's he; where every flower
Did as a Prophet weepe what it forsaw,
In Hectors wrath.

Cre. What was his cause of anger?

Man. The noise goe's this;
There is among the Greekes,
A Lord of Troian blood, Nephew to Hector,
They call him Aiax.

Cre. Good; and what of him?

Man. They say he is a very man per se and stands alone.

Cre. So do all men, vnlesse they are drunke, sicke, or haue no leggs.

Man. This man Lady, hath rob'd many beasts of their particular additions, he is as valiant as the Lyon, churlish as the Beare, slow as the Elephant: a man into whom nature hath so crowded humors, that his valour is crusht into folly, his folly sauced with discretion: there is no man hath a vertue, that he hath not a glimpse of, nor any man an attaint, but he carries some stayne of it. He is melancholy without cause, and merry against the hayre, hee hath the ioynts of every thing, but every thing so out of ioynt, that hee is a gowtie Briareus, many hands and no vse; or purblinded Argus, all eyes and no sight.

Cre. But how should this man that makes me smile, make Hector angry?

Man. They say he yesterday cop'd Hector in the battell and stroke him downe, the disdaine & shame whereof, hath euer since kept Hector fasting and waking.

Enter Pandarus.

Cre. Who comes here?

Man. Madam your Vncle Pandarus.

Cre. Hectors a gallant man.

Man. As may be in the world Lady.

Pan. What's chat, what's chat?

Cre. Good morrow Vncle Pandarus.

Pan. Good morrow Cozen Cressid: what do you talke of good morrow Alexander. how do you Cozen? when were you at Illium?

Cre. This morning Vncle.

Pan. What were you talking of when I came? Was Hector armd and gone ere yee came to Illium? Helen was not vp? was she?

Cre. Hector was gone but Helen was not vp?

Pan. E'ene so; Hector was stirring early.

Cre. That were we talking of, and of his anger.

Pan. Was he angry?

Cre. So he saies here.

Pan True he was so; I know the cause too, heele lay about him to day I can tell them that, and there's Troylus will not come sarre behind him, let them take heede of Troylus; I can tell them that too.

Cre. What is he angry too?

Pan. Who Troylus? Troylus is the better man of the two.

Cre. Oh Iupiter; there's no comparison.

Pan. What not betweene Troylus and Hector? do you know a man if you see him?

Cre. I, if I euer saw him before and knew him.

Pan. Well I say Troylus is Troylus.

Cre. Then you say as I say,
For I am sure he is not Hector.

Pan. No not Hector is not Troylus in some degrees.

Cre. 'Tis such, to each of them he is himselfe.

Pan. Himselfe? alas poore Troylus I would he were.

Cre. So he is.

Pan. Condition I had gone bare-foote to India.

Cre. He is not Hector

Pan. Himselfe? no not hee's not himselfe, would a were himselfe: well, the Gods are aboue, time must friend or end: well Troylus well, I would my heare were in her body: no, Hector is not a better man then Troylus.

Cre. Excuse me.

Pan. He is elder.

Cre. Pardon me, pardon me.

Pan. Th'others not come too't, you shall tell me another tale when th'others come too't: Hector shall not haue his will this yeare.

Cre. He shall not need it if he haue his owne.

Pan. Nor his qualities.

Cre. No matter.

Pan. Nor his beautie.

Cre. 'Twould not become him, his own's better.

Pan. You haue no iudgement Neece; Helen her selfe swore th'other day that Troylus for a browne fauour (for so 'tis I must confesse) not browne neither.

Cre. No, but browne.

Pan. Faith to say truth, browne and not browne.

Cre. To say the truth, true and not true

Pan. She prais'd his complexion aboue Paris.

Cre. Why Paris hath colour inough.

Pan So he has.

Cre. Then Troylus should haue too much, if she prais'd him aboue, his complexion is higher then his, he hauing colour

colour enough, and the other higher, is too flaming a praise for a good complexion, I had as lieue Helena golden tongue had commended Troylus for a copper nose.

Pan. I sweare to you,
I thinke Helen loues him better then Paris.

Cre. Then shee's a merry Greeke indeed.

Pan. Nay I am sure she does, she came to him th'other day into the compast window, and you know he has not past three or foure haires on his chinne.

Cres. Indeed a Tapsters Arithmetique may soone bring his particulars therein, to a totall.

Pand. Why he is very yong, and yet will he within three pound lift as much as his brother Hector.

Cres. Is he is so young a man, and so old a lifter?

Pan. But to prouue to you that Helen loues him, she came and putt me her white hand to his cloven chin.

Cres. Iuno haue mercy, how came it cloven?

Pan. Why, you know 'tis dimpled,
I thinke his smyling becomes him better then any man in all Phrygia.

Cre. Oh he smiles valiantly.

Pan. Does he not?

Cre. Oh yes, and 'twere a clow'd in Autumne.

Pan Why go to then, but to prouе to you that Helen loues Troylus.

Cre. Troylus will stand to thee
Proofe, if youle prouue it so.

Pan. Troylus? why he esteemes her no more then I esteeme an addle egge.

Cre. If you loue an addle egge as well as you loue an idle head, you would eate chickens i'th'shell.

Pan. I cannot chuse but laugh to thinke how she tickled his chin, indeed shee has a marrel's white hand I must needs confesse.

Cre. Without the racke.

Pan. And shee takes vpon her to spie a white haire on his chinne.

Cre. Alas poore chin? many a wart is richer.

Pand. But there was such laughing, Queene Hecuba laught that her eyes ran ore.

Cre. With Mitstoes.

Pan. And Cassandra laught.

Cre. But there was more temperate fire vnder the pot of her eyes: did her eyes run ore too?

Pan. And Hector laught.

Cre. At what was all this laughing?

Pand. Marry at the white haire that Hector spied on Troylus chin.

Cres. And t'had beene a greene haire, I should haue laught too.

Pand. They laught not so much at the haire, as at his pretty answere.

Cre. What was his answere?

Pan. Quoth shee, here's but two and fifty haires on your chinne; and one of them is white.

Cre. This is her question.

Pand That's true, make no question of that, two and fiftie haires quoth hee, and one white, that white haire is my Father, and all the rest are his Sonnes. Iupiter quoth shee, which of these haires is Paris my husband? The forked one quoth he, plucke out and giue it him: but there was such laughing, and Helen so blushe, and Paris so chaft, and all the rest so laught, that it pell.

Cre. So let it now,
For is has beene a great while going by.

Pan. Well Cozen,
I told you a thing yesterday, think on't.

Cre. So I does.

Pand. Ile be sworne 'tis true, he will weepe you an'twere a man borne in April. Sound a retreate.

Cres. And Ile spring vp in his teares, an'twere a nettle against May.

Pan. Harke they are comming from the field, shal we stand vp here and see them, as they passe toward Ilium, good Neece do, sweet Neece Cressida.

Cre. At your pleasure.

Pan. Heere, heere, here's an excellent place, heere we may see most bravely, Ile tell you them all by their names, as they passe by, but marke Troylus aboue the rest.

Enter Æneas.

Cre. Speake not so low'd.

Pan. That's Æneas, is not that a brave man, hee's one of the flowers of Troy I can you, but marke Troylus, you shal see anon.

Cre. Who's that?

Enter Antenor.

Pan. That's Antenor, he has a shrow'd wit I can tell you, and hee's a man good inough, hee's one o'th soundest iudgement in Troy wholeouer, and a proper man of person: when comes Troylus? Ile shew you Troylus anon, if hee see me, you shall see him him nod at me.

Cre. Will he giue you the nod?

Pan. You shall see.

Cre. If he do, the rich shall haue, more.

Enter Hector.

Pan. That's Hector, that, that, looke you, that there's a fellow. Goe thy way Hector, there's a brave man Neece, O brave Hector! Looke how hee looks! there's a countenance; is't not a brave man?

Cre. O brave man!

Pan. Is a not? It doeth mans heart good, looke you what hacks are on his Helmet. looke you yonder, do you see? Looke you there? There's no iesting, laying on, take't off, who ill as they say, there be hacks.

Cre. Be those with Swords?

Enter Paris.

Pan. Swords, any thing he comes not, and the diuell come to him, it's all one, by Gods lid it doeth mans heart good. Yonder comes Paris, yonder comes Paris: looke yee yonder Neece, is not a gallant man to, is not? Why this is braue now: who said he came hurt home to day? Hee's not hurt, why this will do Helenus heart good now, ha? Would I could see Troylus now, you shall Troylus anon.

Cre. Whose that?

Enter Helenus.

Pan. That's Helenus, I marrell where Troylus is, that's Helenus, I thinke he went not forth to day: that's Helenus.

Cre. Can Helenus fight Vncle?

Pan. Helenus no: yes heele fight indifferent, well, I marrell where Troylus is; harke, do you not heare the people cry Troylus? Helenus is a Priest.

Cre. What sorrowfull fellow comes yonder?

Enter Troylus

Pan. Where? Yonder? That's Deiphobus. 'Tis Troylus! There's a man Neece, hem! Braue Troylus, the Prince of Chiualrie.

Cre. Peace, for shame peace.

Pand. Marke him, not him: O braue Troylus: looke well vpon him Neece, looke you how his Sword is bloodied, and his Helme more hacht then Hectors, and how he looks, lookes, and how he goes. O admirable youth! he ne're saw three and twenty. Go thy way Troylus, go thy way, had I a sister were a Grace, or a daughter a Goddesse, he should take his choice. O admirable man! Paris? Paris is dirt to him, and I warrant, Helen to change, would give money to boot.

Enter common Souldiers.

Cres. Heere come more.

Pan. Asses, fooles, dolts, chaffe and bran, chaffe and bran: porridge after meat. I could live and dye i'th'eyes of Troylus. Ne're looke, ne're looke: the Eagles are gon, Crowes and Dawes, Crowes and Dawes: I had rather be such a man as Troylus, then Agamemnon and all Greece.

Cres. There is among the Greeches Achilles, a better man then Troylus.

Pan. Achilles? a Drey-man, a Porter, a very Camell.

Cres. Well well.

Pan. Well, well? Why have you any discretion? have you any eyes? Do you know what a man is? Is not birth, beauty, good shape, discourse, manhood, learning, gentlenesse, vertue, youth, liberality, and so forth: the Spice, and salt that seasons a man?

Cres. Ay minc'd man and then to be bak'd with no Date in the pye, for then the mans dates out.

Pan. You are such another woman, one knowes not at what ward you lye.

Cres. Upon my backe, to defend my belly; upon my wit, to defend my wiles; upon my secrecy, to defend mine honesty; my Masks, to defend my beauty, and you to defend all these: and at all these wardes I lye at, at a thousand watches.

Pan. Say one of your watches.

Cres. Nay I'le watch you for that, and that's one of the cheefest of them too. If I cannot ward what I would not have hit, I can watch you for telling how I took the blow, unlesse it swell past hiding, and then it's past watching.

Enter Boy.

Pan. You are such another.

Boy Sir, my Lord would instantly speake with you.

Pan. Where?

Boy. At your owne house.

Pan. Good Boy tell him I come, I doubt he be hurt. Fare ye well good Neece.

Cres. Adieu Vnkle.

Pan. I'le be with you Neece by and by.

Cres. To bring Vnkle.

Pan. I, a token from Troylus.

Cres. By the same token, you are a Bawd. Exit Pand. Words, vowes, gifts, teares, & loves full sacrifice, He offers in another enterprise.
But more in Troylus thousand fold I see.
Then in the glasse of Pandar's praise may be;
Yet hold I off. Women are Angels wooing,
Things won are done, joyes soule lyes in the doeing:
That she beloa'd, knowes nought, that knowes not this;
Men prize the thing ungain'd, more then it is.
That she was never yet, that ever knew
Love got so sweet, as when desire did sue:
Therefore this maxime out of love I teach;
Achievement, is command; ungain'd, beseech.
That though my hearts Contents firme love doth beare,
Nothing of that shall from mine eyes appeare. Exit.

Sonet. Enter Agamemnon, Nestor, Vlysses, Diomedes, Menelaus, with others.

Agam. Princes:
What greefe hath set the Iaundies on your cheeches?
The ample proposition that hope makes
In all designes, begun on earth below
Fayles in the promist largenesse: checkes and disasters
Grow in the veines of actions highest rear'd.
As knots by the conflux of meeting sap,
Infect the sound Pine, and diverts his Grainе
Tortive and errant from his course of growth.
Nor Princes, is it matter new to us,
That we come short of our suppose so farre,
That after seven yeares siege, yet Troy walles stand,
Sith every action that hath gone before,
Whereof we have Record, Triall did draw
Bias and thwart, not answering the aymes:
And that vnbodied figure of the thought
That gave't surmised shape. Why then (you Princes)
Do you with cheeches abash'd, behold our workes,
And think them shame, which are (indeed) nought else
But the protractive trials of great Love,
To finde persistive constancie in men?
The finenesse of which Metall is not found
In Fortunes love: for then, the Bold and Coward,
The Wise and Fooke, the Artist and vn-read,
The hard and soft, seeme all affin'd, and kin.
But in the Winde and Tempest of her frowne,
Distinction with a loud and powerfull fan,
Puffing at all, winnowes the light away;
And what hath mesle, or matter by it selfe,
Lies rich in Vertue, and vnmingled.

Nestor With due Observance of thy godly sect,
Great Agamemnon, Nestor shall apply.
Thy latest words.
In the reproofe of Chance,
Lies the true proofe of men: The Sea being smooth,
How many shallow bauble Boates dare saile
Vpon her patient breast, making their way
With those of Nobler bulke?
But let the Ruffian Boreas once enrage
The gentle Thetis, and mon behold
The strong ribb'd Barke through liquid Mountaines cut
Bounding betweene the two moyst Elements
Like Perseus Horse. Where's then the saucy Boate,
Whose weake untimber'd sides but even now
Co-rival'd Greatnesse? Either to harbour fled,
Or made a Toste for Neptune. Even so,
Doth valours shew, and valours worth divide
In stormes of Fortune.
For, in her ayy and brightnesse,
The Heroe hath more cumbrance by the Beriere
Then by the Tyger: But, when the splitting winds
Makes flexible the knees of knotted Oaks,
And Flies fled under shade, why then
The thing of Courage,
As rowz'd with rage, with rage doth sympathize,
And with an accent tun'd in selfe-same key,
Retyres to chiding Fortune.

Vlyss. Agamemnon.
Thou great Commander, Nerve, and Bone of Greece,
Heart of our Numbers, soule, and emely spirit,
In whom the tempers, and the minds of all
Should be shut up: Heare what Vlysses speakes,
Besides the applause and approbation
The which most mighty for thy place and sway,

And thou most reverend for thy stretcht-out life,
I give to both your speeches: which were such,
As Agamemnon and the hand of Greece
Should hold vp high in Brasse: and such againe
As venerable Nestor (hatch'd in Silver)
Should wish a bond of aye, strong as the Axletree
In which the Heauens ride, knit all Greekes eares
To his experienc'd tongue: yet let it please both (Thou Great, and Wise) to heare Vlysses speake.

Aga. Speak Prince of Ithaca, and be't of lesse expect:
That matter needlesse of importlesse burthen
Deuide thy lips; then we are confident
When ranke Thersites opes his Mastickie lawes,
We shall heare Musicke Wit, and Oracle.

Vlyss Troy yet vpon his basis had bene downe,
And the great Hellens sword had lack'd a Master
But for these instances.
The specialty of Rule hath bene neglected;
And looke how many Grecian Tents do stand
Hollow vpon this Plaine, so many hollow Factions.
When that the Generall is not like the Hiue,
To whom the Foragers shall all repaire,
What Hony is expected? Degree being vizarded,
Th'vnworthiest shewes as fairely in the Maske.
The Heauens themselues, the Planets, and this Center,
Obserue degree, priority, and place,
Iointure, course, proportion, season, forme,
Office, and custome, in all line of Order:
And therefore is the glorious Planet Sol
In noble eminence, enthron'd and sphear'd
Amidst the other, whose med'cinable eye
Corrects the ill Aspects of Planets euill,
And posts like the Command'ment of a King,
Sans checke, to good and bad. But when the Planets
In euill mixture to disorder wander,
What Plagues, and what portents, what mutiny?
What raging of the Sea? shaking of Earth?
Commotion in the Winds? Frights, changes, horrors,
Diuert, and crackle, rend, and deracinate
The vnity, and married calme of States
Quite from their fixure? O, when Degree is shak'd,
(Which is the Ladder to all high designes)
The enterprize is sicke. How could Communities,
Degrees in Schooles, and Brother-hoods in Cities,
Peaceful Commerce from diuidable shores,
The primogenitiue, and due of Byrth,
Prerogatiue of Age, Crownes, Scepters, Lawrels,
(But by Degree) stand in Authentique place?
Take but Degree away, vnrest vnse that string,
And heare what Discord follows: each thing meetes
In meere oppugnancie. The bounded Waters,
Should lift their bosomes higher then the Shores,
And make a soppe of all this solid Globe:
Strength should be Lord of imbecility,
And the rude Sonne should strike his Father dead:
Force should be right, or rather, right and wrong,
(Betweene whose endlesse iarre, Iustice recides)
Should loose her names, and so should Iustice too.
Then every thing includes it selfe in Power.
Power into Will, Will into Appetite,
And Appetite (an vniuersall Wolfe,
So doubly seconded with Will, and Power)
Must make perforce an vniuersall prey,
And last, eate vp himselfe.
Great Agamemnon:
This Chaos, when Degree is suffocate,
Followes the choaking:
And this neglection of Degree, is it
That by a pace goes backward in a purpose
It hath to climbe. The Generall's disdain'd
By him one step below; he, by the next,
That next, by him beneath: so euery step
Exampled by the first pace that is sicke
Of his Superiour, growes to an emulous Feaster
Of pale, and bloodlesse Emulation.
And 'tis this Feaster that keepes Troy on foote,
Not her owne sinewes. To end a tale of length,
Troy in our weaknesse lies, not in her strength.

Nest. Most wisely hath Vlysses here discouer'd
The Feaster, whereof all our power is sicke.

Aga. The Nature of the sicknesse found (Vlysses)
What is the remedie?

Vlys. The great Achilles, whom Opinion crowns,
The sinew, and the fore-hand of our Hoste,
Hauing his eare full of his airy Fame,
Growes dainty of his worth, and in his Tent
Lyes mocking our designes. With him, Patrocles,
Vpon a lazie Bed, the hole-long day
Breakes scurrill Iests,
And with ridiculous and awkward action,
(Which Slanderer, he imitation call's)
He Pageants vs. Sometime great Agamemnon,
Thy topiesse deputation he pers on;
And like a strutting Player, whose conceit
Lies in his Ham-string, and doth thinke it rich
To heare the wooden Dialogue and sound
'Twixt his stretcht footing, and the Scaffolage,
Such to be pitied, and o're-rated seeming
He acts thy Greatnesse in: and when he speakes,
'Tis like a Chime a mending. With termes vnsquar'd,
Which from the tongue of roaring Typhon drope,
Would seemes Hyperboles. At this fusty stuffe,
The large Achilles (on his prest-bed lolling)
From his deepe Chest, laughes out a loud applause,
Cries excellent, 'tis Agamemnon iust.
Now play me Nestor; hum, and stroke thy Beard
As he, being drest to some Oration:
That's done, as neere as the extremest ends
Of parallels; as like, as Vulcan and his wife.
Yet good Achilles still cries excellent,
'Tis Nestor right. Now play him (me) Patrocles,
Arming to answer in a night-Alarme,
And then (forsooth) the faint defects of Age
Must be the Scene of myrth, to cough, and spit,
And with a palsie fumbling on his Gorget,
Shake in and out the Riuet: and at this sport
Sir Valour dies; cries, O enough Patrocles,
Or, giue me ribs of Steele, I shall split all
In pleasure of my Spleene. And in this fashion,
All our abilities, gifts, nurtures, shapes,
Seuerals and generals of grace exact,
Atchieuements, plots, orders, preuentions,
Excitements to the field, or speech for truce,
Successe or losse, what is, or is not, serues
As stuffe for these two, to make paradoxes.

Nest. And in the imitation of these twaine,
Who (as Vlysses sayes) Opinion crownes
With an imperiall voyce, many are infect:
Aiax is growne selfe-will'd, and beares his head
In such a reyne in full as proud a place
As broad Achilles, and keepes his Tent like him;
Makes factious Feasts, railes on our state of Warre

Bold

Bold as an Oracle, and sent Thersites
A slaue, whose Gall coines slanders like a Mint,
To match vs in comparisons with dirt,
To weaken and discredit our exposure,
How rankes soever rounded in with danger.
Vlys. They taxe our policy, and call it Cowardice,
Count Wisedome as no member of the Warre,
Fore-stall prescience, and esteeme no act
But that of hand: The stull and mentall parts,
That do contriue how many hands shall strike
When fitnesse call them on, and know by measure
Of their obseruant toyle, the Enemies weight,
Why this hath not a finger's dignity:
They call this Bed-worke, Mapp'ry, Closet-Warre:
So that the Ramme that batters downe the wall,
For the great swing and rudenesse of his poise,
They place before his hand that made the Engine,
Or those that with the fitnesse of their soules,
By Reason guide his execution.
Nest. Let this be granted, and Achilles horse
Makes many Thetis sonnes. Tuske
Aga. What Trumpet? Looke Menelaus.
Men. From Troy. Enter Æneas.
Aga. What would you 'fore our Tent?
Æne. Is this great Agamemnons Tent, I pray you?
Aga. Even this.
Æne. May one that is a Herald, and a Prince,
Do a faire message to his Kingly eares?
Aga. With safety stronger than Achilles arme,
'Fore all the Greekish heads, which with one voyce
Call Agamemnon Head and Generall.
Æne. Faire leaue, and large security. How may
A stranger to those most Imperiall looker,
Know them from eyes of other Mortals?
Aga. How?
Æne. I: I aske, that I might waken reuerence,
And on the cheeke be ready with a blush
Modest as morning, when she coldly eyes
The youthfull Phœbus:
Which is that God in office guiding men?
Which is the high and mighty Agamemnon?
Aga. This Troyan scorns vs, or the men of Troy
Are ceremonious Courtiers.
Æne. Courtiers as free, as debonaire; vnarm'd,
As bending Angels: that's their Fame, in peace:
But when they would seeme Souldiers, they haue gallas,
Good armes, strong joints, true swords, & Ioues accord,
Nothing so full of heart. But peace Æneas,
Peace Troyan, lay thy finger on thy lips,
The worthinesse of praise distaines his worth:
If that he praise'd himselfe, bring the praise forth.
But what the repining enemy commends,
That breath Fame blowes, that praise sole pure transcend.
Aga. Sir, you of Troy, call you your selfe Æneas?
Æne. I Greeke, that is my name.
Aga. What's your affayre I pray you?
Æne. Sir pardon, 'tis for Agamemnons eares.
Aga. He heares nought priuately
That comes from Troy.
Æne. Nor I from Troy came not to whisper him,
I bring a Trumpet to awake his eare,
To set his sence on the attentiue bent,
And then to speake.
Aga. Speake frankely as the winde.
It is not Agamemnons sleeping hour;
That thou shalt know Troyan he is awake,
He tels thee so himselfe.
Æne. Trumpet blow loud,
Send thy Brasse voyce through all those lazie Tents,
And every Greeke of mettle, let him know,
What Troy means fairely, shall be spoke aloud.
The Trumpets sound.
We haue great Agamemnon here in Troy,
A Prince called Hector, Priam is his Father:
Who in this dull and long-continew'd Truce
Is rusty growne. He bad me take a Trumpet,
And to this purpose speake: Kings, Princes, Lords,
If there be one among'st the fayr'st of Greece,
That holds his Honor higher than his ease,
That seekes his praise, more than he feares his perill,
That knowes his Valour, and knowes not his feare,
That loues his Mistris more then in confession,
(With truest vowes to her owne lips he loues)
And dare auow her Beauty, and her Worth,
In other armes then hers: to him this Challenge.
Hector, in view of Troyans, and of Greekes,
Shall make it good, or do his best to do it.
He hath a Lady, wiser, fairer, truer,
Then euer Greeke did compasse in his armes,
And will to morrow with his Trumpet call,
Midway betweene your Tents, and walles of Troy,
To rouze a Grecian that is true in loue.
If any come, Hector shal honour him:
If none, he'l say in Troy when he retyres,
The Grecian Dames are sun-burnt, and not worth
The splinter of a Lance: Even so much.
Aga. This shall be told our Lovers Lord Æneas,
If none of them haue soule in such a kinde,
We left them all at home: But we are Souldiers,
And may that Souldier a mere recreant prove,
That means not, hath not, or is not in loue:
If then one is, or hath, or means to be,
That one meets Hector; if none else, He be he.
Nest. Tell him of Nestor, one that was a man
When Hector's Grandsire sackt: he is old now,
But if there be not in our Grecian mould,
One Noble man, that hath one spark of fire
To answer for his Loue; tell him from me,
I'le hide my Siluer beard in a Gold Beuer,
And in my Vambrace put this withe'd browne,
And meeting him, wil tell him, that my Lady
Was fayrer then his Grandam, and as chaste
As may be in the world: his youth in flood,
I'le pawne this truth with my three drops of blood.
Æne. Now heauens forbid such scarsitie of youth.
Vlys. Amen.
Aga. Faire Lord Æneas,
Let me reach your hand:
To our Pauilion shal I leade you first:
Achilles shall haue word of this intent,
So shall each Lord of Greece from Tent to Tent:
Your selfe shall Feast with vs before you goe,
And finde the welcome of a Noble Foe. Exeunt.
Manet Vlysses and Nestor.
Vlys. Nestor.
Nest. What sayes Vlysses?
Vlys. I haue a young conception in my braine,
Be you my time to bring it to some shape.
Nest. What is't?
Vlysses. This 'tis:
Blunt wedges rive hard knots: the seeded Pride
That hath to this maturity blowne vp

In rankt Achilles, must or now be crept,
Or shedding breed a Nursery of like evil
To our-bulke vs all.
Nest. Wel, and how?
Vlys. This challenge that the gallant Hector sends,
How euer it is spread in general name,
Relates in purpose onely to Achilles.
Nest. The purpose is perspicuous euen as substance,
Whose grossenesse little characters summe vp,
And in publication make no straine,
But that Achilles, were his braine as barren
As bankes of Lybia, though (Apollo knowes)
'Tis dry enough, wil with great speede of iudgement,
I, with celerity, finde Hectors purpose
Pointing on him.
Vlys. And wake him to the answer, thinke you?
Nest. Yes, 'tis most meet; who may you else oppose
That can from Hector bring his Honor off,
If not Achilles; though't be a sportfull Combate,
Yet in this triall, much opinion dwels.
For those the Troyans taste our deer'st repute
With their fin'st Palate: and trust to me Vlysses,
Our imputation shall be oddly poys'd
In this wilde action. For the successe
(Although particular) shall giue a scantling
Of good or bad, vnto the Generall:
And in such indexes, although small prickes
To their subsequent Volumes, there is seene
The baby figure of the Gyant-masse
Of things to come at large. It is suppos'd,
He that meets Hector, issues from our choyse;
And choise being mutuall act of all our soules,
Makes Merit her election, and doth boyle
As 'twere, from forth vs all: a man distill'd
Out of our Vertues; who miscarrying,
What heart from hence receyues the conqu'ring part
To steele a strong opinion to themselues,
Which entertain'd, Limbes are in his instruments,
In no lesse working, then are Swords and Bowes
Directine by the Limbes.
Vlys. Giue pardon to my speech.
Therefore 'tis meet, Achilles meet not Hector:
Let vs (like Merchants) shew our foulest Wares,
And think perchance they'l sell: If not,
The lustier of the better yet to shew,
Shall shew the better. Do not consent,
That euer Hector and Achilles meete:
For both our Honour, and our Shame in this,
Are dogg'd with two strange Followers.
Nest. I see them not with my old eies: what are they?
Vlys. What glory our Achilles shares from Hector,
(Were he not proud) we all should weare with him:
But he already is too insolent,
And we were better parch in Affricke Sunne,
Then in the pride and sait scorne of his eyes
Should he scape Hector faire. If he were foyl'd,
Why then we did our maine opinion crosse
In taint of our best man. No, make a Lott'ry,
And by deuice let blockish Aiax draw
The lott to fight with Hector: Among our selues,
Giue him allowance as the worthier man,
For that will physicke the great Myrmidon
Who broyles in loud applause, and make him fall
His Crest, that prouder then blew Iris bends.
If the dull brainlesse Aiax come safe off,
We'l dresse him vp in voyces: if he faile,
Yet go we vnder our opinion still,
That we haue better men. But hit or miss,
Our proiects life this shape of sence assumes,
Aiax employ'd, plucks downe Achilles Plumes.
Nest. Now Vlysses, I begin to relish thy aduice,
And I wil giue a taste of it forthwith
To Agamemnon, go we to him straight:
Two Curres shal tame each other, Pride alone
Must tare the Mastiffes on, as 'twere their bone. Exeunt.

Enter Aiax, and Thersites.

Aia. Thersites?
Ther. Agamemnon, how if he had Biles (full) all ouer generally.
Aia. Thersites?
Ther. And those Byles did runne, say so; did not the General run, were not that a botchy core?
Aia. Dogge.
Ther. Then there would come some matter from him: I see none now.
Aia. Thou Bitch-Wolfe-Sonne, canst y not heare? Feele then. Strikes him.
Ther. The plague of Greece vpon thee thou Mongrel beef-witted Lord.
Aia. Speake then you whinid'st leauen speake, I will beate thee into handsomenesse.
Ther. I shal sooner rayle thee into wit and holinesse but I thinke thy Horse wil sooner con an Oration, then I learn a prayer without booke: Thou canst strike, canst thou? A red Murren o'th thy Iades trickes.
Aia. Toads stoole, learne me the Proclamation.
Ther. Dost thou thinke I haue no sence thou strik'st me thus?
Aia. The Proclamation. (me thus?
Ther. Thou art proclaim'd a foole, I thinke.
Aia. Do not Perpetuine, do not; my fingers itch.
Ther. I would thou did'st itch from head to foot, and I had the scratching of thee, I would make thee the lothsom'st scab in Greece.
Aia. I say the Proclamation.
Ther. Thou grumblest & raillest every houre on Achilles, and thou art as full of enuy as his greatnes, as Cerberus is at Proserpina's beauty. I, that thou barkst at him.
Aia. Mistresse Thersites.
Ther. Thou should'st strike him.
Aia. Cobloafe.
Ther. He would pun thee into shiuers with his fist, as a Sailor breakes a bisket.
Aia. You horson Curre. Ther. Do, do.
Aia. Thou stoole for a Witch.
Ther. I, do, do, thou sodden-witted Lord; thou hast no more braine then I haue in mine elbows: An Asinico may tutor thee. Thou scurvy valiant Asse, thou art heere but to thresh Troyans, and thou art bought and sold among those of any wit, like a Barberian slaue. If thou vse to beat me, I will begin at thy heele and tell what thou art by inches, thou thing of no bowels thou.
Aia. You dogge.
Ther. You scurvy Lord.
Aia. You Curre.
Ther. Mars his Idiot: do rudenes, do Cuckold, do, do.

Enter Achilles, and Patroclus.

Achil. Why how now Aiax? wherefore do you this? How now Thersites? what's the matter man?
Ther. You see him there, do you?
Achil. I, what's the matter.
Ther. Nay looke vpon him.
Achil. So I do: what's the matter?

Ther. Nay but regard him well.
Achil. Well, why I do so.
Ther. But yet you looke not well vpon him: for who some euer you take him to be, he is Ajax.
Achil. I know that foole.
Ther. I, but that foole knowes not himselfe.
Aiax. Therefore I beate thee.
Ther. Lo, lo, lo, lo, what modestie of wit he vtters: his euidence haue cares thus long. I haue bobb'd his Braine more then he has beate my bones: I will buy nine Sparrowes for a penny, and his Pneumon is not worth the ninth part of a Sparrow. This Lord (Achilles) Aiax who wears his wit in his belly, and his guttes in his head, I'le tell you what I say of him.
Achil. What?
Ther. I say this Aiax ——
Achil. Nay good Aiax.
Ther. Has not so much wit.
Achil. Nay, I must hold you.
Ther. As will stop the eye of Helens Needle, for whom he comes to fight.
Achil. Peace foole.
Ther. I would haue peace and quietnes, but the foole will not: he there, that he, look'e yon there.
Aiax. O thou damn'd Curre, I shall ——
Achil. Will you set your wit to a Fooles.
Ther. No I warrant you, for a fooles will shame it.
Pat. Good words Thersites.
Achil. What's the quarrell?
Aiax. I had thee vile Owle, goe learne me the tenour of the Proclamation, and he stayes vpon me.
Ther. I serue thee not.
Aiax. Well, go too, go too.
Ther. I serue heere voluntary.
Achil. Your last seruice was sufferance, 'twas not voluntary, no man is beaten voluntary: Aiax was heere the voluntary, and you as vnder an Impressa.
Ther. E'ne so, a great deale of your wit too lies in your sinewes, or else there be Liars. Hector shall haue a great catch, if he knocke out either of your brainces, he were as good crackt a fastie nut with no kernell.
Achil. What with me to Thersites?
Ther. There's Vlysses, and old Nestor, whose Wit was mouldy ere their Grandsires had nails on their toes, yoke you like draft-Oxen, and make you plough vp the warre.
Achil. What? what?
Ther. Yes good sooth, to Achilles, to Aiax, to ——
Aiax. I shall cut out your tongue.
Ther. 'Tis no matter, I shall speake as much as thou afterwards.
Pat. No more words Thersites.
Ther. I will hold my peace when Achilles Brooch bids me, shall I?
Achil. There's for you Patroclus.
Ther. I wi I see you hang'd like Clotpoles ere I come any more to yo ur Tents; I will keepe where there is wit stiring, and leaue the faction of fooles. Exit.
Pat. A good riddance.
Achil. Marry that Sir is proclaim'd throughout our hoste,
That Hector by the fift houre of the Sunne,
Will with a Trumpet, 'twixt our Tents and Troy
To morrow morning call some Knight to Armes,
That hath a stomacke, and such a one that dare
Maintaine I know not what: 'tis trosh. Farewell.
Aiax. Farewell: who shall answer him?
Achil. I know not, 'tis put to Lottery: otherwise
Heknow his man.
Aiax. O meaning you, I wil go learne more of it. Exit.

Enter Priam, Hector, Troylus, Paris and Helenus.

Pri. After so many hosteries, feasts, speeches spent,
Thus once again saysyes Nestor from the Greeks,
Deliuer Helen, and all damage else
(As honour, loss of time, trauaile, expence,
Wounds, friends, and what-els deere that is consum'd
In hot digestion of this cormorant Warre)
Shall be broke off. Hector, what say you too't.
Hect. Though no man lesser feares the Greeks than I,
As farre as touches my particular: yet dread Priam,
There is no Lady of more softer bowels,
More spongie, to suche in the sense of Feare,
More ready to cry out, who knowes what followes
Than Hector is: the wound of peace is surety,
Surety secure: but modest Doubt is cal'd
The Beacon of the wise: the eye that searches
To th'bottome of the worst. Let Helen go,
Since the first sword was drawne about this question,
Every tyth soule 'mongst many thousand dismes,
Hath bin as deere as Helen: I meane of ours:
If we haue lost so many tenths of ours
To guard a thing not ours, nor worth to vs
(Had it cost tenne) the valew of one ten;
What merit's in that reason which denies
The yeelding of her vp.
Troy. Fie, fie, my Brother;
Weigh you the worth and honor of a King
(So great as our dread Father) in a Scale
Of common Ounces? Wil you with Counters summe
The past proportion of his infinite,
And buckle in a waste most fathomlesse,
With spannes and inches so diminutiue,
As feares and reasons? Fie for godly shame?
Hel. No marvel though you bite so sharp at reasons,
You are so empty of them, should not our Father
Bare the great sway of his affayres with reasons,
Because your speech hath none that tels him so.
Troy. You are for dreamers & slumbers brother Priest
You fire your gloses with reasons: here are your reasons:
You know an enemy intends you harme,
You know, a sword imploy'd is perillous,
And reason flyes the obiect of all harme.
Who marvels then when Helenus beholds
A Grecian and his Sword, if he do set
The very wings of reason to his heeles:
Or like a Starre disorb'd. Nay, if we talke of Reason,
And flye like chidden Mercurie from Iouis,
Let's shut our gates and sleepe: Manhood and Honor
Should haue hard hearts, would they but fat their thoughts
With this cramm'd reason: reason and respect,
Makes Lusty pale, and lustyhood deiect.
Hell. Brother, she is not worth
What she doth cost the holding.
Troy. What's aught, but as 'tis valew'd?
Hect. But value dwels not in particular will,
It holds his estimate and dignitie
As well, wherein 'tis precious of it selfe,
As in the prizer: 'Tis made Idolatrie,
To make the seruice greater than the God,
And the will dotes that is inclineable
To what infectiously it selfe affects,
Without some image of th'affected merit.
Troy. I take to day a Wife, and my election
Is led on in the conduct of my Will;

My

My Will enkindled by mine eyes and eares,
Two traded Pylots 'twixt the dangerous shores
Of Will, and Iudgement. How may I auoyde
(Although my will distaste what it elected)
The Wite I chose, there can be no cuasion
To bleach from this, and to stand firme by honour.
We turne not backe the Silkes vpon the Merchant
When we haue spoyl'd them; nor the remainder Viands
We do not throw in vnrespective same,
Because we now are full. It was thought meete
Paris should do some vengeance on the Greekes;
Your breach of full consent bellied his Sailes,
The Seas and Windes (old Wranglers) tooke a Truce,
And did him seruice; he touch'd the Ports desir'd,
And for an old Aunt whom the Greekes held Captiue,
He brought a Grecian Queen, whose youth & freshnesse
Wrinkles Apollues, and makes stale the morning.
Why keepe we her? the Grecians keepe our Aunt:
Is she worth keeping? Why she is a Pearle,
Whose price hath launch'd above a thousand Ships,
And turn'd Crown'd Kings to Merchants.
If you'l marrie, 'twas wisedome Paris went,
(As you must needs, for you all cride, Go, go:)
If you'l confesse, he brought home Noble prize,
(As you must needs) for you all clapt your hands,
And cride inestimable; why do you now
The issue of your proper Wisdomes rate,
And do a deed that Fortune never did?
Beggar the estimation which you prin'd,
Richer than Sea and Land? O Theft most base!
That we haue stolne what we do feare to keepe
But Theeues vnworthy of a thing so stolne,
That in their Country did them that disgrace,
We feare to warrant in our Native place.

Enter Cassandra with her haire about her eares.

Cas. Cry Troyans, cry.
Priam. What noyse? what shrieke is this?
Troy. 'Tis our mad sister, I do know her voyce.
Cas. Cry Troyans.
Hect. It is Cassandra.
Cas. Cry Troyans cry; lend me ten thousand eyes,
And I will fill them with Prophetick teares.
Hect. Peace sister, peace.
Cas. Virgins, and Boyes; mid-age & wrinkled old,
Soft infancie, that nothing can but cry,
Adde to my clamour: let vs pay betimes
A moity of that masse of moane to come.
Cry Troyans cry, practise your eyes with teares,
Troy must not be, nor goodly Illion stand,
Our fire-brand Brother Paris burnes vs all.
Cry Troyans cry, a Helen and a woe;
Cry, cry, Troy burnes, or else let Helen goe. Exit.
Hect. Now youthfull Troylus, do not these high strains
Of diuination in our Sister, worke
Some touches of remorse? Or is your blood
So madly hot, that no discourse of reason,
Nor feare of bad successe in a bad cause,
Can qualifie the same?
Troy. Why Brother Hector,
We may not thinke the iustnesse of each side
Such, and no other than event doth forme it,
Nor once defect the courage of our minds;
Because Cassandra's mad, her brainsicke raptures
Cannot distaste the goodnesse of a quarrell,
Which hath our seuerall Honours all engag'd
To make it gracious. For my priuate part,
I am no more touch'd, than all Priams sonnes,
And loue forbid there should be done amongst vs
Such things as might offend the weakest spleene,
To fight for, and maintaine.
Par. Else might the world conuince of leuitie,
As well my vnder-takings as your counsels:
But I attest the gods, your full consent
Gaue wings to my propension, and cut off
All feares attending on so dire a proiect.
For whas (alas) can these my single armes?
What propagnation is in one mans valour
To stand the push and enmity of those
This quarrell would excite? Yet I protest,
Were I alone to passe the difficulties,
And had as ample power, as I haue will,
Paris should ne're retract what he hath done,
Nor taint in the pursuite.
Pri. Paris, you speake
Like one be-sotted on your sweet delights;
You haue the Hony still but these the Gall,
So to be valiant, is no praise at all.
Par. Sir, I propose not merely to my selfe,
The pleasures such a beauty brings with it:
But I would haue the soyle of her faire Rape
Wip'd off in honourable keeping her.
What Treason were it to the ransack'd Queene,
Disgrace to your great worths, and shame to me,
Now to deliuer her possession vp
On termes of base compulsion? Can it be,
That so degenerate a straine as this,
Should once set footing in your generous bosomes?
There's not the meanest spirit on our partie,
Without a heart to dare, or sword to draw,
When Helen is defended: nor none so Noble,
Whose life were ill bestow'd, or death vnfam'd,
Where Helen is the subiect. Then (I say)
Well may we fight for her, whom we know well,
The worlds large spaces cannot parallell.
Hect. Paris and Troylus, you haue both said well:
And on the cause and question now in hand,
Haue glos'd, but superficially; not much
Vnlike young men, whom Aristotle thought
Vnfit to heare Morall Philosophie.
The Reasons you alledge, do more conduce
To the hot passion of distemp'red blood,
Then to make vp a free determination
'Twixt right and wrong: For pleasure, and reuenge,
Haue eares more deafe than Adders, to the voyce
Of any true decision. Nature craues
All dues be rendred to their Owners: now
What neerer debt in all humanity,
Than Wife is to the Husband? If this law
Of Nature be corrupted through affection,
And that great minds of partiall indulgence,
To their benumbed wills resist the same,
There is a Law in each well-ordred Nation,
To curbe those raging appetites that are
Most disobedient and reuoltarie.
If Helen then be wife to Sparta's King
(As it is known she is) these Morall Lawes
Of Nature, and of Nation, speake aloud
To haue her backe return'd. Thus to persist
In doing wrong, extenuates not wrong,
But makes it much more heauie. Hector's opinion

Is this in way of truth: yet mark the feste,
My spritely brethren, I propend to you
In resolution to keepe Helen still;
For 'tis a cause that hath no mean dependence,
Vpon our joint and seuerall dignities.

Tro. Why? there you touch'd the life of our designe:
Were it not glory that we more affected,
Then the performance of our heaving spleenes,
I would not with a drop of Troian blood,
Speak more in her defence. But worthy Hellen,
She is a theame of honour and renowne,
A spurre to valiant and magnanimous deeds,
Whose prefect courage may beate downe our foes,
And fame in time to come canonize vs.
For I presume brave Hellen would not loose
So rich advantage of a promis'd glory,
As smiles vpon the fore-head of this action,
For the wide worlds renowne.

Hell. I am yours,
You valiant off-spring of great Priamus,
I have a roisting challenge sent among'st
The dull and factious nobles of the Greeks,
Will strike amazement to their drowsie spirits,
I was aduertis'd, their Graes generall slept,
What'll emulation in the armie crept:
This I presume will wake him.

Exeunt.

Enter Therseites solus.

How now Therseites? what lost in the Labyrinth of thy furie? shall the Elephant Aiax carry it thus? he beates me, and I raile at him: O worthy satisfaction, would it were otherwise: that I could beate him, whilst he rail'd at me: Sfoote, I'le learne to conjure and raise Diuels, but I'le see some issue of my spiteful execrations. Then thet's Achilles, a rare Engineer. If Troy be not taken till these two vndermine it, the walls will stand till they fall of themselues. O thou great thunder-darter of Olympus, forget that thou art Iouis the King of gods: and Mercury, loose all the Serpentine craft of thy Caduceus, if thou take not that little little, less then little wit from them that they haue, which short-arm'd ignorance it selfe knowes, is so abundant scarse, it will not in circumuention deliuer a flye from a Spider, without drawing the massie Irons and casting the web: after this, the vengeance on the whole Campe, or rather the bone-ach, for that me thinkes is the curse dependent on those that warre for a placket. I haue said my prayers and diuell, enuie, say Amen: What ho? my Lord Achilles?

Enter Patroclus.

Patr. Who's there? Therseites. Good Therseites come in and raile.

Ther. If I could haue remembred a gilt counterfeit, thou would'st not haue slept out of my contemplation; but it is no matter, thy selfe vpon thy selfe. The common curse of mankinde, folly and ignorance be thine in great reuenew; heauen bless thee from a Tutor, and Discipline come not neere thee. Let thy blood be thy direction till thy death, then if she that laies thee out says thou art a faire corse, I'le be sworne and sworne vpon't she never shrouded any but Lazars, Amen. Wher's Achilles?

Patr. What art thou deuout? wast thou in a prayer?

Ther. I, the heauens heare me.

Enter Achilles.

Achil. Who's there?

Patr. Therseites, my Lord.

Achil. Where, where, art thou come? why my cheese, my digestion, why hast thou not serd thy selfe into my Table, so many meales? Come, what's Agamemnon?

Ther. Thy Commander Achilles, then tell me Patroclus, what's Achilles?

Patr. Thy Lord Therseites: then tell me I pray thee, what's thy selfe?

Ther. Thy knower Patroclus: then tell me Patroclus, what art thou?

Patr. Thou mist tell that know'st.

Achil. O tell, tell.

Ther. He decline the whole question. Agamemnon commands Achilles, Achilles is my Lord, I am Patroclus knower, and Patroclus is a foole.

Patro. You rascall.

Ter. Peace foole, I haue not done.

Achil. He is a priuiledg'd man, proceede Therseites.

Ther. Agamemnon is a foole, Achilles is a foole, Therseites is a foole, and as aforesaid, Patroclus is a foole.

Achil. Deriue this? come?

Ther. Agamemnon is a foole to offer to command Achilles. Achilles is a foole to be commanded of Agamemnon, Therseites is a foole to serue such a foole: and Patroclus is a foole positiue.

Patr. Why am I a foole?

Enter Agamemnon, Vlisses, Nestor, Diomedes, Aiax, and Chalcas.

Ther. Make that demand to the Creator, it suffices me thou art. Looke you, who comes here?

Achil. Patroclus, I'le speake with no body: come in with me Therseites. Exit.

Ther. Here is such patcherie, such iaging, and such knauerie: all the argument is a Cockold and a Whore, a good quarrel to draw emulations, factions, and bleede to death vpon: Now the dry Suppe, go on the Subject, and Warre and Lecherie confound all.

Agam. Where is Achilles?

Patr. Within his Tent, but ill disposd my Lord.

Agam. Let it be knowne to him that we are here:
He sent our Messengers, and we lay by
Our appertainments, visiting of him:
Let him be told of, so perchance he thinke
We dare not moue the question of our place,
Or know not what we are.

Pa. I shall so say to him.

Vlis. We saw him at the opening of his Tent,
He is not sicke.

Aia. Yes, Lyon sicke, sicke of proud heart; you may call it Melancholly if will fauour the man, but by my head, 'tis pride; but why, why, let him show vs the cause? A word my Lord.

Nes. What moues Aiax thus to bay at him?

Vlis. Achillis hath inueigled his Foole from him.

Nes. Who, Therseites?

Vlis. He.

Nes. Then will Aiax lacke matter, if he haue lost his Argument.

Vlis. No, you see he is his argument that has his argument Achilles.

Nes. All the better, their fraction is more our wish then their faction; but it was a strong counsell that a Foole could disuniteе.

Vlis. The enmitie that wisedome knits, not folly may easily vntie.

Enter Patroclus.

Here

Here comes Patroclus.

Nest. No Achilles with him?

Vlis. The Elephant hath joynts, but none for courtesie: His legge are legs for necessitie, not for flight.

Patro. Achilles bids me say he is much sorry: If any thing more then your sport and pleasure, Did moue your greatnesse, and this noble State, To call vpon him; he hopes it is no other, But for your health, and your digestion sake; An after Dinners breath.

Aga. Heare you Patroclus: We are too well acquainted with these answers: But his caution winged thus swift with scorne, Cannot outflye our apprehensions. Much attribute he hath, and much the reason, Why we ascribe it to him, yet all his vertues, Not vertuously of his owne part beheld, Doe in our eyes, begin to loose their glosse; Yea, and like faire Fruit in an vnholdsome dish, Are like to rot vntasted: goe and tell him, We came to speake with him; and you shall not sinne, If you doe say, we thinke him ouer proud, And vnder honest, in selfe-assumption greater Then in the note of judgement: & worthier then himselfe Here tends the sauage strangenesse he puts on, Disguise the holy strength of their command: And vnder writs in an observing kinde His humorous predominance, yea watch His pettish lines, his ebs, his flowes, as if The passage and whole carriage of this action Rode on his tyde. Goe tell him this, and adde, That if he ouerhold his price so much, Weele none of him; but let him, like an Eagle Not portable, lye vnder this report. Bring action hither, this cannot goe to warre: A stirring Dwarfe, we doe allowance giue, Before a sleeping Gyant: tell him so.

Pat. I shall, and bring his answere presently.

Aga. In second voyce weele not be satisfied, We come to speake with him, Vlisses enter you.

Exit Vlisses.

Ancr. What is he more then another?

Aga. No more then what he thinkes he is.

Ancr. Is he so much, doe you not thinke, he thinkes himselfe a better man then I am?

Ag. No question.

Ancr. Will you subscribe his thought, and say he is?

Ag. No, Noble Ancr, you are as strong, as valiant, as wise, no lesse noble, much more gentle, and altogether more tractable.

Ancr. Why should a man be proud? How doth pride grow? I know not what it is.

Aga. Your minde is the clearer Ancr, and your vertues the fairer; he that is proud, eates vp himselfe; Pride is his owne Glosse, his owne trumpet, his owne Chronicle, and what euer praises is selfe but in the deede, deuoures the deede in the praise.

Enter Vlysses.

Ancr. I do hate a proud man, as I hate the ingendring of Toades.

Nest. Yet he loues himselfe: is't not strange?

Vlis. Achilles will not to the field to morrow.

Ag. What's his excuse?

Vlis. He doth rely on none, But carries on the streame of his dispose, Without obseruance or respect of any, In will peculiar, and in selfe admission.

Aga. Why, will he not vpon our fayre request, Vntent his person, and share the ayre with vs?

Vlis. Things small as nothing, for request's sake only He makes important; possest he is with greatnesse, And speakes not to himselfe, but with a pride That quarrels at selfe-breach. lamgin'd wroth Holds in his blood such swolne and hot discourse, That twixt his mentall and his actiue parts, Kingdom'd Achilles in commotion rages, And batters gainst it selfe; what should I say? He is so plaggy proud, that the death tokens of it, Cry no recovery.

Ag. Let Aiax goe to him. Dear Lord, goe you and greete him in his Tent; 'Tis said he holds you well, and will be led At your request a little from himselfe.

Vlis. O Agamemnon, let it not be so. Weele consecrate the steps that Aiax makes, When they goe from Achilles; shall the proud Lord, That bestes his arrogance with his owne seame, And never suffers matter of the world, Enter his thoughts: saue such as doe remaine And ruminate himselfe. Shall he be worshipt, Of that we hold an Idoll, more then loue? No, this thrice worthy and right valiant Lord, Must not so staule his Palme, nobly acquir'd, Nor by my will assubingate his merit, As imply titled as Achilles is: by going to Achilles, Then were to enlard his fat already, pride, And adde more Coles to Cancer, when he burnes With entertaining great Hiperion. This L. goe to him? Iupiter forbid, And say in thunder, Achilles goe to him.

Nest O this is well, he rubs the vaine of him.

Dio. And how his silence drinkes vp this applause.

Aia. If I goe to him, with my armed fist, Ile pash him ore the face.

Ag. O no, you shall not goe.

Aia. And a be proud with me, Ile pheese his pride: let me goe to him.

Vlis. Not for the worth that hangs vpon our quarrel.

Aia. A paulcry insolent fellow.

Nest. How he describes himselfe.

Aia. Can he not be sociable?

Vlis. The Raven chides blacknesse.

Aia. He let his humours blood.

Ag. He will be the Physitian that should be shrpe time.

Aia. And all men were a my minde.

Vlis. Wit would be out of fashion.

Aia. A should not heare it so, a should cuse Sweath first: shall pride carry it?

Nest. And 'twould, you'ld carry halfe.

Vlis. A would haue ten shares.

Aia. I will knode him, Ile make him supple, he's not yet through warme.

Nest. Force him with praises, poure in, poure in his ambition is dry.

Vlis. My L. you feede too much on this dislike.

Nest. Our noble Generall, doe not doe so.

Dio. You must prepare to fight without Achilles.

Vlis. Why, 'tis this naming of him doth him harme. Here is a man, but 'tis before his face, I will be silent.

Nest. Wherefore should you so?

He is not emulous, as Achilles is.

Vlys. Know the whole world, he is as valiant.

Aiax. A horson dog, that shal palter thus with vs, would he were a Troian.

Nest. What a vice were it in Aiax now———

Vlys. If he were proud.

Dio. Or covetous of praise

Vlys. I, or forsey borne

Dio. Or strange, or selfe affected.

Vl. Thank the heavens L. thou art of sweet composure;
Praise him that gat thee, she that gave thee suckle:
Fame be thy Tutor, and thy parts of nature
Thrice fam'd beyond, beyond all erudition;
But he that disciplin'd thy armes to fight,
Let Mars devide Eternity in twaine,
And give him halfe, and for thy vigour,
Bull-bearing Milo his addition yeilde
To sinewie Aiax: I will not praise thy wisdome,
Which like a bourne, a pale, a shore confines
Thy spacious and dilated parts; here's Nestor
Instructed by the Antiquary times.
He must, he is, he cannot but be wise
But pardon Father Nestor, were your dayes
As greene as Aiax and your braine so temper'd,
You should not have the eminence of him,
But be as Aiax.

Aio. Shall I call you Father?

Vlys. I my good Sonne.

Dio. Be ruld by him Lord Aiax.

Vlys. There is no carrying here, the Hart Achilles
Keepes thether: please it our Generall,
To call together all his state of warre,
Fresh Kings are come to Troy to morrow
We must with all our maine of power stand fast.
And here's a Lord, come Knights from East to West,
And cull their flower, Aiax shall cope the best.

Ag. Goe wee to Counsaile, let Achilles sleepe;
Light Boats may saile swift, though greater bulkes draw deepe. Exeunt. Musicke sounds within.

Enter Pandarus and a Seruant.

Pan. Friend, you, pray you a word: Does not you follow the yong Lord Paris?

Ser. I sir, when he goes before me.

Pan. You depend vpon him I mean?

Ser. Sir, I doe depend vpon the Lord.

Pan. You depend vpon a noble Gentleman: I must needes praise him.

Ser. The Lord be praised.

Pa. You know me, doe you not?

Ser. Faith sir, superficially.

Pa. Friend know me better, I am the Lord Pandarus.

Ser. I hope I shall know your honour better.

Pa. I doe desire it.

Ser. You are in the state of Grace?

Pa. Grace, not so friend, honor and Lordship are my title: What Musique is this?

Ser. I doe but partly know sir: it is Musicke in parts

Pa. Know you the Musicians.

Ser. Wholly sir

Pa. Who play they to?

Ser. To the hearers sir.

Pa. At whose pleasure friend?

Ser. At mine sir, and theirs that loue Musicke.

Pa. Command, I mean friend.

Ser. Who shall I commaund sir?

Pa. Friend, we vnderstand not one another: I am too courtly, and thou art too cunning. At whose request doe these men play?

Ser. That's an't indeede sir: marry sir, at the request of Paris my L. who's there in person: with him the mortall Venus, the heart blood of beauty, loues invisible soule.

Pa. Who? my Cosin Cressida.

Ser. No sir, Helen, could you not finde out that by her attributes?

Pa. It should seeme fellow, that thou hast not seen the Lady Cressida. I come to speake with Paris from the Prince Troylus: I will make a complementall assault vpon him, for my business seethes.

Ser. Sodden business, there's a stewed phrase indeede.

Enter Paris and Helena.

Par. Faire be to you my Lord, and to all this faire company: faire desires in all faire measure fairely guide them, especially to you faire Queene, faire thoughts be your faire pillow.

Hel. Deere L. you are full of faire words.

Par. You speake your faire pleasure sweete Queene: faire Prince, here is good broken Musicke.

Par. You haue broke it cozen: and by my life you shalt make it whole againe, you shall peece it out with a peece of your performance. Nel, he is full of harmony.

Pan. Truely Lady no.

Hel. O fie

Pan. Rede in sooth, in good sooth very rude.

Paris. Well said my Lord: well, you say so in fits.

Pan. I haue business to my Lord, deere Queene: my Lord will you vouchsafe me a word.

Hel. Nay, this shall not hedge vs out, we'le heare you sing certainely.

Pan. Well sweete Queene you are pleasant with me, but, marry thee my Lord, my deere Lord, and most esteemed friend your brother Troylus.

Hel. My Lord Pandarus, hony sweete Lord.

Pan. Go too sweete Queene, goe to. Commends himselfe most affectionately to you.

Hel You shall not bob vs out of our melody: If you doe, our melancholy vpon your head.

Pan Sweete Queene, sweete Queene, that's a sweete Queene I faith———

Hel. And to make a sweet Lady sad, is a sower offence.

Pan. Nay, that shall not serue your turne, that shall it not in truth la. Nay, I care not for such words, no, no. And my Lord he desires you, that if the King call for him at Supper, you will make his excuse.

Hel. My Lord Pandarus?

Par. What saies my sweete Queene, my very, very sweete Queene?

Par. What exploits in hand, where sups he to night?

Hel. Nay but my Lord?

Par. What saies my sweete Queene? my cozen will fall out with you.

Hel. You must not know where he sups.

Par. With my disposer Cressida.

Pan. No, my no such matter, you me wide, cousin, your disposer is sicke.

Par. Well, I'le make excuse.

Par. I good my Lord: why should you say Cressida? no, your poore disposer's sicke.

Par. I spie.

Par. You

Pan. You spie, what doe you spie : come, giue me an instrument now sweete Queene.

Hel. Why this is kindely done?

Pan. My Neece is horrible in loue with a thing you haue sweete Queene.

Hel. She shall haue it my Lord, if it be not my Lord Paris.

Pand. Hee? no, sheele noose of him, they two are twaine.

Hel. Falling in after falling out, may make them three.

Pan. Come, come, Ile heare no more of this, Ile sing you a song now.

Hel. I, I, prethee now: by my troth sweet Lord thou hast a fine fore-head.

Pan. I you may, you may.

Hel. Let thy song be loue : this loue will vndoe vs all Oh Cupid, Cupid, Cupid.

Pan. Loue? I that it shall yfaith.

Par. I good now loue, loue, no thing but loue.

Pan. In good troth it begins so.

Loue, loue, nothing but loue, still more :
For O loues Bow,
Shootes Buck, and Doe :
The Shaft confounds not that it wounds,
But tickles still the sore :
Those Louers cry, oh ho they dye;
Yet that which seeuer the wound to kill,
Doth rouse oh ho, to ha ha he :
So dying loue liues still.
O ho a while, but ha ha ha,
O ho groanes out for ha ha ha——hey ho.

Hel. In loue yfaith to the very tip of the nose.

Par. He eates nothing but doues loue, and that breeds hot blood, and hot blood begets hot thoughts, and hot thoughts beget hot deedes, and hot deedes is loue.

Pan. Is this the generation of loue? Hot blood, hot thoughts, and hot deedes, why they are Vipers, is Loue a generation of Vipers?
Sweete Lord whose a field to day?

Par. Hector, Deiphobus, Helenus, Antenor, and all the gallantry of Troy. I would faine haue armd to day, but my Nell would not haue it so.
How chance my brother Troylus were not?

Hel. He hangs the hippe at something: you know all Lord Pandarus?

Pan. Not I hony sweete Queene : I long to heare how they sped to day :
Youle remember your brothers excuse?

Par. To a hayre.

Pan. Farewell sweete Queene.

Hel. Commend me to your Neece.

Pan. I will sweete Queene Sound a retreat.

Par. They're come from fielde : let vs to Priam's Hall
To greete the Warriers. Sweet Helen, I must woe you,
To helpe vnarme our Hector : his stubborne Buckles,
With these your white enchanting fingers touche,
Shall more obey then to the edge of Steele,
Or force of Greekish sinewes : you shall doe more
Then all the stand Kings, diseuse great Hector.

Hel. 'Twill make vs proud to be his seruant Paris :
Yea what he shall receiue of vs in duetie,
Gives vs more palme in beautie then we haue :
Yea oerflowes our selfe.
Sweete obeyse thought I loue thee. Exeunt.

Enter Pandarus and Troylus Man.

Pan. How now, where's thy Maister, at my Cousin Cressida?

Man. No sir, he stayes for you to conduct him thither.

Enter Troylus.

Pan. O here he comes: How now, how now?

Troy. Sirra walke off,

Pan. Haue you seene my Cousin?

Troy. No Pandarus : I stalke about her doore
Like a strange soule vpon the Stigian bankes
Staying for waftage. O be thou my Charon,
And giue me swift transportance to those fields,
Where I may wallow in the Lilly beds
Propos'd for the deserver. O gentle Pandarus,
From Cupids shoulder plucke his painted wings,
And flye with me to Cressid.

Pan. Walke here ith'Orchard, Ile bring her straight. Exit Pandarus.

Troy. I am giddy; expectation whirles me round,
Th'imaginary relish is so sweete,
That it inchoates my sence : what will it be
When that the watry palliats taste indeede
Loues thrice reputed Nectar? Death I feare me
Sounding distruction, or some joy too fine,
Too subtile, potent, and too sharpe in sweetnesse,
For the capacitie of my ruder powers;
I feare it much, and I doe feare besides,
That I shall loose distinction in my joyes,
As doth a battaile, when they charge on heapes
The enemy flying. Enter Pandarus.

Pan. She's making her ready, sheele come straight, you must be witty now, she does so blush, & fetches her winde so short, as if she were fraid with a sprite : Ile fetch her; it is the pettiest villaine, she fetches her breath so short as a new tane Sparrow. Exit Pand.

Troy. Even such a passion doth imbrace my bosome:
My heart beates thicker then a feuerous pulse,
And all my powers doe their bestowing loose,
Like vassalage at vnawares encountring
The eye of Maiestie.

Enter Pandarus and Cressida.

Pan. Come, come, what needs you blush?
Shames a babie; here she is now, sweare the oathes now to her, that you haue sworne to me. What are you gone again, you must be watche ere you be made tame, must you? come your ways, come your ways, and you draw backward weele put you i'th fils : why doe you not speak to her? Come draw this curtaine, & let's see your picture. Alaske the day, how loath you are to offend day light? and 'twere darke you'd close sooner : So, so, rub on, and kisse the mistresse; how now, a kisse in fee-farme? build there Carpenter, the ayre is sweete. Nay, you shall fight your hearts out ere I part you. The Faulcon, as the Tercell, for all the Docks ith River : go too, go too.

Troy. You haue bereft me of all words Lady.

Pan. Words pay no debts; give her deedes : but sheele bereane you 'oth' deeds too, if shee call your activity in question : what billing againe? here's in witnesse where of the Parties interchangeably. Come in, come in, I'lego get a fire?

Cres. Will you walke in my Lord?

Troy. O Cressida, how often haue I wisht me thus?

Cres. Wisht my Lord? the gods grant? O my Lord.

Troy. What should they grant? what makes this pretty abruption: what too curious dreg aspires my sweete Lady in the fountaine of our loue?

Cres. More

Cres. More dregs then water, if my teares haue eyes.

Troy. Feares make diuels of Cherubins, they neuer see truely.

Cres. Blinde feare, that seeing reason leads, findes safe footing, then blinde reason, stumbling without feare: to feare the worst, oft cures the worse.

Troy. Oh let my Lady apprehend no feare, In all Cupids Pageant there is presented no monster.

Cres. Not nothing monstrous neither?

Troy. Nothing but our vndertakings, when we vowe to weepe seas, liue in fire, eate rockes, tame Tygers; thinking it harder for our Mistresse to deuise imposition inough, then for vs to vndergoe any difficultie imposed. This is the monstruositie in loue Lady, that the will is infinite, and the execution confin'd; that the desire is boundlesse, and the act a slaue to limit.

Cres. They say all Louers sweare more performance then they are able, and yet reserue an ability that they neuer performe: vowing more then the perfection of ten; and discharging lesse then the tenth part of one. They that haue the voyce of Lyons, and the act of Hares: are they not Monsters?

Troy. Are there such? such are not we: Praise vs as we are tasted, allow vs as we proue: our head shall goe bare till merit crowne it: no perfection in reuersion shall haue a praise in present: we will not name desert before his birth, and being borne his addition shall be humble: few words to faire faith. Troylus shall be such to Cressid, as what enuie can say worst, shall be a mocke for his truth; and what truth can speake truest, not truer then Troylus.

Cres. Will you walke in my Lord?

Enter Pandarus.

Pan. What blushing still? haue you not done talking yet?

Cres. Well Vncle, what folly I commit, I dedicate to you.

Pan. I thanke you for that: if my Lord get a Boy of you, youle giue him me: be true to my Lord, if he flinch, chide me for it.

Tro. You know now your hostages: your Vnckles word and my firme faith.

Pan. Nay, I'le giue my word for her too: our kindred though they be long ere they are wooed, they are constant being wonne: they are Barres I can tell you, they'le sticke where they are throwne.

Cres. Boldnesse comes to mee now, and brings mee heart: Prince Troylus, I haue lou'd you nights and day, for many weary moneths.

Troy. Why was my Cressid then so hard to win?

Cres. Hard to seeme won: but I was won my Lord
With the first glance; that euer pardon me,
If I confesse much you will play the tyrant:
I loue you now, but not till now so much
But I might master it: infaith I lye:
My thoughts were like vnbrideled children grow
Too head-strong for their mother: see we fooles,
Why haue I blab'd: who shall be true to vs
When we are so vnsecret to our selues?
But though I lou'd you well, I woed you not,
And yet good faith I wisht my selfe a man;
Or that we women had mens priuiledge
Of speaking first. Sweet, bid me hold my tongue,
For in this rapture I shall surely speake
The thing I shall repent: see, see, your silence
Comming in dumbnesse, from my weaknesse drawes
My soule of counsell from me. Stop my mouth.

Troy. And shall, albeit sweete Musicke issues thence.

Pan. Pretty yfaith.

Cres. My Lord, I doe beseech you pardon me,
'Twas not my purpose thus to beg a kisse:
I am asham'd; O Heauens, what haue I done!
For this time will I take my leaue my Lord.

Troy. Your leaue sweete Cressid?

Pan. Leaue: and you take leaue till to-morrow morning.

Cres. Pray you content you.

Troy. What offends yo Lady?

Cres. Sir, mine owne company.

Troy. You cannot shun your selfe.

Cres. Let me goe and try:
I haue a kinde of selfe recides with you:
But an vnkinde selfe, that it selfe will leaue,
To be another's foole. Where is my wit?
I would be gone: I speake I know not what.

Troy. Well know they what they speake, that speakes so wisely.

Cre. Perchance my Lord, I shew more craft then loue,
And sell so roundly to a large confession,
To Angle for your thoughts: but you are wise,
Or else you loue not: for to be wise and loue,
Exceedes mans might, that dwels with gods aboue.

Troy. O that I thought it could be in a woman:
As if it can, I will presume in you,
To feede for aye her lampe and flames of loue.
To keepe her constancie in plight and youth,
Out-liuing beauties outward, with a minde
That doth renew swifter then blood decaies:
Or that perswasion could but thes conuince me,
That my integritie and truth to you,
Might be affronted with the match and weight
Of such a winnowed puritie in loue:
How were I then vp-lifted! but alas,
I am as true, as truths simplicitie,
And simpler then the infancie of truth.

Cres. In that I'le warre with you.

Troy. O vertuous fight,
When right with right wars who shall be most right:
True swaines in loue, shall in the world to come
Approue their truths by Troylus, when their rimes,
Full of protest, of oath and big compare;
Wants similes, truth tir'd with iteration,
As true as steele, as plantage to the Moone:
As Sunne to day: as Turtle to her mate:
As Iron to Adamant: as Earth to th'Center:
Yet after all comparisons of truth,
(As truths authenticke author to be cited)
As true as Troylus, shall crowne vp the Verse,
And sanctifie the numbers.

Cres. Prophet may you be:
If I be false, or swerue a hare from truth,
When time is old and hath forgot it selfe:
When water drops haue worne the Stones of Troy;
And blinde oblivion swallow'd Cities vp;
And mightie States characterlesse are grated
To dustie nothing; yet let memory,
From false to false, among false Maids in loue,
Vpbraid my falsehood, when they'aue said as false,
As Aire, as Water, as Winde, as sandie earth;
As Foxe to Lambe; as Wolfe to Heifers Calfe;
Pard to the Hinde, or Stepdame to her Sonne;
Yes, let them say, to sticke the heart of falsehood,

As false as Cressid.

Pand. Go too, a bargaine made: seale it, seale it, Ile be the witnesse here I hold your hand: here my Cousins, if ever you prove false one to another, since I have taken such paines to bring you together, let all pitiffull goers betweene be call'd to the worlds end after my name: call them all Panders; let all constant men be Troylusses, all false women Cressids, and all brokers betweene, Panders: say, Amen.

Troy. Amen.

Cres. Amen.

Pan. Amen.

Whereupon I will shew you a Chamber, which bed, because it shall not speake of your pretie encounters, pretie it to death: away.

And Cupid grant all tong-tide Maidens here,
Bed, Chamber, and Pander, to provide this geere. Exeunt.

Enter Ulysses, Diomedes, Nestor, Agamemnon, Menelaus and Chalcas. Flourish.

Cal. Now Princes for the service I have done you,
Th'advantage of the time prompts me aloud,
To call for recompence: appeare it to your minde,
That through the sights I bearе in things to loue,
I have abandon'd Troy, left my possession,
Incur'd a Traitors name, expos'd my selfe,
From certaine and possest conveniences,
To doubtfull fortunes, sequestring from me all
That time, acquaintance, custome and condition,
Made tame, and most familiar to my nature:
And here to doe you service am become,
As new into the world, strange, vnacquainted.
I doe beseech you, as in way of taste,
To give me now a little benefit:
Out of those many registred in promise,
Which you say, live to come in my behalfe.

Agam. What wouldst thou of vs Trojan? make demand?

Cal. You have a Trojan prisoner, call'd Antenor,
Yesterday tooke: Troy holds him very deere.
Oft have you (often have you, thankes therefore)
Desir'd my Cressida in right great exchange.
Whom Troy hath still denid: but this Antenor,
I know is such a wrest in their affaires;
That their negotiations all must slacke,
Wanting his managе: and they will almost,
Give vs a Prince of blood, a Sonne of Priam,
In change of him. Let him be sent great Princes,
And he shall buy my Daughter: and her presence,
Shall quite strike off all service I have done,
In most accepted paine.

Aga. Let Diomedes bearе him,
And bring vs Cressid hither: Calchas shall have
What he requests of vs: good Diomed
Furnish you fairely for this entertainе;
Withall bring word, if Hector will to morrow
Be answer'd in his challenge. Ajax is ready.

Dio. This shall I undertake, and 'tis a burthen
Which I am proud to bearе. Exit.

Enter Achilles and Patroclus in their Tent.

Vlis. Achilles stands i'th entrance of his Tent;
Please it our Generall to passe strangely by him,
As if he were forgot: and Princes all,
Lay ne gligent and loose regard vpon him;
I will come last, 'tis like he'le question me,
Why such vnplausive eyes are bent? why turn'd on him?
If so, I have derision medicinable,
To vse between your strangenesse and his pride,
Which his own will shall have desire to drinke;
It may doe good, pride hath no other glasse
To show it selfe, but pride: for supple knees,
Feede arrogance, and are the proud mans fees.

Agam. We'le enter vpon your purpose, and put on
A forme of strangenesse as we passe along.
So doe each Lord, and either greete him not,
Or else disdainfully, which shall shake him more,
Then if not looke on. I will lead the way.

Achil. What comes the Generall to speake with me?
You know my minde, Ile fight no more 'gainst Troy.

Aga. What saies Achilles, would he ought with vs?

Nes. Would you my Lord ought with the Generall?

Achil. No.

Nes. Nothing my Lord.

Aga. The better.

Achil. Good day, good day.

Men. How doe you? how doe you?

Achi. What, do's the Cockold scoune me?

Aiax. How now Patroclus?

Achil. Good morrow Aiax?

Aiax. Ha.

Achil. Good morrow.

Aiax. I, and good next day too. Exeunt.

Achil. What meane these fellowes? know they me Achilles?

Pat. They passe by strangely: they were vs'd to bend
To send their smiles before them to Achilles:
To come as humbly as they vs'd to creepe to holy Altars.

Achil. What am I poore of late?
Tis certaine, greatnesse once falne out with fortune,
Must fall out with menton: what the declin'd is,
He shall as soone reade in the eyes of others,
As feele in his owne fall: for men like butter-flies,
Shew not their mealie wings, but to the Summer:
And not a man for being simply man,
Hath any honour; but honour'd for those honours
That are without him; as place, riches, and favour,
Prizes of accident, as oft as merit:
Which when they fall, as being slippery standers;
The loue that leand on them as slippery too,
Doth one plucke downe another, and together
Dye in the fall. But 'tis not so with me;
Fortune and I are friends, I doe enioy
At ample point, all that I did possesse,
Save these mens looke: who do me thinkes finde out
Something not worth in me such rich beholding,
As they have often given. Here is Vlisses,
Ile interrupt his reading: how now Vlisses?

Vlis. Now great Thetis Sonne.

Achil. What are you reading?

Vlis. A strange fellow here
Writes me, that man, how dearely ever parted,
How much in having, or without, or in,
Cannot make boast to have that which he hath;
Nor feeles not what he owes, but by reflection:
As when his vertues shining vpon others,
Heare them, and they retort that heare againe
To the first giver.

Achil. This is not strange Vlisses:
The beautie that is borne here in the face,
The bearer knowes not, but commends it selfe,
Not going from it selfe: but eye to eye oppos'd,

Salutes each other with each others forme.
For speculation turnes not to it selfe,
Till it hath travail'd, and is married there
Where it may see it selfe: this is not strange at all.
Vlis. I doe not straine it at the position,
It is familiar; but at the Authors drift,
Who in his circumstance, expressly proues
That no may is the Lord of may thing,
(Though in and of him there is much consisting,)
Till he communicate his parts to others:
Nor doth he of himselfe know them for ought,
Till he beheld them formed in th'applause,
Where they are extended: who like an arch reuerb'rate
The voyce againe; or like a gate of steele,
Fronting the Sunne, receiues and renders backe
His figure, and his heate. I was much rapt in this,
And apprehended here immediately:
The vnknowne Aiax;
Heauens what a man is there? a very Horse, (are
That has he knowes not what. Nature, what things there
Most abiect in regard, and deare in vse.
What things againe most deere in the esteeme,
And poore in worth: now shall we see to morrow,
An act that very chance doth throw vpon him?
Aiax renown'd? O heauens, what some men doe,
While some men leaue to doe!
How some men creepe in skittish fortunes hall,
Whiles others play the Idiots in her eyes:
How one man eates into anothers pride,
While pride is feasting in his wantonnesse
To see these Grecian Lords; why, euen already,
They clap the lobber Aiax on the shoulder,
As if his foote were on brauе *Hector*s breft,
And great Troy shrinking.
Achil. I doe beleeue it;
For they past by me, as myseres doe by beggers,
Neither gaue to me good word, nor looke:
What are my deedes forgot?
Vlis. Time hath (my Lord) a wallet at his backe,
Wherein he puts alms for oblision:
A great sir'd monster of ingratitudes:
Those scraps are good deedes past,
Which are deuour'd as fast as they are made,
Forgot as soone as done: perseuerance, deere my Lord,
Keepes honor bright, to haue done, is to hang
Quite out of fashion. like a rusie male,
In monumentall mockrie: take the instant way,
For honour travels in a straight so narrow,
Where one but goes a breast, keepe then the paths
For emulation hath a thousand Sonnes,
That one by one pursue; if you giue way,
Or hedge aside from the direct forth right;
Like to an entred Tyde, they all rush by,
And leaue you hindmost:
Or like a gallant Horse falne in first ranke,
Lye there for pauement to the abiect, neere
Ore-run and trampled on: then what they doe in present,
Though lesse then yours in past, must ore-top yours:
For time is like a fashionable Host,
That slightly shakes his parting Guest by th'hand;
And with his armes out-stretcht, as he would flye,
Graspes in the comner: the welcome ever smiles,
And farewels goes out sighing: O let not vertue seeke
Remuneration for the thing it was: for beautie, wit,
High birth, vigor of bone, desert in seruice,
Loue, friendship, charity, are subiects all
To enuious and calumniating time:
One touch of nature makes the whole world kin:
That all with one consent praise new borne gaudes,
Though they are made and moulded of things past,
And goe to dust, that is a little guilt.
More loud then guilt ordusted.
The present eye praises the present obiect:
Then maruell not thou great and compleat man,
That all the Greekes begin to worship Aiax;
Since things in motion begin to catch the eye,
Then what not stirs: the cry went out on thee,
And still it might, and yet it may againe,
If thou would'st not entombe thy selfe aliue,
And case thy reputation in thy Tent;
Whose glorious deedes, but in these fields of late,
Made emulous missions 'mongst the gods themselues,
And draue great Mars to faction.
Achil. Of this my priuacie,
I haue strong reasons.
Vlis. But 'gainst your priuacie
The reasons are more potent and heroycall:
'Tis knowne Achilles, that you are in loue
With one of Priams daughters.
Achil. Ha? knowne?
Vlis. Is that a wonder?
The providence that's in a watchfull State,
Knowes almost every graine of Plutoes gold;
Finides bottome in th'vncomprehensive deepes;
Keepes place with thought; and almost like the gods,
Doe thoughes vnuaile in their dumbe cradles:
There is a mysterie (with whom relation
Durst never meddle) in the soule of State;
Which hath an operation more diuine,
Then breath or pen can giue expressure to:
All the commerce that you haue had with Troy,
As perfectly is ours, as yours, my Lord.
And better would it fit Achilles much,
To throw downe Hector then Polixena.
But it must grieue yong Pyrhus now at home,
When fame shall in her Hand sound her trumpe;
And all the Greekish Girles shall tripping sing,
Great *Hector*s sister did Achilles winne;
But our great Aiax brauely beate downe him.
Farewell my Lord: I as your louer speake;
The foole slides ore the Ice that you should breake.
Patr. To this effect Achilles haue I mou'd you;
A woman impudent and mannish growne,
Is not more loth'd, then an effeminate man,
In time of action: I stand condemn'd for this;
They thinke my little stomacke to the warre,
And your great loue to me, restraines you thus:
Sweete, rouse your selfe; and the weake wanton Cupid
Shall from your neche vnloose his amorous fould,
And like a dew drop from the Lyons mane,
Be shooke to ayrie ayre.
Achil. Shall Aiax fight with Hector?
Patr. I, and perhaps receiue much honor by him.
Achil. I see my reputation is at stake.
My fame is shrowdly gored.
Patr. O then beware:
Those wounds heale ill, that men doe giue themselues.
Omission to doe what is necessary,
Seales a commission to a blanke of danger,
And danger like an ague subtly taints
Euen then when we sit idely in the sunne.
Achil. Goe call Thersites hither sweet Patroclus,

I'le send the fooles to Aiax, and desire him
T'invite the Troian Lords after the Combat
To see vs here vnarm'd: I haue a womans longing,
An appetite that I am sicke withall,
To see great Hector in his weedes of peace; Enter Thers.
To talke with him, and to behold his visage,
Even to my full of view. A labous sau'd.

Ther. A wonder.

Achil. What?

Ther. Aiax goes vp and downe the field, asking for himselfe.

Achil. How so?

Ther. Hee most fight singly to morrow with Hector, and is so prophetically proud of an heroicall cudgelling, that he raues in saying nothing.

Achil. How can that be?

Ther. Why he stalkes vp and downe like a Peacock, a stride and a stand; ruminates like an hostesse, that hath no Arithmetique but her braine to set downe her reckoning: bites his lip with a politique regard, as who should say, there were wit in his head and twoo'd out; and so there is: but it lyes as coldly in him, as fire in a flint, which will not shew without knocking. The ouens vndone for euer; for if Hector breake not his necke i'th' combat, heele break't himselfe in vaine-glory. He knowes not mee: I said, good morrow Aiax; And he replyes, thankes Agamemnon. What thinke you of this man, that takes me for the Generall? Hee's growne a very land-fish, languagelesse, a monster: a plague of opinion, a man may weare it on both sides like a leather Ierkin.

Achil. Thou must be my Ambassador to him Therseites.

Ther. Who, I: why, heele answer no body: he professes not answering; speaking is for beggers: he weares his tongue in's armes: I will put on his presence; let Patroclus make his demands to me, you shall see the Pageant of Aiax.

Achil. To him Patroclus; tell him, I humbly desire the valiant Aiax, to inuite the most valorous Hector, to come vnarm'd to my Tent, and to procure safe conduct for his person, of the magnanimious and most illustrious, six or seauen times honour'd Captaine, Generall of the Grecian Armie Agamemnon, &c. doe this.

Patro. Iuue bless great Aiax.

Ther. Hum.

Patr. I come from the worthy Achilles.

Ther. Ha?

Patr. Who most humbly desires you to inuite Hector to his Tent.

Ther. Hum.

Patr. And to procure safe conduct from Agamemnon.

Ther. Agamemnon?

Patr. I my Lord.

Ther. Ha?

Patr. What say you too't.

Ther. God buy you with all my heart

Patr. Your answer sir.

Ther. If to morrow be a faire day, by eleuen a clocke it will goe one way or other; howsoeuer, he shall pay for me ere he has me.

Patr. Your answer sir.

Ther. Fare you well with all my heart.

Achil. Why, but he is not in this tune, is he?

Ther. No, but he's out a tune thus: what musicke will be in him when Hector has knockt out his braines, I know not: but I am sure none, vnlesse the Fidler Apollo get his sinewes to make catlings on.

Achil. Come, thou shalt bear a Letter to him straight.

Ther Let me carry another to his Horse; for that's the more capable creature.

Achil. My minde is troubled like a Fountaine stir'd,
And I my selfe see not the bottome of it.

Ther. Would the Fountaine of your minde were cleere again, that I might water an Asse at it: I had rather be a Tickle in a Sheepe, then such a valiant ignorance.

Enter at one doore Æneas with a Torch, at another Paris, Deiphobus, Antenor, Diomed the Grecian, with Torches.

Par. See hoa, who is that there?

Deiph. It is the Lord Æneas.

Æne. Is the Prince there in person?
Had I so good occasion to lye long
As you Prince Paris, nothing but heauenly businesse,
Should rob my bed-mate of my company.

Dium. That's my minde too: good morrow Lord Æneas.

Par. A valiant Greeke Æneas, take his hand,
Witnesse the processe of your speech within;
You told how Diomed in a whole weeke by dayes
Did haunt you in the Field.

Æne. Health to you valiant sir,
During all question of the gentle truce:
But when I meete you arm'd, as blacke defiance,
As heart can thinke, or courage execute.

Dium. The one and other Diomed embraces,
Our bloods are now in calme; and so long health.
But when contention, and occasion meetes,
By Ioue, Ile play the hunter for thy life,
With all my force, pursuite and policy.

Æne. And thou shalt burn a Lyon that will flye
With his face backward, in humaine gentlenesse:
Welcome to Troy; now by Anchises life,
Welcome indeede: by Venus hand I sweare,
No man aliue can loue in such a sort,
The thing he meanes to kill, more excellently.

Dium. We sympathize. Ioue let Æneas liue
(If to my sword his fate be not the glory)
A thousand compleate courses of the Sunne,
But in mine emulous honor let him dy
With every loyne a wound, and that to morrow.

Æne. We know each other well.

Dio. We doe, and long to know each other worse.

Par. This is the most, despightful'st gentle greeting:
The noblest hatefull loue, that ere I heard of.
What businesse Lord so early?

Æne. I was sent for to the King; but why, I know not.

Par. His purpose meets you: it was to bring this Greeke
To Calchas's house; and there to render him,
For the enfreed Anthenor, the faire Cressid:
Lets haue your company; or if you please,
Haste there before vs. I constantly doe thinke
(Or rather call my thought a certaine knowledge)
My brother Troylus lodges there to night.
Rouse him, and give him note of our approach,
With the whole quality wherefore, I feare
We shall be much vnwelcome.

Æne. That I assure you:
Troylus had rather Troy were borne to Greece,
Then Cressid borne from Troy.

Par. There

Par. There is no helpe:
The bitter disposition of the time will have it so.
On Lord, weele follow you.
Æne. Good morrow all. Exit Æneas.
Par. And tell me noble Diomed; faith tell me true,
Even in the soule of found good fellow ship,
Who in your thoughts merits fairе Helen most?
My selfe, or Menelaus?
Diom. Both alike.
He merits well to have her, that doth seeke her,
Not making any scruple of her soylure,
With such a hell of paine, and world of charge.
And you as well to keepe her, that defend her,
Not pallating the taste of her dishonour,
With such a costly losse of wealth and friends:
He like a puling Cuckold, would drinke vp
The lees and dregs of a flat tamed peece:
You like a letcher, out of wherish loynes,
Are pleas'd to breede out your inheritors:
Both merits poys'd, each weighs no lesse nor more,
But he as he, which heauier for a whore.
Par. You are too bitter to your country-women.
Dio. She's bitter to her country: heere me Paris,
For every false drop in her bawdy veines,
A Grecians life hath sunke: for every scruple
Of her contaminated carrion weight,
A Troian hath beene slaine. Since she could speake,
She hath not given so many good words breath,
As for her, Greekes and Troians suffred death.
Par. Faire Diomed, you doe as chapmen doe,
Dis praise the thing that you desire to buy:
But we in silence hold this vertue well;
Weele not commend, what we intend to sell.
Here lyes our way. Exeunt.

Enter Troylus and Cressida.

Troy. Deere trouble not your selfe: the morne is cold.
Cres. Then sweet my Lord, Ile call mine Vncle down;
He shall vnbolt the Gates.
Troy. Trouble him not:
To bed, to bed: sleepe kill those pretty eyes,
And give as soft attachment to thy senses,
As infants empty of all thoughts.
Cres. Good morrow then.
Troy. I prithee now to bed.
Cres. Are you a weary of me?
Troy. O Cressida! but that the busie day
Wak't by the Larke, hath rous'd the ribald Crowes,
And dreaming night will hide our eyes no longer:
I would not from thee.
Cres. Night hath beene too brieſe. (stayes,
Troy. Beshrew the witch! with venemous wights she
As hideously as hell; but flies the grasps of loue,
With wings more momentary, swift then thoughts:
You will catch cold, and curse me.
Cres. Prithee tarry you men will neuer tarry;
O foolish Cressid, I might have still held off,
And then you would have tarried. Harke, ther's one vp?
Pand. within. What's all the doores open here?
Troy. It is your Vncle. Enter Pandarus.
Cres. A pestilence on him: now will he be mocking:
I shall have such a life.
Pan. How now, how now? how goe maiden-heads?
Heare you Maide: ther's my cozin Cressid?
Cres. Go hang your self, you naughty mocking Vncle:
You bring me to doo---- and then you flouts me too.
Pan. To do what? to do what? let her say what:
What have I brought you to doe?
Cres. Come, come, beshrew your heart: youle nere be good, nor suffer others.
Pan. Ha, ha: alas poore wretch: a poore Chipchase, hast not slept to night? would he not (a naughty man) let it sleepe: a bug-beare take him. One knocks.
Cres. Did not I tell you? would he were knocke th' head. Who's that at doore? good Vncle goe and see.
My Lord, come you again into my Chamber:
You smile and mocke me, as if I meant naughtily.
Troy. Ha, ha.
Cre. Come you are deceiu'd, I thinke of no such thing.
How earnestly they knocke: pray you come in. Knocks.
I would not for halfe Troy have you seene here. Exeunt.
Pan. Who's there? what's the matter? will you beate downe the doore? How now, what's the matter?
Æne. Good morrow Lord, good morrow
Pan. Who's there my Lord Æneas? by my troth I knew you not: what newes with you so early?
Æne. Is not Prince Troylus here?
Pan. Here? what should he doe here?
Æne. Come he is here, my Lord, doe not deny him:
It doth import him much to speake with me.
Pan. Is he here say you? 'tis more then I know, Ile be sworne: For my owne part I came in late: what should he doe here?
Æne. Who, nay then: Come, come, youle doe him wrong, ere y'are ware: youle be so true to him, to be false to him: Doe not you know of him, but yet goe fetch him hither, goe.

Enter Troylus.

Troy. How now, what's the matter?
Æne. My Lord, I scarce haue leisure to salute you,
My matter is so rash: there is set hand,
Paris your brother, and Deiphobus,
The Grecian Diomed, and our Antenor
Deliuer'd to vs, and for him forth-with,
Ere the first sacrifice, within this houre,
We must give vp to *Diomed*s hand
The Lady Cressida.
Troy. Is it concluded so?
Æne. By Priam, and the generall state of Troy,
They are at hand, and ready to effect it.
Troy. How my atchiesements mocke me;
I will goe meete them: and my Lord Æneas,
We met by chance; you did not finde me here.
Æne. Good, good, my Lord, the secrets of nature
Haue not more gift in taciturnitie. Exeunt.

Enter Pandarus and Cressid.

Pan. Is't possible? no sooner got but lost: the diuell take Antenor; the yong Prince will goe mad: a plague vpon Antenor: I would they had broke's necke.
Cres. How now? what's the matter? who was here?
Pan. Ah, ha!
Cres. Why sigh you so profoundly? wher's my Lord? gone? tell me sweet Vncle, what's the matter?
Pan. Would I were as deepe vnder the earth as I am above.
Cres. O the gods! what's the matter?
Pan. Prythee get thee in: would thou had'st ne're been borne; I knew thou would'st be his death. O poore Gentleman: a plague vpon Antenor.

Cres. Good Vncle I beseech you, on my knees, I beseech you what's the matter?

Pan. Thou must be gone wench, thou must be gone; thou art chang'd for Anthenor: thou must to thy Father, and be gone from Troylus: 'twill be his death: 'twill be his bane, he cannot beare it.

Cres. O you immortall gods! I will not goe.

Pan. Thou must.

Cres. I will not Vncle: I haue forgot my Father:
I know no touch of consanguinitie:
No kin, no loue, no blood, no soule, so neere me,
As the sweet Troylus: O you gods diuine!
Make Cressids name the very crowne of falsehood!
If euer she leaue Troylus: time, force and death,
Do to this body what extremitie you can;
But the strong base and building of my loue,
Is as the very Center of the earth,
Drawing all things to it. I will goe in and weepe.

Pan. Doe, doe.

Cres. Teare my bright haire, and scratch my praised cheekes,
Crache my cleere voyce with sobs, and breake my heart
With sounding Troylus. I will not goe from Troy. Exeunt.

Enter Paris, Troylus, Æneas, Deiphebus, Anthenor and Diomedes.

Par. It is great morning, and the houre prefixe
Of her deliuerie to this valiant Greeke
Comes fast vpon: good my brother Troylus,
Tell you the Lady what she is to doe,
And haste her to the purpose.

Troy. Walke into her house:
Ile bring her to the Grecian presently;
And to his hand, when I deliuer her,
Thinke it an Altar, and thy brother Troylus
A Priest, there offring to it his heart.

Par. I know what 'tis to loue,
And would, as I shall pitie, I could helpe.
Please you walke in, my Lords. Exeunt.

Enter Pandarus and Cressid.

Pan. Be moderate, be moderate.

Cres. Why tell you me of moderation?
The griefe is line, full perfect that I taste,
And no lesse in a sense as strong
As that which causeth it. How can I moderate it?
If I could temporise with my affection,
Or brew it to a weake and colder palate,
The like allayment could I giue my griefe:
My loue admits no qualifying crosse; Enter Troylus.
No more my griefe, in such a precious losse.

Pan. Here, here, here, he comes, a sweet ducke.

Cres. O Troylus, Troylus!

Pan. What a paire of spectacles is here? let me embrace too: oh hart, as the goodly saying is; O heart, heauie heart, why sighest thou without breaking? where he answers againe; because thou canst not ease thy smart by friendship, nor by speaking: there was neuer a truer rime; let vs cast away nothing, for we may liue to haue needs of such a Verse: we see it, we see it: how now Lambs?

Troy. Cressid: I loue thee in so strange a purities;
That the blest gods, as angry with my fancie,
More bright in zeale, then the deuotion which
Cold lips blow to their Deities: take thee from me.

Cres. Haue the gods enuie?

Pan. I, I, I, I, 'tis too plaine a case.

Cres. And is it true, that I must goe from Troy?

Troy. A hateful truth.

Cres. What, and from Troylus too?

Troy. From Troy, and Troylus.

Cres. Is it possible?

Troy. And suddenly, where iniurie of chance
Puts backe loue-taking, hastes roughly by
All time of pause; rudely beguiles our lips
Of all rejoynder: forcibly preuents
Our lockt embrasures; strangles our dearest vowes,
Even in the birth of our own labouring breath.
We two, that with so many thousand sighes
Did buy each other, must poorely sell our selues,
With the rude breuitie and discharge of our
Iniurious time; now with a robbers haste
Crams his rich theuerie vp, he knowes not how.
As many farwels as be stars in heauen,
With distinct breath, and consign'd kisses to them,
He fumbles vp into a loose adieu;
And scants vs with a single famished kisse,
Distasting with the salt of broken teares. Enter Æneas.

Æneas within. My Lord, is the Lady ready?

Troy. Harke, you are call'd: some say the genius so
Cries, come to him that instantly must dye.
Bid them haue patience: she shall come anon.

Pan. Where are my teares? raine, to lay this winde, or my heart will be blowne vp by the root.

Cres. I must then to the Grecians?

Troy. No remedy.

Cres. A wofull Cressid 'mong'st the merry Greeks.

Troy. When shall we see againe?

Troy. Heare me my loue: be thou but true of heart.

Cres. I true? how now? what wicked deeme is this?

Troy. Nay, we must vse expostulation kindely,
For it is parting from vs:
I speake not, be thou true, as fearing thee:
For I will throw my Gloue to death himselfe,
That there's no maculation in thy heart:
But be thou true, say I, to fashion in
My sequent protestation: be thou true,
And I will see thee.

Cres. O you shall be expos'd, my Lord to dangers
As infinite, as imminent: but Ile be true.

Troy. And Ile grow friend with danger;
Weare this Sleeue.

Cres. And you this Gloue.
When shall I see you?

Troy. I will corrupt the Grecian Centinels,
To giue thee nightly visitation.
But yet be true.

Cres. O heauens: be true againe?

Troy. Heare why I speake it; Loue:
The Grecian youths are full of qualitie,
Their loosing well compos'd, with guift of nature,
Flowing and swelling o're with Arts and exercise:
How nouelties may moue, and parts with person.
Alas, a kinde of godly iealousie;
Which I beseech you call a vertuous sinne:
Makes me afraid.

Cres. O heauens, you loue me not!

Troy. Dye I a villaine then:
In this I doe not call your faith in question
So mainely as my merit: I cannot sing,
Nor heele the high Lauolt; nor sweeten talke;
Nor play at subtill games; faire vertues all;

To

To which the Grecians are most prompt and pregnant:
But I can tell that in each grace of these,
There lurkes a still and dumb-discourse diuell,
That tempts most cunningly: but be not tempted.

Cres. Doe you thinke I will:

Troy. No, but something may be done that we will not:
And sometimes we are diuels to our seloes,
When we will tempt the frailtie of our powers,
Presuming on their changefull potentie.

Æneas within. Nay, good my Lord?

Troy. Come kisse, and let vs part.

Paris within. Brother Troylus?

Troy. Good brother come you hither,
And bring Æneas and the Grecian with you,

Cres. My Lord, will you be true? Exit

Troy. Who I? alas it is my vice, my fault:
Whiles others fish with craft for great opinion,
I, with great truth, catch meere simplicitie;
Whil'st some with cunning guild their copper crowns,
With truth and plainnesse I doe wear mine bare:

Enter the Greekes.

Feare not my truth; the morrall of my wit
Is plaine and true, ther's all the reach of it.
Welcome sir Diomed, here is the Lady
Which for Antenor, we deliuer you.
At the port (Lord) I'le giue her to thy hand,
And by the way possesse thee what she is.
Entreate her faire; and by my soule, faire Greeke,
If ere thou stand at mercy of my Sword,
Name Cressid, and thy life shall be as safe
As Priam is in Illion!

Diom. Faire Lady Cressid,
So plese you saue the thankes this Prince expects:
The lustre in your eye, heauen in your cheeke,
Pleades your faire visage, and to Diomed
You shall be mistresse, and command him wholly.

Troy. Grecian, thou do'st not vse me curteously,
To shame the seale of my petition towards,
I praising her. I tell thee Lord of Greece:
Shee is as farre high soaring o're thy praises,
As thou vnworthy to be cal'd her seruant:
I charge thee vse her well, euen for my charge:
For by the dreadfull Pluto, if thou do'st not,
(Though the great bulke Achilles be thy guard)
Ile cut thy throate.

Diom. Oh be not mou'd Prince Troylus;
Let me be priuiledg'd by my place and message,
To be a speaker free? when I am hence,
Ile answer to my lust: and know my Lord;
Ile nothing doe on charge: to her owne worth
She shall be priz'd: but that you say, be't so;
Ile speake it in my spirit and honor, no.

Troy. Come to the Port. Ile tell thee Diomed,
This braue, shall oft make thee to hide thy head:
Lady giue me your hand, and as we walke,
To our owne seloes bend we our needefull talke.

Sound Trumpet.

Par. Harke, Hellers Trumpet.

Æne. How haue we spent this morning
The Prince must thinke me tardy and remisse,
That swore to rude before him in the field.

Par. 'Tis Troylus fault: come, come, to field with him. Exeunt.

Dio. Let vs make ready straight.

Æne. Yes, with a Bridegroomes fresh alacritie
Let vs addresse to tend on Hellers heeles:
The glory of our Troy doth this day lye
On his faire worth, and single Chiualrie.

Enter Ajax armed, Achilles, Patroclus, Agamemnon, Menelaus, Vlisses, Nestor, Cakas, &c.

Aga. Here art thou in appointment fresh and faire,
Anticipating time. With starting courage,
Giue with thy Trumpet a loud note to Troy
Thou dreadfull Ajax, that the appaled aire
May pierce the head of the great Combatant,
And hale him hither.

Aia. Thou, Trumpet, ther's my purse;
Now crackle thy lungs, and split thy brasen pipe:
Blow villaine, till thy sphered Bias cheeke
Out-swell the collicke of puff Aquilon:
Come, stretch thy chest, and let thy eyes spout bloud:
Thou blowest for Hector.

Vlis. No Trumpet answers.

Achil. 'Tis but early days.

Aga. Is not yong Diomed with Calcas daughter?

Vlis. 'Tis he, I ken the manner of his gate,
He rises on the toe: that spirit of his
In aspiration lifts him from the earth.

Aga. Is this the Lady Cressid?

Dio. Euen she.

Aga. Most deerely welcome to the Greekes, sweete Lady.

Nest. Our Generall doth salute you with a kisse.

Vlis. Yet is the kindenesse but particular; 'twere better she were kist in generall.

Nest. And very courtly counsell: Ile begin. So much for Nestor.

Achil. Ile take that winter from your lips faire Lady Achilles bids you welcome.

Menel. I had good argument for kissing once.

Patro. But that's no argument for kissing now;
For thus pop't Paris in his hardiment.

Vlis. Oh deadly gall, and theame of all our scornes,
For which we loose our heads, to gild his hornes.

Patro. The first was Menelaus kisse, this mine
Patroclus kisses you.

Menel. Oh this is trim.

Patr. Paris and I kisse euermore for him.

Menel. Ile haue my kisse sir: Lady by your leaue.

Cres. In kissing doe you render, or receiue.

Patr. Both take and giue.

Cres. Ile make my match to line,
The kisse you take is better then you giue:
therefore no kisse.

Menel. Ile giue you boote, Ile giue you three for one.

Cres. You are an odde man, giue euen, or giue none.

Menel. An odde man Lady, every man is odde.

Cres. No, Paris is not; for you know 'tis true,
That you are odde, and he is euen with you.

Menel. You sillip me o'th' head.

Cres. No, Ile be sworne.

Vlis. It were no match, your naile against his horne:
May I sweete Lady beg a kisse of you?

Cres. You may.

Vlis. I doe desire it.

Cres. Why begge then?

Vlis. Why then for Venus sake, giue me a kisse:
When Helen is a maide againe, and his———

Cres. I am your debtor, claime it when 'tis due.

Cres. Never's my day, and men a kiss of you.
Dium. Lady a word, I'le being you to your Father
Nest. A woman of quicke sence.
Thy. Fie, fie, upon her:
There's a language in her eye, her cheeke, her lip;
Nay, her foote speakes, her wanton spirits looke out
At every joint, and motion of her body:
Oh these encounterers so glib of tongue,
That give a coasting welcome ere it comes;
And wide unclasp the tables of their thoughts,
To every ticklish reader: set them downe,
For sheeth (poyles of opportunitie;
And daughters of the game. Exeunt.

Enter all of Troy, Hector, Paris, Æneas, Helenus and Attendants. Flourish.

All. The Troiane Trumpet.
Agam. Yonder comes the troope.
Æne. Hailie all you state of Greece: what shalbe done
To him that victory commands? or do you purpose,
A victor shall be known: will you the Knightes
Shall to the edge of all extremities
Pursue each other, or shall be divided
By any voyce, or order of the field: Hector bad ayke?
Agam. Which way would Hector have it?
Æne. He cares not, he'le obey conditions.
Agam. 'Tis done like Hector, but securely done,
A little proudly, and great deale disprizing
The Knight oppos'd.
Æne. If not Achilles sir, what is your name?
Achil. If not Achilles, nothing.
Æne. Therefore Achilles but what ere, know this,
In the extremity of great and little:
Valour and pride excell themselves in Hector;
The greatest as infinite as all;
The other blushes as nothing: weigh him well:
And that which lookes like pride, is courtesie:
This Ajax is halfe made of Hectors blood;
In love whereof, half Hector stayes at home:
Halfe heart, halfe hand, halfe Hector, comes to fashe
This blended Knight, halfe Troian, and halfe Greeke.
Achil. A mazeden battaile then? O I perceiue you.
Agam. Here is sir, Diomed: goe gentle Knight,
Stand by our Ajax: as you and Lord Æneas
Consult upon the order of their fight,
So be it: either to the uttermost,
Or else a breach: the Combatants being kin,
Halfe stints their strife, before their strokes begin.
Thy. They are oppos'd already.
Agam. What Troian is that same that lookes so heavy?
Thy. The yongest Sonne of Priam;
A true Knight; they call him Troylus;
Not yet mature, yet matchlesse, firme of word,
Speaking in deedes, and deedelesse in his tongue;
Not soone provoak't, nor being provoak't, soone calm'd;
His heart and hand both open, and both free:
For what he has, he gives; what thinkes, he shewes;
Yet gives he not till judgement guide his bounty,
Nor dignifies an impaire thought with breath:
Manly as Hector, but more dangerous;
For Hector in his blaze of wrath subscribes
To tender objects; but he, in heate of action,
Is more vindicative then jealous love.
They call him Troylus; and on him erect,
A second hope, as fairely built as Hector.
Thus saies Æneas, one that knowes the youth,
Even to his inches: and with private soule,
Did in great Ilion thus translate him to me. Aloum.
Agam. They are in action.
Nest. Now Ajax hold thine owne.
Troy. Hector, thou sleep'st, awake thee.
Agam. His blowes are well disposed there Ajax. whispers.
Dium. You must no more. cease.
Æne. Princes enough, so please you.
Aja. I am not warme yet, let us fight again.
Dium. As Hector pleases.
Hect. Why then will I no more:
Thou art great Lord, my Fathers fathers Sonne;
A cousin german to great Priams seede:
The obligation of our blood forbids
A gorie emulation 'twixt us twaine:
Were thy commixtion, Greeke and Troian so,
That thou could'st say, this hand is Grecian all,
And this is Troian: the sinewes of this Legge,
All Greeke, and this all Troy: my Mothers blood
Runs on the dexter cheeke, and this sinister
Bounds in my fathers: by Jove multipotent,
Thou should'st not bear from me a Greekish member
Wherein my sword had not impressure made
Of our rankie feud: but the just gods gainsay,
That any drop thou borrow'd'st from thy mother,
My sacred Aunt, should by my mortall Sword
Be drained. Let me embrace thee Ajax:
By him that thunders, thou hast lusticke Armes;
Hector would have them fall upon him thus.
Cousin, all honor to thee.
Aja. I thanke thee Hector:
Thou art too gentle, and too free a man:
I came to kill thee Cousin, and bear hence
A great addition, earned in thy death.
Hect. Not Neoptolemus so mirable,
On whose bright crest, fame with her loud'st (O yes)
Cries, This is he; could'st promise to himselfe,
A thought of added honor, torne from Hector.
Æne. There is expectance here from both the sides,
What further you will doe?
Hect. We'le sort ere it:
The issue is embracement: Ajax, farewell.
Aja. If I might in entreaties finde success,
As seld I have the chance: I would desire
My famous Cousin to our Grecian Tents.
Dium. 'Tis Agamemnon wish, and great Achilles
Doth long to see unarm'd the valiant Hector.
Hect. Æneas, call my brother Troylus to me:
And signifie this loving enterview
To the expectors of our Troian part:
Desire them home. Give me thy hand, my Cousin:
I will goe eate with thee, and see your Knights.

Enter Agamemnon and the rest.

Aja. Great Agamemnon comes to meete us here.
Hect. The worthiest of them, tell me name by name:
But for Achilles, mine owne searching eyes
Shall finde him by his large and portly size.
Agam. Worthy of Armes: as welcome as to one
That would be rid of such an enemie.
But that's no welcome: understand more cleere
What's past, and what's to come, is strew'd with husks,
And formelesse ruine of oblivion:
But in this extant moment, faith and troth,
Strain'd purely from all hollow bias drawings
Bids thee with moist divine integritie,
From heart of very heart, great Hector welcome.
Hect. I thanke thee most imperious Agamemnon.

Aga. My well-fam'd Lord of Troy, no lesse to you.
Menel. Let me confirme my Princely brothers greeting,
You brace of warlike Brothers, welcome hitiher.
Hect. Who must we answer?
Æne. The Noble Menelaus.
Hect. O, you my Lord, by Mars his gauntlet thanks,
Mocke not, that I affect th'untraded Oath,
Your quondam wife swares still by Venus Glove
She's well, but bad me not commend her to you.
Menel. Name her not now sir, she's a deadly Theame.
Hect. O pardon, I offend.
Nest. I haue (thou gallant Troyan) seene thee oft
Labouring for destiny, make cruell way
Through ranks of Greekish youth: and I haue seen thee
As hot as Perseus, spurre thy Phrygian Steed,
And seeme thee scorning forfeits and subdurements,
When thou hast hung thy advanced sword i'th'ayre,
Not letting it decline, on the declined:
That I haue said vnto my standers by,
Loe Iupiter is yonder, dealing life.
And I haue seene thee pause, and take thy breath,
When that a ring of Greekes haue hem'd thee in,
Like an Olympian wrestling. This haue I seene,
But this thy countenance (still lockt in steele)
I never saw till now. I knew thy Grandsire,
And once fought with him; he was a Souldier good,
But by great Mars, the Captaine of vs all,
Never like thee. Let an olduan embrace thee,
And (worthy Warriour) welcome to our Tents.
Æne. Tis the old Nestor.
Hect. Let me embrace thee good old Chronicle,
That hast so long walk'd hand in hand with time:
Most reverend Nestor, I am glad to clasp thee
Nes. I would my armes could match thee in contention
As they contend with thee in courtesie.
Hect. I would they could.
Nest. Ha! by this white beard I'ld fight with thee to morrow. Well, welcom, welcome: I haue seen the time.
Vlys. I wonder now, how yonder City stands,
When we haue heere her Base and pillar by vs.
Hect. I know your fauour Lord Vlysses well.
Ah sir, there's many a Greeke and Troyan dead,
Since first I saw your selfe, and Diomed
In Illion, on your Greekish Embassie.
Vlys. Sir, I foretold you then what would ensue,
My prophesie is but halfe his iourney yet;
For yonder walls that pertly front your Towne,
Yond Towers, whose wanton tops do buffe the clouds,
Must kisse their owne feet.
Hect. I must not beleeue you:
There they stand yet: and modestly I thinke,
The fall of every Phrygian stone will cost
A drop of Grecian blood: the end crownes all,
And that old common Arbitrator, Time,
Will one day end it.
Vlys. So to him we leaue it.
Most gentle, and most valiant Hector, welcome;
After the Generall, I beseech you next
To Feast with me, and see me at my Tent.
Achil. I shall foretell thee Lord Vlysses, thou
Now Hector I haue fed mine eyes on thee,
I haue with exact view perus'd thee Hector,
And quoted ioynt by ioynt.
Hect. Is this Achilles?
Achil. I am Achilles.
Hect. Stand faire I prythee, let me looke on thee.
Achil. Behold thy fill.
Hect. Nay, I haue done already.
Achil. Thou art to breeze, I will the second time,
As I would buy thee, view thee, limbe by limbe.
Hect. O like a Booke of sport thou'lt reade me ore:
But there's more in me then thou vnderstand'st.
Why doest thou so oppresse me with thine eye?
Achil. Tell me you Heauens, in which part of his body
Shall I destroy him? Whether there, or there, or there,
That I may giue the locall wound a name,
And make distinct the very breach, where-out
Hector's great spirit flaw. Answer me heauens.
Hect. It would discredit the blest Gods, proud man,
To answer such a question: Stand againe;
Think'st thou to catch my life so pleasantly,
As to prenominate in nice conuecture
Where thou wilt hit me dead?
Achil. I tell thee yea.
Hect. Wert thou the Oracle to tell me so,
I'ld not beleeue thee: henceforth guard thee well,
For I'le not kill thee there, nor there, nor there,
But by the forge that stythied Mars his helme,
I'le kill thee every where, yea, ore and ore.
You wisest Grecians, pardon me this brragge,
His insolence drawes folly from my lips,
But I'le endeuour deeds to match these words,
Or may I neuer———
Aiax. Do not chase thee Cosin:
And you Achilles, let these threats alone
Till accident, or purpose bring you too't.
You may every day enough of Hector
If you haue stomacke. The generall state I feare,
Can scarse intreat you to be odde with him.
Hect. I pray you let vs see you in the field,
We haue had pelting Warres since you refus'd
The Grecians cause.
Achil. Dost thou intreat me Hector?
To morrow do I meete thee fell as death,
To night, all Friends.
Hect. Thy hand vpon that match.
Aga. First, all you Peeres of Greece go to my Tent,
There in the full conuiue you: Afterwards,
As Hectors leysure, and your bounties shall
Concurre together, seuerally intreat him,
Beate lowd the Taborins, let the Trumpets blow,
That this great Souldier may his welcome know. Exeunt
Troy. My Lord Vlysses, tell me I beseech you,
In what place of the Field doth Calchas keepe?
Vlys. At Menelaus Tent, most Princely Troylus,
There Diomed doth feast with him to night,
Who neither lookes on heauen, nor on earth,
But gives all gaze and bent of amorous view
On the faire Cressid.
Troy. Shall I (sweet Lord) be bound to thee so much,
After we part from Agamemnons Tent,
To bring me thither?
Vlys. You shall commend me sir:
As gentle tell me, of what Honour was
This Cressida in Troy, had she no Louer there
That wailes her absence?
Troy. O sir, to such as boasting shew their scarres,
A mocke is due: will you walke on my Lord?
She was belou'd, she lou'd; she is, and doorh;
But still sweet Loue is food for Fortunes tooth. Exeunt.

Enter Achilles and Patroclus.

Achil. I'le heat his blood with Greekish wine to nighe

Which

Which with my Cemitar Ile coole to morrow:
Patroclus, let vs Feast him to the hight.

Pat. Heere comes Thersites. Enter Thersites.

Achil. How now, thou core of Enuy?
Thou crusty batch of Nature, what's the newes?

Ther. Why thou picture of what thou seem'st, & I doll of Ideot-worshippers, here's a Letter for thee.

Achil. From whence, Fragment?

Ther. Why thou full dish of Foole, from Troy.

Pat. Who keepes the Tent now?

Ther. The Surgeons box, or the Patients wound.

Pat. Well said aduersity, and what need these tricks?

Ther. Prythee be silent boy, I profit not by thy talke, thou art thought to be Achilles male Varlot.

Patro. Male Varlot you Rogue: What's that?

Ther. Why his masculine Whore. Now the rotten diseases of the South, guts-griping Ruptures, Catarres, Loades a gravell i'th'backe, Lethargies, cold Palsies, and the like, take and take againe, such prepostrous discoueries.

Pat. Why thou damnable box of enuy thou, what mean'st thou to curse thus?

Ther. Do I curse thee?

Patr. Why no, you ruinous Butt, you whorson indistinguishable Cerre.

Ther. No? why art thou then exasperate, thou idle, immaterialll skiene of Sleyd silke; thou greene Sarcenet flap for a sore eye, thou tassell of a Prodigals purse thou: Ah how the poore world is pestred with such water-flies, diminutiues of Nature.

Pat. Out gall.

Ther. Finch Egge.

Achi. My sweet Patroclus, I am thwarted quite
From my great purpose in to morrowes battell:
Heere is a Letter from Queene Hecuba,
A token from her daughter, my faire Loue,
Both teaching me, and gaging me to keepe
An Oath that I haue sworne. I will not breake it,
Fall Greekes, faile Fame, Honor or go, or stay,
My maior vow lyes heere; this Ile obey:
Come, come Thersites, helpe to trim my Tent,
This night in banqueting must all be spent. Exit.
Away Patroclus.

Ther. With too much blood, and too little Brain, these two may run mad: but if with too much brame, and too little blood, they do, Ile be a curer of madmen. Here's Agamemnon, an honest fellow enough, and one that loues Quailes, but he has not so much Brains as eare-wax; and the goodly transformation of Iupiter there his Brother, the Bull, the primaue Statue, and oblique memorall of Cockolds, a thrifty shoong-horne in a chaine, hanging at his Brothers legge, to what forme but that he is, should wit larded with malice, and malice forced with wit, turne him too: to an Asse were nothing; hee is both Asse and Oxe; to an Oxe were nothing, hee is both Oxe and Asse: to be a Dogge, a Mule, a Cat, a Fitchew, a Toade, a Lizard, an Owle, a Puttocke, or a Herring without a Roe, I would not care: but to be Menelaus, I would conspire against Destiny. Ashe me not what I would be, if I were not Thersites: for I care not to bee the lowse of a Lazar, so I were not Menelaus. Hoy-day, spirits and fires.

Enter Hector, Aiax, Agamemnon, Vlysses, Nestor, Diomed, with Lights.

Aga. We go wrong, we go wrong.

Aiax. No yonder 'tis, there where we see the light.

Hect. I trouble you.

Aiax. No, not a whit.

Enter Achilles.

Vlys. Heere comes himselfe to guide you?

Achil. Welcome brave Hector, welcome Princes all.

Agam. So now faire Prince of Troy, I bid goodnight, Aiax commands the guard to tend on you.

Hect. Thanks, and goodnight to the Greeks general.

Men. Goodnight my Lord.

Hect. Goodnight sweet Lord Menelaus.

Ther. Sweet drought: sweet quoth-a? sweet sake, sweet sure.

Achil. Goodnight and welcome, both at once, to those that go, or tarry.

Aga. Goodnight.

Achil. Old Nestor tarries, and you too Diomed. Keepe Hector company an houre, or two.

Dio. I cannot Lord, I haue important businesse,
The tide whereof is now. goodnight great Hector

Hect. Giue me your hand.

Vlys. Follow his Torch, he goes to Calchas Tent,
Ile keepe you company.

Troy. Sweet sir, you honour me.

Hect. And so good night.

Achil. Come, come, enter my Tent. Exeunt.

Ther. That same Diomed is a false-hearted Rogue, a most vniust Knaue; I will no more trust him when he leeres, then I will a Serpent when he hisses: he will spend his mouth & promise, like Brabler the Hound; but when he performes, Astronomers foretell it, that is prodigious, there will come some change: the Sonne borrowes of the Moone when Diomed keepes his word. I will other leaue to see Hector, then not to dogge him they say. he keepes a Troyan Drab, and vses the Traitour Calchas his Tent. Ile after——— Nothing but Lecherie? All incontinent Varlets. Exeunt

Enter Diomed.

Dio. What are you vp here ho? speake?

Chal. Who cals?

Dio. Diomed, Calchas (I thinke) where's you Daughter?

Chal. She comes to you.

Enter Troylus and Vlysses.

Vlys. Stand where the Torch may not discouer vs.

Enter Cressid.

Troy. Cressid comes forth to him.

Dio. How now my charge?

Cres. Now my sweet gardian: heare a word with you.

Troy. Yea, so familiar?

Vlys. She will sing any man at first sight.

Ther. And any man may finde her, if he can take her like: she's noted.

Dio. Will you remember?

Cal. Remember? yes.

Dio. Nay, but doe then; and let your minde be coupled with your words.

Troy. What should she remember?

Vlys. List?

Cres. Sweete hony Greek, tempt me no more to folly.

Ther. Roguery.

Dio. Nay then.

Cres. Ile tell you what.

Dio. Fo, fo, come tell a pin, you are a forsworne.——

Cres. In faith I cannot: what would you haue me do?

Ther. A laughing trichs, to be secretly open.

Dio. What did you sweare you would bestow on me?

Cres. I prethee do not hold me to mine oath,
Bid me doe not any thing but that sweete Greeke.

Dio. Good

Dio. Good night.
Troy. Hold, patience.
Vlis. How now Troian?
Cres. Diomed.
Dio. No, no, good night: Ile be your foole no more.
Troy. Thy better must.
Cres. Harke one word in your eare.
Troy. O plague and madnesse:
Vlis. You are moued Prince, let vs depart I pray you,
Left your displeasure should enlarge it selfe
To wrathfull termes: this place is dangerous;
The time right deadly: I beseech you goe.
Troy. Behold, I pray you.
Vlis. Nay, good my Lord goe off:
You flow to great distraction. come my Lord?
Troy. I pray thee stay?
Vlis. You haue not patience, come.
Troy. I pray you stay? by hell and hell torments,
I will not speake a word.
Dio. And so good night.
Cres. Nay, but you part in anger.
Troy. Doth that grieue thee? O withered truth!
Vlis. Why, how now Lord?
Troy. By Ioue I will be patient.
Cres. Guardian? why Greeke?
Dio. Fo, fo, adew, you palter.
Cres. In faith I doe not: come hither once againe.
Vlis. You shake my Lord at something, will you goe
you will breake out.
Troy. She strokes his cheeke.
Vlis. Come, come.
Troy. Nay stay, by Ioue I will not speake a word.
There is betweene my will, and all offences,
A guard of patience; stay a little while.
Ther. How the deuill Luxury with his fat rumpe and potato finger, tickles these together: frye lechery, frye.
Dio. But will you then?
Cres. In faith I will lo; never trust me else.
Dio. Giue me some token for the surety of it.
Cres. Ile fetch you one. Exit.
Vlis. You haue sworne patience.
Troy. Feare me not sweete Lord.
I will not be my selfe, nor haue cognition
Of what I feele: I am all patience. Enter Cressid.
Ther. Now the pledge, now, now, now.
Cres. Here Diomed, keepe this Sleeue.
Troy. O beautie! where is thy Faith?
Vlis. My Lord.
Troy. I will be patient, outwardly I will.
Cres. You looke vpon that Sleeue? behold it well:
He loa'd me: O false wench: giue't me againe.
Dio. Whose was't?
Cres. It is no matter now I haue't againe.
I will not meete with you to morrow night:
I prythee Diomed visite me no more.
Ther. Now the sharpens: well fold Wherflame.
Dio. I shall haue it.
Cres. What, this?
Dio. I that.
Cres. O all you gods! O pretie, pretie pledge;
Thy Maister now lies thinking in his bed
Of thee and me, and sighes, and takes my Gloue,
And gives memorialls dainte kisses to it;
As I kisse thee.
Dio. Nay, doe not snatch it from me.
Cres. He that takes that, takes my heart withall.
Dio. I had your heart before, this followes it.
Troy. I did sweare patience.
Cres. You shall not haue it Diomed; faith you shall not:
Ile giue you something else.
Dio. I will haue this: whose was it?
Cres. It is no matter.
Dio. Come tell me whose it was?
Cres. 'Twas one that lou'd me better then you will.
But now you haue it, take it.
Dio. Whose was it?
Cres. By all Diomes waiting women yond:
And by her selfe, I will not tell you whose.
Dio. To morrow will I weare it on my Helme,
And grieue his spirit that dares not challenge it.
Troy. Wert thou the diuell, and wor'st it on thy horne,
It should be challeng'd.
Cres. Well, well, 'tis done, 'tis past; and yet it is not:
I will not keepe my word.
Dio. Why then farewell,
Thou never shalt mocke Diomed againe.
Cres. You shall not goe: one cannot speake a word,
But it straie starts you.
Dio. I doe not like this fooling.
Ther. Nor I by Pluto: but that that likes not me, pleases me best.
Dio. What shall I come? the hour.
Cres. I, come: O Ioue! doe, come: I shall be plagu'd.
Dio. Farewell till then. Exit.
Cres. Good night: I prythee come:
Troylus farewell; one eye yet looks on thee;
But with my heart, the other eye, doth see.
Ah poore our sexe; this fault in vs I finde:
The errour of our eye, directs our minde.
What errour leads, must errr: O then conclude,
Minds swai'd by eyes, are full of turpitude. Exit.
Ther. A proofe of strength she could not publish more;
Vnlesse she say, my minde is now turn'd whore.
Vlis. All's done my Lord.
Troy. It is.
Vlis. Why stay we then?
Troy. To make a recordation to my soule
Of every syllable that here was spoke:
But if I tell how these two did coact;
Shall I not lye, in publishing a truth?
Sith yet there is a credence in my heart:
An esperance so obstinately strong,
That doth insert that test of eyes and eares;
As if those organs had deceptio ns functions,
Created onely to calumniate.
Was Cressid here?
Vlis. I cannot conceive Troian.
Troy. She was not here.
Vlis. Most sure she was.
Troy. Why my negation hath no taste of madnesse?
Vlis. Nor mine my Lord: Cressid was here but now.
Troy. Let it not be beleeu'd for womanhood:
Thinke we had mothers; doe not give advantage
To stubborne Criticks, apt without a theame
For depravation, to square the generall sex
By Cressids rule. Rather thinke this not Cressid.
Vlis. What hath she done Prince, that can soyle our mothers?
Troy. Nothing at all, vnlesse that this were she.
Ther. Will he swagger himselfe out on's own eyes?
Troy. This she? no, this is Diomeds Cressida:
If beautie hath a soule, this is not she:

If soules guide vowes, if vowes are sanctimonie;
If sanctimonie be the gods delight:
If there be rule in vnitie it selfe,
This is not sinne: O madnesse of discourse!
That cause sets vp, with, and against thy selfe
By foule authoritie: where reason can reuolt
Without perdition, and loose assume all reason,
Without reuolt. This is, and is not Cressid:
Within my soule, there doth conduce a fight
Of this strange nature, that a thing inseperate,
Diuides more wider then the skie and earth:
And yet the spacious breadth of this diuision,
Admits no Orifex for a point as subtile,
As Arachnes broken woofe to enter:
Instance, O instance! strong as Pluttos gates:
Cressid is mine, tied with the bonds of heauen:
Instance, O instance, strong as heauen it selfe:
The bonds of heauen are slipt, dissolu'd and loos'd,
And with another knot, fiue finger tied,
The fractions of her faith, orts of her loue:
The fragments, scraps, the bits, and greasie reliquet,
Of her ore-eaten faith, are bound to Diomed.
Vlis. May worthy Troylus be halfe attached
With that which here his passion doth expresse?
Troy. I Greeke: and that shall be diuulged well
In Characters, as red as Mars his heart
Inflam'd with Venus: never did yong man fancy
With so eternall, and so fixt a soule.
Harke Greek: as much I doe Cressida loue;
So much by weight, hate I her Diomed.
That Sleeue is mine, that heele beare in his Helme:
Were it a Caske compos'd by Vulcans skill,
My Sword should bite it: Not the dreadfull spout,
Which Shipmen doe the Hurricano call,
Constring'd in masse by the almighty Fenne,
Shall dizzie with more clamour Neptunes eare
In his discent; then shall my prompted sword,
Falling on Diomed.
Ther. Heele tickle it for his concupie.
Troy. O Cressid! O false Cressid false, false, false:
Let all vntruths stand by thy stained name,
And theyle seeme glorious.
Vlis. O containe your selfe:
Your passion drawes eares hither.

Enter Æneas.

Æne. I haue beene seeking you this houre my Lord:
Hector by this is arming him in Troy.
Aiax your Guard, staies to conduct you home.
Troy. Haue with you Prince: my courteous Lord adieu:
Farewell reuolted faire: and Diomed,
Stand fast and weare a Castle on thy head.
Vli. He bring you to the Gates.
Troy. Accept distracted thankes.

Exeunt Troylus, Æneas and Vlisses.

Ther. Would I could meete that roague Diomed. I would croake like a Raven: I would bode, I would bode: Patroclus will giue me any thing for the intelligence of this whore: the Parrot will not doe more for an Almond, then he for a commodious drab: Lechery, lechery, still warres and lechery, nothing else holds fashion. A Warring diuell take them.

Enter Hector and Andromache.

And. When was my Lord so much vngently temper'd,
To stop his eares against admonishment?
Vnarme, vnarme, and doe not fight to day.
Hect. You trainе me to offend you: get you gone.
By the euerlasting gods, Ile goe.
And. My dreames will sure proue ominous to the day.
Hect. No more I say. Enter Cassandra.
Cass. Where is my brother Hector?
And. Here sister, armd, and bloudy in intent;
Consort with me in loud and deere petition:
Pursue we him on knees: for I haue dreampt
Of bloudy turbulence; and this whole night
Hath nothing beene but shapes, and formes of slaughter.
Cas. O, 'tis true.
Hect. Ho? bid my Trumpet sound.
Cas. No notes of sallie, for the heauens, sweet brother.
Hect. Begon I say: the gods haue heard me sweare.
Cas. The gods are deafe to hot and peruish vowes;
They are polluted offrings, more abhord
Then spotted Liuers in the sacrifice.
And. O be perswaded, doe not count it holy,
To hurt by being iust; it is as lawfull:
For we would count giue much to as violent thefts,
And rob in the behalfe of charitie.
Cas. It is the purpose that makes strong the vowe;
But vowes to every purpose must not hold:
Vnarme sweete Hector.
Hect. Hold you still I say;
Mine honour keepes the weather of my fate:
Life every man holds deere, but the deere man
Holds honor farre more precious, deere, then life.

Enter Troylus

How now yong man? mean'st thou to fight to day?
And. Cassandra, call my father to perswade.

Exit Cassandra.

Hect. No faith yong Troylus; doffe thy harnesse youth:
I am to day th'vsaine of Chiualrie:
Let grow thy Sinews till their knots be strong;
And tempt not yet the brushes of the warre.
Vnarme thee, goe; and doubt thou not brauе boy,
Ile stand to day, for thee, and me, and Troy.
Troy. Brother, you haue a vice of mercy in you;
Which better fits a Lyon, then a man.
Hect. What vice is that? good Troylus chide me for it.
Troy. When many times the captiue Grecian falls,
Euen in the fanne and winde of your faire Sword:
You bid them rise, and liue.
Hect. O 'tis faire play.
Troy. Fooles play, by heauen Hector.
Hect. How now? how now?
Troy. For ch'loue of all the gods
Let's leaue the Hermit Pity with our Mothers;
And when we haue our Armors buckled on,
The venom'd vengeance ride vpon our swords,
Spur them to ruthfull worke, rane them from ruth.
Hect. Fie saiage, fie.
Troy. Hector, then 'tis warres.
Hect. Troylus, I would not haue you fight to day.
Troy. Who should withhold me?
Not fate, obedience, nor the hand of Mars,
Beckning with fierie trunchion my retire;
Not Priamus, and Hecuba on knees;
Their eyes ore-gailed with recourse of teares;
Nor you my brother, with your true sword drawne
Oppos'd to hinder me, should stop my way:
But by my ruine.

Enter Priam and Cassandra.

Cas. Lay hold vpon him Priam, hold him fast:
He is thy crutch; now if thou loose thy stay,
Then on him leaning, and all Troy on then,

Fall all together.

Priam. Come Hector, come, goe backe:
Thy wife hath dreamt: thy mother hath had visions;
Cassandra doth foresee; and I my selfe,
Am like a Prophet suddenly enrapt,
to tell thee that this day is ominous:
Therefore come backe.

Hect. Æneas is a field,
And I do stand engag'd to many Grecks,
Even in the faith of valour, to appeare
This morning to them.

Priam. I, but thou shalt not goe.

Hect. I must not breake my faith:
You know me dutifull, therefore deare sir,
Let me not shame respect; but give me leave
To take that course by your consent and voyce,
Which you doe here forbid me, Royall Priam.

Cass. O Priam, yeelde not to him.

And. Doe not deere father.

Hect. Andromache I am offended with you:
Vpon the love you beare me, get you in.

Exit Andromache.

Troy. This foolish, dreaming, superstitious girle,
Makes all these bodements.

Cass. O farewell, deere Hector:
Looke how thou dies; looke how thy eye turnes pale:
Looke how thy wounds doth bleede at many vents:
Harke how Troy roares; how Hecuba cries out;
How poore Andromache shrils her dolous forth;
Behold distraction, frenzie, and amazement,
Like madde Antickes one another meete,
And all cry Hector, Hectors dead: O Hector!

Troy. Away, away.

Cas. Farewell: yes, soft: Hector I take my leave;
Thou do'st thy selfe, and all our Troy deceive. Exit.

Hect. You are amaz'd, my Liege, at her exclaime:
Goe in and cheere the Towne, weele forth and fight:
Doe deedes of praise, and tell you them at night.

Priam. Farewell: the gods with safetie stand about thee. Alarum.

Troy. They are at it, hearke: proud Diomed, believe
I come to loose my arme, or winne my loove.

Enter Pandar.

Pand. Doe you heare my Lord? do you heare?

Troy. What now?

Pand. Here's a Letter come from yond poore girle.

Troy. Let me reade.

Pand. A whorson tiscick, a whorson rascally tiscick, so troubles me; and the foolish fortune of this girle, and what one thing, what another, that I shall leave you one o'th' dayes: and I have a rheume in mine eyes too; and such an ache in my bones; that unlesse a man were curst, I cannot tell what to thinke on't. What sayes thee there?

Troy. Words, words, meere words, no matter from the heart;
Th'effect doth operate another way.
Goe wind to wind, there turne and change together:
My love with words and errors still she feedes;
But edifies another with her deedes.

Pand. Why, but heare you?

Troy. Hence brother lackie; ignomie and shame
Pursue thy life, and live aye with thy name.

A Lavum. Exeunt.

Enter Thersites in armes.

Ther. Now they are clapper-chawing one another, I'le goe looke on: that dissembling abhominable varlet Diomeds, has got that same scurvie, doting, foolish yong knaue Sleeve of Troy, there in his Helme: I would fame fee them meet, that, that same yong Trojan asse, that loves the whore there, might send that Greekish whore-masterly villaine, with the Sleeve, backe to the dissembling luxurious drabbe, of a sleeveless errant. O'th' other side, the politicke of those crafte sweaing rascals; that stole old Mouse-eaten dry cheese, Nestor: and that same dog-fonne Pistor is not prou'd worth a Black-berry. They set me vp in policie, that mongrill curre Aiax, against that dogge of as bad a kinde, Achilles. And now is the curre Aiax prouder then the curre Achilles, and will not arme to day. Whereupon, the Grecians began to proclaime barbarisme; and policie growes into an ill opinion.

Enter Diomed and Troylus.

Soft, here comes Sleeve, and th'other.

Troy. Flye not: for should'st thou take the River Styx,
I would swim after.

Dom. Thou do'st miscall retire:
I doe not flye; but advantagious care
Withdrew me from the odds of multitude:
Have at thee?

Ther. Hold thy whore Grecian. now for thy whore Trojan: Now the Sleeve, now the Sleeve.

Enter Hector.

Hect. What art thou Greekish? thou for Hectors match.
Art thou of blood, and honour?

Ther. No, no: I am a rascall: a scurvie railing knave: a very filthy rogue.

Hect. I doe believe thee, live.

Ther God send me mercy, that thou wilt believe me; but a plague breake thy necke—for frighting me: what's become of the wenching rogues? I thinke they have swallowed one another. I would laugh at that miracle—yet in a sort, lecherie eates it selfe: I'le seeke them. Exit.

Enter Diomed and Servants.

Dio. Goe, goe, my servant, take thou Troylus Horse;
Present the faire Steede to my Lady Cressid:
Follow, commend my service to her beauty;
Tell her, I have chastis'd the amorous Troyan.
And sent her Knight by proofe

Ser. I goe my Lord Enter Agamemnon.

Aga. Renew, renew, the fierce Polidamas
Hath beaten downe Menon bastard Margarelon
Hath Dorcus prisoner.
And stands Calossus-wise waving his beame,
Vpon the pashed corses of the Kings:
Epistrophus and Cedius, Polixenes is slaine;
Amphimacus, and Thoas deadly hurt;
Patroclus tane or slaine, and Palamedes
Sore hurt and bruised; the dreadfull Sagittary
Appaals our numbers, haste we Diomed
To re-enforcement, or we perish all.

Enter Nestor.

Nest. Goe beare Patroclus body to Achilles,
And bid the snaile-pac'd Aiax arme for shame;
There is a thousand Hectors in the field:
Now here he fights on Galathe his Horse,
And there lacks worke; anon he's there afoot,
And there they flye or dye, like scaled sculls,

Before

Before the belching Whale; then is he yonder,
And there the strutting Greekes, ripe for his edge,
Fall downe before him, like the mowers swath;
Here, there, and every where, he leaues and takes;
Dexterrite so obeying appetite,
That what he will, he does, and does so much,
That proofe is call'd impossibility.

Enter Vlisses.

Vlis. Oh, courage, courage Princes: great Achilles
Is arming, weeping, cursing, vowing vengeance;
Patrocles wounds houe rouz'd his drowzie blood,
Together with his mangled Myrmidons,
That noselesse, handlesse, hackt and chips, come to him;
Crying on Hector. Aiax hath lost a friend,
And foames at mouth, and he is arm'd, and at it:
Roaring for Troylus; who hath done to day,
Mad and fantastick execution;
Engaging and redeeming of himselfe.
With such a careless force, and forcelesse care,
As if that luck in very spight of cunning, bad him win all.

Enter Aiax.

Aia. Troylus, thou coward Troylus. Exit.
Dio. I, there, there.
Nest. So, so, we drew together. Exit.

Enter Achilles.

Achil. Where is this Hector?
Come, come, thou boy-queller, shew thy face:
Know what it is to meete Achilles angry.
Hector, where's Hector? I will none but Hector Exit.

Enter Aiax.

Aia. Troylus, thou coward Troylus, shew thy head.

Enter Diomed.

Diom. Troylus, I say, where's Troylus?
Aia. What would'st thou?
Diom. I would correct him.
Aia. Were I the Generall,
Thou should'st haue my office,
Ere that correction: Troylus I say, what Troylus?

Enter Troylus.

Troy. Oh traitour Diomed!
Turne thy false face thou traytor,
And pay thy life thou owest me for my horse.
Dio. Ha, art thou there?
Aia. Ile fight with him alone, stand Diomed.
Dio. He is my prize, I will not looke vpon.
Troy. Come both you coging Greekes, haue at you both. Exit Troylus.

Enter Hector.

Hect. Yea Troylus? O well fought my yongest Brother.

Enter Achilles.

Achil. Now doe I see thee; haue at thee Hector.
Hect. Pause if thou wilt.
Achil. I doe disdaine thy curtesie, proud Troian;
Be happy that my armes are out of vse:
My rest and negligence befriends thee now,
But thou anon shalt heare of me againe:
Till when, goe seeke thy fortune. Exit.
Hect. Fare thee well:
I would haue beene much more a fresher man,
Had I expected thee: how now my Brothers?

Enter Troylus.

Troy. Aiax hath tane Aenear; shall it be?
No, by the flame of yonder glorious heauen,
He shall not carry him: Ile be tane too,
Or bring him off: Fate heare me what I say;
I weake not, though thou end my life to day. Exit

Enter one in Armour.

Hect. Stand, stand, thou Greeke,
Thou art a goodly marke:
No? wilt thou not? I like thy armour well,
Ile frush it, and vnlocke the riuets all,
But Ile be master of it: wilt thou not beast abide?
Why then fye on, Ile hunt thee for thy hide. Exit.

Enter Achilles with Myrmidons.

Achil. Come here about me you my Myrmidons
Marke what I say; attend me where I wheele:
Strike not a stroake, but keepe your selues in breath,
And when I haue the bloody Hector found,
Empale him with your weapons round about.
In fellest manner execute your arme.
Follow me sirs, and my proceedings eye;
It is decreed, Hector the great must dye. Exit.

Enter Thersites, Menelaus, and Paris.

Ther The Cockold and the Cuckold maker are at it:
now bull, now dogge, loue; Paris loue; now my double hen'd sparrow; loue Paris, loue; the bull has the game: ware hornes ho?

Exit Paris and Menelaus.

Enter Bastard.

Bast. Turne slaue and fight.
Ther. What art thou?
Bast. A Bastard Sonne of Priamo
Ther. I am a Bastard too, I loue Bastards, I am a Bastard begot, Bastard instructed, Bastard in mande, Bastard in valour, in every thing illegitimate: one Beare will not bite another, and wherefore should one Bastard? take heede, the quarrel's most ominous to vs: if the Sonne of a whore fight for a whore, he tempts iudgement: farewell Bastard.
Bast. The diuell take thee coward. Exeunt.

Enter Hector.

Hect. Most putrified core so faire without:
Thy goodly armour thou hath cost thy life.
Now is my daies worke done; Ile take good breath:
Rest Sword, thou hast thy fill of blood and death.

Enter Achilles and his Myrmidons.

Achil. Looke Hector how the Sonne begins to set;
How vgly night comes breathing at his heeles,
Even with the vaile and darking of the Sunne.
To close the day vp, Hectors life is done.
Hect. I am vnarm'd, forgot this vantage Greeke.
Achil Strike fellowes, strike, this is the man I seeke.
So Illion fall thou: now Troy sinke downe;
Here lyes thy heart, thy sinewes, and thy bone.
On Myrmidons, cry you all a maine,
Achilles hath the mighty Hector slaine. Retreat.
Harke, a retreat vpon our Grecian part.
Gre. The Troian Trumpets sounds the like my Lord.
Achi. The dragon wing of night ore-spreds the earth
And stickler-like the Armies seperates
My half supt Sword, that frankly would haue fed,
Pleas'd with this dainty bed; thus goes to bed.
Come, tye his body to my horses tayle;
Along the field, I will the Troian traile. Exeunt.

Sound Retreat. Shout.

Enter Agamemnon, Aiax, Menelaus, Nestor Diomed, and the rest marching.

Aga. Harke, harke, what shout is that?
Nest. Peace Drums.

Sol. Achilles

Bold. Achilles, Achilles, Hector's slaine. Achilles.

Dio. The bruteis, Hector's slaine, and by Achilles.

Aen. If it be so yet bragliesse let it be:
Great Hector was a man as good as he.

Agam. March pensively along; let one be sent
To pray Achilles see vs at our Tent.
If so his death the gods haue vs befriended.
Great Troy is ours, and our sharpe wars are ended. Exeunt

Enter Æneas, Paris, Antenor and Deiphobus.

Æne. Stand hoe, yet are we maisters of the field,
Never goe home; here starue we out the night.

Enter Troylus.

Troy. Hector is slaine.

All. Hector? the gods forbid.

Troy. Hee's dead: and at the murtherers Horses taile,
In beastly sort, drag'd through the shamefull Field.
Frowne on you heauens, effect your rage with speede:
Sit gods vpon your thrones, and smile at Troy.
I say at once, let your brieffe plagues be mercy,
And linger not our sure destructions on.

Æne. My Lord, you doe discomfort all the Hoste.

Troy. You vnderstand me not, that tell me so:
I doe not speake of flight, of feare, of death,
But dare all imminence that gods and men,
Addresse their dangers in. Hector is gone:
Who shall tell Priam so? or Hecuba?
Let him that will a screechoule aye be call'd,
Goe in to Troy, and say there, Hector's dead:
There is a word will Priam turne to stone;
Make wels, and Niobes of the maides and wiues;
Coole statues of the youth: and in a word,
Scarre Troy out of it selfe. But march away,
Hector is dead: there is no more to say.
Stay yet: you vile abhominable Tents,
Thus proudly pight vpon our Phrygian plaines:
Let Titan rise as early as he dare,
I'le through, and through you; & thou great sta'd coward:
No spare of Earth shall sunder our two hates,
I'le haunt thee, like a wicked conscience still,
That mouldeth goblins swift as frenzies thoughts.
Strike a free march to Troy, with comfort goe:
Hope of reuenge, shall hide our inward woe.

Enter Pandarus.

Pand. But heare you? heare you?

Troy. Hence broker, lackie, ignomy, and shame
Pursue thy life and liue aye with thy name. Exeunt.

Pan. A goodly medcine for mine aking bones! o world, world, world! thus is the poore agent despisde: Oh traitours and bawdes; how earnestly are you set a worke, and how ill requited? why shouldst our indeuour be so desir'd, and the performance so loath'd? What Verse for it? what instance for it? let me see.
Full merrily the humble Bee doth sing,
Till he hath lost his honey, and his sting.
And being once subdu'd in armed taile,
Sweete honey, and sweete notes together faile.
Good traders in the flesh, set this in your painted cloathes;
As many as be here of Pandars hall,
Your eyes halfe out, weepe out at Pandar's fall;
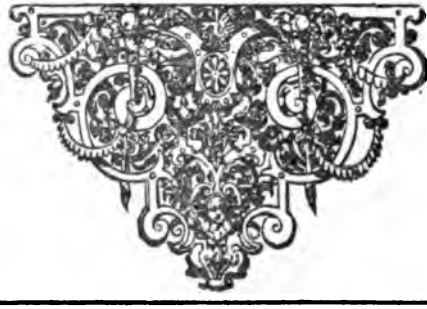
Or if you cannot weepe, yet giue some groanes;
Though not for me, yet for your aking bones:
Brethren and sisters of the hold-dore trade,
Some two months hence, my will shall here be made:
It should be now, but that my feare is this:
Some galled Goose of Winchester would hisse:
Till then, I'le sweate, and seeke about for eases;
And at that time bequeath you my diseases. Exeunt.

¶¶¶

FINIS.



The Tragedy of Coriolanus.

Actus Primus. Scœna Prima.

Enter a Company of Mutinous Citizens, with Staues, Clubs, and other weapons.

1. Citizen.

BEfore we proceed any further, heare me speake.

All. Speake, speake.

1. Cit. You are all resolu'd rather to dy then to famish?

All. Resolu'd, resolu'd.

1. Cit. First you know, Caius Martius is chiefe enemy to the people.

All. We know't, we know't.

1. Cit. Let vs kill him, and wee'l haue Corne at our own price. Is't a Verdict?

All. No more talking on't; Let it be done, away, away

2. Cit. One word, good Citizens.

1. Cit. We are accounted poore Citizens, the Patricians good: what Authority surfets one, would releeue vs. If they would yeelde vs but the superfluitie while it were wholsome, wee might guesse they releeued vs humanely: But they thinke we are too deere, the leanenesse that afflicts vs, the obiect of our misery, is as an inuentory to particularize their abundance, our sufferance is a gaine to them. Let vs reuenge this with our Pikes, ere we become Rakes. For the Gods know, I speake this in hunger for Bread, not in thirst for Reuenge.

2. Cit. Would you proceede especially against Caius Martius.

All. Against him first: He's a very dog to the Commonality.

2. Cit. Consider you what Services he has done for his Country?

1. Cit. Very well, and could bee content to giue him good report for't, but that hee payes himselfe with being proud.

All. Nay, but speak not maliciously.

1. Cit. I say vnto you, what he hath done Famously, he did it to that end: though soft conscienc'd men can be content to say it was for his Country, he did it to please his Mother, and to be partly proud, which he is, even to the altitude of his vertue.

2. Cit. What he cannot helpe in his Nature, you account a Vice in him: You must in no way say he is coetous.

1. Cit. If I must not, I neede not be barren of Accusations he hath faults (with surplus) to tyre in repetition.

Shouts within.

What shouts are these? The other side o'th City is risen: why stay we prating heere? To th Capitoll.

All. Come, come.

1 Cit. Soft, who comes heere?

Enter Menenius Agrippa.

2 Cit. Worthy Menenius Agrippa, one that hath always lou'd the people.

1 Cit. He's one honest enough, would al the rest were so.

Men. What worke's my Countrymen in hand? Where go you with Bats and Clubs? The matter Speake I pray you.

2 Cit. Our busines is not vnknowne to th Senat, they haue had inkling this fortnight what we intend to do, & now wee'l shew em in deeds: they say poore Suters haue strong breaths, they shal know we haue strong arms too.

Menen. Why Masters, my good Friends, mine honest Neighbours, will you vndo your selues?

2 Cit. We cannot Sir, we are vndone already.

Men. I tell you Friends, most charitable care
Haue the Patricians of you for your wants.
Your suffering in this dearth, you may as well
Strike at the Heauen with your staues, as lift them
Against the Roman State, whose course will on
The way it takes: cracking ten thousand Curbes
Of more strong linke assunder, then can euer
Appeare in your impediment. For the Dearth,
The Gods, not the Patricians make it, and
Your knees to them (not armes) must helpe. Alacke,
You are transported by Calamity
Thether, where more attends you, and you slanders
The Helmes o'th State; who care for you like Fathers,
When you curse them, as Enemies.

2 Cit. Care for vs? True indeed, they were cur'd for vs yet. Suffer vs to famish, and their Store-houses crammed with Graine: Make Edicts for Vsurie, to support Vsurers; repeale daily any wholsome Act established against the rich, and prouide more piercing Statutes daily, to chaine vp and restraine the poore. If the Warres eate vs not vppe, they will; and there's all the loue they beare vs.

Menen. Either you must
Confesse your selues wondrous Malicious,
Or be accus'd of Folly. I shall tell you
A pretty Tale, it may be you haue heard it,
But since it serues my purpose, I will venture
To scale't a little more.

2 Citizen. Well,
Ile heare it Sir: yet you must not think
To fobbe off our disgrace with a tale:
But and't please you deliuer.

Men. There was a time, when all the bodies members
Rebell'd against the Belly; thus accus'd it:
That only like a Gulfe it did remaine

I'th midd'ft a th'body, idle and vnactiue.
Still cubbording the Viand, never bearing
Like labour with the rest, where th'other Instruments
Did see, and heare, deuise, instruct, walke, feele,
And mutually participate, did minister
Vnto the appetite; and affection common
Of the whole body, the Belly answer'd.

2. Cit. Well sir, what answer made the Belly.

Men. Sir, I shall tell you with a kinde of Smile,
Which ne're came from the Lungs, but even thus:
For looke you I may make the belly Smile,
As well as speake, it taintingly replyed
To th'discontented Members, the mutinous parts
That enuied his receiste: euen so most fitly,
As you maligne our Senators, for that
They are not such as you.

2. Cit. Your Bellies answer: What
The Kingly crown'd head, the vigilant eye,
The Counsailor Heart, the Arme our Souldier,
Our Steed the Legge, the Tongue our Trumpeter,
With other Muniments and petty helpes
In this our Fabricke, if that they

Men. What then? Foreme, this Fellow speakes.
What then? What then?

2 Cit. Should by the Cormorant belly be restram'd,
Who is the sinke a th'body.

Men. Well, what then?

2. Cit. The former Agents, if they did complaine,
What could the Belly answer?

Men. I will tell you,
If you'l bestow a small (of what you haue little)
Patience awhile; you'l heare the Bellies answer

2. Cit. Y'are long about it.

Men. Note me this good Friend;
Your most graue Belly was deliberate,
Not rash like his Accusers, and thus answered.
True is it my Incorporate Friends (quoth he)
That I receiue the generall Food at first
Which you do liue vpon: and fit it is,
Because I am the Store-house, and the Shop
Of the whole Body. But, if you do remember,
I send it through the Riuers of your blood
Euen to the Court, the Heart, to th'seate o th'Braine,
And through the Cranks and Offices of man,
The strongest Nerues, and small inferiour Veines
From me receiue that naturall competencie
Whereby they liue. And though that all at once
(You my good Friends, this sayes the Belly) marke me.

2. Cit. I sir, well, well.

Men. Though all at once, cannot
See what I do deliuer out to each,
Yet I can make my Audit vp, that all
From me do backe receiue the Flowre of all,
And leaue me but the Bran. What say you too't?

2 Cit. It was an answer, how apply you this?

Men. The Senators of Rome, are this good Belly,
And you the mutinous Members: For examine
Their Counsailes, and their Cares, digest things rightly,
Touching the Weale a'th Common, you shall finde
No publique benefit which you receiue
But it proceeds, or comes from them to you,
And no way from your selues. What do you thinke?
You, the great Toe of this Assembly?

2. Cit. I the great Toe? Why the great Toe?

Men. For that being one o'th lowest, basest, poorest
Of this most wise Rebellion, thou goest formost:
Thou Rascall, that art worst in blood to run,
Lead'st first to win some vantage.
But make you ready your stiffe bats and clubs,
Rome, and her Rats, are at the point of battell,
The one side must haue baile.

Enter Caius Martius.

Hayle, Noble Martius.

Mar. Thanks. What's the matter you dissentious rogues
That rubbing the poore Itch of your Opinion,
Make your selues Scabs.

2. Cit. We haue ever your good word.

Mar. He that will give good words to thee, will flatter
Beneath abhorring. What would you haue, you Curres,
That like not Peace, nor Warre? The one affrights you,
The other makes you proud. He that trusts to you,
Where he should finde you Lyons, finds you Hares:
Where Foxes, Geese you are: No sorer, no,
Then is the coale of fire vpon the Ice,
Or Hailstone in the Sun. Your Vertue is,
To make him worthy, whose offence subdues him,
And curse that Iustice did it. Who deserues Greatnes,
Deserues your Hate: and your Affections are
A sickmans Appetite; who desires most that
Which would encrease his euill. He that depends
Vpon your fauours, swimmes with fins of Leade,
And hewes downe Oakes, with rushes. Hang ye: trust ye?
With every Minute you do change a Minde,
And call him Noble, that was now your Hate:
Him vilde, that was your Garland. What's the matter,
That in these seuerall places of the Citie,
You cry against the Noble Senate, who
(Vnder the Gods) keepe you in awe, which else
Would feede on one another? What's their seeking?

Men. For Corne at their owne rates, whereof they say
The Citie is well stor'd.

Mar. Hang 'em: They say?
They'l sit by th'fire, and presume to know
What's done i'th Capitoll: Who's like to rise,
Who thriues, & who declines: Side factions, & giue out
Conjecturall Marriages, making parties strong,
And feebling such as stand not in their liking,
Below their cobled Shoes. They say ther's grain enough?
Would the Nobility lay aside their ruth,
And let me vse my Sword, I'de make a Quarrie
With thousands of these quarter'd slaues, as high
As I could pick my Lance.

Menen. Nay these are almost thoroughly perswaded:
For though abundantly they lacke discretion
Yet are they passing Cowardly. But I beseech you,
What sayes the other Troope?

Mar. They are dissolu'd: Hang em;
They said they were an hungry, sigh'd forth Prouerbes
That Hunger-broke stone walls: that dogges must eate
That meate was made for mouths. That the gods sent not
Corne for the Richmen onely: With these shreds
They vented their Complainings, which being answer'd
And a petition granted them, a strange one,
To breake the heart of generosity,
And make bold power looke pale, they threw their caps
As they would hang them on the hornes a'th Moone,
Shouting their Emulation.

Menen. What is graunted them?

Mar. Fiue Tribunes to defend their vulgar wisdoms
Of their owne choice. One's Iunius Brutus,
Sicinius Velutus, and I know not. Sdeath,

The

The rabble should haue first vnroo'ft the City
Ere so preuayl'd with me; it will in time
Win vpon power, and throw forth greater Theames
For Insurrections arguing.

Menen. This is strange.

Mar. Go get you home you Fragments.

Enter a Messenger hastily.

Mess. Where's Caius Martius?

Mar. Heere: what's the matter?

Mes. The newes is he, the Volcies are in Armes.

Mar. I am glad on't, then we shall ha meanes to vent Our musiie superfluity. See our best Elders.

Enter Sicinius Velutus, Annius Brutus Cominius, Titus Lartius, with other Senators.

1. Sen. Martius 'tis true, that you haue lately told vs, The Volces are in Armes.

Mar. They haue a Leader,
Tullus Auffidius that will put you too't:
I sinne in enuying his Nobility:
And were I any thing but what I am,
I would wish me onely he.

Com. You haue sought together?

Mar. Were halfe to halfe the world by th'eares, & he upon my partie, I'd reuolt to make
Onely my warres with him. He is a Lion
That I am proud to hunt.

1. Sen. Then worthy Martius,
Attend vpon Cominius to these Warres.

Com. It is your former promise.

Mar. Sir it is,
And I am constant: Titus Lucius, thou
Shalt see me once more strike at Tullus face
What art thou stiffe? Stand'ft out?

Tit. No Caius Martius,
Ile leane vpon one Crutch, and fight with tother,
Ere stay behinde his Business.

Men. Oh true-bred.

Sen. Your Company to'th Capitoll, where I know
Our greatest Friends attend vs.

Tit. Lead you on: Follow Cominius, we must follow you, right worthy you Priority.

Com. Noble Martius.

Sen. Hence to your homes, be gone.

Mar. Nay let them follow,
The Volces haue much Corne: take these Rats thither,
To gnaw their Garners. Worshipfull Mutiners,
Your valour puts well forth: Pray follow. Exeunt.

Citizens steale away. Manet Sicin. & Brutus.

Sicin. Was ever man so proud as is this Martius?

Bru. He has no equall.

Sicin. When we were chosen Tribunes for the people.

Bru. Mark'd you his lip and eyes.

Sicin. Nay, but his taunts.

Bru. Being mov'd, he will not spare to gird the Gods.

Sicin. Bemocke the modest Moone.

Bru. The present Warres deuoure him, he is growne Too proud to be so valiant.

Sicin. Such a Nature, tickled with good successe, disdaines the shadow which he treads on at noone, but I do wonder, his insolence can brooke to be commanded vnder Cominius?

Bru. Fame, at the which he aymes,
In whom already he's well grac'd, cannot
Better be held, not more attain'd then by
A place below the first: for what miscariies
Shall be the Generals fault, though he performe
To th'vtmost of a man, and giddy censure
Will then cry out of Martius. Oh, if he Had borne the business.

Sicin. Besides, if things go well,
Opinion that so stickes on Martius, shall
Of his demerits rob Cominius.

Bru. Come: half all Cominius Honors are to Martius
Though Martius earn'd them not: and all his faults
To Martius shall be Honors, though indeed
In ought he merit not.

Sicin. Let's hence, and heare
How the dispatch is made, and in what fashion
More than his singularity, he goes
Vpon this present Action.

Bru. Let's along. Exeunt

Enter Tullus Auffidius with Senators of Corioles.

1. Sen. So, your opinion is Auffidius,
That they of Rome are entred in our Counsailes,
And know how we proceede.

Auf. Is it not yours?
What euer haue bin thought on in this State
That could be brought to bodily act, ere Rome
Had circumuention: 'tis not foure dayes gone
Since I heard thence, these are the words, I thinke
I haue the Letter here: yes, heere it is;
They haue prest a Power, but it is not knowne
Whether for East or West: the Dearth is great,
The people Mutinous: And it is rumour'd,
Cominius, Martius your old Enemy
(Who is of Rome worse hated then of you)
And Titus Lartius, a most valiant Romon,
These three lead on this Preparation
Whether 'tis bent: most likely, 'tis for you:
Consider of it.

1. Sen. Our Armes in the Field:
We never yet made doubt but Rome was ready
To answer vs.

Auf. Nor did you thinke it folly,
To keepe your great pretences vayl'd, till when
They needs must shew themselues, which in the hatching
It seem'd appear'd to Rome. By the discovery,
We shalbe shortned in our ayme, which was
To take in many Townes, ere (almost) Rome
Should know we were a-foot.

2. Sen. Noble Auffidius,
Take your Commission, hye you to your Bands,
Let vs alone to guard Corioles
If they set downe before'e: for the remoue
Bring vp your Army: but (I thinke) you'l finde
Th'have not prepar'd for vs.

Auf. O doubt not that,
I speake from Certainties. Nay more,
Some parcels of their Power are forth already,
And onely hitherward. I leaue your Honors.
If we, and Caius Martius chance to meete,
'Tis sworne betweene vs, we shall ever strike
Till one can do no more.

All The Gods assist you.

Auf. And keepe your Honors safe.

1. Sen. Farewell.

2. Sen. Farewell.

All. Farewell. Exeunt omnes.

Enter Volumnia and Virgilia, mother and wife to Martius: They set them downe on two low stooles and sew.

Volum. I pray you daughter sing, or expresse your selfe in a more comfortable sort: If my Sonne were my Husband, I should freelier reioyce in that absence wherein he wonne Honor, then in the embracements of his Bed, where he would shew most loue. When yet hee was but tender-bodied, and the onely Sonne of my wombe; when youth with comelinesse pluck'd all gaze his way; when for a day of Kings entreaties, a Mother should not sell him an houre from her beholding; I considering how Honour would become such a person, that it was no better then Picture-like to hang by th'wall, if renowne made it not stirre, was pleas'd to let him seeke danger, where he was like to finde fame: To a cruell Warre I sent him, from whence he return'd, his browes bound with Oake. I tell thee Daughter, I sprang not more in ioy at first hearing he was a Man-child, then now in first seeing he had proued himselfe a man.

Virg. But had he died in the Businesse Madame, how then?

Volum. Then his good report should haue beene my Sonne, I therein would haue found issue. Heare me professe sincerely, had I a dozen sons each in my loue alike, and none lesse deere then thine, and my good Martius, I had rather had eleuen dye Nobly for their Countrey, then one voluptuously surfet out of Action.

Enter a Gentlewoman.

Gent. Madam, the Lady Valeria is come to visit you.

Virg. Beseech you giue me leaue to retire my selfe.

Volum. Indeed you shall not:
Me thinkes, I heare hither your Husbands Drumme:
See him plucke Auffidius downe by th'haire:
(As children from a Beare) the Volces shunning him:
Me thinkes I see him stamp thus, and call thus,
Come on you Cowards, you were got in feare
Though you were borne in Rome; his bloody brow
With his mail'd hand, then wiping, forth he goes
Like to a Harvest man, that task'd to mowe
Or all, or loose his hyre.

Virg. His bloody Brow? Oh Iupiter, no blood.

Volum. Away you Foole; it more becomes a man,
Then gilt his Trophe. The brests of Hecuba
When she did suckle Hector, look'd not lovelier
Then Hectors forhead, when it spit forth blood
At Grecian sword. Contemning, tell Valeria
We are fit to bid her welcome. Exit Gent.

Vir. Heavens blesse my Lord from fell Auffidius.

Vol. He'l beat Auffidius head below his knee,
And treade vpon his necke.

Enter Valeria with an Vsher, and a Gentlewoman.

Val. My Ladies both good day to you.

Vol. Sweet Madam.

Vir. I am glad to see your Ladyship.

Val. How do you both? You are manifest house-keepers. What are you sewing here? A fine spotte in good faith. How does your little Sonne?

Vir I thanke your Lady-ship: Well good Madam.

Val. He had rather see the swords, and heare a Drum, then loobe vpon his Schoolmaster.

Val. A my word the Fathers Sonne: Ile sweare 'tis a very pretty boy. A my troth, I look'd vpon him a Wednesday half an houre together: ha's such a confirm'd countenance. I saw him run after a gilded Butterfly, & when he caught it, he let it go againe, and after it again, and ouer and ouer he comes, and vp again: catcht it again: or whether his fall enrag'd him, or how 'twas, hee did sorrey his teeth, and teare it. Oh, I warrant how he mammocks it.

Vol. One on's Fathers moods.

Val. Indeed la, 'tis a Noble childe.

Virg. A Cracke Madam.

Val. Come, lay aside your stitchery, I must haue you play the idle Huswife with me this afternoone.

Virg. No (good Madam)
I will not out of doores.

Val. Not out of doores?

Volum. She shall, she shall.

Virg. Indeed no, by your patience; Ile not over the threshold, till my Lord returne from the Warres.

Val. Fye, you confine your selfe most vnreasonably: Come, you must go visit the good Lady that lies in.

Virg. I will wish her speedy strength, and visite her with my prayers: but I cannot go thither.

Volum. Why I pray you.

Virg. 'Tis not to saue labour, nor that I want loue.

Val. You would be another Penelope: yet they say, all the yearne she spun in Vlysses absence, did but fill Ithaca full of Mothes. Come, I would your Cambrick were sensible as your finger, that you might leave pricking it for pitie. Come you shall go with vs.

Vir. No good Madam, pardon me, indeed I will not forth.

Val. In troth la go with me, and Ile tell you excellent newes of your Husband.

Virg. Oh good Madam, there can be none yet.

Val. Verily I do not rest with you: there came newes from him last night.

Vir. Indeed Madam.

Val. In earnest it's true; I heard a Senator speake it. Thus it is: the Volcies have an Army forth, against whil Cominius the Generall is gone, with one part of our Romane power. Your Lord, and Titus Larcius, are set down before their Citie Corioles, they nothing doubt prevailing, and to make it breefe Warres. This is true on mine Honor, and so I pray go with vs.

Virg. Giue me excuse good Madame, I will obey you in every thing hereafter.

Val. Let her alone Ladie, as she is now:
She will but disease our better mirth.

Valeria. In troth I thinke she would:
Fare you well then. Come good sweet Ladie.
Prythee Virgilia turne thy solemnesse out a doore,
And go along with vs.

Virgil. No
At a word Madam; Indeed I must not,
I wish you much mirth.

Val. Well, then farewell. Exeunt Ladies

Enter Martius, Titus Larcius, with Drumme and Colours, with Captaines and Souldiers, as before the City Corioles: to them a Messenger.

Martius. Yonder comes Newes:
A Wager they haue met.

Lar. My horse to yours, no.

Mar. 'Tis done.

Lart. Agreed.

Mar.

Mar. Say, he's our Generall met the Enemy?
Mess. They lye in view, but have not spoke as yet.
Lart. So, the good Horse is mine.
Mart. Ile buy him of you.
Lart. No, Ile not sel, nor give him: Lend you him I will
For halfe a hundred years: Summon the Towne.
Mar. How farre off lie these Armies?
Mess. Within this mile and halfe.
Mar. Then shall we heare their Larum, & they Ours.
Now Mars, I prythee make vs quicke in worke,
That we with smoaking swords may march from hence
To helpe our fainted Friends. Come, blow thy blast.

They Sound a Parly: Enter two Senators with others on the Walles of Coriolus.

Tullus Auffidius, is he within your Walles?
1. Sen. No, not a man that feares you lesse then he,
That's lesser then a little: Drum a farre off.
Heaske, our Drummes
Are bringing forth our youth: We'l breake our Walles
Rather then they shall pound vs vp our Gates,
Which yet seeme shut, we have but pin'd with Rushes,
They'le open of themselves. Harke you, farre off
Alarum farre off.
There is Auffidius. List what work he makes Among'st your cloven Army.
Mart. Oh they are at it.
Lart. Their noise be our instruction. Ladders hoa.

Enter the Army of the Volces.

Mar. They feare vs not, but issue forth their Citie.
Now put your Shields before your hearts, and fight
With hearts more proofe then Shields.
Advance brave Titus,
They do disdaine vs much beyond our Thoughts, which makes me sweat with wrath. Come on my fellows
He that retires, Ile take him for a Volce,
And he shall feele mine edge.
Alarum, the Romans are beat back to their Trenches
Enter Martius Cursing.
Mar. All the contagion of the South light on you,
You Shames of Rome: you Heard of Byles and Plagues
Plaster you o're, that you may be abhorr'd
Farther then seene, and one infect another
Against the Winde a mile: you souldes of Geese,
That bestre the shapes of men, how have you run
From Slaves, that Apes would beate; Pluto and Hell,
All hurt behinde, backes red, and faces pale
With flight and agued feare, mend and chaege home,
Or by the fires of heaven, Ile leave the Foe,
And make my Warres on you: Looke to't: Come on,
If you'l stand fast, we'l beate them to their Wives,
As they vs to our Trenches followes.
Another Alarum, and Martius follows them to gates, and is shut in.
So, now the gates are ope: now prove good Seconds,
'Tis for the followers Fortune, widens them,
Not for the fyers: Marke me, and do the like.
Enter the Gate.
1. Sol. Foole-hardinesse, not I.
2. Sol. Not I.
1. Sol. See they have shut him in. Alarum continues
All. To th'pot I warrant him. Enter Titus Lartius
Tit. What is become of Martius?
All. Slaine (Sir) doubtlesse.
1. Sol. Following the Flyers at the very heeles,
With them he enters: who upon the sodaine
Clapt to their Gates, he is himselfe alone,
To answer all the City.
Lart. Oh Noble Fellow!
Who sensibly out-dares his senselesse Sword,
And when it bowes, stand'st vp: Thou art left Martius,
A Carbuncle entire: as big as thou art
Weare not so rich a Iewell. Thou was't a Souldier
Even to Cutius wish, not fierce and terrible
Onely in strokes, but with thy grim looke, and
The Thunder-like percussion of thy sounds
Thou mad'st thine enemies shake, as if the World
Were Feuerous, and did tremble.

Enter Martius bleeding, assaulted by the Enemy.

1. Sol. Looke Sir.
Lart. O 'tis Martius.
Let's fetch him off, or make remedie stiffe.
They fight, and all enter the City.
Enter certaine Romanes with spoiles.
1. Rom. This will I carry to Rome.
2. Rom. And I this.
3. Rom. A Murrain on't, I took this for Silver. exeunt.
Alarum continues still a-farre off.
Enter Martius, and Titus with a Trumpet.
Mar. See here these movers, that do prize their hours
At a crack'd Drachme: Cushions, Leaden Spoones,
Irons of a Doit, Doublets that Hangmen would
Bury with those that wore them. These base flatts,
Ere yet the fight be done, packe vp, downe with them.
And harke, what noyse the Generall makes: To him
There is the man of my soules hate, Auffidius,
Piercing our Romanes: Then Valiant Titus take
Convenient Numbers to make good the City,
Whil'st I with those that have the spirit, will haste
To helpe Cominius.
Lar. Worthy Sir, thou bleed'st,
Thy exercise hath bin too violent,
For a second course of Fight.
Mar. Sir, praise me not:
My worke hath yet not warm'd me. Fare you well:
The blood I drop, is rather Physicall
Than dangerous to me: To Auffidius thus, I will appear
Lar. Now the faire Goddesse Fortune, (and the fight.
Fall deepe in loue with thee, and her great charmes
Misguide thy Opposers swords. Bold Gentleman:
Prosperity be thy Page.
Mar. Thy Friend no lesse,
Then those she placeth highest: So farewell.
Lar. Thou worthiest Martius,
Go sound thy Trumpet in the Market place,
Call thither all the Officers o'th'Towne,
Where they shall know our minde. Away. Exeunt
Enter Cominius as it were in retire, with soldiers.
Com. Breath you my friends, well fought, we are come
Like Romans, neither foolish in our stands, (off,
Nor Cowardly in retyre: Believe me Sirs,
We shall be charg'd again. Whiles we have strooke
By interims and conveying gusts, we have heard
The Charges of our Friends. The Roman Gods,
Lead their successes, as we wish our owne,
That both our powers, with smiling Fronts encountring,
May give you thankfull Sacrifice. Thy Newes?
Enter a Messenger.
Mes. The Citizens of Coriolus have yelded,
And given to Lartius and to Martius Battaile:

I saw our party to their Trenches driuen,
And then I came away.
Com. Though thou speakest truth,
Me thinkes thou speak'st not well. How long is't since?
Mes. Aboue an houre, my Lord.
Com. 'Tis not a mile: briefly we heard their drummes.
How could'st thou in a mile confound an houre,
And bring thy Newes so late?
Mes. Spies of the Volces
Held me in chace, that I was forc'd to wheele
Three or foure miles about, else had I sir
Halfe an houre since brought my report.

Enter Martius.

Com. Whose yonder,
That doe's appeare as he were Flead? O Gods,
He has the stampe of Martius, and I haue
Before time seene him thus.
Mar. Come I too late?
Com. The Shepherd knowes not Thunder frõ a Tabor,
More then I know the sound of Martius Tongue
From every meaner man.
Martius. Come I too late?
Com. I, if you come not in the blood of others,
But mantled in your owne.
Mar. Oh! let me clip ye
In Armes as sound, as when I woo'd in heart;
As merry, as when our Nuptiall day was done,
And Tapers burnt to Bedward.
Com. Flower of Warriors, how is't with Titus Larthius?
Mar. As with a man busied about Decrees:
Condemning some to death, and some to exile,
Ransoming him, or pittying, threatning th'other;
Holding Coriolus in the name of Rome,
Euen like a fawning Grey-hound in the Leash,
To let him slip at will.
Com. Where is that Slaue
Which told me they had beate you to your Trenches?
Where is he? Call him hither.
Mar. Let him alone,
He did informe the truth: but for our Gentlemen,
The common file, (a plague Tribunes for them)
The Mouse ne're shunn'd the Cat, as they did budge
From Rascals worse then they.
Com. But how preuail'd you?
Mar. Will the time seruе to tell, I do not thinke:
Where is the enemy? Are you Lords a'th Field?
If not, why cease you till you are so?
Com. Martius, we have at disaduantage fought,
And did retyre to win our purpose.
Mar. How lies their Bateell? Know you on w̃ side
They have plac'd their men of trust?
Com. As I guesse Martius,
Their Bands i'th Vaward are the Antiennes
Of their best trust: O're them Auffidius,
Their very heart of Hope.
Mar. I do beseech you,
By all the Battailes wherein we haue fought,
By th'Blood we haue shed together,
By th'Vowes we haue made
To endure Friends, that you directly set me
Against Auffidius, and his Antiates,
And that you not delay the present (but Filling the aire with Swords aduanc'd) and Darts,
We prouе this very houre.
Com. Though I could wish,
You were conducted to a gentle Bath,
And Balmes applyed to you, yet dare I never Deny your asking, take your choice of those
That best can aydе your action.
Mar. Those are they
That most are willing; if any such be heere,
(Ask were fitne to doubt) that loue this painting
Wherein you see me smear'd, if any feare
Lessen his person, then an ill report.
If any thinke, brane death out-weighes bad life,
And that his Countries dearer then himselfe,
Let him alone: Or so many so minded,
Wave thus to expresse his disposition,
And follow Martius.
They all shout and wave their swords, take hoo vp in their Armes, and cast up their Caps.
Oh me alone, make you a sword of me:
If these shewes be not out ward, which of you
But is foure Volces? None of you, but is Able to beare against the great Auffidius
A Shield, as hard as his. A certaine number
(Though thankes to all) must I select from all:
The rest shall beare the business in some other fight
(As cause will be obey'd:) please you to March,
And foure shall quickly draw out my Command,
Which men are best inclin'd.
Com. March on my Fellowes:
Make good this ostentation, and you shall
Diuide in all, with vs.

Exeunt

Titus Larthius, having set a guard vpon Coriolus, going with Drum and Trumpet toward Cominius, and Caius Martius, Enters with a Lieutenant, other Souldiers, and a Scout

Lar. So, let the Ports be guarded; keepe your Duties
As I haue set them downe. If I do send, dispatch
Those Centuries to our ayd, the rest will serue
For a short holding, if we loose the Field,
We cannot keepe the Towne.
Lieu. Feare not our care Sir.
Lar. Hence; and shut your gates vpon's:
Our Guider come, to th'Roman Campe conduct vs. Exeunt
Alarum, as in Battaile.

Enter Martius and Auffidius at seuerall doores.

Mar. Ile fight with none but thee, for I do hate thee
Worse then a Promise-breaker.
Auffid. We hate alike:
Not Affricke owns a Serpent I abhorre
More then thy Fame and Enuy: Fix thy foot.
Mar. Let the first Budger dye the others Slaue,
And the Gods doome him after.
Auf. If I flye Martius, hollow me like a Hare.
Mar. Within these three houres Tullus
Alone I fought in your Coriolus walles,
And made what worke I pleas'd: 'Tis not my blood,
Wherein thou seest me mask't, for thy Reuenge
Wrench vp thy power to th'highest.
Auf. Wer't thou the Hollow,
That was the whip of your bragg'd Progeny,
Thou should'st not scape me heere.
Heere they fight, and certaine Volces come in the aydе of Auffi. Martius fights till they be drawn in breathlessе.
Officious and not valiant, you haue sham'd me
In your condemned Seconds.

Flourish.

Flourish. Alarum. A Retreat is sounded. Enter at one Doore Cominius, with the Romanes: At another Doore Martius, with his Arme in a Scarfe.

Com. If I should tell thee o're this thy dayes Worke,
Thou't not believe thy deeds: but I'le report it,
Where Senators shall mingle teares with smiles,
Where great Patricians shall attend, and shrug,
I'th'end admire: where Ladies shall be frighted,
And gladly quak'd, heare more: where the dull Tribunes,
That with the fustie Plebeians, hate thine Honors,
Shall say against their hearts, We thanke the Gods
Our Rome hath such a Souldier.
Yet cam'st thou to a Morsell of this Feast,
Having fully din'd before.

Enter Titus with his Power, from the Pursuit.

Titus Lartius. Oh Generall:
Here is the Steed, wee the Caparison:
Hadst thou beheld——

Martius. Pray now, no more:
My Mother, who ha's a Charter to extoll her Blood,
When she do's praise me, grieves me:
I have done as you have done, that's what I can,
Induc'd as you have beene, that's for my Countrey:
He that ha's but effected his good will,
Hath overta'ne mine Act.

Com. You shall not be the Grave of your deserving,
Rome must know the value of her owne:
'Twere a Concealement worse then a Theft,
No lesse then a Traducement,
To hide your doings, and to silence that,
Which to the spire, and top of praises vouch'd,
Would seeme but modest: therefore I beseech you,
In signe of what you are, not to reward
What you have done, before our Armie heare me.

Martius. I have some Wounds upon me, and they smart
To heare themselves remembred.

Com. Should they not:
Well might they fester 'gainst Ingratitude,
And tent themselves with death: of all the Horses,
Whereof we have ta'ne good, and good store of all,
The Treasure in this field achieved, and Citie,
We render you the Tenth, to be ta'ne forth,
Before the common distribution,
At your only choyse.

Martius. I thanke you Generall:
But cannot make my heart consent to take
A Bribe, to pay my Sword: I doe refuse it,
And stand upon my common part with those,
That have beheld the doing.

A long flourish. They all cry, Martius, Martius, cast up their Caps and Lances: Cominius and Lartius stand bare.

Mar. May these same Instruments, which you prophane,
Never sound more: when Drums and Trumpets shall I'th'field prove flatterers, let Courts and Cities be
Made all of false-face'd soothing:
When Steele growes soft, as the Parasites Silke,
Let him be made an Overture for th' Wives:
No more I say, for that I have not wash'd
My Nose that bled, or foyl'd some debile Wretch,
Which without note, here's many else have done,
You shoot me forth in acclamations hyperbolicall,
As if I lou'd my little should be dieted
In praises, sawc'ft with Lyes.

Com. Too modest are you:
More cruell to your good report, then grateful
To vs, that give you truly: by your patience,
If 'gainst your selfe you be incens'd, wee'le put you
(Like one that meanes his proper harme) in Manacles,
Then reason safely with you: Therefore be it knowne,
As to vs, to all the World, That Caius Martius
Weares this Warres Garland: in token of the which,
My Noble Steed, knowne to the Campe, I give him,
With all his trim belonging; and from this time,
For what he did before Corioles, call him,
With all th'applause and Clamor of the Host,
Martius Caius Coriolanus. Beare th'addition Nobly ever!

Flourish. Trumpets sound, and Drums.

Omnes. Martius Caius Coriolanus.

Martius. I will goe wash:
And when my Face is fair, you shall perceive
Whether I blush, or no: howbeit, I thanke you,
I meane to stride your Steed, and at all times
To vnder-crest your good Addition,
To th'fairenesse of my power.

Com. So, to our Tent:
Where ere we doe repose vs, we will write
To Rome of our successe: you Titus Lartius
Must to Corioles backe, send vs to Rome
The best, with whom we may articulate,
For their owne good, and ours.

Lartius. I shall, my Lord.

Martius. The Gods begin to mocke me:
I that now refus'd most Princely gifts,
Am bound to begge of my Lord Generall.

Com. Tak't, 'tis yours: what is't?

Martius. I sometime lay here in Corioles,
At a poore mans house: he vs'd me kindly,
He cry'd to me: I saw him Prisoner:
But then Auffidius was within my view,
And Wrath o're-whelm'd my pitie: I request you
To give my poore Host freedome.

Com. Oh well begg'd:
Were he the Butcher of my Sonne, he should Be free, as is the Winde: deliver him, Titus.

Lartius. Martius, his Name.

Martius. By Iupiter forgot:
I am weare, you, my memorie is tyr'd:
Have we no Wine here?

Com. Goe we to our Tent:
The blood vpon your Visage dryes, 'tis time
It should be looks too: come. Exeunt.

A flourish. Cornets. Enter Tullus Auffidius bloudie, with two or three Souldiers.

Auff. The Towne is ta'ne.

Sould. 'Twill be deliver'd backe on good Condition.

Auffid. Condition?
I would I were a Roman, for I cannot,
Being a Volsce, be that I am. Condition?
What good Condition can a Treatie finde
I'th'part that is at mercy? five times, Martius,
I have fought with thee; so often hast thou beat me:
And would'st doe so, I thinke, should we encounter

As often as we eate. By th'Elements,
If ere against I meet him beard to beard,
He's mine, or I am his: Mine Emulation
Hath not that Honor in't it had: For where
I thought to crush him in an equall Force,
True Sword to Sword: Ile potche at him some way,
Or Wrath, or Craft may get him.

Sol. He's the diuell.

Auf. Bolder, though not so subtlemy valour poison'd,
With onely suffring staine by him: for him
Shall fly out of it selfe, nor sleepe, nor sanctuary,
Being naked, sicke; nor Phane, nor Capitoll,
The Prayers of Priests, nor times of Sacrifice:
Embarquements all of Fury, shall lift vp
Their rotten Priuilledge, and Cosstome 'gainst
My hate to Martius. Where I finde him, were it
At home, vpon my Brothers Guard, even there
Against the hospitable Canon, would I
Wash my fierce hand in's heart. Go you to th'Citie,
Learne how 'tis held, and what they are that must Be Hostages for Rome.

Soul. Will not you go?

Auf. I am attended at the Cypress grouе. I pray you
('Tis South the City Mills) bring me word thither
How the world goes: that to the pace of it
I may spurre on my iourney.

Soul. I shall sir.

Actus Secundus.

Enter Menenius with the two Tribunes of the people, Sicinius & Brutus

Men. The Agurer tels me, wee shall haue Newes to night.

Bru. Good or bad?

Men. Not according to the prayer of the people, for they loue not Martius.

Sicin. Nature teaches Beasts to know their Friends.

Men. Pray you, who does the Wolfe loue?

Sicin. The Lambe.

Men. I, to deuour him, as the hungry Plebeians would the Noble Martius.

Bru. He's a Lambe indeed, that baes like a Beare.

Men. Hee's a Beare indeede, that liues like a Lambe. You two are old men, tell me one thing that I shall aske you.

Both. Well sir.

Men. In what enormity is Martius poore in, that you two haue not in abundance?

Bru. He's poore in no one fault, but flor'd withall.

Sicin. Especially in Pride.

Bru. And topping all others in boasting.

Men. This is strange now: Do you two know, how you are censured here in the City, I mean of vs a'th'right hand File, do you?

Both. Why? how were we censur'd?

Men. Because you talke of Pride now, will you not be angry.

Both. Well, well sir, well.

Men. Why 'tis no great matter: for a very little theefe of Occasion, will rob you of a great deale of Patience: Giue your dispositions the reines, and bee angry at your pleasures (at the least) if you take it as a pleasure to you, in being so: you blame Martius for being proud.

Bru. We do it not alone, sir.

Men. I know you can doe very little alone, for your helpes are many, or else your actions would growe wondrous single: your abilities are to Infant-like, for doeing much alone. You talke of Pride: Oh, that you could turn your eyes toward the Napes of your necks, and make but an Interiour survey of your good selues. Oh that you could.

Both. What then sir?

Men. Why then you should discouer a brace of vnmeriting, proud, violent, testie Magistrates (alias Fooles) as any in Rome.

Sicin. Menenius, you are knowne well enough too.

Men. I am knowne to be a humorous Patrician, and one that loues a cup of hot Wine, with not a drop of staying Tiber in't: Said, to be something imperfect in fauouring the first complaint, hasty and Tinder-like vppon, too triuiall motion: One, that conuerses more with the But-tocke of the night, then with the forehead of the morning. What I think, I vtter, and spend my malice in my breath. Meeting two such Weales men as you are (I cannot call you Lycurgusses,) if the drinke you giue me, touch my Palat aduersly, I make a crooked face at it, I can say, your Worshippes haue deliuer'd the matter well, when I finde the Asse in compound, with the Maior part of your syllables. And though I must be content to beare with those, that say you are reuerend grauе men, yet they lye deadly, that tell you haue good faces, if you see this in the Map of my Microcosme, followes it that I am knowne well enough too? What harme can your beesome Conspectuities gleane out of this Charracter, if I be knowne well-enough too.

Bru. Come sir come, we know you well enough.

Menen. You know neither me, your selues, nor any thing: you are ambitious, for poore knaues cappes and legges: you wante out a good wholesome Forenoone, in heasing a cause betweene an Orendge wife, and a Forfe-seller, and then reiourne the Controuersie of three-pence to a second day of Audience. When you are hearing a matter betweene party and party, if you chance to be pinch'd with the Colliche, you make faces like Mummers, set vp the bloodie Flagge against all Patience, and in roaring for a Chamber-pot, dismisse the Controuersie bleeding, the more intangled by your hearing: All the peace you make in their Cause, is calling both the parties Knaues. You are a payre of strange ones.

Bru. Come, come, you are well vnderstood to bee a perfecter gybe for the Table, then a necessary Bencher in the Capitoll.

Men. Our very Priests must become Mockers, if they shall encounter such ridiculous Subiects as you are, when you speake best vnto the purpose. It is not worth the wagging of your Beards, and your Beards deserue not so honourable a grace, as to stuffe a Botchers Cushion, or to be intombd in an Asses Packe-saddle; yet you must bee saying, Martius is proud: who in a cheape estimation, is worth all your predecessors, since Deucalion, though perhaps some of the best of 'em were hereditarie hangmen. Godden to your Worships, more of your conuersation would infect my Braine, being the Heardsmen of the Beastly Plebeans. I will be bold to take my leaue of you.

Bru. and Sic. Aside.

Enter

Enter Volumnia, Virgilia, and Valeria.

How now (my as faire as Noble) Ladyes, and the Moone were shee Earthly, no Nobler; whither doe you follow your Eyes so fast?

Volum. Honorable Menenius, my Boy Martius approches: for the love of Iuno let's goe.

Menen. Ha? Martius comming home?

Volum. I, worthy Menenius, and with most prosperous approbation.

Menen. Take my Cappe Iupiter, and I thanke thee: hoo, Martius comming home?

2. Ladies. Nay, 'tis true.

Volum. Looke, here's a Letter from him, the Sonne hath another, his Wife another, and (I thinke) there's one at home for you.

Men. I will make my very house reele to night: A Letter for me?

Virgil. Yes certaine, there's a Letter for you, I saw't.

Menen. A Letter for me? it gives me an Estate of seuen yeeres health; in which time, I will make a Lippe at the Physitian: The most soueraigne Prescription in Galen, is but Emperickquetique; and to this Preseruatiue, of no better report then a Horse-drench. Is he not wounded? he was wont to come home wounded?

Virgil. Oh no, no, no.

Volum. Oh, he is wounded, I thanke the Gods for't.

Menen. So doe I too, if it be not too much: brings a Victorie in his Pocket? the wounds become him.

Volum. On's Browes: Menenius, hee comes the third time home with the Oaken Garland.

Menen. Ha's he disciplin'd Aufidius soundly?

Volum. Titus Lartius writes, they fought together, but Aufidius got off.

Menen. And 'twas time for him too, Ile warrant him that: and he had stay'd by him, I would not haue been so fiddlous'd, for all the Chests in Carioles, and the Gold that's in them. Is the Senate possest of this?

Volum. Good Ladies let's goe. Yes yes, yes: The Senate ha's Letters from the Generall, wherein hee giues my Sonne the whole Name of the Warre: he hath in this action out-done his former deeds doubly.

Valer. In troth, there's wondrous things spoke of him.

Menen. Wondrous: I, I warrant you, and not without his true purchasing.

Virgil. The Gods graunt them true.

Volum. True? pow waw.

Menen. True? Ile be sworne they are true: where is hee wounded, God saue your good Worships? Martius is comming home: hee ha's more cause to be prowd: where is he wounded?

Volum. Ith' Shoulder, and ith' left Arme: there will be large Cicatrices to shew the People, when hee shall stand for his place: he receiued in the repulse of Tarquin seuen hurts ith' Body.

Menen. One ith' Neck, and two ith' Thigh, there's nine that I know.

Volum. Hee had, before this last Expedition, twentie five Wounds vpon him.

Menen. Now it's twentie seuen; every gash was an Enemies Graue. Hearke, the Trumpets.

A flour, and flourish.

Volum. These are the Vshers of Martius:
Before him, hee carryes Noyse;
And behinde him, hee leaues Teares:
Death, that darke Spirit, in's nerue Arme doth lye,
Which being aduanc'd, declines, and then men dye.

A Sonnet. Trumpets sound.
Enter Cominius the Generall, and Titus Lartius: between them Coriolanus, crown'd with an Oaken Garland, with Captaines and Souldiers, and a Herauld.

Herauld. Know Rome, that all alone Martius did fight
Within Corioles Gates: where he hath wonne,
With Fame, a Name to Martius Caius:
These in honor followes Martius Caius Coriolanus.
Welcome to Rome, renowned Coriolanus.

Sound. Flourish.

All. Welcome to Rome, renowned Coriolanus.

Coriol. No more of this, it does offend my heart: pray now no more.

Com. Looke, Sir, your Mother.

Coriol. Oh! you haue, I know, petition'd all the Gods for my prosperitie. Kneeles.

Volum. Nay, my good Souldier, vp:
My gentle Martius, worthy Caius,
And by deed-atchieuing Honor newly nam'd,
What is it (Coriolanus) must I call thee?
But oh, thy Wife.

Corio. My gracious silence, hayle:
Would'st thou haue laugh'd, had I come Coffin'd home,
That weep'st to see me triumph? Ah my deare,
Such eyes the Widowes in Carioles were,
And Mothers that lacke Sonnes.

Menen. Now the Gods Crowne thee.

Com. And liue you yet? Oh my sweet Lady, pardon.

Volum. I know not where to turne.
Oh welcome home: and welcome Generall,
And y'are welcome all.

Menen. A hundred thousand Welcomes:
I could weepe, and I could laugh,
I am light, and heauie; welcome:
A Curse begin at very root on's heart,
That is not glad to see thee.
You are three, that Rome should dote on:
Yet by the faith of men, we haue
Some old Crab-trees here at home,
That will not be grafted to your Rallish.
Yet welcome Warriors:
We call a Nettle, but a Nettle;
And the faults of fooles, but folly.

Com. Euer right.

Cor. Menenius, euer, euer.

Herauld. Giue way there, and goe on.

Cor. Your Hand, and yours?
Ere in our owne house I doe shade my Head,
The good Patricians must be visited,
From whom I haue receiu'd not onely greetings,
But with them, change of Honors.

Volum. I haue liued,
To see inherited my very Wishes,
And the Buildings of my Fancie:
Onely there's one thing wanting,
Which (I doubt not) but our Rome
Will cast vpon thee.

Cor. Know, good Mother,
I had rather be their seruant in my way,
Then sway with them in theirs.

Com. On, to the Capitall. Flourish. Cornets.

Exeunt in State, as before.

Enter

Enter Brutus and Sicinius.

Bru. All tongues speake of him, and the bleared sights
Are spectacled to see him. Your prattling Nurse
Into a rapture lets her Baby crie,
While she chats him: the Kitchin Malkin pinnes
Her richest Lockram 'bout her reechie necke,
Clambring the Walls to eye him:
Stalls, Bulkes, Windowes, are smother'd vp,
Leades fill'd, and Ridges hors'd
With variable Complexions; all agreeing
In earnestnesse to see him: seld-showne Flamins
Doe presse among the popular Throngs, and puffe
To winne a vulgar station: our veyl'd Dames
Commit the Warre of White and Damaske
In their nicely gawded Cheeks, toth' wanton spoyle
Of Phœbus burning Kisses: such a poothe,
As if that whatsoever God, who leades him,
Were slyly crept into his humane powers,
And gaue him gracefull posture.
Sicin. On the suddaine, I warrant him Consull.
Brutus. Then our Office may, during his power, goe sleepe.
Sicin. He cannot temp'rately transport his Honors,
From where he should begin, and end, but will
Lose those he hath wonne.
Brutus In that there's comfort.
Sicin. Doubt not,
The Commoners, for whom we stand, but they
Vpon their ancient malice, will forget
With the least cause, these his new Honors,
Which that he will giue them, make I as little question,
As he is prowd to doo't.
Brutus. I heard him sweare,
Were he to stand for Consull, never would he
Appeare t'th' Market place, nor on him put
The Naples Vesture of Humilitie,
Nor shewing (as the manner is) his Wounds
Toth' People, begge their stinking Breaths.
Sicin. 'Tis right.
Brutus. It was his word:
Oh he would musse it, rather then carry it,
But by the suite of the Gentry to him,
And the desire of the Nobles.
Sicin. I wish no better, then have him hold that purpose, and to put it in execution.
Brutus. 'Tis most like he will.
Sicin. It shall be to him then, as our good wills; a sure destruction.
Brutus. So it must fall out
To him, or our Authorities, for an end.
We must suggest the People, in what hatred
He still hath held them: that to's power he would
Have made them Mules, silenc'd their Pleaders,
And disproportied their Freedomes; holding them,
In humane Action, and Capacitie,
Of no more Soule, nor fitnesse for the World,
Then Cammels in their Warre, who have their Prouand
Onely for bearing Burthens, and sore blowes
For sinking under them.
Sicin. This (as you say) suggested,
At some time, when his soaring Insolence
Shall teach the People, which time shall not want,
If he be put vpon 't, and that's as easie,
As to set Dogges on Sheepe, will be his fire
To kindle their dry Stubble: and their Blaze
Shall darken him for euer.

Enter a Messenger.

Brutus. What's the matter?
Mess. You are sept for to the Capitoll:
'Tis thought, that Martius shall be Consull:
I haue seene the dumbe men throng to see him,
And the blind to heare him speak: Matrons flong Gloues,
Ladies and Maids their Scarffes, and Handkerchers,
Vpon him as he pass'd: the Nobles bended
As to Iouis Statue, and the Commons made
A Shower, and Thunder, with their Caps, and Shouts:
I neuer saw the like.
Brutus. Let's to the Capitoll,
And carry with vs Eares and Eyes for th' time,
But Hearts for the euent.
Sicin. Haue with you. Exeunt.

Enter two Officers, to lay Cushions in a row, in the Capitoll.

1. Off. Come, come, they are almost here: how many stand for Consulships?
2. Off. Three, they say: but 'tis thought of every one, Coriolanus will carry it.
1. Off. That's a brauе fellow: but hee's vengeance prowd, and loues not the common people.
2. Off. Faith, there hath beene many great men that haue flatter'd the people, who ne're loued them; and there be many that they haue loued, they know not wherefore: so that if they loue they know not why, they hate vpon no better a ground. Therefore, for Coriolanus neyther to care whether they loue, or hate him, manifests the true knowledge he has in their disposition, and out of his Noble carelessnesse lets them plainely see't.
1. Off. If he did not care whether he had their loue, or no, hee waued indifferently, 'twixt doing them neyther good, nor harme: but hee seekes their hate with greater deuotion, then they can render it him; and leaues nothing vndone, that may fully discouer him their opposite. Now to seeme to affect the mallice and displeasure of the People, is as bad, as that which he dislikes, to flatter them for their loue.
2. Off. Hee hath deserued worthily of his Country, and his affect is not by such easie degrees as those, who having beene supple and courteous to the People, Bonnetted, without any further deed, to haue them at all into their estimation, and report: but hee hath so planted his Honors in their Eyes, and his actions in their Hearts, that for their Tongues to be silent, and not confesse so much, were a kinde of ingratefull Iniurie: to report otherwise, were a Mallice, that giuing it selfe the Lye, would plaster vntroode and rebuke from every Eare that heard it.
1. Off No more of him, hee's a worthy man: make way, they are comming.

A Sennet. Enter the Patricians, and the Tribunes of the People, Lictors before them: Coriolanus, Menenius, Cominius the Consul: Sicinius and Brutus take their places by themselues. Coriolanus stands.

Menen. Having determin'd of the Volces,
And to send for Titus Lartius it remaines,
As the maine Point of this our after-meeting,

To

To gratifie his Noble seruice, that hath
Thus stood for his Countrey. Therefore please you,
Most reuerend and graue Elders, to desire
The present Consull, and last Generall,
In our well-found Successes, to report
A little of that worthy Worke, perform'd
By Martius Caius Coriolanus: whom
We met here, both to thanke, and to remember,
With Honors like himselfe.

1. Sen. Speake, good Cominius:
Leaue nothing out for length, and make vs thinke
Rather our States defectiue for requitall,
Then we to stretch it out. Masters o'th' People,
We doe request your kindest eares: and after
Your loaing motion toward the common Body,
To yeeld what passes here.

Sicin. We are conuented vpon a pleasing Treatie, and haue hearts inclinable to honor and aduance the Theame
of our Assembly.

Brutus. Which the rather wee shall be blest to doe, if he remember a kinder value of the People, then he hath hereto priz'd them at.

Menen. That's off, that's off: I would you rather had been silent. Please you to heare Cominius speake?

Brutus Most willingly: but yet my Caution was more pertinent then the rebuke you gaue it.

Menen. He loues your People, but tye him not to be their Bed-fellow: Worthie Cominius speake.

Coriolanus rises, and offers to go away.

Nay, keepe your place.

Senat. Sit Coriolanus: never shame to heare
What you haue Nobly done.

Coriol. Your Honors pardon:
I had rather haue my Wounds to heale againe,
Then heare say how I got them.

Brutus. Sir, I hope my words dis-bench'd you not?

Coriol. No sir: yet oft,
When blowes haue made me stay, I fled from words.
You sooth'd not, therefore hurt not: but your People,
I loue them as they weigh—

Menen. Pray now sit downe.

Coria. I had rather haue one scratch my Head i'th' Sun,
When the Alarum were struck, then idly sit
To heare my Nothings monster'd. Exit Coriolanus

Menen. Masters o'th' People,
Your multiplying Spawne, how can he flatter?
That's thousand to one good one, when you now see
He had rather venture all his Limbes for Honor,
Then on ones Eares to heare it. Proceed Cominius.

Com. I shall lacke voyce: the deeds of Coriolanus
Should not be vtter'd feebly: it is held,
That Valour is the chiefest Vertue,
And most dignifies the hauer: if it be,
The man I speake of, cannot in the World
Be singly counter-poys'd. At sixteene yeeres,
When Tarquin made a Head for Rome, he fought
Beyond the marke of others: our then Dictator,
Whom with all praise I point at, saw him fight,
When with his Amazonian Shrine he drouve
The brizled Lippes before him: he bestrid
An o're-pres't Roman, and i'th' Consuls view
Slew three Opposers: Tarquins selfe he met,
And struckt him on his Knee: in that dayes feates,
When he might act the Woman in the Scene,
He prou'd best man i'th' field, and for his meed
Was Brow-bound with the Oake. His Pupill age
Man-entred thus, he waxed like a Sea,
And in the brunt of seuenteene Battaile since,
He lurcht all Swords of the Garland: for this last,
Before, and in Corioles, let me say
I cannot speake him home: he stopt the flyers,
And by his rare example made the Coward
Turne terror into sport: as Weeds before
A Vessell vnder sayle, so men obey'd,
And fell below his Stem: his Sword, Deaths stampe,
Where it did marke, it tooke from face to foot.
He was a thing of Blood, whose every motion
Was tim'd with dying Cryes: alone he entred
The mortall Gate of th' Citie, which he painted
With shunlesse destinie: vydelesse came off,
And with a sudden re-inforcement struckt
Corioles like a Planet: now all's his,
When by and by the dinne of Warre gan pierce
His readie sence: then straight his doubled spirit
Requickned what in flesh was fatigate,
And to the Battaile came he, where he did
Runne reeking o're the liues of men, as if 'twere
A perpetuall spoyle: and till we call'd
Both Field and Citie ours, he neuer stood
To ease his Brest with panting.

Menen Worthy man.

Senat He cannot but with measure fit the Honors
which we deuise him.

Com. Our spoyles he kickt at,
And look'd vpon things precious, as they were
The common Muck of the World: he coueted lesse
Then Misetie it selfe would giue, rewards his deeds
With doing them, and is content
To spend the time, to end it.

Menen. Hee's right Noble, let him be call'd for.

Senat. Call Coriolanus.

Off. He doth appeare.

Enter Coriolanus.

Menen. The Senate, Coriolanus, are well pleas'd to make thee Consull

Coria. I doe owe them still my Life, and Seruices.

Menen. It then remaines, that you doe speake to the People.

Coria. I doe beseech you,
Let me o're-leape that custome: for I cannot
Put on the Gowne, stand naked, and entreat them
For my Wounds sake, to giue their sufferage:
Please you that I may passe this doing.

Sicin. Sir, the People must haue their Voyces,
Neyther will they bate one iot of Ceremonie.

Menen. Put them not too't:
Pray you goe fit you to the Custome,
And take to you, as your Predecessors haue,
Your Honor with your forme.

Coria. It is a part that I shall blush in acting,
And might well be taken from the People.

Brutus. Marke you that.

Coria. To brag vnto them, thus I did, and thus
Shew them th'vnaking Skarres, which I should hide,
As if I had receiu'd them for the hire
Of their breath onely.

Menen. Doe not stand vpon't:
We recommend to you Tribunes of the People
Our purpose to them, and to our Noble Consull
Wish we all Ioy, and Honor.

Senat. To

Senat. To Coriolanus come all ioy and Honor.

Flourish Cornets.

Then Exeunt. Manet Sicinius and Brutus.

Bru. You see how he intends to vse the people.

Scicin. May they perceiue's intent: he will require them
As if he did contemne what he requested,
Should be in them to giue.

Bru. Come, we'l informe them
Of our proceedings heere on th'Market place,
I know they do attend vs.

Enter seuen or eight Citizens.

1. Cit. Once if he do require our voyces, we ought not to deny him.

2. Cit. We may Sir if we will.

3. Cit. We haue power in our selues to do it, but it is a power that we haue no power to do: For, if hee shew vs his wounds, and tell vs his deeds, we are to put our tongues into those wounds, and speake for them: So if he tel vs his Noble deeds, we must also tell him our Noble acceptance of them. Ingratitude is monstrous, and for the multitude to be ingratefull, were to make a Monster of the multitude; of the which, we being members, should bring our selues to be monstrous members.

1. Cit. And to make vs no better thought of a little helpe will serue: for once we stood vp about the Corne, he himselfe stucke not to call vs the many-headed Multitude.

3. Cit. We haue beene call'd so of many, not that our heads are some browne, some blacke, some Abram, some bald; but that our wits are so diuersly Coulord; and truely I thinke, if all our wittes were to issue out of one Scull, they would flye East, West, North, South, and their consent of one direct way, should be at once to all the points a'th Compasse.

2. Cit. Thinke you so? Which way do you iudge my wit would flye.

3. Cit. Nay your wit will not so soone out as another mans will, 'tis strongly wedg'd vp in a blocke head: but if it were at liberty, 'twould sure Southward.

2 Cit. Why that way?

3 Cit. To loose it selfe in a Fogge, where being three parts melted away with rotten Dewes, the fourth would returne for Conscience sake, to helpe to get thee a Wife.

2 Cit. You are neuer without your trickes, you may, you may.

3 Cit. Are you all resolu'd to giue your voyces? But that's no matter, the greater part carries it, I say. If hee would incline to the people, there was neuer a worthier man.

Enter Coriolanus in a gowne of Humility, with Menenius.

Heere he comes, and in the Gowne of humility, marke his behaviour: we are not to stay altogether, but to come by him where he stands, by ones, by twoes, & by threes. He's to make his requests by particulars, wherein euerie one of vs ha's a single Honor, in giuing him our own voices with our owne tongues, therefore follow me, and Ile direct you how you shall go by him.

All. Content, content.

Men. Oh Sir, you are not right: haue you not knowne The worthiest men haue done't?

Corio. What must I say, I pray Sir?
Plague vpon't, I cannot bring
My tougne to such a pace. Looke Sir, my wounds,
I got them in my Countries Seruice, when
Some certaine of your Brethren roar'd, and ranne
From th'noise of our owne Drummes.

Menen. Oh me the Gods, you must not speak of that,
You must desire them to thinke vpon you.

Coriol. Thinke vpon me? Hang 'em,
I would they would forget me, like the Vertues
Which our Diuines lose by em.

Men. You'l marre all.
Ile leaue you: Pray you speake to em, I pray you
In wholsome manner. Exit

Enter three of the Citizens.

Corio. Bid them wash their Faces,
And keepe their teeth cleane: So, heere comes a brace,
You know the cause (Sir) of my standing heere.

3 Cit. We do Sir, tell vs what hath brought you to't.

Corio. Mine owne desert.

2 Cit. Your owne desert.

Corio. I, but mine owne desire.

3 Cit. How not your owne desire?

Corio. No Sir, 'twas never my desire yet to trouble the poore with begging.

3 Cit. You must thinke if we giue you any thing, we hope to gaine by you.

Corio. Well then I pray, your price a'th Consulship.

1 Cit. The price is, to aske it kindly.

Corio. Kindly sir, I pray let me ha't: I haue wounds to shew you, which shall bee yours in priuate. your good voice Sir, what say you?

2 Cit. You shall ha't worthy Sir.

Corio. A match Sir, there's in all two worthie voyces begg'd: I haue your Almes, Adieu.

3 Cit. But this is something odde.

2 Cit. And 'twere to giue againe: but 'tis no matter.

Exeunt. Enter two other Citizens.

Coriol. Pray you now, if it may stand with the tune of your voices, that I may bee Consull, I haue heere the Customarie Gowne.

1. You haue deserued Nobly of your Country, and you haue not deserued Nobly.

Coriol. Your Ænigma.

1 You haue bin a scourge to her enemies, you haue bin a Rod to her Friends, you haue not indeede loued the Common people.

Coriol You should account mee the more Vertuous, that I haue not bin common in my Love. I will for sweet my sworne Brother the people to earne a dearer estimation of them, 'tis a condition they account gentle: & since the wisedome of their choice, is rather to haue my Hat, then my Heart, I will practice the insinuating nod, and bow off to them most counterfeitly, that is, I will counterfet the bewitchment of some popular man, and giue it bountifull to the desirers: Therefore beseech you, I may be Consull.

2. Wee hope to finde you our friend: and therefore giue you our voices heartily.

1. You haue receyued many wounds for your Country.

Coriol. I will not Seale your knowledge with shewing them. I will make much of your voyces, and so trouble you no farther.

Both. The Gods giue you ioy Sir heartily.

Coriol. Most sweet Voyces:
Better it is to dye, better to starue,
Then craue the higher, which first we do deserue.
Why in this Woolnish tongue should I stand heere,
To begge of Hob and Dicke, that doe appeare

Their needlesse Vouchers: Custome calls me to't.
What Custome wills in all things, should we doo't?
The Dust on antique Time would lye vnswept,
And mountainous Error be too highly heapt,
For Truth to o're-peere. Rather then fooles is so,
Let the high Office and the Honor go
To one that would doe thus. I am halfe through,
The one part suffered, the other will I doo.

Enter three Citizens more.

Here come moe Voyces.
Your Voyces? for your Voyces I have fought,
Watcht for your Voyces: for your Voyces, beare
Of Wounds, two dozen odde: Battailes thrice six
I have seene, and heard of: for your Voyces,
Have done many things, some lesse, some more:
Your Voyces? Indeed I would be Consull.

1.Cit. Hee ha's done Nobly, and cannot goe without any honest mans Voyce.

2.Cit. Therefore let him be Consull: the Gods giue him joy, and make him good friend to the People.

All. Amen, Amen. God saue thee, Noble Consull.

Corio. Worthy Voyces.

Enter Menenius, with Brutus and Scicinius.

Menen. You have stood your Limitation:
And the Tribunes endue you with the Peoples Voyce,
Remaines, that in th'Officiall Markes inuested,
You anon doe meet the Senate.

Corio. Is this done?

Scicin. The Custome of Request you haue discharg'd:
The People doe admit you, and are summon'd
To meet anon, vpon your approbation.

Corio. Where? at the Senate-house?

Scicin. There, Coriolanus

Corio. May I change these Garments?

Scicin. You may, Sir.

Corio. That I'le straight doe: and knowing my selfe again,
Repayre toth' Senate-house.

Menen. Ile keepe you company. Will you along?

Brut. We stay here for the People.

Scicin. Fare you well. Exeunt Coriol. and Menen.
He ha's it now: and by his Lookes, me thinkes,
'Tis warme at's heart.

Brut. With a proud heart he wore his humble Weeds:
Will you dismisse the People?

Enter the Plebeians.

Scicin. How now, my Masters, have you chose this man?

1.Cit. He ha's our Voyces, Sir.

Brut. We pray the Gods, he may deserue your loues.

2.Cit. Amen, Sir: to my poore vnworthy notice,
He mock'd vs, when he begg'd our Voyces.

3.Cit. Certainely, he flouted vs downe-right.

1.Cit. No, 'tis his kind of speech, he did not mock vs.

2.Cit. Not one amongst vs, saue youre selfe, but sayes
He vs'd vs scornefully: he should haue shew'd vs
His Marks of Merit, Wounds receiu'd for's Country.

Scicin. Why so he did I am sure.

All. No, not no man saw 'em.

3.Cit. Hee said hee had Wounds,
Which he could shew in priuate:
And with his Hat, thus waving it in scorne,
I would be Consull, sayes he: aged Custome,
But by your Voyces, will not so permit me.
Your Voyces therefore: when we granted that,
Here was, I thanke you for your Voyces, thanke you
Your most sweet Voyces: now you haue left your Voyces,
I haue no further with you. Was not this mockerie?

Scicin. Why either were you ignorant to see't?
Or seeing it, of such Childish friendlinesse,
To yeeld your Voyces?

Brut. Could you not haue told him,
As you were lesson'd: When he had no Power,
But was a petite seruant to the State,
He was your Enemie, ever spake against
Your Liberties, and the Charters that you beare
I'th' Body of the Weale: and now arriuing
A place of Potencie, and sway o'th' State,
If he should still malignantly remaine
Fast Foe toth' Plebeij, your Voyces might
Be Curses to your selues. You should haue said,
That as his worthy deeds did clayme no lesse
Then what he stood for: so his gracious nature
Would thinke vpon you, for your Voyces,
And translate his Malice towards you, into Loue,
Standing your friendly Lord.

Scicin. Thus to haue said,
As you were fore-aduis'd, had touche his Spirit,
And try'd his Inclination: from him plockt
Eyther his gracious Promise, which you might
As cause had call'd you vp, have held him to;
Or else it would haue gall'd his surly nature,
Which easily endures not Article,
Tying him to ought, so putting him to Rage,
You should haue ta'ne th'aduantage of his Choller,
And pass'd him vnelected.

Brut. Did you perceiue,
He did sollicite you in free Contempt,
When he did need your Loues: and doe you thinke,
That his Contempt shall not be bruising to you,
When he hath power to crush? Why, had your Bodyes
No Heart among you? Or had you Toongues, to cry
Against the Rectorship of Iudgement?

Scicin. Haue you, ere now, deny'd the asker:
And now againe, of him that did not aske, but mock,
Bestow your fu'd for Toongues?

3.Cit. Hee's not confirm'd, we may deny him yet.

2.Cit. And will deny him:
Ile haue fiue hundred Voyces of that sound.

1.Cit. I twice fiue hundred, & their friends, to piece 'em.

Brut. Get you hence instantly, and tell those friends,
They haue chose a Consull, that will from them take
Their Liberties, make them of no more Voyce
Then Dogges, that are as often beat for barking,
As therefore kept to doe so.

Scicin. Let them assemble: and on a safer Iudgement,
All reuoke your ignorant election: Enforce his Pride,
And his old Hate vnto you: besides, forget not
With what Contempt he wore the humble Weed,
How in his Suit he scorn'd you but your Loues,
Thinking vpon his Services, tooke from you
Th'apprehension of his present portance,
Which most gibingly, vngraciously, he did fashion
After the inueterate Hate he beares you.

Brut. Lay a fault on vs, your Tribunes,
That we labour'd (no impediment between)
But that you must cast your Election on him.

Scicin. Say you chose him, more after our commandment,
Then as guided by your owne true affections, and that
Your Minds pre-occupy'd with what you rather must do,
Then what you should, made you against the graine
To Voyce him Consull. Lay the fault on vs.

Brut. I, spare vs not: Say, we read Lectures to you,
How youngly he began to serue his Country,
How long continued, and what stock he springs of,
The Noble House o'th' Martians: from whence came
That Ancus Martius, Numaes Daughters Sonne,
Who after great Hostilius here was King,
Of the same House Publius and Quintus were,
That our best Water, brought by Conduits hither,
And Nobly nam'd, so twice being Censor,
Was his great Ancestor.
Scicin. One thus descended,
That hath beside well in his person wrought,
To be set high in place, we did commend
To your remembrances: but you haue found,
Scaling his present bearing with his past,
That he's your fixed enemie; and reuoke
Your suddaine approbation.
Brut. Say you ne're had don't,
(Harpe on that still) but by our putting on:
And presently, when you haue drawne your number,
Repaire toth' Capitoll.
All. We will so: almost all repent in their election.
Exeunt Plebeians.
Brut. Let them goe on:
This Mutinie were better put in hazard,
Then stay past doubt, for greater:
If, as his nature is, he fall in rage
With their refusall, both obserue and sowre
The vantage of his anger.
Scicin. Toth' Capitoll, come:
We will be there before the stream o'th' People:
And this shall seeme, as partly 'tis, their owne,
Which we haue goaded on-ward. Exeunt.

Actus Tertius.

Coriolan. Enter Coriolanus, Menenius, all the Gentry, Cominius, Titus Latius, and other Senators.
Corio. Tullus Auffidius then had made new head.
Latius. He had, my Lord, and that it was which caus'd
Our swifter Composition.
Corio. So then the Volces stand but as at first,
Readie when time shall prompt them, to make roade
Vpon's againe.
Com. They are worne (Lord Consull) so,
That we shall hardly in our ages see
Their Banners waue againe.
Corio. Saw you Auffidius?
Latius. On safegard he came to me, and did curse
Against the Volces, for they had so vildly
Yeelded the Towne: he is retyred to Antium.
Corio. Spoke he of me?
Latius. He did, my Lord.
Corio. How? what?
Latius. How often he had met you Sword to Sword:
That of all things vpon the Earth, he hated
Your person most: That he would pawne his fortunes
To hopelesse restitution, so he might
Be call'd your Vanquisher.
Corio. At Antium liues he?
Latius. At Antium.
Corio. I wish I had a cause to seeke him there,
To oppose his hatred fully. Welcome home.
Enter Scicinius and Brutus.
Behold, these are the Tribunes of the People,
The Tongues o'th' Common Mouth. I do despise them:
For they doe prankle them in Authoritie,
Against all Noble sufferance.
Scicin. Passe no further.
Cor. Hah? what is that?
Brut. It will be dangerous to goe on— No further.
Corio. What makes this change?
Menen. The matter?
Com. Hath he not pass'd the Noble, and the Commons?
Brut. Cominius, no.
Corio. Haue I had Childrens Voyces?
Senat. Tribunes giue way, he shall toth' Market place.
Brut. The People are incens'd against him.
Scicin. Stop, or all will fall in broyle.
Corio. Are these your Heard?
Most these haue Voyces, that can yould them now,
And straight disclaim their tounge? what are your Offices?
You being their Mouthes, why rule you not their Teeth?
Haue you not set them on?
Menen. Be calme, be calme.
Corio. It is a purpos'd thing, and growes by Plot,
To curbe the will of the Nobilitie:
Suffer't, and liue with such as cannot rule,
Nor euer will be ruled.
Brut. Call't not a Plot:
The People cry you mockt them: and of late,
When Corne was given them gratis, you repin'd,
Scandal'd the Supplicants: for the People, call'd them
Time-pleasers, flatterers, foes to Nobleneſſe.
Corio. Why this was knowne before.
Brut. Not to them all.
Corio. Haue you inform'd them sithence?
Brut. How? I informe them?
Com. You are like to doe such business.
Brut. Not vnlike each way to better yours.
Corio. Why then should I be Consull? by yond Clouds
Let me deserue so ill as you, and make me
Your fellow Tribune.
Scicin. You shew too much of that,
For which the People stirre: if you will passe
To where you are bound, you must enquire your way,
Which you are out of, with a gentler spirit,
Or never be so Noble as a Consull,
Nor yoake with him for Tribune.
Menen. Let's be calme.
Com. The People are abus'd: set on, this paltring
Becomes not Rome: nor has's Coriolanus
Deser'd this so dishonor'd Rub, layd falsely
I'th' plaine Way of his Merit.
Corio. Tell me of Corne: this was my speech,
And I will speak't againe.
Menen. Not now, not now.
Senat. Not in this heat, Sir, now.
Corio. Now as I liue, I will.
My Noblee friends, I craue their pardons:
For the mutable rank-sented Meynie,
Let them regard me, as I doe not flatter,
And therein behold themselues: I say againe,
In soothing them, we nourish 'gainst our Senate
The Cockle of Rebellion, Insolence, Sedition,
Which we our selues haue plowed for, sow'd, & scatter'd,
By mingling them with vs, the honor'd Number,
Who lack not Vertue, no, nor Power, but that
Which they haue given to Beggers.
Menen. Well, no more.
Senat. No more words, we beseech you.
Corio. How? no more?

As for my Country, I have shed my blood,
Not fearing outward force: So shall my Lungs
Coine words till their decay, against those Measels
Which we disdaine should Tetter vs, yet sought
The very way to catch them.
Bru. You speake o'th' people, as if you were a God,
To punish; Not a man, of their Infirmity.
Sicin. 'Twere well we let the people know't.
Menen. What, what? His Choller?
Cor. Choller? Were I as patient as the midnight sleep,
By Iouc, 'twould be my minde.
Sicin. It is a minde that shall remain a poison
Where it is: not poison any further.
Corio. Shall remaine?
Heare you this Triton of the Minnows? Marke you
His absolute Shall?
Com. 'Twas from the Cannon.
Cor. Shall? O God! but most vnwise Patricians: why
You grave, but wreakless Senators, have you thus Given Hidra here to choose an Officer,
That with his peremptory Shall, being but
The horne, and noise o'th' Monsters, wants not spirit
To say, he'l turne your Current in a ditch,
And make your Channell his? If he have power,
Then vale your Ignorance: If none, awake
Your dangerous Lenity: If you are Learn'd,
Be not as common Fooles; if you are not,
Let them have Cushions by you. You are Plebeians,
If they be Senators: and they are no lesse,
When both your voices blended, the great'st taste
Most palates theirs. They choose their Magistrate,
And such a one as he, who puts his Shall,
His popular Shall, against a graver Bench
Then ever frown'd in Greece. By Ioue himselfe,
It makes the Consuls base; and my Soule akes
To know, when two Authorities are vp,
Neither Supreame: How soone Confusion
May enter 'twixt the gap of both, and take
The one by th'other.
Com. Well, on to th'Market place.
Corio. Who ever gave that Counsell, to gree forth
The Corne o'th'Store-house gratis, as 'twas vs'd
Sometime in Greece.
Menen. Well, well, no more of that.
Cor. Though there the people had more absolute powre
I say they nourisht disobedience: fed, the ruin of the State.
Bru. Why shall the people give
One that speakes thus, their voyce?
Corio. Ile give my Reasons,
More worthier then their Voyces. They know the Corne
Was not our recompence, resting well assur'd
They ne ver did service for't, being preft to'th' Warre,
Even when the Nauell of the State was touch'd,
They would not thread the Gates: This kinde of Service
Did not deserue Corne gratis. Being i'th' Warre,
There Mutinies and Rewolts, wherein they shew'd
Most Valour, spoke not for them. Th' Accusation
Which they haue often made against the Senate,
All cause vnborne, could never be the Natiue
Of our so frankie Donation. Well, what then?
How shall this Bosome-multiplied, digest
The Senates Courtesie? Let deeds expresse
What's like to be their words, We did request it,
We are the greater pole, and in true feare
They gave vs our demands. Thus we debase
The Nature of our Seats, and make the Rabble
Call our Cares, Feares; which will in time
Breake ope the Locker o'th' Senate, and bring in
The Crowes to pecke the Eagles.
Menen. Come enough.
Bru. Enough, with over measure.
Corio. No, take more.
What may be sworne by, both Diuine and Humane,
Seale what I end withall. This double worship,
Wherein part do's disdaine with cause, the other
Insult without all reason: where Gentry, Title, wisedom
Cannot conclude, but by the yes and no
Of generall Ignorance, it must omit
Real Necessities, and give way the while
To vnstable Slightnesse. Purpose so barr'd, it followes,
Nothing is done to purpose. Therefore beseech you,
You that will be lesse fearefull, then discreet,
That loue the Fundamentall part of State
More then you doubt the change on't. That preferre
A Noble life, before a Long, and Wish,
To temper a Body with a dangerous Physicke,
That's sure of death without it. at once pluck out
The Multitudinous Tongue, let them not lickt
The sweet which is their poyson. Your dishonor
Mangles true iudgement, and bereaues the State
Of that Integrity which should become't:
Not hauing the power to do the good it would
For th'ill which doth controul't.
Bru. Has said enough.
Sicin. Has spoken like a Traitor, and shall answer
As Traitors do.
Corio. Thou wretch, despight ore-whelme thee:
What should the people do with these bald Tribunes?
On whom depending, their obedience failes
To th'greater Bench, in a Rebellion.
When what's not meet, but what must be, was Law,
Then were they chosen: in a better houre,
Let what is meet, be said it must be meet,
And throw their power i'th'dust.
Bru. Manifest Treason.
Sicin. This a Consull? No.
Enter an Edile.
Bru. The Ediles hoe: Let him be apprehended.
Sicin. Go call the people, in whose name my Selfe
Attach thee as a Traitorous Innouator:
A Foe to th'publike Weale. Obey I charge thee,
And follow to thine answer.
Corio. Hence old Goat.
All. We'l Sueety him.
Com. Ag'd sir, hands off.
Corio. Hence rotten thing, or I shall shake thy bones
Out of thy Garments.
Sicin. Helpe ye Citizens.
Enter a rabble of Plebeians with the Ediles.
Menen. On both sides more respect.
Sicin. Here's he, that would take from you all your power.
Bru. Seize him Ediles.
All. Downe with him, downe with him.
2. Sen. Weapons, weapons, weapons!
They all buffet about Coriolanus.
Tribunes, Patricians, Citizens: what ho!
Sicinius, Brutus, Coriolanus, Citizens.
All. Peace, peace, peace, stay, hold, peace.
Menen. What is about to be? I am out of Breath,
Confusions neere, I cannot speake. You, Tribunes
To th'people: Coriolanus, patience. Speak good Sicinius.

Scici. Heare me, People peace.

All. Let's here our Tribune: peace, speake, speake, speake.

Scici. You are at point to lose your Liberties: Martius would have all from you; Martius, Whom late you have nam'd for Consull.

Menen. Fie, fie, fie, this is the way to kindle, not to quench.

Sena. To vabuild the Citie, and to lay all flat.

Scici. What is the Citie, but the People?

All. True, the People are the Citie.

Brut. By the consent of all, we were establish'd the Peoples Magistrates.

All. You so remaine.

Menen. And so are like to doe.

Com. That is the way to lay the Citie flat, To bring the Roofe to the Foundation, And burie all, which yet distinctly ranges In heapes, and piles of Ruine.

Scici. This deserves Death.

Brut. Or let vs stand to our Authoritie, Or let vs lose it: we doe here pronounce, Vpon the part o'th' People, in whose power We were elected theirs, Martius is worthy Of present Death.

Scici. Therefore lay hold of him: Beare him toth' Rock Tarpeian, and from thence Into destruction cast him.

Brut. Ædiles seize him.

All Plo. Yeeld Martius, yeeld.

Menen. Heare me one word, beseech you Tribunes, heare me but a word.

Ædiles. Peace, peace.

Menen. Be that you seeme, truly your Countries friend, And temp'rately proceed to what you would Thus violently redresse.

Brut. Sir, those cold wayes, That seeme like prudent helpes, are very poysonous, Where the Disease is violent. Lay hands vpon him, And beare him to the Rock. Coria. drawes his Sword.

Coria. No, Ile die here: There's some among you have beheld me fighting, Come trie vpon your selves, what you have seene me.

Menen. Downe with that Sword, Tribunes withdraw a while.

Brut. Lay hands vpon him.

Menen. Helpe Martius, helpe: you that be noble, helpe him young and old.

All. Downe with him, downe with him. Exeunt.

In this Mutinie, the Tribunes, the Ædiles, and the People are beat in.

Menen. Goe, get you to out House: be gone, away, All will be naught else.

2. Sena. Get you gone.

Com. Stand fast, we have as many friends as enemies.

Menen. Shall it be put to that?

Sena. The Gods forbid: I prythee noble friend, home to thy House, Leave vs to cure this Cause.

Menen. For 'tis a Sore vpon vs, You cannot Tent your selfe: be gone, beseech you.

Com. Come Sir, along with vs.

Menen. I would they were Barbarians, as they are, Though in Rome litter'd; not Romans, as they are not, Though calved i'th' Porch o'th' Capitoll: Be gone, put not your worthy Rage into your Tongue, One time will owe another.

Coria. On faire ground, I could beat fortie of them.

Menen. I could my selfe take vp a Brace o'th' best of them, yea, the two Tribunes.

Com. But now 'tis odde beyond Arithmetick, And Manhood is call'd Foolerie, when it stands Against a falling Fabrick. Will you hence, Before the Tagge returne? whose Rage doth rend Like interrupted Waters, and o're-beare What they are vs'd to beare.

Menen. Pray you be gone: Ile trie whether my old Wit be in request With those that have but little: this must be patche With Cloth of any Colour.

Com. Nay, come away. Exeunt Coriolanus and Cominius.

Patri. This man ha's marr'd his fortune.

Menen. His nature is too noble for the World: He would not flatter Neptune for his Trident, Or Iove, for's power to Thunder: his Heart's his Mouth: What his Breft forges, that his Tongue must vent, And being angry, does forget that ever He heard the Name of Death. A Noise within.

Here's goodly worke.

Patri. I would they were a bed.

Menen. I would they were in Tyber. What the vengeance, could he not speake 'em faire?

Enter Brutus and Sicinius with the rabble again.

Sicin. Where is this Viper, That would depopulate the city, & be every man himselfe?

Menen. You worthy Tribunes.

Sicin. He shall be throwne downe the Tarpeian rock With rigorous hands: he hath resisted Law, And therefore Law shall scorne him further Triall Then the severity of the publike Power, Which he so sets at naught.

1 Cit. He shall well know the Noble Tribunes are The peoples mouths, and we their hands.

All. He shall sure on't.

Menen. Sir, sir. Sicin. Peace.

Men. Do not cry havocke, where you should but hunt With modest warrant.

Sicin. Sir, how com'st that you have holpe To make this rescue?

Menen. Heere me speake? As I do know The Consulls worthinesse, so can I name his Faults.

Sicin. Consull? what Consull?

Menen. The Consull Coriolanus.

Bru. He Consull.

All. No, no, no, no, no.

Menen. If by the Tribunes leave, And yours good people, I may be heard, I would crave a word or two, The which shall turne you to no further harme, Then so much losse of time.

Sic. Speake breefely then, For we are peremptory to dispatch This Viperous Traitor: to elect him heere Were but one danger, and to keepe him heere Our certaine death: therefore it is decreed, He dyes to night.

Menen. Now the good Gods forbid, That our renowned Rome, whose gratitude Towards her deserved Children, is enroll'd In Iours owne Booke, like an unnaturall Dam Should now eate vp her owne.

Sicin. He's a Disease that must be cut away.
Menen. Oh he's a Limbe, that has but a Disease
Mortall, to cut it off: to cure it, easie.
What has he done to Rome, that's worthy death?
Killing our Enemies, the blood he hath lost
(Which I dare vouch, is more then that he hath
By many an Ounce) he dropp'd it for his Country:
And what is left, to loose it by his Country,
Were to vs all that doo's, and suffer it
A brand to th'end a'th World.
Sicin. This is clean kamme.
Brut. Merely awry:
When he did loose his Country, it honour'd him.
Menen. The service of the foote
Being once gangren'd, is not then respected
For what before it was.
Bru. We'l heare no more:
Pursue him to his house, and plucke him thence,
Least his infection being of catching nature,
Spread further.
Menen. One word more, one word:
This Tiger-footed-rage, when it shall find
The harme of vnskan'd swiftnesse, will (too late)
Tye Leaden pounds too's heeles. Proceed by Processe,
Least parties (as he is beloo'd) breake out,
And sacke great Rome with Romanes.
Brut. If it were so?
Sicin. What do ye talke?
Have we not had a taste of his Obedience?
Our Ediles smot: our selues resisted: come.
Menen. Consider this: He has's bin bred i'th'Warres
Since a could draw a Sword, and is ill-school'd
In boulted Language: Meale and Bran together
He throwes without distinction. Give me leaue,
Ile go to him, and vndertake to bring him in peace,
Where he shall answer by a lawfull Forme
(In peace) to his vsnoft perill.
1. Sen. Noble Tribunes,
It is the humane way: the other course
Will proue o'bloody: and the end of it,
Vnknowne to the Beginning.
Sic. Noble Menenius, be you then as the peoples officer:
Masters, lay downe your Weapons.
Bru. Go not home.
Sic. Meet on the Market place: we'l attend you there:
Where if you bring not Marcius, we'l proceede
In our first way.
Menen. Ile bring him to you.
Let me desire your company: he must come,
Or what is worst will follow.
Sena. Pray you let's to him. Exeunt Omnes.

Enter Coriolanus with Nobles.

Corio. Let them pull all about mine eares, present me
Death on the Wheele, or at wilde Horses heeles,
Or pile ten hilles on the Tarpeian Rocke,
That the precipitation might downe stretch
Below the beame of sight; yet will I still
Be thus to them.

Enter Volumnia.

Noble. You do the Nobles.
Corio. I ouse my Mother
Do's not approue me further, who was wont
To call them Woollen Vassailes, things created
To buy and sell with Groats, to shew bare heads
In Congregations, to yawne, be still, and wonder,
When one but of my ordinance stood vp
To speake of Peace, or Warre. I talke of you,
Why did you wish me milder? Would you haue me
False to my Nature? Rather say, I play
The man I am.
Volum. Oh sir, sir, sir,
I would haue had you put your power well on
Before you had worne it out.
Corio. Let go.
Vol. You might haue beene enough the man you are,
With striuing lesse to be so: Lesser had bin
The things of your disposition, if
You had not shew'd them how ye were dispos'd
Ere they lack'd power to crosse you.
Corio. Let them hang.
Volum. I, and burne too.

Enter Menenius with the Senators.

Men. Come, come, you haue bin too rough, something too rough: you must returne, and mend it.
Sen. There's no remedy,
Vnlesse by not so doing, our good Citie
Cleaue in the midd'st, and perish.
Volum. Pray be counsail'd;
I haue a heart as little apt as yours,
But yet a braine, that leades my vse of Anger
To better vantage.
Menen. Well said, Noble woman:
Before he should thus stoope to th'heart, but that
The violent fit a'th'time craues it as Physicke
For the whole State; I would put mine Armour on,
Which I can scarcely beare.
Corio. What must I do?
Menen. Returne to th'Tribunes.
Corio. Well, what then? what then?
Menen. Repent, what you haue spoke.
Corio. For them, I cannot do it to the Gods,
Must I then doo't to them?
Volum. You are too absolute,
Though therein you can never be too Noble,
But when extremities speake. I haue heard you say,
Honor and Policy, like vnseuer'd Friends,
I'th'Warre do grow together: Grant that, and tell me
In Peace, what each of them by th'other loose,
That they combine not there?
Corio. Tush, tush.
Menen. A good demand.
Volum. If it be Honor in your Warres, to seeme
The same you are not, which for your best ends
You adopt your policy: How is it lesse or worse
That it shall hold Companionship in Peace
With Honour, as in Warre; since that to both
It stands in like request.
Corio. Why force you this?
Volum. Because, that
Now it lyes you on to speake to th'people
Not by your owne instruction, nor by th'matter
Which your heart prompts you, but with such words
That are but rooted in your Tongue;
Though but Bastards, and Syllables
Of no allowance, to your bosomes truth.
Now, this no more dishonors you at all,
Then to take in a Towne with gentle words,
Which else would put you to your fortune, and
The hazard of much blood.
I would dissemble with my Nature, where
My Fortunes and my Friends at stake, requir'd
I should do so in Honor. I am in this

Enter Brutus and Sicinius.

Bru. All tongues speake of him, and the bleared sights
Are spectacled to see him. Your prattling Nurse
Into a rapture lets her Baby crie,
While she chats him: the Kitchin Malkin pinnes
Her richest Lockram 'bout her reechie neeche,
Clambring the Walls to eye him:
Stalls, Bulkes, Windowes, are smother'd vp,
Leades fill'd, and Ridges hors'd
With variable Complexions; all agreeing
In earnestnesse to see him: seld-showne Flamins
Doe presse among the popular Throngs, and pusse
To winne a vulgar station: our vey'l'd Dames
Commit the Warre of White and Damaske
In their nicely gawded Cheeks, toth' wanton spoyle
Of Phœbus burning Kisses: such a poothe,
As if that whatsoever God, who leades him,
Were slyly crept into his humane powers,
And gave him gracefull posture.
Sicin. On the suddaine, I warrant him Consull.
Brutus. Then our Office may, during his power, goe sleepe.
Sicin. He cannot temp'rately transport his Honors,
From where he should begin, and end, but will
Lose those he hath wonne.
Brutus In that there's comfort.
Sicin. Doubt not,
The Commoners, for whom we stand, but they
Vpon their ancient malice, will forget
With the least cause, these his new Honors,
Which that he will give them, make I as little question,
As he is prowd to doo't.
Brutus. I heard him sweare,
Were he to stand for Consull, never would he
Appeare i'th' Market place, nor on him put
The Naples Vesture of Humilitie,
Nor shewing (as the manner is) his Wounds
Toth' People, begge their stinking Breaths.
Sicin. 'Tis right.
Brutus. It was his word:
Oh he would misse it, rather then carry it,
But by the suite of the Gentry to him,
And the desire of the Nobles.
Sicin. I wish no better, then have him hold that purpose, and to put it in execution.
Brutus. 'Tis most like he will.
Sicin. It shall be to him then, as our good wills; a sure destruction.
Brutus. So it must fall out
To him, or our Authorities, for an end.
We must suggest the People, in what hatred
He still hath held them: that to's power he would
Have made them Mules, silenc'd their Pleaders,
And disproportied their Freedomes; holding them,
In humane Action, and Capacitie,
Of no more Soule, nor fitnesse for the World,
Then Cammels in their Warre, who have their Prouand
Onely for bearing Burthens, and sore blowes
For sinking under them.
Sicin. This (as you say) suggested,
At some time, when his soaring Insolence
Shall reach the People, which time shall not want,
If he be put vpon't, and that's as easie,
As to set Dogges on Sheepe, will be his fire
To kindle their dry Stubble: and their Blaze
Shall darken him for ever.

Enter a Messenger.

Brutus. What's the matter?
Mess. You are sept for to the Capitoll:
'Tis thought, that Martius shall be Consull.
I have seene the dumbe men throng to see him,
And the blind to heare him speak: Matrons flong Gloves,
Ladies and Maids their Scarffes, and Handkerchers,
Vpon him as he pass'd: the Nobles bended
As to Iouis Statue, and the Commons made
A Shower, and Thunder, with their Caps, and Shouts:
I never saw the like.
Brutus. Let's to the Capitoll,
And carry with vs Eares and Eyes for th' time,
But Hearts for the event.
Sicin. Have with you. Exeunt.

Enter two Officers, to lay Cushions, as it were, in the Capitoll.

1. Of. Come, come, they are almost here: how many stand for Consulships?
2. Of. Three, they say: but 'tis thought of every one, Coriolanus will carry it.
1. Of. That's a brave fellow: but he's vengeance proud, and loues not the common people.
2. Of. Faith, there hath beene many great men that have flatter'd the people, who ne're loued them; and there be many that they have loued, they know not wherefore: so that if they love they know not why, they hate vpon no better a ground. Therefore, for Coriolanus neyther to care whether they love, or hate him, manifests the true knowledge he has in their disposition, and out of his Noble carelesnesse lets them plainely see't.
1. Of. If he did not care whether he had their love, or no, he waued indifferently, 'twixt doing them neyther good, nor harme: but he seekes their hate with greater deuotion, then they can render it him, and leaues nothing vndone, that may fully discouer him their opposite. Now to seeme to affect the mallice and displeasure of the People, is as bad, as that which he dislikes, to flatter them for their love.
2. Of. Hee hath deserued worthily of his Country, and his affect is not by such easie degrees as those, who having beene supple and courteous to the People, Bonnetted, without any further deed, to have them at all into their estimation, and report: but hee hath so planted his Honors in their Eyes, and his actions in their Hearts, that for their Tongues to be silent, and not confesse so much, were a kinde of ingratefull Iniurie: to report otherwise, were a Mallice, that giving it selfe the Lye, would plaiche reproofe and rebuke from every Eare that heard it.
1. Of. No more of him, he's a worthy man: make way, they are comming.

A Sennet. Enter the Patricians, and the Tribunes of the People, Lictors before them: Coriolanus, Menenius, Cominius the Consul: Sicinius and Brutus take their places by themselues. Coriolanus stands.

Menen. Having determin'd of the Volces,
And to send for Titus Lartius it remaines,
As the maine Point of this our after-meeting,

To

To gratifie his Noble seruice, that hath
Thus stood for his Countrey. Therefore please you,
Most reverend and grave Elders, to desire
The present Consull, and lest Generall,
In our well-found Successes, to report
A little of that worthy Worke, performd
By Martius Caius Coriolanus: whom
We met here, both to thanke, and to remember,
With Honors like himselfe.

1. Sen. Speake, good Cominius:
Leave nothing out for length, and make vs thinke
Rather our States defectiue for requitall,
Then we to stretch it out. Masters a'th' People,
We doe request your kindest eares: and after
Your loaing motion toward the common Body,
To yeeld what passes here.

Sicin. We are conuenced vpon a pleasing Treatie, and haue hearts inclinable to honor and aduance the Theame
of our Assembly.

Brutus. Which the rather wee shall be blest to doe, if he remember a kinder value of the People, then he hath hereto priz'd them at.

Menen. That's off, that's off: I would you rather had been silent. Please you to heare Cominius speake?

Brutus Most willingly: but yet my Caution was
more pertinent then the rebuke you gaue it.

Menen. He loues your People, but tye him not to be their Bed-fellow: Worthie Cominius speake.

Coriolanus rises, and offers to go away.

Nay, keepe your place.

Senat. Sit Coriolanus: never shame to heare
What you haue Nobly done.

Coriol. Your Honors pardon:
I had rather haue my Wounds to heale againe,
Then heare say how I got them.

Brutus. Sir, I hope my words dis-bench'd you not?

Coriol. No Sir: yet oft,
When blowes haue made me stay, I fled from words.
You sooth'd not, therefore hurt not: but your People,
I love them as they weigh—

Menen. Pray now sit downe.

Coriol. I had rather haue one scratch my Head i'th' Sun,
When the Alarum were struck, then idly sit
To heare my Nothings monster'd. Exit Coriolanus

Menen. Masters of the People,
Your multiplying Spawne, how can he flatter?
That's thousand to one good one, when you now see
He had rather venture all his Limbes for Honor,
Then on ones Eares to heare it. Proceed Cominius.

Com. I shall lacke voyce: the deeds of Coriolanus
Should not be vtter'd feebly: it is held,
That Valour is the chiefest Vertue,
And most dignifies the hauer: if it be,
The man I speake of, cannot in the World
Be singly counter-poys'd. At sixteene yeeres,
When Tarquin made a Head for Rome, he fought
Beyond the marke of others: our then Dictator,
Whom with all praise I point at, saw him fight,
When with his Amazonian Shinne he drove
The bristled Lippes before him: he bestrid
An o're-prest Roman, and s'th' Consuls view
Slew three Opposers: Tarquin selfe he met,
And struckt him on his Knee: in that dayes feates,
When he might act the Woman in the Scene,
He prou'd best man i'th' field, and for his meed
Was Brow-bound with the Oake. His Pupill age
Man-entered thus, he waxed like a Sea,
And in the brunt of seuenteene Battailes since,
He lurcht all Swords of the Garland: for this last,
Before, and in Corioles, let me say
I cannot speake him home: he stopt the flyers,
And by his rare example made the Coward
Turne terror into sport: as Weeds before
A Vessell vnder sayle, so men obey'd,
And fell below his Stem: his Sword, Deaths stampe,
Where it did marke, it tooke from face to foot.
He was a thing of Blood, whose every motion
Was tim'd with dying Cryes: alone he entred
The mortall Gate of th' Citie, which he painted
With shunlesse destinie: aydelesse came off,
And with a sudden re-inforcement struck
Corioles like a Planet: now all's his,
When by and by the dinne of Warre gan pierce
His ready sence: then straight his doubled spirit
Requickned what in flesh was fatigate,
And to the Battaile came he, where he did
Runne reeking o're the liues of men, as if 'twere
A perpetuall spoyle: and till we call'd
Both Field and Citie ours, he never stood
To ease his Brest with panting.

Menen Worthy man.

Senat He cannot but with measure fit the Honors
which we deuise him.

Com. Our spoyles he kickt at,
And look'd vpon things precious, as they were
The common Muck of the World: he coueted lesse
Then Misetre it selfe would giue, rewards his deeds
With doing them, and is contene
To spend the time, to end it.

Menen. Hee s right Noble, let him be call'd for.

Senat. Call Coriolanus.

Off He doth appeare.

Enter Coriolanus.

Menen. The Senate, Coriolanus, are well pleas'd to make thee Consull

Corio. I doe owe them still my Life, and Services.

Menen. It then remaines, that you doe speake to the People.

Corio. I doe beseech you,
Let me o're-leape that custome: for I cannot
Put on the Gowne, stand naked, and entreat them
For my Wounds sake, to giue their sufferage:
Please you that I may passe this doing.

Sicin. Sir, the People must haue their Voyces,
Neyther will they bate one iot of Ceremonie.

Menen. Put them not too't:
Pray you goe fit you to the Custome,
And take to you, as your Predecessors haue,
Your Honor with your forme.

Corio. It is a part that I shall blush in acting,
And might well be taken from the People.

Brutus. Marke you that.

Corio. To brag vnto them, thus I did, and thus
Shew them th'vnaking Skarres, which I should hide,
As if I had receiu'd them for the hire
Of their breath onely

Menen. Doe not stand vpon't:
We recommend to you Tribunes of the People
Our purpose to them, and to our Noble Consull
Wish we all Ioy, and Honor.

Senat. To

Senat. To Coriolanus come all ioy and Honor.

Flourish Cornets.

Then Exeunt. Manet Sicinius and Brutus.

Bru. You see how he intends to vse the people.

Sicin. May they perceiue's intent: he will require them As if he did contemne what he requested, Should be in them to giue.

Bru. Come, we'l informe them Of our proceedings heere on th'Market place, I know they do attend vs.

Enter seuen or eight Citizens.

1. Cit. Once if he do require our voyces, wee ou ght not to deny him.

2. Cit. We may Sir if we will.

3. Cit. We haue power in our selues to do it, but it is a power that we haue no power to do: For, if hee shew vs his wounds, and tell vs his deeds, we are to put our tongues into those wounds, and speake for them: So if he tel vs his Noble deeds, we must also tell him our Noble acceptance of them. Ingratitude is monstrous, and for the multitude to be ingratefull, were to make a Monster of the multitude; of the which, we being members, should bring our selues to be monstrous members.

1. Cit. And to make vs no better thought of a little helpe will serue: for once we stood vp about the Corne, he himselfe stucke not to call vs the many-headed Multitude.

3. Cit. We haue beene call'd so of many, not that our heads are some browne, some blacke, some Abrom, some bald; but that our wits are so diuersly Coulored; and truely I thinke, if all our wittes were to issue out of one Scull, they would flye East, West, North, South, and their consent of one direct way, should be at once to all the points a'th Compasse.

2. Cit. Thinke you so? Which way do you iudge my wit would flye.

3. Cit. Nay your wit will not so soone out as another man will, 'tis strongly wedg'd vp in a blocke head: but if it were at liberty, 'twould sure Southward.

2 Cit. Why that way?

3 Cit. To loose it selfe in a Fogge, where being three parts melted away with rotten Dewes, the fourth would returne for Conscience sake, to helpe to get thee a Wife.

2 Cit. You are neuer without your trickes, you may, you may.

3 Cit. Are you all resolu'd to giue your voyces? But that's no matter, the greater part carries it, I say. If he would incline to the people, there was neuer a worthier man.

Enter Coriolanus in a gowne of Humility, with Menenius.

Heere he comes, and in the Gowne of humility, marke his behaiour: we are not to stay altogether, but to come by him where he stands, by ones, by twoes, & by threes. He's to make his requests by particulars, wherein euerie one of vs has a single Honor, in giuing him our own voices with our owne tongues, therefore follow me, and Ile direct you how you shall go by him.

All. Content, content.

Men. Oh Sir, you are not right: haue you not knowne The worthiest men haue done't?

Coria. What must I say, I pray Sir?

Plague vpon't, I cannot bring My tougne to such a pace. Looke Sir, my wounds, I got them in my Countries Seruice, when Some certaine of your Brethren roar'd, and ranne From th'noise of our owne Drummes.

Menen. Oh me the Gods, you must not speak of that, You must desire them to thinke vpon you.

Coriol. Thinke vpon me? Hang 'em, I would they would forget me, like the Vertues Which our Diuines lose by em.

Men. You'l marre all. Ile leaue you: Pray you speake to em, I pray you In wholsome manner. Exit

Enter three of the Citizens.

Coria. Bid them wash their Faces, And keepe their teeth cleane: So, heere comes a brace, You know the cause (Sir) of my standing heere.

3 Cit. We do Sir, tell vs what hath brought you too't.

Coria. Mine owne desert.

2 Cit. Your owne desert.

Coria. I, but mine owne desire.

3 Cit. How not your owne desire?

Coria. No Sir, 'twas never my desire yet to trouble the poore with begging.

3 Cit. You must thinke if we giue you any thing, we hope to gaine by you.

Coria. Well then I pray, your price a'th'Consulship.

1 Cit. The price is, to aske it kindly.

Coria. Kindly sir, I pray let me ha't: I haue wounds to shew you, which shall bee yours in priuate. your good voice Sir, what say you?

2 Cit. You shall ha't worthy Sir.

Coria. A match Sir, there's in all two worthie voyces begg'd: I haue your Alms, Adieu.

3 Cit. But this is something odde.

2 Cit. And 'twere to giue againe: but 'tis no matter

Exeunt. Enter two other Citizens.

Coriol. Pray you now, if it may stand with the tune of your voices, that I may bee Consull, I haue heere the Customarie Gowne.

1. You haue deserued Nobly of your Country, and you haue not deserued Nobly.

Coriol. Your Ænigma.

1 You haue bin a scourge to her enemies, you haue bin a Rod to her Friends, you haue not indeede loued the Common people.

Coriol You should account mee the more Vertuous, that I haue not bin common in my Loue, I will sir flatter my sworne Brother the people to earne a dearer estimation of them, 'tis a condition they account gentle: & since the wisedome of their choice, is rather to haue my Hat, then my Heart, I will practice the insinuating nod, and be off to them most counterfeitly, that is sir, I will counterfet the bewitchment of some popular man, and giue it bountifull to the desirers. Therefore beseech you, I may be Consull.

2. Wee hope to finde you our friend: and therefore giue you our voices heartily.

1. You haue receyued many wounds for your Country.

Coriol. I wil not Seale your knowledge with shewing them. I will make much of your voyces, and so trouble you no farther.

Both. The Gods giue you ioy Sir heartily.

Coriol. Most sweet Voyces:

Better it is to dye, better to sterue, Then craue the higher, which first we do deserue. Why in this Woolnish tongue should I stand heere, To begge of Hob and Dicke, that doeth appeare

Their

Their needlesse Vouchers: Custome calls me to't.
What Custome wills in all things, should we doo't?
The Dust on antique Time would lye vnswept,
And mountainous Error be too highly heapt,
For Truth to o're-peere. Rather then foole it so,
Let the high Office and the Honor go
To one that would doe thus. I am halfe through,
The one part suffered, the other will I doo.

Enter three Citizens more.

Here come moe Voyces.
Your Voyces? for your Voyces I have fought,
Watcht for your Voyces: for your Voyces, beare
Of Wounds, two dozen odde: Battailes thrice six
I have seene, and heard of: for your Voyces,
Have done many things, some lesse, some more:
Your Voyces? Indeed I would be Consull.

1.Cit. Hee ha's done Nobly, and cannot goe without any honest mans Voyce.

2.Cit. Therefore let him be Consull: the Gods giue him joy, and make him good friend to the People.

All. Amen, Amen. God saue thee, Noble Consull.

Corio. Worthy Voyces.

Enter Menenius, with Brutus and Scicinius.

Menen. You have stood your Limitation:
And the Tribunes endue you in the Peoples Voyce,
Remaines, that in th'Officiall Markes inuested,
You anon doe meet the Senate.

Corio. Is this done?

Scicin. The Custome of Request you have discherg'd:
The People doe admit you, and are summon'd
To meet anon, vpon your approbation.

Corio. Where? at the Senate-house?

Scicin. There, Coriolanus

Corio. May I change these Garments?

Scicin. You may, Sir.

Corio. That lie straight doe: and knowing my selfe again,
Repayre to th'Senate-house.

Menen. Ile keepe you company. Will you along?

Brut. We stay here for the People.

Scicin. Fare you well. Exeunt Coriol. and Menen.
He ha's it now: and by his Lookes, me thinkes,
'Tis warme at's heart.

Brut. With a prowd heart he wore his humble Weeds:
Will you dismisse the People?

Enter the Plebians.

Scicin. How now, my Masters, have you chose this man?

1.Cit. He ha's our Voyces, Sir.

Brut. We pray the Gods, he may deserue your loues.

2.Cit. Amen, Sir: to my poore vnworthy notice,
He mock'd vs, when he begg'd our Voyces.

3.Cit. Certainely, he flowted vs downe-right.

1.Cit. No, 'tis his kind of speech, he did not mock vs.

2.Cit. Not one amongst vs, saue your selfe, but sayes
He vs'd vs scornefully: he should haue shew'd vs
His Marks of Merit, Wounds receiu'd for's Countrey.

Scicin. Why so he did I am sure.

All. No, not no man saw 'em.

3.Cit. Hee said he had Wounds,
Which he could shew in priuate:
And with his Hat, thus waving it in scorne,
I would be Consull, sayes he: aged Custome,
But by your Voyces, will not so permit me.
Your Voyces therefore: when we granted that,
Here was, I thanke you for your Voyces, thanke you
Your most sweet Voyces: now you have left your Voyces,
I have no further with you. Was not this mockerie?

Scicin. Why either were you ignorant to see't?
Or seeing it, of such Childish friendlinesse,
To yeeld your Voyces?

Brut. Could you not haue told him,
As you were lesson'd: When he had no Power,
But was a petty seruant to the State,
He was your Enemie, ever spake against
Your Liberties, and the Charters that you beare
I'th' Body of the Weale: and now arriuing
A place of Potencie, and sway o'th' State,
If he should still malignantly remaine
Fast Foe to th' Plebeij, your Voyces might
Be Curses to your selues. You should haue said,
That as his worthy deeds did clayme no lesse
Then what he stood for: so his gracious nature
Would thinke vpon you, for your Voyces,
And translate his Mallice towards you, into Loue,
Standing your friendly Lord.

Scicin. Thus to haue said,
As you were fore-aduis'd, had touch't his Spirit,
And try'd his Inclination: from him plaeck
Eyther his gracious Promise, which you might
As cause had call'd you vp, haue held him to;
Or else it would haue gall'd his surly nature,
Which easily endures not Article,
Tying him to ought, so putting him to Rage,
You should haue ta'ne th'aduantage of his Choller,
And pass'd him vnelected.

Brut. Did you perceiue,
He did solliciteyou in free Contempt,
When he did need your Loues: and doe you thinke,
That his Contempt shall not be bruising to you,
When he hath power to crush? Why, had your Bodyes
No Heart among you? Or had you Toongues, to cry
Against the Rectorship of Iudgement?

Scicin. Haue you, ere now, deny'd the asker:
And now againe, of him that did not asks, but mock,
Bestow your fu'd. for Toongues?

3.Cit. Hee's not confirm'd, we may deny him yet.

2.Cit. And will deny him:
Ile haue five hundred Voyces of that sound.

1.Cit. I twice five hundred, & their friends, to piece 'em.

Brut. Get you hence instantly, and tell those friends,
They haue chose a Consull, that will from them take
Their Liberties, make them of no more Voyce
Then Dogges, that are as often beat for barking,
As therefore kept to doe so.

Scici. Let them assemble: and on a safer Iudgement,
All reuoke your ignorant election: Enforce his Pride,
And his old Hate vnto you: besides, forget not
With what Contempt he wore the humble Weed,
How in his Suit he scorn'd you but your Loues,
Thinking vpon his Services, tooke from you
Th'apprehension of his present portance,
Which most gibingly, vngrasely, he did fashion
After the inueterate Hate he beares you.

Brut. Lay a fault on vs, your Tribunes,
That we labour'd (no impediment between)
But that you must cast your Election on him.

Scici. Say you chose him, more after our commandement,
Then as guided by your owne true affections, and that
Your Minds pre-occupy'd with what you rather must do,
Then what you should, made you against the grains
To Voyce him Consull. Lay the fault on vs.

Brut. I spare vs not: Say, we read Lectures to you,
How youngly he began to serue his Country,
How long continued, and what stock he springs of,
The Noble House o'th' Martians: from whence came
That Ancus Martius, Numaes Daughters Sonne,
Who after great Hostilius here was King,
Of the same House Publius and Quintus were,
That our best Water, brought by Conduits hither,
And Nobly nam'd, so twice being Censor,
Was his great Ancestor.
Scicin. One thus descended,
That hath beside well in his person wrought,
To be set high in place, we did commend
To your remembrances: but you haue found,
Skaling his present bearing with his past,
That he's your fixed enemie, and reuolte
Your sudden approbation.
Brut. Say you ne're had don't,
(Harpe on that still) but by our putting on:
And presently, when you haue drawne your number,
Repaire toth' Capitoll.
All. We will so: almost all repent in their election.
Exeunt Plebeians.

Brut. Let them goe on:
This Mutinie were better put in hazard,
Then stay past doubt, for greater:
If, as his nature is, he fall in rage
With their refusall, both obserue and answer
The vantage of his anger.
Scicin. Toth' Capitoll, come:
We will be there before the stream o'th' People:
And this shall seeme, as partly 'tis, their owne,
Which we haue goaded on-ward. Exeunt.

Actus Tertius.

Cornets. Enter Coriolanus, Menenius, all the Senate, Cominius, Titus Latius, and other Senators.
Corio. Tullus Auffidius then had made new head.
Latius. He had, my Lord, and that it was which caus'd
Our swifter Composition.
Corio. So then the Volces stand but as at first,
Ready when time shall prompt them, to make reade
Vpon's againe.
Com. They are worne (Lord Consull) so,
That we shall hardly in our ages see
Their Banners waue againe.
Corio. Saw you Auffidius?
Latius. On safegard he came to me, and did curse
Against the Volces, for they had so vildly
Yeelded the Towne: he is retyred to Antium.
Corio. Spoke he of me?
Latius. He did, my Lord.
Corio. How? what?
Latius. How often he had met you Sword to Sword:
That of all things vpon the Earth, he hated
Your person most: That he would pawne his fortunes
To hopelesse restitution, so he might
Be call'd your Vanquisher.
Corio. At Antium liues he?
Latius. At Antium.
Corio. I wish I had a cause to seeke him there,
To oppose his hatred fully. Welcome home.
Enter Scicinius and Brutus.
Behold, these are the Tribunes of the People,
The Tongues o'th' Common Mouth. I do despise them:
For they doe prease them in Authoritie,
Against all Noble sufferance.
Scicin. Passe no further.
Cor. Hah? what is that?
Brut. It will be dangerous to goe on— No further.
Corio. What makes this change?
Menen. The matter?
Com. Hath he not pass'd the Noble, and the Commons?
Brut. Cominius, no.
Corio. Haue I had Childrens Voyces?
Senat. Tribunes giue way, he shall toth' Market place.
Brut. The People are incens'd against him.
Scicin. Stop, or all will fall in broyle.
Corio. Are these your Heard?
Must these haue Voyces, that can yeeld them now,
And straight disclaim their tounge? what are your Offices?
You being their Mouthes, why rule you not their Teeth?
Haue you not set them on?
Menen. Be calme, be calme.
Corio. It is a purpos'd thing, and growes by Plot,
To curbe the will of the Nobilitie:
Suffer't, and liue with such as cannot rule,
Nor euer will be ruled.
Brut. Call't not a Plot:
The People cry you mockt them: and of late,
When Corne was given them gratis, you repin'd,
Scandal'd the Supplants: for the People, call'd them
Time-pleasers, flatterers, foes to Nobleness.
Corio. Why this was knowne before.
Brut. Not to them all.
Corio. Haue you inform'd them sithence?
Brut. How? I informe them?
Com. You are like to doe such business.
Brut. Not vnlike each way to better yours.
Corio. Why then should I be Consull? by yond Clouds
Let me deserue so ill as you, and make me
Your fellow Tribune.
Scicin. You shew too much of that,
For which the People stirre: if you will passe
To where you are bound, you must enquire your way,
Which you are out of, with a gentler spirit,
Or never be so Noble as a Consull,
Nor yoake with him for Tribune.
Menen. Let's be calme.
Com. The People are abus'd: set on, this paltring
Becomes not Rome: nor has's Coriolanus
Deseru'd this so dishonor'd Rub, layd falsely
I'th' plaine Way of his Merit.
Corio. Tell me of Corne: this was my speech,
And I will speak't againe.
Menen. Not now, not now.
Senat. Not in this heat, Sir, now.
Corio. Now as I liue, I will.
My Noblest friends, I craue their pardons:
For the mutable rank-sented Meynie,
Let them regard me, as I doe not flatter,
And therein behold themselues: I say againe,
In soothing them, we nourish 'gainst our Senate
The Cockle of Rebellion, Insolence, Sedition,
Which we our selues haue plowed for, sow'd, & scatter'd,
By mingling them with vs, the honor'd Number,
Who lack not Vertue, no, nor Power, but that
Which they haue given to Beggers.
Menen. Well, no more.
Senat. No more words, we beseech you.
Corio. How? no more?

As for my Country, I have shed my blood,
Not fearing outward force: So shall my Lungs
Coine words till their decay, against those Measels
Which we disdaine should Tetter vs, yet sought
The very way to catch them.
Bru. You speake o'th people, as if you were a God,
To punish; Not a man, of their Infirmity.
Sicin. 'Twere well we let the people know't.
Menen. What, what? His Choller?
Cor. Choller? Were I as patient as the midnight sleep,
By Ioue, 'twould be my mmde.
Sicin. It is a minde that shall remaine a poison
Where it is: not poyson any further.
Corio. Shall remaine?
Heere you this Triton of the Minnows? Marke you
His absolute Shall?
Com. 'Twas from the Cannon.
Cor. Shall? O God! but most vnwise Patricians: why
You grave, but wreakleſſe Senators, have you thus Given Hydra heere to choose an Officer,
That with his peremptory Shall, being but
The horne, and noise o'th' Monsters, wants not spirit
To say, he'l turne your Current in a ditch,
And make your Channell his? If he have power,
Then vale your Ignorance: If none, awake
Your dangerous Lenity: If you are Learn'd,
Be not as common Fooles; if you are not,
Let them have Cushions by you. You are Plebeians,
If they be Senators: and they are no leſſe,
When both your voices blended, the great'ſt taste
Most palates theirs. They choose their Magistrate,
And such a one as he, who puts his Shall,
His popular Shall, against a graver Bench
Then ever frown'd in Greece. By Ioue himſelfe,
It makes the Consuls base; and my Soule akes
To know, when two Authorities are vp,
Neither Supreame: How soone Confusion
May enter 'twixt the gap of Both, and take
The one by th'other.
Com. Well, on to'th Market place.
Corio. Who ever gave that Counsell, to graue forth
The Corne o'th' Store-house gratis, as 'twas vs'd
Sometime in Greece.
Menen. Well, well, no more of that.
Cor. Though there the people had more absolute powre
I say they nor'ſhe disobedience: fed, the ruin of the State.
Bru. Why shall the people give
One that speakes thus, their voyce?
Corio. Ile give my Reasons,
More worthier then their Voyces. They know the Corne
Was not our recompence, resting well ſatisfi'd
They ne're did service for't, being preſt to'th' Warre,
Even when the Nauell of the State was touch'd,
They would not thrid the Gates: This kinde of Service
Did not deserue Corne gratis. Being i'th' Warre,
These Mutinies and Reuolts, wherein they shew'd
Most Valour, spoke not for them. Th'Accusation
Which they haue often made against the Senate,
All cause vnborne, could never be the Natiue
Of our so franke Donation. Well, what then?
How shall this Bosome-multiplied, digest
The Senates Courtesie? Let deeds expresse
What's like to be their words, We did request it,
We are the greater pole, and in true feare
They gave vs our demands. Thus we debate
The Nature of our Seats, and make the Rabble
Call our Cares, Feares; which will in time
Breake ope the Locke o'th Senate, and bring in
The Crowes to pecke the Eagles.
Menen. Come enough.
Bru. Enough, with ouer measure.
Corio. No, take more.
What may be sworne by, both Diuine and Humane,
Seale what I end withall. This double worship,
Wherein part do's disdaine with cause, the other
Insult without all reason: where Gentry, Title, wisedom
Cannot conclude, but by the yes and no
Of generall Ignorance, it must omit
Real Necessities, and give way the while
To vnstable Slightnesse. Purpose so barr'd, it followes,
Nothing is done to purpose. Therefore beseech you,
You that will be leſſe fearefull, then discreet,
That loue the Fundamentall part of State
More then you doubt the change on't. That preferre
A Noble life, before a Long, and Wide,
To lampe a Body with a dangerous Physicke.
That's sure of death without it. at once pluck out
The Multitudinous Tongue, let them not licke
The sweet which is their poyson. Your dishonor
Mangles true iudgement, and bereaues the State
Of that Integrity which should become't:
Not hauing the power to do the good it would
For th'ill which doth controul't.
Bru. Has said enough.
Sicin. Ha's spoken like a Traitor, and shall answer
As Traitors do.
Corio. Thou wretch, despight o're-whelme thee:
What should the people do with these bald Tribunes?
On whom depending, their obedience failes
To th'greater Bench, in a Rebellion:
When what's not meet, but what must be, was Law,
Then were they chosen: in a better houre,
Let what is meet, be said it must be meet,
And throw their power i'th' dust.
Bru. Manifest Treason.
Sicin. This a Consull? No.
Enter an Aedile.
Bru. The Ediles hoe: Let him be apprehended
Sicin. Go call the people, in whose name my Selfe
Attach thee as a Traitorous Innouator,
A Foe to'th publike Weale. Obey I charge thee,
And follow to thine answer.
Corio. Hence old Goat
All. We'l Sureety him
Com. Ag'd sir, hands off.
Corio. Hence rotten thing, or I shall shake thy bones
Out of thy Garments.
Sicin. Helpe ye Citizens.
Enter a rabble of Plebeians with the Aediles.
Menen. On both sides more respect.
Sicin. Heere's he, that would take from you all your power.
Bru. Seize him Aediles.
All. Downe with him, downe with him
2. Sen. Weapons, weapons, weapons:
They all buſtle about Coriolanus.
Tribunes, Patricians, Citizens: what ho:
Sicinius, Brutus, Coriolanus, Citizens.
All. Peace, peace, peace, stay, hold, peace.
Menen. What is about to be? I am out of Breath,
Confusions neere, I cannot speake. You, Tribunes
To th'people: Coriolanus, patience: Speak good Sicinius.

Scici. Heare me, People peace.

All. Let's here our Tribune: peace, speake, speake, speake.

Scics. You are at point to lose your Liberties: Martius would have all from you; Martius, Whom late you have nam'd for Consull.

Menen. Fie, fie, fie, this is the way to kindle, not to quench.

Sena. To vnbuild the Citie, and to lay all flat.

Scici. What is the Citie, but the People?

All. True, the People are the Citie.

Brut. By the consent of all, we were establish'd the Peoples Magistrates.

All. You so remaine.

Menen. And so are like to doe.

Com. That is the way to lay the Citie flat, To bring the Roofe to the Foundation, And burie all, which yet distinctly ranges In heapes, and piles of Ruine.

Scics. This deserues Death.

Brut. Or let vs stand to our Authoritie, Or let vs lose it: we doe here pronounce, Vpon the part o'th' People, in whose power We were elected theirs, Martius is worthy Of present Death.

Scici. Therefore lay hold of him: Beare him toth' Rock Tarpeian, and from thence Into destruction cast him.

Brut. Ædiles seize him.

All Plb. Yeeld Martius, yeeld.

Menen. Heare me one word, beseech you Tribunes, heare me but a word.

Ædiles. Peace, peace.

Menen. Be that you seeme, truly your Countries friend, And temp'rately proceed to what you would Thus violently redresse.

Brut. Sir, those cold wayes, That seeme like prudent helpes, are very poysonous, Where the Disease is violent. Lay hands vpon him, And beare him to the Rock. Coria. draws his Sword.

Coria. No, Ile die here: There's some among you haue beheld me fighting. Come trie vpon your selues, what you haue seene me.

Menen. Downe with that Sword, Tribunes withdraw a while.

Brut. Lay hands vpon him.

Menen. Helpe Martius, helpe: you that be noble, helpe him young and old.

All. Downe with him, downe with him. Exeunt.

In this Mutinie, the Tribunes, the Ædiles, and the People are beat in.

Menen. Goe, get you to out Houses be gone, away, All will be naught else.

2. Sena. Get you gone.

Com. Stand fast, we haue as many friends as enemies.

Menen. Shall it be put to that?

Sena. The Gods forbid: I prythee noble friend, home to thy House, Leave vs to cure this Cause.

Menen. For 'tis a Sore vpon vs, You cannot Tent your selfe: be gone, beseech you.

Coria. Come Sir, along with vs.

Menen. I would they were Barbarians, as they are, Though in Rome litter'd; not Romans, as they are not, Though calued i'th' Porch o'th' Capitoll:

Be gone, put not your worthy Rage into your Tongue, One time will owe another.

Coria. On faire ground, I could beat forties of them.

Menen. I could my selfe take vp a Brace o'th' best of them, yea, the two Tribunes.

Com. But now 'tis odder beyond Arithmetick, And Manhood is call'd Foolerie, when it stands Against a falling Fabrick. Will you hence, Before the Tagge returne? whose Rage doth rend Like interrupted Waters, and o're-beate What they are vs'd to beare.

Menen. Pray you be gone: Ile trie whether my old Wit be in request With those that haue but little: this must be patcht With Cloth of any Colour.

Com. Nay, come away. Exeunt Coriolanus and Cominius.

Patri. This man ha's marr'd his fortune.

Menen. His nature is too noble for the World: He would not flatter Neptune for his Trident, Or Iouis, for's power to Thunder: his Heart's his Mouth: What his Breft forges, that his Tongue must vent, And being angry, does forget that ever He heard the Name of Death. A Noise within.

Here's goodly worke.

Patri. I would they were a bed.

Menen. I would they were in Tyber. What the vengeance, could he not speake 'em faire?

Enter Brutus and Sicinius with the rabble again.

Sicin. Where is this Vipes, That would depopulate the city, & be every man himselfe?

Menen. You worthy Tribunes.

Sicin. He shall be throwne downe the Tarpeian rock With rigorous hands: he hath resisted Law, And therefore Law shall scorne him further Triall Then the seuerity of the publike Power, Which he so sets at nought.

1 Cit. He shall well know the Noble Tribunes are The peoples mouths, and we their hands.

All. He shall sure on't.

Menen. Sir, sir. Sicin. Peace.

Men. Do not cry hauocke, where you should but hunt With modest warranr.

Sicin. Sir, how com'st that you haue holpe To make this rescue?

Menen. Heare me speake? As I do know The Consuls worthinesse, so can I name his Faults.

Sicin. Consull? what Consull?

Menen. The Consull Coriolanus.

Bru. He Consull.

All. No, no, no, no, no.

Menen. If by the Tribunes leaue, And yours good people, I may be heard, I would crau a word or two, The which shall turne you to no further harme, Then so much losse of time.

Sic. Speake breefely then, For we are peremptory to dispatch This Viperous Traitor: to elect him heere Were but one danger, and to keepe him heere Our certaine death: therefore it is decreed, He dyes to night.

Menen. Now the good Gods forbid, That our renowned Rome, whose gratitude Towards her deserued Children, is enroll'd In Iouis owne Booke, like an vnnaturall Dam Should now eate vp her owne.

Sicin. He's a Disease that must be cut away.
Menen. Oh he's a Limbe, that has but a Disease
Mortall, to cut it off: to cure it, easie.
What has he done to Rome, that's worthy death?
Killing our Enemies, the blood he hath lost
(Which I dare vouch, is more than that he hath
By many an Ounce) he dropp'd it for his Country:
And what is left, to loose it by his Country,
Were to vs all that do't, and suffer it
A brand to th'end a'th World.
Sicin. This is clean kamme.
Brut. Merely awry:
When he did loose his Country, it honour'd him.
Menen. The service of the foote
Being once gangren'd, is not then respected
For what before it was.
Bru. We'l heare no more:
Pursue him to his house, and plaque him there,
Least his infection being of catching nature,
Spread further.
Menen. One word more, one word:
This Tiger-footed-rage, when it shall find
The harme of vnaym'd swiftnesse, will (too late)
Tye Leaden pounds too's heeles. Proceed by Processe,
Least parties (as he is beloo'd) breake out,
And scathe great Rome with Romanes.
Brut. If it were so?
Sicin. What do ye talke?
Have we not had a taste of his Obedience?
Our Ediles smot: our selues resisted: come.
Menen. Consider this: He has bin bred i'th'Warres
Since a could draw a Sword, and is ill-school'd
In boulted Language: Meale and Bran together
He throwes without distinction. Give me leaue,
Ile go to him, and vndertake to bring him in peace,
Where he shall answer by a lawfull Forme
(In peace) to his vtmost peril.
1. Sen. Noble Tribunes,
It is the humane way: the other course
Will prove to bloody: and the end of it,
Vnknowne to the Beginning.
Sic. Noble Menenius, be you then as the peoples officer:
Masters, lay downe your Weapons.
Bru. Go not home.
Sic. Meet on the Market place: we'l attend you there:
Where if you bring not Martius, we'l proceede
In our first way.
Menen. Ile bring him to you.
Let me desire your company: he must come,
Or what is worst will follow.
Sena. Pray you let's to him. Exeunt Omnes.

Enter Coriolanus with Nobles.

Corio. Let them pull all about mine eares, present me
Death on the Wheele, or at wilde Horses heeles,
Or pile ten hilles on the Tarpeian Rocke,
That the precipitation might downe stretch
Below the beame of sight; yet will I still
Be thus to them.

Enter Valumnia.

Noble. You do the Nobles.
Corio. I muse my Mother
Do's not approue me further, who was wont
To call them Woollen Vassailes, things created
To buy and sell with Groats, to shew bare heads
In Congregations, to yawne, be still, and wonder,
When one but of my ordinance stood vp
To speake of Peace, or Warre. I talke of you,
Why did you wish me milder? Would you haue me
False to my Nature? Rather say, I play
The man I am.
Volum. Oh sir, sir, sir,
I would haue had you put your power well on
Before you had worne it out.
Corio. Let go.
Vol. You might haue beene enough the man you are,
With striuing lesse to be so: Lesser had bin
The things of your disposition, if
You had not shew'd them how ye were dispos'd
Ere they lack'd power to crosse you.
Corio. Let them hang.
Volum. I, and burne too.

Enter Menenius with the Senators.

Men. Come, come, you haue bin too rough, something too rough: you must returne, and mend it.
Sen. There's no remedy,
Valesse by not so doing, our good Citie
Cleaue in the midd'ft, and perish.
Volum. Pray be counsail'd;
I haue a heart as little apt as yours,
But yet a braine, that leades my vse of Anger
To better vantage.
Menen. Well said, Noble woman:
Before he should thus stoope to th'heart, but that
The violent fit a'th'time craues it as Physicke
For the whole State; I would put mine Armour on,
Which I can scarsly beare.
Corio. What must I do?
Menen. Returne to th'Tribunes.
Corio. Well, what then? what then?
Menen. Repent, what you haue spoke.
Corio. For them, I cannot do it to the Gods,
Must I then doe't to them?
Volum. You are too absolute,
Though therein you can never be too Noble,
But when extremities speake. I haue heard you say,
Honor and Policy, like vnseuer'd Friends,
I'th'Warre do grow together: Grant that, and tell me
In Peace, what each of them by th'other loose,
That they combine not there?
Corio. Tush, tush.
Menen. A good demand.
Volum. If it be Honor in your Warres, to seeme
The same you are not, which for your best ends
You adopt your policy: How is it lesse or worse
That it shall hold Companionship in Peace
With Honour, as in Warre; since that to both
It stands in like request.
Corio. Why force you this?
Volum. Because, that
Now it lyes you on to speake to th'people:
Not by your owne instruction, nor by th'matter
Which your heart prompts you, but with such words
That are but rooted in your Tongue;
Though but Bastards, and Syllables
Of no allowance, to your bosomes truth.
Now, this no more dishonors you at all,
Then to take in a Towne with gentle words,
Which else would put you to your fortune, and
The hazard of much blood.
I would dissemble with my Nature, where
My Fortunes and my Friends at stake, requir'd
I should do so in Honor. I am in this

Your Wife, your Sonne: These Senators, the Nobles,
And you, will rather shew our generall Louts,
How you can frowne, then spend a fawne vpon 'em,
For the inheritance of their loues, and safegard
Of what that want might ruine.

Menen. Noble Lady.
Come goe with vs, speake fawre: you may saue so,
Not what is dangerous present, but the loss
Of what is past.

Volum. I prythee now, my Sonne,
Goe to them, with this Bonnet in thy hand,
And thus fawre hauing stretcht it (here be with them)
Thy Knee bussing the stones: for in such businesse
Action is eloquence, and the eyes of th'ignorant
More learned then the eares, waving thy head,
Which often thus correcting thy stout heart,
Now humble as the ripest Mulberry,
That will not hold the handling: or say to them,
Thou art their Souldier, and being bred in broyles,
Hast not the soft way, which thou do'st confesse
Were fit for thee to vse, as they to clayme,
In asking their good loues, but thus wilt frame
Thy selfe (forsooth) hereafter theirs so fawre,
As thou hast power and person.

Menen. This but done,
Euen as she speakes, why their hearts were yours:
For they haue Pardons, being ask'd, as free,
As words to little purpose.

Volum. Prythee now,
Goe, and be rul'd: although I know thou hadst rather
Follow thine Enemie in a fiery Gulfe,
Then flatter him in a Bower. Enter Cominius.
Here is Cominius.

Com. I haue beene i'th' Market place: and Sir 'tis fit
You make strong partie, or defend your selfe
By calmenesse, or by absence: all's in anger.

Menen. Onely fair speech.

Com. I thinke 'twill serue, if he can thereto frame his spirit.

Volum. He must, and will:
Prythee now say you will, and goe about it.

Coriol. Must I goe shew them my vnbarb'd Sconce?
Must I with my base Tongue giue to my Noble Heart
A Lye, that it must beare well? I will doo't.
Yet were there but this single Plot, to loose
This Mould of Martius, they to dust should grinde it,
And throw't against the Winde. Toth' Market place:
You haue put me now to such a part, which neuer
I shall discharge toth' Life.

Com. Come, come, wee're prompt you.

Volum. I prythee now sweet Son, as thou hast said
My praises made thee first a Souldier; so
To haue my praise for this, performe a part
Thou hast not done before.

Coriol. Well, I must doo't:
Away my disposition, and possesse me
Some Harlots spirit: My throat of Warre be turn'd,
Which quier'd with my Drumme into a Pipe,
Small as an Eunuch, or the Virgin voyce
That Babies lull a-sleepe: The smiles of Knaues
Tent in my cheeks, and Schoole-boyes Teares take vp
The Glasses of my sight: A Beggars Tongue
Make motion through my Lips, and my Arm'd knees
Who bow'd but in my Stirrop, bend like his
That hath receiu'd an Alms. I will not doo't,
Least I surcease to honor mine owne truth,
And by my Bodies action, teach my Minde
A most inherent Baseness.

Volum. At thy choice then:
To begge of thee, it is my more dis-honor,
Then thou of them. Come all to ruine, let
Thy Mother rather feele thy Pride, then feare
Thy dangerous Stoutnesse: for I mocke at death
With as bigge heart as thou. Do as thou list,
Thy Valiantnesse was mine, thou suck'st it from me:
But owe thy Pride thy selfe.

Coriol. Pray be content:
Mother, I am going to the Market place
Chide me no more. Ile Mountebanke their Loues,
Cogge their Hearts from them, and come home beloued
Of all the Trades in Rome. Looke, I am going:
Commend me to my Wife, Ile returne Consull,
Or neuer trust to what my Tongue can do
I'th way of Flattery further.

Volum. Do your will. Exeunt Volumnia

Com. Away, the Tribones do attend vpon vs: you
To answer mildely: for they are prepar'd
With Accusations, as I heare more strong
Then are vpon you yet.

Coriol. The word is, Mildely. Pray you let vs go,
Let them accuse me by inuention: I
Will answer in mine Honor.

Menen. I, but mildely.

Coriol. Well mildely be it then, Mildely. Exeunt

Enter Sicinius and Brutus.

Bru. In this point charge him home, that he affects
Tyrannicall power: If he euade vs there,
Inforce him with his enuy to the people,
And that the Spoile got on the Antiates
Was ne're distributed. What, will he come?

Enter an Edile.

Edile. Hee's comming.

Bru. How accompanied?

Edile. With old Menenius, and those Senators
That alwayes fauour'd him.

Sicin. Haue you a Catalogue
Of all the Voices that we haue procur'd, set downe by'th Edile. I haue: 'tis ready. (Pale?
Sicin. Haue you collected them by Tribes?
Edile. I haue.
Sicin. Assemble presently the people hither:
And when they heare me say, it shall be so,
I'th'right and strength a'th'Commons: be it either
For death, for fine, or Banishment, then let them
If I say Fine, cry Fine; if Death, cry Death,
Insisting on the olde prerogatiue
And power i'th Truth a'th Cause.

Edile. I shall informe them.

Bru. And when such time they haue begun to cry,
Let them not cease, but with a diuine cession'd
Inforce the present Execution
Of what we chance to Sentence.

Edile. Very well.

Sicin. Make them be strong, and ready for this hint
When we shall hap to giu't them.

Bru. Go about it.
Put him to Choller straies, he hath beene vs'd
Ever to conquer, and to haue his worth
Of contradiction. Being once chaft, he cannot Be ston'd againe to Temperance, then he speakes

What's

What's in his heart, and that is there which lookes
With vs to breake his necke.

Enter Coriolanus, Menenius, and Cominius, with others.

Sicin. Well, heere he comes.
Men. Calmely, I do beseech you.
Cori. I, as an Hostler, that fourth poorest peece
Will beare the Knaue by'th Volume:
Th'honor'd Goddes
Keepe Rome in safety, and the Chaires of Iustice
Supplied with worthy men, plant loue amongst
Through our large Temples with shewes of peace
And not our streets with Warre.
1 Sen. Amen, Amen
Men. A Noble wish.

Enter the Edile with the Plebeians.

Sicin. Draw neere ye people.
Edile. List to your Tribunes. Audience:
Peace I say.
Cori. First heare me speake.
Both Tri. Well say: Peace hoe.
Cori. Shall I be charg'd no further then this present?
Must all determine heere?
Sicin. I do demand,
If you submit you to the peoples voices,
Allow their Officers, and are content
To suffer lawfull Censure for such faults
As shall be proo'd vpon you
Coriol. I am Content.
Men. Lo Citizens, he sayes he is Content.
The warlike Seruice he he's done, consider: Thinke
Vpon the wounds his body beares, which shew
Like Graues i'th holy Church-yard.
Cori. Scratches with Briers, scarres to moue
Laughter onely.
Men. Consider further:
That when he speakes not like a Citizen,
You finde him like a Soldier: do not take
His rougher Actions for malicious sounds
But as I say, such as become a Soldier,
Rather then enuy you.
Com. Well, well, no more
Coriol. What is the matter,
That being past for Consull with full voyce:
I am so dishonour'd, that the very houre
You take it off againe.
Sicin. Answer to vs.
Coriol. Say then: 'tis true, I ought so
Sicin. We chirge you, that you haue contrib'd to take
From Rome all season'd Office, and to winde
Your selfe into a power tyrannicall,
For which you are a Traitor to the people.
Coriol. How? Traytor?
Men. Nay temperately: your promise.
Coriol. The fires i'th'lowest hell. Fould in the people:
Call me their Traitor, thou iniurious Tribune.
Within thine eyes sate twenty thousand deaths
In thy hands clutche: as many Millions in Thy lying tongue, both numbers. I would say
Thou lyest vnto thee, with a voice as free,
As I do pray the Gods.
Sicin. Marke you this people?
All. To'th'Rocke, to'th'Rocke with him.
Sicin. Peace:
We needs not put new matter to his charge:
What you haue seene him do, and heard him speake:
Beating your Officers, cursing your selues,
Opposing Lawes with strokes, and heere defying
Those whose great power must try him.
Euen this so criminall, and in such capitall kinde
Deserues th'extremest death.
Bru. But since he hath serु'd well for Rome.
Coriol. What do you prate of Service.
Bru. I talke of that, that know it.
Coriol. You?
Men. Is this the promise that you made your mother.
Com. Know, I pray you.
Coriol. Ile know no further:
Let them pronounce the steepe Tarpeian death,
Vagabond exile, Flexing, pent to linger
But with a graine a day, I would not buy
Their mercie, at the price of one faire word,
Not checke my Courage for what they can give,
To haue't with saying, Good morrow.
Sicin. For that he ha's
(As much as in him lies) from time to time
Enui'd against the people; seeking meanes
To pluckie away their power: as now at last,
Given Hostile strokes, and that not in the presence
Of dreaded Iustice, but on the Ministers
That doth distribute it. In the name a'th'people,
And in the power of vs the Tribunes, we (Ev'n from this instant) banish him our Citie
In peril of precipitation
From off the Rocke Tarpeian, never more
To enter our Rome gates. I'th'Peoples name,
I say it shall bee so.
All. It shall be so, it shall be so: let him away:
Hee's banish'd, and it shall be so.
Com. Heare me my Masters, and my common friends.
Sicin. He's sentenc'd: No more hearing.
Com. Let me speake:
I haue bene Consull, and can shew from Rome
Her Enemies markes vpon me. I do loue
My Countries good, with a respect more tender,
More holy, and profound, then mine owne life,
My deere Wiues estimate, her wombes encrease,
And treasure of my Loynes: then if I would Speake that.
Sicin. We know your drift. Speake what?
Bru. There's no more to be said, but he is banish'd
As Enemy to the people, and his Country.
It shall bee so.
All. It shall be so, it shall be so.
Coriol. You common cry of Curs, whose breath I hate,
As reeke a'th rotten Fennes: whose Loues I prize,
As the dead Carkasses of vnburied men,
That do corrupt my Ayre: I banish you.
And heere remaine with your vncertainty.
Let every feeble Rumor shake your hearts:
Your Enemies, with nodding of their Plumes
Fan you into dispaire: Haue the power still
To banish your Defenders, till at length
Your ignorance (which finds not till it feeles,
Making but reflexion of your selues,
Still your owne Foes) deliuer you
As most abated Captiues, to some Nation
That wonne you without blowes, despising
For you the City. Thus I turne my backe;
There is a world elsewhere.

Exeunt Coriolanus, Cominius, with Gentlemen.

They all shout, and throw up their Caps.

Edile

Edile. The peoples Enemy is gone, is gone.
All. Our enemy is banish'd, he is gone: Hoo, oo.
Sicin. Go see him out at Gates, and follow him
As he hath follow'd you, with all despight
Giue him deseru'd vexation. Let a guard
Attend vs through the City.
All. Come, come, lets see him out at gates, come:
The Gods preserue our Noble Tribunes, come. Exeunt.

Actus Quartus.

Enter Coriolanus, Volumnia, Virgilia, Menenius, Cominius, with the yong Nobility of Rome.

Corio. Come leaue your teares: a brief farwel: the beast
With many heads butts me away. Nay Mother,
Where is your ancient Courage? You were vs'd
To say, Extremities was the trier of spirits,
That common chances. Common men could beare,
That when the Sea was calme, all Boats alike
Shew'd Mastership in floating. Fortunes blowes,
When most strooke home, being gentle wounded, craues
A Noble cunning. You were vs'd to load me
With Precepts that would make insuincible
The heart that conn'd them.
Virg. Oh heauens! O heauens!
Corio. Nay, I prythee woman.
Vol. Now the Red Pestilence strike al Trades in Rome,
And Occupations perish.
Corio. What, what, what:
I shall be lou'd when I am lack'd. Nay Mother,
Resume that Spirit, when you were wont to say,
If you had beene the Wife of Hercules,
Six of his Labours you'd haue done, and sau'd
Your Husband so much sweet. Cominius,
Droope not, Adieu: Farewell my Wife, my Mother,
Ile do well yet. Thou old and true Menenius,
Thy teares are salter then a younger mans,
And venomous to thine eyes. My (sometime) Generall,
I haue seene the Sterne, and thou hast oft beheld
Heart-hardning spectacles. Tell these sad women,
'Tis fond to waile ineuitable strokes.
As 'tis to laugh at 'em. My Mother, you wot well
My hazards still haue beene your solace, and Beleeu'e not lightly, though I go alone
Like to a lonely Dragon, that his Fenne
Makes fear'd, and talk'd of more then seene: your Sonne
Will or exceed the Common, or be caught
With cautelous baits and practice.
Volum. My first sonne,
Whether will thou go? Take good Cominius
With thee awhile: Determine on some course
More then a wilde exposture, to each chance
That start's i'th'way before thee.
Corio. O the Gods!
Com. I'le follow thee a Moneth, deuise with thee
Where thou shalt rest, that thou may'st heare of vs,
And we of thee. So if the time thrust forth
A cause for thy Repeale, we shall not send
O're the vast world, to seeke a single man,
And lose aduantage, which doth euer cool
I'th'absence of the needer.
Corio. Fare ye well:
Thou hast yeares vpon thee, and thou art too full
Of the warres surfets, to go rouse with one
That's yet vnbruis'd: bring me but out at gate.
Come my sweet wife, my deerest Mother, and
My Friends of Noble touch: when I am forth,
Bid me farewell, and smile. I pray you come:
While I remaine above the ground, you shall Heare from me still, and never of me ought
But what is like me formerly.
Menen. That's worthily
As any eare can heare. Come, let's not weepe,
If I could shake off but one seuen yeeres
From these old armes and legges, by the good Gods
I'ld with thee, every foot.
Corio. Giue me thy hand, come. Exeunt

Enter the two Tribunes, Sicinius, and Brutus, with the Edile.

Sicin. Bid them all home, he's gone: & we'l no further
The Nobility are vexed, whom we see haue sided
In his behalfe.
Brut. Now we haue shewne our power,
Let vs seeme humbler after it is done,
Then when it was a doeing.
Sicin. Bid them home: say their great enemy is gone
And they, stand in their ancient strength.
Brut. Dismisse them home. Here comes his Mother.

Enter Volumnia, Virgilia, and Menenius.

Sicin. Let's not meet her.
Brut. Why?
Sicin. They say she's mad.
Brut. They haue tane note of vs: keepe on your way.
Volum. Oh y'are well met:
Th'hoorded plague a'th'Gods requit your loue.
Menen. Peace, peace, be not so loud.
Volum. If that I could for weeping, you should heare
Nay, and you shall heare some. Will you be gone?
Virg. You shall stay too. I would I had the power
To say so to my Husband.
Sicin. Are you mankinde?
Volum. I foole, is that a shame. Note but this Foole.
Was not a man my Father? Had'st thou Foorship
To banish him that strooke more blowes for Rome
Then thou hast spoken words.
Sicin. Oh blessed Heauens!
Volum. Moe Noble blowes, then ever y wise wordes.
And for Romes good, Ile tell thee what: yet goe:
Nay but thou shalt stay too: I would my Sonne
Were in Arabia, and thy Tribe before him,
His good Sword in his hand.
Sicin. What then?
Virg. What then? Hee'ld make an end of thy posterity.
Volum. Bastards, and all.
Good man, the Wounds that he does beare for Rome!
Menen. Come, come, peace.
Sicin. I would he had continued to his Country
As he began, and not vnknit himselfe
The Noble knot he made.
Bru. I would he had.
Volum. I would he had? 'Twas you incenst the rable.
Cats, that can iudge as fitly of his worth,
As I can of those Mysteries which heauen
Will not haue earth to know.
Brut. Pray let's go.
Volum. Now pray sir get you gone.
You haue done a brauе deede: Ere you go, heare this:
As farre as doth the Capitoll exceede
The meanest house in Rome; so farre my Sonne

This Ladies Husband heere; this (do you see)
Whom you haue banish'd, does exceed you all.
Bru. Well, well, we'l leaue you.
Sicin. Why stay we to be baited
With one that wants her Wits. Exit Tribunes.
Volum. Take my Prayers with you.
I would the Gods had nothing else to do,
But to confirme my Curses. Could I meete 'em
But once a day, it would vnclogge my heart
Of what lyes heavy too't.
Menen. You haue told them home.
And by my troth you haue cause: you'l Sup with me.
Volum. Angers my Meate: I sup pe vpon my selfe,
And so shall sterue with Feeding: Come, let's go,
Leaue this faint-puling, and lament as I do,
In Anger, Juno-like: Come, come, come. Exeunt
Menen. Fie, fie, fie. Exit.

Enter a Roman, and a Volce.

Rom. I know you well sir, and you know mee: your name I thinke is Adrian.
Volce. It is so sir, truly I haue forgot you.
Rom. I am a Roman, and my Seruices are as you are, against 'em. Know you me yet.
Volce. Nicanor: no.
Rom. The same sir.
Volce. You had more Beard when I last saw you, but your Fauour is well appear'd by your Tongue. What's the Newes in Rome: I haue a Note from the Volcean State to finde you out there. You haue well saued mee a dayes iourney.
Rom. There hath beene in Rome strange Insurrections: The people, against the Senatours, Patricians, and Nobles.
Vol. Hath bin; is it ended then? Our State thinks not so, they are in a most warlike preparation, & hope to come vpon them, in the heate of their division
Rom. The mutine blaze of it is past, but a small thing would make it flame againe. For the Nobles receyue so to heart, the Banishment of that worthy Coriolanus, that they are in a ripe vpmesse, to take al power from the people, and to pluck from them their Tribunes for euer. This lyes glowing I can tell you, and is almost mature for the violent breaking out.
Vol. Coriolanus Banisht?
Rom. Banish'd sir.
Vol. You will be welcome with this intelligence Nicanor.
Rom. The day serues well for them now. I haue heard it saide, the fittest time to corrupt a mans Wife, is when shee's falne out with her Husband. Your Noble Tullus Auffidius well appeare well in these Warres, his great Opposer Coriolanus being now in no request of his country.
Volce. He cannot choose: I am most fortunate, thus accidentally to encounter you. You haue ended my Busiesse, and I will merrily accompany you home.
Rom. I shall betweene this and Supper, tell you most strange things from Rome: all tending to the good of their Aduersaries. Haue you an Army ready say you?
Vol. A most Royall one: The Centurions, and their charges distinctly billeted already in th'entertainment, and to be on foot at an houres warning.
Rom. I am ioyfull to heare of their readinesse, and am the man I thinke, that shall set them in present Action. So sir, heartily well met, and most glad of your Company.
Volce. You take my part from me sir, I haue the most cause to be glad of yours.
Rom. Well, let vs go together. Exeunt

Enter Coriolanus in meane Apparrell, Disguised, and muffled.

Coria. A goodly City is this Antium. Citty,
'Tis I that made thy Widdowes: Many an heyre
Of these faire Edifices fore my Warres
Haue I heard groane, and drop: Then know me not,
Least that thy Wiues with Spits, and Boyes with stones
In puny Battell slay me. Saue you sir.

Enter a Citizen.

Cit. And you.
Coria. Direct me, if it be your will, where great Auffidius lies: Is he in Antium?
Cit. He is, and Feasts the Nobles of the State, at his house this night.
Coria. Which is his house, beseech you?
Cit. This heere before you.
Coria. Thanke you sir, farewell. Exit Citizen
Oh World, thy slippery turnes! Friends now fast sworn,
Whose double bosomes seemes to weare one heart,
Whose Houres, whose Bed, whose Meale and Exercise
Are still together: who Twin (as 'twere) in Loue,
Vnseparable, shall within this houre,
On a diffention of a Doit, breake out
To bitterest Enmity: So fellest Foes.
Whose Passions, and whose Plots haue broke their sleep
To take the one the other, by some chance,
Some tricke not worth an Egge, shall grow deere friends
And inter-ioyne their yssues. So with me,
My Birth-place haue I, and my loues vpon
This Enemie Towne: Ile enter, if he slay me
He does faire Iustice: if he giue me way,
Ile do his Country Seruice. Exit.

Musicke plaies. Enter a Seruingman.

1 Ser. Wine, Wine, Wine: What seruice is heere? I thinke our Fellowes are asleepe.

Enter another Seruingman.

2 Ser. Where's (Cotus) my M. cals for him: Cotus. Exit

Enter Coriolanus.

Coria. A goodly House:
The Feast smels well: but I appeare not like a Guest.

Enter the first Seruingman.

1 Ser. What would you haue Friend? whence are you? Here's no place for you: Pray go to the doors? Exit
Coria. I haue deseru'd no better entertainment, in being Coriolanus. Enter second Seruant.
2 Ser. Whence are you sir? Ha's the Porter his eyes in his head, that he gives entrance to such Companions? Pray get you out.
Coria. Away.
2 Ser. Away? Get you away.
Coria. Now th'art troublesome.
2 Ser. Are you so braue: Ile haue you talkt with anon

Enter 3 Seruingman, the 1 meets him.

3 What Fellowes this?
1 A strange one as euer I look'd on: I cannot get him out o'th'house: Prythee call my Master to him.
3 What haue you to do here fellow? Pray you auoid the house.
Coria. Let me but stand, I will not hurt your Hearth.
3 What are you?
Coria. A Gentlemen.
3 A marrlous poore one.
Coria. True, so I am.
3 Pray you poore Gentleman, take vp some other station

tion: Heere's no place for you, pray you auoid: Come.

Coria. Follow your Function, go, and banten on colde bits. Pushes him away from him.

3 What you will not? Prythee tell my Maister what a strange Guest he has's heere.

2 And I shall. Exit second Seruingman.

3 Where dwel'ſt thou?

Coria. Vnder the Canopy.

3 Vnder the Canopy?

Coria. I.

3 Where's that?

Coria. I'th City of Kites and Crowes.

3 I'th City of Kites and Crowes? What an Asse it is, then thou dwel'ſt with Dawes too?

Coria. No, I seruе not thy Maister.

3 How ſit? Do you meddle with my Maister?

Coria. I, tis an honeſter ſeruice, then to meddle with thy Miſtris: Thou prat'ſt, and prat'ſt, ſerue with thy trencher: Hence. Beats him away

Enter Auſidius with the Seruingman.

Auf. Where is this Fellow?

2 Here ſir, I'de haue beaten him like a dogge, but for diſturbing the Lords within.

Auf. Whence com'ſt thou? What would'ſt? Thy name? Why ſpeak'ſt not? Speake man: What's thy name?

Coria. If Tullus not yet thou know'ſt me, and ſeeing me, doſt not thinke me for the man I am, neceſſitie commands me name my ſelfe.

Auf. What is thy name?

Coria. A name vnmuſicall to the Volcians eares, And harſh in ſound to thine.

Auf. Say, what's thy name?
Thou haſt a Grim appearance, and thy Face
Beares a Command in't: Though thy Tackles torne,
Thou ſhew'ſt a Noble Veſſell: What's thy name?

Coria. Prepare thy brow to frowne: know'ſt ♁ me yet?

Auf. I know thee not? Thy Name?

Coria My name is Caius Marcius, who hath done
To thee particularly, and to all the Volces
Great hurt and Miſchiefe: thereto witneſſe may
My Surname Coriolanus. The painfull Seruice,
The extreme Dangers, and the droppes of Blood
Shed for my thankleſſe Country, are requitted:
But with that Surname, a good memorie
And witneſſe of the Malice and Diſpleaſure
Which thou ſhould'ſt beare me, only that name remains.
The Cruelty and Enuy of the people,
Permitted by our daſtard Nobles, who
Haue all forſooke me, hath deuour'd the reſt:
And ſoffer'd me by th'voyce of Slaues to be
Hoop'd out of Rome. Now thus extremity,
Hath brought me to thy Hearth, not out of Hope
(Miſtake me not) to ſaue my life: for if
I had fear'd death, of all the Men i th' World
I would haue voided thee. But in meere ſpight
To be full quit of thoſe my Banishers,
Stand I before thee heere: Then if thou haſt
A heart of wreake in thee, that wilt reuenge
Thine owne particular wrongs, and ſtop thoſe maimes
Of ſhame ſeene through thy Country, ſpeed thee ſtraight
And make my miſery ſerue thy turne: So ſe it,
That my reuengefull Services may prone
As Benefits to thee. For I will fight
Againſt my Cankred Country, with the Spleene
Of all the vnder Fiends. But if ſo be,
Thou dar'ſt not this, and that to proue more Fortunes
Th'art tyr'd, then in a word, I alſo am
Longer to liue moſt wearie: and preſent
My throat to thee, and to thy Ancient Malice:
Which not to cut, would ſhew thee but a Foole,
Since I haue euer followed thee with hate.
Drawne Tunnes of Blood out of thy Countries breſt,
And cannot liue but to thy ſhame, vnleſſe
It be to do thee ſeruice.

Auf. Oh Marcius, Marcius;
Each word thou haſt ſpoke, hath weeded from my heart
A roote of Ancient Enuy. If Iupiter,
Should from yond cloud ſpeake diuine things,
And ſay 'tis true; I'de not believe them more
Then thee all-Noble Marcius. Let me twine
Mine armes about that body, where againſt
My grained Aſh an hundred times hath broke,
And ſcarr'd the Moone with ſplinters: heere I cleep
The Anuile of my Sword, and do contreſt
As hotly, and as Nobly with thy Loue,
As euer in Ambitious ſtrength, I did
Contend againſt thy Valour. Know thou firſt,
I lou'd the Maid I married: never man
Sigh'd true breath But that I ſee thee heere
Thou Noble thing, more dances my rapt heart,
Then when I firſt my wedded Miſtris law
Beſtride my Threſhold. Why, thou Mars I tell thee,
We haue a Power on foote: and I had purpoſe
Once more to ſhew thy Target from thy Brawne,
Or looſe mine Arme for't; Thou haſt beate mee out
Twelue ſeuerall times, and I haue nightly ſince
Dreamt of encounters 'twixt thy ſelfe and me:
We haue beene downe together in my ſleepe,
Vnbuckling Helmes, fiſting each others Throat,
And wak'd halfe dead with nothing. Worthy Marcius,
Had we no other quarrell elſe to Rome, but that Thou art thence Baniſh'd, we would muſter all
From twelue, to ſeuentie: and powring Warre
Into the bowels of vngrateful Rome,
Like a bold Flood o're-beate. Oh come, go in,
And take our Friendly Senators by th'hands
Who now are heere, taking their leaues of mee,
Who am prepar'd againſt your Territories,
Though not for Rome it ſelfe.

Coria. You bleſſe me Gods.

Auf. Therefore moſt abſolute Sir, if thou wilt haue
The leading of thine owne Reuenges, take
Th'one halfe of my Commiſſion, and ſet downe
As beſt thou art experienc'd, ſince thou know'ſt
Thy Countries ſtrength and weakneſſe, thine own ways
Whether to knocke againſt the Gates of Rome,
Or rudely viſit them in parts remote,
To fright them, ere deſtroy. But come in,
Let me commend thee firſt, to thoſe that ſhall
Say yea to thy deſires. A thouſand welcomes,
And more a Friend, then ere an Enemie,
Yet Marcius that was much. Your hand: moſt welcome.

Exeunt

Enter two of the Seruingmen.

1 Heere's a ſtrange alteration?

2 By my hand, I had thought to haue ſtroken him with a Cudgell, and yet my minde gaue me, his clothes made a falſe report of him.

3 What an Arme he has, he turn'd me about with his finger and his thumbe, as one would ſet vp a Top.

2 Nay, I knew by his face that there was ſome-thing in him. He had ſir, a kinde of face me thought, I cannot tell ers now to termme it.

2 He had so, looking as it were, would I were hang'd but I thought there was more in him, then I could think.

2 So did I, I'le be sworne: He is simply the rarest man t'th'world.

1 I thinke he is: but a greater soldier then he, You wot one.

2 Who my Master?

1 Nay, it's no matter for that.

2 Worth six on him.

3 Nay not so neither: but I take him to be the greater Souldiour.

2 Faith looke you, one cannot tell how to say that: for the Defence of a Towne, our Generall is excellent.

1 I, and for an assault too.

Enter the third Seruingman.

3 Oh Slaues, I can tell you Newes, News you Rascals

Both. What, what, what? Let's partake.

3 I would not be a Roman of all Nations; I had as lieue be a condemn'd man.

Both. Wherefore? Wherefore?

3 Why here's he that was wont to thwacke our Generall, Caius Martius.

1 Why do you say, thwacke our Generall?

3 I do not say thwacke our Generall, but he was alwayes good enough for him

2 Come we are fellowes and friends: he was euer too hard for him, I haue heard him say so himselfe.

1 He was too hard for him directly, to say the Troth on't before Corioles, he scotcht him, and notcht him like a Carbinado.

2 And hee had bin Canibally given, hee might haue boyld and eaten him too.

1 But more of thy Newes.

3 Why he is so made on heere within, as if hee were Son and Heire to Mars, set at vpper end o'th'Table: No question asks him by any of the Senators, but they stand bald before him. Our Generall himselfe makes a Mistris of him, Sanctifies himselfe with's hand, and turnes vp the white o'th'eye to his Discourse. But the bottome of the Newes is, our Generall is cut i'th'middle, & but one half of what he was yesterday. For the other ha's halfe, by the intreaty and graunt of the whole Table. Hee'l go he says, and sole the Porter of Rome Gates by th'eares. He will mowe all downe before him, and leaue his passage poul'd.

2 And he's as like to do't, as any man I can imagine.

3 Doo't? he will doo't: for look you sir, he has as many Friends as Enemies: which Friends sir as it were, durst not (looke you sir) shew themselues (as we terme it) his Friends, whilest he's in Directitude.

1 Directitude? What's that?

3 But when they shall see sir, his Crest vp againe, and the man in blood, they will out of their Burroughes (like Coales after Raine) and reuell all with him.

1 But when goes this forward:

3 To morrow, to day, presently, you shall haue the Drum strooke vp this afternoone: 'Tis as it were a parcel of their Feast, and to be executed ere they wipe their lips.

2 Why then wee shall haue a stirring World againe: This peace is nothing, but to rust Iron, encrease Taylors, and breed Ballad-makers.

1 Let me haue Warre say I, it exceeds peace as farre as day do's night: It's sprightly walking, audible, and full of Vent. Peace, is a very Apoplexy, Lethargie, mull'd, deafe, sleepe, insensible, a getter of more bastard Children, then warres a destroyer of men.

2 'Tis so, and as warres in some sort may be saide to be a Rauisher, so it cannot be denied, but peace is a great maker of Cuckolds.

1 I, and it makes men hate one another.

3 Reason, because they then lesse needs one another: The Warres for my money. I hope to see Romanes as cheape as Volcians. They are rising, they are rising.

Both. In, in, in, in. Exeunt

Enter the two Tribunes, Sicinius, and Brutus.

Sicin. We heare not of him, neither need we fear him,
His remedies are tame, the present peace,
And quietnesse of the people, which before
Were in wilde hurry. Heere do we make his Friends
Blush, that the world goes well: who rather had,
Though they themselues did suffer by 't, behold
Dissentious numbers pestring streets, then see
Our Tradesmen singing in their shops, and going
About their Functions friendly.

Enter Menenius.

Bru. We stood too't in good time. Is this Menenius?

Sicin. 'Tis he, 'tis he: O he is grown most kind of late: Haile Sir. Men. Haile to you both.

Sicin. Your Coriolanus is not much miss, but with his Friends: the Commonwealth doth stand, and so would do, were he more angry at it.

Men. All's well, and might haue bene much better, if he could haue temporis'd.

Sicin. Where is he, heare you?

Men. Nay I heare nothing:
His Mother and his wife, heare nothing from him.

Enter three or foure Citizens.

All. The Gods preserue you both.

Sicin. Gooden our Neighbours.

Bru. Gooden to you all, gooden to you all.

1 Our selues, our wiues, and children, on our knees,
Are bound to pray for you both.

Sicin. Liue, and thriue.

Bru. Farewell kinde Neighbours:
We wisht Coriolanus had lou'd you as we did.

All. Now the Gods keepe you.

Both Tri. Farewell, farewell. Exeunt Citizens

Sicin. This is a happier and more comely time,
Then when these Fellowes ran about the streets,
Crying Confusion.

Bru. Caius Martius was
A worthy Officer i'th'Warre, but Insolent,
O'recome with Pride, Ambitious, past all thinking
Self-loving.

Sicin. And affecting one sole Throne, without assistant

Men. I thinke not so.

Sicin. We should by this, to all our Lamentation,
If he had gone forth Consull, found it so.

Bru. The Gods haue well preuented it, and Rome
Sits safe and still, without him.

Enter an Ædile.

Ædile. Worthy Tribunes,
There is a Slaue whom we haue put in prison,
Reports the Volces with two seuerall Powers
Are entred in the Roman Territories,
And with the deepest malice of the Warre,
Destroy, what lies before 'em.

Men. 'Tis Auffidius,
Who hearing of our Martius Banishment,
Thrusts forth his horses againe into the world
Which were In-shell'd, when Martius stood for Rome,

And

And durst not once peepe out.

Sicin. Come, what talke you of Martius.

Bru. Go see this Rumorer whipt, it cannot be,
The Volces dare breake with vs.

Menen. Cannot be?
We haue Record, that very well it can,
And three examples of the like, hath beene
Within my Age. But reason with the fellow
Before you punish him, where he heard this,
Least you shall chance to whip your Information,
And beate the Messenger, who bids beware
Of what is to be dreaded.

Sicin. Tell not me: I know this cannot be.

Bru. Not possible.

Enter a Messenger.

Mes. The Nobles in great earnestnesse are going
All to the Senate-house: some newes is comming
That turnes their Countenances.

Sicin. 'Tis this Slaue:
Go whip him fore the peoples eyes: His raising,
Nothing but his report

Mes. Yes worthy Sir,
The Slaues report is seconded, and more
More fearfull is deliuer'd.

Sicin. What more fearefull?

Mes. It is spoke freely out of many mouths,
How probable I do not know, that Martius
Ioyn'd with Auffidius, leads a power gainst Rome,
And vowes Reuenge as spacious, as betweene
The yong'st and oldest thing.

Sicin. This is most likely.

Bru. Rais'd onely, that the weaker sort may wish
Good Martius home again.

Sicin. The very tricke on't.

Menen. This is vnlikely,
He, and Auffidius can no more attone
Then violent'st Contrariety.

Enter Messenger.

Mes. You are sent for to the Senate:
A fearefull Army, led by Caius Martius,
Associated with Auffidius, Rages
Vpon our Territories, and haue already
O're-bore their way, consum'd with fire, and tooke
What lay before them.

Enter Cominius.

Com. Oh you haue made good worke.

Menen. What newes? What newes?

Com. You haue holp to ransish your owne daughters, &
To melt the Citty Leades vpon your pates,
To see your Wiues dishonour'd to your Noses.

Menen. What's the newes? What's the newes?

Com. Your Temples burned in their Cinnent, and
Your Franchises, whereon you stood, confin'd
Into an Augers boare.

Menen. Pray now, your Newes:
You haue made faire worke I feare me: pray your newes,
If Martius should be ioyn'd with Volcians.

Com. If? He is their God, he leads them like a thing
Made by some other Deity then Nature,
That shapes man Better: and they follow him
Against vs Brats, with no lesse Confidence,
Then Boyes pursuing Summer Butter-flies,
Or Butchers killing Flyes.

Menen. You haue made good worke,
You and your Apron men: you, that stood so much
Vpon the voyce of occupation, and
The breath of Garlicke-eaters.

Com. He'l shake your Rome about your eares.

Menen. As Hercules did shake downe Mellow Fruit:
You haue made faire worke.

Bru. But is this true sir?

Com. I, and you'l looke pale
Before you finde it other. All the Regions
Do smilingly Reuolt, and who resists
Are mock'd for valiant Ignorance,
And perish constant Fools: who is't can blame him?
Your Enemies and his, finde something in him.

Menen. We are all vndone, vnlesse
The Noble man haue mercy.

Com. Who shall aske it?
The Tribunes cannot doo't for shame; the people
Deserue such pitty of him, as the Wolfe
Doe's of the Shepheards: For his best Friends, if they Should say be good to Rome, they charg'd him, euen
As those should do that had deseru'd his hate,
And therein shew'd like Enemies.

Menen. 'Tis true, if he were putting to my house, the brand
That should consume it, I haue not the face
To say, beseech you cease. You haue made faire hands,
You and your Crafts, you haue crafted fare.

Com. You haue brought
A Trembling vpon Rome, such as was neuer
S'incapeable of helpe.

Tri. Say not, we brought it.

Menen. How? Was't we? We lou'd him,
But like Beasts, and Cowardly Nobles,
Gaue way vnto your Clusters, who did hoote
Him out o'th'Citty.

Com. But I feare
They'l roare him in againe. Tullus Auffidius,
The second name of men, obeyes his points
As if he were his Officer: Desperation,
Is all the Policy, Strength, and Defence
That Rome can make against them.

Enter a Troupe of Citizens.

Menen. Heere come the Clusters.
And is Auffidius with him? You are they
That made the Ayre vnwholsome, when you cast
Your stinking, greasie Caps, in hooting
At Coriolanus Exile. Now he's comming,
And not a haire vpon a Souldiers head
Which will not proue a whip: As many Coxcombes
As you threw Caps vp, will he tumble downe,
And pay you for your voyces. 'Tis no matter,
If he could burne vs all into one coale,
We haue deseru'd it.

Omnes. Faith, we heare fearefull Newes.

1 Cit. For mine owne part,
When I said banish him, I said 'twas pitty.

2 And so did I.

3 And so did I: and to say the truth, so did very many of vs, that we did we did for the best, and though we willingly consented to his Banishment yet it was against our will.

Com. Y'are goodly things, you Voyces.

Menen. You haue made good worke
You and your cry. Shal's to the Capitoll?

Com. Oh I, what else? Exeunt both.

Sicin. Go Masters get you home, be not dismaid,
These are a Side, that would be glad to haue
This true, which they so seeme to feare. Go home,
And shew no signe of Feare

1 Cit.

1 Cit. The Gods bee good to vs: Come Masters let's home, I ever said we were i'th wrong, when we banish'd him.

2 Cit. So did we all. But come, let's home. Exit Cit.

Bru. I do not like this Newes.

Sicin. Nor I.

Bru. Let's to the Capitoll: would halfe my wealth Would buy this for a lye.

Sicin. Pray let's go. Exeunt Tribunes.

Enter Auffidius with his Lieutenant.

Auf. Do they still flye to'th Romans?

Lieu. I do not know what Witchcraft's in him: but Your Soldiers vse him as the Grace 'fore meate, Their talke at Table, and their Thankes at end, And you are darkned in this action Sir, Even by your owne.

Auf. I cannot helpe it now, Vnlesse by vsing meanes I lame the foote Of our designe. He beares himselfe more proudlier, Even to my person, then I thought he would When first I did embrace him. Yet his Nature In that's no Changeling, and I must excuse What cannot be amended.

Lieu. Yet I wish Sir, (I meane for your particular) you had not Ioyn'd in Commission with him: but either have borne The action of your selfe, or else to him, had left it solly.

Auf. I vnderstand thee well, and be thou sure When he shall come to his account, he knowes not What I can vrge against him, although it seemes And so he thinkes, and is no lesse apparant To th'vulgar eye, that he beares all things fairely: And shewes good Husbandry for the Volcian State, Fights Dragon-like, and does atcheeue as soone As draw his Sword: yet he hath left vndone That which shall breake his neeke, or hazard mine, When ere we come to our account.

Lieu. Sir, I beseech you, think you he'l carry Rome?

Auf. All places yeelds to him ere he sits downe, And the Nobility of Rome are his: The Senators and Patricians loue him too: The Tribunes are no Soldiers: and their people Will be as rash in the repeale, as hasty To expell him thence. I thinke bee'l be to Rome As is the Aspray to the Fish, who takes it By Soueraignty of Nature. First, he was A Noble seruant to them, but he could not Carry his Honors euen: whether 'was Pride Which out of daily Fortune euer taints The happy man; whether defect of iudgement, To fail in the disposing of those chances Which he was Lord of: or whether Nature, Not to be other then one thing, not moouing From th'Casko to th'Cushion: but commanding peace Even with the same austerity and garbe, As he controll'd the warre. But one of these (As he hath spices of them all) not all, For I dare so farre free him, made him fear'd, So hated, and so banish'd: but he has a Merit To choake it in the vtt'rance: So our Vertue, Lie in th'interpretation of the time, And power vnto it selfe most commendable, Hath not a Tombe so euident as a Chaire T'extoll what it hath done. One fire drives out one fire; one Naile, one Naile; Rights by rights fouler, strengths by strengths do faile. Come let's away: when Caius Rome is thine, Thou art poor'st of all; then shortly art thou mine. Exeunt.

Actus Quintus.

Enter Menenius, Cominius, Sicinius, Brutus, the two Tribunes, with others.

Menen. No, Ile not goe: you heare what he hath said Which was sometime his Generall: who loued him In a most deere particular. He call'd me Father: But what o'that? Go you that banish'd him A Mile before his Tent, fall downe, and knee The way into his mercy: Nay, if he coy'd To heare Cominius speake, Ile keepe at home.

Com. He would not seeme to know me.

Menen. Do you heare?

Com. Yet one time he did call me by my name: I vrg'd our old acquaintance, and the drops That we haue bled together. Coriolanus He would not answer too: Forbad all Names, He was a kinde of Nothing, Titleless, Till he had forg'd himselfe a name a'th fire Of burning Rome.

Menen. Why so: you haue made good worke: A pare of Tribunes, that haue wrack'd for Rome, To make Coales cheape: A Noble memory.

Com. I minded him; how Royall 'twas to pardon When it was lesse expected. He replyed It was a bare petition of a State To one whom they had punish'd.

Menen. Very well, could he say lesse.

Com. I offered to awaken his regard For's priuate Friends. His answer to me was He could not stay to picke them, in a pile Of noysome musty Chaffe. He said, 'twas folly For one poore graine or two, to leaue vnburnt And still to nose th'offence.

Menen. For one poore graine or two? I am one of those: his Mother, Wife, his Childe, And this brave Fellow too: we are the Graines, You are the musty Chaffe, and you are smelt Above the Moone. We must be burnt for you.

Sicin. Nay, pray be patient: If you refuse your ayde In this so never-needed helpe, yet do not Vpbraid's with our distresse. But sure if you Would be your Countries Pleader, your good tongue More then the instant Armie we can make Might stop our Countryman.

Menen. No: Ile not meddle.

Sicin. Pray you go to him.

Menen. What should I do?

Bru. Onely make triall what your Loue can do, For Rome, towards Martius.

Menen. Well, and say that Martius returne me, As Cominius is return'd, vnheard what then? But as a discontented Friend, grefe-shot With his vnkindnesse. Say't be so?

Sicin. Yet your good will Must haue that thankes from Rome, after the measure As you intended well.

Menen. Ile vndertak't: I thinke bee'l heare me. Yet to bite his lip, And hummes at good Cominius, much vnhearts mee.

He was not taken well, he had not din'd,
The Veines vnfill'd, our blood is cold, and then
We powt vpon the Morning, are vnapt
To giue or to forgiue; but when we haue stuffd
These Pipes, and these Conueyances of our blood
With Wine and Feeding, we haue suppler Soules
Then in our Priest-like Fasts: therefore Ile watch him
Till he be dieted to my request,
And then Ile set vpon him.

Bru. You know the very rode into his kindnesse,
And cannot lose your way.

Menen. Good faith Ile prouе him,
Speed how it will. I shall ere long, haue knowledge
Of my successe. Exit.

Com. Hee'l neuer heare him.

Sicin. Not.

Com. I tell you, he doe's fit in Gold, his eye
Red as 'twould burne Rome: and his Iniury
The Gaoler to his pitty. I kneel'd before him,
'Twas very faintly he said Rise: dismist me
Thus with his speechlesse hand. What he would do
He sent in writing after me: what he would not,
Bound with an Oath to yeeld to his conditions:
So that all hope is vaine, vnlesse his Noble Mother,
And his Wife, who (as I heare) meane to solicite him
For mercy to his Countrey: therefore let's hence.
And with our fairе intreaties haste them on. Exeunt

Enter Menenius to the Watch or Guard.

1. Wat. Stay: whence are you.

2. Wat. Stand, and go backe.

Men. You guard like men, 'tis well. But by your leaue,
I am an Officer of State, & come to speak with Coriolanus

1 From whence? Men. From Rome.

1 You may not passe, you must returne: our Generall will no more heare from thence.

2 You'l see your Rome embrac'd with fire, before
You'l speake with Coriolanus.

Men. Good my Friends,
If you haue heard your Generall talke of Rome,
And of his Friends there, it is Lots to Blankes,
My name hath touch't your eares: it is Menenius.

1 Be it so, go back: the vertue of your name,
Is not heere passable.

Men. I tell thee Fellow,
Thy Generall is my Louer: I haue beene
The booke of his good Acts, whence men haue read
His Fame vnparaleld, happely amplified:
For I haue euer verified my Friends,
(Of whom hee's chiefe) with all the fize that verity
Would without lapsing suffer: Nay, sometimes,
Like to a Bowle vpon a subtle ground
I haue tumbled past the throw: and in his praise
Haue (almost) stampt the Leasing. Therefore Fellow,
I must haue leaue to passe.

1 Faith Sir, if you had told as many lies in his behalfe, as you haue vttered words in your owne, you should not passe heere: no, though it were as vertuous to lye, as to liue chastly. Therefore go backe.

Men. Prythee fellow, remember my name is Menenius, alwayes factionary on the party of your Generall.

2 Howsoeuer you haue bin his Liet, as you say you
haue, I am one that telling true vnder him, must say you cannot passe. Therefore go backe.

Menen. Ha's he din'd can'st thou tell? For I would not speake with him, till after dinner.

1 You are a Romen, are you?

Menen. I am as thy Generall is.

1 Then you should hate Rome, as he do's. Can you, when you haue pusht out your gates, the very Defender of them, and in a violent popular ignorance, giuen your enemy your shield, thinke to froet his reuenges with the easie groanes of old women, the Virginall Palms of your daughters, or with the palsied intercession of such a decay'd Dotant as you seeme to be? Can you think to blow out the intended fire, your City is ready to flame in, with such weake breath as this? No, you are deceiu'd, therfore backe to Rome, and prepare for your execution: you are condemn'd, our Generall has sworne you out of repeuiue and pardon.

2 Wat. Sirra, if thy Captaine knew I were heere,
He would vse me with estimation.

1 Come, my Captaine knowes you not.

Menen. I meane thy Generall.

1 My Generall cares not for you. Back I say, go: lest
I let forth your halfe pinte of blood. Backe, that's the vt-most of your having, backe.

Menen. Nay but Fellow, Fellow.

Enter Coriolanus with Auffidius.

Coria. What's the matter?

Menen. Now you Companion: Ile say an errant for you:
you shall know now that I am in estimation: you shall perceiue, that a Iacke gardant cannot office me from my Son Coriolanus, guesse but my entertainement with him: if thou stand'st not i'th state of hanging, or of some death more long in Spectatorship, and cruciller in suffering, behold now presently, and swoond for what's to come vpon thee. The glorious Gods sit in hourely Synod about thy particular prosperity, and loue thee no worse then thy old Father Menenius do'e. O my Son, my Son! thou art preparing fire for vs: looke thee, heere's water to quench it.
I was hardly moued to come to thee: but beeing assured
none but my selfe could moue thee, I haue beene blowne out of your Gates with sighes: and conjure thee to pardon Rome, and thy petitionary Countrimen. The good Gods assuage thy wrath, and turne the dregs of it, vpon
this Varlet heere: This, who like a blocke hath denied my access to thee.

Coria. Away.

Menen. How? Away?

Coria. Wife, Mother, Child I know not. My affaires
Are Seruanted to others: Though I owe
My Reuenge properly, my remission lies
In Volcean breast. That we haue beene familiar,
Ingrate forgetfulnesse shall poison rather
Then pitty: Note how much, therefore be gone.
Mine eares against your suites, are stronger than
Your gates against my force. Yet for I loued thee,
Take this along, I writ it for thy sake,
And would haue sent it. Another word Menenius,
I will not heare thee speake. This man Auffidius
Was my belou'd in Rome: yet thou behold'st.

Auffid. You keepe a constant temper. Exeunt

Manet the Guard and Menenius.

1 Now sir, is your name Menenius?

2 'Tis a spell you see of much power:
You know the way home againe.

1 Do you heare how wee are shent for keeping your greetnesse backe?

2 What cause do you thinke I haue to swoond?

Menen. I neither care for th'world, nor your Generals for such things as you. I can scarse thinke ther's any, y'are so slight. He that hath a will to die by himselfe, fesres it not

not from mother: Let your Generall do his worst. For you, bee that you are, long; and your misery encrease with your age. I say to you, as I was said to, Away. Exit

1 A Noble Fellow I warrant him.

2 The worthy Fellow is our General. He's the Rock, The Oake not to be winde-shaken. Exit Watch.

Enter Coriolanus and Auffidius.

Coria. We will before the walls of Rome to morrow Set downe our Hoast. My partner in this Action, You must report to th'Volcian Lords, how plainly I have borne this Business.

Auf. Onely their ends you have respected, Stopt your eares against the generall suite of Rome: Never admitted a priuat whisper, no not with such friends That thought them sure of you.

Coria. This last old man, Whom with a crack'd heart I have sent to Rome, Lou'd me, above the measure of a Father, Nay godded me indeed. Their latest refuge Was to send him: for whose old Loue I have (Though I shew'd sourely to him) once more offer'd The first Conditions which they did refuse, And cannot now accept, to grace him onely, That thought he could do more: A very Ieste I have yeelded too. Fresh Embassies, and Suites, Nor from the State, nor priuate friends hereafter Will I lend eare to. Ha what shout is this? Shout within Shall I be tempted to infringe my vow In the same time 'tis made? I will not.

Enter Virgilia, Volumnia, Valeria, young Marcius with Attendants.

My wife comes formost, then the honour'd mould Wherein this Trunke was fram'd, and in her hand The Grandchilde to her blood. But out affection, All bond and priuiledge of Nature breake; Let it be Vertuous to be Obstinate. What is that Curt'sie worth? Or those Doues eyes, Which can make Gods forsworne? I mele, and am not Of stranger earth than others: my Mother bowes, As if Olympus to a Mole-hill should In supplication Nod: and my young Boy Hath an Aspect of intercession, which Great Nature cries, Deny not. Let the Volces Plough Rome, and harrow Italy, Ile never Be such a Gosling to obey instinct: but stand As if a man were Author of himself, & knew no other kin

Virgil. My Lord and Husband.

Coria. These eyes are not the same I wore in Rome.

Virg. The sorrow that deliuers vs thus chang'd, Makes you thinke so.

Coria Like a dull Actor now, I have forgot my part, And I am out, even to a full Disgrace. Best of my flesh, Forgiue my Tyranny: but do not say, For that forgiue our Romanes. O a kisse Long as my Exile, sweet as my Reuenge! Now by the ielous Queene of Heauen, that kisse I carried from thee deare; and my true Lippe Hath Virgin'd it ere since. You Gods, I pray, And the most noble Mother of the world Leaue vnstained: Sinke my knee i'th'earth, Kneeles Of thy deepe duty, more impression shew Then that of common Sonnes.

Volum. Oh stand vp blest! Whilst with no softer Cushion then the Flint I kneele before thee, and vnproperly Shew duty as mistaken, all this while, Betweene the Childe, and Parent.

Coria. What's that your knees to me? To your Corrected Sonne? Then let the Pibbles on the hungry beach Fillop the Stearns: Then, let the mutinous windes Strike the proud Cedars 'gainst the fiery Sun: Murd'ring impossibility, to make What cannot be, slight worke.

Volum. Thou art my Warriour, I hope to frame thee Do you know this Lady?

Coria. The Noble Sister of Publicola; The Moone of Rome: Chaste as the Iscle That's curdled by the Frost, from purest Snow, And hangs on Dians Temple: Deare Valeria.

Volum. This is a poore Epitome of yours, Which by th'interpretation of full time, May shew like all your selfe.

Coria. The God of Souldiers: With the consent of supreme Ioue, informe Thy thoughts with Noblenesse, that thou mayst prouе To shame vnuinerable, and stickle i'th Warres Like a great Sea-marke standing every flaw, And saiung those that eye thee.

Volum. Your knee, Sirrah.

Coria. That's my brave Boy.

Volum. Euen he, your wife, this Ladie, and my selfe, Are Suitors to you.

Coria. I beseech you peace: Or if you'ld aske, remember this before; The thing I have forsworne to grante, may never Be held by you denials. Do not bid me Dismisse my Soldiers, or capitulate Againe, with Romes Mechanicks. Tell me not Wherein I seeme vnnaturall: Desire not t'allay My Rages and Reuenges, with your colder reasons.

Volum. Oh no more, no more: You have said you will not grante vs any thing: For we have nothing else to aske, but that Which you deny already: yet we will aske, That if you fail in our request, the blame May hang vpon your hardnesse. therefore heare vs.

Coria. Auffidius, and you Volces marke, for we'l Heare nought from Rome in priuate. Your request?

Volum. Should we be silent & not speak, our Raiment And state of Bodies would bewray what life We have led since thy Exile. Thinke with thy selfe, How more vnfortunate then all living women Are we come hither; since that thy sight, which should Make our eies flow with ioy, harth dance with comforts, Constraines them weepe, and shake with feare & sorow, Making the Mother, wife, and Childe to see, The Sonne, the Husband, and the Father tearing His Countries Bowels out; and to poore we Thine enmities most capitall: Thou barr'st vs Our prayers to the Gods, which is a comfort That all but we enioy. For how can we? Alas! how can we, for our Country pray? Whereto we are bound, together with thy victory: Whereto we are bound: Alacke, or we must loose. The Countrie our deere Nurse, or else thy person Our comfort in the Country. We must finde An euident Calamity, though we had Our wish, which side should win. For either thou Must as a Forraine Recreant be led With Manacles through our streets, or else Triumphantly tread on thy Countries ruine,

And bearе the Palme, for having bravely shed
Thy Wife and Childrens blood: For my selfe, Sonne,
I purpose not to waite on Fortune, till
These warres determine: If I cannot perswade thee,
Rather to shew a Noble grace to both parts,
Then seeke the end of one; thou shalt no sooner
March to assault thy Country, then to treade
(Trust too't, thou shalt not) on thy Mothers wombe
That brought thee to this world.

Virg. I, and mine, that brought you forth this boy,
To keepe your name living to time.

Boy. A shall not tread on me: Ile run away
Till I am bigger, but then Ile fight.

Corio. Not of a womans tendernesse to be,
Requires not Childe, nor womans face to see:
I have sate too long.

Volum. Nay, go not from vs thus:
If it were so, that our request did tend
To save the Romanes, thereby to destroy
The Volces whom you serue, you might condemne vs
As poysonous of your Honour. No, our suite
Is that you reconcile them: While the Volces
May say, this mercy we have shew'd; the Romanes,
This we receiu'd, and each in either side
Give the All-haile to thee, and cry be Blest
For making vp this peace. Thou know'st (great Sonne)
The end of Warres vncertaine: but this certaine,
That if thou conquer Rome, the benefit
Which thou shalt thereby reape, is such a name
Whose repetition will be dogg'd with Curses:
Whose Chronicle thus writ, The man was Noble,
But with his last Attempt, he wip'd it out:
Destroy'd his Country, and his name remaines
To th'ensuing Age, abhorr'd. Speake to me Son:
Thou hast affected the fine straines of Honor,
To imitate the graces of the Gods.
To teare with Thunder the wide Cheekes a'th'Ayre,
And yet to change thy Sulphure with a Boult
That should but rive an Oake. Why do'st not speake?
Think'st thou it Honourable for a Nobleman
Still to remember wrongs? Daughter, speake you
He cares not for your weeping. Speake thou Boy,
Perhaps thy childishnesse will moue him more
Then can our Reason. There's no man in the world
More bound to's Mother, yet here he let's me prate
Like one i'th'Stocks. Thou hast never in thy life,
Shew'd thy deere Mother any curtesie,
When she (poore Hen) fond of no second brood,
Has clock'd thee to the Warres: and selfe-like home
Loden with Honor. Say my Request's vniust,
And spurne me backe: But, if it be not so
Thou art not honest, and the Gods will plagne thee
That thou restrain'st from me the Duty, which
To a Mothers part belongs. He turnes away:
Down Ladies: let vs shame him with his knees
To his sur-name Coriolanus longs more pride
Then pitty to our Prayers. Downe: an end,
This is the last. So, we will home to Rome,
And dye among our Neighbours: Nay, behold's,
This Boy that cannot tell what he would haue,
But kneeles, and holds vp hands for fellowship,
Doe's reason our Petition with more strength
Then thou hast to deny't. Come, let vs go:
This Fellow had a Volcean to his Mother:
His Wife is in Corioles, and his Childe
Like him by chance: yet give vs our dispatch:
I am hushe vntill our City be afire, & then Ile speak a little.

Holds her by the hand silent.

Corio. O Mother, Mother!
What hast you done? Behold, the Heauens do ope,
The Gods looke downe, and this vnnaturall Scene
They laugh at. Oh my Mother, Mother: Oh!
You have wonne a happy Victory to Rome.
But for your Sonne, believe it: Oh believe it,
Most dangerously you have with him prevail'd.
If not most mortall to him. But let it come:
Aufidius, though I cannot make true Warres,
Ile frame conuenient peace. Now good Aufidius,
Were you in my stead, would you have heard
A Mother less? or granted less Aufidius?

Auf. I was mou'd withall.

Corio. I dare be sworne you were:
And sir, it is no little thing to make
Mine eyes to sweat compassion. But (good sir)
What peace you'l make, advise me: For my part,
Ile not to Rome, Ile backe with you, and pray you
Stand to me in this cause. Oh Mother! Wife!

Auf. I am glad thou hast set thy mercy, & thy Honor
At difference in thee: Out of that Ile worke
My selfe a former Fortune.

Corio. I by and by; But we will drinke together:
And you shall beare
A better witnesse backe then words, which we
On like conditions, will have Counter-seal'd.
Come enter with vs: Ladies you deserue
To have a Temple built you: All the Swords
In Italy, and her Confederate Armes
Could not haue made this peace. Exeunt.

Enter Menenius and Sicinius. Rome?

Menen. See you yon'd Coin a'th Capitol, yon'd comes

Sicin. Why what of that?

Menen. If it be possible for you to displace it with your little finger, there is some hope the Ladies of Rome, especially his Mother, may prevaile with him. But I say, there is no hope in't, our throats are sentenc'd, and stay vpon execution.

Sicin. Is't possible, that so short a time can alter the condition of a man.

Menen. There is differency between a Grub & a Butterfly, yet your Butterfly was a Grub: this Marcius, is growne from Man to Dragon: He has wings, he's more then a creeping thing.

Sicin. He lou'd his Mother dearely.

Menen. So did he me: and he no more remembers his Mother now, then an eight yeare old horse. The tartnesse of his face, sowres ripe Grapes. When he walks, he moues like an Engine, and the ground shrinkes before his Treading. He is able to pierce a Corslet with his eye: Talkes like a knell, and his hum is a Battery. He sits in his State, as a thing made for Alexander. What he bids him doe, is finish'd with his bidding. He mates nothing of a God but Eternity, and a Heauen to Throne in.

Sicin. Yes, mercy, if you report him truly.

Menen. I paint him in the Character. Mark what mercy his Mother shall bring from him: There is no more mercy in him, then there is milke in a male-Tyger, that shall our poore City finde: and all this is long of you.

Sicin. The Gods be good vnto vs.

Menen. No, in such a case the Gods will not bee good vnto vs. When we banish'd him, we respected not them: and he returning to breake our necks, they respect not vs.

Enter a Messenger.

Mes.

Mess. Sir, if you'd saue your life, fly to your House,
The Plebeians haue got your Fellow Tribune,
And hale him vp and downe; all swearing, if
The Romane Ladies bring not comfort home,
They'l giue him death by inches.

Enter another Messenger.

Sicin. What's the Newes? (presuyl'd,

Mess. Good Newes, good newes, the Ladies haue
The Volcians are dislodg'd, and Marcius gone:
A merrier day did neuer yet greet Rome,
No, not th'expulsion of the Tarquins

Sicin. Friend, art thou certaine this is true?
Is't most certaine.

Mess. As certaine as I know the Sun is fire:
Where haue you lurk'd that you make doubt of it:
Ne're through an Arch so hurried the blowne Tide,
As the recomforted through th'gates. Why harke you:

Trumpets, Hoboyes, Drums beate, altogether.

The Trumpets, Sack-buts, Psalteries, and Fifes,
Tabors, and Symboles, and the showting Romans
Make the Sonne dance. Harke you. A shout within

Menen. This is good Newes:
I will go meete the Ladies. This Volumnia,
Is worth of Consuls, Senators, Patricians,
A City full: Of Tribunes such as you,
A Sea and Land full: you haue pray'd well to day:
This Morning, for ten thousand of your throates,
I'de not haue giuen a doit. Harke, how they ioy.

Sound still with the Shouts.

Sicin. First, the Gods blesse you for your tydings:
Next, accept my thankefulnesse.

Mess. Sir, we haue all great cause to giue great thanks.

Sicin. They are neere the City.

Mes. Almost at point to enter.

Sicin. We'l meet them, and helpe the ioy. Exeunt.

Enter two Senators, with Ladies, passing ouer the Stage, with other Lords.

Sen. Behold our Patronesse, the life of Rome:
Call all your Tribes together, praise the Gods,
And make triumphant fires, strew Flowers before them:
Vnshoot the noise that Banish'd Marcius;
Repeale him, with the welcome of his Mother:
Cry welcome Ladies, welcome

All. Welcome Ladies, welcome.

A Flourish with Drummes & Trumpets.

Enter Tullus Auffidius, with Attendants.

Auf. Go tell the Lords a'th'City, I am heere:
Deliuer them this Paper: having read it,
Bid them repayre to th'Market place, where I
Euen in theirs, and in the Commons eares
Will vouch the truth of it. Him I accuse:
The City Ports by this hath enter'd, and
Intends t'appeare before the People, hoping
To purge himselfe with words. Dispatch.

Enter 3 or 4 Conspirators of Auffidius Fashion.

Most Welcome.

1. Con. How is it with our Generall?

Auf. Euen so, as with a man by his owne Almes impoyson'd, and with his Charity slaine.

2. Con. Most Noble Sir, If you do hold the same intent
Wherein you wishe vs parties: We'l deliuer you
Of your great danger.

Auf Sir, I cannot tell,
We must proceed as we do finde the People.

3. Con. The People will remaine vncertaine, whil'st
'Twixt you there's difference: but the fall of either
Makes the Survivor heyre of all.

Auf. I know it:
And my present to strike at him, admits
A good construction. I rais'd him, and I pawn'd
Mine Honor for his truth: who being so heighten'd,
He weaued his new Plants with dewes of Flattery,
Seducing so my Friends: and to this end,
He bow'd his Nature, never knowne before,
But to be rough, vnwayable, and free.

3. Conf. Sir, his stoutnesse
When he did stand for Consull, which he lost
By lacke of stooping.

Auf. That I would haue spoke of:
Being banish'd for't, he came vnto my Hearth,
Presented to my knife his Throat: I tooke him,
Made him ioyne-seruant with me: Gaue him way
In all his owne desires: Nay, let him choose
Out of my Files, his proiects, to accomplish
My best and freshest men, serv'd his designements
In mine owne person: holpe to reape the Fame
Which he did end all his; and tooke some pride.
To do my selfe this wrong: Till at the last
I seem'd his Follower, not Partner; and
He wag'd me with his Countenance, as if
I had bin Mercenary.

Con. So he did my Lord:
The Army marueyl'd at it, and in the last,
When he had carried Rome, and that we look'd
For no lesse Spoile, then Glory.

Auf. There was it:
For which my sinewes shall be stretcht vpon him,
At a few drops of Womens rheume, which are
As cheape as Lies; he sold the Blood and Labour
Of our great Action; therefore shall he dye,
And I'le renew me in his fall But harke

Drummes and Trumpets sounds, with great shouts of the people.

1. Con. Your Native Towne you entr'd like a Posse,
And had no welcomes home, but he returnes
Splitting the Ayre with noyse.

2. Con. And patient Fooles,
Whose children he hath slaine, their base throats teare
With giuing him glory.

3. Con. Therefore at your vantage,
Ere he expresse himselfe, or mouse the people
With what he would say, let him feele your Swords
Which we will second, when he lies along
After your way. His Tale pronounc'd, shall bury
His Reasons, with his Body.

Auf. Say no more. Heere come the Lords.

Enter the Lords of the City.

All Lords. You are most welcome home.

Auf. I haue not deseru'd it.
But worthy Lords, haue you with heede perused
What I haue written to you?

All. We haue.

1. Lord. And greeue to heare't:
What faults he made before the last, I thinke
Might haue found easie Fines: But there to end
Where he was to begin, and giue away
The benefit of our Lenies, answering vs
With our owne charge: making a Treatie, where
There was a yeelding; this admits no excuse.

And beare the Palme, for having bravely shed
Thy Wife and Childrens blood: For my selfe, Sonne,
I purpose not to waite on Fortune, till
These warres determine: If I cannot perswade thee,
Rather to shew a Noble grace to both parts,
Then seeke the end of one; thou shalt no sooner
March to assault thy Country, then to treade
(Trust too't, thou shalt not) on thy Mothers wombe
That brought thee to this world.

Virg. I, and mine, that brought you forth this boy,
To keepe your name living to time.

Boy. A shall not tread on me: Ile run away
Till I am bigger, but then Ile fight.

Corio. Not of a woman's tendernesse to be,
Requires not Childe, nor womans face to see:
I have stay'd too long.

Volum. Nay, go not from vs thus:
If it were so, that our request did tend
To save the Romanes, thereby to destroy
The Volces whom you serve, you might condemne vs
As poysonous of your Honour. No, our suite
Is that you reconcile them: While the Volces
May say, this mercy we have shew'd; the Romanes,
This we receiu'd, and each in either side
Give the All-haile to thee, and cry be Blest
For making vp this peace. Thou know'st (great Sonne)
The end of Warres uncertaine: but this certaine,
That if thou conquer Rome, the benefit
Which thou shalt thereby reape, is such a name
Whose repetition will be dogg'd with Curses:
Whose Chronicle thus writ, The man was Noble,
But with his last Attempt, he wip'd it out:
Destroy'd his Country, and his name remaines
To th'ensuing Age, abhorr'd. Speake to me Son:
Thou hast affected the fine straines of Honor,
To imitate the graces of the Gods.
To teare with Thunder the wide Cheekes a'th'Ayre,
And yet to change thy Sulphure with a Boult
That should but rive an Oake. Why do'st not speake?
Think'st thou it Honourable for a Noble man
Still to remember wrongs? Daughter, speake you
He cares not for your weeping. Speake thou Boy,
Perhaps thy childishnesse will move him more
Then can our Reason. There's no man in the world
More bound to's Mother, yet here he let's me prate
Like one i'th'Stocks. Thou hast never in thy life,
Shew'd thy dearest Mother any curtesie,
When she (poore Hen) fond of no second brood,
Has'st clock'd thee to the Warres: and selfe-lie home
Loden with Honor. Say my Request's vniust,
And spurne me backe: But, if it be not so
Thou art not honest, and the Gods will plague thee
That thou restrain'st from me the Duty, which
To a Mothers part belongs. He turnes away:
Down Ladies: let vs shame him with him without knees
To his sur-name Coriolanus longs more pride
Then pitty to our Prayers. Down: an end,
This is the last. So, we will home to Rome,
And dye among our Neighbours: Nay, behold's,
This Boy that cannot tell what he would have,
But kneeles, and holds vp hands for fellowship,
Doe's reason our Petition with more strength
Then thou hast to deny't. Come, let vs go:
This Fellow had a Volcean to his Mother:
His Wife is in Corioles, and his Childe
Like him by chance: yet give vs our dispatch:
I am bashe vntill our City be afire, & then Ile speak a little.

Holds her by the hand silent.

Corio. O Mother, Mother!
What have you done? Behold, the Heavens do ope,
The Gods looke downe, and this vnnaturall Scene
They laugh at. Oh my Mother, Mother: Oh!
You have wonne a happy Victory to Rome.
But for your Sonne, believe it: Oh believe it,
Most dangerously you have with him prevail'd.
If not most mortall to him. But let it come:
Aufidius, though I cannot make true Warres,
Ile frame convenient peace. Now good Aufidius,
Were you in my stead, would you have heard
A Mother less? or granted less Aufidius?

Auf. I was mov'd withall.

Corio. I dare be sworne you were:
And sir, it is no little thing to make
Mine eyes to sweat compassion. But (good sir)
What peace you'l make, advise me: For my part,
Ile not to Rome, Ile backe with you, and pray you
Stand to me in this cause. Oh Mother! Wife!

Auf. I am glad thou hast set thy mercy, & thy Honor
At difference in thee: Out of that Ile worke
My selfe a former Fortune.

Corio. I by and by; But we will drinke together:
And you shall bear
A better witnesse backe then words, which we
On like conditions, will have Counter-seal'd.
Come enter with vs: Ladies you deserve
To have a Temple built you: All the Swords
In Italy, and her Confederate Armes,
Could not have made this peace. Exeunt.

Enter Menenius and Sicinius.

Menen. See you yd'a Coin a'th Capitol, yes'd comes?

Sicin. Why what of that?

Menen. If it be possible for you to displace it with your little finger, there is some hope the Ladies of Rome, especially his Mother, may prevaile with him. But I say, there is no hope in't, our throats are sentenc'd, and stay vpon execution.

Sicin. Is't possible, that so short a time can alter the condition of a man.

Menen. There is differency between a Grub & a Butterfly, yet your Butterfly was a Grub: this Marcius, is growne from Man to Dragon: He has wings, he's more then a creeping thing.

Sicin. He lou'd his Mother dearely.

Menen. So did he me: and he no more remembers his Mother now, then an eight yeare old horse. The tartnesse of his face, sowres ripe Grapes. When he walks, he moves like an Engine, and the ground shrinkes before his Treading. He is able to pierce a Corslet with his eye: Talkes like a knell, and his hum is a Battery. He sits in his State, as a thing made for Alexander. What he bids be done, is finish't with his bidding. He wants nothing of a God but Eternity, and a Heaven to Throne in.

Sicin. Yes, mercy, if you report him truly.

Menen. I paint him in the Character. Mark what mercy his Mother shall bring from him: There is no more mercy in him, then there is milke in a male-Tyger, that shall our poore City finde: and all this is long of you.

Sicin. The Gods be good vnto vs.

Menen. No, in such a case the Gods will not bee good vnto vs. When we banish'd him, we respected not them: and he returning to breake our necks, they respect not vs.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess.

Mes. Sir, if you'd saue your life, fly to your House,
The Plebeians haue got your Fellow Tribune,
And hale him vp and downe; all swearing, if
The Romane Ladies bring not comfort home,
They'l giue him death by inches.

Enter another Messenger.

Scrin. What's the Newes? (presuyl'd,

Mess. Good Newes, good newes, the Ladies haue
The Volcians are dislodg'd, and Marcius gone:
A merrier day did never yet greet Rome,
No, not th'expulsion of the Tarquins

Scrin. Friend, art thou certaine this is true?
Is't most certaine.

Mes. As certaine as I know the Sun is fire:
Where haue you lurk'd that you make doubt of it:
Ne're through an Arch so hurried the blowne Tide,
As the recomforted through th'gates. Why harke you:

Trumpets, Hoboyes, Drums beate, altogether.

The Trumpets, Sack-buts, Psalteries, and Fifes,
Tabers, and Symboles, and the showting Romans
Make the Sunne dance. Heark'e you. A shout within

Mene. This is good Newes:
I will go meete the Ladies. This Volumnia,
Is worth of Consuls, Senators, Patricians,
A City full: Of Tribunes such as you,
A Sea and Land full: you haue pray'd well to day:
This Morning, for ten thousand of your throates,
I'de not haue giuen a dou. Harke, how they ioy.

Sound still with the Shouts.

Scrin. First, the Gods blesse you for your tydings:
Next, accept my thankefulnesse.

Mess. Sir, we haue all great cause to giue great thanks.

Scrin. They are neere the City.

Mes. Almost at point to enter.

Scrin. We'l meet them, and helpe the ioy. Exeunt.

Enter two Senators, with Ladies, passing ouer the Stage, with other Lords.

Sen. Behold our Patronesse, the life of Rome:
Call all your Tribes together, praise the Gods,
And make triumphant fires, strew Flowers before them:
Vnshoot the noise that Banish'd Marcius;
Repeale him, with the welcome of his Mother:
Cry welcome Ladies, welcome

All. Welcome Ladies, welcome.

A Flourish with Drummes & Trumpets.

Enter Tullus Auffidius, with Attendants.

Auf. Go tell the Lords a'th'City, I am heere:
Deliuer them this Paper: having read it,
Bid them repayre to th'Market place, where I
Euen in theirs, and in the Commons eares
Will vouch the truth of it. Him I accuse:
The City Ports by this hath enter'd, and
Intends t'appeare before the People, hoping
To purge himselfe with words. Dispatch.

Enter 3 or 4 Conspirators of Auffidius Fashion.

Most Welcome.

1. Con. How is it with our Generall?

Auf. Euen so, as with a man by his owne Alms impoyson'd, and with his Charity slaine.

2. Con. Most Noble Sir, If you do hold the same intent
Wherein you wishe vs parties: We'l deliuer you
Of your great danger.

Auf Sir, I cannot tell,
We must proceed as we do finde the People.

3. Con. The People will remaine vncertaine, whil'st
'Twixt you there's difference: but the fall of either
Makes the Survivor heyre of all.

Auf. I know it:
And my present to strike at him, admits
A good construction. I rais'd him, and I pawn'd
Mine Honor for his truth: who being so heightten'd,
He weaued his new Plants with dewes of Flattery,
Seducing so my Friends: and to this end,
He bow'd his Nature, never knowne before,
But to be rough, vnseasonable, and free.

3. Cons. Sir, his stoutnesse
When he did stand for Consull, which he lost
By lacke of stooping.

Auf. That I would haue spoke of:
Being banish'd for't, he came vnto my Hearth,
Presented to my knife his Throat: I tooke him,
Made him ioyne-seruant with me: Gaue him way
In all his owne desires: Nay, let him choose
Out of my Files, his proiects, to accomplish
My best and freshest men, seru'd his designements
In mine owne person: holpe to reape the Fame
Which he did end all his; and tooke some pride
To do my selfe this wrong: Till at the last
I seem'd his Follower, not Partner; and
He wadg'd me with his Countenance, as if
I had bin Mercenary.

Con. So he did my Lord:
The Army marueyl'd at it, and in the last,
When he had carried Rome, and that we look'd
For no lesse Spoile, then Glory.

Auf. There was it:
For which my sinewes shall be stretcht vpon him,
At a few drops of Womens rheume, which are
As cheape as Lies; he sold the Blood and Labour
Of our great Action; therefore shall he dye,
And I'le renew me in his fall But harke

Drummes and Trumpets sounds, with great shouts of the people.

1. Con. Your Native Towne you enter'd like a Post,
And had no welcomes home, but he returnes
Splitting the Ayre with noyse.

2. Con. And patient Fooles,
Whose children he hath slaine, their base throats tearе
With giuing him glory.

3. Con. Therefore at your vantage,
Ere he expresse himselfe, or moue the people
With what he would say, let him feele your Swords
Which we will second, when he lies along
After your way. His Tale pronounc'd, shall bury
His Reasons, with his Body.

Auf. Say no more. Heere come the Lords.

Enter the Lords of the City.

All Lords. You are most welcome home.

Auf. I haue not deseru'd it.
But worthy Lords, haue you with heede perused
What I haue written to you?

All. We haue.

1. Lord. And greeue to heare't:
What faults he made before the last, I thinke
Might haue found easie Fines: But there to end
Where he was to begin, and giue away
The benefit of our Lawes, answering vs
With our owne charge: making a Treatie, where
There was a yeelding; this admits no excuse.

Auf.

Auf. He approaches, you shall heare him.

Enter Coriolanus marching with Drummes, and Colours. The Commoners being with him.

Corio. Haile Lords, I am return'd your Souldier:
No more infected with my Countries loue
Then when I parted hence: but still satisfiing
Vnder your great Command. You are to know,
That prosperously I haue attempted, and
With bloody passage led your Warres, even to
The gates of Rome: Our spoiles we haue brought home
Doth more then counterpoize a full third part
The charges of the Action. We haue made peace
With no lesse Honor to the Antiates
Then shame to th'Romaines. And we heere deliuer
Subscrib'd by'th'Consuls, and Patricians,
Together with the Seale a'th Senat, what
We haue compounded on.

Auf. Read it not Noble Lords,
But tell the Traitor in the highest degree
He hath abus'd your Powers.

Corio. Traitor? How now?

Auf. I Traitor, Martius.

Corio. Martius?

Auf. I Martius, Caius Martius: Do'st thou thinke
Ile grace thee with that Robbery, thy stolne name
Coriolanus in Corioles?
You Lords and Heads a'th'State, perfidiously
He ha's betray'd your business, and given vp
For certaine drops of Salt, your City Rome:
I say your City to his Wife and Mother,
Breaking his Oath and Resolution, like
A twist of rotten Silke, never admitting
Counsaile a'th'warre: But at his Nurses teares
He whin'd and roar'd away your Victory,
That Pages blush'd at him, and men of heart
Look'd wond'ring each at others.

Corio. Heat'st thou Mars?

Auf. Name not the God, thou boy of Teares.

Corio. Ha?

Auf. No more.

Corio. Measurelesse Lyar, thou hast made my heart
Too great for what containes it. Boy? Oh Slaue,
Pardon me Lords, 'tis the first time that ever
I was forc'd to scold. Your iudgements my grave Lords
Must give this Curre the Lye: and his owne Notion,
Who weares my stripes impreft vpon him, that Must bear my beating to his Grave, shall ioyne
To thrust the Lye vnto him.

1 Lord. Peace both, and heare me speake.

Corio. Cut me to peeces Volces men and Lads,
Staine all your edges on me. Boy, false Hound:
If you haue writ your Annales true, 'tis there,
That like an Eagle in a Douecote, I
Flatter'd your Volcians in Corioles.
Alone I did it, Boy.

Auf. Why Noble Lords,
Will you be put in minde of his blinde Fortune,
Which was your shame, by this vnholy Braggart?
Tore your owne eyes, and eares?

All Comp. Let him dye for't.

All People. Tearе him to peeces, do it presently:
He kill'd my Sonne, my daughter, he kill'd my Cousine
Marcus, he kill'd my Father.

2 Lord. Peace hoe: no outrage, peace:
The man is Noble, and his Fame folds in
This Orbe o'th'earth: His last offences to vs
Shall haue Iudicious hearing. Stand Auffidius,
And trouble not the peace.

Corio. O that I had him, with six Auffidiuses, or more:
His Tribe, to vse my lawfull Sword.

Auf. Insolent Villaine.

All Comp. Kill, kill, kill, kill, kill him.

Draw both the Conspirators, and kills Martius, who falles, Auffidius stands on him.

Lords. Hold, hold, hold, hold.

Auf. My Noble Masters, heare me speake.

1. Lord. O Tullus.

2. Lord. Thou hast done a deed, whereat
Valour will weepe.

3. Lord. Tread not vpon him Masters, all be quiet,
Put vp your Swords.

Auf. My Lords,
When you shall know (as in this Rage
Prouok'd by him, you cannot) the great danger
Which this mans life did owe you, you'l reioyce
That he is thus cut off. Please it your Honours
To call me to your Senate, Ile deliuer
My selfe your loyall Seruant, or endure
Your heauiest Censure.

1. Lord. Beare from hence his body,
And mourne you for him. Let him be regarded
As the most Noble Corse, that ever Herald
Did follow to his Vrne.

2. Lord. His owne impatience,
Takes from Auffidius a great part of blame:
Let's make the Best of it.

Auf. My Rage is gone,
And I am struck with sorrow. Take him vp:
Helpe three a'th'cheefest Souldiers, Ile be one.
Beate thou the Drumme that it speake mournfully:
Traile your steele Pikes. Though in this City he Hath widdowed and vnchilded many a one,
Which to this houre bewaile the Iniury,
Yet he shall haue a Noble Memory. Assist.

Exeunt bearing the Body of Martius. A dead March Sounded.

FINIS.

The Lamentable Tragedy of Titus Andronicus.

Actus Primus. Scœna Prima.

Flourish. Enter the Tribunes and Senators aloft. And then enter Saturninus and his Followers on one doore, and Bassianus and his Followers at the other, with Drum & Colours.

Saturninus.

NOble Patricians, Patrons of my right,
Defend the iustice of my Cause with Armes.
And Country-men, my loving Followers,
Plead my Successiue Title with your Swords.
I was the first borne Sonne, that was the last
That wore the Imperiall Diadem of Rome.
Then let my Fathers Honours liue in me,
Nor wrong mine Age with this indignitie.

Bassianus. Romaines, Friends, Followers,
Fauourers of my Right.
If euer Bassianus, Cæsars Sonne,
Were gracious in the eyes of Royall Rome,
Keepe then this passage to the Capitoll.
And suffer not Dishonour to approach
Th'Imperiall Seate to Vertue: consecrate
To Iustice, Continence, and Nobility:
But let Desert in pure Election shine;
And Romaines, fight for Freedome in your Choice.

Enter Marcus Andronicus aloft with the Crowne.

Princes, that strine by Factions, and by Friends,
Ambitiously for Rule and Empery:
Know, that the people of Rome for whom we stand
A speciall Party, haue by Common voyce
In Election for the Romane Emperie,
Chosen Andronicus, Sur-named Pious,
For many good and great deserts to Rome.
A Nobler man, a braiuer Warriour,
Liues not this day within the City Walles.
He by the Senate is accited home
From weary Warres against the barbarous Gothes,
That with his Sonnes (a terror to our Foes)
Hath ioak'd a Nation strong, train'd vp in Armes.
Ten yeares are spent, since first he vndertooke
This Cause of Rome, and chasticed with Armes
Our Enemies pride. Fiue times he hath return'd
Bleeding to Rome, bearing his Valiant Sonnes
In Coffins from the Field.
And now at last, laden with Honours Spoyles,
Returnes the good Andronicus to Rome,
Renowned Titus, flourishing in Armes.
Let vs intreat, by Honour of his Name,
Whom (worthily) you would haue now succeede,
And in the Capitoll and Senates right,
Whom you pretend to Honour and Adore,
That you withdraw you, and abate your Strength,
Dismisse your Followers, and as Suters should,
Plead your Deserts in Peace and Humblenesse.

Saturninus. How fayre the Tribune speakes,
To calme my thoughts.

Bassia. Marcus Andronicus, so I do affie
In thy vprightnesse and Integrity:
And so I Loue and Honor thee, and thine,
Thy Noble Brother Titus, and his Sonnes,
And Her (to whom my thoughts are humbled all)
Gracious Lauinia, Romes rich Ornament,
That I will heere dismisse my loving Friends:
And to my Fortunes, and the Peoples Fauour,
Commit my Cause in ballance to be weigh'd.

Exit Souldiers.

Saturnine. Friends, that haue beene
Thus forward in my Right,
I thanke you all, and heere Dismisse you all,
And to the Loue and Fauour of my Country,
Commit my Self, my Person, and the Cause.
Rome, be as iust and gracious vnto me,
As I am confident and kinde to thee.
Open the Gates, and let me in.

Bassia. Tribunes, and me, a poore Competitor.

Flourish. They go vp into the Senate house.

Enter a Captaine.

Cap. Romanes make way: the good Andronicus,
Patron of Vertue, Romes best Champion,
Successefull in the Battailes that he fights,
With Honour and with fortune is return'd,
From whence he circumscribed with his Sword,
And brought to yoke the Enemies of Rome

Sound Drummes and Trumpets. And then enter two of Titus Sonnes; After them, two men bearing a Coffin couered with blacke, then two other Sonnes. After them, Titus Andronicus, and then Tamora the Queene of Gothes, & her two Sonnes Chiron and Demetrius, with Aaron the Moore, and others, as many as can be. They set downe the Coffin, and Titus speakes.

Andronicus. Haile Rome:
Victorious in thy Mourning Weedes:

Loe,

Loe as the Barke that hath discharg'd his fraught,
Returnes with precious lading to the Bay,
From whence at first she weigh'd her Anchorage:
Commeth Andronicus bound with Lawrell boughes,
To resalute his Country with his teares,
Teares of true ioy for his returne to Rome,
Thou great defender of this Capitoll,
Stand gracious to the Rites that we intend.
Romaines, of five and twenty Valiant Sonnes,
Halfe of the number that King Priam had.
Behold the poore remaines alive and dead!
These that Survive, let Rome reward with Loue:
These that I bring vnto their latest home,
With buriall amongst their Auncestors.
Heere Gothes haue given me leaue to sheath my Sword:
Titus vnkinde, and careless of thine owne,
Why suffer'st thou thy Sonnes vnburied yet,
To houer on the dreadfull shore of Stix?
Make way to lay them by their Bretheren.

They open the Tombe.

There greete in silence as the dead are wont,
And sleepe in peace, slaine in your Countries warres:
O sacred receptacle of my ioyes,
Sweet Cell of vertue and Nobilitie,
How many Sonnes of mine hast thou in store,
That thou wilt never render to me more?

Luc. Give vs the proudest prisoner of the Gothes,
That we may hew his limbes, and on a pile
Ad manes fratrum, sacrifice his flesh:
Before this earthly prison of their bones,
That so the shadowes be not vnappeas'd.
Nor we disturb'd with prodigies on earth.

Tit. I giue him you, the Noblest that Survives,
The eldest Son of this distressed Queene.

Tam. Stay Romaine Bretheren, gracious Conqueror,
Victorious Titus, rue the teares I shed,
A Mothers teares in passion for her sonne:
And if thy Sonnes were ever deere to thee,
Oh thinke my sonnes to be as deere to me.
Sufficeth not, that we are brought to Rome
To beautifie thy Triumphs, and returne
Captive to thee, and to thy Romaine yoke,
But must my Sonnes be slaughered in the streeres,
For Valiant doings in their Countries cause?
O! If to fight for King and Common-weale,
Were piety in thine, it is in these:
Andronicus, staine not thy Tombe with blood.
Wilt thou draw neere the nature of the Gods?
Draw neere them then in being merciffull,
Sweet mercy is Nobilities true badge,
Thrice Noble Titus, spare my first borne sonne.

Tit. Patient your selfe Madam, and pardon me.
These are the Bretheren, whom you Gothes beheld
Alive and dead, and for their Bretheren slaine,
Religiously they aske a sacrifice:
To this your sonne is mark'd, and die he must,
T'appease their groaning shadowes that are gone.

Luc. Away with him, and make a fire straight,
And with our Swords vpon a pile of wood,
Let's hew his limbes till they be cleane consum'd.

Exit Sonnes with Alarbus.

Tamo. O cruell irreligious piety.

Chi. Was euer Scythia halfe so barbarous?

Dem. Oppose me Scythia to ambitious Rome,
Alarbus goes to rest, and we survive,
To tremble vnder Titus threatning lookes.
Then Madam stand resolu'd, but hope withall,
The selfe same Gods that arm'd the Queene of Troy
With opportunitie of sharpe revenge
Vpon the Thracian Tyrant in his Tent,
May fauour Tamora the Queene of Gothes,
(When Gothes were Gothes, and Tamora was Queene)
To quit the bloody wrongs vpon her foes.

Enter the Sonnes of Andronicus again.

Luci. See Lord and Father, how we have perfoum'd
Our Romaine rights, Alarbus limbs are lopt,
And intrails feede the sacrificing fire,
Whose smoke like incense doth perfume the skie.
Remaineth nought but to interre our Bretheren,
And with low'd Larums welcome them to Rome.

Tit. Let it be so, and let Andronicus
Make this his latest farewell to their soules.

Flourish.

Then Sound Trumpets, and lay the Coffins in the Tombe.

In peace and Honour rest you heere my Sonnes,
Romes readiest Champions, repose you heere in rest,
Secure from worldly chauances and mishaps:
Heere lurks no Treason, heere no enuie swells,
Heere grow no damned grudges, heere are no storms,
No noyse, but silence and Eternall sleepe,
In peace and Honour rest you heere my Sonnes.

Enter Lauinia.

Laui In peace and Honour, live Lord Titus long,
My Noble Lord and Father, live in Fame:
Loe at this Tombe my tributarie teares,
I render for my Bretherens Obsequies:
And at thy feete I kneele, with teares of ioy
Shed on the earth for thy returne to Rome.
O blesse me heere with thy victorious hand,
Whose Fortune Romes best Citizens applaud.

Ti. Kind Rome,
That rest thus loungily reserv'd
The Cordiall of mine age to glad my hart,
Lauinia live, out-live thy Fathers dayes:
And Fames eternall date for vertues praise.

Mart. Long live Lord Titus, my beloved brother,
Gracious Triumpher in the eyes of Rome.

Ti. Thanks Gentle Tribune,
Noble brother Martius.

Mar. And welcome Nephews from successfull wars,
You that survive and you that sleepe in Fame:
Fare Lords your Fortunes are all alike in all,
That in your Countries seruice drew your Swords.
But safer Triumph is this Funerall Pompe,
That hath aspir'd to Solons Happines,
And Triumphs ouer chaunce in honours bed.
Titus Andronicus, the people of Rome,
Whose friend in iustice thou hast ever bene,
Send thee by me their Tribune and their trust,
This Pallliament of white and spotlesse Hat,
And name thee in Election for the Empire,
With these our late deceased Emperors Sonnes:
Be Candidatus then and put it on,
And helpe to set a head on headlesse Rome.

Ti. A better head her Glorious body fits,
Then his that shakes for age and feeblenesse.

What

What should I don this Robe and trouble you,
Be chosen with proclamations to day,
To morrow yeeld vp rule, resigne my life,
And set abroad new business for you all.
Rome I have bene thy Souldier forty yeares,
And led my Countries strength successfully,
And buried one and twenty Valiant Sonnes,
Knighted in Field, slaine manfully in Armes,
In right and Service of their Noble Countrie:
Giue me a staffe of Honour for mine age,
But not a Sceptre to controule the world,
Vpright he held it Lords, that held it last.

Mar. Titus, thou shalt obtaine and aske the Emperie

Sat. Proud and ambitious Tribune, can't thou tell?

Titus. Patience Prince Saturnine.

Sat. Romanes do me right.
Patricians draw your Swords, and sheath them not Till Saturnine be Romes Emperour:
Andronicus would thou were shipt to hell,
Rather then rob me of the peoples harts.

Lav. Proud Saturnine, interrupter of the good
That Noble minded Titus meanes to thee.

Tit. Content thee Prince, I will restore to thee
The peoples harts, and weane them from themselues.

Bass. Andronicus, I do not flatter thee
But Honour thee, and will doe till I die:
My Faction if thou strengthen with thy Friend?
I will most thankefull be, and thankes to men
Of Noble minden, is Honourable Meede.

Tit. People of Rome, and Noble Tribuns harre,
I ask your voyces and your Suffrages,
Will you bestow them friendly on Andronicus?

Tribunes. To gratifie the good Andronicus,
And Gratulate his safe returne to Rome,
The people will accept whom he admits.

Tit. Tribunes I thanke you, and this fare I make,
That you Create your Emperours eldest sonne,
Lord Saturnine, whose Vertues will I hope,
Reflect on Rome as Tytans Rayes on earth
And ripen Iustice in this Common-weale:
Then if you will elect by my advise,
Crowne him, and say: Long live our Emperour.

Mar. Au. With Voyces and applause of every sort,
Patricians and Plebeans we Create
Lord Saturnine Romes Great Emperour.
And say, Long live our Emperour Saturnine.
A long Flourish till they come down.

Sat. Titus Andronicus, for thy Fauours done,
To vs in our Election this day,
I give thee thankes in part of thy Deserts,
And for an Onset Titus to advance
Thy Name, and Honorable Familie,
Lavinia will I make my Empresse,
Rome sRoyall Mistris, Mistris of my hart
And in the Sacred Pathan her espouse:
Tell me Andronicus doth this motion please thee?

Tit. It doth my worthy Lord, and in this match,
I hold me Highly Honoured of your Grace,
And heere in sight of Rome, to Saturnine,
King and Commander of our Common-weale,
The Wide-worlds Emperour, do I Consecrate,
My Sword, my Chariot, and my Prisoners,
Presents well Worthy Romes Imperiall Lord:
Receive them then, the Tribute that I owe.
Mine Honours Ensigns humbled at my feete.

Sat. Thankes Noble Titus, Father of my life,
How proud I am of thee, and of thy gifts
Rome shall record, and when I do forget
The least of these vnspeakable Deserts,
Romans forget your Faultie to me.

Tit. Now Madam are your prisoner to an Emperour,
To him that for you Honour and your State,
Will vse you Nobly and your followers.

Sat. A goodly Lady, trust me of the Hue
That I would choose, were I to choose a new:
Cleere vp Faire Queene that cloudy countenance,
Though chance of warre
Hath wrought this change of cheere,
Thou com'st not to be made a scorne in Rome:
Princely shall be thy vsage every way.
Rest on my word, and let not discontent
Daunt all your hopes: Madam he comforts you,
Can make your Greeter then the Queene of Gothes?

Lavinia you are not displeas'd with this?

Lav. Not I my Lord, seth true Nobilitie,
Warrants these words in Princely curtesie.

Sat. Thankes sweete Lavinia Romans let vs goe:
Ransomlesse heere we set our Prisoners free,
Proclaime our Honors Lords with Trumpe and Drum.

Bass. Lord Titus by your leaue, this Maid is mine.

Tit. How sir? Are you in earnest then my Lord?

Bass. I Noble Titus, and resolu'd withall,
To doe my selfe this reason, and this right.

Mart. Suum cuique nam, is our Romane Iustice,
This Prince in Iustice seizeth but his owne.

Lav. And that he will and shall, if Lucius liue.

Tit. Traytors auant, where is the Emperours Guarde?
Treason my Lord, Lavinia is surpris'd.

Sat. Surpris'd, by whom?

Bass. By him that iustly may
Beare his Betroth'd, from all the world away.

Mutij. Brothers helpe to conuey her hence away,
And with my Sword Ile keepe this doore safe.

Tit. Follow my Lord, and Ile soone bring her backe.

Mut. My Lord you passe not heere.

Tit. What villaine Boy, bar'st me my way in Rome?

Mut. Helpe Lucius helpe. He kills him.

Luc. My Lord you are vniust, and more then so,
In wrongfull quarrell, you haue slaine your son.

Tit. Not thou, not he are my sonnes of mine,
My sonnes would never so dishonour me.
Traytor restore Lavinia to the Emperour.

Luc. Dead if you will, but not to be his wife,
That is smothers lawfull promist Loue.

Enter aloft the Emperour with Tamora and her two sonnes, and Aaron the Moore.

Emp. No Titus, no, the Emperour needs her not,
Nor her, nor thee, nor any of thy stocke:
Ile trust by Leisure him that mocks me once,
Thee never: nor thy Traytorous haughty sonnes,
Confederates all, thus to dishonour me.
Was none in Rome to make a stale
But Saturnine? Full well Andronicus
Agree these Deeds, with that proud brugge of thine,
That said'st, I beg'd the Empire at thy hands;

Tit. O monstrous, what reproachfull words are these?

Sat. But goe thy wayes, goe giue that changing peece,
To him that flourishe for her with his Sword:
A Valiant sonne in-law thou shalt enioy:
One, fit to bandy with thy lawlesse Sonnes,

To

To raise in the Common-wealth of Rome.

Tit. These words are Razors to my wounded hart.

Sat. And therefore lovely Tamora Queene of Gothes,
That like the stately Thebe mong'st her Nimphs
Dost outer-shine the Gallant'st Dames of Rome,
If thou be pleas'd with this my sodaine choyse,
Behold I choose thee Tamora for my Bride,
And will Create thee Empresse of Rome.
Speake Queene of Goths dost thou applaud my choyse?
And here I sweare by all the Romaine Gods,
Sith Priest and Holy-water are so neere,
And Tapers burne so bright, and every thing
In readines for Hymenæus stand,
I will not resalute the streets of Rome,
Or climse my Pallace, till from forth this place,
I leade espous'd my Bride along with me.

Tamo. And here in sight of heaven to Rome I sweare,
If Saturnine aduance the Queen of Gothes,
Shee will a Hand-maid be to his desires,
A louing Nurse, a Mother to his youth.

Saturn. Ascend Faire Queene,
Pantheon Lords, accompany
Your Noble Emperour and his lobely Brid, e
Sent by the heauens for Prince Saturnine,
Whose wisedome hath her Fortune Conquered,
There shall we Consummate our Spousall rites.

Exeunt omnes.

Tit. I am not bid to waite vpon this Bride:
Titus when wer't thou wont to walke alone,
Dishonoured thus and Challenged of wrongs?

Enter Marcus and Titus Sonnes.

Mar O Titus see! O see what thou hast done!
In a bad quarrell slaine a Vertuous sonne.

Tit. No foolish Tribune, no: No sonne of mine,
Nor thou, nor these Confederates in the deed,
That hath dishonoured all our Family,
Vnworthy brother, and vnworthy Sonnes.

Lart. But let vs giue him burial as becomes:
Giue Mutius buriall with our Bretheren.

Tit. Traytors away, he rest's not in this Tombe:
This Monument fiue hundreth yeares hath stood,
Which I haue Sumptuously re-edified:
Heere none but Souldiers, and Romes Seruitors,
Repose in Fame: None basely slaine in brawles,
Bury him where you can, he comes not heere.

Mar. My Lord this is impiety in you,
My Nephew Mutius deeds do plead for him,
He must be buried with his bretheren.

Titus two Sonnes speakes.

And shall, or him we will accompany.

Ti. And shall! What villaine was it spake that word?

Titus sonne speakes.

He that would vouch'd it in any place but heere.

Ti. What would you bury him in my despight?

Mar. No Noble Titus, but intreat of thee,
To pardon Mutius, and to bury him.

Ti. Marcus, Euen thou hast stroke vpon my Creft,
And with these Boyes mine Honour thou hast wounded,
My foes I doe repute you every one.
So trouble me no more, but get you gone.

2. Sonne. He is not himselfe, let vs withdraw.

3. Sonne. Not I till Mutius bones be buried.

The Brother and the sonnes kneele.

Mar. Brother, for in that a name doth nature plea'd.

2. Sonne. Father, and in that name doth nature speake.

Ti. Speake thou no more if all the rest will speede.

Mar. Renowned Titus more then halfe my soules.

Lar. Deare Father, soule and substance of vs all.

Mar. Suffer thy brother Marcus to interre
His Noble Nephew heere in vertues nest,
That died in Honour and Lauinia's cause.
Thou art a Romaine, be not barberous:
The Greekes vpon a deuise did bury Aiax
That slew himselfe: And Laertes sonne,
Did graciously plead for his Funerals:
Let not young Mutius then that was thy ioy,
Be bar'd his entrance heere.

Ti. Rise Marcus, rise,
The dismall'st day is this that ere I saw,
To be dishonored by my Sonnes in Rome:
Well, bury him, and bury me the next.

They put him in the Tombe.

Lar. There lie thy bones sweet Mutius with thy Till we with Trophees do adorne thy Tombe. (friends

They all kneele and say.

No man shed teares for Noble Mutius,
He liues in Fame, that di'd in vertues cause. Exit.

Mar. My Lord to step out of these sodden dumps,
How comes it that the subtile Queene of Gothes,
Is of a sodaine thus aduance'd in Rome?

Ti. I know not Marcus: but I know it is,
(Whether by deuise or no) the heauens can tell,
Is she not then beholding to the man,
That brought her for this high good turne so faire?
Yes, and will Nobly him remunerate.

Flourish.

Enter the Emperor, Tamora, and her two sons, with the Moore at one doore. Enter at the other doore Bassianus and Lauinia with others.

Sat. So Bassianus, you haue plaid your prize,
God giue you ioy fir of your Gallant Bride.

Bassi. And you of yours my Lord: I say no more,
Nor wish no lesse, and so I take my leaue.

Sat. Traytor, if Rome haue law, or we haue power,
Thou and thy Fuction shall repent this Rape.

Bassi. Rape call you it my Lord, to crale my owne,
My true betrothed Loue, and now my wife?
But let the lawes of Rome determine all,
Meane while I am possest of that is mine

Sat. 'Tis good fir: you are very short with vs,
But if we liue, weele be as sharpe with you.

Bassi. My Lord, what I haue done as best I may,
Answere I must, and shall do with my life,
Onely thus much I giue your Grace to know,
By all the duties that I owe to Rome,
This Noble Gentleman Lord Titus heere,
Is in opinion and in honour wrong'd,
That in the rescue of Lauinia,
With his owne hand did slay his youngest Son,
In zeale to you, and highly mou'd to wrath.
To be controul'd in that he frankly gaue:
Receiue him then to fauour Saturnine,
That hath expre'st himselfe in all his deeds,
A Father and a friend to thee, and Rome.

Ti. Prince Bassianus leaue to plead my Deeds,
'Tis thou, and those, that haue dishonoured me.
Rome and the righteous heauens be my iudge,
How I haue loe'd and Honour'd Saturnine.

Tam. My worthy Lord if euer Tamora,

Were

Were gracious in those Princely eyes of thine,
Then heare me speake indifferently for all:
And at my suite (sweet) pardon what is past.
Sat. What Madam, be dishonoured openly,
And basely put it vp without reuenge?
Tam. Not so my Lord,
The Gods of Rome for-send,
I should be Authour to dishonour you.
But on mine honour dare, I vndertake
For good Lord Titus innocence in all:
Whose fury not dissembled speakes his griefes:
Then at my suite looke graciously on him,
Loose not so noble a friend on vaine suppose,
Nor with sowre lookes afflict his gentle heart.
My Lord, be rul'd by me, be wonne at last,
Dissemble all your griefes and discontents,
You are but newly planted in your Throne,
Least then the people, and Patricians too,
Vpon a iust survey take Titus part,
And so supplant vs for ingratitude,
Which Rome reputes to be a hainous sin in me.
Yeeld at intreats, and then let me alone:
Ile finde a day to massacre them all,
And race their faction, and their familie,
The cruell Father, and his traytrous sonnes,
To whom I sued for my deare sonnes life.
And make them know what 'tis to let a Queene.
Kneele in the streetes, and beg for grace in vaine.
Come, come, sweet Emperour, (come Andronicus)
Take vp this good old man, and cheere the heart,
That dies in tempest of thy angry frowne.
Kng. Rise Tam, rise,
My Empresse hath prevail'd.
Titus. I thanke your Maiestie,
And her my Lord.
These words, these lookes,
Infuse new life in me.
Tam. Titus, I am incorparate in Rome,
A Roman now adopted happily.
And must advise the Emperour for his good,
This day all quarrels die Andronicus.
And let it be mine honour good my Lord,
That I haue reconcil'd your friends and you.
For you Prince Bassianus, I haue past
My word and promise to the Emperour,
That you will be more milde and tractable.
And feare not Lords:
And you Lauinia,
By my advise all humbled on your knees,
You shall aske pardon of his Maiestie.
Son. We doe,
And vow to heaven, and to his Highnes,
That what we did, was maldly, as we might,
Tendring our sisters honour and our owne.
Mar. That on mine honour heere I do protest.
Kng. Away and talke not, trouble vs no more.
Tamora. Nay, nay,
Sweet Emperour, we must all be friends,
The Tribune and his Nephews kneele for grace,
I will not be denied, sweet heart looke back.
Kng. Marcus,
For thy sake and thy brothers heere,
And at my louely Tamora's intreats,
I doe remit these young mens heynous faults.
Stand vp: Lauinia, though you left me like a churle,
I found a friend, and sure as death I swore,
I would not part a Batchellour from the Priest.
Come, if the Emperours Court can feast two Brides,
You are my guest Lauinia, and your friends:
This day shall be a Loue-day Tamora.
Tit. To morrow and it please your Maiestie,
To hunt the Panther and the Hart with me,
With horne and Hound,
Weele giue your Grace Bonnor.
Saturn. Be it so Titus, and Gramercy to. Exeunt.

Actus Secunda.

Hoiboys. Enter Aaron alone.

Aaron. Now climbeth Tamora Olympus toppe,
Safe out of Fortunes shot, and sits aloft,
Secure of Thunders cracke or lightning flash,
Aduanc'd above pale enuies threatning reach:
As when the golden Sunne salutes the morne,
And having gilt the Ocean with his beames,
Gallops the Zodiacke in his glistering Coach,
And ouer-lookes the highest piering hills:
So Tamora,
Vpon her wit doth earthly honour waite,
And vertue stoopes and trembles at her frowne.
Then Aaron arme thy hart, and fit thy thoughts,
To mount aloft with thy Emperiall Mistris,
And mounte her pitch, whom thou in triumph long
Hast prisoner held, fettred in amorous chaines,
And faster bound to Aaron charming eyes,
Then is Prometheus ti'de to Caucasus.
Away with slaunsh weeedes, and idle thoughts,
I will be bright, and shine in Pearle and Gold,
To waite vpon this new made Empresse
To waite said I? To wanton with this Queene,
This Goddesse, this Semiramis, this Queene,
This Syren, that will charme Romes Saturnine,
And see his shipwracke, and his Common weales.
Hollo, what storme is this?
Enter Chiron and Demetrius braving.
Dem. Chiron thy years wants wit, thy wit wants edge
And manners to intru'd where I am grac'd,
And may for aught thou know'st affected be.
Chi. Demetrius, thou doo'st ouer-weene in all,
And so in this, to bear me downe with braues,
Tis not the difference of a yeere or two
Makes me lesse gracious, or thee more fortunate:
I am as able, and as fit, as thou,
To serue, and to deserue my Mistris grace,
And that my sword vpon thee shall approue,
And plead my passions for Lauinia's loue.
Aaron. Clubs, clubs, these lovers will not keep the peace.
Dem. Why Boy, although our mother (vnaduised)
Gaue you a dawning Rapier by your side,
Are you so desperate growne to threat your friends?
Goe too: haue your Lath glued within your sheath,
Till you know better how to handle it.
Chi. Meane while sir, with the little skill I haue,
Full well shalt thou perceiue how much I dare.
Dem. I Boy, grow ye so brauе? They draw.
Aaron. Why how now Lords?
So neere the Emperours Palace dare you draw,

And

And maintaine such a quarrell openly?
Full well I wote, the ground of all this grudge.
I would not for a million of Gold,
The cause were knowne to them it most concernes.
Nor would your noble mother for much more
Be so dishonored in the Court of Rome:
For shame put vp.

Demr. Not I, till I haue sheath'd
My rapier in his bosome, and withall
Thrust these reprochfull speeches downe his throat,
That he hath breath'd in my dishonour heere.

Chi. For that I am prepar'd, and full resolu'd,
Foule spoken Coward,
That thundrest with thy tongue,
And with thy weapon nothing dar'st performe.

Aron. A way I say.
Now by the Gods that warlike Gothes adore,
This pretty brabble will vndoo vs all:
Why Lords, and thinke you not how dangerous
It is to set vpon a Princes right?
What is Lauinia then become so loose,
Or Bassianus so degenerate,
That for her loue such quarrels may be broacht,
Without controulement, Iustice, or reuenge?
Young Lords beware, and should the Empresse know,
This discord ground, the musicke would not please.

Chi. I care not I, knew she and all the world,
I loue Lauinia more then all the world.

Demr. Youngling,
Learne thou to make some meaner choise,
Lauinia is thine elder brothers hope.

Aron. Why are ye mad? Or know ye not in Rome,
How furious and impatient they be,
And cannot brooke Competitors in loue?
I tell you Lords, you doe but plot your deaths,
By this deuise.

Chi. Aaron, a thousand deaths would I propose,
To atchieue her whom I do loue.

Aron. To atcheiue her, how?

Demr. Why, mak'st thou it so strange?
Shee is a woman, therefore may be woo'd,
Shee is a woman, therefore may be wonne.
Shee is Lauinia therefore must be lou'd.
What man, more water glideth by the Mill
Then wots the Miller of, and easie it is
Of a cut loafe to steale a shiue we know:
Though Bassianus be the Emperours brother,
Better then he haue worne Vulcans badge.

Aron. I, and as good as Saturnine may.

Demr. Then why should he dispaire that knowes to court it
With words, faire lookes, and liberality:
What hast not thou full often struck a Doe,
And borne her cleanly by the Keepers nose?

Aron. Why then it seemes some certaine snatch or so
Would serue your turnes.

Chi. I so the turne were serued.

Demr. Aaron thou hast hit it.

Aron. Would you had hit it too,
Then should not we be tir'd with this adoo:
Why hark'e yee, harke yee, and are you such fooles,
To square for this? Would it offend you then?

Chi. Faith not me.

Demr. Nor me, so I were one.

Aron. For shame be friends, & loyne for that you iar:
'Tis policie, and stratagesme must doe
That you affect, and so must you resolue,
That what you cannot as you would atchieue,
You must perforce accomplish as you may:
Take this of me, Lucrece was not more chaste
Then this Lauinia, Bassianus loue,
A speedier course this lingring languishment
Must we pursue, and I haue found the path:
My Lords, a solemne hunting is in hand,
There will the louely Roman Ladies troope:
The Forrest walkes are wide and spacious,
And many vnfrequented plots there are,
Fitted by kinde for rape and villanie:
Single you thither then this dainty Doe,
And strike her home by force, if not by words:
This way or not at all, stand you in hope.
Come, come, our Empresse with her sacred wit
To villainie and vengeance consecrate,
Will we acquaint with all that we intend,
And she shall file our engines with aduise,
That will not suffer you to square your selues,
But to your wishes height aduance you both.
The Emperours Court is like the house of Fame,
The pallace full of tongues, of eyes, of eares:
The Woods are ruthlesse, dreadfull, deafe, and dull:
There speake, and strike brauе Boyes, & take your turnes.
There serue your lusts, shadow'd from heauens eye,
And reuell in Lauinia's Treasurie.

Chi. Thy counsell Lad smells of no cowardise.

Demr. Sy fas aut nefas, till I finde the streames,
To coole this heat, a Charme to calme their fits,
Per Stygia per manes Vehor. Exeunt.

Enter Titus Andronicus and his three sonnes, making a mayse with hounds and horses, and Martius.

Tit. The hunt is vp, the morne is bright and gray,
The fields are fragrant, and the Woods are greene,
Vncouple heere, and let vs make a bay,
And wake the Emperour, and his louely Bride,
And rouze the Prince, and ring a hunters peale,
That all the Court may eccho with the noyse.
Sonnes let it be your charge, as it is ours,
To attend the Emperours person carefully:
I haue bene troubled in my sleepe this night,
But dawning day new comfort hath inspir'd.

Winde Horses.

Heere a cry of hounds, and winde horses in a peale. then Enter Saturnius, Tamora, Bassianus, Lauinia, Chiron, Demetrius, and their Attendants.

Ti. Many good morrowes to your Maiestie,
Madam to you as many and as good.
I promised your Grace, a Hunters peale.

Satur. And you haue rung it lustily my Lords,
Somewhat too early for new married Ladies.

Bass. Lauinia, how say you?

Lauin. I say no:
I haue bene awake two houres and more.

Satur. Come on then, horse and Chariots let vs haue,
And to our sport: Madam, now shall ye see,
Our Romaine hunting.

Mar. I haue dogges my Lord,
Will rouze the proudest Panther in the Chase,
And climbe the highest Promontary top.

Ti. And I haue horse will follow where the game
Makes way, and runnes likes Swallowes ore the plaine

Demr. Chiron we heare not we, with Horse nor Hound
But hope to pleasse a dainty Doe to ground. Exeunt

Enter Aaron alone.

Aaron. He that had wit, would thinke that I had none,
To bury so much Gold vnder a Tree,
And never after to inherit it.
Let him that thinks of me so abiectly,
Know that this Gold must coyne a stratagesme,
Which cunningly effected, will beget
A very excellent peece of villany:
And so repose sweet Gold for their vnrest,
That haue their Alms out of the Empresse Chest.

Enter Tamora to the Moore.

Tamo. My louely Aaron,
Wherefore look'st thou sad,
When every thing doth make a Gleefull boast?
The Birds chaunt melody on every bush,
The Snake lies rolled in the cheerefull Sunne,
The greene leaues quiuer, with the cooling winde,
And make a chekr'd shadow on the ground:
Vnder their sweete shade, Aaron let vs sit,
And whil'st the babling Eccho mock's the Hounds,
Replying shrilly to the well tun'd-Hornes,
As if a double hunt were heard at once,
Let vs sit downe, and marke their yelping noyse:
And after conflict, such as was suppos'd.
The wandring Prince and Dido once enioy'd,
When with a happy storme they were surpris'd,
And Curtain'd with a Counsaile-keeping Cauc,
We may each wreathed in the others armes,
(Our pastimes done) possesse a Golden slumber,
Whiles Hounds and Hornes, and sweet Melodious Birds
Be vnto vs, as is a Nurses Song
Of Lullabie, to bring her Babe asleepe.

Aaron. Madame,
Though Venus gouerne your desires,
Saturne is Dominator ouer mine:
What signifies my deadly standing eye,
My silence, and my Cloudy Melancholie,
My fleece of Woolly hairs, that now vncurles,
Even as an Adder: when she doth vnrowle
To do some fatall execution?
No Madam, these are no Veneriall signes,
Vengeance is in my heart, death in my hand,
Blood, and reuenge, are Hammering in my head.
Hark Tamora, the Empresse of my Soule,
Which never hopes more heauen, then rests in thee,
This is the day of Doome for Bassianus;
His Philomel must loose her tongue to day,
Thy Sonnes make Pillage of her Chastity,
And wash their hands in Bassian blood.
Seest thou this Letter, take it vp I pray thee,
And giue the King this fatall plotted Scrowle,
Now question me no more, we are espied,
Heere comes a parcell of our hopefull Booty,
Which dreads not yet their liues destruction.

Enter Bassianus and Lauinia.

Tamo. Ah my sweet Moore:
Sweeter to me then life.

Aaron. No more great Empresse, Bassianus comes,
Be crosse with him, and I le goe fetch thy Sonnes
To backe thy quarrell what so ere they be.

Bass. Whom haue we heere?
Romes Royall Empresse,
Vnfurnisht of our well beseeming troope?
Or is it Dian habited like her,
Who hath abandoned her holy Groues,
To see the generall Hunting in this Forrest?

Tamo. Saucie controuler of our priuate steps:
Had I the power, that some say Dian had,
Thy Temples should be planted presently.
With Hornes, as was Actaeon, and the Hounds
Should drive vpon his new transformed limbes,
Vnmeanerly intruder as thou art.

Lauin. Vnder your patience gentle Empresse,
'Tis thought you haue a goodly gift in Hornes,
And to be doubted, that your Moore and you
Are singled forth to try experiments:
Ioue shield your husband from his Hounds to day,
'Tis pitty they should take him for a Stag.

Bass. Beleeue me Queene, your swarth Cymerion,
Doth make your Honour of his bodies Hue,
Spotted, detested, and abhominable.
Why are you sequestred from all your traine?
Dismounted from your Snow-white goodly Steed,
And wandred hither to an obscure plot,
Accompanied with a barberous Moore,
If foule desire had not conducted you?

Lauin. And being intercepted in your sport,
Great reason that my Noble Lord, be rated
For Sauciness, I pray you let vs hence,
And let her ioy her Rauen coloured loue,
This valley fits the purpose passing well.

Bass. The King my Brother shall haue notice of this.

Lauin. I, for these slips haue made him noted long,
Good King, to be so mightily abused.

Tamora. Why I haue patience to endure all this?

Enter Chiron and Demetrius.

Dem. How now deere Soueraigne
And our gracious Mother,
Why doth your Highnes looke so pale and wan?

Tamo. Haue I not reason thinke you to looke pale.
These two haue tic'd me hither to this place,
A barren, detested vale you see it is.
The Trees though Sommer, yet forlorne and leane,
Ore-couue with Mosse, and balefull Mistletoe.
Heere neuer shines the Sunne, heere nothing breeds,
Vnlesse the nighely Owle, or fatall Rauen:
And when they shew'd me this abhorred pit,
They told me heere at dead time of the night,
A thousand Fiends, a thousand hissing Snakes,
Ten thousand swelling Toades, as many Vrchins,
Would make such fearefull and confused cries,
As any mortall body hearing it,
Should straite fall mad, or else die suddenly.
No sooner had they told this hellish tale,
But straitt they told me they would binde me heere,
Vnto the body of a dismall yew,
And leaue me to this miserable death.
And then they call'd me foule Adulteresse,
Lascitious Goth, and all the bitterest tearmes
That ever eare did heare to such effect.
And had you not by wondrous fortune come,
This vengeance on me had they executed:
Reuenge it, as you loue your Mothers life,
Or be ye not henceforth call'd my Children.

Dem. This is a witnesse that I am thy Sonne. stab him.

Chi. And this for me,
Strook home to shew my strength.

Lauin I come Semiramis, nay Barberous Tamora.

For no name fits thy nature but thy owne.

Tam. Giue me thy poyniard, you shal know my boyes
Your Mothers hand shall right your Mothers wrong.

Dem. Stay Madam here is more belongs to her,
First throsh the Corne, then after burne the straw:
This Minion stood vpon her chastity,
Vpon her Nuptiall vow, her loyaltie.
And with that painted hope, braues your Mightinesse,
And shall she carry this vnto her graue?

Chi. And if she doe.
I would I were an Eunuch,
Drag hence her husband to some secret hole,
And make his dead Trunke-Pillow to our lost.

Tamo. But when ye haue the hony we desire,
Let not this Waspe out-liue vs both to sting.

Chir. I warrant you Madam we will make that sure:
Come Mistris, now perforce we will enioy,
That nice-preserued honesty of yours.

Laui. Oh Tamora, thou bear'st a woman face.

Tamo. I will not heare her speake, away with her.

Laui. Sweet Lords intreat her heare me but a word

Demet. Listen faire Madam, let it be your glory
To see her teares, but be your hart to them,
As vnrelenting flint to drops of raine.

Lauin. When did the Tigers young-ones teach the dam?
O doe not learne her wrath, she taught it thee,
The milke thou suck'st from her did turne to Marble,
Even at thy Teat thou had'st thy Tyranny,
Yet every Mother breeds not Sonnes alike,
Do thou intreat her shew a woman pity.

Chiro. What,
Wouldst thou haue me prouc my selfe a bastard?

Lauin. 'Tis true,
The Rauen doth not hatch a Larke,
Yet haue I heard, Oh could I finde it now,
The Lion mou'd with pitty, did inderne
To haue his Princely pawes par'd all away.
Some say, that Rauens foster forlorne children,
The whil'st their owne birds famish in their nests:
Oh be to me though thy hard hart say no,
Nothing so kind but something pittifull.

Tamo. I know not what it meanes, away with her.

Lauin. Oh let me teach thee for my Fathers sake,
That gaue thee life when well he might haue slaine thee:
Be not obdurate, open thy deafe eares.

Tamo. Had'st thou in person nere offended me.
Euen for his sake am I pitilesse:
Remember Boyes I pour'd forth teares in vaine,
To saue your brother from the sacrifice,
But fierce Andronicus would not relent,
Therefore away with her, and vse her as you will,
The worse to her, the better lou'd of me.

Lauin. Oh Tamora,
Be call'd a gentle Queene,
And with thine owne hands kill me in this place,
For 'tis not life that I haue beg'd so long,
Poore I was slaine, when Bassianus dy'd.

Tam. What beg'st thou then? fond woman let me go?

Lauin. 'Tis present death I beg, and one thing more,
That womanhood denies my tongue to tell:
Oh keepe me from their worse then killing lust,
And tumble me into some loathsome pit,
Where neuer mans eye may behold my body,
Doe this, and be a charitable murderer.

Tam. So should I rob my sweet Sonnes of their fee,
No let them satisfie their lust on thee.

Demet. Away,
For thou hast stad vs here too long.

Lauinia. No Garace,
No womanhood? Ah beastly creature,
The blot and enemy to our generall name,
Confusion fall——

Chi. Nay then lle stop your mouth
Bring thou her husband,
This is the Hole where Aaron bid vs hide him.

Tam. Farewell my Sonnes, see that you make her sure,
Neere let my heart know merry cheere indeed,
Till all the Andronicus be made away:
Now will I hence to seeke my lourly Moore,
And let my spleenefull Sonnes this Trull deflowre. Exit.

Enter Aaron with two of Titus Sonnes.

Aaron. Come on my Lords, the better foote before.
Straight will I bring you to the loathsome pit,
Where I espied the Panther fast asleepe.

Quin. My sight is very dull what ere it bodes.

Martin. And mine I promise you, were it not for shame,
Well could I leaue our sport to sleepe a while.

Quin. What art thou fallen?
What subtile Hole is this,
Whose mouth is couered with Rude growing Brieres,
Vpon whose leaues are drops of new-shed-blood,
As fresh as mornings dew diffil'd on flowers,
A very fatall place it seemes to me
Speake Brother hast thou hurt thee with the fall?

Martius Oh Brother,
With the dismal'st obiect
That euer eye with sight made heart lament.

Aaron. Now will I fetch the King to finde them heere,
That he thereby may haue a likely gesse,
How these were they that made away his Brother.
Exit Aaron.

Martin. Why dost not comfort me and helpe me out
From this vnhallow'd and blood-stained Hole?

Quintus. I am surprised with an vncouth feare,
A chilling sweat o're-runs my trembling ioynts,
My heart suspects more then mine eye can see.

Martin. To prouc thou hast a true diuining heare.
Aaron and thou looke downe into this den,
And see a fearefull sight of blood and death.

Quintus. Aaron is gone,
And my compassionate heart
Will not permit mine eyes once to behold
The thing whereat it trembles by surmise:
Oh tell me how it is, for ne're till now
Was I a child, to feare I know not what.

Martin. Lord Bassianus lies embrewed heere,
All on a heape like to the slaughtered Lambe,
In this detested, darke, blood-drinking pit.

Quin. If it be darke, how doest thou know 'tis he?

Mart. Vpon his bloody finger he doth weare
A precious Ring, that lightens all the Hole:
Which like a Taper in some Monument,
Doth shine vpon the dead mans earthly cheeres,
And shewes the ragged entrades of the pit:
So pale did shine the Moone on Pyramus,
When he by night lay bath'd in Maiden blood:
O Brother helpe me with thy fainting hand.
If feare hath made thee faint as mee it hath,
Out of this fell deuouring receptacle,
As hateful as Cocytus mithe mouth

Quint. Reach me thy hand, that I may helpe thee out,

Or wanting strength to doe thee so much good,
I may be pluckt into the swallowing wombe,
Of this deepe pit, poore Bassianus graue:
I haue no strength to pluckt thee to the brinke.
Martius. Not I no strength to climbe without thy help.
Quin. Thy hand once more, I will not loose againe,
Till thou art heere aloft, or I below,
Thou can'st not come to me, I come to thee. Both fall in.

Enter the Emperour, Aaron the Moore.

Saturn. Along with me, I'le see what hole is he
And what he is that now is leapt into it.
Say, who art thou that lately did'st descend,
Into this gaping hollow of the earth?
Martius. The vnhappie sonne of old Andronicus,
Brought hither in a most vnluckie houre,
To finde thy brother Bassianus dead.
Saturn. My brother dead? I know thou doest but iest,
He and his Lady both are at the Lodge,
Vpon the North-side of this pleasant Chase,
'Tis not an houre since I left him there.
Martius. We know not where you left him all aliue,
But out alas, heere haue we found him dead.

Enter Tamora, Andronicus, and Lauinia.

Tamo. Where is my Lord the King?
King. Heere Tamora, though grieu'd with killing griefe.
Tam. Where is thy brother Bassianus?
King. Now to the bottome dost thou search my wound,
Poore Bassianus heere lies murthered.
Tam. Then all too late I bring this fatall writ,
The complot of this timeleſse Tragedie,
And wonder greatly that man's face can fold,
In pleasing smiles such murderous Tyrannie.
She giueth Saturnine a Letter.

Saturnius reads the Letter.

And if we misse to meete man handsomely,
Sweet huntsman, Bassianus 'tis we meane,
Do thou so much as dig the graue for him,
Thou know'st our meaning, looke for thy reward
Among the Nettles at the Elder tree:
Which ouer-shades the mouth of that same pit:
Where we decreed to bury Bassianus:
Do this and purchase vs thy lasting friends.

King. Oh Tamora, was euer heard the like?
This is the pit, and this the Elder tree,
Looke sirs, if you can finde the huntsman out,
That should haue murthered Bassianus heere.
Aaron. My gracious Lord heere is the bag of Gold.
King. Two of thy whelpes, fell Curs of bloody kind
Haue heere bereft my brother of his life:
Sirs drag them from the pit vnto the prison,
There let them bide vntill we haue deuis'd
Some neuer heard-of tortering paine for them.
Tamo. What are they in this pit,
Oh wondrous thing!
How easily murder is discouered?
Tit. High Emperour, vpon my feeble knee,
I beg this boone, with teares, not lightly shed,
That this fell fault of my accursed Sonnes,
Accursed, if the fault be prou'd in them.
King. If it be prou'd? you see it is apparant,
Who found this Letter, Tamora was it you?
Tamora. Andronicus himselfe did take it vp.
Tit. I did my Lord,
Yet let me be their bailie,
For by my Fathers reuerent Tombe I vow
They shall be ready at your Highnes will,
To answere their suspition with their liues.
King. Thou shalt not bailie them, see thou follow me.
Some bring the murthered body, some the murtherers,
Let them not speake a word, the guilt is plaine,
For by my soule, were there worse end then death,
That end vpon them should be executed.
Tamo. Andronicus I will entreat the King,
Feare not thy Sonnes, they shall do well enough.
Tit. Come Lauinia come,
Stay not to talke with them. Exeunt.

Enter the Emprosse Sonnes, with Lauinia, her hands cut off and her tongue cut out, and rauisht.

Demr. So now goe tell and if thy tongue can speake,
Who t'was that cut thy tongue and rauisht thee.
Chi. Write downe thy mind, bewray thy meaning so,
And if thy stumpes will let thee play the Scribe.
Dem. See how with signes and tokens she can scowle.
Chi. Goe home,
Call for sweet water, wash thy hands.
Dem. She hath no tongue to call, nor hands to wash.
And so let's leaue her to her silent walkes.
Chi. And t'were my cause, I should goe hang my selfe.
Dem. If thou had'st hands to helpe thee knit the cord.
Exeunt.

Winde Horses.

Enter Marcus from hunting to Lauinia.

Who is this, my Neece that flies away so fast?
Cosen a word, where is your husband?
If I do dreame, would all my wealth would wake me;
If I doe wake, some Planet strike me downe,
That I may slumber in eternall sleepe.
Speake gentle Neece, what sterne vngentle hands
Hath lopt, and hew'd, and made thy body bare
Of her two branches, those sweet Ornaments
Whose circling shadowes, Kings haue sought to sleep in
And might not gaine so great a happiness
As halfe thy Loue: Why doest not speake to me?
Alas, a Crimson riuer of warme blood,
Like to a bubling fountaine stir'd with winde,
Doth rise and fall betweene thy Rosed lips,
Comming and going with thy hony breath.
But sure some Tereus hath deflowred thee,
And least thou should'st detect them, cut thy tongue.
Ah, now thou turn'st away thy face for shame:
And notwithstanding all this loss of blood,
As from a Conduit with their issuing Spouts,
Yet doe thy cheekes looke red as Titans face,
Blushing to be encountred with a Cloud,
Shall I speake for thee? shall I say 'tis so?
Oh that I knew thy hart, and knew the beast
That I might raile at him to ease my mind.
Sorrow conceaded, like an Oaten stope,
Doth burne the hart to Cinders where it is.
Faire Philomela she but lost her tongue,
And in a tedious Sampler sowed her minde.
But louely Neece, that meane is cut from thee,
A crafftier Tereus hast thou met withall,
And he hath cut those pretty fingers off,

That could haue better sowed then Philomel.
Oh had the moosterseene those Lily hands,
Tremble like Aspen leaues vpon a Lute,
And make the silken strings delight to kisse them,
He would not then haue touche them for his life.
Or had he heard the heauenly Harmony,
Which that sweet tongue hath made:
He would haue drope his knife and fell asleepe,
As Cerberus at the Thracian Poets feete.
Come, let vs goe, and make thy father blinde,
For such a sight will blinde a fathers eye.
One houres storme will drowne the fragrant meades,
What, will whole months of teares thy Fathers eyes?
Doe not draw backe, for we will mourne with thee:
Oh could our mourning ease thy misery. Exeunt

Actus Tertius.

Enter the Iudges and Senatours with Titus two sonnes bound, passing on the Stage to the place of execution, and Titus going before pleading.

Ti. Heare me graue fathers, noble Tribunes stay,
For pitty of mine age, whose youth was spent
In dangerous warres, whilst you securely slept:
For all my blood in Romes great quarrell shed,
For all the frosty nights that I haue watcht,
And for these bitter teares, which now you see,
Filling the aged wrinkles in my cheekes,
Be pittifull to my condemned Sonnes,
Whose soules is not corrupted as 'tis thought:
For two and twenty sonnes I neuer wept,
Because they died in honours lofty bed.
Andronicus lyeth downe, and the Iudges passe by him.
For these, Tribunes, in the dust I write
My harts deepe languor, and my soules sad teares:
Let my teares stanch the earths drie appetite.
My sonnes sweet blood, will make it shame and blush:
O earth! I will be friend thee more with raine Exeunt
That shall distill from these two ancient ruines,
Then youthfull April shall with all his showres
In summers drought: Ile drop vpon thee still,
In Winter with warme teares Ile melt the snow,
And keepe eternall spring time on thy face,
So thou refuse to drinke my deare sonnes blood.

Enter Lucius, with his weapon drawne.

Oh reuerent Tribunes, oh gentle aged men,
Vnbinde my sonnes, reuerse the doome of death,
And let me say (that neuer wept before)
My teares are now preuailing Orateurs.
Lu. Oh noble father, you lament in vaine,
The Tribunes heare not, no man is by,
And you recount your sorrowes to a stone.
Ti. Ah Lucius for thy brothers let me plead,
Graue Tribunes, once more I intreat of you.
Lu. My gracious Lord, no Tribune heares you speake.
Ti. Why 'tis no matter man, if they did heare
They would not marke me: oh if they did heare
They would not pitty me.
Therefore I tell my sorrowes boules to the stones.
Who though they cannot answere my distresse,
Yet in some sort they are better then the Tribunes,
For that they will not intercept my tale;
When I doe weepe, they humbly at my feete
Receiue my teares, and seeme to weepe with me,
And were they but attired in graue weedes,
Rome could afford no Tribune like to these.
A stone is as soft waxe,
Tribunes more hard then stones:
A stone is silent, and offendeth not,
And Tribunes with their tongues doome men to death.
But wherefore stand'st thou with thy weapon drawne?
Lu. To rescue my two brothers from their death,
For which attempt the Iudges haue pronounc'd
My euerlasting doome of banishment.
Ti. O happy man, they haue befriended thee:
Why foolish Lucius, dost thou not perceiue
That Rome is but a wildernes of Tigers?
Tigers must pray, and Rome affords no prey
But me and and mine: how happy art thou then,
From these deuourers to be banished?
But who comes with our brother Marcus heere?

Enter Marcus and Lauinia.

Mar. Titus, prepare thy noble eyes to weepe,
Or if not so, thy noble heart to breake:
I bring consuming sorrow to thine age.
Ti. Will it consume me? Let me see it then.
Mar This was thy daughter.
Ti. Why Marcus so she is.
Lu. Aye me this obiect kils me.
Ti. Faint-hearted boy, arise and looke vpon her,
Speake Lauinia, what accursed hand
Hath made thee handlesse in thy Fathers sight?
What foole hath added water to the Sea?
Or brought a faggot to bright burning Troy?
My griefe was at the height before thou cam'st,
And now like Nylus it disdaineth bounds:
Giue me a sword, Ile chop off my hands too,
For they haue fought for Rome, and all in vaine;
And they haue nur'st this woe,
In feeding life:
In bootelesse prayer haue they bene held vp,
And they haue seru'd me to effectlesse vse.
Now all the seruice I require of them,
Is that the one will helpe to cut the other:
'Tis well Lauinia, that thou hast no hands,
For hands to do Rome seruice, is but vaine.
Luc. Speake gentle sister, who hath martyr'd thee?
Mar. O that delightfull engine of her thoughts,
That blab'd them with such pleasing eloquence,
Is torne from forth that pretty hollow cage,
Where like a sweet melodious bird it sung,
Sweet varied notes inchanting eaery eare.
Luc. Oh say thou for her,
Who hath done this deed?
Mar. Oh thus I found her straying in the Parke,
Seeking to hide herselfe as doth the Deare
That hath receiude some vnrecuring wound.
Ti. It was my Deare,
And he that wounded her,
Hath hurt me more, then had he kild me dead:
For now I stand as one vpon a Rocke,
Inuiron'd with a wildernesse of Sea.
Who markes the waxing tide,
Grow wane by wane,

Expecting

Expecting ever when some ravenous Surge,
Will in his brinish bowels swallow him.
This way to death my wretched sonnes are gone:
Heere stands my other sonne, a boolishe man,
And heere my brother weeping at my woes.
But that which gives my soule the greatest spurne,
Is deare Lavinia, deerer than my soule.
Had I but seene thy picture in this plight,
It would have madded me. What shall I doe?
Now I beheld thy lively body so?
Thou hast no hands to wipe away thy teares,
Not tongue to tell me who hath martyr'd thee:
Thy husband he is dead, and for his death
Thy brothers are condemn'd, and dead by this.
Looke Marcus, ah sonne Lucius looke on her:
When I did name her brothers, then fresh teares
Stood on her cheekes, as doth the hony dew,
Vpon a gathred Lillie almost withered.

Mar. Perchance she weepes because they kill'd her husband,
Perchance because she knowes him innocent.

Ti. If they did kill thy husband then be joyfull
Because the law hath tane revenge on them.
No, no, they would not doe so foule a deede,
Witnes the sorrow that their sister makes.
Gentle Lavinia let me kisse thy lips,
Or make some signes how I may do thee ease:
Shall thy good Vncle, and thy brother Lucius,
And thou and I sit round about some Fountaine,
Looking all downewards to behold our cheekes
How they are stain'd in meadowes, yet not dry
With miery slime left on them by a flood:
And in the Fountaine shall we gaze so long,
Till the fresh taste be taken from that cleerenes,
And made a brine pit with our bitter teares?
Or shall we cut away our hands like thine?
Or shall we bite our tongues, and in dumbe shewes
Passe the remainder of our hatefull dayes?
What shall we doe? Let vs that have our tongues
Plot some devise of further miseries
To makers wondred at in time to come.

La. Sweet Father cease your teares, for at your griefs
See how my wretched sister sobs and weeps.

Mar. Patience deere Neece, good Titus dole thine eyes.

Ti. Ah Marcus, Marcus, Brother well I wot,
Thy napkin cannot drinke a teare of mine,
For thou poore man hast drown'd it with thine owne.

La. Ah my Lavinia I will wipe thy cheekes.

Ti Marke Marcus marke, I vnderstand her signes,
Had she a tongue to speake, now would she say
That to her brother which I said to thee.
His Napkin with hertrue teares all bewet,
Can do no seruice on her sorrowfull cheekes.
Oh what a simpathy of woe is this!
As far from helpe as Limbo is from blisse,

Enter Aron the Moore alone.

Moore. Titus Andronicus, my Lord the Emperour,
Sends thee this word, that if thou lese thy sonnes,
Let Marcus, Lucius, or thy selfe old Titus,
Or any one of you, chop off your hand,
And send it to the King: he for the same,
Will send thee hither both thy sonnes alive,
And that shall be the ransome for their fault.

Ti. Oh gracious Emperour, oh gentle Aron.
Did ever Roman sing so like a Larke,
That glues sweet tydings of the Sonnes vprise?
With all my heart, I le send the Emperour my hand,
Good Aron wilt thou help to chop it off?

La. Stay Father, for that noble hand of thine,
That hath throwne downe so many enemies,
Shall not be sent: my hand will serue the turne.
My youth can better spare my blood then you,
And therfore mine shall save my brothers lives.

Mar. Which of your hands hath not defended Rome
And rear'd stoft the bloody Battleaxe,
Writing destruction on the enemies Castle?
Oh none of both but are of high desert:
My hand hath bin but idle, let it serue
To ransome my two nephewes from their death,
Then have I kept it to a worthy end.

Moore. Nay come agree, whose hand shall goe along
For feare they die before their pardon come.

Mar. My hand shall goe.

La. By heaven it shall not goe.

Ti. Sirs strive no more, such withered herbs as these
Are meete for plucking vp, and therefore mine.

La. Sweet Father, if I shall be thought thy sonne,
Let me redeeme my brothers both from death.

Mar. And for our fathers sake, and mothers care,
Now let me shew a brothers loue to thee.

Ti. Agree betweene you, I will spare my hand.

La. Then I le goe fetch an Axe.

Mar. But I will vse the Axe. Exeunt

Ti. Come hither Aron, I le deceive them both,
Lend me thy hand, and I will give thee mine.

Moore. If that be call'd deceit, I will be honest,
And never whil'st I live deceive men so:
But I le deceive you in another sort,
And that you'l say ere halfe an hour passe.

He cuts off Titus hand.

Enter Lucius and Marcus againe.

Ti. Now stay you strife, what shall be, is dispatche:
Good Aron give his Maiestie my hand,
Tell him, it was a hand that warded him
From thousand dangers: bid him bury it:
More hath it merited: That let it have.
As for for my sonnes, say I account of them,
As jewels purchast at an easie price,
And yet deere too, because I bought mine owne.

Aron. I goe Andronicus, and for thy hand,
Looke by and by to have thy sonnes with thee:
Their heads I meane: Oh how this villany
Doth fat me with the very thoughts of it.
Let fooles doe good, and faire men call for grace,
Aron will have his soule blacke like his face. Exit.

Ti. O heere I lift this one hand vp to heaven,
And bow this feeble ruine to the earth,
If any power pities wretched teares,
To that I call: what wilt thou kneele with me?
Doe then deare heart, for heaven shall heare our prayers,
Or with our sighs weele breath the welkin dimme,
And staine the Sun with fogge as sometime clouddes,
When they do hug him in their melting bosomes.

Mar. Oh brother speake with possibilities,
And do not breake into these deepe extremes.

Ti. Is not my sorrow deepe, having no bottome?

Then be my passions bottomlesse with them.
Mar. But yet let reason gouerne thy lamente.
Titus. If there were reason for these miseries.
Then into limits could I binde my woes:
When heauen doth weepe, doth not the earth ore flow?
If the windes rage, doth not the Sea wax mad,
Threatning the welkin with his big-swolne face?
And wilt thou haue a reason for this coile?
I am the Sea. Harke how her sighes doe flow:
Shee is the weeping welkin, I the earth:
Then must my Sea be moued with her sighes,
Then must my earth with her continuall teares,
Become a deluge: ouerflow'd and drown'd:
For why, my bowels cannot hide her woes,
But like a drunkard must I vomit them:
Then giue me leaue, for loosers will haue leaue,
To ease their stomackes with their bitter tongues,

Enter a messenger with two heads and a hand.

Mess. Worthy Andronicus, ill art thou repaid,
For that good hand thou sentst the Emperour:
Heere are the heads of thy two noble sonnes.
And heeres thy hand in scorne to thee sent backe:
Thy griefes, their sports: Thy resolution mockt,
That woe is me to thinke vpon thy woes,
More then remembrance of my fathers death. Exit.
Mar. Now let hot Ætna coole in Cicilie,
And be my heart an euer-burning hell:
These miseries are more then may be borne.
To weepe with them that weepe, doth ease some deale,
But sorrow flouted at, is double death.
Luci. Ah that this sight should make so deep a wound,
And yet detested life not shrinke thereat:
That euer death should let life beare his name,
Where life hath no more interest but to breath.
Mar. Alas poore hart that kisse is comfortlesse,
As frozen water to a starued snake.
Titus. When will this fearefull slumber haue an end?
Mar. Now farwell flatterie, die Andronicus,
Thou dost not slumber, see thy two sons heads,
Thy warlike hands, thy mangled daughter here.
Thy other banisht sonnes with this deere sight
Strucke pale and bloodlesse, and thy brother I,
Even like a stony Image, cold and numme.
Ah now no more will I controule my griefes,
Rent off thy siluer haire, thy other hand
Gnawing with thy teeth, and be this dismall sight
The closing vp of our most wretched eyes:
Now is a time to storme, why art thou still?
Titus. Ha, ha, ha,
Mar. Why dost thou laugh? it fits not with this houre.
Ti. Why I haue not another teare to shed:
Besides, this sorrow is an enemy,
And would vsurpe vpon my watry eyes,
And make them blinde with tributarie teares.
Then which way shall I finde Reuenges Cave?
For these two heads doe seeme to speake to me,
And threat me, I shall neuer come to blisse,
Till all these mischiefes be returned againe,
Euen in their throats that haue committed them.
Come let me see what taske I haue to doe,
You heame people, circle me about,
That I may turne me to each one of you,
And sweare vnto my soule to right your wrongs.
The vow is made, come Brother take a head,
And in this hand the other will I beare.
And Lauinia thou shalt be employd in these things:
Beare thou my hand sweet wench betweene thy teeth:
As for thee boy, goe get thee from my sight,
Thou art an Exile, and thou must not stay,
Hie to the Gothes, and raise an army there,
And if you loue me, as I thinke you doe,
Let's kisse and part, for we haue much to doe. Exeunt

Manet Lauinia.

Luci. Farewell Andronicus my noble Father:
The woful'st man that euer liu'd in Rome:
Farewell proud Rome, til Lucius come againe,
Heloues his pledges dearer then his life:
Farewell Lauinia my noble sister,
O would thou wert as thou to fore hast beene,
But now, not Lucius not Lauinia lines
But in oblision and hateful griefes:
If Lucius liue, he will requit your wrongs,
And make proud Saturnine and his Empresse
Beg at the gates likes Tarquin and his Queene.
Now will I to the Gothes and raise a power,
To be reueng'd on Rome and Saturnine. Exit Lucius

A Banket.
Enter Andronicus, Marcus, Lauinia, and the Boy.

An. So, so, now sit, and looke you eate no more
Then will preserue just so much strength in vs
As will reuenge these bitter woes of ours.
Marcus vnknit that sorrow-wreathen knot:
Thy Neece and I (poore Creatures) want our hands
And cannot passionate our tenfold griefe,
With foulded Armes. This poore right hand of mine,
Is left to tirranize vppon my breast.
Who when my hart all mad with misery,
Beats in this hollow prison of my flesh,
Then thus I chempe it downe.
Thou Map of woe, that thus dost talk in figures,
When thy poore hart beates without ragious beating,
Thou canst not strike it thus to make it still?
Wound it with sighing girle, kil it with groanes:
Or get some little knife betweene thy teeth,
And just against thy hart make thou a hole,
That all the teares that thy poore eyes let fall
May run into that sinke, and soaking in,
Drowne the lamenting foole, in Sea salt teares.
Mar. Fy brother fy, teach her not thus to lay
Such violent hands vppon her tender life.
An. How now! Has sorrow made thee dote already?
Why Marcus, no man should be mad but I:
What violent hands can she lay on her life:
Ah wherefore dost thou vrge the name of hands,
To tid Æneas tell the tale twice ore
How Troy was burnt, and he made miserable?
O handle not the theame, to talke of hands,
Least we remember still that we haue none.
Fie, fie, how Frantiquely I square my talke
As if we should forget we had no hands:
If Marcus did not name the word of hands.
Come, lets fall too, and gentle girle eate this,
Heere is no drinke? Harke Marcus what she saies,
I can interpret all her martir'd signes,
She saies, she drinkes no other drinke but teares
Breu'd with her sorrow: mesh'd vppon her cheeks.
Speech.

Speechlesse complayne, I will learne thy thought:
In thy dumb action, will I be as perfect
As begging Hermits in their holy prayers.
Thou shalt not sighe nor hold thy stumps to heaven,
Nor winke, nor nod, nor kneele, nor make a signe,
But I (of these) will wrest an Alphabet,
And by still practice, learne to know thy meaning.

Boy. Good grandsire leave these bitter deepe laments,
Make my Aunt merry, with some pleasing tale.

Mar. Alas, the tender boy in passion mov'd,
Doth weepe to see his grandsires heavinesse.

Au. Peace tender Sapling, thou art made of teares,
And teares will quickly melt thy life away.

Marcus strikes the dish with a knife.

What doest thou strike at Marcus with knife.

Mar. At that that I have kil'd my Lord, a Flye

Au. Out on thee murderour: thou kil'st my hart,
Mine eyes clo'd with view of Tirranie:
A deed of death done on the Innocent
Becomes not Titus brother: get thee gone,
I see thou art not for my company:

Mar. Alas (my Lord) I have but kild a flie.

Au. But? How: if that Flie had a father and mother?
How would he hang his slender gilded wings
And buz lamenting doings in the ayer,
Poore harmelesse Fly,
That with his pretty buzzing melody,
Came here to make vs merry,
And thou hast kil'd him.

Mar. Pardon me sir,
It was a blacke illfavour'd Fly,
Like to the Empresse Moore, therefore I kild him.

Au. O, o, o,
Then pardon me for reprehending thee,
For thou hast done a Charitable deed:
Give me thy knife, I will insult on him,
Flattering my selfes, as if it were the Moore,
Come hither purposely to poyson me.
There's for thy selfe, and thees for Tamora: Ah fiera,
Yet I thinke we are not brought so low,
But that betweene vs, we can kill a Fly,
That comes in likenesse of a Cole-blacke Moore.

Mar. Alas poore man, grieve ha's so wrought on him,
He takes false shadowes, for true substances.

Au. Come, take away: Lavinia, goe with me,
Ile to thy closset, and goe read with thee
Sad stories, chanced in the times of old.
Come boy, and goe with me, thy sight is young,
And thou shalt read, when mine begin to dazell. Exeunt

Actus Quartus.

Enter young Lucius and Lavinia running after him, and the Boy flies from her with his bookes under his arme.
Enter Titus and Marcus.

Boy. Helpe Grandfier helpe, my Aunt Lavinia,
Followes me every where I know not why.
Good Vncle Marcus see how swift she comes,
Alas sweet Aunt, I know not what you meane.

Mar. Stand by me Lucius, doe not feare thy Aunt.

Titus. She loves thee boy too well to doe thee harme

Boy. I when my father was in Rome she did.

Mar. What meanes my Neece Lavinia by these signes?

Ti. Feare not Lucius, some what doth she meane:
See Lucius see, how much she makes of thee:
Some whether would she have thee goe with her.
Ah boy, Cornelia never with more care
Read to her sonnes, than she hath read to thee,
Sweet Poetry, and Tullies Oratour:
Canst thou not gesse wherefore she plies thee thus?

Boy. My Lord I know not I, nor can I gesse,
Vnlesse some fit or frenzie do possesse her:
For I have heard my Grandfier say full oft,
Extremitie of griefes would make men mad.
And I have read that Hecuba of Troy,
Ran mad through sorrow, that made me to feare,
Although my Lord, I know my noble Aunt,
Loves me as deare as ere my mother did,
And would not but in fury fright my youth,
Which made me downe to throw my bookes, and flie
Causles perhaps, but pardon me sweet Aunt,
And Madam, if my Vncle Marcus goe,
I will most willingly attend your Ladyship.

Mar. Lucius I will.

Ti. How now Lavinia, Marcus what meanes this?
Some booke there is that she desires to see,
Which is it girle of theft? Open them boy.
But thou art deeper read and better skild,
Come and take choyse of all my Library,
And so beguile thy sorrow, till the heavens
Reveale the damn'd contriver of this deed.
What booke?
Why lifts she vp her armes in sequence thus?

Mar. I thinke she meanes that there was more then one
Confederate in the fact, I more there was:
Or else to heaven she heaves them to revenge.

Ti. Lucius what booke is that she toseth so?

Boy. Grandfier 'tis Ouids Metamorphosis,
My mother gave it me.

Mar. For love of her that's gone,
Perhaps she cold it from among the rest.

Ti. Soft, so hastily she turnes the leaves,
Helpe her, what would she finde? Lavinia shall I read?
This is the tragicke tale of Philomel?
And treates of Tereus treason and his rape,
And rape I feare was roote of thine annoy.

Mar. See brother see, note how she quoens the leaves

Ti. Lavinia, wert thou thus surpris'd sweet girle,
Ravisht and wrong'd as Philomela was?
Forc'd in the ruthlesse, vast, and gloomy woods?
See, see, I such a place there is where we did hunt,
(O had we never, never hunted there)
Patern'd by that the Poet heere describes,
By nature made for murthers and for rapes.

Mar. O why should nature build so foule a den,
Vnlesse the Gods delight in tragedies?

Ti. Give signes sweet girle, for heere are none but friend.
What Romaine Lord it was durst do the deed?
Or slunke not Saturnine, as Tarquin erst,
That left the Campe to sinne in Lucrece bed.

Mar. Sit downe sweet Neece, brother sit downe by me,
Apollo, Pallas, Iove, or Mercury,
Inspire me that I may this treason finde.
My Lord looke heere, looke heere Lavinia.

He writes his Name with his staffe, and guides it with feete and mouth.

This sandie plot is plaine, guide if thou canst

This

This after me, I have writ my name,
Without the helpe of any hand at all.
Curst be that hart that forc'st vs to that shift:
Write thou good Neece, and heere display at last,
What God will haue discouered for reuenge,
Heauen guide thy pen to print thy sorrowes plaine,
That we may know the Traytors and the truth.

She takes the staffe in her mouth, and guides it with her stumps and writes.

Ti. Oh doe ye read my Lord what she hath writ?
Stupruum, Chiron, Demetrius
Mar. What, what, the lustfull sonnes of Tamora,
Performers of this hainous bloody deed?
Ti. Magnus Dominator poli,
Tam lentus audis scelera, tam lentus vides?
Mar. Oh calme thee gentle Lord: Although I know
There is enough written vpon this earth,
To stirre a mutinie in the mildest thoughts,
And arme the mindes of infants to exclaimes.
My Lord kneele downe with me: Lauinia kneele,
And kneele sweet boy, the Romane Hellors hope,
And sweare with me, as with the wofull Feere
And father of that chast dishonoured Dame,
Lord Iunius Brutus sweare for Lucrece rape,
That we will prosecute (by good aduise)
Mortall reuenge vpon these traytorous Gothes,
And see their blood, or die with this reproach
Ti. Tis sure enough, and you knew how.
But if you hunt these Beare-whelpes, then beware
The Dam will wake, and if she winde you once,
Shee's with the Lyon deepely still in league.
And lulls him whilst she playeth on her backe,
And when he sleepes will she do what she list.
You are a young huntsman Marcus, let it alone:
And come, I will goe get a leafe of brasse,
And with a Gad of steele will write these words,
And lay it by: the angry Northerne winde
Will blow these sands like Sibels leaues abroad,
And where's your lesson then. Boy what say you?
Boy. I say my Lord, that if I were a man,
Their mothers bed-chamber should not be safe,
For these bad bond-men to the yoake of Rome.
Mar. I that's my boy, thy father hath full oft,
For his vngratefull country done the like
Boy. And Vncle so will I, and if I liue.
Ti. Come goe with me into mine Armorie,
Lucius Ile fit thee, and withall, my boy
Shall carry from me to the Empresse sonnes,
Presents that I intend to send them both,
Come, come, thou'lt do thy message, wilt thou not?
Boy. I with my dagger in their bosomes Grandsire:
Ti. No boy not so, Ile teach thee another course,
Lauinia come, Marcus looke to my house,
Lucius and Ile goe braue it at the Court,
I marry will we sir, and weele be waited on. Exeunt.
Mar. O heauens! Can you heare a good man groane
And not relent, or not compassion him?
Marcus attend him in his extasie,
That hath more scars of sorrow in his heart,
Then foe-mens markes vpon his batter'd shield,
But yet so iust, that he will not reuenge,
Reuenge the heauens for old Andronicus. Exit

Enter Aron, Chiron and Demetrius at one dore: and at anot her dore young Lucius and another, with a bundle of weapons, and verses writ vpon them.

Chi. Demetrius heeres the sonne of Lucius,
He hath some message to deliuer vs.
Aron. I some mad message from his mad Grandfather.
Boy. My Lords, with all the humblenesse I may,
I greete your honours from Andronicus,
And pray the Romane Gods confound you both.
Dem. Gramercie louely Lucius, what's the newes?
For villanie's market with rape. May it please you,
My Grandsire well aduis'd hath sent by me,
The goodliest weapons of his Armorie,
To gratifie your honourable youth,
The hope of Rome, for so he bad me say:
And so I do and with his gifts present
Your Lordships, when euer you haue need,
You may be armed and appointed well,
And so I leaue you both: like bloody villaines. Exit
Dem. What's heere? a scrole, & written round about?
Let's see.
Integer vitæ scelerisque purus, non egit mauri iaculis nec arcu.
Chi. O 'tis a verse in Horace, I know it well.
I read it in the Grammer long ago.
Moore. I iust, a verse in Horace: right, you haue it,
Now what a thing it is to be an Asse?
Heer's no sound iest, the old man hath found their guile,
And sends the weapons wrapt about with lines,
That wound (beyond their feeling) to the quick:
But were our witty Empresse well a foot,
She would applaud Andronicus conceit:
But let her rest, in her vnrest a while.
And now young Lords, wa's not a happy starre
Led vs to Rome strangers, and more then so;
Captiues, to be aduanced to this height?
It did me good before the Palace gate,
To braue the Tribune in his brothers hearing.
Dem. But me more good, to see so great a Lord
Basely insinuate, and send vs gifts.
Moore. Had he not reason Lord Demetrius?
Did you not vse his daughter very friendly?
Dem. I would we had a thousand Romane Dames
At such a bay, by turne to serue our lust.
Chi. A cheritable wish, and full of loue.
Moore. Heere lack's but you mother for to say, Amen.
Chi. And that would she for twenty thousand more.
Dem. Come, let vs go, and pray to all the Gods
For our beloued mother in her paines.
Moore. Pray to the deuils, the gods haue given vs ouer.
Flourish.
Dem. Why do the Emperors trumpets flourish thus?
Chi. Belike for loy the Emperour hath a sonne.
Dem. Soft, who comes heere?
Enter Nurse with a blacke a Moore childe.
Nur. Good morrow Lords:
O tell me, did you see Aaron the Moore?
Aron. Well, more or lesse, or neere a whit at all,
Heere Aaron is, and what with Aaron now?
Nurse. Oh gentle Aaron, we are all vndone,
Now helpe, or woe betide thee euermore.
Aron. Why, what a catterwalling dost thou keepe?
What dost thou wrap and fumble in thine armes?
Nurse. O that which I would hide from heauens eye,
Our Empresse shame, and stately Romes disgrace,
She is deliuered Lords, she is deliuered.
Aron To whom?
Nurse. I meane she is brought a bed?
Aron. Wel God giue her good rest,

What hath he sent her?
Nurse. A deuill.
Aron. Why then she is the Deuils Dam: a loyslull issue.
Nurse. A loyslesse, disimall, blacke &c. fon. awfull issue,
Heere is the babe as loathsome as a toad,
Among'st the fairest breeders of our clime,
The Empresse sends it thee, thy stampe, thy seale,
And bids thee christen it with thy daggers point.
Aron. Out you whore, is black so base a hue?
Sweet blowse, you are a beautious blossome sure.
Demr. Villaine what hast thou done?
Aron. That which thou canst not vndoe.
Chi. Thou hast vndone our mother.
Demr. And therein hellish dog, thou hast vndone,
Woe to her chance, and damn'd her loathed choyce,
Accur'st the off-spring of so foule a fiend.
Chi. It shall not liue.
Aron. It shall not die.
Nurse. Aron it must, the mother wills it so.
Aron. What, must it Nurse? Then let no man but I
Doe execution on my flesh and blood.
Demr. Ile broach the Tadpole on my Rapiers point:
Nurse give it me, my sword shall soone dispatch it
Aron. Sooner this sword shall plough thy bowels vp.
Stay murtherous villaines, will you kill your brothers?
Now by the burning Tapers of the skie,
That shone so brightly when this Boy was got,
He dies vpon my Scimiters sharpe point,
That touches this my first borne sonne and heire.
I tell you yoong-lings, not Excelsus
With all his threatning band of Typhons broode,
Nor great Alcides, nor the God of warre,
Shall cozze this prey out of his fathers hands:
What, what, ye sanguine shallow hatred Boyes,
Ye white-limb'd walls, ye Ale-house painted signes,
Cole-blacke is better then another hue,
In that it scornes to beare another hue:
For all the water in the Ocean,
Can neuer turne the Swans blacke legs to white,
Although she laue them hourly in the flood:
Tell the Empresse from me, I am of age
To keepe mine owne, excuse it how she can.
Demr. Wilt thou betray thy noble mistris thus?
Aron. My mistris is my mistris: this my selfe,
The vigour, and the picture of my youth:
This, before all the world do I preferre,
This maugre all the world will I keepe safe,
Or some of you shall smoake for it in Rome.
Demr. By this our mother is for ever sham'd.
Chi. Rome will despise her for this foule escape.
Nur. The Emperour in his rage will doome her death.
Chi. I blush to thinke vpon this ignominie.
Aron. Why ther's the priuiledge your beauty beares:
Fie treacherous hue, that will betray with blushing
The close enacts and counsels of the hart:
Heer's a young Lad fram'd of another leere.
Looke how the blacke slaue smiles vpon the father,
As who should say, old Lad I am thine owne.
He is your brother Lords, sensibly fed
Of that selfe blood that first gaue life to you,
And from that wombe where you imprisoned were
He is infranchised and come to light:
Nay he is your brother by the surer side,
Although my seale be stamped in his face.
Nurse. Aron what shall I say vnto the Empresse?
Demr. Aduise thee Aaron, what is to be done,
And we will all subscribe to thy aduise:
Save thou the child, so we may all be safe.
Aron. Then sis we do wee and let vs all consult.
My sonne and I will beare the winde of you:
Keepe there, now talke at pleasure of your safety.
Demr. How many women saw this childe of his?
Aron. Why so braue Lords, when we joyne in league
I am a Lambe: but if you braue the Moore,
The chafed Bore, the mountaine Lyonesse,
The Ocean swells not so as Aaron stormes:
But say againe, how many saw the childe?
Nurse. Cornelia, the midwife, and my selfe,
And none else but the deliuered Empresse.
Aron. The Empresse, the Midwife, and your selfe,
Two may keepe counsell, when the third's away:
Goe to the Empresse, tell her this I said, He kills her
Weeke, weeke, so cries a Pigge prepared to th'spit
Demr. What mean'st thou Aaron?
Wherefore did'st thou this?
Aron. O Lord sir, 'tis a deed of policie?
Shall she liue to betray this guilt of ours:
A long tongu'd babbling Gossip? No Lords no:
And now be it knowne to you my full intent.
Not farre, one Muliteus my Country-man
His wife but yesternight was brought to bed,
His childe is like to her, faire as you are:
Goe packe with him, and give the mother gold,
And tell them both the circumstance of all,
And how by this their Childe shall be admaunc'd,
And be received for the Emperours heyre,
And substituted in the place of mine,
To calme this tempest whirling in the Court,
And let the Emperour dandle him for his owne.
Harke ye Lords, ye see I haue given her physicke,
And you must needs bestow her funerall,
The fields are neere, and you are gallant Groomes:
This done, see that you take no longer daies
But send the Midwife presently to me.
The Midwife and the Nurse well made away,
Then let the Ladies tattle what they please.
Chi. Aaron I see thou wilt not trust the ayre with secrets.
Demr. For this care of Tamora,
Her selfe, and hers are highly bound to thee. Exeunt.
Aron. Now to the Gothes, as swift as Swallow flies,
There to dispose this treasure in mine armes,
And secretly to greete the Empresse friends:
Come on you thick-lipt-slaue, Ile beare you hence,
For it is you that puts vs to our shifts:
Ile make you feed on berries, and on roots,
And feed on curds and whay, and suckle the Goate,
And cabbin in a Cave, and bring you vp
To be a warriour, and command a Campe. Exit

Enter Titus, old Martius, young Lucius, and other gentlemen with bowes, and Titus bowes the arrowes with Letters on the end of them.

Tit. Come Martius, come, kinsmen this is the way.
Sir Boy let me see your Archerie,
Looke yee draw home enough, and 'tis there straight:
Terras Astræa reliquit, be you remembred Martius.
She's gone, she's fled, sirs take you to your tooles,
You Cosens shall goe sound the Ocean:
And cast your nets, haply you may find her in the Sea,
Yet ther's as little iustice as at Land.
No Publius and Sempronius, you must doe it,

'Tis

'Tis you must dig with Mattocke, and with Spade,
And pierce the inmost Center of the earth:
Then when you come to Pluto Region,
I pray you deliver him this petition,
Tell him it is for Iustice, and for aide,
And that it comes from old Andronicus,
Shaken with sorrowes in vngratefull Rome.
Ah Rome! Well, well, I made thee miserable,
What time I threw the peoples suffrages
On him that thus doth tyrannize ore me.
Goe get you gone, and pray be carefull all,
And leave you not a man of warre vnsearcht,
This wicked Emperour may haue ships her hence,
And kinsmen then we may goe pipe for Iustice.

Mart. O Publius is not this a heavie case
To see thy Noble Vncle thus distract?

Publ. Therefore my Lords it highly vs concernes,
By day and night t'attend him carefully:
And feede his humour kindely as we may,
Till time beget some carefull remedie.

Marc. Kinsmen, his sorrowes are past remedie.
Ioyne with the Gothes, and with vnrengefull warre,
Take wreake on Rome for this ingratitude,
And vengeance on the Traytor Saturnine.

Tit. Publius how now? how now my Maisters?
What haue you met with her?

Publ. No my good Lord, but Pluto sends you word,
If you will haue revenge from hell you shall,
Marrie for Iustice she is so imploy'd,
He thinkes with Ioue in heaven, or some where else:
So that perforce you must needs stay a time.

Tit. He doth me wrong to feed me with delayes,
Ile dine into the burning Lake below,
And pull her out of Acheron by the heeles.
Marcus we are but shrubs, no Cedars we,
No big-boa'd-men, fram'd of the Cyclops size,
But metttall Marcus, steele to the very backe,
Yet wrung with wrongs more then our backe can beare:
And sith there's no Iustice in earth nor hell,
We will solliciet heaven, and moue the Gods
To send downe Iustice for to wreake our wongs:
Come to this geare, you are a good Archer Marcus.

He gives them the Arrowes.

Ad Iouem, that's for you: here ad Appollonem,
Ad Martem, that's for my selfe,
Heere Boy to Pallas, heere to Mercury,
To Saturnine, to Caius, not to Saturnine,
You were as good to shoote against the winde.
Too it Boy, Marcus loose when I bid:
Of my word, I haue written to effect,
There's not a God left vnsollicited.

Marc. Kinsmen, shoot all your shafts into the Court,
We will afflict the Emperour in his pride.

Tit. Now Maisters draw, Oh well said Lucius:
Good Boy in Virgies lap, give it Pallas.

Marc. My Lord, I aime a Mile beyond the Moone,
Your letter is with Iupiter by this.

Tit. Ha, ha, Publius, Publius, what hast thou done?
See, see, thou hast shot off one of Taurus hornes.

Mar. This was the sport my Lord, when Publius shot,
The Bull being gal'd, gave Aries such a knocke,
That downe fell both the Rams hornes in the Court,
And who should finde them but the Empresse villaine:
She laugh'd, and told the Moore he should not choose
But give them to his Maister for a prefaice.

Tit. Why there it goes, God give your Lordship joy.

Enter the Clowne with a basket and two Pigeons in it.

Titus. Newes, newes, from heaven,
Marcus the posst is come.
Sirrah, what tydings? haue you any letters?
Shall I haue Iustice, what sayes Iupiter?

Clowne. Ho the Ibbetmaker, he sayes that he hath taken them downe againe, for the man must not be hang'd till the next weeke.

Tit. But what sayes Iupiter I aske thee?

Clowne. Alas sir I know not Iupiter:
I never dronke with him in all my life.

Tit. Why villaine art not thou the Carrier?

Clowne. I of my Pigions sir, nothing else.

Tit. Why, did'st thou not come from heaven?

Clowne. From heaven? Alas sir, I never came there,
God forbid I should be so bold, to presse to heaven in my young dayes. Why I am going with my pigeons to the Tribunall Plebs, to take vp a matter of brawle, betwixt my Vncle, and one of the Emperiall men.

Mar. Why sir, that is as fit as can be to serue for your Oration, and let him deliver the Pigions to the Emperour from you.

Tit. Tell me, can you deliver an Oration to the Emperour with a Grace?

Clowne. Nay truely sir, I could neuer say grace in all my life.

Tit. Sirrah come hither, make no more adoe,
But give your Pigeons to the Emperour,
By me thou shalt haue Iustice at his hands.
Hold, hold, meane while here's money for thy charges.
Give me pen and inke.
Sirrah, can you with a Grace deliver a Supplication?

Clowne. I sir.

Titus. Then here is a Supplication for you, and when you come to him, at the first approach you must kneele, then kisse his foote, then deliver vp your Pigeons, and then looke for your reward. Ile be at hand sir, for you do it bravely.

Clowne. I warrant you sir, let me alone.

Tit. Sirrha hast thou a knife? Come let me see it.
Heere Marcus, fold it in the Oration,
For thou hast made it like an humble Supplicant:
And when thou hast given it the Emperour,
Knocke at my dore, and tell me what he sayes.

Clowne. God be with you sir, I will. Exit.

Tit. Come Marcus let vs goe, Publius follow me. Exeunt.

Enter Emperour and Empresse, and her two sonnes, the Emperour brings the Arrowes in his hand that Titus shot at him.

Saturn. Why Lords,
What wrongs are these? was ever seene
An Emperour in Rome thus ore borne,
Troubled, Confronted thus, and for the extent
Of egall Iustice, vs'd in such contempt?
My Lords, you know the mightfull Gods,
(How ever these disturbers of our peace
Buz in the peoples eares) there nought hath pass,
But even with law against the wilfull sonnes
Of old Andronicus. And what and if
His sorrowes haue so overwhelm'd his wits,
Shall we be thus afflicted in his wreakes,
His fits, his frensie, and his bitternesse?
And now he writes to heaven for his redresse.
See, heaves to Ioue and this to Mercury,

This to Apollo, this to the God of warre:
Sweet scrowles to flie about the streets of Rome:
What's this but Libelling against the Senate,
And blazoning our Iniustice every where?
A goodly humour, Is it not my Lords?
As who would say, in Rome no Iustice were.
But if I liue, his fained extasies
Shall be no shelter to these outrages:
But he and his shall know, that Iustice liues
In Saturnine hezkin; whom if he sleepe,
Hee'l so awake, as he in fury shall
Cut off the proud'st Conspirator that liues.

Tam. My gracious Lord, my louely Saturnine,
Lord of my life, Commander of my thoughts,
Calme thee, and beare the faults of Titus age,
Th'effects of sorrow for his valiant Sonnes,
Whose loose hath pier'st him deepe, and scar'd his heart;
And rather comfort his distressed plight,
Then prosecute the meanest or the best
For these contempts. Why thus it shall become High witted Tamora to gloze with all: Aside.
But Titus, I haue touch'd thee to the quicke,
Thy life blood out: If Aaron now be wise,
Then is all safe, the Anchor's in the Port.

Enter Clowne.

How now good fellow, would'st thou speake with vs?

Clow Yes forsooth, and your Mistership be Emperiall.

Tam. Empressse I am, but yonder sit the Emperour.

Clo. Tis he; God & Saint Stephen give you good den;
I haue brought you a Letter, & a couple of Pigions heere.

He reads the Letter.

Sat. Goe take him away, and hang him presently.

Clowne. How much money must I haue?

Tam. Come sirrah you must be hang'd.

Clow. Hang'd? by Lady, then I haue brought vp a neck to a faire end. Exit.

Sat. Despightfull and intollerable wrongs,
Shall I endure this monstrous villany?
I know from whence this same deuise proceedes:
May this be borne? As if his traytrous Sonnes,
That dy'd by law for murther of our Brother,
Haue by my meanes beene butcher'd wrongfully?
Goe dragge the villaine hither by the haire,
Not Age, not Honour, shall shape priuiledge:
For this proud mocke, I'le be thy slaughter man:
Sly frantick wretch, that holp'st to make me great,
In hope thy selfe should gouerne Rome and me.

Enter Nuntius Emilius.

Sator. What newes with thee Emilius?

Emil. Arme my Lords, Rome never had more cause,
The Gothes haue gather'd head, and with a power
Of high resolued men, bent to the spoyle
They hither march amaine, vnder conduct
Of Lucius, Sonne to old Andronicus:
Who threats in course of this reuenge to do
As much as euer Coriolanus did.

King. Is warlike Lucius Generall of the Gothes?
These tydings nip me, and I hang the head
As flowers with frost, or grasse beat downe with stormes:
I, now begins our sorrowes to approach,
'Tis be the common people loue so much,
My selfe hath often heard them say,
(When I haue walkt like a priuate man)
That Lucius banishment was wrongfully,
And they haue wisht that Lucius were their Emperour.

Tam. Why should you feare? Is not our City strong?

King. I, but the Cittizens fauour Lucius,
And will reuolt from me, to succour him.

Tam. King, be thy thoughts Imperious like thy name.
Is the Sonne dim'd, that Gnats do flie in it?
The Eagle suffers little Birds to sing,
And is not carefull what they mean thereby,
Knowing that with the shadow of his wings,
He can at pleasure stint their melodie.
Even so mayest thou, the giddy men of Rome,
Then cheare thy spirit, for know thou Emperour,
I will enchaunt the old Andronicus,
With words more sweet, and yet more dangerous
Then baites to fish, or hony stalkes to sheepe,
When as the one is wounded with the baite,
The other rotted with delicious foode.

King. But he will not entreat his Sonne for vs.

Tam. If Tamora entreat him, then he will,
For I can smooth and fill his aged eare,
With golden promises, that were his heart
Almost impregnable, his old eares deafe,
Yet should both eare and heart obey my tongue.
Goe thou before to our Embassadour,
Say, that the Emperour requests a parly
Of warlike Lucius, and appoint the meeting.

King. Emilius do this message Honourably,
And if he stand in Hostage for his safety,
Bid him demaund what pledge will please him best.

Emil. Your bidding shall I do effectually. Exit.

Tam. Now will I to that old Andronicus,
And temper him with all the Art I haue;
To pluck proud Lucius from the warlike Gothes.
And now sweet Emperour be blithe againe,
And bury all thy feare in my deuises.

Sator. Then goe successfully and plead for him. Exit.

Actus Quintus.

Flourish. Enter Lucius with an Army of Gothes, with Drum and Souldiers.

Luci. Approued warriours, and my faithfull Friends,
I haue received Letters from great Rome,
Which signifies what hate they beare their Emperour,
And how desirous of our sight they are.
Therefore great Lords, be as your Titles witnesse,
Imperious and impatient of your wrongs,
And wherein Rome hath done you any scathe,
Let him make treble satisfaction.

Goth. Braue slip, sprung from the Great Andronicus,
Whose name was once our terrour, now our comfort,
Whose high exploits, and honourable Deeds,
Ingratefull Rome requites with foule contempt:
Behold in vs, weele follow where thou lead'st,
Like stinging Bees in hottest Sommers day,
Led by their Maister to the flowred fields,
And be stung'd on cursed Tamora:
And as he saith, so say we all with him.

Luc. I humbly thanke him, and I thanke you all.
But who comes heere, led by a lusty Goth?

Enter a Goth leading of Aaron with his child in his armes.

Goth. Renowned Lucius, from our troupe I strayd,
To gaze vpon a ruinous Monasterie,

And

And as I earnestly did fixe mine eye
Vpon the wasted building, suddainely
I heard a childe cry vndernesth a wall:
I made vnto the noyse, when soone I heard,
The crying babe control'd with this discourse:
Peace Tawny slaue, halfe ne.e, and halfe thy Dam,
Did not thy Hue bewray whose brat thou art?
Had nature lent thee, but thy Mothers looke,
Villaine thou mightst haue bene an Emperour.
But where the Bull and Cow are both milk-white,
They never do beget a cole-blacke-Calfe:
Peace, villaine peace, euen thus he rates the babe,
For I must beare thee to a trusty Goth,
Who when he knowes thou art the Empresse babe,
Will hold thee dearely for thy Mothers sake.
With this, my weapon drawne I rushe vpon him,
Surprizd him suddainely, and brought him hither
To vse, as you thinke needefull of the man.

Luci. Oh worthy Goth, this is the incarnate deuill,
That rob'd Andronicus of his good hand:
This is the Pearle that pleas'd your Emperesse eye,
And heere's the Base Fruit of his burning lust.
Say wall-ey'd slaue, whether would'st thou conuey
This growing Image of thy fiend-like face?
Why dost not speake? what deafe? Not a word?
A halter Souldiers, hang him on this Tree,
And by his side his Fruite of Bastardie.

Aron. Touch not the Boy, he is of Royall blood.

Luci. Too like the Syre for euer being good.
First hang the Child that he may see it sprall,
A sight to vexe the Fathers soule withall.

Aron. Get me a Ladder Lucius, saue the Childe,
And beare it from me to the Empresse:
If thou do this, I'le shew thee wondrous things,
That highly may aduantage thee to heare;
If thou wilt not, befall what may befall,
I'le speake no more: but vengeance rot you all.

Luci. Say on, and if it please me which thou speak'st,
Thy child shall liue, and I will see it Nourisht.

Aron. And if it please thee? why assure thee Lucius,
'Twill vexe thy soule to heare what I shall speake:
For I must talke of Murthers, Rapes, and Massacres,
Acts of Blacke-night, abhominable Deeds,
Complots of Mischiefe, Treason, Villanies
Ruthfull to heare, yet pittiously preform'd,
And this shall all be buried by my death,
Vnlesse thou sweare to me my Childe shall liue.

Luci. Tell on thy minde,
I say thy Childe shall liue.

Aron. Sweare that he shall, and then I will begin.

Luci. Who should I sweare by,
Thou beleeuest no God,
That graunted, how can'st thou beleeue an oath?

Aron. What if I do not, as indeed I do not,
Yet for I know thou art Religious,
And hast a thing within thee, called Conscience,
With twenty Popish trickes and Ceremonies,
Which I haue seene thee carefull to obseruе:
Therefore I vrge thy oath, for that I know
An Idiot holds his Bauble for a God,
And keeper the oath which by that God he sweares,
To that I'le vrge him: therefore thou shalt vow
By that same God, what God so ere it be
That thou adorest, and hast in reuerence,
To saue my Boy, to nourish and bring him vp,
Ore else I will discouer nought to thee.

Luci. Even by my God I sweare to thee I will.

Aron. First know thou,
I be got him on the Empresse.

Luci. Oh most Insatiate luxurious woman!

Aron. Tut Lucius, this was but a deed of Charitie,
To that which thou shalt heare of me anon,
'Twas her two Sonnes that murdered Bassianus,
They cut thy Sisters tongue, and ransht her,
And cut her hands off, and trim'd her as thou saw'st.

Lucius. Oh detestable villaine!
Call'st thou that Trimming?

Aron. Why she was washt, and cut, and trim'd,
And 'twas trim sport for them that had the doing of it.

Luci. Oh barbarous beastly villaines like thy selfe!

Aron. Indeede, I was their Tutor to instruct them,
That Codding spirit had they from their Mother,
As sure a Card as ever wonne the Set:
That bloody minde I thinke they learn'd of me,
As true a Dog as ever fought at head.
Well, let my Deeds be witnesse of my worth:
I trayn'd thy Brethren to that guileful Hole,
Where the dead Corps of Bassianus lay:
I wrote the Letter, that thy Father found,
And hid the Gold within the Letter mention'd.
Confederate with the Queene, and her two Sonnes,
And what not done, that thou hast cause to rue,
Wherein I had no stroke of Mischeife in it.
I play'd the Cheater for thy Fathers hand,
And when I had it, drew my selfe apart,
And almost broke my heart with extreme laughter.
I pried me through the Creuice of a Wall,
When for his hand, he had his two Sonnes heads,
Beheld his teares, and laught so hartily,
That both mine eyes were rainie like to his:
And when I told the Empresse of this sport,
She sounded almost at my pleasing tale,
And for my tydings, gaue me twenty kisses.

Goth. What canst thou say all this, and never blush?

Aron. I, like a blacke Dogge, as the saying is.

Luci. Art thou not sorry for these hainous deedes?

Aron. I, that I had not done a thousand more:
Euen now I curse the day, and yet I thinke
Few come within few compasse of my curse,
Wherein I did not some Notorious ill,
As kill a man, or else deuise his death,
Ransh a Maid, or plot the way to do it,
Accuse some Innocent, and sweare my selfe,
Set deadly Enmity betweene two Friends,
Make poore mens Cattell breake their neckes,
Set fire on Barnes and Haystackes in the night,
And bid the Owners quench them with the teares:
Oft haue I dig'd vp dead men from their graues,
And set them vpright at their deere Friends doore,
Euen when their sorrowes almost was forgot,
And on their skinnes, as on the Barke of Trees,
Haue with my knife carued in Roman Letters,
Let not your sorrow die, though I am dead.
Tut, I haue done a thousand dreadfull things
As willingly, as one would kill a Fly,
And nothing grieues me heartily indeede,
But that I cannot do ten thousand more.

Luci. Bring downe the diuell, for he must not die
So sweet a death as hanging presently.

Aron. If thou be diuels, would I were a deuill,
To liue and burne in euerlasting fire,
So I might haue your company in hell,

But to torment you with my bitter tongue.

Lust. Sirs stop his mouth, & let him speake no more.

Enter Emilius.

Goth. My Lord, there is a Messenger from Rome
Desires to be admitted to your presence.

Luc. Let him come neere.

Welcome Emilius, what the newes from Rome?

Emi. Lord Lucius, and you Princes of the Gothes,
The Romaine Emperour greetes you all by me,
And for he vnderstands you are in Armes,
He craues a parly at your Fathers house
Willing you to demand your Hostages,
And they shall be immediately delivered.

Goth. What sates our Generall?

Luc. Emilius, let the Emperour giue his pledges
Vnto my Father, and my Vncle Marcus, Flourish.
And we will come: march away. Exeunt.

Enter Tamora, and her two Sonnes disguised.

Tam. Thus in this strange and sad Habilliment,
I will encounter with Andronicus,
And say, I am Revenge sent from below,
To joyne with him and right his heinous wrongs:
Knocke at his study where they say he keepes,
To ruminate strange plots of dire Revenge,
Tell him Revenge is come to joyne with him,
And worke confusion on his Enemies.

They knocke and Titus opens his study dore.

Tit. Who doth molest my Contemplation?
Is it your trickes to make me ope the dore,
That so my sad decrees may fly away,
And all my studie be to no effect?
You are deceiu'd, for what I meane to do,
See heere in bloody lines I haue set downe:
And what is written shall be executed.

Tam. Titus, I am come to talke with thee,

Tit. No not a word: how can I grace my talke,
Wanting a hand to giue it action,
Thou hast the odes of me, therefore no more.

Tam. If thou did'st know me,
Thou would'st talke with me.

Tit. I am not mad, I know thee well enough,
Witnesse this wretched stump,
Witnesse these crimson lines,
Witnesse these Trenches made by griefe and care,
Witnesse the tyring day, and heauie night,
Witnesse all sorrow, that I know thee well
For our proud Emprestie, Mighty Tamora:
Is not thy comming for my other hand?

Tam. Know thou sad man, I am not Tamora,
She is thy Enemie, and I thy Friend,
I am Revenge sent from th'infernall Kingdome,
To ease the gnawing Vulture of the mind,
By working wreakefull vengeance on my Foes:
Come downe and welcome me to this worlds light,
Conferre with me of Murder and of Death,
There's not a hollow Cave or lurking place,
No Vast obscurity, or Misty vale,
Where bloody Murther or detested Rape,
Can couch for feare, but I will finde them out,
And in their eares tell them my dreadfull name,
Revenge, which makes the foule offenders quake

Tit. Art thou Revenge, and art thou sent to me,
To be a torment to mine Enemies?

Tam. I am, therefore come downe and welcome me.

Tit. Doe me some seruice ere I come to thee:
Lie by thy side where Rape and Murder stands,
Now give some surance that thou art Revenge,
Stab them, or teare them on thy Chariot wheeles,
And then I'le come and be thy Waggoner,
And whirle along with thee about the Globes.
Provide thee two proper Palfries, as blacke as Iet,
To hale thy vengeftull Waggon swift away,
And finde out Murder in their guilty cares.
And when thy Car is loaden with their heads,
I will dismount, and by the Waggon wheele,
Trot like a Seruile footeman all day long,
Even from Eptons rising in the East,
Vntill his very downefall in the Sea.
And day by day I'le do this heavy taske,
So thou destroy Rapine and Murder there.

Tam. These are my Ministers, and come with me.

Tit. Are these thy Ministers, what are they call'd?

Tam. Rape and Murder, therefore called so,
Cause they take vengeance of such kind of men.

Tit. Good Lord how like the Emprestie Sons they are
And you the Emprestie: But we worldly men,
Haue miserable mad mistaking eyes:
Oh sweet Revenge, now do I come to thee,
And if one armes imbracement will content thee,
I will imbrace thee: let by and by.

Tam. This closing with him, fits his Lunacie,
What ere I forge to feede his brainesicke fits,
Do you vphold, and maintaine in your speeches,
For now he firmely takes me for Revenge,
And being Credulous in this mad thought,
I'le make him send for Lucius his Sonne,
And whil'st I at a Banquet hold him fare,
I'le find some cunning practise out of hand
To scatter and disperse the giddie Gothes,
Or at the least make them his Enemies:
See heere he comes, and I mast play my theame.

Tit. Long haue I bene forlorne, and all for thee,
Welcome dread Fury to my woefull house,
Rapine and Murther, you are welcome too,
How like the Emprestie and her Sonnes you are.
Well are you fitted, had you but a Moore,
Could not all hell afford you such a deuill?
For well I wote the Emprestie never wages
But in her company there is a Moore,
And would you representa our Queene aright
It were conuenient you had such a deuill:
But welcome as you are, what shall we doe?

Tam. What would'st thou haue vs doe Andronicus?

Dem. Shew me a Murtherer, I'le deale with him.

Chi. Shew me a Villaine that hath done a Rape,
And I am fitt to be reuenge'd on him.

Tam. Shew me a thousand that haue done thee wrong,
And I'le be reuenged on them all.

Tit. Looke round about the wicked streets of Rome,
And when thou find'st a man that's like thy selfe,
Good Murder stab him, he's a Murtherer.
Goe thou with him, and when it is thy hap
To finde another that is like to thee,
Good Rapine stab him, he is a Rauisher.
Go thou with them, and in the Emperours Court,
There is a Queene attended by a Moore,
Well maist thou know her by thy owne proportion,
For vp and downe she doth resemble thee.
I pray thee doe on them some violent death,
They haue bene violent to me and mine.

Tam. Well hast thou lesson'd vs, this shall we do.
But would it please thee good Andronicus,
To send for Lavinia thy thrice Valiant Sonne,
Who leades towards Rome a Band of warlike Gothes,
And bid him come and Banquet at thy house.
When he is heere, even at thy Solemne Feast,
I will bring in the Empresse and her Sonnes,
The Emperour himselfe, and all thy Foes,
And at thy mercy shall they stoop, and kneele,
And on them shalt thou ease, thy angry heart:
What saies Andronicus to this deuise?

Enter Marcus.

Tit. Marcus my Brother, 'tis sad Titus calls,
Go gentle Marcus to thy Nephew Lucius,
Thou shalt enquire him out among the Gothes,
Bid him repaire to me, and bring with him
Some of the chiefest Princes of the Gothes,
Bid him encampe his Souldiers where they are,
Tell him the Emperour, and the Empresse too,
Feasts at my house, and he shall Feast with them,
This do thou for my loue, and so let him,
As he regards his aged Fathers life.
Mar. This will I do, and soone returne againe.
Tam. Now will I hence about thy businesse,
And take my Ministers along with me.
Tit. Nay, nay, let Rape and Murder stay with me,
Or els I'le call my Brother backe againe,
And cleave to no reuenge but Lucius.
Tam. What say you Boyes, will you bide with him,
Whiles I goe tell my Lord the Emperour,
How I haue gouern'd our determined iest?
Yeeld to his Humour, smooth and speake him faire,
And carry with him till I turne againe.
Tit. I know them all, though they suppose me mad,
And will ore-reach them in their owne deuises,
A payre of cursed hell-hounds and their Dam.
Dem. Madam depart at pleasure, leaue vs heere.
Tam. Farewell Andronicus, reuenge now goes
To lay a complot to betray thy Foes.
Tit. I know thou doo'st, and sweet reuenge farewell.
Chi. Tell vs old man, how shall we be imploy'd?
Tit. Tut, I haue worke enough for you to doe,
Publius come hither, Caius, and Valentine.
Pub. What is your will?
Tit. Know you these two?
Pub. The Empresse Sonnes
I take them, Chiron, Demetrius.
Tit. Fie Publius, fie, thou art too much deceau'd.
The one is Murder, Rape is the others name,
And therefore bind them gentle Publius,
Caius, and Valentine, lay hands on them,
Oft haue you heard me wisht for such an houre,
And now I find it, therefore bande them sure.
Chi. Villaines forbeare, we are the Empresse Sonnes.
Pub. And therefore do we, what we are commanded.
Stop close their mouthes, let them not speake a word,
Is he sure bound, looke that you binde them fast. Exeunt.

Enter Titus Andronicus with a knife, and Lauinia with a Basen.

Tit. Come, come Lauinia, looke, thy Foes are bound,
Sirs stop their mouthes, let them not speake to me,
But let them heare what fearefull words I vtter.
Oh Villaines, Chiron, and Demetrius,
Here stands the spring whom you haue stain'd with mud,
This goodly Sommer with your Winter mixt,
You kill'd her husband, and for that vil'd fault,
Two of her Brothers were condemn'd to death,
My hand cut off, and made a merry iest,
Both her sweet Hands, her Tongue, and that more dear
Then Hands or tongue, her spotlesse Chastity,
Inhumaine Traytors, you constrain'd and forc'd.
What would you say, if I should let you speake?
Villaines for shame you could not beg for grace.
Harke Wretches, how I meane to martyr you,
This one Hand yet is left, to cut your throats,
Whil'st that Lauinia tweene her stumps doth hold:
The Bason that receiues your guilty blood.
You know your Mother meanes to feast with me,
And calls herselfe Reuenge, and thinks me mad.
Harke Villaines, I will grin'd your bones to dust,
And with your blood and it, I'le make a Paste,
And of the Paste a Coffen I will reare,
And make two Pasties of your shamefull Heads,
And bid that strumpet your vnhallowed Dam,
Like to the earth swallow her increase.
This is the Feast, that I haue bid her to,
And this the Banquet she shall surfet on,
For worse then Philomel you vs'd my Daughter,
And worse then Progne, I will be reuenge'd,
And now prepare your throats: Lauinia come,
Receiue the blood, and when that they are dead,
Let me goe grin'd their Bones to powder small,
And with this hatefull Liquor temper it,
And in that Paste let their vil'd Heads be bake,
Come, come, be every one officious,
To make this Banket, which I wish might proue,
More sterne and bloody then the Centaures Feast.
He cuts their throats.
So now bring them in, for I'le play the Cooke,
And see them ready, gainst their Mother comes. Exeunt.

Enter Lucius, Marcus, and the Gothes.

Luc. Vncle Marcus, since 'tis my Fathers minde
That I repair to Rome, I am content.
Goth. And ours with thine befall, what Fortune will.
Luc. Good Vncle take you in this barbarous Aaron,
This Raueneous Tiger, this accursed deuill,
Let him receiue no sustenance, fetter him,
Till he be brought vnto the Emperous face,
For testimony of her foule proceedings.
And see the Ambush of our Friends be strong,
I fere the Emperour meanes no good to vs.
Aaron. Some deuill whisper curses in my eare,
And prompt me that my tongue may vtter forth,
The Venemous Malice of my swelling heart.
Luc. Away Inhumaine Dogge, Vnhallowed Slaue.
Sirs, helpe our Vncle, to conuey him in. Flourish.
The Trumpets shew the Emperour is at hand.

Sound Trumpets. Enter Emperour and Empresse, with Tribunes and others.

Sat. What, hath the Firmament more Suns then one?
Luc. What boots it thee to call thy selfe a Sunne?
Mar. Romes Emperour & Nephew, breake the parle
These quarrels must be quietly debated,
The Feast is ready which the carefull Titus,

Hath ordained to an Honourable end,
For Peace, for Loue, for League, and good to Rome:
Please you therfore draw nie and take your places.
Satur. Marcus we will. Hohoyes.

A Table brought in.

Enter Titus like a Cooke, placing the meat on the Table, and Lauinia with a veile over her face.

Titus. Welcome my gracious Lord,
Welcome Dread Queene,
Welcome ye Warlike Gothes, welcome Lucius,
And welcome all: although the cheere be poore,
'Twill fill your stomacks, please you eat of it.
Sat. Why art thou thus attir'd Andronicus?
Tit. Because I would be sure to haue all well,
To entertaine your Highnesse, and your Empresse.
Tam. We are beholding to you good Andronicus!
Tit. And if your Highnesse knew my heart, you weete
My Lord the Emperour resolue me this,
Was it well done of rash Virginius,
To slay his daughter with his owne right hand,
Because she was enfor'st, stain'd, and deflow'd?
Satur. It was Andronicus.
Tit. Your reason, Mighty Lord?
Sat. Because the Girle, should not survine her shame,
And by her presence still renew his sorrowes.
Tit. A reason mighty, strong, and effectuall,
A patterne, president, and liuely warrant,
For me (most wretched) to performe the like:
Die, die, Lauinia, and thy shame with thee,
And with thy shame, thy Fathers sorrow die.
He kills her.
Sat. What hast done, vnnaturall and vnkinde?
Tit. Kil'd her for whom my teares haue made me blind.
I am as woefull as Virginius was,
And haue a thousand times more cause then he.
Sat. What was she rauisht? tell who did the deed,
Tit. Wilt please you eat,
Wilt please your Highnesse feed?
Tam. Why hast thou slaine thine onely Daughter?
Titus. Not I, 'twas Chiron and Demetrius,
They rauisht her, and cut away her tongue,
And they, 'twas they, that did her all this wrong.
Satur. Go fetch them hither to vs presently.
Tit. Why there they are both, baked in that Pie,
Whereof their Mother dantily hath fed,
Eating the flesh that she herselfe hath bred.
'Tis true, 'tis true, witnesse my knives sharpe point.
He stabs the Empresse.
Satur. Die franticke wretch, for this accursed deed.
Luc. Can the Sonnes eye, behold his Father bleed?
There's meede for meede, death for a deadly deed.
Mar. You sad fac'd men, people and Sonnes of Rome,
By vprores sever'd like a flight of Fowle,
Scattred by windes and high tempestuous gusts:
Oh let me teach you how, to knit againe
This scattred Corne, into one mutuall sheafe,
These broken limbs againe into one body.
Goth. Let Rome herselfe be bane vnto herselfe,
And thee whom mightie kingdomes curtsie too,
Like a forlorne and desperate castaway,
Doe shamefull execution on her selfe.
But if my frosticke signes and chaps of age,
Grauie witnesses of true experience,
Cannot induce you to attend my words,
Speake Romes deere friend, as erst our Auncestor,
When with his solemne tongue he did discourse
To loue-sicke Dido sad attending eare,
The story of that baleefull burning night,
When subtill Greekes surprin'd King Priams Troy:
Tell vs what Sinon hath bewitcht our eares,
Or who hath brought the fatall engine in,
That gives our Troy, our Rome the ciuill wound.
My heart is not compact of flint nor steele,
Nor can I vtter all our bitter griefe,
But floods of teares will drowne my Oratorie,
And breake my very vttrance, euen in the time
When it should moue you to attend me most,
Lending your kind hand Commiseration.
Heere is a Captaine, let him tell the tale,
Your hearts will throb and weepe to heare him speake.
Lac. This Noble Auditory, be it knowne to you,
That cursed Chiron and Demetrius
Were they that murdred our Emperours Brother,
And they it were that rauished our Sister,
For their fell faults our Brothers were beheaded,
Our Fathers teares despis'd, and basely cousen'd,
Of that true hand that fought Romes quarrell out,
And sent her enemies vnto the graue.
Lastly, my selfe vnkindly banished,
The gates shut on me, and turn'd weeping out,
To beg relieife among Romes Enemies,
Who drown'd their enmity in my true teares,
And op'd their armes to imbrace me as a Friend:
And I am turned forth, be it knowne to you,
That haue preseru'd her welfare in my blood,
And from her bosome tooke the Enemies point,
Sheathing the steele in my aduentrous body.
Alas you know, I am no Vaunter I,
My scars can witnesse, dumbe although they are,
That my report is iust and full of truth:
But soft, me thinkes I do digresse too much,
Cyting my worthlesse praise. Oh pardon me,
For when no Friends are by, men praise themselues.
Marc. Now is my turne to speake: Behold this Child,
Of this was Tamora deliuered,
The issue of an Irreligious Moore,
Chiefe Architect and plotter of these woes,
The Villaine is aliue in Titus house,
And as he is, to witnesse this is true.
Now iudge what course had Titus to reuenge
These wrongs, vnspeakeable past patience,
Or more then any liuing man could beare.
Now you haue heard the truth, what say you Romaines?
Haue we done ought amisse? shew vs wherein,
And from the place where you behold vs now,
The poore remainder of Andronici,
Will hand in hand all headlong cast vs downe,
And on the ragged stones beat forth our braines,
And make a mutuall closure of our house:
Speake Romaines speake, and if you say we shall,
Lo: hand in hand, Lucius and I will fall.
Emilie. Come come, thou reuerent man of Rome,
And bring our Emperour gently in thy hand,
Lucius our Emperour: for well I know,
The common voyce do cry it shall be so.
Mar. Lucius, all haile Romes Royall Emperour,
Goe, goe into old Titus sorrowfull house,
And hither hale that misbelieving Moore,
To be adiudg'd some direfull slaughtering death,
As punishment for his most wicked life.
Lucius all haile to Romes gracious Gouernour.

Luc. Thankes gentle Romanes, may I governe so,
To heale Romes harmes, and wipe away her woe.
But gentle people, giue me aymé a-while,
For Nature puts me to a heavy taske:
Stand all aloofe, but Vncle draw you neere,
To shed obsequious teares vpon this Trunke:
Oh take this warme kisse on thy pale cold lips,
These sorrowfull drops vpon thy blood-staine face,
The last true Duties of thy Noble Sonne.

Mar. Teare for teare, and loving kisse for kisse,
Thy Brother Marcus tenders on thy Lips:
O were the sum-me of these that I should pay
Countleslie, and infinit, yet would I pay them.

Luc. Come hither Boy, come, come, and learne of vs
To melt in showres: thy Grandsire lou'd thee well.
Many a time he danc'd thee on his knee:
Sung thee asleepe, his Loving Breast, thy Pillow
Many a morrow hath he told to thee,
Meete, and agreeing with thine Infancie.
In that respect then, like a loving Childe,
Shed yet some small drops from thy tender Spring,
Because kinde Nature doth require it so:
Friends, should associate Friends, in Greefe and Wo.
Bid him farewell, commit him to the Graue,
Do him that kindnesse, and take leaue of him.

Boy. O Grandsire, Grandsire: even with all my heart
Would I were Dead, so you did Liue againe.
O Lord, I cannot speake to him for weeping,
My teares will choake me, if I ope my mouth.

Romane. You sad Andronici, haue done with woes,
Giue sentence on this execrable Wretch,
That hath beene breeder of these dire euents.

Luc. Set him breast deepe in earth, and famish him:
There let him stand, and raue, and cry for foode:
If any one relieues, or pitties him,
For the offence, he dyes. This is our doome:
Some stay, to see him fast ned in the earth.

Aaron. O why should wrath be mute, & Fury dumbe?
I am no Baby I, that with base Prayers
I should repent the Ends I haue done.
Ten thousand worse, than ever yet I did,
Would I performe if I might haue my will.
If one good Deed in all my life I did,
I do repent it from my very Soule.

Lucius. Some loving Friends conuey the Emp-ror,
And giue him burial in his Fathers graue.
My Father, and Lauinia, shall forthwith
Be closed in our Houshalds Monument:
As for that heynous Tyger Tamora,
No Funerall Rites, nor man in mournfull Weeds:
No mournfull Bell shall ring her Burrall:
But throw her forth to Beasts and Birds of prey:
Her life was Beast-like, and deuoid of pity,
And being so, shall haue like want of pity.
See iustice done on Aaron that damn'd Moore,
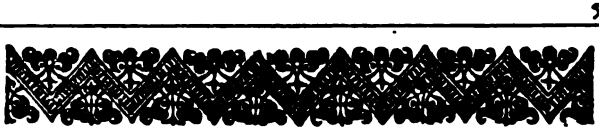
From whom, our heavy happes had their beginning:
Then afterwards, to Order well the State,
That like Events, may ne're it Ruinate. Exeunt omnes.

FINIS.



THE TRAGEDIE OF ROMEO and IVLIET.

Actus Primus. Scæna Prima.

Enter Sampson and Gregory, with Swords and Bucklers, of the House of Capulet.

Sampson.

GRegory: A my word we'l not carry coales.

Greg. No, for then we should be Colliers.

Samp. I mean, if we be in choller, we'l draw.

Greg. I, While you live, draw your necke out o'th Collar.

Samp. I strike quickly, being mou'd.

Greg. But thou art not quickly mou'd to strike.

Samp. A dog of the house of Mountague, moues me.

Greg. To moue, is to stir: and to be valiant, is to stand: Therefore, if thou art mou'd, thou runst away.

Samp. A dogge of that house shall moue me to stand. I will take the wall of any Man or Maid of Mountague.

Greg. That shewes thee a weake slaue, for the weakest goes to the wall.

Samp. True, and therefore women being the weaker Vessels, are ever thrust to the wall: therefore I will push Mountague men from the wall, and thrust his Maides to the wall. (their men.

Greg. The Quarrell is betweene our Masters, and vs

Samp. 'Tis all one, I will shew my selfe a tyrant: when I have fought with the men, I will bee cruell with the Maids, and cut off their heads.

Greg. The heads of the Maids?

Sam. I, the heads of the Maids, or their Maiden-heads, Take it in what sence thou wilt.

Greg. They must take it sence, that feele it.

Samp. Me they shall feele while I am able to stand: And 'tis knowne I am a pretty peece of flesh.

Greg. 'Tis well thou art not fish: If thou had'st, thou had'st beene poore John. Draw thy Toole, here comes of the House of the Mountagues.

Enter two other Seruingmen.

Sam. My naked weapon is out: quarrel, I wi'back thee

Gre. How? Turne thy backe, and run.

Sam. Feare me not.

Gre. No marry: I feare thee.

Sam. Let vs take the Law of our sides, let them begin.

Gr. I wil frown as I pass by, & let the take it as they list

Sam. Nay, as they dare. I wil bite my Thumb at them, which is a disgrace to them, if they beare it.

Abra. Do you bite your Thumbe at vs sir?

Samp. I do bite my Thumbe, sir.

Abra. Do you bite your Thumb at vs, sir?

Sam. Is the Law of our side, if I say I? Gre. No.

Sam. No sir, I do not bite my Thumbe at you sir: but I bite my Thumbe sir.

Greg. Do you quarrell sir?

Abra. Quarrell sir? no sir. (as you

Sam. If you do sir, I am for you, I serue as good a man

Abra. No better? Samp. Well sir.

Enter Benvolio.

Gr. Say better, here comes one of my masters kinsmen.

Samp. Yes, better.

Abra. You Lye.

Samp. Draw if you be men. Gregory, remember thy washing blow. They Fight.

Ben. Part Fools, put vp your Swords, you know not what you do.

Enter Tibalt.

Tyb. What art thou drawne, among these heartlesse Hindes? Turne thee Benvolio, looke vpon thy death.

Ben. I do but keepe the peace, put vp thy Sword, Or manage it to part these men with me.

Tyb. What draw, and talke of peace? I hate the word As I hate hell, all Mountagues, and thee: Have at thee Coward. Fights.

Enter three or foure Citizens with Clubs.

Offi. Clubs, Bills, and Partisans, strike, beat them down Downe with the Capulets, downe with the Mountagues.

Enter old Capulet in his Gowne, and his wife.

Cap. What noise is this? Give me my long Sword ho.

Wife. A crutch, a crutch: why call you for a Sword?

Cap. My Sword I say: Old Mountague is come, And flourishes his Blade in spight of me.

Enter old Mountague, & his wife.

Moun. Thou villaine Capulet. Hold me not, let me go

Wife. Thou shalt not stir a foote to seeke a Foe.

Enter Prince Eskales, with his Traine.

Prince. Rebellious Subiects, Enemies to peace, Prophaners of this Neighbour-stained Steele, Will they not heare? What hoe, you Men, you Beasts, That quench the fire of your pernitious Rage, With purple Fountaines issuing from your Veines: On paine of Torture, from those bloody hands Throw your mistemper'd Weapons to the ground, And heare the Sentence of your moued Prince. Three ciuill Brayles, bred of an Ayery word, By thee old Capulet and Mountague, Haue thrice disturb'd the quiet of our streets, And made Verona's ancient Citizens Cast by their Graue beseeming Ornaments, To wield old Partizans, in hands as old,

Cankred with peace, to part your Cankred hate,
If euer you disturbe our streets againe,
Your lines shall pay the forfeit of the peace.
For this time all the rest depart away.
You Capulet shall goe along with me,
And Mountague come you this afternoone,
To know our Fathers pleasure in this case:
To old Free-towne, our common iudgement place:
Once more on paine of death, all men depart. Exeunt.

Mont. Who set this auncient quarrell new abroach?
Speake Nephew, were you by, when it began?

Ben. Heere were the seruants of your aduersarie,
And yours close fighting ere I did approach,
I drew to part them, in the instant came
The fiery Tibalt, with his sword prepar'd,
Which as he breath'd defiance to my eares,
He swong about his head, and cut the windes,
Who nothing hurt withall, hist him in scorne.
While we were interchanging thrusts and blowes,
Came more and more, and fought on part and part,
Till the Prince came, who parted either part.

Wife. O where is Romeo, saw you him to day?
Right glad am I, he was not at this fray.

Ben. Madam, an houre before the worshipt Sun
Peer'd forth the golden window of the East,
A troubled mind draue me to walke abroad,
Where vnderneath the groue of Sycamour,
That West-ward rooteth from this City side:
So early walking did I see your Sonne:
Towards him I made, but he was ware of me,
And stole into the couert of the wood,
I measuring his affections by my owne,
Which then most sought, where most might not be found:
Being one too many by my weary selfe,
Pursued my Honour, not pursuing his
And gladly shun'd, who gladly fled from me.

Mont. Many a morning hath he there beene seene,
With teares augmenting the fresh morninge deaw,
Adding to cloudes, more cloudes with his deepe sighes,
But all so soone as the all-cheering Sunne,
Should in the farthest East begin to drow
The shadie Curtaines from Aurora bed,
Away from light steales home my heauy Sonne,
And priuate in his Chamber pennes himselfe,
Shuts vp his windowes, lockes faire day-light out,
And makes himselfe an artificiall night:
Blacke and portendous must this humour proue,
Vnlesse good counsell may the cause remoue.

Ben. My Noble Vncle doe you know the cause?

Mont. I neither know it, nor can learne of him.

Ben. Haue you importun'd him by any meanes?

Mont. Both by my selfe and many others Friends,
But he his owne affections counseller,
Is to himselfe (I will not say how true)
But to himselfe so secret and so close,
So farre from sounding and discouery,
As is the bud bit with an enuious worme,
Ere he can spread his sweete leaues to the ayre,
Or dedicate his beauty to the same.
Could we but learne from whence his sorrowes grow,
We would as willingly giue cure, as know.

Enter Romeo.

Ben. See where he comes, so please you step aside,
I'le know his greeuance, or be much denide.

Mont. I would thou wert so happy by thy stay,
To heare true shrift. Come Madam let's away. Exeunt.

Ben. Good morrow Cousin.

Rom. Is the day so young?

Ben. But new stroake nine.

Rom. Ay me, sad houres seeme long.
Was that my Father that went hence so fast?

Ben. It was: what sadnes lengthens Romeo's houres?

Ro. Not having that, which having, makes them short.

Ben. In loue.

Romeo. Out.

Ben. Of loue.

Rom. Out of her fauour where I am in loue.

Ben. Alas that loue so gentle in his view,
Should be so tyrannous and rough in proofe.

Rom. Alas that loue, whose view is muffled still,
Should without eyes, see path-ways to his will
Where shall we dine? O me: what fray was heere?
Yet tell me not, for I haue heard it all:
Heere's much to do with hate, but more with loue:
Why then, O brawling loue, O loueing hate,
O any thing, of nothing first created:
O heauie lightnesse, serious vanity,
Mishapen Chaos of wellseeing formes,
Feather of lead, bright smoake, cold fire, sicke health,
Still waking sleepe, that is not what it is.
This loue feele I, that feele no loue in this.
Doest thou not laugh?

Ben. No Coze, I rather weepe.

Rom. Good heart, at what?

Ben. At thy good hearts oppression.

Rom. Why such is loues transgression.
Griefes of mine owne lie heauie in my breast,
Which thou wilt propagate to haue it prest
With more of thine, this loue that thou hast shown,
Doth adde more griefe, to too much of mine owne.
Loue, is a smoake made with the fume of sighes,
Being purg'd, a fire sparkling in Louers eyes,
Being vext, a Sea nourisht with louing teares.
What is it else? a madnesse, most discreet,
A choking gall, and a preserving sweet:
Farewell my Coze.

Ben. Soft I will goe along,
And if you leaue me so, you do me wrong.

Rom. Tut I haue lost my selfe, I am not here,
This is not Romeo, hee's some other where.

Ben. Tell me in sadnesse, who is that you loue?

Rom. What shall I groane and tell thee?

Ben. Groane, why no: but sadly tell me who.

Rom. A sicke man in sadnesse makes his will:
A word ill vrg'd to one that is so ill:
In sadnesse Cozin, I do loue a woman.

Ben. I aym'd so neare, when I suppos'd you lou'd.

Rom. A right good marke man, and shoe's faire I loue

Ben. A right faire marke, faire Coze, is soonest hit.

Rom. Well in that hit you misse, shee will not be hit
With Cupids arrow, she hath Dianas wit:
And in strong proofe of chastity well armd
From loues weake childish Bow, she lives vncharm'd.
Shee will not stay the siege of loueing termes,
Nor bide th'incounter of assailing eyes.
Nor open her lap to Saint-seducing Gold:
O she is rich in beautie, only poore,
That when she dies, with beautie dies her store.

Ben. Then she hath sworne, that she will still liue chast?

Rom. She hath, and in that sparing make huge wast?
For beauty starue'd with her seuerity,
Cuts beauty off from all posteritie.

She is too faire, too wifeul: fely too faire.
To merie blisse by making me dispaire:
She hath forsworne to loue, and in that vow
Do I liue dead, that liue to tell it now.
Ben. Be rul'd by me, forget to think of her.
Rom. O teach me how I should forget to thinke.
Ben. By giuing liberty vnto thine eyes,
Examine other beauties.
Ro. Tis the way to call hers (exquisite) in question more,
These happy masks that kiffe faire Ladies browes,
Being blacke, puts vs in mind they hide the faire:
He that is strooken blind, cannot forget
The precious treasure of his eye-sight lost:
Shew me a Mistresse that is passing faire,
What doth her beauty serue but as a note,
Where I may read who past that passing faire.
Farewell thou canst not teach me to forget,
Ben. Ile pay that doctrine, or else die in debt. Exeunt

Enter Capulet, Countie Paris, and the Clowne.

Capu. Montague is bound as well as I,
In penalty alike, and tis not hard I thinke,
For men so old as wee, to keepe the peace.
Par. Of Honourable reckoning are you both,
And pittie tis you liu'd at odds so long:
But now my Lord, what say you to my suit?
Capu. But saying ore what I haue said before,
My Child is yet a stranger in the world,
Shee hath not seene the change of fourteene yeares,
Let two more Summers wither in their pride
Ere we may thinke her ripe to be a Bride.
Par. Younger then she, are happy mothers made.
Capu. And too soone mar'd are those so early made:
Earth hath swallowed all my hopes but she,
Shee's the hopefull Lady of my earth:
But woo her gentle Paris, get her heart,
My will to her consent, is but a part.
And she agree, within her scope of choise,
Lyes my consent, and faire according voice:
This night I hold an old accustom'd Feast,
Whereto I haue inuited many a Guest,
Such as I loue, and you among the store,
One more most welcome makes my number more.
At my poore house, looke to behold this night,
Earth-treading Starres, that make darke heauen light,
Such comfort as do lusty young men feele,
When well apparrel'd April on the heele
Of limping Winter treads, euen such delight
Among fresh Fennell buds shall you this night
Inherit at my house: heare all, all see:
And like her most, whose merit most shall be:
Which one more view, of many, mine being one,
May stand in number, though in reckoning none.
Come, goe with me: goe sirrah trudge about,
Through faire Verona, find those persons out,
Whose names are written there, and to them say,
My house and welcome, on their pleasure stay. Exit.
Ser. Find them out whose names are written. Heere it is written, that the Shoo-maker should meddle with his Yard, and the Tayler with his Last, the Fisher with his Pentill, and the Painter with his Nets. But I am sent to find those persons whose names are writ, & can neuer find what names the writing person hath here writ (I must to the learned) in good time.

Enter Benuolio, and Romeo.

Ben. Tut man, one fire burnes out anothers burning,
One paine is lessed by anothers anguish:
Turne giddie, and be helpe by backward turning:
One desperate griefe, cure with another languish:
Take thou some new infection to the eye,
And the rank poyson of the old will die.
Rom. Your Plantan leafe is excellent for that
Ben. For what I pray thee?
Rom. For your broken shin.
Ben. Why Romeo art thou mad?
Rom. Not mad, but bound more then a mad man is:
Shut vp in prison, kept without my foode,
Whipt and tormented: and Godden good fellow,
Ser. God gigoden, I pray sir can you read?
Rom. I mee owne fortune in my miserie.
Ser. Perhaps you haue learn'd it without booke:
But I pray can you read any thing you see
Rom. I, if I know the Letters and the Language.
Ser. Ye say honestly, rest you merry.
Rom. Stay fellow, I can read.

He reades the Letter.

Signeur Martino, and his wife and daughter: County Anselmo and his beauteous sisters: the Lady widdow of Vtruuio, Signeur Placentio, and his louely Neeces Mercutio and his brother Valentine: mine vncle Capulet his wife and daughters: my faire Niece Rosaline, Loueta, Signeur Valtemio, and his Cousin Tybalt: Lucio and the lously Helena.
A faire assembly, whither should they come?
Ser. Vp.
Rom. Whither? to supper?
Ser. To our house.
Rom. Whose house?
Ser. My Maisters.
Rom. Indeed I should haue asku you that before.
Ser. Now I le tell you without asking. My maister is the great rich Capulet, and if you be not of the house of Montagues I pray come and crush a cup of wine. Rest you merry. Exit.
Ben. At this same ancient Feast of Capulets
Sups the faire Rosaline, whom thou so loues:
With all the admired Beauties of Verona,
Go thither and with vnattainted eye,
Compare her face with some that I shall show,
And I will make thee thinke thy Swan a Crow.
Rom. When the deuout religion of mine eye
Maintaines such falshood, then turne teares to fire:
And these who often drown'd could neuer die,
Transparent Heretiques be burnt for liers.
One faiter then my loue the all-seeing Sun
Nere saw her match, since first the world begun.
Ben. Tut, you saw her faire, none else being by,
Herselfe poys'd with herselfe in either eye:
But in that Christall Scales, let there be weid,
Your Ladies loue against some other Maid
That I will show you, shining at this Feast,
And she shew scant well, well, that now shewes best.
Rom. Ile goe along, no such sight to be showne,
But to reioyce in splendor of mine owne.

Enter Capulet, Wife and Nurse.

Wife Nurse wher's my daughter? call her forth to me.
Nurse. Now by my Maidenhead, at twelue yeare old I bad her come, what Lamb: what Lob-bird, God forbid, Where's this Girle? what Iuliet?

Enter Iuliet.

Iuliet. How now, who calls?
Nur. Your Mother.
Iuliet. Madam I am heere, what is your will?
Wife. This is the matter: Nurse giue leaue awhile, we must talke in secret. Nurse come backe againe, I haue remembred me, thou'se heare our counsell. Thou knowest my daughter's of a pretty age.

Nurse. Faith I can tell her age vnto an houre.

Wife. Shee's not fourteene.

Nurse. Ile lay fourteene of my teeth,
And yet to my teene be it spoken,
I haue but foure, shee's not fourteene.
How long is it now to Lammas tide?

Wife. A fortnight and odde dayes.

Nurse. Euen or odde, of all daies in the yeare come Lammas Eue at night shall she be fourteene. Susan & she, God rest all Christian soules, were of an age. Well Susan is with God, she was too good for me. But as I said, on Lammas Eue at night shall she be fourteene, that shall she marie, I remember it well. 'Tis since the Earth-quake now eleuen yeares, and she was wean'd I never shall forget it, of all the daies of the yeare, vpon that day: for I had then laid Worme-wood to my Dug sitting in the Sunne vnder the Douehouse wall, my Lord and you were then at Mantua, nay I doe beare a braine. But as I said, when it did tast the Worme-wood on the nipple of my Dugge, and felt it bitter, pretty foole, to see it teachie, and fall out with the Dugge, Shake quoth the Doue-house, 'twas no neede I trow to bid mee trudge: and since that time it is eleuen yeares, for then she could stand alone, nay bi'th' roode she could haue runne & wadled all about: for euen the day before she broke her brow, & then my Husband God be with his soule, a was a merrie man, tooke vp the Child, yes quoth hee, doest thou fall vpon thy face? thou wilt fall backeward when thou hast more wit, wilt thou not Iule? And by my holy-dam, the pretty wretch left crying, & said I: to see now how a iest shall come about. I warrant, & I shall liue a thousand yeares, I never should forget it: wilt thou not Iulet quoth he, and pretty foole it stinted, and said I.

Old La. Inough of this, I pray thee hold thy peace.

Nurse. Yes Madam, yet I cannot chuse but laugh, to thinke it should leaue crying, & say I: and yet I warrant it had vpon it brow, a bumpe as big as a young Cockrels stone? A perilous knock, and it cryed bitterly. Yes quoth my husband, fall'st vpon thy face, thou wilt fall backward when thou commest to age: wilt thou not Iule? It stinted, and said I.

Iule. And stint thou too, I pray thee Nurse, say I.

Nur. Peace I haue done: God marke thee too his grace thou wast the prettiest Babe that ere I nurst, and I might liue to see thee married once, I haue my wish.

Old La. Marry that marry is the very theame
I came to talke of, tell me daughter Iulet,
How stands your disposition to be Married?

Iuli. It is an honor that I dreame not of.

Nur. An honor, were not I thine onely Nurse, I would say thou had'st suckt wisedome from thy teat.

Old La. Well think of marriage now, younger then you
Heere in Verona, Ladies of esteeme,
Are made already Mothers. By my count
I was your Mother, much vpon these yeares
That you are now a Maide, thus then in briefe:
The valiant Paris seekes you for his loue.

Nurse. A man young Lady, Lady, such a man as all the world. Why hee's a man of waxe.

Old La. Verona Summer hath not such a flower.

Nurse. Nay hee's a flower, in faith a very flower.

Old La: What say you, can you loue the Gentlemen? This night you shall behold him at our Feast,
Read ore the volume of young Paris face,
And find delight, writ there with Beauties pen:
Examine every seuerall lineament,
And see how one another lends content:
And what obscur'd in this faire volume lies,
Find written in the Margent of his eyes.
This precious Booke of Loue, this vnbound Lover,
To Beautifie him, onely lacks a Cover.
The fish liues in the Sea, and 'tis much pride
For faire without, the faire within to hide:
That Booke in manies eyes doth share the glorie,
That in Gold claspes, Lockes in the Golden storie:
So shall you share all that he doth possesse,
By casting him, making your selfe no lesse.

Nurse. No lesse, nay bigger: women grow by men.

Old La. Speake briefly, can you like of Paris loue?

Iuli. Ile looke to like, if looking liking moue.
But no more deepe will I endart mine eye,
Then your consent gives strength to make flye.

Enter a Seruing man.

Ser. Madam, the guests are come, supper serv'd vp, you cal'd, my young Lady asks for, the Nurse curst in the Pantery, and every thing in extremitie: I must hence to wait, I beseech you follow straight. Exit.

Ma. We follow thee, Iulet, the Countie staies.

Nurse. Goe Gyrle, seeke happie nights to happy dies. Exeunt.

Enter Romeo, Mercutio, Benuolio, with fiue or foure other Maskers, Torch-bearers.

Rom. What shall this speech be spoke for our excuse
Or shall we on without Apologie?

Ben. The date is out of such prolixitie,
Weele haue no Cupid, hood winkt with a starre,
Bearing a Tartars painted Bow of lath,
Skaring the Ladies like a Crow-keeper.
But let them measure vs by what they will,
Weele measure them a Measure, and be gone.

Rom. Giue me a Torch, I am not for this ambling,
Being but heavy I will beare the light.

Mer. Nay gentle Romeo, we must haue you dance.

Rom. Not I, believe me, you haue dancing shoes
With nimble soles, I haue a soale of Lead
So flakes me to the ground, I cannot moue.

Mer. You are a Lover, borrow Cupids wings,
And soare with them above a common bound.

Rom. I am too sore enpierced with his shaft,
To soare with his light feathers, and to bound:
I cannot bound a pitch above dull woe,
Vnder loues heavy burthen doe I sinke.

Hora. And to sinke in it should you burthen loue,
Too great oppression for a tender thing.

Rom. Is loue a tender thing? it is too rough,
Too rude, too boysterous, and it pricks like thorne.

Mer. If loue be rough with you, be rough with loue,
Prickle loue for pricking, and you beat loue downe,
Giue me a Case to put my visage in,
A Visor for a Visor, what care I
What curious eye doth quote deformities:
Here are the Beetle-browes shall blush for me.

Ben. Come knocke and enter, and no sooner in,
But every man betake him to his legs.

Rom. A Torch for me, let wantons light of heart
Tickle the senseless rushes with their heeles:
For I am proueb'd with a Grandsire Phrase,
Ile be a Candle-holder and looke on,
The game was ore so faire, and I am done.

Mer. Tut,

Mer. Tut, dans the Mouse, the Constables owne word,
If thou art dun, we'le draw thee from the mire.
Or save your reuerence loue, wherein thou stickest
Vp to the eares, come we burne day-light ho.
Rom. Nay that's not so.
Mer. I meane sir I delay,
We waste our lights in vaine, lights, lights, by day:
Take our good meaning, for our Iudgement sits
Five times in that, ere once in our five wits.
Rom. And we meane well in going to this Masque,
But 'tis no wit to go.
Mer. Why may one aske?
Rom. I dreampt a dreame to night
Mer. And so did I.
Rom. Well what was yours?
Mer. That dreamers often lye.
Ro. In bed a sleepe while they do dreame things true.
Mer. O then I see Queene Mab hath beene with you:
She is the Fairies Midwife, & she comes in shape no bigger then Agat-stone, on the fore-finger of an Aldermen, drawne with a teeme of little Atomies, ouer mens noses as they lie sleepe: her Wagon Spokes made of long Spinners legs: the Coner of the wings of Grasshoppers, her Traces of the smallest Spiders web, her coullers of the Moonshines watry Beames, her Whip of Crickets bone, the Lash of Philome, her Waggoner, a small grey-coated Gnat, not halfe so bigge as a round little Worme, pricht from the Lazie-finger of a man. Her Chariot is an empty Hasleut, made by the Ioyner Squirrel or old Grub, time out a mind, the Fairies Coach-makers: & in this state she gallops night by night, through Louers braines: and then they dreame of Loue. On Courtiers knees, that dreame on Cursies strait: ore Lawyers fingers, who strait dreame on Fees, ore Ladies lips, who strait on kisses dreame, which oft the angry Mab with blisters plagues, because their breath with Sweet meats tainted are. Sometime she gallops ore a Courtiers nose, & then dreames he of smelling out a suse: & sometime comes she with Tith pigs tale, tickling a Parsons nose as a lies asleepe, then he dreames of a another Benefice. Sometime she driueth ore a Souldiers neche, & then dreames he of cutting Forraine throats, of Breaches, Ambuscadoes, Spanish Blades: Of Healths five Fadome deepe, and then anon drums in his eares, at which he starres and wakes; and being thus frighted, sweares a prayer or two & sleepes again: this is that very Mab that plats the manes of Horses in the night: & bakes the Elk-locks in foule sluttish haires, which once vntangled, much misfortune bodes,
This is the hag, when Maides lie on their backs,
That presses them, and learnes them first to beare,
Making them women of good carriage:
This is she.
Rom. Peace, peace, Mercutio peace,
Thou talk'st of nothing.
Mer. True, I talke of dreames:
Which are the children of an idle braine,
Begot of nothing, but vaine phantasie,
Which is as thin of substance as the ayre,
And more inconstant then the wind, who woon
Even now the frozen bosome of the North:
And being anger'd, puffes away from thence,
Turning his side to the dew dropping South.
Ben. This wind you talke of blowes vs from our selues,
Supper is done, and we shall come too late.
Rom. I feare too early, for my mind misgiues,
Some consequence yet hanging in the starres,
Shall bitterly begin his fearefull date
With this nights rouels, and expire the terme
Of a despised life clos'd in my breft:
By some vile forfeit of vntimely death.
But he that hath the steerage of my course,
Direct my sute: on lustie Gentlemen.
Ben. Strike Drum.
They march about the Stage, and Seruingmen come forth with their napkins.
Enter Seruant.
Ser. Where's Potpan, that he helpes not to take away? He shift a Trencher? he scrape a Trencher?
1. When good manners, shall lie in one or two mens hands, and they vnwashe too, 'tis a foule thing.
Ser. Away with the Ioynstooles, remoue the Court-cubbord, looke to the Plate: good thou, saue me a peece of Marchpane, and as thou loueest me, let the Porters let in Sirsan Gresstone and Nell, Anthony and Potpan.
2. I Boy readie.
Ser. You are looke for, and cal'd for, aske for, & sought for, in the great Chamber.
1. We cannot be here and there too, cheerly Boyes,
Be brisk a while, and the longer liuer take all.
Exeunt.
Enter all the Guests and Gentlewomen to the Masquers.
1. Cap. Welcome Gentlemen,
Ladies that haue their toes
Vnplagu'd with Corns, will waste about with you:
Ah my Mistresses, which of you all
Will now deny to dance? She that makes dainty,
She I'le sweare hath Corns: am I come neare ye now?
Welcome Gentlemen, I haue seene the day
That I haue worne a Visor, and could tell
A whispering tale in a faire Ladies eare:
Such as would please: 'tis gone, 'tis gone, 'tis gone,
You are welcome Gentlemen, come Musicians play:
Musicke plays: and the dance.
A Hall, Hall, giue roome, and foote it Girles,
More light you knaues, and turne the Tables vp:
And quench the fire, the Roome is growne too hot.
Ah sirrah, this vnlooke for sport comes well:
Nay sit, nay sit, good Cozin Capulet,
For you and I are past our dancing dayes:
How long 'st now since last your selfe and I
Were in a Masque?
2. Cap. Berlady thirty yeares.
1. Cap. What man: 'tis not so much, 'tis not so much,
'Tis since the Nuptiall of Lucentio,
Come Pentecost as quickly as it will,
Some five and twenty yeares, and then we Maskt.
2. Cap. 'Tis more, 'tis more, his Sonne is elder sir:
His Sonne is thirty.
3. Cap. Will you tell me that?
His Sonne was but a Ward two yeares agoe.
Rom. What Ladie is that which doth inrich the hand
Of yonder Knight?
Ser. I know not sir.
Rom. O she doth teach the Torches to burne bright:
It seemes she hangs vpon the cheeke of night,
As a rich Iewel in an Æthiops eare:
Beauty too rich for vse, for earth too deare:
So shewes a Snowy Doue trooping with Crowes,
As yonder Lady ore her fellowes showes:
The measure done, I'le watch her place of stand,
And touching her, make blessed my rude hand.

Did

Did my heart loue till now, forſweare it ſight,
For I neuer ſaw true Beauty till this night.
Tib. This by his voice, ſhould be a Montague.
Fetch me my Rapier Boy, what dares the ſlaue
Come hither couer'd with an antique face,
To fleere and ſcorne at our Solemnitie?
Now by the ſtocke and Honour of my kin,
To ſtrike him dead I hold it not a ſin.
Cap. Why how now kinſman,
Wherefore ſtorme you ſo?
Tib. Vncle this is a Montague, our foe:
A Villaine that is hither come in ſpight,
To ſcorne at our Solemnitie this night.
Cap. Young Romeo is it?
Tib. 'Tis he, that Villaine Romeo.
Cap. Content thee gentle Coz, let him alone,
A beares him like a portly Gentleman:
And to ſay truth, Verona brags of him,
To be a vertuous and well gouern'd youth:
I would not for the wealth of all the towne,
Here in my houſe do him diſparagement:
Therfore be patient, take no note of him,
It is my will, the which if thou reſpect,
Shew a faire preſence, and put off theſe frowns,
An ill beſeeming ſemblance for a Feaſt.
Tib. It fits when ſuch a Villaine is a geeſt,
Ile not endure him.
Cap. He ſhall be endu'rd.
What goodman boy, I ſay he ſhall, go too,
Am I the Maiſter here or you? go too,
Youle not endure him, God ſhall mend my ſoule,
Youle make a Mutinie among the Geeſts:
You will ſet cocke a hoope, youle be the man.
Tib. Why Vncle, 'tis a ſhame.
Cap. Go too, go too,
You are a ſawcy Boy, 'tit ſo indeed?
This tricke may chance to ſcath you, I know what,
You maſt contrary me, marry 'tis time.
Well ſaid my hearts, you are a Princox, goe,
Be quiet, or more light, more light for ſhame,
Ile make you quiet. What, cheerely my hearts.
Tib. Patience perforce, with wilfull choler meeting,
Makes my fleſh tremble in their different greeting:
I will withdraw, but this intruſion ſhall
Now ſeeming ſweet, conuert to bitter gall. Exit.
Rom. If I prophane with my vnworthieſt hand,
This holy ſhrine, the gentle ſin is this,
My lips to bluſhing Pilgrims did ready ſtand,
To ſmooth that rough touch, with a tender kiſſe.
Iul. Good Pilgrime,
You do wrong your hand too much,
Which mannerly deuotion ſhewes in this,
For Saints haue hands, that Pilgrims hands do touch,
And palme to palme, is holy Palmers kiſſe.
Rom. Haue not Saints lips, and holy Palmers too?
Iul. I Pilgrim, lips that they maſt vſe in prayer.
Rom. O then deare Saint, let lips do what hands do,
They pray (grant thou) leaſt faith turne to diſpaire.
Iul. Saints do not moue,
Though grant for prayers ſake.
Rom. Then moue not while my prayers effect I take
Thus from my lips, by thine my ſin is purg'd.
Iul. Then haue my lips the ſin that they haue tooken.
Rom. Sin from my lips? O treſpaſſe ſweetly vrg'd:
Give me my ſin againe.
Iul. You kiſſe by th'booke.
Nur. Madam your Mother craues a word with you.
Rom. What is her Mother?
Nurſ. Marrie Bacchelar,
Her Mother is the Lady of the houſe,
And a good Lady, and a wiſe, and Vertuous,
I Nur'd her Daughter that you talkt withall:
I tell you, he that can lay hold of her,
Shall haue the chincks.
Rom. Is ſhe a Capulet?
O deare account! My life is my foes debt.
Ben. Away, be gone, the ſport is at the beſt.
Rom. I ſo I feare, the more is my vnreſt.
Cap. Nay Gentlemen prepare not to be gone,
We haue a trifling foolith Banquet towards:
Is it t'ne ſo? why then I thanke you all.
I thanke you honeſt Gentlemen, good night:
More Torches here: come on, then let's to bed.
Ah ſirrah, by my fake it waxes late,
Ile to my reſt.
Iuli. Come hither Nurſe,
What is yond Gentleman:
Nur. The Sonne and Heire of old Tyberio.
Iuli. What's he that now is going out of doores?
Nur. Marrie that I thinke be young Petrucio.
Iul. What's he that follows here that would not dance?
Nur. I know not.
Iul. Go aske his name: if he be married,
My grave is like to be my wedded bed.
Nur. His name is Romeo, and a Montague,
The onely Sonne of your great Enemie.
Iul. My onely Loue ſprung from my onely hate,
Too early ſeene, vnknowne, and knowne too late,
Prodigious birth of Loue it is to me,
That I maſt loue a loathed Enemie.
Nur. What's this? whats this?
Iul. A rime, I learne euen now
Of one I dan'ſt withball.

One calls within, Iuliet.

Nur. Anon, anon:
Come let's away, the ſtrangers all are gone.

Exeunt.

Chorus.

Now old deſire doth in his death bed lie,
And yong affection gapes to be his Heire,
That faire, for which Loue gron'd for and would die,
With tender Iuliet matcht, is now not faire.
Now Romeo is beloued, and Loues againe,
Alike bewitched by the charme of looke:
But to his foe ſuppo'd he maſt complaine,
And ſhe ſteale Loues ſweet bait from fearefull hooke:
Being held a foe, he may not haue acceſſe
To breath ſuch vowes as Lovers vſe to ſweare,
And ſhe as much in Loue, her means much leſſe,
To meete her new Beloued any where:
But paſſion lends them Power, time, means to meete,
Temp'ring extremities with extreame ſweete.

Enter Romeo alone.

Rom. Can I goe forward when my heart is here?
Turne backe dull earth, and find thy Center out.

Enter Benvolio, with Mercutio.

Ben. Romeo, my Cousin Romeo, Romeo.
Mercu. He is wiſe,
And on my life hath ſtolne him home to bed.
Ben. He ran this way and leapt this Orchard wall.
Call good Mercutio:
Nay, Ile coniure too.

Mer. Romeo, Humours, Madmen, Passion, Louer,
Appeare thou in the likenesse of a sigh,
Speake but one rime, and I am satisfied:
Cry me but ay me, Pronounce, but Loue and day,
Speake to my gossip Venus one faire word,
One Nickname for her purblind Sonne and boy,
Young Abraham Cupid he that shot so true,
When King Cophetua lou'd the begger Maid,
He heareth not, he stirreth not, he moueth at,
The Ape is dead, I must conture him,
I conture thee by Rosalines bright eyes,
By her High forehead, and her Scarlet lip,
By her Fine foote, Straight leg, and Quiuering thigh,
And the Demeanes, that there Adiacent lie,
That in thy likenesse thou appeare to vs.
Ben. And if he heare thee thou wilt anger him.
Mer. This cannot anger him, t'would anger him
To raise a spirit in his Mistresse circle,
Of some strange nature, letting it stand
Till she had laid it, and conjured it downe,
That were some spight.
My inuocation is faire and honest, & in his Mistris name,
I conture onely but to raise vp him.
Ben. Come, he hath hid himselfe among these Trees
To be conforted with the Humerous night:
Blind is his Loue, and best befits the darke.
Mer. If Loue be blind, Loue cannot hit the marke,
Now will he sit vnder a Medler tree,
And wish his Mistresse were that kind of Pruice,
As Maides call Medlers when they laugh alone,
O Romeo that she were, O that she were
An open, or thou a Poprin Peare,
Romeo goodnight, Ile to my Truckle bed,
This Field-bed is too cold for me to sleepe,
Come shall we go?
Ben. Go then, for 'tis in vaine to seeke him here
That meanes not to be found. Exeunt.
Rom. He iests at Scarres that never felt a wound,
But soft, what light through yonder window breaks?
It is the East, and Iuliet is the Sunne.
Arise faire Sun and kill the enuious Moone,
Who is already sicke and pale with griefe,
That thou her Maid art far more faire then she:
Be not her Maid since she is enuious,
Her Vestal liuery is but sicke and greene,
And none but fooles do weare it, cast it off:
It is my Lady, O it is my Loue, O that she knew she were,
She speakes, yet she sayes nothing, what of that?
Her eye discourses, I will answere it:
I am too bold 'tis not to me she speakes:
Two of the fairest starres in all the Heauen,
Hauing some businesse do entreat her eyes,
To twinckle in their Spheres till they returne.
What if her eyes were there, they in her head,
The brightnesse of her cheeke would shame those starres,
As day-light doth a Lampe, her eye in heauen,
Would through the ayre Region streame so bright,
That Birds would sing, and thinke it were not night:
See how she leanes her cheeke vpon her hand.
O that I were a Glouе vpon that hand,
That I might touch that cheeke.
Iul. Ay me.
Rom. She speakes.
Oh speake again bright Angell, for thou art
As glorious to this night being ouer my head,
As is a winged messenger of heauen
Vnto the white vpturned wondring eyes
Of mortalls that fall backe to gaze on him,
When he bestrides the lazie pacing Clouds,
And sailes vpon the bosome of the ayre.
Iul. O Romeo, Romeo, wherefore art thou Romeo?
Denie thy Father and refuse thy name:
Or if thou wilt not, be but sworne my Loue,
And I'le no longer be a Capulet.
Rom. Shall I heare more, or shall I speake at this?
Iu. 'Tis but thy name that is my Enemy:
Thou art thy selfe, though not a Mountague.
What's Mountague? it is not hand nor foote,
Nor arme, nor face, O be some other name
Belonging to a man.
What? in a names that which we call a Rose,
By any other word would smell as sweete,
So Romeo would, were he not Romeo cal'd,
Retaine that deare perfection which he owes,
Without that title Romeo, doffe thy name,
And for thy name which is no part of thee,
Take all my selfe.
Rom. I take thee at thy word:
Call me but Loue, and I'le be new baptis'd,
Henceforth I never will be Romeo.
Iuli. What man art thou, that thus bescreen'd in night
So stumblest on my counsell?
Rom. By a name,
I know not how to tell thee who I am:
My name deare Saint, is hatefull to my selfe,
Because it is an Enemy to thee,
Had I it written, I would teare the word.
Iuli. My eares haue yet not drunke a hundred words
Of thy tongues vttering, yet I know the sound.
Art thou not Romeo, and a Mountague?
Rom. Neither faire Maid, if either thee dislike.
Iul. How cam'st thou hither,
Tell me, and wherefore?
The Orchard walls are high, and hard to climbe,
And the place death, considering who thou art,
If any of my kinsmen find thee here.
Rom. With Loues light wings
Did I ore-perch these Walls,
For stony limits cannot hold Loue out,
And what Loue can do, that dares Loue attempt:
Therefore thy kinsmen are no stop to me.
Iul. If they do see thee, they will murther thee.
Rom. Alas the eyes lies more peril in thine eye,
Then twenty of their Swords, looke thou but sweete,
And I am proofe against their enmity.
Iul. I would not for the world they saw thee here.
Rom. I haue nights cloake to hide me from their eyes
And but thou loue me, let them finde me here,
My life were better ended by their hate,
Then death prorogued wanting of thy Loue.
Iul. By whose direction found'st thou out this place?
Rom. By Loue that first did prompt me to enquire,
He lent me counsell, and I lent him eyes,
I am no Pylot, yet were thou as far
As that vast-shore-washet with the farthest Sea,
I should aduenture for such Merchandise.
Iul. Thou knowest the maske of night is on my face,
Else would a Maiden blush bepaint my cheeke,
For that which thou hast heard me speake to night,
Faine would I dwell on forme, faine, faine, denie
What I haue spoke, but farewell Complement,
Doest thou Loue? I know thou wilt say I,

And

And I will take thy word, yet it thou swest't,
Thou maiest prouе false: at Louers periuries
They say Iouе laughe, oh gentle Romeo,
If thou doſt Loue, pronounce it faithfully:
Or if thou thinkeſt I am too quickly wooue,
Ile frowne and be peruerſe, and ſay thee nay,
So thou wilt wooe: But elſe not for the world.
In truth faire Montague I am too fond:
And therefore thou maieſt thinke my behauiour light,
But truſt me Gentleman, Ile prouе more true,
Then thoſe that haue coying to be ſtrange,
I ſhould haue beene more ſtrange, I muſt confeſſe,
But that thou coet heard'ſt ere I was ware
My true Loues paſſion, therefore pardon me,
And not impute this yeelding to light Loue,
Which the darke night hath ſo diſcouered.
Rom. Lady, by yonder Moone I vow,
That tips with ſiluer all theſe Fruite tree tops.
Iul. O ſweare not by the Moone, th'inconſtant Moone,
That monethly changes in her circled Orbe,
Leaſt that thy Loue prouе likewiſe variable.
Rom. What ſhall I ſweare by?
Iul. Do not ſweare at all:
Or if thou wilt ſweare by thy gratious ſelfe,
Which is the God of my Idolatry,
And Ile beleeue thee.
Rom. If my hearts deare loue.
Iul. Well do not ſweare, although I ioy in thee:
I haue no ioy of this contract to night,
It is too raſh, too vnaduiſ'd, too ſudden,
Too like the lightning which doth ceaſe to be
Ere, one can ſay, it lightens, Sweete good night:
This bud of Loue by Summers ripening breath,
May prouе a beautious Flower when next we meete:
Goodnight, goodnight, as ſweete repoſe and reſt,
Come to thy heart, as that within my breſt.
Rom. O wilt thou leaue me ſo vnſatisfied?
Iul. What ſatiſfaction can'ſt thou haue to night?
Ro. Th'exchange of thy Loues faithfull vow for mine.
Iul. I gaue thee mine before thou did'ſt requeſt it:
And yet I would it were to giue againe.
Rom. Would'ſt thou withdraw it,
For what purpoſe Loue?
Iul. But to be franke and giue it thee again,
And yet I wiſh but for the thing I haue,
My bounty is as boundleſſe as the Sea,
My Loue as deepe, the more I giue to thee
The more I haue, for both are Infinite.
I heare ſome noyſe within deare Loue adue:

Cals within.

Anon good Nurſe, ſweet Montague be true:
Stay but a little, I will come againe.
Rom. O bleſſed bleſſed night, I am afear'd
Being in night, all this is but a dreame,
Too flattering ſweet to be ſubſtantiall.
Iul. Three words deare Romeo,
And goodnight indeed.
If that thy bent of Loue be Honourable,
Thy purpoſe marriage, ſend me word to morrow,
By one that Ile procure to come to thee,
Where and what time thou wilt performe the right,
And all my Fortunes at thy foote Ile lay,
And follow thee my Lord throughout the world.

within: Madam.

I come, anon: but if thou meaneſt not well,
I do beſeech thee within Madam.
(By and by I come)
To ceaſe thy ſtrife, and leaue me to my griefe,
To morrow will I ſend.
Rom. So thriue my ſoule.
Iu. A thouſand times goodnight. Ex.
Rom. A thouſand times the worſe to want thy light.
Loue goes toward Loue as ſchool-boyes frō their books
But Loue frō Loue, towards ſchoole with heauie looks.

Enter Iulian againe.

Iul. Hiſt Romeo hiſt: O for a Falkners voice,
To lure this Taſſell gentle backe againe,
Boodage is hoarſe, and may not ſpeake aloud,
Elſe would I teare the Cauе where Eccho lies,
And make her ayrie tongue more hoarſe, then
With repetition of my Romeo.
Rom. It is my ſoule that calls vpon my name.
How ſiluer ſweet, ſound Louers tongues by night,
Like ſofteſt Muſicke to attending eares.
Iul. Romeo.
Rom. My Neece.
Iul. What a clock to morrow
Shall I ſend to thee?
Rom. By the houre of nine.
Iul. I will not faile, 'tis twenty yeares till then,
I haue forgot why I did call thee backe.
Rom. Let me ſtand here till thou remember it.
Iul. I ſhall forget, to haue thee ſtill ſtand there,
Remembring how I Loue thy company.
Rom. And Ile ſtill ſtay, to haue thee ſtill forgot,
Forgetting any other home but this.
Iul. 'Tis almoſt morning, I would haue thee gone,
And yet no further then a wanton Bird,
That let's it hop a little from his hand,
Like a poore priſoner in his twiſted Gyues,
And with a ſilken thred plucks it backe againe,
So louing Iealous of his liberty.
Rom. I would I were thy Bird.
Iul. Sweet ſo would I,
Yet I ſhould kill thee with much cheriſhing:
Good night, good night.
Rom. Parting is ſuch ſweete ſorrow,
That I ſhall ſay goodnight, till it be morrow.
Iul. Sleepe dwell vpon thine eyes, peace in thy breſt.
Rom. Would I were ſleepe and peace ſo ſweet to reſt,
The gray ey'd morne ſmiles on the frowning night.
Checkring the Eaſterne Clouds with ſtreakes of light,
And darkneſſe fleckel'd like a drunkard reeles,
From forth dayes pathway, made by Titans wheeles:
Hence will I to my ghoſtly Fries cloſe Cell,
His helpe to craue, and my deare hap to tell. Ex.

Enter Friar alone with a basket.

Fri. The gray ey'd morne ſmiles on the frowning night
Checkring the Eaſterne Clouds with ſtreaks of light.
And fleckled darkneſſe like a drunkard reeles,
From forth dais path, and Titans burning wheeles:
Now ere the Sun aduance his burning eye,
The day to cheere, and nights danke dew to dry,
I muſt vpfill this Oſier Cage of ours,
With baleful weedes, and precious iuiced flowers,
The earth that's Natures mother, is her Tombe,
What is her burying grave that is her wombe.
And from her wombe children of diuers kind

We sucking on her naturall bosome find:
Many for many vertues excellent:
None but for some, and yet all different.
O mickle is the powerfull grace that lies
In Plants, Herbes, stones, and their true qualities:
For nought so vile, that on the earth doth liue,
But to the earth some speciall good doth giue.
Nor ought so good, but strain'd from that fair vse,
Reuolts from true birth, stumbling on abuse.
Vertue itselfe turnes vice being misapplied,
And vice sometime by action dignified.

Enter Romeo.

Within the infant rind of this weake flower,
Poyson hath residence, and medicine power:
For this being smelt, with that part cheares each part,
Being tasted slayes all sences with the heart.
Two such opposed Kings encampe them still,
In man as well as Herbes grace and rude will:
And where the worser is predominant,
Full soone the Canker death eates vp that Plant.

Rom. Good morrow Father.

Fri. Benedicite.
What early tongue so sweet saluteth me?
Young Sonne, it argues a distempered head,
So soone to bid goodmorrow to thy bed:
Care keepes his watch in every old mans eye,
And where Care lodges, sleepe will never lye:
But where vnbruised youth with vnstuft braine
Doth couch his limbs, there, golden sleepe doth reigne:
Therefore thy earlinesse doth me assure,
Thou art vpraus'd with some distemperature;
Or if not so, then here I hit it right,
Our Romeo hath not beene in bed to night.

Rom. That last is true, the sweeter rest was mine.

Fri. God pardon sin: wast thou with Rosaline?

Rom. With Rosaline, my ghostly Father? No,
I haue forgot that name, and that names woe.

Fri. That's my good Son, but where hast thou bin then?

Rom. Ile tell thee ere thou aske it me agen.
I haue beene feasting with mine enemie,
Where on a sudden one hath wounded me,
That's by me wounded: both our remedies
Within thy helpe and holy phisicke lies:
I bear no hatred, blessed man: for loe
My intercession likewise steads my foe.

Fri. Be plaine good Son, rest homely in thy shrift,
Riddling confession, finds but riddling shrift.

Rom. Then plainly know my hearts deare Loue is set
On the faire daughter of rich Capulet;
As mine on hers, so hers is set on mine;
And all combin'd, saue what thou must combine
By holy marriage: when and where, and how,
We met, we wooed, and made exchange of vow:
Ile tell thee as we passe, but this I pray,
That thou consent to marrie vs to day.

Fri. Holy S. Francis, what a change is heere?
Is Rosaline that thou dids't Loue so deere
So soone forsaken? young mens Loue then lies
Not truely in their hearts, but in their eyes.
Iesu Maria, what a deale of brine
Hath washt thy sallow cheeks for Rosaline?
How much salt water throwne away in wast,
To season Loue that of it doth not tast.
The Sun not yet thy sighes, from heaven cleares,
Thy old groanes yet ringing in my ancient eares:
Lo here vpon thy cheeke the staine doth sit,
Or an old teare that is not washt off yet.
If ere thou wast thy selfe, and these woes thine,
Thou and these woes, were all for Rosaline.
And art thou chang'd? pronounce this sentence then,
Women may fall, when there's no strength in men.

Rom. Thou chid'st me oft for loving Rosaline.

Fri. For doting, not for loving pupill mine.

Rom. And bad'st me bury Loue.

Fri. Not in a grave,
To lay one in, another out to haue.

Rom. I pray thee chide me not, her I Loue now
Doth grace for grace, and Loue for Loue allow:
The other did not so.

Fri. O she knew well,
Thy Loue did read by rote, that could not spell:
But come young waverer, come goe with me,
In one respect, Ile thy assistant be:
For this alliance may so happy prove,
To turne your houshould rancor to pure Loue.

Rom. O let vs hence, I stand on sudden haste.

Fri. Wisely and slow, they stumble that run fast.

Exeunt

Enter Benvolio and Mercutio.

Mer. Where the deuile should this Romeo be? came he not home to night?

Ben. Not to his Fathers, I spoke with his man.

Mer. Why that same pale hard-hearted wench, that Rosaline torments him so, that he will sure run mad.

Ben. Tibalt, the kinsman to old Capulet, hath sent a Letter to his Fathers house.

Mer. A challenge on my life.

Ben. Romeo will answere it.

Mer. Any man that can write, may answere a Letter.

Ben. Nay, he will answere the Letters Master how he dares, being dared.

Mer Alas poore Romeo, he is already dead stab'd with a white wenches blacke eye, runne through the eare with a Loue song, the very pinne of his heart, cleft with the blind Bowe-boyes but-shaft, and is he a man to encounter Tybalt?

Ben. Why what is Tibalt?

Mer. More then Prince of Cats. Oh hee's the Courageous Captaine of Complements: he fights as you sing prick-song, keeps time, distance, and proportion, he rests his minim, one, two, and the third in your bosom: the very butcher of a silk button a Dualist, a Dualist: a Gentleman of the very first house of the first and second cause: ah the immortall Passado the Punto reuerso, the Hay.

Ben. The what?

Mer. The Pox of such antique lisping affecting phantasies, these new tuners of accent: Iesu a very good blade, a very tall man, a very good whore. Why is not this a lamentable thing Grandsire, that we should be thus afflicted with these strange flies: these fashion Mongers, these pardon mee's, who stand so much on the new form, that they cannot sit at ease on the old bench. O their bones, their bones.

Enter Romeo.

Ben. Here comes Romeo, here comes Romeo.

Mer. Without his Roe, like a dryed Herring. O flesh, flesh, how art thou fishified? Now is he for the numbers that Petrarch flowed in: Laura to his Lady, was a kitchen wench, marrie she had a better Loue to berime her: Dido a dowdie, Cleopatra a Gipsie, Helen and Hero, hildings and Harlots: Thisbe a grey eie or so, but not to the purpose. Signior Romeo, Bon iour, there's a French salutation to your

French slop: you gaue vs the the counterfeit fairely last night.

Romeo. Good morrow to you both, what counterfeit did I give you?

Mer. The slip sir, the slip, can you not conceiue?

Rom. Pardon Mercutio, my business was great, and in such a case as mine, a man may straine curtesie.

Mer. That's as much as to say, such a case as yours constrains a man to bow in the hams.

Rom. Meaning to curtsie.

Mer. Thou hast most kindly hit it.

Rom. A most courteous exposition.

Mer. Nay, I am the very pinck of curtesie.

Rom. Pinke for flower.

Mer. Right.

Rom. Why then is my Pump well flowr'd.

Mer. Sure wit, follow me this least, now till thou hast worne out thy Pump, that when the single sole of it is worne, the least may remaine after the wearing, sole-singular.

Rom. O single sol'd least,
Soly singular for the singlenesse.

Mer. Come betweene vs good Benuolio, my wits faints.

Rom. Swits and spurs,
Swits and spurs, or I'le crie a match.

Mer. Nay, if our wits run the Wild-Goose chase, I am done: For thou hast more of the Wild-Goose in one of thy wits, then I am sure I haue in my whole five. Was I with you there for the Goose?

Rom. Thou wast neuer with mee for any thing, when thou wast not there for the Goose.

Mer. I will bite thee by the eare for that iest.

Rom. Nay, good Goose bite not.

Mer. Thy wit is a very Bitter-sweeting,
It is a most sharpe sawce.

Rom. And is it not well serv'd into a Sweet-Goose?

Mer. Oh here's a wit of Cheuerell, that stretches from an inch narrow, to an ell broad.

Rom. I stretch it out for that word, broad, which added to the Goose, proues thee farre and wide, a broad Goose.

Mer. Why is not this better now, then groaning for Loue, now art thou sociable, now art thou Romeo: now art thou what thou art by Art as well as by Nature, for this driueling Loue is like a great Naturall, that runs lolling vp and downe to hid his bable in a hole.

Ben. Stop there, stop there.

Mer. Thou desir'st me to stop in my tale against the hair.

Ben. Thou would'st else haue made thy tale large.

Mer. O thou art deceiu'd, I would haue made it short, or I was come to the whole depth of my tale, and meant indeed to occupie the argument no longer.

Enter Nurse and her man.

Rom. Here's goodly geare.
A sayle, a sayle.

Mer. Two, two a Shirt and a Smocke.

Nur. Peter?

Peter. Anon.

Nur. My Fan Peter?

Mer. Good Peter to hide her face?
For her Fans the fairer face?

Nur. God ye good morrow Gentlemen.

Mer God ye gooden faire Gentlewoman.

Nur. Is it gooden?

Mer. 'Tis no lesse I tell you: for the bawdy hand of the Dyall is now vpon the pricke of Noone.

Nur. Out vpon you: what a man are you?

Rom. One Gentlewoman,
That God hath made, himselfe to mar.

Nur. By my troth it is said, for himselfe to mar, quoth a Gentleman: can any of you tell me where I may find the young Romeo?

Romeo. I can tell you but young Romeo will be older when you haue found him, then he was when you sought him: I am the youngest of that name, for fault of a worse.

Nur. You say well.

Mer. Yes is the worst well,
Very well tooke: I faith, wisely, wisely.

Nur. If you be he sir,
I desire some confidence with you?

Ben. She will endite him to some Supper.

Mer. A bawd, a bawd, a bawd. So ho.

Rom. What hast thou found?

Mer. No Hare sir, vnlesse a Hare sir in a Lenten pie, that is something stale and hoare ere it be spent.
An old Hare hoare, and an old Hare hoare is very good meat in Lent.
But a Hare that is hoare is too much for a score, when hoares ere it be spent.

Romeo will you come to your Fathers? We'le to dinner thither.

Rom. I will follow you.

Mer. Farewell ancient Lady:
Farewell Lady, Lady, Lady.

Exit. Mercutio, Benuolio.

Nur. I pray you sir, what saucie Merchant was this that was so full of his roperie?

Rom. A Gentleman Nurse, that loues to heare himselfe talke, and will speake more in a minute, then he will stand to in a Moneth.

Nur. And a speake any thing against me, I'le take him downe, & a were lusher then he is, and twentie such Iakes, and if I cannot, I'le finde those that shall: scurvie knaue, I am none of his flirt-gils, I am none of his skaines-mates, and thou must stand by too and suffer every knaue to vse me at his pleasure.

Pet. I saw no man vse you at his pleasure: if I had my weapon should quickly haue beene out, I warrant you, I dare draw assoone as another man, if I see occasion in a good quarrell, and the law on my side.

Nur. Now afore God, I am so vext, that every part about me quiuers, skurvy knaue: pray you sir a word: and as I told you, my young Lady bid me enquire you out, what she bid me say, I will keepe to my selfe: but first let me tell ye, if ye should leade her in a fooles paradise, as they say, it were a very grosse kind of behaviour, as they come for the Gentlewoman is young: & therefore, if you should deale double with her, truely it were an ill thing to be offered to any Gentlewoman, and very weake dealing.

Nur. Nurse commend me to thy Lady and Mistrisse, I protest vnto thee.

Nur. Good heart, and yfaith I will tell her as much: Lord, Lord she will be a ioyfull woman.

Rom. What wilt thou tell her Nurse? thou dost not marke me?

Nur. I will tell her sir, that you do protest, which as I take it, is a Gentlemen-like offer.

Rom. Bid her deuise some meanes to come to shrift this Afternoone,
And there she shall at Friar Lawrence Cell
Be shriu'd and married: here is for thy paines.

Nur. No truly sir not a penny.

Rom. Go too, I say you shall.

Nur.

Nur. This afternoone sir? well she shall be there.
Ro. And stay thou good Nurse behind the Abbey wall,
Within this houre my man shall be with thee,
And bring thee Cords made like a tackled staire.
Which to the high top gallant of my ioy,
Must be my conuoy in the secret night.
Farewell, be trustie and Ile quite thy paines:
Farewell, commend me to thy Mistresse.
Nur. Now God in heauen blesse thee: harke you sir,
Rom. What saist thou my deare Nurse?
Nurse. Is your man secret, did you nere heare say two may keepe counsell putting one away.
Ro. Warrant thee my man as true as steele.
Nur. Well sir, my Mistresse is the sweetest Lady, Lord, Lord, when 'twas a little prating thing. O there is a Noble man in Towne, one Paris, that would faine lay knife aboard: but she good soule had as leeue a coe Toade, a very Toode as see him: I anger her sometimes, and tell her that Paris is the properer man, but Ile warrant you, when I say so, she looke as pale as any clout in the versall world. Doth not Rosemarie and Romeo begin both with a letter?
Rom. I Nurse, what of that? Both with an R
Nur. A mocker that's the dogsname R. is for the no, I know it begins with some other letter, and she hath the prettiest sentencious of it, of you and Rosemary, that it would do you good to heare it.
Rom. Commend me to thy Lady.
Nur. I a thousand times. Peter?
Pet. Anon.
Nur. Before and space. Exit Nurse and Peter.

Enter Iuliet.

Iul. The clocke strook nine, when I did send the Nurse,
In halfe an houre she promised to returne,
Perchance she cannot meete him: that's not so:
Oh she is lame, Loues Herauld should be thoughts,
Which ten times faster glides then the Sunnes beames,
Driving backe shadowes ouer lowring hils.
Therefore do nimble Pinion'd Doues draw Loue,
And therefore hath the wind-swift Cupid wings:
Now is the Sun vpon the highmost hill
Of this dates iourney, and from nine till twelue,
I three long houres, yet she is not come.
Had she affections and warme youthfull blood,
She would be as swift in motion as a ball,
My words would bandy her to my sweete Loue,
And his to me, but old folkes,
Many faine as they were dead,
Vnwieldie, slow, heauy, and pale as lead.

Enter Nurse.

O God she comes, O honey Nurse what newes?
Hast thou met with him? send thy man away.
Nur. Peter stay at the gate.
Iul. Now good sweet Nurse:
O Lord, why lookest thou sad?
Though newes, be sad, yet tell them merrily.
If good thou tham'st the musicke of sweet newes,
By playing it to me, with so sower a face.
Nur. I am a weary, give me leaue awhile,
Fie how my bones ake, what a iaunt haue I had?
Iul. I would thou had'st my bones, and I thy newes:
Nay come I pray thee speake, good good Nurse speake.
Nur. Iesu what haste? can you not stay a while?
Do you not see that I am out of breath?
Iul. How art thou out of breath, when thou hast breth
To say to me, that thou art out of breath?
The excuse that thou dost make in this delay,
Is longer then the tale thou dost excuse.
Is thy newes good or bad? answere to that,
Say either, and Ile stay the circumstance:
Let me be satisfied, if good or bad?
Nur. Well, you haue made a simple choice, you know not how to chose a man: Romeo, no not he though his face be better then any mans, yet his legs excels all mens, and for a hand, and a foote, and a body, though they be not to be talkt on, yet they are past compare: he is not the flower of curtesie, but Ile warrant him as gentle a Lambe go thy wayes wench, serue God. What haue you din'd at home?
Iul. No no. but all this this did I know before
What saies he of our marriage? what of that?
Nur. Lord how my head akes, what a head haue I?
It beates as it would fall in twenty peeces.
My backe a tother side: o my backe, my backe:
Beshrew your heart for sending me about
To catch my death with iaunting vp and downe.
Iul. Iseith: I am sorie that thou art so well.
Sweet sweet, sweet Nurse, tell me what saies my Loue?
Nur. Your Loue saies like an honest Gentleman,
And a courteous, and a kind, and a handsome,
And I warrant a vertuous: where is your Mother?
Iul. Where is my Mother?
Why she is within, where should she be?
How odly thou repli'st:
Your Loue saies like an honest Gentleman:
Where is your Mother?
Nur. O Gods Lady deare,
Are you so hot? marrie come vp I trow,
Is this the Poultis for my aking bones?
Henceforward do your messages your selfe.
Iul. Heere's such a coile, come what saies Romeo?
Nur. Haue you got leaue to go to shrift to day?
Iul. I haue.
Nur. Then hie you hence to Frier Laurence Cell,
There staies a Husband to make you a wife:
Now comes the wanton blood vp in your cheeks,
They'le be in Scarlet straight at any newes:
Hie you to Church, I must an other way,
To fetch a Ladder by the which your Loue
Must climbe a birds nest Soone when it is darke:
I am the drudge, and toile in your delight:
But you shall beare the burthen soone at night.
Go Ile to dinner hie you to the Cell.
Iul. Hie to high Fortune, honest Nurse, farewell. Exeunt.

Enter Frier and Romeo.

Fri. So smile the heauens vpon this holy act,
That after houres, with sorrow chide vs not.
Rom. Amen, amen, but come what sorrow can,
It cannot countersuile the exchange of ioy
That one short minute gives me in her sight:
Do thou but close our hands with holy words,
Then Loue-deuouring death do what he dare,
It is enough, I may but call her mine.
Fri. These violent delights haue violent ends,
And in their triumph: die like fire and powder;
Which as they kisse consume. The sweetest honey
Is loathsome in his owne delitiousnesse,
And in the taste confounds the appetite.
Therefore Loue moderately, long Loue doth so,
Too swift arriues as tardie as too slow.

Enter Iuliet.

Here comes the Lady. Oh so light a foot
Will nere weare out the everlasting flint,

A Louer may bestride the Gossamours,
That ydles in the wanton Summer ayre,
And yet not fall, so light is vanitie.

Iul. Good euen to my ghostly Confessor.

Fri. Romeo shall thanke thee Daughter for vs both.

Iul. As much to him, else in his thanks too much.

Fri. Ah Iuliet, if the measure of thy ioy
Be heape like mine, and that thy skill be more
To blason it, then sweeten with thy breath
This neighbour ayre, and let rich musicke tongue,
Vnfold the imagin'd happinesse that both
Receiue in either, by this deere encounter.

Iul. Conceit more rich in matter then in words,
Brags of his substance, not of Ornament:
They are but beggers that can count their worth,
But my true Loue is growne to such excesse,
I cannot sum vp some of halfe my wealth.

Fri. Come, come with me, & we will make short worke,
For by your leaues, you shall not stay alone,
Till holy Church incorporate two in one.

Enter Mercutio, Benuolio, and men.

Ben. I pray thee good Mercutio lets retire,
The day is hot, the Capulets abroad:
And if we meet, we shal not scape a brawle, for now these hot dayes, is the mad blood stirring.

Mer. Thou art like one of these fellowes, that when he enters the confines of a Tauerne, claps me his Sword vpon the Table, and sayes, God send me no need of thee: and by the operation of the second cup, draws him on the Drawer, when indeed there is no need.

Ben. Am I like such a Fellow?

Mer. Come, come, thou art as hot a Iacke in thy mood, as any in Italie: and assoone moued to be moodie, and assoone moodie to be mou'd.

Ben. And what too?

Mer. Nay, and there were two such, we should haue none shortly, for one would kill the other: thou, why thou wilt quarrell with a man that hath a haire more, or a haire lesse in his beard, then thou hast: thou wilt quarrell with a man for cracking Nuts, having no other reason, but because thou hast hasell eyes: what eye, but such an eye, would spie out such a quarrell? thy head is as full of quarrels, as an egge is full of meat, and yet thy head hath bin beaten as addle as an egge for quarreling: thou hast quarrel'd with a man for coffing in the street, because he hath wakened thy Dog that hath laine asleepe in the Sun. Did'st thou not fall out with a Tailor for wearing his new Doublet before Easter? with another, for tying his new shooes with old Riband, and yet thou wilt Tutor me from quarrelling?

Ben. And I were so apt to quarell as thou art, any man should buy the Fee-simple of my life, for an houre and a quarter.

Mer. The Fee-simple? O simple.

Enter Tybalt, Petruchio, and others.

Ben. By my head here comes the Capulets.

Mer. By my heele I care not.

Tyb. Follow me close, for I will speake to them.
Gentlemen, Good den, a word with one of you.

Mer. And but one word with one of vs? couple it with something, make it a word and a blow.

Tib. You shall find me apt inough to that sir, and you will giue me occasion.

Mercu. Could you not take some occasion without giuing?

Tib. Mercutio thou consort'st with Romeo.

Mer. Consort? what dost thou make vs Minstrels? & thou make Minstrels of vs, looke to heare nothing but discords: heere's my fiddlesticke, heere's that shall make you dance. Come consort.

Ben. We talke here in the publike haunt of men:
Either withdraw vnto some priuate place,
Or reason coldly of your grieuances:
Or else depart, here all eies gaze on vs.

Mer. Mens eyes were made to looke, and let them gaze.
I will not budge for no mans pleasure I.

Enter Romeo.

Tib. Well peace be with you sir, here comes my man.

Mer. But I'le be hang'd sir if he weare your Liuery.
Marry go before to field, heele be your follower,
Your worship in that sense, may call him man.

Tib. Romeo, the loue I beare thee, can afford
No better terme then this: Thou art a Villaine.

Rom. Tibalt, the reason that I haue to loue thee,
Doth much excuse the appertaining rage
To such a greeting: Villaine am I none;
Therefore farewell, I see thou know'st me not.

Tib. Boy, this shall not excuse the iniuries
That thou hast done me, therefore meete and draw.

Rom. I do protest I never iniur'd thee,
But lou'd thee better then thou can'st deuise:
Till thou shalt know the reason of my loue,
And so good Capulet, which name I tender
As dearely as my owne, be satisfied.

Mer. O calme, dishonourable, vile submission:
Alla stoccata carries it away.
Tybalt, you Rat catcher, will you walke?

Tib. What wouldst thou haue with me?

Mer. Good King of Cats, nothing but one of your nine liues, that I meane to make bold withall, and as you shall vse me hereafter dry beate the rest of the eight. Will you pluck your Sword out of his Pitcher by the eares? Make haste, lest mine be about your eares ere it be out.

Tib. I am for you.

Rom. Gentle Mercutio, put thy Rapier vp.

Mer. Come sir, your Passado.

Rom. Draw Benuolio, beare downe their weapons:
Gentlemen, for shame forbeare this outrage,
Tibalt, Mercutio, the Prince expressly hath
Forbidden bandying in Verona streetes.
Hold Tybalt, good Mercutio.

Exit Tybalt.

Mer. I am hurt.
A plague a both the Houses, I am spede
Is he gone and hath nothing?

Ben. What art thou hurt?

Mer. I, I, a scratch, a scratch, marry 'tis inough,
Where is my Page? go Villaine fetch a Surgeon.

Rom. Courage man, the hurt cannot be much.

Mer. No: 'tis not so deepe as a well, nor so wide as a Church door, but 'tis inough, 'twill serue: aske for me to morrow, and you shall find me a grauе man. I am peppered I warrant, for this world: a plague a both your houses. What, a Dog, a Rat, a Mouse, a Cat to scratch a man to death: a Braggart, a Rogue, a Villaine, that fights by the booke of Arithmeticke, why the deu'le came you betweene vs? I was hurt vnder your arme.

Rom. I thought all for the best.

Mer. Helpe me into some house Benuolio,
Or I shall faint: a plague a both your houses.
They haue made wormes meat of me.

I

I ha me lie, and soundly to your Houses. Exit.

Rom. This Gentleman the Princes neere Alie,
My very Friend hath got his mortall hurt
In my behalfe, my reputation stain'd
With Tybalts slaunder, Tybalt that an houre
Hath beene my Cozin: O Sweet Iuliet,
Thy Beauty hath made me Effeminate,
And in my temper softned Valours steele.

Enter Benuolio.

Ben. O Romeo, Romeo, braue Mercutio's is dead,
That Gallant spirit hath aspir'd the Clouds,
Which too vntimely here did scorne the earth.

Rom. This daies blacke Fate, on mo daies doth depend,
This but begins, the wo others must end.

Enter Tybalt.

Ben. Here comes the Furious Tybalt backe againe.

Rom. He gon in triumph, and Mercutio slaine?
Away to heauen respectiue Lenitie,
And fire and Fury, be my conduct now.
Now Tybalt take the Villaine backe againe
That late thou gau'st me, for Mercutio soule
Is but a little way aboue our heads,
Staying for thine to keepe him companie:
Either thou or I, or both, must go with him.

Tib. Thou wretched Boy that didst consort him here,
Shalt with him hence.

Rom. This shall determine that.

They fight. Tybalt falls.

Ben. Romeo, away be gone:
The Citizens are vp, and Tybalt slaine,
Stand not amaz'd, the Prince will Doome thee death
If thou art taken: hence, be gone, away.

Rom. O I am Fortunes foole.

Ben. Why dost thou stay?

Exit Romeo.

Enter Citizens.

Cit. Which way ran he that kild Mercutio?
Tybalt that Murtherer, which way ran he?

Ben. There lies that Tybalt.

Cit. Vp sir go with me:
I charge thee in the Princes name obey.

Enter Prince, old Montague, Capulet, their Wives and all.

Prin. Where are the vile beginners of this Fray?

Ben. O Noble Prince, I can discouer all
The vnlucky Manage of this fatall brall:
There lies the man slaine by young Romeo,
That slew thy kinsman braue Mercutio.

Cap. Wi. Tybalt, my Cozin? O my Brothers Child,
O Prince, O Cozin, Husband, O the blood is spild
Of my deare kinsman. Prince as thou art true,
For blood of ours, shed blood of Montague.
O Cozin, Cozin.

Prin. Benuolio, who began this Fray?

Ben. Tybalt here slaine, whom Romeo's hand did slay,
Romeo that spoke him faire, bid him bethinke
How nice the Quarrell was, and vrg'd withall
Your high displeasure: all this vttered,
With gentle breath, calme looke, knees humbly bow'd
Could not take truce with the vnruly spleene
Of Tybalts deafe to peace, but that he Tilts
With Peireing steele at bold Mercutio's breast,
Who all as hot, turnes deadly point to point,
And with a Martiall scorne, with one hand beates
Cold death aside, and with the other sends
It back to Tybalt, whose dexterity
Retorts it: Romeo he cries aloud,
Hold Friends, Friends part, and swifter then his tongue,
His aged arme, beats downe their fatall points,
And twixt them rushes, vndeneath whose arme,
An enuious thrust from Tybalt, hit the life
Of stout Mercutio, and then Tybalt fled.
But by and by comes backe to Romeo,
Who had but newly entertained Reuenge,
And too't they goe like lightning, for ere I
Could draw to part them, was stout Tybalt slaine:
And as he fell, did Romeo turne and flie:
This is the truth, or let Benuolio die.

Cap. Wi. He is a kinsman to the Montague,
Affection makes him false, he speakes not true:
Some twenty of them fought in this blacke strife,
And all those twenty could but kill one life.
I beg for Iustice, which thou Prince must giues
Romeo slew Tybalt, Romeo must not liue.

Prin. Romeo slew him, he slew Mercutio,
Who now the price of his deare blood doth owe.

Cap. Not Romeo Prince, he was Mercutios Friend,
His fault concludes, but what the law should end,
The life of Tybalt.

Prin. And for that offence,
Immediately we doe exile him hence:
I haue an interest in your hearts proceeding:
My blood for your rude brawles doth lie a bleeding,
But I'le Amerce you with so strong a fine,
That you shall all repent the loss of mine.
It will be deafe to pleading and excuses,
Nor teares, nor prayers shall purchase our abuses.
Therefore vse none, let Romeo hence in hast,
Else when he is found, that houre is his last.
Beare hence this body, and stand out our will:
Mercy not Murders, pardoning those that kill.

Exeunt.

Enter Iuliet alone.

Iul. Gallop apace, you fiery footed Steeds,
Towards Phebus lodging, such a Wagoner
As Phaeton would whip you to the west,
And bring in Cloudie night immediately.
Spread thy close Curtaine Loue-performing night,
That run-away eyes may winke, and Romeo
Leape to these armes, vntaliet of and vnseene,
Louers can see to doe their Amorous rights,
And by their owne Beauties: or if Loue be blind,
It best agrees with night: come ciuill night,
Thou sober suited Matron all in blacke,
And learne me how to loose a winning match,
Plaid for a paire of stainlesse Maidenhoods,
Hood my vnmann'd blood bayting in my Cheeks,
With thy Blacke mantle, till strange Loue grow bold,
Thinke true Loue acted simple modestie:
Come night, come Romeo, come thou day in night,
For thou wilt lie vpon the wings of night
Whiter then new Snow vpon a Rauens backe:
Come gentle night, come louing blacke-brow'd night.
Giue me my Romeo, and when I shall die,
Take him and cut him out in little starres,
And he will make the Face of heauen so fine,
That all the world will be in Loue with night,
And pay no worship to the Gerish Sun.
O I haue bought the Mansion of a Loue,
But not possest it, and though I am sold,
Not yet enioy'd, so tedious is this day,
As is the night before some Festiuall,

To an impatient child that hath new robes
And may not weare them, O here comes my Nurse.

Enter Nurse with cords.

And she brings newes and every tongue that speaks
But Romeo's name, speakes heavenly eloquence:
Now Nurse, what newes? what hast thou there?
The Cords that Romeo bid thee fetch?

Nur. I, I, the Cords.

Iuli. Ay me, what newes?
Why dost thou wring thy hands.

Nur. A weladay, hee's dead, hee's dead,
We are vndone Lady, we are vndone.
Alacke the day, hee's gone, hee's kil'd, he's dead.

Iul. Can heauen be so enuious?

Nur. Romeo can,
Though heauen cannot. O Romeo, Romeo,
Who euer would haue thought it Romeo.

Iuli. What diuell art thou,
That dost torment me thus:
This torture should be roar'd in dismall hell,
Hath Romeo slaine himselfe? say thou but I,
And that bare vowell I shall poyson more
Then the death-darting eye of Cockatrice,
I am not I, if there be such an I.
Or those eyes shot, that makes thee answere I:
If he be slaine say I, or if not, no.
Briefe, sounds, determine of my weale or wo.

Nur. I saw the wound, I saw it with mine eyes,
God saue the marke, here on his manly brest,
A pitteous Coarse, a bloody pitteous Coarse:
Pale, pale as ashes, all bedawb'd in blood,
All in gore blood, I soonded at the sight.

Iul. O breake my heart,
Poore Banckrout breake at once,
To prison eyes, nere looke on liberrie.
Vile earth to earth resigne, end motion here,
And thou and Romeo presse on heauie beere.

Nur. O Tybalt, Tybalt, the best Friend I had:
O curteous Tybalt honest Gentleman,
That euer I should liue to see thee dead.

Iul What storme is this that blowes so contrarie?
Is Romeo slaughtered? and is Tybalt dead?
My deareſt Cozen, and my dearer Lord:
Then dreadfull Trumpet sound the generall doome,
For who is liuing, if those two aregone?

Nur. Tybalt is gone, and Romeo banished,
Romeo that kil'd him, he is banished.

Iul. O God!
Did Rom'os hand shed Tybalts blood
It did, it did, alas the day, it did,

Nur. O Serpent heart, hid with a flowring face.

Iul. Did euer Dragon keepe so faire a Cave?
Beautifull Tyrant, fiend Angelicall:
Rauenous Doue-feather'd Raven,
Wolufish-rauening Lambe,
Dispised substance of Diuinest show.
Iust opposite to what thou iustly seem'st,
A damne Saint, an Honourable Villaine.
O Nature! what had'st thou to doe in hell,
When thou did'st bower the spirit of a fiend
In mortall paradise of such sweet flesh?
Was euer booke containing such vile matter
So fairely bound? O that deceit should dwell
In such a gorgeous Pallace.

Nur. There's no trust, no faith, no honestie in men.
All perius'd, all forswome, all naught, all dissemblers,
Ah where's my man? giue me some Aqua-vitae:
These griefes, these woes, these sorrowes make me old:
Shame come to Romeo.

Iul. Blister'd be thy tongue
For such a wish, he was not borne to shame:
Vpon his brow shame is asham'd to sit;
For 'tis a throane where Honour may be Crown'd
Sole Monarch of the vniuersall earth:
O what a beast was I to chide him?

Nur. Will you speake well of him,
That kil'd your Cozen?

Iul. Shall I speake ill of him that is my husband?
Ah poore my Lord, what tongue shall smooth thy name,
When I thy three houres wife haue mangled it.
But wherefore Villaine did'st thou kill my Cozin?
That Villaine Cozin would haue kil'd my husband:
Backe foolish teares, backe to your natiue spring,
Your tributarie drops belong to woe,
Which you mistaking offer vp to ioy:
My husband lives that Tybalt would haue slaine,
And Tybalt dead that would haue slaine my husband:
All this is comfort, wherefore weepe I then?
Some words there was worser then Tybalts death
That murdered me, I would forget it faine,
But oh, it presses to my memory,
Like damned guilty deedes to sioners minde,
Tybalt is dead and Romeo banished:
That banished, that one word ban shed,
Hath slaine ten thousand Tybalts: Tybalts death
Was woe inough if it had ended there:
Or if sower woe delights in fellowship,
And needly will be ranke with other griefes,
Why followed not when she said Tybalts dead,
Thy Father or thy Mother, nay or both,
Which moderne lamentation might haue mou'd.
But which a rere-ward following Tybalts death
Romeo is banished to speake that word,
Is Father, Mother, Tybalt, Romeo, Iuliet,
All slaine, all dead. Romeo is banished,
There is no end, no limit, measure, bound,
In that words death, no words can that woe sound.
Where is my Father and my Mother Nurse?

Nur. Weeping and wailing ouer Tybalts Coarse,
Will you go to them? I will bring you thether.

Iu. Wash they his wounds with teares: mine shal be spent
When theirs are drie for Romeo's banishment.
Take vp those Cordes, poore ropes you are beguil'd,
Both you and I for Romeo is exild:
He made you for a high-way to my bed,
But I a Maid, die Maiden widowed.
Come Cord, come Nurse, I le to my wedding bed,
And death not Romeo, take my Maiden head.

Nur. Hie to your Chamber, I le find Romeo
To comfort you, I wot well where he is:
Harke ye your Romeo will be heere at night,
I le to him, he is hid at Laurence Cell.

Iul. O find him, giue this Ring to my true Knight,
And bid him come, to take his last farewell.

Exit.

Enter Friar and Romeo.

Fri. Romeo come forth,
Come forth thou fearfull man,
Affliction is enamor'd of thy parts:
And thou art wedded to calamitie.

Rom. Father what newes?

What is the Princes Doome?
What sorrow craues acquaintance at my hand,
That I yet know not?
Fri. Too familiar
Is my deare Sonne with such sowre Company:
I bring thee tydings of the Princes Doome.
Rom. What less is then Doomesday,
Is the Princes Doome?
Fri. A gentler iudgement vanisht from his lips,
Not bodies death, but bodies banishment.
Rom. Ha, banishment? be merciful, say death:
For exile hath more terror in his looke,
Much more then death: do not say banishment.
Fri. Here from Verona art thou banished:
Be patient, for the world is broad and wide.
Rom. There is no world without Verona walles,
But Purgatorie, Torture, hell itselfe:
Hence banished, is banisht from the world,
And world's exile is death. Then banished,
Is death misterm'd, calling death banished,
Thou cut'st my head off with a golden Axe,
And smilest vpon the stroke that murders me.
Fri. O deadly sin, O rude vnthankefulnesse!
Thy fault our Law calles death, but the kind Prince
Taking thy part, hath rusht aside the Law,
And turn'd that blacke word death, to banishment.
This is deare mercy, and thou seest it not.
Rom. 'Tis Torture, and not mercy, heauen is here
Where Iuliet liues, and every Cat and Dog,
And little Mouse, every vnworthy thing
Liue here in Heauen and may looke on her,
But Romeo may not. More Validitie,
More Honourable state, more Courtship liues
In carrion Flies, then Romeo: they may seaze
On the white wonder of deare Iuliets hand,
And steale immortall blessing from her lips,
Who euen in pure and vestall modestie
Still blush, as thinking their owne kisses sin.
This may Flies doe, when I from this must flie,
And saist thou yet, that exile is not death?
But Romeo may not, hee is banished.
Hadst thou no poyson mixt, no sharpe ground knife,
No sudden meane of death though neere to mee ne,
But banished to kill me? Banished?
O Frier, the damned vse that word in hell:
Howlings attends it, how hast thou the hart
Being a Diuine, a Ghostly Confessor,
A Sin-Absolver, and my Friend profest:
To mangle me with that word, banished?
Fri. Then fond Mad man, heare me speake.
Rom. O thou wilt speake againe of banishment.
Fri. Ile giue thee Armour to keepe off that word,
Aduersities sweete milke, Philosophie,
To comfort thee, though thou art banished.
Rom. Yet banished? hang vp Philosophies
Vnlesse Philosophie can make a Iuliet,
Displant a Towne, reuerse a Princes Doome,
It helpes not, it preuailes not, talke no more.
Fri. O then I see, that Mad men haue no eares.
Rom. How should they,
When wisemen haue no eyes?
Fri. Let me dispaire with thee of thy estate,
Rom. Thou can'st not speake of that, thou dost not feele,
Were thou as young as Iuliet my Loue,
An houre but married, Tybalt murdered,
Doting like me, and like me banished,
Then might'st thou speake,
Then might'st thou teare thy hayre,
And fall vpon the ground as I doe now,
Taking the measure of an vnmade graue.
Enter Nurse, and knocke.
Friar. Arise one knocks,
Good Romeo hide thy selfe.
Rom. Not I,
Vnlesse the breath of Heartsicke groanes
Mist-like infold me from the search of eyes.
Knocke
Fri. Harke how they knocke:
(Who's there) Romeo arise,
Thou wilt be taken, stay a while, stand vp:
Knocke.
Run to my study. by and by, Gods will
What simplenesse is this. I come, I come.
Knocke
Who knocks so hard?
Whence come you? what's your will?
Enter Nurse.
Nur. Let me come in,
And you shall know my errand:
I come from Lady Iuliet.
Fri. Welcome then.
Nur O holy Frier. O tell me holy Frier,
Where is my Ladies Lord? where's Romeo?
Fri. There on the ground,
With his owne teares made drunke.
Nur. O he is euen in my Mistresse case,
Iust in her case. O wofull sympathy:
Pittious predicament, euen so lies she,
Blubbring and weeping, weeping and blubbring.
Stand vp, stand vp, stand and you be a man,
For Iuliets sake, for her sake rise and stand:
Why should you fall into so deepe an O.
Rom. Nurse.
Nur. Ah sir, ah sir, death's the end of all.
Rom. Speak'st thou of Iuliet? how is it with her?
Doth not she thinke me an old Murtherer,
Now I haue stain'd the Childhood of our ioy,
With blood remoued, but little from her owne?
Where is she? and how doth she? and what sayes
My conceal'd Lady to our conceal'd Loue?
Nur. Oh she sayes nothing sir, but weeps and weeps,
And now falls on her bed, and then starts vp,
And Tybalt calls, and then on Romeo cries,
And then downe falls againe.
Ro. As if that name shot from the dead leuell of a Gun,
Did murder her, as that names cursed hand
Murdred her kinsman. Oh tell me Frier, tell me,
In what vile part of this Anatomie
Doth my name lodge? Tell me, that I may sacke
The hatefull Mansion.
Fri. Hold thy desperate hand:
Art thou a man? thy forme cries out thou art:
Thy teares are womanish, thy wild acts denote
The vnreasonable Furie of a beast.
Vncomely woman, in a seeming man,
And ill beseeming beast in seeming both,
Thou hast amaz'd me. By my holy order,
I thought thy disposition better temper'd.
Hast thou slaine Tybalt? wilt thou slay thy selfe?
And slay thy Lady, that in thy life lies,
By doing damned hate vpon thy selfe?
Why rail'st thou on thy birth? the heauen and earth?

Since

Since birth, and heauen and earth, all three do meete
In thee at once, which thou at once would'st loose.
Fie, fie, thou sham'st thy shape, thy loue, thy wit,
Which like a Vsurer abound'st in all:
And vsest none in that true vse indeed,
Which should bedecke thy shape, thy loue, thy wit:
Thy Noble shape, is but a forme of waxe,
Digressing from the Valour of a man,
Thy deare Loue sworne but hollow perlurie,
Killing that Loue which thou hast vow'd to cherish.
Thy wit, that Ornament, to shape and Loue,
Misshapen in the conduct of them both
Like powder in a skillesse Souldiers flaske,
Is set a fire by thine owne ignorance,
And thou dismembred with thine owne defence.
What, rowse thee man, thy Iuliet is aliue,
For whose deare sake thou wast but lately dead.
There art thou happy. Tybalt would kill thee,
But thou slew'st Tybalt, there art thou happie.
The law that threatned death became thy Friend.
And torn'd it to exile, there art thou happy.
A packe of blessing light vpon thy backe,
Happinesse Courts thee in her best array,
But like a mishaped and sullen wench,
Thou puttest vp thy fortune and thy Loue:
Take heed, take heed, for such die miserable.
Goe get thee to thy Loue as was decreed,
Ascend her Chamber, hence and comfort her:
But looke thou stay not till the watch be set,
For then thou canst not passe to Mantua,
Where thou shalt liue till we can finde a time
To blaze your marriage, reconcile your Friends,
Beg pardon of thy Prince, and call thee backe,
With twenty hundred thousand times more ioy
Then thou went'st forth in lamentation.
Goe before Nurse, commend me to thy Lady,
And bid her hasten all the house to bed,
Which heauy sorrow makes them apt vnto.
Romeo is coming.

Nur. O Lord, I could haue staid here all night,
To heare good counsell: oh what learning is!
My Lord I'le tell my Lady you will come.

Rom. Do so, and bid my Sweete prepare to chide.

Nur. Heere sir, a Ring she bid me giue you sir:
Hie you, make haste, for it growes very late.

Rom. How well my comfort is reuiu'd by this.

Fri. Go hence,
Goodnight, and here stands all your state:
Either be gone before the watch be set,
Or by the breake of day disguis'd from hence,
Soiourne in Mantua, I'le find out your man,
And he shall signifie from time to time,
Every good hap to you, that chances heere:
Giue me thy hand, 'tis late, farewell, goodnight.

Rom. But that a ioy past ioy, calls out on me,
It were a griefe, so brieſe to part with thee:
Farewell. Exeunt.

Enter old Capulet, his Wife and Paris.

Cap. Things haue falne out sir so vnluckily,
That we haue had no time to mouse our Daughter:
Looke you, she Loe'd her kinsman Tybalt dearely,
And so did I. Well, we were borne to die.
'Tis very late, she'l not come downe to night:
I promise you, but for your company,
I would haue bin a bed an houre ago.

Par. These times of wo, affoord no times to woo:
Madam goodnight, commend me to your Daughter.

Lady. I will, and know her mind early to morrow,
To night, she is mewed vp to her heauinesse.

Cap. Sir Paris, I will make a desperate tender
Of my Childes loue: I thinke she will be rul'd
In all respects by me: nay more, I doubt it not
Wife, go you to her ere you go to bed,
Acquaint her here, of my Sonne Paris Loue,
And bid her, marke you me, on Wendsday next,
But soft, what day is this?

Par. Monday my Lord.

Cap. Monday, ha ha: well Wendsday is too soone.
A Thursday let it be: a Thursday tell her,
She shall be married to this Noble Earle:
Will you be ready? do you like this haste?
We'le keepe no great adoe, a Friend or two,
For harke you, Tybalt being slaine so late,
It may be thought we held him carelesly,
Being our kinsman, if we reuell much:
Therefore we'le haue some halfe a dozen Friends,
And there an end. But what say you to Thursday?

Paris. My Lord,
I would that Thursday were to morrow.

Cap. Well, get you gone, a Thursday, be it then:
Go you to Iuliet ere you go to bed,
Prepare her wife, against this wedding day.
Farewell my Lord, light to my Chamber hoa,
Afore me, it is so late, that we may call it early by and by Goodnight. Exeunt.

Enter Romeo and Iuliet aloft.

Iul. Wilt thou be gone? It is not yet neere day:
It was the Nightingale, and not the Larke,
That pierc'st the fearefull hollow of thine eare,
Nightly she sings on yond Pomgranet tree,
Believe me Loue, it was the Nightingale.

Rom. It was the Larke the Herald of the Morne:
No Nightingale: looke Loue what enuious streakes
Do lace the seuering Cloudes in yonder East:
Nights Candles are burnt out, and Iocond day
Stands tipto on the mistie Mountaines tops,
I must be gone and liue, or stay and die.

Iul. Yond light is not daylight, I know it I:
It is some Meteor that the Sun exhales,
To be to thee this night a Torch-bearer,
And light thee on thy way to Mantua.
Therefore stay yet, thou need'st not to be gone.

Rom. Let me be tane, let me be put to death,
I am content, so thou wilt haue it so.
I'le say yon gray is not the mornings eye,
'Tis but the pale reflexe of Cynthia brow.
Nor that is not Larke whose notes do beate
The vaulty heauen so high aboue our heads,
I haue more care to stay, then will to go:
Come death and welcome, Iuliet wills it so.
How ist my soule, lets talke, it is not day.

Iul. It is, it is, hie hence be gone away:
It is the Larke that sings so out of tune,
Straining harsh Discords, and vnpleasing Sharpes.
Some say the Larke makes sweete Diuision;
This doth not so: for she diuideth vs.
Some say, the Larke and loathed Toad change eyes,
O now I would they had chang'd voyces too:

Since arme from arme that voyce doth vs affray,
Hunting thee hence, with Hunt's-up to the day,
O now be gone, more light and light growes.
Rom. More light & light, more darke & darke our woes.

Enter Madam and Nurse.

Nur. Madam.
Iul. Nurse.
Nur. Your Lady Mother is comming to your chamber,
The day is broke, be wary, looke about.
Iul. Then window let day in, and let life out.
Rom. Farewell, farewell, one kisse and I'le descend.
Iul. Art thou gone so? Loue, Lord, ay Husband, Friend,
I must heare from thee every day in the houre,
For in a minute there are many dayes,
O by this count I shall be much in yeares,
Ere I again behold my Romeo.
Rom. Farewell:
I will omit no oportunitie,
That may conuey my greetings Loue, to thee.
Iul. O thinkest thou we shall euer meet againe?
Rom. I doubt it not, and all these woes shall serue
For sweet discourses in our time to come.
Iulie. O God! I haue an ill Diuining soule,
Me thinkes I see thee now, thou art so lowe,
As one dead in the bottome of a Tombe,
Either my eye-sight failes, or thou look'st pale.
Rom. And trust me Loue, in my eye so do you:
Drie sorrow drinkes our blood. Adue, adue. Exit.
Iul. O Fortune, Fortune, all men call thee fickle,
If thou art fickle, what dost thou with him
That is renown'd for faith? be fickle Fortune:
For then I hope thou wilt not keepe him long,
But send him backe.

Enter Mother.

Lad. Ho Daughter, are you vp?
Iul. Who is't that calls? Is it my Lady Mother.
Is she not downe so late, or vp so early?
What vnaccustom'd cause procures her hither?
Lad. Why how now Iuliet?
Iul. Madam I am not well.
Lad. Euermore weeping for your Cozins death?
What wilt thou wash him from his graue with teares?
And if thou could'st, thou could'st not make him liue:
Therefore haue done, some griefe shewes much of Loue,
But much of griefe, shewes still some want of wit.
Iul. Yet let me weepe, for such a feeling loſſe.
Lad. So shall you feele the loſſe, but not the Friend
Which you weepe for.
Iul. Feeling so the loſſe,
I cannot chuse but euer weepe the Friend.
La. Well Girle, thou weep'st not so much for his death,
As that the Villaine liues which slaughter'd him.
Iul. What Villaine, Madam?
Lad. That same Villaine Romeo.
Iul. Villaine and he, be many Miles asunder:
God pardon, I doe with all my heart:
And yet no man like he, doth grieue my heart.
Lad. That is because the Traitor liues.
Iul. I Madam from the reach of these my hands:
Would none but I might venge my Cozins death.
Lad. We will haue vengeance for it, feare thou not.
Then weepe no more, I'le send to one in Mantua,
Where that same banisht Run-agate doth lie,
Shall giue him such an vnaccustom'd dram,
That he shall soone keepe Tybalt company:
And then I hope thou wilt be satisfied.
Iul. Indeed I never shall be satisfied
With Romeo, till I behold him. Dead
Is my poore heart so for a kinsman vext:
Madam if you could find out but a man
To beare a poyson, I would temper it;
That Romeo should vpon receiu thereof,
Soone sleepe in quiet. O how my heart abhors
To heare him nam'd, and cannot come to him,
To wreake the Loue I bore my Cozin,
Vpon his body that hath slaughter'd him.
Mo. Find thou the meanes, and I'le find such a man.
But now I'le tell thee ioyfull tidings Gyrle.
Iul. And ioy comes well, in such a needy time,
What are they, beseech your Ladyship?
Mo. Well, well, thou hast a carefull Father Child?
One who to put thee from thy heauinesse,
Hath sorted out a sudden day of ioy,
That thou expects not, nor I looke not for.
Iul. Madam in happy time, what day is this?
Mo. Marry my Child, early next Thursday morne,
The gallant, young, and Noble Gentleman,
The Countie Paris at Saint Peters Church,
Shall happily make thee a ioyfull Bride.
Iul. Now by Saint Peters Church, and Peter too,
He shall not make me there a ioyfull Bride.
I wonder at this haste, that I must wed
Ere he that should be Husband comes to woe?
I pray you tell my Lord and Father Madam,
I will not marrie yet, and when I doe, I sweare
It shall be Romeo, whom you know I hate
Rather then Paris. These are newes indeed.
Mo. Here comes your Father, tell him so your selfe,
And see how he will take it at your hands.

Enter Capulet and Nurse.

Cap. When the Sun sets, the earth doth drizzle dewe
But for the Sunset of my Brothers Sonne,
It raines downright.
How now? A Conduit Gyrle, what still in teares?
Euermore showering in one little body?
Thou counterfaits a Barke, a Sea, a Wind:
For still thy eyes, which I may call the Sea,
Do ebbe and flow with teares, the Barke thy body is
Sayling in this salt flood, the winde thy sighes,
Who raging with the teares and they with them,
Without a sudden calme will ouer set
Thy tempest tossed body. How now wife?
Haue you delivered to her our decree?
Lady. I sir;
But she will none, she gives you thankes,
I would the foole were married to her grave.
Cap. Soft, take me with you, take me with you wife,
How, will she none? doth she not give vs thanks?
Is she not proud? doth she not count her blest,
Vnworthy as she is, that we have wrought
So worthy a Gentleman, to be her Bridegroome?
Iul. Not proud you have,
But thankfull that you have:
Proud can I never be of what I have,
But thankfull even for hate, that is meant Loue.
Cap. How now?
How now? Chopt Logicke? what is this?
Proud, and I thanke you: and I thanke you not,
Thanke me no thankings, nor proud me no prouds,
But fettle your fine loints 'gainst Thursday next,

To

To go with Paris to Saint Peters Church:
Or I will drag thee, on a Hurdle thither.
Out you greene sicknesse carrion, out you baggage,
You tallow face.
Lady. Fie, fie, what are you mad?
Iul. Good Father, I beseech you on my knees
Heare me with patience, but to speake a word.
Fa. Hang thee young baggage, disobedient wretch,
I tell thee what, get thee to Church a Thursday,
Or never after looke me in the face.
Speake not, reply not, do not answere me.
My fingers itch, wife: we scarce thought vs blest,
That God had lent vs but this onely Child,
But now I see this one is one too much,
And that we have a curse in having her:
Out on her Hilding.
Nur. God in heaven blesse her,
You are too blame my Lord to rate her so.
Fa. And why my Lady wise doe mind your tongue,
Good Prudence, smatter with your gossip, go.
Nur. I speake no treason,
Father, O Godigoden,
May not one speake?
Fa. Peace you mumbling foole,
Vtter your gravitie ore a Gossips bowles
For here we need it not.
La. You are too hot.
Fa. Gods bread, it makes me mad:
Day, night, houre, ride, time, worke, play,
Alone in companie, still my care hath bin
To have her matche, and having now prouided
A Gentleman of Noble Parentage,
Of faire Demesnes, Youthfull, and Nobly Allied,
Stuft as they say with Honourable parts,
Proportion'd as ones thought would wish a man,
And then to have a wretched puling foole,
A whining mammet, in her Fortunes tender,
To answer, Ile not wed, I cannot Loue:
I am too young, I pray you pardon me.
But, and you will not wed, Ile pardon you.
Graze where you will, you shall not house with me:
Looke too't, thinke on't, I do not vse to iest.
Thursday is neere, lay hand on heart, aduise,
And you be mine, Ile give you to my Friend:
And you be not, hang, beg, starue, die in the streets,
For by my soule, Ile nere acknowledge thee,
Nor what is mine shall never do thee good:
Trust too't, bethinke you, Ile not be forswore Exit.
Iuli. Is there no pittie sitting in the Clouds,
That sees into the bottome of my griefe?
O sweet my Mother cast me not away,
Delay this marriage, for a month, a weeke,
Or if you do not, make the Bridall bed
In that dim Monument where Tybalt lies.
Mo. Talke not to me, for Ile not speake a word,
Do as thou wilt, for I haue done with thee. Exit.
Iul. O God!
O Nurse, how shall this be preuented?
My Husband is on earth, my faith in heauen,
How shall that faith returne againe to earth,
Vnlesse that Husband send it me from heauen,
By leasing earth? Comfort me, counsaile me:
Hlacke, alacke, that heauen should practise stratagems
Vpon so soft a subiect as my selfe.
What saist thou? hast thou not a word of ioy?
Some comfort Nurse.
Nur. Faith here it is,
Romeo is banished, and all the world to nothing,
That he dares nere come backe to challenge you:
Or if he do, it needs must be by stealth.
Then since the case so stands as now it doth,
I thinke it best you married with the Countie,
O he's a Louely Gentleman:
Romeo a dish-clout to him: an Eagle Madam
Hath not so greene, so quicke, so faire an eye
As Paris hath, beslpow my very heart,
I thinke you are happy in this second match,
For it excels your first: or if it did not,
Your first is dead, or 'twere as good he were,
As living here and you no vse of him.
Iul. Speakest thou from thy heart?
Nur. And from my soule too,
Or else beshrew them both.
Iul. Amen.
Nur. What?
Iul. Well, thou hast comforted me marr'lous much,
Go in, and tell my Lady I am gone,
Having displeas'd my Father, to Laurence Cell,
To make confession, and to be absolu'd.
Nur. Marrie I will, and this is wisely done.
Iul. Auncient damnation, O most wicked fiend!
It is more sin, to wish me thus forsworne,
Or to dispraise my Lord with that same tongue
Which she hath prais'd him with aboue compare,
So many thousand times? Go Counsellor,
Thou and my bosome henceforth shall be twaine;
Ile to the Friar to know his remedie,
If all else fails, my selfe haue power to die. Exeunt.

Enter Friar and Countie Paris.

Fri. On Thursday sir? the time is very short.
Par. My Father Capulet will haue it so,
And I am nothing slow to slack his hast.
Fri. You say you do not know the Ladies mind?
Vneuen is the course, I like it not.
Pa. Immoderately she weepes for Tybalts death,
And therefore haue I little talke of Loue,
For Venus smiles not in a house of teares.
Now sir, her Father counts it dangerous
That she doth giue her sorrow so much sway:
And in his wisedome, hasts our marriage,
To stop the inundation of her teares,
Which too much minded by her selfe alone,
May be put from her by societie.
Now doe you know the reason of this hast?
Fri. I would I knew not why it should be slow'd.
Looke sir, here comes the Lady towards my Cell.

Enter Iuliet.

Par. Happily met, my Lady and my wife.
Iul. That may be sir, when I may be a wife.
Par. That may be, must be Loue, on Thursday next.
Iul. What must be shall be.
Fri. That's a certaine text.
Par. Come you to make confession to this Father?
Iul. To answere that, I should confesse to you.
Par. Do not denie to him, that you Loue me.
Iul. I will confesse to you that I Loue him.
Par. So will ye, I am sure that you Loue me.
Iul. If I do so, it will be of more price,
Being spoke behind your backe, then to your face.
Par. Poore soule, thy face is much abus'd with teares.

Iul. The teares haue got small victorie by that:
For it was bad inough before their spight.
Par. Thou wrong'st it more than teares with that report.
Iul. That is no slander sir, which is a truth,
And what I spake, I spake it to thy face.
Par. Thy face is mine, and thou hast slandered it.
Iul. It may be so, for it is not mine owne.
Are you at leisure, Holy Father now,
Or shall I come to you at euening Messe?
Fri. My leisure serues me pensiue daughter now.
My Lord you must intreat the time alone.
Par. Godshield: I should disturbe Deuotion.
Iulier, on Thursday early will I rouse yee.
Till then adue, and keepe this holy kisse. Exit Paris.
Iul. O shut the doore, and when thou hast done so,
Come weepe with me, past hope, past care, past helpe.
Fri. O Iuliet, I already know thy griefe,
It straines me past the compasse of my wits:
I heare thou must and nothing may prorogue it,
On Thursday next be married to this Countie.
Iul. Tell me not Frier that thou hearest of this,
Vnlesse thou tell me how I may preuent it:
If in thy wisedome, thou canst giue no helpe,
Do thou but call my resolution wise,
And with this knife, I'le helpe it presently.
God ioyn'd my heart, and Romeos, thou our hands,
And ere this hand by thee to Romeo seal'd:
Shall be the Label to another Deede,
Or my true heart with treacherous reuolt,
Turne to another, this shall slay them both:
Therefore out of thy long experien'st time,
Giue me some present counsell, or behold
Twixt my extremes and me, this bloody knife
Shall play the vmpeere, arbitrating that,
Which the commission of thy yeares and art,
Could to no issue of true honour bring:
Be not so long to speak, I long to die,
If what thou speak'st, speake not of remedy.
Fri. Hold Daughter, I doe spie a kind of hope,
Which craues as desperate an execution,
As that is desperate which we would preuent.
If rather then to marrie Countie Paris
Thou hast the strength of will to slay thy selfe,
Then is it likely thou wilt vndertake
A thing like death to chide away this shame,
That coap'st with death himselfe, to scape fro it:
And if thou dar'st, I'le giue thee remedie.
Iul. Oh bid me leape, rather then marrie Paris,
From off the Battlements of any Tower,
Or walke in theeuish waies, or bid me lurke
Where Serpents are: chaine me with roaring Beares
Or hide me nightly in a Charnell house,
O'recouered quite with dead mens rattling bones,
With reekie shankes and yellow chappels skulls:
Or bid me go into a new made graue,
And hide me with a dead man in his graue,
Things that to heare them told, haue made me tremble,
And I will doe it without feare or doubt,
To liue an vnstained wife to my sweet Loue.
Fri. Hold thee, goe home be merrie, giue consent,
To marrie Paris: wednesday is to morrow.
To morrow night looke that thou lie alone,
Let not thy Nurse lie with thee in thy Chamber:
Take thou this Viall being then in bed,
And this distilling liquor drinke thou off,
When presently through all thy veines shall run,
A cold and drowsie humour: for no pulse
Shall keepe his natiue progresse, but surcease:
No warmth, no breath shall testifie thou liuest,
The Roses in thy lips and cheekes shall fade
To many ashes, the eyes windowes fall
Like death when he shuts vp the day of life:
Each part depriu'd of supple gouernment,
Shall stiffe and starke, and cold appeare like death,
And in this borrowed likenesse of shrunke death
Thou shalt continue two and forty houres,
And then awake, as from a pleasant sleepe.
Now when the Bridegroome in the morning comes,
To rouse thee from thy bed, there art thou dead:
Then as the manner of our country is,
In thy best Robes vncouer'd on the Beere,
Be borne to buriall in thy kindreds graue:
Thou shalt be borne to that same ancient vault,
Where all the kindred of the Capulets lie,
In the meane time against thou shalt awake,
Shall Romeo by my Letters know our drift,
And hither shall he come, and that very night
Shall Romeo beare thee hence to Mantua.
And this shall free thee from this present shame,
If no inconstant toy nor womanish feare,
Abate thy valour in the acting it.
Iul. Giue me, giue me, O tell not me of feare.
Fri. Hold, get you gone, be strong and prosperous
In this resolue, I'le send a Frier with speed
To Mantua with my Letters to thy Lord.
Iu. Loue giue me strength,
And strength shall helpe afford:
Farewell deare father. Exit

Enter Father Capulet, Mother, Nurse, and Seruing men, two or three.

Cap So many guests inuite as here are writ,
Sirrah, go hire me twenty cunning Cooks.
Ser. You shall haue none ill sir, for I'le try if they can lick their fingers
Cap. How canst thou try them so?
Ser. Marrie sir, 'tis an ill Cooke that cannot lick his owne fingers therefore he that cannot lick his fingers goes not with me
Cap. Go be gone, we shall be much vnfurnisht for this time what is my Daughter gone to Frier Lawrence?
Nur I forsooth.
Cap. Well he may chance to do some good on her,
A peeuish selfe-wild harlotry it is.
Enter Iuliet.
Nur See where she comes from shrift
With merrie looke.
Cap. How now my headstrong,
Where haue you bin gadding?
Iul. Where I have learnt me to repent the sin
Of disobedient opposition:
To you and your beheests, and am enioyn'd
By holy Lawrence to fall prostrate here,
To beg your pardon: pardon I beseech you,
Henceforward I am euer rul'd by you.
Cap. Send for the Countie, goe tell him of this,
I'le haue this knot knit vp to morrow morning.
Iul. I met the youthfull Lord at Lawrence Cell,
And gaue him what becomed Loue I might,
Not stepping ore the bounds of modestie.
Cap. Why I am glad on't, this is well, stand vp,

This is as't should be, let me see the County:
I marrie go I say, and fetch him hither.
Now afore God, this reuerend holy Frier,
All our whole Cittie is much bound to him.

Iul. Nurse will you goe with me into my Closet,
To helpe me sort such needfull ornaments,
As you thinke fit to furnish me to morrow?

Mo. No not till Thursday, there's time inough.

Fa. Go Nurse, go with her,
Weele to Church to morrow.

Exeunt Iuliet and Nurse.

Mo. We shall be short in our prouision,
'Tis now neere night.

Fa Tush, I will stirre about,
And all things shall be well, I warrant thee wife:
Go thou to Iuliet, helpe to deck vp her,
Ile not to bed to night, let me alone:
Ile play the huswife for this once. What ho?
They are all forth, well I will walke my selfe
To Countie Paris, to prepare him vp
Against to morrow, my heart is wondrous light,
Since this same way-ward Gyrle is so reclaim'd.

Exeunt Father and Mother.

Enter Iuliet and Nurse.

Iul. I those attires are best, but gentle Nurse
I pray thee leaue me to my selfe to night:
For I haue need of many Orysons,
To moue the heauens to smile vpon my state,
Which well thou know'st, is crosse and full of sin.

Enter Mother.

Mo. What are you busie ho? need you my help?

Iul. No Madam, we haue cal'd such necessaries
As are behoouefull for our state to morrow:
So please you, let me now be left alone;
And let the Nurse this night sit vp with you,
For I am sure, you haue your hands full all,
In this so sudden businesse.

Mo. Goodnight.
Get thee to bed and rest, for thou hast need. Exeunt.

Iul Farewell:
God knowes when we shall meete againe.
I haue a faint cold feare thrills through my veines,
That almost freezes vp the heate of life:
Ile call them backe againe to comfort me.
Nurse, what should she do here?
My dismall Scene, I needs must act alone:
Come Vial, what if this mixture do not worke at all?
Shall I be married then to morrow morning?
No, no, this shall forbid it. Lie thou there,
What if it be a poyson which the Frier
Subtilly hath ministred to haue me dead,
Leaft in this marriage he should be dishonour'd,
Because he married me before to Romeo?
I feare it is, and yet me thinkes it should not,
For he hath still beene tried a holy man.
How, if when I am laid into the Tombe,
I wake before the time that Romeo
Come to redeeme me? There's a feareful point:
Shall I not then be stifled in the Vault?
To whose foule mouth no healthsome eyre breaths in,
And there die strangled ere my Romeo comes.
Or if I liue, is it not very like,
The horrible conceit of death and night,
Together with the terror of the place,
As in a Vaulte, an ancient receptacle,
Where for these many hundred yeeres the bones
Of all my buried Ancestors are packt.
Where bloody Tybalt, yet but greene in earth,
Lies festring in his shrow'd, where as they say,
At some houres in the night, Spirits resort:
Alacke, alacke, is it not like that I
So early waking, what with loathsome smells,
And shrikes like Mandrakes torne out of the earth,
That liuing mortalls hearing them, run mad.
O if I walke, shall I not be distraught,
Inuironed with all these hideous feares,
And madly play with my forefathers ioynts?
And pluckt the mangled Tybalt from his shrowd?
And in this rage, with some great kinsmans bone,
As (with a club) dash out my desperate brames.
O looke, me thinks I see my Cozins Ghost,
Seeking out Romeo that did spit his body
Vpon my Rapiers point: stay Tybalt, stay;
Romeo, Romeo, Romeo, here's drinke: I drinke to thee

Enter Lady of the house, and Nurse.

Lady. Hold,
Take these keies, and fetch more spices Nurse.

Nur. They call for Dates and Quinces in the Pastry.

Enter old Capulet.

Cap. Come, stir, stir, stir,
The second Cocke hath Crow'd,
The Curfew Bell hath rung, 'tis three a clocke:
Looke to the bakt meates, good Angelica,
Spare not for cost.

Nur. Go you Cot-queane, go,
Get you to bed, faith youle be sicke to morrow
For this nights watching.

Cap. No not a whit: what? I haue watcht ere now
All night for lesse cause, and neu'r beene sicke.

La. I you haue bin a Mouse-hunt in your time,
But I will watch you from such watching now.

Exit Lady and Nurse.

Cap. A iealous hood, a iealous hood,
Now fellow, what there?

Enter three or foure with spits, and logs, and baskets.

Fel. Things for the Cooke sir, but I know not what.

Cap. Make haste, make haste, sirrah, fetch drier Logs.
Call Peter, he will shew thee where they are.

Fel. I haue a head sir, that will find out logs,
And never trouble Peter for the matter.

Cap. Masse and well said, a merrie horson, ha,
Thou shalt be loggerhead; good Father, 'tis day.

Play Musicke.

The Countie will be here with Musicke straight,
For so he said he would, I heare him neere,
Nurse, wife, what ho? what Nurse I say?

Enter Nurse.

Go waken Iuliet, go and trim her vp.
Ile go and chat with Paris: hie, make haste,
Make haste, the Bridegroome, he is come already:
Make haste I say.

Nur. Mistris, what Mistris? Iuliet? Fast I warrant her she:
Why Lambe, why Lady, fie you slaggabed,
Why Loue I say? Madam, sweet heart: why Bride?
What not a word? You take your pennyworths now.
Sleepe for a weeke, for the next night I warrant
The Countie Paris hath set vp his rest,
That you shall rest but little, God forgiue me:
Marrie and Amen: how sound is she a sleepe?

I must needs wake her: Madam, Madam, Madam,
I, let the Countie take you in your bed,
Heele fright you vp, i faith. Will it not be?
What dreft, and in your clothes, and downe againe?
I must needs wake you: Lady, Lady, Lady.
Alas, alas, helpe, helpe, my Ladyes dead,
Oh weladay, that ever I was borne,
Some Aqua-vitæ ho, my Lord, my Lady.

Mo. What noise is heere? Enter Mother.

Nur. O lamentable day.

Mo. What is the matter?

Nur. Looke, looke, oh heavie day.

Mo. O me, O me, my Child, my onely life:
Reuiue, looke vp, or I will die with thee:
Helpe, helpe, call helpe.

Enter Father.

Fa. For shame bring Iuliet forth, her Lord is come.

Nur. She's dead: deceast, she's deadalacke the day.

M. Alacke the day, she's dead, she's dead, she's dead.

Fa. Ha? Let me see her: out alas she's cold,
Her blood is settled and her joynes are stiffe:
Life and these lips haue long bene seperated:
Death lies on her like an vnseasonly frost
Vpon the sweetest flower of all the field.

Nur. O Lamentable day!

Mo. O wofull time.

Fa. Death that hath tane her hence to make me waile,
Ties vp my tongue, and will not let me speake.

Enter Friar and the Counsell.

Fri. Come, is the Bride ready to go to Church?

Fa. Ready to go, but never to returne.
O Sonne, the night before thy wedding day,
Hath death laine with thy wife: there she lies,
Flower as she was, deflowred by him.
Death is my Sonne in law, death is my Heire,
My Daughter he hath wedded. I will die,
And leaue him all life liuing, all is death.

Pa. Haue I thought long to see this morninges face,
And doth it giue me such a sight as this?

Mo. Accurst, vnhappie, wretched hatefull day,
Most miserable houre, that ere time saw
In lasting labour of his Pilgrimage.
But one, poore one, one poore and loving Child,
But one thing to reioyce and solace in,
And cruell death hath catcht it from my sight.

Nur. O wo, O wofull, wofull, wofull day,
Most lamentable day, most wofull day,
That ever, ever, I did yet behold.
O day, O day, O day, O hatefull day,
Never was seene so black a day as this:
O wofull day, O wofull day.

Pa. Beguild, diuorced, wronged, spighted, slaine,
Most detestable death, by thee beguil'd,
By cruell, cruell thee quite ouerthrowne:
O loue, O life: not life, but loue in death.

Fa. Despis'd, distressed, hated, martyr'd, kill'd,
Vncomfortable time, why cam'st thou now
To murther, murther our solemnitie?
O Child, O Child; my soule, and not my Child,
Dead art thou, alacke my Child is dead,
And with my Child, my joyes are buried.

Fri. Peace ho for shame, confusions: Care, liues not
In these confusions, heauen and your selfe
Had part in this faire Maid, now heauen hath all,
And all the better is it for the Maid:
You part in her, you could not keepe from death,
But heauen keepes his part in eternall life:
The most you sought was her promotion,
For 'twas your heauen, she shouldst be adorn'd,
And weepe ye now, seeing she is adorn'd
Aboue the Clouds, as high as Heauen it selfe?
O in this loue, you loue your Child so ill,
That you run mad, seeing that she is well:
She's not well married, that liues married long,
But she's best married, that dies married young.
Drie vp your teares, and sticke your Rosemarie
On this faire Corse, and as the custome is,
And in her best array beare her to Church:
For though some Nature bids all vs lament,
Yet Natures teares are Reasons merriment.

Fa. All things that we ordained Festiuall,
Turne from their office to blacke Funerall:
Our instruments to melancholy Bells,
Our wedding cheare, to a sad buriall Feast.
Our solemne Hymnes, to sullen Dyrges change:
Our Bridall flowers serue for a buried Corse:
And all things change them to the contrarie.

Fri. Sir go you in; and Madam, go with him,
And go sir Paris, every one prepare
To follow this faire Corse vnto her grave:
The heauens do lowre vpon you, for some ill:
Moue them no more, by crossing their high will. Exeunt.

Mu. Faith we may put vp our Pipes and be gone.

Nur. Honest goodfellowes: Ah put vp, put vp,
For well you know, this is a pitiful case.

Mu. I by my troth, the case may be amended.

Enter Peter.

Pet. Musicians, oh Musicians,
Hearts ease, hearts ease,
O, and you will haue me liue, play hearts ease.

Mu. Why hearts ease;

Pet. O Musicians,
Because my heart is selfe plaies, my heart is full.

Mu. Not a dump we, 'tis no time to play now.

Pet. You will not then?

Mu. No.

Pet. I will then giue it you soundly.

Mu. What will you giue vs?

Pet. No money on my faith, but the gleeke.
I will giue you the Minstrell.

Mu. Then will I giue you the Seruing creature.

Peter. Then will I lay the seruing Creature's Dagger on your pate. I will carie no Crotchets, I'le Re you, I'le Fa you, do you note me?

Mu. And you Re vs, and Fa vs, you Note vs.

2 M. Prey you put vp your Dagger,
And put out your wit.
Then haue at you with my wit.

Peter. I will dri-bble you with an yron wit,
And put vp my yron Dagger.
Answere me like men.
When griping griefes the heart doth wound, then Musicke with her siluer sound.
Why siluer sound? why Musicke with her siluer sound?
what say you Simon Catling?

Mu. Marry sir, because siluer hath a sweet sound.

Pet. Prattest, what say you Hugh Rebeck?

2 M. I say siluer sound, because Musicians sound for siluer.

Pet. Prattest too, what say you James Soundpost? (ver

3. Mu. Faith I know not what to say.

Pet. O I cry you mercy, you are the Singer.
I will say for you; it is Musicke with her siluer sound.

Because Musicions haue no gold for sounding:
Then Musicke with her siluer sound with speedy helpe
doth lend redresse. Exit.

Mu. What a pestilent knaue is this same?

M. 2. Hang him Iacke, come weele in here, tarrie for the Mourners, and stay dinner. Exit.

Enter Romeo.

Rom. If I may trust the flattering truth of sleepe,
My dreames presage some ioyfull newes at hand:
My bosomes L. sits lightly in his throne:
And all this day an vnculstom'd spirit,
Lifts me aboue the ground with cheerefull thoughts.
I dreamt my Lady came and found me dead,
(Strange dreame that giues a dead man leaue to thinke,)
And breath'd such life with kisses in my lips,
That I reuiu'd and was an Emperour.
Ah me, how sweet is loue it selfe possest,
When but loues shadowes are so rich in ioy.

Enter Romeo's man.

Newes from Verona, how now Balthazar?
Dost thou not bring me Letters from the Frier?
How doth my Lady? Is my Father well?
How doth my Lady Iuliet? that I aske againe,
For nothing can be ill, if she be well.

Man. Then she is well, and nothing can be ill.
Her body sleepes in Capels Monument,
And her immortall part with Angels liue,
I saw her laid low in her kindreds Vault,
And presently tooke Poste to tell it you:
O pardon me for bringing these ill newes,
Since you did leaue it for my office Sir.

Rom. Is it euen so?
Then I denie you Starres.
Thou knowest my lodging, get me inke and paper,
And hire Post-Horses, I will hence to night.

Man. I do beseech you sir, haue patience:
Your lookes are pale and wild, and do import
Some misaduenture.

Rom. Tush, thou art deceiu'd,
Leaue me, and do the thing I bid thee do.
Hast thou no Letters to me from the Frier?

Man. No my good Lord.

Exit Man.

Rom. No matter: Get thee gone,
And hyre those Horses, I le be with thee straight.
Well Iuliet, I will lie with thee to night:
Lets see for meanes: O mischiefe thou art swift,
To enter in the thoughts of desperate men:
I do remember an Appothecarie,
And here abouts dwells, which late I noted
In tattred weeds, with ouerwhelming browes,
Culling of Simples, meager were his lookes,
Sharpe miserie had worne him to the bones:
And in his needie shop a Tortoyrs hung,
An Allegator stuft, and other skins
Of ill shap'd fishes, and about his shelues,
A beggerly account of emptie boxes,
Greene earthen pots, Bladders, and mustie seeds,
Remnants of packthred, and old cakes of Roses
Were thinly scattered, to make vp a shew.
Noting this penury, to my selfe I said,
An if a man did need a poyson now,
Whose sale is perfect death in Mantua,
Here liues a Caitiffe wretch would sell it him.
O this same thought did but fore-run my need,
And this same needie man must sell it me.
As I remember, this should be the house,
Being holy day, the beggers shop is shut.
What ho? Appothecarie?

Enter Appothecarie.

App. Who call's so loud?

Rom. Come hither man, I see that thou art poore,
Hold, there is fortie Duckets, let me haue
A dram of poyson, such soone speeding geese,
As will disperse it selfe through all the veines,
That the life-wearie-taker may fall dead,
And that the Trunke may be discharg'd of breath,
As violently, as hastie powder fier'd
Doth hurry from the fatall Canons wombe.

App. Such mortall drugs I haue, but Mantua law
Is death to any he, that vtters them.

Rom. Art thou so bare and full of wretchednesse,
And fear'st to die? Famine is in thy cheekes,
Need and oppression starueth in thy eyes,
Contempt and beggery hangs vpon thy backe!
The world is not thy friend, nor the worlds law
The world affords no law to make thee rich.
Then be not poore, but breake it, and take this.

App. My pouerty, but not my will consents.

Rom. I pray thy pouerty, and not thy will.

App. Put this in any liquid thing you will
And drinke it off, and if you had the strength
Of twenty men, it would dispatch you straight.

Rom. There's thy Gold,
Worse poyson to mens soules,
Doing more murther in this loathsome world,
Then these poore compounds that thou mayest not sell.
I sell thee poyson, thou hast sold me none.
Farewell, buy food, and get thy selfe in flesh.
Come Cordiall, and not poyson, go with me
To Iuliets grave, for there must I vse thee.

Exeunt.

Enter Frier Iohn to Frier Lawrence.

Iohn. Holy Francisco Frier, Brother, ho?

Enter Frier Lawrence.

Law. This same should be the voice of Frier Iohn.
Welcome from Mantua, what says Romeo?
Or if his mind be writ, giue me his Letter.

Iohn. Going to find a bare-foote Brother one,
One of our order to associate me,
Here in this Citie visiting the sick,
And finding him, the Searchers of the Towne
Suspecting that we both were in a house
Where the infectious pestilence did raigne,
Seal'd vp the doores, and would not let vs forth,
So that my speed to Mantua there was staid.

Law. Who bare my Letter then to Romeo?

Iohn. I could not send it, here it is again,
Nor get a messenger to bring it thee,
So feareful were they of infection.

Law. Vnhappie Fortune! by my Brotherhood
The Letter was not nice, but full of charge,
Of deare import, and the neglecting it
May do much danger: Frier Iohn go hence,
Get me an Iron Crow, and bring it straight
Vnto my Cell.

Iohn. Brother I le go and bring it thee. Exit.

Law. Now must I to the Monument alone,
Within this three houres will faire Iuliet wake,
Shee will beshrew me much that Romeo
Hath had no notice of these accidents:
But I will write againe to Mantua,

And

And keepe her at my Cell till Romeo come,
Poore liuing Corse, clos'd in a dead mans Tombe.
Exit.

Enter Paris and his Page.

Par. Giue me thy Torch Boy, hence and stand aloft,
Yet put it out, for I would not be seene:
Vnder yond young Trees lay thee all along,
Holding thy eare close to the hollow ground,
So shall no foot vpon the Churchyard tread,
Being loose, vnfirme with digging vp of Graues,
But thou shalt heare it: whistle then to me,
As signall that thou hearest some thing approach,
Giue me those flowers. Do as I bid thee, go.
Page. I am almost afraid to stand alone
Here in the Churchyard, yet I will aduenture.
Pa. Sweet Flower with flowers thy Bridall bed I strew:
O woe, thy Canopie is dust and stones,
Which with sweet water nightly I will dewe,
Or wanting that, with teares distil'd by mones;
The obsequies that I for thee will keepe,
Nightly shall be, to strew thy graue, and weepe.
Whistle Boy.
The Boy gives warning, something doth approach,
What cursed foot wanders this wayes to night,
To crosse my obsequies, and true loues right?
What with a Torch? Muffle me night a while

Enter Romeo and Peter.

Rom. Giue me that Mattocke, & the wrenching Iron,
Hold take this Letter, early in the morning
See thou deliuer it to my Lord and Father,
Giue me the light; vpon thy life I charge thee,
What ere thou hear'st or feest, stand all aloofe,
And do not interrupt me in my course,
Why I descend into this bed of death,
Is partly to behold my Ladies face:
But chiefly to take thence from her dead finger,
A precious Ring: a Ring that I must vse,
In deare employment, therefore hence be gone:.
But if thou iealous dost returne to prie
In what I further shall intend to do,
By heauen I will teare thee toynt by ioynt,
And strew this hungry Churchyard with thy limbs:
The time, and my intents are sauage wilde:
More fierce and more inexorable fierre,
Then emptie Tygers, or the roaring Sea.
Pet. I will be gone sir, and not trouble you
Ro. So shalt thou shew me friendship: take thou that.
Liue and be prosperous, and farewell good fellow.
Pet. For all this same, I'le hide me here about,
His lookes I feare, and his intents I doubt.
Rom. Thou detestable mawe, thou wombe of death,
Gorg'd with the dearest morsell of the earth:
Thus I enforce thy rotten Iawes to open,
And in despighe, I'le cram thee with more food.
Par. This is that banisht haughtie Montague,
That murdred my Loues Cozin; with which griefe,
It is supposed the faire Creature died,
And here is come to do some villanous shame
To the dead bodies: I will apprehend him.
Stop thy vnhallowed toyle, vile Montague:
Can vengeance be pursued further then death?
Condemned villaine, I do apprehend thee.
Obey and go with me, for thou must die,

Rom. I must indeed, and therfore came I hither:
Good gentle youth, tempt not a desperate man,
Flie hence and leaue me, thinke vpon those gone,
Let them affright thee. I beseech thee Youth,
Put not an other sin vpon my head,
By vrging me to furie. O be gone,
By heauen I loue thee better then my selfe,
For I come hither arm'd against my selfe:
Stay not, be gone, liue, and hereafter say,
A mad mans mercy bid thee run away.
Par. I do defie thy commiseration,
And apprehend thee for a Felion here.
Ro. Wilt thou prouoke me? Then have at thee Boy.
Pet. O Lord they fight, I will go call the Watch.
Pa. O I am slaine, if thou be merciful,
Open the Tombe, lay me with Iuliet.
Rom. In faith I will, let me peruse this face:
Mercutio kinsman, Noble Countie Paris,
What said my man, when my betossed soule
Did not attend him as we rode? I thinke
He told me Paris should haue married Iuliet.
Said he not so? Or did I dreame it so?
Or am I mad, hearing him talke of Iuliet,
To thinke it was so? O giue me thy hand,
One, writ with me in sowre misfortunes booke.
I'le burne thee in a triumphant graue.
A Graue; O no, a Lanthorne; slaughtered Youth:
For here lies Iuliet, and her beautie makes
This Vault a feasting presence full of light.
Death lie thou there, by a dead man inter'd.
How oft when men are at the point of death,
Haue they beene merrie? Which their Keepers call
A lightning before death? Oh how may I
Call this a lightning? O my Loue, my Wife,
Death that hath suckt the honey of thy breath,
Hath had no power yet vpon thy Beautie:
Thou art not conquer'd. Beauties ensigne yet
Is Crymson in thy lips, and in thy cheekes,
And Deaths pale flagge not aduanced there.
Tybalt, ly'st thou there in thy bloudy sheet?
O what more fauour can I do to thee,
Then with that hand that cut thy youth in twaine,
To sunder his that was thy enemie?
Forgiue me Cozen. Ah deare Iuliet:
Why art thou yet so faire? I will beleeue,
Shall I beleeue, that vnsubstantiall death is amorous?
And that the leane abhorred Monster keepes
Thee here in darke to be his Paramour?
For feare of that, I still will stay with thee,
And never from this Pallace of dym night
Depart againe: come lie thou in my armes,
Heere's to thy health, where ere thou tumbest in.
O true Apothecarie!
Thy drugs are quicke. Thus with a kisse I die.
Depart againe; here, here will I remaine,
With Wormes that are thy Chambermaides: O here
Will I set vp my everlasting rest:
And shake the yoke of inauspicious starres
From this world-wearied flesh: Eyes looke your last:
Armes take your last embrace: And lips, O you
The doores of breath, seale with a righteous kisse
A dateless bargaine to ingrossing death:
Come bitter conduct, come vnsauoury guide,
Thou desperate Pilot, now at once run on
The dashing Rocks, thy Sea-sicke weerie Barke:
Heere's to my Loue. O true Apothecary:

ince birth, and heauen and earth, all three do meete
n thee at once, which thou at once would'ſt looſe.
Fie, fie, thou ſham'ſt thy ſhape, thy loue, thy wit,
Which like a Vſurer abound'ſt in all:
And vſeſt none in that true vſe indeed,
Which ſhould bedecke thy ſhape, thy loue, thy wit:
Thy Noble ſhape, is but a forme of waxe,
Digreſſing from the Valour of a man,
Thy deare Loue ſworne but hollow perlurie,
Killing that Loue which thou haſt vow'd to cherriſh.
Thy wit, that Ornament, to ſhape and Loue,
Miſhapen in the conduct of them both
Like powder in a ſkulleſſe Souldiers flaſke,
Is ſet a fire by thine owne ignorance,
And thou diſmembred with thine owne defence.
What, rouſe thee man, thy Iuliet is aliue,
For whoſe deare ſake thou waſt but lately dead.
There art thou happy. Tybalt would kill thee,
But thou ſlew'ſt Tybalt, there art thou happie.
The law that threatned death became thy Friend.
And turn'd it to exile, there art thou happy.
A packe of bleſſing light vpon thy backe,
Happineſſe Courts thee in her beſt array,
But like a miſhaped and ſullen wench,
Thou putteſt vp thy fortune and thy Loue:
Take heed, take heed, for ſuch die miſerable.
Goe get thee to thy Loue as was decreed,
Aſcend her Chamber, hence and comfort her:
But looke thou ſtay not till the watch be ſet,
For then thou canſt not paſſe to Mantua,
Where thou ſhalt liue till we can finde a time
To blaze your marriage, reconcile your Friends,
Beg pardon of thy Prince, and call thee backe,
With twenty hundred thouſand times more ioy
Then thou went'ſt forth in lamentation.
Goe before Nurſe, commend me to thy Lady,
And bid her haſten all the houſe to bed,
Which heauy ſorrow makes them apt vnto.
Romeo is comming.

Nur. O Lord, I could haue ſtaid here all night,
To heare good counſell: oh what learning is!
My Lord I'le tell my Lady you will come.

Rom. Do ſo, and bid my Sweete prepare to chide.

Nur. Heere ſir, a Ring ſhe bid me giue you ſir:
Hie you, make haſt, for it growes very late.

Rom. How well my comfort is reuiu'd by this.

Pri. Go hence,
Goodnight, and here ſtands all your ſtate:
Either be gone before the watch be ſet,
Or by the breake of day diſguis'd from hence,
Soiourne in Mantua, I'le find out your man,
And he ſhall ſignifie from time to time,
Every good hap to you, that chances heere:
Giue me thy hand, 'tis late, farewell, goodnight.

Rom. But that a ioy paſt ioy, calls out on me,
It were a griefe, ſo brieſe to part with thee:
Farewell. Exeunt.

Enter old Capulet, his Wife and Paris.

Cap. Things haue falne out ſir ſo vnluckilly,
That we haue had no time to mouе our Daughter:
Looke you, ſhe Lou'd her kinſman Tybalt dearely,
And ſo did I. Well, we were borne to die.
'Tis very late, ſhe'l not come downe to night:
I promiſe you, but for your company,
I would haue bin a bed an houre ago.

Par. Theſe times of woe, affoord no times to woo:
Madam goodnight, commend me to your Daughter.

Lady. I will, and know her mind early to morrow,
To night, ſhe is mewed vp to her heauineſſe.

Cap. Sir Paris, I will make a deſperate tender
Of my Childes loue: I thinke ſhe will beeta'd
In all reſpects by me: nay more, I doubt it not
Wife, go you to her ere you go to bed,
Acquaint her here, of my Sonne Paris Loue,
And bid her, marke you me, on Wenſdiday next,
But ſoft, what day is this?

Par. Monday my Lord.

Cap. Monday, ha ha: well Wenſdiay is too ſoone.
A Thurſday let it be: a Thurſday tell her,
She ſhall be married to this Noble Earle:
Will you be ready? do you like this haſt?
Weele keepe no great adoe, a Friend or two,
For harke you, Tybalt being ſlaine ſo late,
It may be thought we held him careleſly,
Being our kinſman, if we reuell much:
Therefore weele haue ſome half a dozen Friends,
And there an end. But what ſay you to Thurſday?

Paris. My Lord,
I would that Thurſday were to morrow.

Cap. Well, get you gone, a Thurſday, be it then:
Go you to Iuliet ere you go to bed,
Prepare her wife, againſt this wedding day.
Farewell my Lord, light to my Chamber hoa,
Afore me, it is ſo late, that we may call it early by and by Goodnight. Exeunt.

Enter Romeo and Iuliet aloft.

Iul. Wilt thou be gone? It is not yet neere day:
It was the Nightingale, and not the Larke,
That pierc'd the fearefull hollow of thine eare,
Nightly ſhe ſings on yond Pomgranet tree,
Believe me Loue, it was the Nightingale.

Rom. It was the Larke the Herauld of the Morne:
No Nightingale: looke Loue what enuious ſtreakes
Do lace the ſeuering Cloudes in yonder Eaſt:
Nights Candles are burnt out, and Iocond day
Stands tipto on the miſtie Mountaines tops,
I muſt be gone and liue, or ſtay and die.

Iul. Yond light is not daylight, I know it I:
It is ſome Meteor that the Sun exhales,
To be to thee this night a Torch-bearer,
And light thee on thy way to Mantua.
Therefore ſtay yet, thou need'ſt not to be gone.

Rom. Let me be tane, let me be put to death,
I am content, ſo thou wilt haue it ſo.
I'le ſay yon gray is not the mornings eye,
'Tis but the pale reflexe of Cynthia brow.
Nor that is not Larke whoſe notes do beate
The vaulty heauen ſo high aboue our heads,
I haue more care to ſtay, then will to go:
Come death and welcome, Iuliet will it ſo.
How iſt my ſoule, lets talke, it is not day.

Iuli. It is, it is, hie hence be gone away:
It is the Larke that ſings ſo out of tune,
Straining harſh Diſcords, and vnpleaſing Sharpes.
Some ſay the Larke makes ſweete Diuiſion;
This doth not ſo: for ſhe diuideth vs.
Some ſay, the Larke and loathed Toad change eyes,
O now I would they had chang'd voyces too:

Since arme from arme that voyce doth vs affray,
Hunting thee hence, with Hunt-vp to the day,
O now be gone, more light and light gnes growes.

Rom. More light & light, more darke & darke our woes.

Enter Madam and Nurse.

Nur. Madam.

Iul. Nurse.

Nur. Your Lady Mother is comming to your chamber,
The day is broke, be wary, looke about.

Iul. Then window let day in, and let life out.

Rom. Farewell, farewell, one kisse and I'le descend.

Iul. Art thou gone so? Loue, Lord, ay Husband, Friend,
I must heare from thee every day in the houre,
For in a minute there are many dayes,
O by this count I shall be much in yeares,
Ere I againe behold my Romeo.

Rom. Farewell:
I will omit no opportunitie,
That may conuey my greetings Loue, to thee.

Iul. O thinkest thou we shall euer meet againe?

Rom. I doubt it not, and all these woes shall serue
For sweet discourses in our time to come.

Iuliet. O God! I haue an ill Diuining soule,
Me thinkes I see thee now, thou art so lowe,
As one dead in the bottome of a Tombe,
Either my eye-sight failes, or thou look'st pale.

Rom. And trust me Loue, in my eye so do you:
Drie sorrow drinkes our blood. Adue, adue. Exit.

Iul. O Fortune, Fortune, all men call thee fickle,
If thou art fickle, what dost thou with him
That is renown'd for faith? be fickle Fortune:
For then I hope thou wilt not keepe him long,
But send him backe.

Enter Mother.

Lad. Ho Daughter, are you vp?

Iul. Who ist that calls? Is it my Lady Mother.
Is she not downe so late, or vp so early?
What vnaccustom'd cause procures her hither?

Lad. Why how now Iuliet?

Iul. Madam I am not well.

Lad. Euermore weeping for your Cozins death?
What wilt thou wash him from his grauе with teares?
And if thou could'st, thou could'st not make him liue:
Therefore haue done, some griefe shewes much of Loue,
But much of griefe, shewes still some want of wit.

Iul. Yet let me weepe, for such a feeling losse.

Lad. So shall you feele the losse, but not the Friend
Which you weepe for.

Iul. Feeling so the losse,
I cannot chuse but euer weepe the Friend.

La. Well Girle, thou weep'st not so much for his death,
As that the Villaine liues which slaughter'd him.

Iul. What Villaine, Madam?

Lad. That same Villaine Romeo.

Iul. Villaine and he, be many Miles assunder:
God pardon, I doe with all my heart:
And yet no man like he, doth grieue my heart.

Lad. That is because the Traitor liues.

Iul. I Madam from the reach of these my hands:
Would none but I might venge my Cozins death.

Lad. We will haue vengeance for it, feare thou not.
Then weepe no more, I'le send to one in Mantua,
Where that same banisht Run-agate doth liue,
Shall giue him such an vnaccustom'd dram,
That he shall soone keepe Ty-balt company:
And then I hope thou wilt be satisfied.

Iul. Indeed I never shall be satisfied
With Romeo, till I behold him. Dead
Is my poore heart so for a kinsman vex:
Madam if you could find out but a man
To bear a poison, I would temper it:
That Romeo should vpon receiue thereof,
Soone sleepe in quiet. O how my heart abhors
To heare him named, and cannot come to him,
To wreake the Loue I bear my Cozin,
Vpon his body that hath slaughter'd him.

Mo. Find thou the meanes, and I'le find such a man.
But now I'le tell thee newes that thou needest.

Iul. And so my cause will go hard enough,
What are they, I beseech your Ladyship?

Mo. Well, well, thou hast a careful Father Child,
One who to put thee from thy heauinesse,
Hath sorted out a sudden day of ioy,
That thou expects not, nor I looke not for.

Iul. Madam is happy, what day is that?

Mo. Marry my Child early next Thursday morning,
The gallant young and Noble Gentleman,
The Countie Paris at Saint Peters Church,
Shall happily make thee a worthy Bride.

Iul. Now by Saint Peter, Church and Peter too,
He shall not make me there a worthy Bride.
I wonder at this haste, that I must wed
Ere he that should be Husband comes to woe,
I pray you tell my Lord and Father Madam,
I will not marry yet, and when I doe I swear
It shall be Romeo, whom you know I hate
Rather than Paris. These are news indeed.

Mo. Here comes your Father, tell him so your selfe,
And see how he will take it at your hands.

Enter Capulet and Nurse.

Cap. When the Sun sets the earth doth drizle dewe
But for the Sunne of my Beauteous Sonne,
It raines downright.
How now? A Conduit Girle, what still in mone?
Euermore showering in one little body?
Thou counterfeits a Barke, a Sea, a Wind:
For still thy eyes, which I may call the Sea,
Do ebbe and flow with teares, the Barke thy body is
Sailing in this salt flood, the winde thy sighes,
Who raging with the teares, and they are the same,
Without a sudden calme will ouer set
Thy tempest tossed body. How now wife?
Haue you delivered to her our decree?

Lady. I for;
But she will none, she gives you thankes,
I would the foolish were married to her graue.

Cap. Soft take me with you, take me with you wife,
How, will she none? doth she not give us thankes?
Is she not proud? doth she not count her blest,
Vnworthy as she is, that we have wrought
So worthy a Gentleman to be her Bridegroome?

Iul. Not proud you haue,
But thankfull that you haue:
Proud can I never be of what I hate,
But thankfull even for hate that is meant Loue.

Cap. How now?
How now? Chop-logicke? what is this?
Proud, and I thanke you, and I thanke you not,
Thanke me no thankings, nor proud me no prouds,
But fettle your fine Joles quick, I say ay this,

Since birth, and heauen and earth, all three do meete
In thee at once, which thou at once wouldst loose.
Fie, fie, thou sham'st thy shape, thy loue, thy wit,
Which like a Vsurer abound'st in all:
And vsest none in that true vse indeed,
Which should bedecke thy shape, thy loue, thy wit:
Thy Noble shape, is but a forme of waxe,
Digressing from the Valour of a man,
Thy deare Loue sworne but hollow perlurie,
Killing that Loue which thou hast vow'd to cherish.
Thy wit, that Ornament, to shape and Loue,
Misshapen in the conduct of them both
Like powder in a skillesse Souldiers flaske,
Is set a fire by thine owne ignorance,
And thou dismembred with thine owne defence.
What, rowse thee man, thy Iuliet is aliue,
For whose deare sake thou wast but lately dead.
There art thou happy. Tybalt would kill thee,
But thou slew'st Tybalt, there art thou happie.
The law that threatned death became thy Friend.
And turn'd it to exile, there art thou happy.
A packe of blessing light vpon thy backe,
Happinesse Courts thee in her best array,
But like a mishaped and sullen wench,
Thou putest vp thy fortune and thy Loue:
Take heed, take heed, for such die miserable.
Goe get thee to thy Loue as was decreed,
Ascend her Chamber, hence and comfort her:
But looke thou stay not till the watch be set,
For then thou canst not passe to Mantua,
Where thou shalt liue till we can finde a time
To blaze your marriage, reconcile your Friends,
Beg pardon of thy Prince, and call thee backe,
With twenty hundred thousand times more ioy
Then thou went'st forth in lamentation.
Goe before Nurse, commend me to thy Lady,
And bid her hasten all the house to bed,
Which heauy sorrow makes them apt vnto.
Romeo is comming.

Nur. O Lord, I could haue staid here all night,
To heare good counsell: oh what learning is!
My Lord I'le tell my Lady you will come.

Rom. Do so, and bid my Sweete prepare to chide.

Nur. Heere sir, a Ring she bid me giue you sir:
Hie you, make haste, for it growes very late.

Rom. How well my comfort is reuu'd by this.

Fri. Go hence,
Goodnight, and here stands all your state:
Either be gone before the watch be set,
Or by the breake of day disguis'd from hence,
Soiourne in Mantua, I'le find out your man,
And he shall signifie from time to time,
Every good hap to you, that chaunces heere:
Giue me thy hand, 'tis late, farewell, goodnight.

Rom. But that a ioy past ioy, calls out on me,
It were a griefe, so briefe to part with thee:
Farewell. Exeunt.

Enter old Capulet, his Wife and Paris.

Cap. Things haue falne out sir so vnluckily,
That we haue had no time to mouse our Daughter:
Looke you, she Lou'd her kinsman Tybalt dearely,
And so did I. Well, we were borne to die.
'Tis very late, she'l not come downe to night:
I promise you, but for your company,
I would haue bin a bed an houre ago.

Par. These times of woe, affoord no times to woo:
Madam goodnight, commend me to your Daughter.

Lady. I will, and know her mind early to morrow,
To night, she is mewed vp to her heauinesse.

Cap. Sir Paris, I will make a desperate tender
Of my Childes loue: I thinke she will beeu'd
In all respects by me: nay more, I doubt it not
Wife, go you to her ere you go to bed,
Acquaint her here, of my Sonne Paris Loue,
And bid her, marke you me, on Wendsday next,
But soft, what day is this?

Par. Monday my Lord.

Cap. Monday, ha hatwell Wendsday is too soone,
A Thursday let it be: a Thursday tell her,
She shall be married to this Noble Earle:
Will you be ready? do you like this haste?
Weele keepe no great adoe, a Friend or two,
For harke you, Tybalt being slaine so late,
It may be thought we held him carelessly,
Being our kinsman, if we reuell much:
Therefore weele haue some halfe a dozen Friends,
And there an end. But what say you to Thursday?

Paris. My Lord,
I would that Thursday were to morrow.

Cap. Well, get you gone, a Thursday, be it then:
Go you to Iuliet ere you go to bed,
Prepare her wife, against this wedding day.
Farewell my Lord, light to my Chamber hoa,
Afore me, it is so late, that we may call it early by and by Goodnight. Exeunt.

Enter Romeo and Iuliet aloft.

Iul. Wilt thou be gone? It is not yet neere day:
It was the Nightingale, and not the Larke,
That pierc'd the fearefull hollow of thine eare,
Nightly she sings on yond Pomgranet tree,
Believe me Loue, it was the Nightingale.

Rom. It was the Larke the Herald of the Morne:
No Nightingale: looke Loue what enuious streakes
Do lace the seuering Cloudes in yonder East:
Nights Candles are burnt out, and I o cond day
Stands tipto on the mistie Mountaines tops,
I must be gone and liue, or stay and die.

Iul. Yond light is not daylight, I know it I:
It is some Meteor that the Sun exhales,
To be to thee this night a Torch-bearer,
And light thee on thy way to Mantua.
Therefore stay yet, thou need'st not to be gone.

Rom. Let me be tane, let me be put to death,
I am content, so thou wilt haue it so.
I'le say yon gray is not the mornings eye,
'Tis but the pale reflexe of Cynthias brow.
Nor that is not Larke whose notes do beate
The vaulty heauen so high aboue our heads,
I haue more care to stay, then will to go:
Come death and welcome, Iuliet wills it so.
How ist my soule, lets talke, it is not day.

Iul. It is, it is, hie hence be gone away:
It is the Larke that sings so out of tune,
Straining harsh Discords, and vnpleasing Sharpes.
Some say the Larke makes sweete Diuision;
This doth not so: for she diuideth vs.
Some say, the Larke and loathed Toad change eyes,
O now I would they had chang'd voyces too:

Since arme from arme that voyce doth vs affray,
Hunting thee hence, with Hunt s-vp to the day,
O now be gone, more light and ill ght growes.
Rom. More light & light, more darke & darke our woes.

Enter Madam and Nurse.

Nur. Madam.
Iul. Nurse.
Nur. Your Lady Mother is comming to your chamber,
The day is broke, be wary, looke about.
Iul. Then window let day in, and let life out.
Rom. Farewell, farewell, one kisse and Ile descend.
Iul. Art thou gone so? Loue, Lord, ay Husband, Friend,
I must heare from thee every day in the houre,
For in a minute there are many dayes,
O by this count I shall be much in yeares,
Ere I againe behold my Romeo.
Rom. Farewell:
I will omit no opportunitie,
That may conuey my greetings Loue, to thee.
Iul. O thinkest thou we shall ever meet againe?
Rom. I doubt it not, and all these woes shall serue
For sweet discourses in our time to come.
Iuliet. O God! I haue an ill Diuining soule,
Me thinkes I see thee now, thou art so lowe,
As one dead in the bottome of a Tombe,
Either my eye-sight failes, or thou look'st pale.
Rom. And trust me Loue, in my eye so do you:
Drie sorrow drinkes our blood. Adue, adue. Exit.
Iul. O Fortune, Fortune, all men call thee fickle,
If thou art fickle, what dost thou with him
That is renown'd for faith? be fickle Fortune:
For then I hope thou wilt not keepe him long,
But send him backe.

Enter Mother.

Lad. Ho Daughter, are you vp?
Iul. Who is that calls? Is it my Lady Mother.
Is she not downe so late, or vp so early?
What vnaccustom'd cause procures her hither?
Lad. Why how now Iuliet?
Iul. Madam I am not well.
Lad. Euermore weeping for your Cozins death?
What wilt thou wash him from his grauе with teares?
And if thou could'st, thou could'st not make him liue:
Therefore haue done, some griefe shewes much of Loue,
But much of griefe, shewes still some want of wit.
Iul. Yet let me weepe, for such a feeling losse.
Lad. So shall you feele the losse, but not the Friend
Which you weepe for.
Iul. Feeling so the losse,
I cannot chuse but euer weepe the Friend.
La. Well Girle, thou weep'st not so much for his death,
As that the Villaine lives which slaughter'd him.
Iul. What Villaine, Madam?
Lad. That same Villaine Romeo.
Iul. Villaine and he, be many Miles asunder:
God pardon, I doe with all my heart:
And yet no man like he, doth grieue my heart.
Lad. That is because the Traitor liues.
Iul. I Madam from the reach of these my hands:
Would none but I might venge my Cozins death.
Lad. We will haue vengeance for it, feare thou not.
Then weepe no more, Ile send to one in Mantua,
Where that same banisht Run-agate doth lies,
Shall giue him such an vnaccustom'd dram,
That he shall soone keepe Tybalt company:
And then I hope thou wilt be satisfied.
Iul. Indeed I never shall be satisfied
With Romeo, till I behold him. Dead
Is my poore heart so for a kinsman vext:
Madam if you could find out but a man
To beare a poyson, I would temper it;
That Romeo should vpon receiu thereof,
Soone sleepe in quiet. O how my heart abhors
To heare him nam'd, and cannot come to him,
To wreake the Loue I bore my Cozin,
Vpon his body that hath slaughter'd him.
Mo. Find thou the meanes, and Ile find such a man.
But now Ile tell thee ioyfull tidings Gyrle.
Iul. And ioy comes well, in such a needy time,
What are they, beseech your Ladyship?
Mo. Well, well, thou hast a carefull Father Child?
One who to put thee from thy heauinesse,
Hath sorted out a sudden day of ioy,
That thou expects not, nor I looke not for.
Iul. Madam in happy time, what day is this?
Mo. Marry my Child, early next Thursday morne,
The gallant, young, and Noble Gentleman,
The Countie Paris at Saint Peters Church,
Shall happily make thee a ioyfull Bride.
Iul. Now by Saint Peters Church, and Peter too,
He shall not make me there a ioyfull Bride.
I wonder at this haste, that I must wed
Ere he that should be Husband comes to woe:
I pray you tell my Lord and Father Madam,
I will not marrie yet, and when I doe, I sweare
It shall be Romeo, whom you know I hate
Rather then Paris. These are newes indeed.
Mo. Here comes your Father, tell him so your selfe,
And see how he will take it at your hands.

Enter Capulet and Nurse.

Cap. When the Sun sets, the earth doth drizzle dewe
But for the Sunset of my Brothers Sonne,
It rames downright.
How now? A Conduit Gyrle, what still in teares?
Euermore shewering in one little body?
Thou counterfaits a Barke, a Sea, a Wind:
For still thy eyes, which I may call the Sea,
Do ebbe and flow with teares, the Barke thy body is
Sailing in this salt flood, the winds thy sighes,
Who raging with the teares and they with them,
Without a sudden calme will ouer set
Thy tempest tossed body. How now wife?
Haue you delivered to her our decree?
Lady. I sir;
But she will none, she gives you thankes,
I would the foole were married to her grave.
Cap. Soft, take me with you, take me with you wife,
How, will she none? doth she not give vs thanks?
Is she not proud? doth she not count her blest,
Vnworthy as she is, that we have wrought
So worthy a Gentleman, to be her Bridegroome
Iul. Not proud you have,
But thankfull that you have:
Proud can I never be of what I have,
But thankfull even for hate, that is meant Loue.
Cap. How now? Chopt Logicke? what is this?
Proud, and I thanke you: and I thanke you not.
Thanke me no thankings, nor proud me no proudes,
But fettle your fine joints 'gainst Thursday next,

To

To go with Paris to Saint Peters Church:
Or I will drag thee, on a Hurdle thither.
Out you greene sicknesse carrion, out you baggage,
You tallow face.

Lady. Fie, fie, what are you mad?

Iul. Good Father, I beseech you on my knees
Heare me with patience, but to speake a word.

Fa. Hang thee young baggage, disobedient wretch,
I tell thee what, get thee to Church a Thursday,
Or never after looke me in the face.
Speake not, reply not, do not answere me.
My fingers itch, wife: we scarce thought vs blest,
That God had lent vs but this onely Child,
But now I see this one is one too much,
And that we have a curse in having her:
Out on her Hilding.

Nur. God in heaven blesse her,
You are too blame my Lord to rate her so.

Fa. And why my Lady wisedome? hold your tongue,
Good Prudence, smatter with your gossip, go.

Nur. I speake no treason,
Father, O Godigoden,
May not one speake?

Fa. Peace you mumbling foole,
Vtter your gravitie ore a Gossips bowles
For here we need it not.

La. You are too hot.

Fa. Gods bread, it makes me mad:
Day, night, houre, ride, time, worke, play,
Alone in companie, still my care hath bin
To have her matcht, and having now provided
A Gentleman of Noble Parentage,
Of faire Demesnes, Youthfull, and Nobly Allied,
Stuft as they say with Honourable parts,
Proportion'd as ones thought would wish a man,
And then to have a wretched puling foole,
A whining mammet, in her Fortunes tender,
To answer, Ile not wed, I cannot Loue:
I am too young, I pray you pardon me.
But, and you will not wed, Ile pardon you.
Graze where you will, you shall not house with me:
Looke too't, thinke on't, I do not vse to iest.
Thursday is neere, lay hand on heart, aduise,
And you be mine, Ile give you to my Friend:
And you be not, hang, beg, starue, die in the streets,
For by my soule, Ile nere acknowledge thee,
Nor what is mine shall never do thee good:
Trust too't, bethinke you, Ile not be forsworne Exit.

Iuli. Is there no pittie sitting in the Clouds,
That sees into the bottome of my griefe?
O sweet my Mother cast me not away,
Delay this marriage, for a month, a weeke,
Or if you do not, make the Bridall bed
In that dim Monument where Tybalt lies.

Mo. Talke not to me, for I le not speake a word,
Do as thou wilt, for I haue done with thee. Exit.

Iul. O God!
O Nurse, how shall this be prevented?
My Husband is on earth, my faith in heaven,
How shall that faith returne againe to earth,
Vnlesse that Husband send it me from heaven,
By leaving earth? Comfort me, counsaile me:
Hlacke, alacke, that heaven should practise stratagems
Vpon so soft a subiect as my selfe.
What saist thou? hast thou not a word of Ioy?
Some comfort Nurse.

Nur. Faith here it is,
Romeo is banished, and all the world to nothing,
That he dares nere come backe to challenge you:
Or if he do, it needs must be by stealth.
Then since the case so stands as now it doth,
I thinke it best you married with the Countie,
O hee's a Louely Gentleman:
Romeo a dish-clout to him: an Eagle Madam
Hath not so greene, so quicke, so faire an eye
As Paris hath, beshrow my very heart,
I thinke you are happy in this second match,
For it excels your first: or if it did not,
Your first is dead, or 'twere as good he were,
As liuing here and you no vse of him.

Iul. Speakest thou from thy heart?

Nur. And from my soule too,
Or else beshrew them both.

Iul. Amen.

Nur. What?

Iul. Well, thou hast comforted me marueilous much,
Go in, and tell my Lady I am gone,
Having displeas'd my Father, to Laurence Cell,
To make confession, and to be absolu'd.

Nur. Marrie I will, and this is wisely done.

Iul. Auncient damnation, O most wicked fiend!
It is more sin to wish me thus forsworne,
Or to dispraise my Lord with that same tongue
Which she hath praisd him with aboue compare,
So many thousand times? Go Counsellor,
Thou and my bosome henceforth shall be twine;
Ile to the Frier to know his remedie,
If all else faile, my selfe haue power to die. Exeunt.

Enter Frier and Countie Paris.

Fri. On Thursday sir? the time is very short.

Par My Father Capulet will haue it so,
And I am nothing slow to slack his haste.

Fri. You say you do not know the Ladies mind?
Vneuen is the course, I like it not.

Pa. Immoderately she weepes for Tybalts death,
And therfore haue I little talke of Loue,
For Venus smiles not in a house of teares.
Now sir, her Father counts it dangerous
That she doth give her sorrow so much sway:
And in his wisedome, hasts our marriage,
To stop the inundation of her teares,
Which too much minded by her selfe alone,
May be put from her by societie.
Now doe you know the reason of this haste?

Fri. I would I knew not why it should be slow'd.
Looke sir, here comes the Lady towards my Cell.

Enter Iuliet.

Par. Happily met, my Lady and my wife.

Iul. That may be sir, when I may be a wife.

Par. That may be, must be Loue, on Thursday next.

Iul. What must be shall be.

Fri. That's a certaine text.

Par. Come you to make confession to this Father?

Iul. To answere that, I should confesse to you.

Par. Do not denie to him, that you Loue me.

Iul. I will confesse to you that I Loue him.

Par. So will ye, I am sure that you Loue me.

Iul. If I do so, it will be of more price,
Being spoke behind your backe, than to your face.

Par. Poore soule, thy face is much abus'd with teares.

Iul. The

Iul. The teares haue got small victorie by that:
For it was bad inough before their spight.
Pa. Thou wrong'st it more then teares with that report.
Iul. That is no slaunder sir, which is a truth,
And what I spake, I spake it to my face.
Par. Thy face is mine, and thou hast slaundred it.
Iul. It may be so, for it is not mine owne.
Are you at leisure, Holy Father now,
Or shall I come to you at euening Messe?
Fri. My leisure serues me penitent daughter now.
My Lord you must intreat the time alone.
Par. Godshield: I should disturbe Deuotion.
Father, on Thursday early will I rouse yee,
Till then adue, and keepe this holy kisse. Exit Paris.
Iul. O shut the doore, and when thou hast done so,
Come weepe with me, past hope, past care, past helpe.
Fri. O Iuliet, I already know thy griefe,
It streames me past the compasse of my wits:
I heare thou must and nothing may prorogue it,
On Thursday next be married to this Countie.
Iul. Tell me not Frier that thou hearest of this,
Vnlesse thou tell me how I may preuent it:
If in thy wisedome, thou canst giue no helpe,
Do thou but call my resolution wise,
And with this knife, I'le helpe it presently.
God ioyn'd my heart, and Romeos, thou our hands,
And ere this hand by thee to Romeo seal'd:
Shall be the Lobell to another Deede,
Or my true heart with treacherous reuolt,
Turne to another, this shall slay them both:
Therefore out of thy long experien'd time,
Giue me some present counsell, or behold
Twixt my extremes and me, this bloody knife
Shall play the vmpeere, arbitrating that,
Which the commission of thy yeares and art,
Could to no issue of true honour bring:
Be not so long to speak, I long to die,
If what thou speak'st, speake not of remedy.
Fri. Hold Daughter, I doe spie a kind of hope,
Which craues as desperate an execution,
As that is desperate which we would preuent,
If rather then to marrie Countie Paris
Thou hast the strength of will to slay thy selfe,
Then is it likely thou wilt vndertake
A thing like death to chide away this shame,
That coop'st with death himselfe, to scape fro it:
And if thou dar'st, I'le giue thee remedie.
Iul. Oh bid me leape, rather then marrie Paris,
From off the Battlements of any Tower,
Or walke in theeuish waies, or bid me lurke
Where Serpents are, chaine me with roaring Beares
Or hide me nightly in a Charnell house,
O'recouered quite with dead mens rattling bones,
With reeking shankes and yellow chappels skulls:
Or bid me go into a new made grauе,
And hide me with a dead man in his grauе,
Things that to heare them told, haue made me tremble,
And I will doe it without feare or doubt,
To liue an vnstained wife to my sweet Loue.
Fri. Hold thee, goe home be merrie, giue consent,
To marrie Paris: wensday is to morrow.
To morrow night looke that thou lie alone,
Let not thy Nurse lie with thee in thy Chamber:
Take thou this Viall being then in bed,
And this distilling liquor drinke thou off,
When presently through all thy veines shall run,
A cold and drowsie humour: for no pulse
Shall keepe his natiue progresse, but surcease:
No warmth, no breath shall testifie thou liuest,
The Roses in thy lips and cheekes shall fade
To many ashes, the eyes windowes fall
Like death when he shuts vp the day of life:
Each part depriu'd of supple gouernment,
Shall stiffe and stake, and cold appeare like death,
And in this borrowed likenesse of shrunke death
Thou shalt continue two and forty houres,
And then awake, as from a pleasant sleepe.
Now when the Bridegroome in the morning comes,
To rouse thee from thy bed, there art thou dead:
Then as the manner of our country is,
In thy best Robes vncouer'd on the Beare,
Be borne to buriall in thy kindreds grauе:
Thou shalt be borne to that same ancient vault,
Where all the kindred of the Capulas lie,
In the meane time against thou shalt awake,
Shall Romeo by my Letters know our drift,
And hither shall he come, and that very night
Shall Romeo beare thee hence to Mantua.
And this shall free thee from this present shame,
If no inconstant toy nor womanish feare,
Abate thy valour in the acting it.
Iul. Giue me, giue me, O tell not me of feare.
Fri. Hold get you gone, be strong and prosperous:
In this resolue, I'le send a Frier with speed
To Mantua with my Letters to thy Lord.
Iu. Loue giue me strength,
And strength shall helpe afford:
Farewell deare father. Exit

Enter Father Capulet, Mother, Nurse, and Seruing men, two or three.

Cap. So many guests inuite as here are writ,
Sirrah, go hire me twenty cunning Cookes.
Ser. You shall haue none ill sir, for I'le try if they can licke their fingers.
Cap. How canst thou try them so?
Ser. Marrie sir, 'tis an ill Cooke that cannot licke his owne fingers: therefore he that cannot licke his fingers goes not with me.
Cap. Go be gone, we shall be much vnfurnisht for this time: what is my Daughter gone to Frier Lawrence?
Nur. I forsooth.
Cap. Well he may chance to do some good on her,
A peeuish self-wild harlotry it is.
Enter Iuliet.
Nur. See where she comes from shrift
With merrie looke.
Cap. How now my headstrong,
Where haue you bin gadding?
Iul. Where I haue learnt me to repent the sin
Of disobedient opposition:
To you and your beheests, and am enioyn'd
By holy Lawrence, to fall prostrate here,
To beg your pardon: pardon I beseech you.
Henceforward I am euer rul'd by you.
Cap. Send for the Countie, goe tell him of this,
I'le haue this knot knit vp to morrow morning.
Iul. I met the youthfull Lord at Lawrence Cell,
And gaue him what becomed Loue I might,
Not stepping ore the bounds of modestie.
Cap. Why I am glad on't, this is well, stand vp,

This is as't should be, let me see the County:
I marrie go I say, and fetch him hither.
Now afore God, this reuerend holy Friar,
All our whole Cittie is much bound to him.
Iul. Nurse will you goe with me into my Closet,
To helpe me sort such needfull ornaments,
As you thinke fit to furnish me to morrow?
Mo. No not till Thursday, there's time inough.
Fa. Go Nurse, go with her,
Weele to Church to morrow.
Exeunt Iuliet and Nurse.
Mo. We shall be short in our prouision,
Tis now neere night.
Fa Tush, I will stirre about,
And all things shall be well, I warrant thee wife:
Go thou to Iuliet, helpe to deck vp her,
Ile not to bed to night, let me alone:
Ile play the housewife for this once. What ho?
They are all forth, well I will walke my selfe
To Countie Paris, to prepare him vp
Against to morrow, my heart is wondrous lighte,
Since this same way-ward Gyrle is so reclaim'd.
Exeunt Father and Mother.

Enter Iuliet and Nurse.

Iul. I those attires are best, but gentle Nurse
I pray thee leaue me to my selfe to night:
For I haue need of many Orysons,
To moue the heauens to smile vpon my state,
Which well thou know'st, is crosse and full of sin.
Enter Mother.
Mo. What are you busie hoh, need you my help?
Iul. No Madam, we haue cal'd such necessaries
As are behouefull for our state to morrow:
So please you, let me now be left alone;
And let the Nurse this night sit vp with you,
For I am sure, you haue your hands full all,
In this so sudden businesse.
Mo. Goodnight.
Get thee to bed and rest, for thou hast need. Exeunt.
Iul Farewell:
God knowes when we shall meete againe.
I haue a faint cold feare thrills through my veines,
That almost freezes vp the heate of fire:
Ile call them backe againe to comfort me.
Nurse, what should she do here?
My dismall Scene, I needs must act alone:
Come Vial what if this mixture do not worke at all?
Shall I be married then to morrow morning?
No, no, this shall forbid it. Lie thou there,
What if it be a poyson which the Frier
Subtilly hath ministred to haue me dead,
Least in this marriage he should be dishonour'd,
Because he married me before to Romeo?
I feare it is, and yet me thinkes it should not,
For he hath still beene tried a holy man.
How, if when I am laid into the Tombe,
I wake before the time that Romeo
Come to redeeme me? There's a fearefull point:
Shall I not then be stifled in the Vaule?
To whose foule mouth no healthsome ayre breaths in,
And there die strangled ere my Romeo comes.
Or if I liue, is it not very like,
The horrible conceit of death and night,
Together with the terror of the place,
As in a Vaulte, an ancient receptacle,
Where for these many hundred yeeres the bones
Of all my buried Ancestors are packt,
Where bloody Tybalt, yet but greene in earth,
Lies festring in his shrow'd, where as they say,
At some houres in the night, Spirits resort:
Alacke, alacke, is it not like that I
So early waking, what with loathsome smells,
And shrikes like Mandrakes torne out of the earth,
That liuing mortalls hearing them, run mad.
O if I walke, shall I not be distraught,
Inuironed with all these hideous feares,
And madly play with my forefathers ioynts?
And pluckes the mangled Tybalt from his shroud?
And in this rage, with some great kinsmans bone,
As (with a club) dash out my desperate brames.
O looke, me thinks I see my Cozins Ghost,
Seeking out Romeo that did spit his body
Vpon my Rapiers point: stay Tybalt, stay;
Romeo, Romeo, Romeo, here's drinke: I drinke to thee

Enter Lady of the house, and Nurse.

Lady. Hold,
Take these keies, and fetch more spices Nurse.
Nur. They call for Dates and Quinces in the Pastrie.
Enter old Capulet.
Cap. Come, stir, stir, stir,
The second Cocke hath Crow'd,
The Curfew Bell hath rung, 'tis three a clocke:
Looke to the bakte meates, good Angelica.
Spare not for cost.
Nur. Go you Cot-queane, go,
Get you to bed, faith youle be sicke to morrow
For this nights watching.
Cap. No not a whit; what? I haue watcht ere now
All night for lesse cause, and ner beene sicke.
La. I you haue bin a Mouse-hunt in your time,
But I will watch you from such watching now.
Exit Lady and Nurse.
Cap. A lealous hood, a lealous hood,
Now fellow, what there?
Enter three or foure with spits, and logs, and baskets.
Fel. Things for the Cooke sir, but I know not what.
Cap. Make haste, make haste, sirrah, fetch drier Logs.
Call Peter, he will shew thee where they are.
Fel. I haue a head sir, that will find out logs,
And never trouble Peter for the matter.
Cap. Masse and well said, a merrie horson, ha.
Thou shalt be loggerhead; good Father, 'tis day.
Play Musicke.
The Countie will be here with Musicke straight,
For so he said he would, I heare him neere,
Nurse, wife, what ho? what Nurse I say?
Enter Nurse.
Go waken Iuliet, go and trim her vp.
Ile go and chat with Paris: hie, make hast,
Make hast, the Bridegroome, he is come already:
Make hast I say.
Nur. Mistris, what Mistris? Iuliet? Fast I warrant her she:
Why Lambe, why Lady, fie you slugge-bed,
Why Loue I say? Madam, sweet heart: why Bride?
What not a word? You take your penniworths now.
Sleepe for a weeke, for the next night I warrant
The Countie Paris hath set vp his rest,
That you shall rest but little, God forgiue me:
Marrie and Amen: how sound is she a sleepe?

I thinke needs wake her: Madam, Madam, Madam,
I, let the Countie take you in your bed,
Heale fright you vp yfaith. Will it not be?
What dresst, and in your clothes, and downe againe?
I must needs wake you: Lady, Lady, Lady?
Alas, alas, helpe, helpe, my Ladyes dead,
Oh weladay, that euer I was borne,
Some Aque-vitæ ho, my Lord, my Lady?
Mo. What noise is heere? Enter Mother.
Nur. O lamentable day.
Mo. What is the matter?
Nur. Looke, looke, oh heauie day.
Mo. O me, O me, my Child, my onely life:
Reuiue, looke vp, or I will die with thee:
Helpe, helpe, call helpe.
Enter Father.
Fa. For shame bring Iuliet forth, her Lord is come.
Nur. She's dead: deceast, shee's deadlacke the day.
M. Alacke the day, shee's dead, shee's dead, shee's dead.
Fa. Ha? Let me see her: out alas shee's cold,
Her blood is settled and her joynts are stiffe:
Life and these lips haue long bene seperated:
Death lies on her like an vnwelcome frost
Vpon the sweetest flower of all the field.
Nur. O Lamentable day!
Mo. O wofull time.
Fa. Death that hath tane her hence to make me waile,
Ties vp my tongue, and will not let me speake.
Enter Friar and the Countie.
Fri. Come, is the Bride ready to go to Church?
Fa. Ready to go, but neuer to returne.
O Sonne, the night before thy wedding day,
Hath death laine with thy wife: there she lies,
Flower as she was, deflowred by him.
Death is my Sonne in law, death is my Heire,
My Daughter he hath wedded. I will die,
And leaue him all life liuing, all is death.
Pa. Haue I thought long to see this morninges face,
And doth it giue me such a sight as this?
Mo. Accurst, vnhappie, wretched hateful day,
Most miserable houre, that ere time saw
In lasting labour of his Pilgrimage.
But one, poore one, one poore and loving Child,
But one thing to reioyce and solace in,
And cruell death hath catcht it from my sight.
Nur. O wo, O wofull, wofull, wofull day,
Most lamentable day, most wofull day,
That ever, ever, I did yet behold.
O day, O day, O day, O hatefull day,
Neuer was seene so blacke a day as this:
O wofull day, O wofull day.
Pa. Beguild, diuorced, wronged, spighted, slaine,
Most detestable death, by thee beguil'd,
By cruell, cruell thee quite ouerthrowne:
O loue, O life: not life, but loue in death.
Pa. Despis'd, distressed, hated, martir'd, kill'd,
Vncomfortable time, why cam'st thou now
To murther, murther our solemnitie?
O Child, O Child; my soule, and not my Child,
Dead art thou, alacke my Child is dead,
And with my Child, my joyes are buried.
Fri. Peace ho for shame, confusion: Care lines not
In these confusions, heauen and your selfe
Had part in this faire Maid, now heauen hath all,
And all the better is it for the Maid:
Your part in her, you could not keepe from death,
But heauen keepes his part in eternall life:
The most you sought was her promotion,
For 'twas your heauen, she should be adorn'd,
And weepe ye now, seeing she is adorn'd
Aboue the Clouds, as high as Heauen it selfe?
O in this loue, you loue your Child so ill,
That you run mad, seeing that she is well:
Shee's not well married, that liues married long,
But shee's best married, that dies married yong.
Drie vp your teares, and sticke your Rosemarie
On this faire Coarse, and as the custome is,
And in her best array beare her to Church:
For though some Nature bids all vs lament,
Yet Natures teares are Reasons merriment.
Fa. All things that we ordained Festiuall,
Turne from their office to blacke Funerall:
Our instruments to melancholy Bells,
Our wedding cheare, to a sad burrall Feast:
Our solemne Hymnes, to sullen Dyrges change:
Our Bridall flowers serue for a buried Coarse:
And all things change them to the contrarie.
Fri. Sir go you in; and Madam, go with him,
And go sir Paris, every one prepare
To follow this faire Coarse vnto her graue:
The heauens do lowre vpon you, for some ill:
Moue them no more, by crossing their high will. Exeunt.
Mu. Faith we may put vp our Pipes and be gone.
Nur. Honest goodfellowes: Ah put vp, put vp,
For well you know, this is a pitiful case.
Mu. I by my troth, the case may be amended.
Enter Peter.
Pet. Musicians, oh Musicians,
Hearts ease, hearts ease,
O, and you will haue me liue, play hearts ease.
Mu. Why hearts ease;
Pet. O Musicians,
Because my heart is selfe plaies, my heart is full.
Mu. Not a dump we, 'tis no time to play now.
Pet. You will not then?
Mu. No.
Pet. I will then giue it you soundly.
Mu. What will you giue vs?
Pet. No money on my faith, but the gleeke.
I will giue you the Minstrell.
Mu. Then will I giue you the Seruing creature.
Peter. Then will I lay the seruing Creatures Dagger on your pate. I will carie no Crotchets, Ile Re you, Ile Fa you, do you note me?
Mu. And you Re vs, and Fa vs, you Note vs.
2 M. Pray you put vp your Dagger,
And put out your wit.
Then haue at you with my wit.
Peter. I will drie-beate you with an yron wit,
And put vp my yron Dagger.
Answere me like men:
When griping griefes the heart doth wound, then Musicke with her siluer sound.
Why siluer sound? why Musicke with her siluer sounds? what say you Simon Catling?
Mu. Marry sir, because siluer hath a sweet sound.
Pet. Prattest, what say you Hugh Rebeck?
2 M. I say siluer sound, because Musicians sound for siluer.
Pet. Prattest too, what say you James Soundpost? (ver
3. Mu. Faith I know not what to say.
Pet. O I cry you mercy, you are the Singer.
I will say for you; it is Musicke with her siluer sound,

Because Musicians haue no gold for sounding:
Then Musicke with her siluer sound with speedy helpe
doth lend redresse. Exit.

Mer. What a pestilent knaue is this same?

M.2. Hang him Iacke, come weele in here, tarrie for the Mourners, and stay dinner. Exit.

Enter Romeo.

Rom. If I may trust the flattering truth of sleepe,
My dreames presage some ioyfull newes at hand:
My bosomes L. sits lightly in his throne:
And all this an day an vncustom'd spirit,
Lifts me aboue the ground with cheerefull thoughts.
I dreamt my Lady came and found me dead,
(Strange dreame that gives a dead man leaue to thinke,)
And breath'd such life with kisses in my lips,
That I reuiu'd and was an Emperour.
Ah me, how sweet is loue it selfe possest,
When but loues shadowes are so rich in ioy.

Enter Romeo's man.

Newes from Verona, how now Balthazar?
Dost thou not bring me Letters from the Frier?
How doth my Lady? Is my Father well?
How doth my Lady Iuliet? that I aske againe,
For nothing can be ill, if she be well.

Man. Then she is well, and nothing can be ill.
Her body sleepes in Capels Monument,
And her immortall part with Angels liue,
I saw her laid low in her kindreds Vault,
And presently tooke Poste to tell it you:
O pardon me for bringing these ill newes,
Since you did leaue it for my office Sir.

Rom. Is it euen so?
Then I denie you Starres.
Thou knowest my lodging, get me inke and paper,
And hire Post-Horses, I will hence to night.

Man. I do beseech you sir, haue patience:
Your lookes are pale and wild, and do import
Some misaduenture.

Rom. Tush, thou art deceiu'd,
Leaue me, and do the thing I bid thee do.
Hast thou no Letters to me from the Frier?

Man. No my good Lord.

Exit Man.

Rom. No matter: Get thee gone,
And hyre those Horses, I le be with thee straight.
Well Iuliet, I will lie with thee to night:
Lets see for meanes: O mischiefe thou art swift,
To enter in the thoughts of desperate men:
I do remember an Appothecarie,
And here abouts dwells, which late I noted
In tattred weeds, with ouerwhelming browes,
Culling of Simples, meager were his lookes,
Sharpe miserie had worne him to the bones:
And in his needie shop a Tortoyse hung,
An Allegator stuft, and other skins
Of ill shap'd fishes, and about his shelues,
A beggerly account of emptie boxes,
Greene earthen pots, Bladders, and mustie seeden,
Remnants of packthred, and old cakes of Roses
Were thinly scattered, to make vp a shew.
Noting this penury, to my selfe I said,
An if a man did need a poyson now,
Whose sale is persent death in Mantua,
Here liues a Caitiffe wretch would sell it him.
O this same thought did but fore-run my need,
And this same needie man must sell it me.
As I remember, this should be the house,
Being holy day, the beggers shop is shut.
What ho? Appothecarie?

Enter Appothecarie.

App. Who call's so low'd?

Rom. Come hither man, I see that thou art poore,
Hold, there is fortie Duckets, let me haue
A dram of poyson, such soone speeding geese,
As will disperse it selfe through all the veines,
That the life-wearie-taker may fall dead,
And that the Trunke may be discharg'd of breath,
As violently, as hastie powder fier'd
Doth hurry from the fatall Canons wombe.

App. Such mortall drugs I haue, but Mantua law
Is death to any he, that vtters them.

Rom. Art thou so bare and full of wretchednesse,
And fear'st to die? Famine is in thy cheekes,
Need and oppression starueth in thy eyes,
Contempt and beggery hangs vpon thy backe!
The world is not thy friend, nor the worlds law
The world affords no law to make thee rich.
Then be not poore, but breake it, and take this.

App. My pouerty, but not my will consents.

Rom. I pray thy pouerty, and not thy will.

App. Put this in any liquid thing you will
And drinke it off, and if you had the strength
Of twenty men, it would dispatch you straight.

Rom. There's thy Gold,
Worse poyson to mens soules,
Doing more murther in this loathsome world,
Then these poore compounds that thou maiest not sell.
I sell thee poyson, thou hast sold me none.
Farewell, buy food, and get thy selfe in flesh.
Come Cordiall, and not poyson, go with me
To Iuliets grave, for there must I vse thee.

Exeunt.

Enter Friar Iohn to Friar Lawrence.

Iohn. Holy Francisco Frier, Brother, ho?

Enter Friar Lawrence.

Law. This same should be the voice of Frier Iohn.
Welcome from Mantua, what says Romeo?
Or if his mind be writ, give me his Letter.

Iohn. Going to find a bare-foote Brother out,
One of our order to associate me,
Here in this Citie visiting the sick,
And finding him, the Searchers of the Towne
Suspecting that we both were in a house
Where the infectious pestilence did raigne,
Seal'd vp the doores, and would not let vs forth,
So that my speed to Mantua there was staid.

Law. Who bare my Letter then to Romeo?

Iohn. I could not send it, here it is again,
Nor get a messenger to bring it thee,
So feareful were they of infection.

Law. Vnhappie Fortune: by my Brotherhood
The Letter was not nice, but full of charge,
Of deare import, and the neglecting it
May do much danger: Frier Iohn go hence,
Get me an Iron Crow, and bring it straight
Vnto my Cell.

Iohn. Brother I le go and bring it thee. Exit.

Law. Now must I to the Monument alone,
Within this three houres will faire Iuliet wake,
Shee will beshrew me much that Romeo
Hath had no notice of these accidents:
But I will write againe to Mantua,

And

And keepe her at my Cell till Romeo come,
Poore living Corse, clos'd in a dead mans Tombe,
Exit.

Enter Paris and his Page.

Par. Giue me thy Torch Boy, hence and stand aloft,
Yet put it out, for I would not be seene:
Vnder yond young Trees lay thee all along,
Holding thy eare close to the hollow ground,
So shall no foot vpon the Churchyard tread,
Being loose, vnfirme with digging vp of Graues,
But thou shalt heare it: whistle then to me,
As signall that thou hearest some thing approach,
Giue me those flowers. Do as I bid thee, go.
Page. I am almost afraid to stand alone
Here in the Churchyard, yet I will aduenture.
Par. Sweet Flower with flowers thy Bridall bed I strew:
O woe, thy Canopie is dust and stones,
Which with sweet water nightly I will dewe,
Or wanting that, with teares distil'd by mones;
The obsequies that I for thee will keepe,
Nightly shall be, to strew thy graue, and weepe.
Whistle Boy.
The Boy giues warning, something doth approach,
What cursed foot wanders this wayes to night,
To crosse my obsequies, and true loues right?
What with a Torch? Muffle me night a while

Enter Romeo and Peter.

Rom. Giue me that Mattocke, & the wrenching Iron,
Hold take this Letter, early in the morning
See thou deliuer it to my Lord and Father,
Giue me the light; vpon thy life I charge thee,
What ere thou hear'st or feest, stand all aloofe,
And do not interrupt me in my course,
Why I descend into this bed of death,
Is partly to behold my Ladies face:
But chiefly to take thence from her dead finger,
A precious Ring: a Ring that I must vse,
In deare employment, therefore hence be gone:.
But if thou iealous dost returne to pry
In what I further shall intend to do,
By heaven I will teare thee ioynt by ioynt,
And strew this hungry Churchyard with thy limbs:
The time, and my intents are sauage wilde:
More fierce and more inexorable fierce,
Then emptie Tygers, or the roaring Sea.
Pet. I will be gone sir, and not trouble you
Ro. So shalt thou shew me friendship: take thou that,
Liue and be prosperous, and farewell good fellow.
Pet. For all this same, I'le hide me here about,
His lookes I feare, and his intents I doubt.
Rom. Thou detestable mawe, thou wombe of death,
Gorg'd with the dearest morsell of the earth:
Thus I enforce thy rotten Iawes to open,
And in despight, I'le cram thee with more food.
Par. This is that banisht haughtie Mountague,
That murdred my Loues Cozin; with which griefe,
It is supposed the faire Creature died,
And here is come to do some villanous shame
To the dead bodies: I will apprehend him.
Stop thy vnhallowed toyle, vile Mountague:
Can vengeance be pursued further then death?
Condemned valiaine, I do apprehend thee.
Obey and go with me, for thou must die,

Rom. I must indeed, and therfore came I hither:
Good gentle youth, tempt not a desperate man,
Flie hence and leaue me, thinke vpon those gone,
Let them affright thee. I beseech thee Youth,
Put not an other sin vpon my head,
By vrging me to furie. O be gone,
By heauen I loue thee better then my selfe,
For I come hither arm'd against my selfe:
Stay not, be gone, liue, and hereafter say,
A mad mans mercy bid thee run away.
Par. I do defie thy commiseration,
And apprehend thee for a Felion here.
Ro. Wilt thou prouoke me? Then haue at thee Boy.
Pet. O Lord they fight, I will go call the Watch.
Pa. O I am slaine, if thou be mercifull,
Open the Tombe, lay me with Iuliet.
Rom. In faith I will, let me peruse this face:
Mercutius kinsman, Noble Countie Paris,
What said my man, when my betossed soule
Did not attend him as we rode? I thinke
He told me Paris should haue married Iuliet.
Said he not so? Or did I dreame it so?
Or am I mad, hearing him talke of Iuliet,
To thinke it was so? O giue me thy hand,
One, writ with me in sowre misfortunes booke.
I'le burie thee in a triumphant graue.
A Graue; O no, a Lanthorne; slaughtred Youth:
For here lies Iuliet, and her beautie makes
This Vault a feasting presence full of light.
Death lie thou there, by a dead man inter'd.
How oft when men are at the point of death,
Haue they beene merrie? Which their Keepers call
A lightning before death? Oh how may I
Call this a lightning? O my Loue, my Wife,
Death that hath suckt the honey of thy breath,
Hath had no power yet vpon thy Beautie.
Thou art not conquer'd. Beauties ensigne yet
Is Crymson in thy lips, and in thy cheekes,
And Deaths pale flagge is not aduanced there.
Tybalt, ly'st thou there in thy bloody sheet?
O what more fauour can I do to thee,
Then with that hand that cut thy youth in twaine,
To sunder his that was thy enemie?
Forgiue me Cozen. Ah deare Iuliet:
Why art thou yet so faire? I will beleeue,
Shall I beleeue, that vnsubstantiall death is amorous?
And that the leane abhorred Monster keepes
Thee here in darke to be his Paramoor?
For feare of that, I still will stay with thee,
And neuer from this Pallace of dym night
Depart againe: come lie thou in my armes,
Heere's to thy health, where ere thou tombest in.
O true Apothecarie!
Thy drugs are quicke. Thus with a kisse I die.
Depart againe; here, here will I remaine,
With Wormes that are thy Chambermaides: O here
Will I set vp my everlasting rest:
And shake the yoke of inauspicious starres
From this world-wearied flesh: Eyes looke your last:
Armes take your last embrace: And lips, O you
The doores of breath, seale with a righteous kisse
A dateless bargaine to ingrossing death:
Come bitter conduct, come vnsauoury guide,
Thou desperate Pilot, now at once run on
The dashing Rocks, thy Sea-sicke wearie Barke:
Heere's to my Loue. O true Apothecary:

Thy drugs are quicke. Thus with a kisse I die.

Enter Friar with Lanthorne, Crow, and Spade.

Fri. St. Francis be my speed, how oft to night
Haue my old feet stumbled at graues? Who's there?

Man. Here's one, a Friend, & one that knowes you well.

Fri. Blisse be vpon you. Tell me good my Friend
What Torch is yond that vainely lends his lighe
To grubs, and eyelesse Sculles? As I discerne,
It burneth in the Capels Monument.

Man. It doth so holy sir.
And there's my Master, one that you loue.

Fri. Who is it?

Man. Romeo.

Fri. How long hath he bin there?

Man. Full halfe an houre.

Fri. Go with me to the Vault.

Man. I dare not Sir:
My Master knowes not but I am gone hence,
And fearefully did menace me with death,
If I did stay to looke on his entents.

Fri. Stay, then Ile go alone, feares comes vpon me.
O much I feare some ill vnluckie thing.

Man. As I did sleepe vnder this young tree here,
I dreamt my maister and another fought,
And that my Maister slew him.

Fri. Romeo.
Alacke, alacke, what blood is this which stames
The stony entrance of this Sepulcher?
What meane these Masterlesse, and goarie Swords
To lie discolour'd by this place of peace?
Romeo, oh pale: who else? what Paris too?
And steept in blood? Ah what an vnkind houre
Is guiltie of this lamentable chance?
The Lady stirs.

Iul. O comfortable Frier, where's my Lord?
I do remember well where I should be:
And there I am, where is my Romeo?

Fri. I heare some noyse Lady, come from that nest
Of death, contagion, and vnnaturall sleepe,
A greater power then we can contradict
Hath thwarted our entents, come, come away,
Thy husband in thy bosome there lies dead:
And Paris too: come Ile dispose of thee,
Among a Sisterhood of holy Nunnes:
Stay not to question, for the watch is comming.
Come, go good Iuliet, I dare no longer stay. Exit.

Iul. Go get thee hence, for I will not away.
What's here? A cup clos'd in my true loues hand?
Poyson I see hath bin his timelesse end
O churle, drinke all? and left no friendly drop,
To helpe me after, I will kisse thy lips,
Happle some poyson yet doth hang on them.
To make me die with a restorative.
Thy lips are warme.

Enter Boy and Watch.

Watch. Lead Boy, which way?

Iul. Yea noise?
Then ile be briefe. O happy Dagger.
'Tis in thy sheath, there rust and let me die Kils herselfe.

Boy. This is the place,
There where the Torch doth burne

Watch. The ground is bloody,
Search about the Churchyard.
Go some of you, who ere you find attach.
Pittifull sight, here lies the Countie slaine,
And Iuliet bleeding, warme and newly dead
Who here hath laine these two dayes buried.
Go tell the Prince, runne to the Capulets,
Raise vp the Mountagues, some others search,
We see the ground whereon these woes do lye,
But the true ground of all these pitcous woes,
We cannot without circumstance descry.

Enter Romeo's man.

Watch. Here's Romeo's man,
We found him in the Churchyard.

Con. Hold him in safety, till the Prince come hither.

Enter Friar, and another Watchman.

3. Wat. Here is a Frier that trembles, sighes, and weepes:
We tooke this Mattocke and this Spade from him,
As he was comming from this Church-yard side.

Con. A great suspition, stay the Frier too.

Enter the Prince.

Prin. What misaduenture is so early vp,
That calls our person from our mornings rest?

Enter Capulet and his Wife.

Cap. What should it be that they so shrike abroad?

Wife. O the people in the streete crie Romeo.
Some Iuliet, and some Paris, and all runne
With open outcry toward our Monument.

Pri. What feare is this which startles in your eares?

Wat. Soueraigne, here lies the Countie Paris slaine,
And Romeo dead, and Iuliet dead before,
Warme and new kil'd.

Prin. Search,
Seeke, and know how, this foule murder comes.

Wat. Here is a Frier, and Slaughter'd Romeo's man,
With Instruments vpon them fit to open
These dead mens Tombes.

Cap. O heauen!
O wife looke how our Daughter bleedes!
This Dagger hath mistaine, for loe his house
Is empty on the backe of Mountague,
And is misheathed in my Daughters bosome.

Wife. O me, this sight of death, is as a Bell
That warnes my old age to a Sepulcher.

Enter Mountague.

Pri. Come Mountague, for thou art early vp
To see thy Sonne and Heire, now early downe.

Moun. Alas my liege, my wife is dead to night,
Griefe of my Sonnes exile hath stopt her breath:
What further woe conspires against my age?

Prin. Looke: and thou shalt see.

Moun. O thou vntaught, what manners is in this,
To presse before thy Father to a grave?

Prin. Seale vp the mouth of outrage for a while.
Till we can cleare these ambiguities,
And know their spring, their head, their true descent,
And then will I be generall of your woes,
And lead you euen to death: meane time forbeare,
And let mischance be slaue to patience,
Bring forth the parties of suspition.

Fri. I am the greatest, able to doe least,
Yet most suspected as the time and place
Doth make against me of this direfull murther:
And heere I stand both to impeach and purge
My selfe condemned, and my selfe excus'd.

Prin. Then say at once, what thou dost know in this.

Fri. I will be briefe, for my short date of breath
Is not so long as is a tedious tale.
Romeo there dead, was husband to that Iuliet,
And she there dead, that's Romeos faithfull wife:

I marryed them; and their stolne marriage day
Was Tybalts Doomesday: whose vntimely death
Banish'd the new-made Bridegroome from this Citie:
For whom (and not for Tybalt) Iuliet pinde.
You, to remoue that siege of Greefe from her,
Betroth'd, and would haue married her perforce
To Countie Paris. Then comes she to me,
And (with wild lookes) bid me deuise some meanes
To rid her from this second Marriage,
Or in my Cell there would she kill her selfe.
Then gaue I her (so Tutor'd by my Art)
A sleeping Potion, which so tooke effect
As I intended, for it wrought on her
The forme of death. Meane time, I writ to Romeo,
That he should hither come, as this dyre night,
To helpe to take her from her borrowed grauе,
Being the time the Potions force should cease.
But he which bore my Letter, Friar Iohn,
Was stay'd by accident; and yesternight
Return'd my Letter backe. Then all alone,
At the prefixed houre of her waking,
Came I to take her from her Kindredes vault,
Meaning to keepe her closely at my Cell,
Till I conueniently could send to Romeo.
But when I came (some Minuter ere the time
Of her awaking) heere vntimely lay
The Noble Paris, and true Romeo dead.
She wakes, and I intreated her come foorth,
And beare this worke of Heauen, with patience:
But then, a noyse did scarre me from the Tombe,
And she (too desperate) would not go with me,
But (as it seemes) did violence on her selfe.
All this I know, and to the Marriage her Nurse is priuy:
And if ought in this miscarried by my fault,
Let my old life be sacrific'd, some houre before the time,
Vnto the rigour of seuerest Law.

Prin. We still haue knowne thee for a Holy man.
Where's Romeo's man? What can he say to this?

Bay. I brought my Master newes of Iuliets death,
And then in post he came from Mantua
To this same place, to this same Monument.
This Letter he early bid me giue his Father,
And threatned me with death, going in the Vault,
If I departed not, and left him there.

Prin. Giue me the Letter, I will look on it
Where is the Counties Page that rais'd the Watch?
Sirra, what made your Master in this place?

Page. He came with flowres to strew his Ladies grauе,
And bid me stand aloofe, and so I did:
Anon comes one with light to ope the Tombe,
And by and by my Master drew on him,
And then I ran away to call the Watch.

Prin. This Letter doth make good the Friers words,
Their course of Loue, the tydings of her death:
And heere he writes, that he did buy a poyson
Of a poore Pothecarie, and therewithall
Came to this Vault to dye, and lye with Iuliet.
Where be these Enemies? Capulet, Mountague,
See what a scourge is laide vpon your hate,
That Heauen finds meanes to kill your ioyes with Loue;
And I, for winking at your discords too,
Haue lost a brace of Kinsmen: All are punish'd.

Cap. O Brother Mountague, giue me thy hand,
This is my Daughters ioynture, for no more
Can I demand.

Mont. But I can giue thee more:
For I will raise her Statue in pure Gold,
That whiles Verona by that name is knowne,
There shall no figure at that Rate be set,
As that of True and Faithfull Iuliet.

Cap. As rich shall Romeo by his Lady ly,
Poore sacrifices of our enmity.

Prin. A gloomeng peace this morning with it brings,
The Sunne for sorrow will not shew his head;
Go hence, to haue more talke of these sad things.
Some shall be pardon'd, and some punished:
For never was a Storie of more Wo,
Than this of Iuliet, and her Romeo. Exeunt omnes.

Gg

FINIS.

THE LIFE OF TYMON OF ATHENS.

Actus Primus. Scœna Prima.

Enter Poet, Painter, Iweller, Merchant, and Mercer, at seuerall doores.

Poet.

GOod day Sir.

Pain. I am glad y'are well.

Poet. I haue not seene you long, how goes the World?

Pain. It weares sir, as it growes.

Poet. I that's well knowne:
But what particular Rarity? What strange,
Which manifold record not matches: see
Magicke of Bounty, all these spirits thy power
Hath coniur'd to attend.
I know the Merchant.

Pain. I know them both: th'others a Iweller.

Mer. O'tis a worthy Lord.

Iew. Nay that's most fixt.

Mer. A most incomparable man, breath'd as it were,
To an vntyreable and continuate goodnesse:
He passes.

Iew. I haue a Iewell heere.

Mer. O pray let's see't. For the Lord Timon, sir?

Iewel. If he will touch the estimate. But for that—

Poet. When we for recompence haue prais'd the vild,
It staines the glory in that happy Verse,
Which aptly sings the good.

Mer. 'Tis a good forme.

Iewel. And rich: heere is a Water looke ye.

Pain. You are rapt sir, in some worke, some Dedication to the great Lord.

Poet. A thing slipt idlely from me.
Our Poesie is as a Gowne, which vses
From whence 'tis nourisht: the fire i'th Flint
Shewes not, till it be strooke: our gentle flame
Prouokes it selfe, and like the currant flyes
Each bound it chases. What haue you there?

Pain. A Picture sir: when comes your Booke forth?

Poet. Vpon the heeles of my presentment sir.
Let's see your peece.

Pain. 'Tis a good Peece.

Poet. So'tis, this comes off well, and excellent.

Pain. Indifferent.

Poet. Admirable: How this grace
Speakes his owne standing: what a mentall power
This eye shooteS forth? How bigge imagination
Moues in this Lip, to th'dumbnesse of the gesture,
One might interpret.

Pain. It is a pretty mocking of the life:
Heere is a touch: Is't good?

Poet. I will say of it,
It Tutors Nature, Artificiall strife
Liues in these touches, liuelier then life.

Enter certaine Senators.

Pain. How this Lord is followed.

Poet. The Senators of Athens, happy men.

Pain. Looke moe.

Po. You see this confluence, this great flood of visitors.
I haue in this rough worke, shap'd out a man
Whom this beneath world doth embrace and hugge
With amplest entertainment: My free drift
Halts not particularly, but moues it selfe
In a wide Sea of wax, no leuell'd malice
Infects one comma in the course I hold,
But flies an Eagle flight, bold, and forth on,
Leaning no Tract behinde.

Pain. How shall I vnderstand you?

Poet. I will vnbolt to you.
You see how all Conditions, how all Minds,
As well of glib and slipp'ry Creatures, as
Of Graue and austere qualitie, tender downe
Their seruices to Lord Timon: his large Fortune,
Vpon his good and gracious Nature hanging,
Subdues and properties to his loue and tendance
All sorts of hearts; yea, from the glasse-fac'd Flatterer
To Apemantus, that few things loues better
Then to abhorre himselfe; euen he drops downe
The knee before him, and returnes in peace
Most rich in Timons nod.

Pain. I saw them speake together.

Poet. Sir, I haue vpon a high and pleasant hill
Feign'd Fortune to be thron'd.
The Base o'th'Mount
Is rank'd with all deserts, all kinde of Natures
That labour on the bosome of this Sphere,
To propagate their states; among'st them all,
Whose eyes are on this Soueraigne Lady fixt,
One do I personate of Lord Timons frame,
Whom Fortune with her Ioiry hand wafts to her,
Whose present grace, to present slaues and seruants
Translates his Rivals.

Pain. 'Tis conceyu'd, to scope
This Throne, this Fortune, and this Hill me thinkes

With

With one man becken'd from the rest below,
Bowing his head against the steepy Mount
To climbe his happinesse, would be well expect
In our Condition.

Poet. Nay Sir, but heare me on:
All those which were his Fellowes but of late,
Some better then his value; on the moment
Follow his strides, his Lobbies fill with tendance,
Raine Sacrificiall whisperings in his eare,
Make Sacred even his stirrop, and through him
Drinke the free Ayre.

Pain. I marry, what of these?

Poet. When Fortune in her shift and change of mood
Spurnes downe her late beloued; all his Dependants
Which labour'd after him to the Mountaines top,
Even on their knees and hand, let him sit downe,
Not one accompanying his declining foot.

Pain. Tis common:
A thousand moall Paintings I can shew,
That shall demonstrate these quicke blowes of Fortune,
More pregnantly then words. Yet you do well,
To shew Lord Timon, that mesne eyes have seene
The foot above the head.

Trumpets sound.
Enter Lord Timon, addressing himselfe courteously to every Suitor.

Tim. Imprison'd is he, say you?

Mes. I my good Lord, five Talentes is his debt,
His means most short, his Creditors most straites
Your Honourable Letter he desires
To those have shut him vp, which failing,
Periods his comfort.

Tim. Noble Ventidius, well:
I am not of that Feather, to shake off
My Friend when he must neede me. I do know him
A Gentleman, that well deserves a helpe,
Which he shall have. Ile pay the debt, and free him.

Mes. Your Lordship ever binds him.

Tim. Commend me to him, I will send his ransome,
And being enfranchised bid him come to me;
'Tis not enough to helpe the Feeble vp,
But to support him after. Fare you well.

Mes. All happinesse to your Honor. Exit.

Enter an old Athenian.

Olde. Lord Timon, heare me speake.

Tim. Freely good Father.

Olde. Thou hast a Seruant nam'd Lucilius.

Tim. I haue so: What of him?

Olde. Most Noble Timon, call the man before thee.

Tim. Attends he heere, or not? Lucilius.

Luc. Heere at your Lordships seruice.

Olde. This Fellow heere, L. Timon, this thy Creature,
By night frequents my house. I am a man
That from my first haue beene inclin'd to thrift,
And my estate deserues an Heyre more rich'd,
Then one which holds a Trencher.

Tim. Well: what further?

Old. One only Daughter haue I, no Kin else,
On whom I may confirme what I haue got:
The Maid is fair, a'th'youngest for a Bride,
And I haue bred her at my dearest cost
In Qualities of the best. This man of thine
Attempts her loue: I prythee (Noble Lord)
Ioyne with me to forbid him her resort,
My selfe haue spoke in vaine.

Tim. The man is honest.

Olde. Therefore he will be Timon,
His honestly rewards him in it selfe,
It must not beare my Daughter.

Tim. Does she loue him?

Olde. She is yong and apt:
Our owne precedent passions do instruct vs
What lentities in youth.

Tim. Loue you the Maid?

Luc. I my good Lord, and she accepts of it.

Olde. If in her Marriage my consent be missing,
I call the Gods to witnesse, I will choose
Mine heyre from forth the Beggers of the world,
And disposesse her all.

Tim. How shall she be endowed,
If she be mated with an equall Husband?

Olde. Three Talents on the present; in future, all.

Tim. This Gentleman of mine
Hath serv'd me long:
To build his Fortune, I will straine a little,
For 'tis a Bond in men. Give him thy Daughter,
What you bestow, in him Ile counterpoise,
And make him weigh with her.

Olde. Most Noble Lord,
Pawne me to this your Honour, she is his.

Tim. My hand to thee,
Mine Honour on my promise.

Luc. Humbly I thanke your Lordship, never may
That state or Fortune fall into my keeping,
Which is not owed to you. Exit

Poet. Vouchsafe my Labour,
And long live your Lordship.

Tim. I thanke you, you shall heare from me anon:
Go not away. What haue you there, my Friend?

Pain. A peece of Painting, which I do beseech
Your Lordship to accept.

Tim. Painting is welcome.
The Painting is almost the Naturall man:
For since Dishonor Traffickes with man Nature,
He is but out-side: These Pensil'd Pigures are Even such as they gine out. I like your worke,
And you shall finde I like it; Waite attendance
Till you heare further from me.

Pain. The Gods preserue ye.

Tim. Well fare you Gentleman: give me your hand,
We must needs dine together: sir your Iewell
Hath suffered vnder praise.

Iewel. What my Lord, dispraise?

Tim. A mere Iaciety of Commendations,
If I should pay you for't as 'tis extold,
It would vnclew me quite.

Iewel. My Lord, 'tis rated
As those which sell would giue: but you well know,
Things of like valew differing in the Owners,
Are prized by their Masters. Believe't dear Lord,
You mend the Iewell by the wearing it.

Tim. Well mock'd. Enter Apemantus.

Mer. No my good Lord, he speakes the common tonge
Which all men speake with him.

Tim. Looke who comes heere, will you be chid?

Iewel. We'l beare with your Lordship.

Mer. He'l spare none.

Tim. Good morrow to thee,
Gentle Apemantus.

Ape. Till I be gentle, stay thou for thy good morrow.
When thou art Timons dogge, and these Knaues honest.
Tim. Why dost thou call them Knaues, thou know'st them not.
Ape. Are they not Athenians?
Tim. Yes.
Ape. Then I repent not.
Iew. You know me, Apemantus?
Ape. Thou know'st I do, I call'd thee by thy name.
Tim. Thou art proud Apemantus?
Ape. Of nothing so much, as that I am not like Timon
Tim. Whether art going?
Ape. To knocke out an honest Athenians braines.
Tim. That's a deed thou't dye for.
Ape. Right, if doing nothing be death by th'Law.
Tim. How lik'st thou this picture Apemantus?
Ape. The best, for the innocence.
Tim. Wrought he not well that painted it.
Ape. He wrought better that made the Painter, and yet he's but a filthy peece of worke.
Pain. Y'are a Dogge.
Ape. Thy Mothers of my generation: what's she, if I'l be a Dogge?
Tim. Wilt dine with me Apemantus?
Ape. No: I eate not Lords.
Tim. And thou should'st, thou'd'st anger Ladies.
Ape. O they eate Lords;
So they come by great bellies.
Tim. That's a lascinious apprehension.
Ape. So, thou apprehend'st it,
Take it for thy labour.
Tim. How dost thou like this Iewell, Apemantus?
Ape. Not so well as plain-dealing, which wil not cast a man a Doit.
Tim. What dost thou thinke 'tis worth?
Ape. Not worth my thinking.
How now Poet?
Poet. How now Philosopher?
Ape. Thou lyest.
Poet. Art not one?
Ape. Yes.
Poet. Then I lye not.
Ape. Art not a Poet?
Poet. Yes.
Ape. Then thou lyest:
Looke in thy last worke, where thou hast feign'd him a worthy Fellow.
Poet. That's not feign'd, he is so.
Ape. Yes he is worthy of thee, and to pay thee for thy labour. He that loues to be flattered, is worthy o'th flatterer. Heauens, that I were a Lord,
Tim. What wouldst do then Apemantus?
Ape. E'ne as Apemantus does now, hate a Lord with my heart.
Tim. What thy selfe?
Ape. I.
Tim. Wherefore?
Ape. That I had no angry wit to be a Lord.
Art not thou a Merchant?
Mer. I Apemantus.
Ape. Traffick confound thee, if the Gods will not.
Mer. If Trafficke do it, the Gods do it.
Ape. Trafficke thy God, & thy God confound thee.

Trumpet sounds. Enter a Messenger.

Tim. What Trompets that?
Mes. 'Tis Alcibiades, and some twenty Horse
All of Companionship.
Tim. Pray entertaine them, giue them guide to vs.
You must needs dine with me: go not you hence
Till I haue thankt you: when dinners done
Shew me this peece, I am loyfull of your sights.

Enter Alcibiades with the rest.

Most welcome Sir.
Ape. So, so; their Aches contract, and starue your supple loynts: that there should be small loue amongst these sweet Knaues, and all this Curtesie. The strains of mans bred out into Baboon and Monkey.
Alc. Sir, you haue saw'd my longing, and I feed
Most hungerly on your sight.
Tim. Right welcome Sir:
Ere we depart, we'l share a bounteous time
In different pleasures.
Pray you let vs in. Exeunt.

Enter two Lords.

1. Lord What time a day is't Apemantus?
Ape. Time to be honest.
1 That time serues still.
Ape. The most accursed thou that still omitst it.
2 Thou art going to Lord Timons Feast.
Ape. I, to see meate fill Knaues, and Wine heat fools.
2 Farthee well, farthee well.
Ape. Thou art a Foole to bid me farewell twice.
2 Why Apemantus?
Ape. Should'st haue kept one to thy selfe, for I meant to giue thee none.
1 Hang thy selfe.
Ape. No I will do nothing at thy bidding:
Make thy requests to thy Friend.
2 Away vnpeaceable Dogge,
Or Ile spurne thee hence.
Ape. I will fye like a dogge, the heeles o'th'Asse.
1 Hee's opposite to humanity.
Comes shall we in,
And taste Lord Timons bounte: he out-goes
The verie heart of kindnesse.
2 He powres it out: Plutus the God of Gold
Is but his Steward: no meede but he repayes
Seuen-fold aboue it selfe: No guiste to him,
But breeds the giuer a returne: exceeding
All vse of quittance.
1 The Noblest minde he carries,
That euer gouern'd man.
2 Long may he liue in Fortunes. Shall we in?
Ile keepe you Company. Exeunt.

Hoboyes Playing loud Musicke.

A great Banquet serued in: and then, Enter Lord Timon, the States, the Athenian Lords, Ventigius which Timon redeemed from prison. Then comes dropping after all Apemantus discontentedly like himselfe.

Ventig. Most honoured Timon,
It hath plese'd the Gods to remember my Fathers age,
And call him to long peace:
He is gone happy, and has left me rich:
Then, as in grateful Vertue I am bound
To your free heart, I do returne those Talents
Doubled with thankes and seruice, from whose helpe
I deriu'd libertie.
Tim. O by no meanes,
Honest Ventigius: You mistake my loue,

I gaue

I gaue it freely euer, and ther's none
Can truely say he giues, if he receiues:
If ouer bounties play at that game, we must not dare
To imitate them: faults that are rich are faire.
Pan. A Noble spirit.
Tim. Nay my Lords, Ceremony was but deuis'd at first
To set a gloss on faint deeds, hollow welcomes,
Recanting goodnesse, sorry ere 'tis showne:
But where there is true friendship, there need no none.
Pray sit, more welcome are ye to my Fortunes,
Then my Fortunes to me.
1. Lord. My Lord, we alwaies haue confest it.
Apem. Ho ho, confest it? Hangd'it? Haue you not?
Tim. O Apermantus, you are welcome.
Apem. No: You shall not make me welcome:
I come to haue thee thrust me out of doores.
Tim. Fie, th'art a churle, ye haue got a humour there
Does not become a man, 'tis much too blame:
They say my Lords, Ira furor brevis est,
But yond man is verie angrie.
Go, let him haue a Table by himselfe:
For he does neither affect companie,
Nor is he fit for't indeed.
Apem. Let me stay at thine apperill Timon,
I come to obserue, I giue thee warning on't.
Tim. I take no heede of thee: Th'art an Athenian,
therefore welcome: I my selfe would haue no power,
prythee let my meate make thee silent.
Apem. I scorne thy meate, 'twould choake me: for I should ere flatter thee. Oh you Gods! What a number of men eats Timon, and he sees 'em not? It greeues me to see so many dip their meate in one mans blood, and all the madnesse is, he cheeres them vp too.
I wonder men dare trust themselues with men.
Me thinks they should inuite them without knaues,
Good for their meate, and safer for their liues.
There's much example for't, the fellow that sits next him,
now parts bread with him, pledges the breath of him in a diuided draught: is the readiest man to kill him. 'Tis
beene proued, if I were a huge man I should feare to drinke at meales, least they should spoy my wind-pipes dangerous notes, great men should drinke with harnesse
on their throates.
Tim. My Lord in heart: and let the health go round.
2. Lord. Let it flow this way my good Lord.
Apem. Flow this way? A brauе fellow. He keepes his tides well, those healths will make thee and thy state
looke ill, Timon.
Heere's that which is too weake to beat a sinner,
Honest water, which neere left man i'th'mire:
This and my food are equals, there's no odds,
Feasts are too proud to giue thanks to the Gods.

Apermantus Grace.

Immortall Gods, I craue no pelfe,
I pray for no man but my selfe,
Grant I may never prouе so fond,
To trust man on his Oath or Bond.
Or a Harlot for her weeping,
Or a Dogge that seemes a sleeping,
Or a keeper with my freedome,
Or my friends if I should need 'em.
Amen. So fall to't:
Rich men sin, and I eat root.
Much good dich thy good heart, Apermantus
Tim. Captaine,
Alcibiades, your hearts in the field now.
Alci. My heart is euer at your seruice, my Lord.
Tim. You had rather be at a breakefast of Enemies,
then a dinner of Friends.
Alc. So they were bleeding new my Lord there's no
meat like 'em, I could wish my best friend at such a Feast.
Apem. Would all those Flatterers were thine Enemies
then, that then thou might'st kill 'em: & bid me to 'em.
1. Lord. Might we but haue that happinesse my Lord,
that you would once vse our hearts, whereby we might expresse some part of our zeales, we should think our selues for euer perfect.
Timon. Oh no doubt my good Friends, but the Gods
themselues haue prouided that I shall haue much helpe
from you: how had you beene my Friends else. Why
haue you that charitable title from thousands? Did not you chiefly belong to my heart? I haue told more of you to my selfe, then you can with modestie speake in your owne behalfe. And thus farre I confirme you. Oh you Gods (think I, what need we haue any friends, if we should ere haue need of 'em? They were the most needlesse Creatures liuing; should we ere haue vse for
'em? And would most resemble sweete Instruments
hung vp in Cases, that keepes their sounds to them-
selues. Why I haue often wisht my selfe poorer, that
I might come nearer to you: we are borne to do benefits. And what better or preparer can we call our owne, then the riches of our Friends? Oh what a pretious comfort 'tis, to haue so many like Brothers commanding
one anothers Fortunes. Oh loyes, e'ne made away er't can be borne: mine eies cannot hold out water, mine hearts
to forget their Faults. I drinke to you.
Apem. Thou weep'st to make them drinke, Timon.
2. Lord. Joy had the like conception in our eies,
And at that instant, like a babe sprung vp.
Apem. Ho, ho: I laugh to think that babe a bastard
3. Lord. I promise you my Lord you mou'd me much.
Apem. Much.

Sound Tucket. Enter the Maskers of Amazons, with Lutes in their hands dancing and playing.

Tim. What mannes that Trumpe? How now?

Enter Seruant.

Ser. Please you my Lord, there are certaine Ladies
Most desirous of admittance.
Tim. Ladies? what are their wills?
Ser. There comes with them a fore-runner my Lord,
which beares that office, to signifie their pleasures.
Tim. I pray let them be admitted.

Enter Cupid with the Masque of Ladies.

Cup. Haile to thee worthy Timon and to all that of his Bounties tasten the free best Sauces cknowledge thee their Patron, and come freely to gratulate thy plentious
bosome.
There tast, touch all pleas'd from thy Table rise:
They onely now come but to Feast thine eies.
Timo. They'r welcome all, let 'em haue kind admit-
tance. Musicke make their welcome.
Luc. You see my Lord, how ample y'are belou'd.
Apem. Hoyday,
What a sweepe of vanitie comes this way.
They dance? They are madwomen,

Like Madneſſe is the glory of this life,
As this pompe ſhewes to a little oyle and roote.
We make our ſelues Fooles, to diſport our ſelues,
And ſpend our Flatteries, to drinke thoſe men,
Vpon whoſe Age we voyde it vp again
With poyſonous Spight and Envy.
Who lives, that's not depraued, or depraues;
Who dyes, that beares not, one ſpurne to their graues
Of their Friends guift:
I ſhould feare, thoſe that dance before me now,
Would one day ſtampe vpon me: 'Tis bene done,
Men ſhut their doores againſt a ſetting Sunne.

The Lords riſe from Table, with much adoring of Timon, and to ſhew their loues, each ſing ſo out an Amazon, and all Dance, men with women, a loftie ſtraine or two to the Hoboyes, and ceaſe.

Tim. You haue done our pleaſures
Much grace (faire Ladies)
Set a faire faſhion on our entertainment,
Which was not halfe ſo beautifull, and kinde:
You haue added worth vnto't, and luſter,
And entertain'd me with mine owne deuice.
I am to thanke you for't.

1 Lord. My Lord you take vs euen at the beſt.

Apem. Faith for the worſt is filthy, and would not hold taking, I doubt me.

Tim. Ladies, there is an idle banquet attends you,
Pleaſe you to diſpoſe your ſelues.

All La. Moſt thankfully, my Lord. Exeunt.

Tim. Flaminius.

Fla. My Lord.

Tim. The little Casket, bring me hither.

Fla. Yes, my Lord. More Iewels yet?
There is no croſſing him in's humor,
Elſe I ſhould tell him well, y'faith I ſhould;
When all's ſpent, hee'ld be croſt then, and he could.
'Tis pitty Bounty had not eyes behinde,
That man might ne're be wretched for his minde. Exit.

1 Lord. Where be our men?

Ser. Heere my Lord, in readineſſe.

2 Lord. Our Horſes.

Tim. O my Friends:
I haue one word to ſay to you: Looke you, my good L.
I muſt intreat you honour me ſo much,
As to advance this Iewell, accept it, and weare it,
Kinde my Lord.

1 Lord. I am ſo ſarre already in your guifts.

All. So are we all.

Enter a Seruant.

Ser. My Lord, there are certaine Nobles of the Senate newly alighted, and come to viſit you.

Tim. They are ſairely welcome.

Enter Flaminius.

Fla. I beſeech your Honor, vouchſaſe me a word, it does concerne you neere.

Tim. Neere? why then another time I'le heare thee.
I prythee let's be prouided to ſhew them entertainment.

Fla. I ſcarſe know how.

Enter another Seruant.

Ser. May it pleaſe your Honor, Lord Lucius
(Out of his free loue) hath preſented to you
Foure Milke-white Horſes, trept in Siluer.

Tim. I ſhall accept them fairely: let the Preſents
Be worthily entertain'd.

Enter a third Seruant.

How now? What newes?

3. Ser. Pleaſe you my Lord, that honourable Gentleman Lord Lucullus, entreats your companie to morrow, to hunt with him, and ha's ſent your Honour two brace of Grey-hounds.

Tim. I'le hunt with him,
And let them be receiu'd, not without faire Reward.

Fla. What will this come to?
He commands vs to prouide, and giue great gifts, and all out of an empty Coffer:
Nor will he know his Purſe, or yeeld me this,
To ſhew him what a Begger his heart is,
Being of no power to make his wiſhes good.
His promiſes fly ſo beyond his ſtate,
That what he ſpeaks is all in debt, he owes for euery word:
He is ſo kinde, that he now payes intereſt for't;
His Land's put to their Bookes. Well, would I were
Gently put out of Office, before I were forc'd out:
Happier is he that has no friend to feede,
Then ſuch that do e'ne Enemies exceede.
I bleed inwardly for my Lord. Exit

Tim. You do your ſelues much wrong,
You bate too much of your owne merits.
Heere my Lord, a trifle of our Loue.

3 Lord. With more then common thankes
I will receyue it.

3. Lord. O he's the very ſoule of Bounty

Tim. And now I remember my Lord, you gaue good words the other day of a Bay Courſer I rod on. 'Tis yours becauſe you lik'd it.

1. L. Oh, I beſeech you pardon mee, my Lord, in that.

Tim. You may take my word my Lord: I know no man can iuſtly praiſe, but what he does affect. I weighe my Friends affection with mine owne: I'le tell you true, I'le call to you.

All Lor. O none ſo welcome.

Tim. I take all, and your ſeuerall viſitations
So kinde to heart, 'tis not enough to giue.
Me thinkes, I could deale Kingdomes to my Friends,
And ner be weatie. Alcibiades,
Thou art a Soldiour, therefore ſeldome rich,
It comes in Charitie to thee: for all thy liuing
Is mong'ſt the dead: and all the Lands thou haſt
Lye in a pitcht field.

Alc. I, defil'd Land, my Lord.

1. Lord. We are ſo vertuouſly bound.

Tim. And ſo am I to you.

2. Lord. So infinitely endeer'd.

Tim. All to you. Lights, more Lights.

1 Lord. The beſt of Happines, Honor, and Fortunes
Keepe with you Lord Timon. Exeunt Lords

Tim. Ready for his Friends.

Apem. What a coiles heere, ſerueing of becks, and nodding out of bonnets. I doubt whether their Legges be worth the ſummes that are giuen for 'em.
Friendſhips full of dregges,
Me thinkes falſe hearts, ſhould never haue ſound legges.
Thus honeſt Fooles lay out their wealth on Curtſies.

Tim. Now Apemantus (if thou wert not ſullen)
I would be good to thee.

Apem. No, I'le nothing; for if I ſhould be brib'd too, there would be none left to raile vpon thee, and then thou wouldſt ſinne the faſter. Thou giu'ſt ſo long Timon (I feare me) thou wilt giue away thy ſelfe in paper ſhortly. What needs theſe Feaſts, pompes, and Vaine-glories?

Tim. Nay, and you begin to raile on Societie once, I am sworne not to give regard to you. Farewell, & come with better Musicke. Exit

Apem. So: Thou wilt not heare mee now, thou shalt not then. Ile locke thy heaven from thee:
Oh that mens eares should be
To Counsell deafe, but not to Flatterie. Exit

Enter a Senator.

Sen. And late five thousand: to Varro and to Isidore
He owes nine thousand, besides my former summe,
Which makes it five and twenty. Still in motion
Of raging waste? It cannot hold, it will not.
If I want Gold, steale but a beggers Dogge,
And give it Timon, why the Dogge coines Gold
If I would sell my Horse, and buy twenty moe
Better then he; why give my Horse to Timon.
Aske nothing, give it him, it Foles me straight
And able Horses: No Porter at his gate,
But rather one that smiles, and still invites
All that passe by. It cannot hold, no reason
Can sound his state in safety. Caphis hoa,
Caphis I say.

Enter Caphis.

Ca. Heere sir, what is your pleasure.
Sen. Get on your cloake, & haste you to Lord Timon,
Importune him for my Moneyes, be not ceast
With slights denials; nor then silenc'd, when
Commend me to your Master, and the Cap
Playes in the right hand, thus: but tell him,
My Vses cry to me; I must serve my turne
Out of mine owne, his dayes and times are past,
And my reliances on his fracted dates
Have smit my credit. I love, and honour him,
But must not breake my backe, to heale his finger.
Immediate are my needs, and my releefe
Must not be tost and turn'd to me in words,
But finde supply immediate. Get you gone,
Put on a most importunate aspect,
A visage of demand: for I do feare
When every Feather sticks in his owne wing,
Lord Timon will be left a naked gull,
Which flashes now a Phœnix, get you gone.
Ca. I go sir.
Sen. I go sir?
Take the Bonds along with you,
And have the dates in. Come.
Ca. I will Sir.
Sen. Go. Exeunt

Enter Steward, with many bills in his hand.

Stew. No care, no stop, so senselesse of expence,
That he will neither know how to maintaine it,
Nor cease his flow of Riot. Takes no accompt
How things go from him, nor restrine no care
Of what is to continue: never minde,
Was to be so vawise, to be so kinde.
What shall be done, he will not heare, till feele:
I must be round with him, now he comes from hunting.
Fye, fie, fie, fie.

Enter Caphis, Isidore, and Varro.

Cap. Good even Varro: what, you come for money?
Var. Is't not your business too?
Cap. It is, and yours too, Isidore?
Isid. It is so.
Cap. Would we were all discharg'd.
Var. I feare it.
Cap. Heere comes the Lord.

Enter Timon, and his Traine.

Tim. So soone as dinners done, wee'l forth againe
My Alcibiades. With me, what is your will?
Cap. My Lord, heere is a note of certaine dues.
Tim. Dues? whence are you?
Cap. Of Athens heere, my Lord.
Tim. Go to my Steward.
Cap. Please it your Lordship, he hath put me off
To the succession of new dayes this moneth:
My Master is swak'd by great Occasion,
To call vpon his owne, and humbly prayes you,
That with your other Noble parts, you'l suite,
In giving him his right.
Tim. Mine honest Friend,
I prythee but repaire to me next morning.
Cap. Nay, good my Lord.
Tim. Containe thy selfe, good Friend.
Var. One Varrous seruant, my good Lord.
Isid. From Isidore, he humbly prayes your speedy payment.
Cap. If you did know my Lord, my Masters wants.
Var. 'Twas due on forfeyture my Lord, fixe weeke and past.
Isi. Your Steward puts me off my Lord, and I
Am sent expressly to your Lordship.
Tim. Give me breath:
I do beseech you good my Lords keepe on,
Ile waite vpon you instantly. Come hither. pray you
How goes the world, that I am thus encountred
With clamorous demands of debt, broken Bonds,
And the detention of long since due debts
Against my Honor?
Stew. Please you Gentlemen,
The time is vnagreeable to this businesse:
Your importunacie cease, till after dinner,
That I may make his Lordship understand
Wherefore you are not paid.
Tim. Do so my Friends, see them well entertain'd.
Stew. Pray draw neere. Exit.

Enter Apemantus and Foole.

Caph. Stay, stay, here comes the Foole with Apemantus, let's haue some sport with 'em.
Var. Hang him, hee'l abuse vs.
Isid. A plague vpon him dogge.
Var. How dost Foole?
Ape. Dost Dialogue with thy shadow?
Var. I speake not to thee.
Ape. No 'tis to thy selfe. Come away.
Isi. There's the Foole hangs on your backe already.
Ape. No thou stand'st single, th'art not on him yet.
Cap. Where's the Foole now?
Ape. He last ask'd the question. Poore Rogues, and Vsurers men, Bonds betweene Gold and want.
All. What are we Apemantus?
Ape. Asses.
All. Why?
Ape. That you ask me what you are, & do not know your selues. Speake to 'em Foole.
Foole. How do you Gentlemen?
All. Gramercies good Foole:
How does your Mistris?

Foole.

te Madneſſe is the glory of this life,
this pompe ſhewes to a little oyle and roote.
emake our ſelues Fooles, to diſport our ſelues,
d ſpend our Flatteries, to drinke thoſe men,
pon whoſe Age we voyde it vp agen
ith poyſonous Spight and Enuy.
ho liues, that's not depraued, or depraues;
ho dyes, that beares not one ſpurne to their graues
their Friends guift:
hould feare, thoſe that dance before me now,
ould one day ſtampe vpon me: 'Tas bene done,
en ſhut their doores againſt a ſetting Sunne.

e Lords riſe from Table, with much adoring of Timon, and to ſhew their loues, each ſingle out an Amazon, and all Dance, men with women, a loftie ſtraine or two to the Hoboyes, and ceaſe.

Tim. You haue done our pleaſures
ich grace (faire Ladies)
a faire faſhion on our entertainment,
hich was not halfe ſo beautifull, and kinde:
u haue added worth vntoo't, and luſter,
d entertain'd me with mine owne deuice.
n to thanke you for't.
Lord. My Lord you take vs euen at the beſt.
Aper. Faith for the worſt is filthy, and would not hold ing, I doubt me.
Tim. Ladies, there is an idle banquet attends you,
aſe you to diſpoſe your ſelues.
All La. Moſt thankfully, my Lord. Exeunt.
Tim. Flaminius.
Fla. My Lord.
Tim. The little Casket bring me hither.
Fla. Yes, my Lord. More Iewels yet?
ere is no croſſing him in's humor,
: I ſhould tell him well, y faith I ſhould;
hen all's ſpent, hee'ld be croſt then, and he could.
pity Bounty had not eyes behinde,
at man might ne're be wretched for his minde. Exit.
Lord. Where be our men?
er. Heere my Lord, in readineſſe.
Lord. Our Horſes.
Tim. O my Friends:
ue one word to ſay to you: Looke you, my good L.
uſt intreat you honour me ſo much,
o aduance this Iewell, accept it, and weare it,
de my Lord.
Lord. I am ſo farre already in your guiſts.
All. So are we all.
Enter a Seruant.
er. My Lord, there are certaine Nobles of the Senate ly alighted, and come to viſit you.
im. They are fairely welcome.
Enter Flaminius.
la. I beſeech your Honor, vouchſafe me a word, it s concerne you neere.
Tim. Neere? why then another time I'le heare thee.
ythee let's be prouided to ſhew them entertainment.
la. I ſcarſe know how.
Enter another Seruant.
er. May it pleaſe your Honor, Lord Lucius
t of his free loue) hath preſented to you re Milke-white Horſes, trapt in Siluer.
im. I ſhall accept them fairely: let the Preſents orthily entertain'd.

Enter a third Seruant.
How now? What newes?
3. Ser. Pleaſe you my Lord, that honourable Gentleman Lord Lucullus, entreats your companie to morrow, to hunt with him, and ha's ſent your Honour two brace of Grey-hounds.
Tim. Ile hunt with him,
And let them be receiu'd, not without faire Reward.
Fla. What will this come to?
He commands vs to prouide, and giue great guiſts, and all out of an empty Coffer:
Nor will he know his Purſe, or yeeld me this,
To ſhew him what a Begger his heart is,
Being of no power to make his wiſhes good.
His promiſes flye ſo beyond his ſtate,
That what he ſpeaks is all in debt, he ows for euery word:
He is ſo kinde, that he now payes intereſt for't;
His Land's put to their Bookes. Well, would I were
Gently put out of Office, before I were forc'd out:
Happier is he that has no friend to feede,
Then ſuch that do e'ne Enemies exceede.
I bleed inwardly for my Lord. Exit
Tim. You do your ſelues much wrong,
You bate too much of your owne merits.
Heere my Lord, a trifle of our Loue.
2 Lord. With more then common thankes
I will receyue it.
3. Lord. O he's the very ſoule of Bounty
Tim. And now I remember my Lord, you gaue good words the other day of a Bay Courſer I rod on. 'Tis yours becauſe you lik'd it.
1. L. Oh, I beſeech you pardon mee, my Lord, in that.
Tim. You may take my word my Lord: I know no man can iuſtly praiſe, but what he does affect. I weight my Friends affection with mine owne: Ile tell you true. Ile call to you.
All Lor. O none ſo welcome.
Tim I take all, and your ſeuerall viſitations
So kinde to heart, 'tis not enough to giue.
Me thinkes, I could deale Kingdomes to my Friends,
And nere be wearie. Alcibiades,
Thou art a Soldiour, therefore ſildome rich,
It comes in Charitie to thee: for all thy living
Is mong'ſt the dead: and all the Lands thou haſt
Lye in a pitcht field.
Alc. I, defil'd Land, my Lord.
1. Lord. We are ſo vertuouſly bound.
Tim. And ſo am I to you.
2. Lord. So infinitely endeer'd.
Tim. All to you. Lights, more Lights.
1 Lord. The beſt of Happines, Honor, and Fortunes
Keepe with you Lord Timon.
Tim. Ready for his Friends. Exeunt Lords.
Aper. What a coiles heere, ſerung of bekers, and ſtanding out of bumms. I doubt whether their Legge be worth the ſummes that are giuen 'em.
Friendſhips full of dregges,
Me thinkes falſe hearts, (should neuer have ſound legges.)
Thus honeſt Fooles lay out their wealth on Courtſies.
Tim. Now Apermantus (if thou wert not ſullen)
I would be good to thee.
Aper. No, Ile nothing; for if I ſhould be bribd too, there would be none left to raile vpon thee, and thou wouldſt ſinne the faſter. Thou giu'ſt ſo long Timon, I feare me, thou wilt giue away thy ſelfe in paper ſhortly. What needs these Feaſts, pompes, and Vaine-glories.

Tim. Nay, and you begin to raile on Societie once, I am sworne not to give regard to you. Farewell, & come with better Musicke. Exit

Apem. So: Thou wilt not heare mee now, thou shak not then. He locke thy heauen from thee :
Oh that mens eares should be
To Counsell deafe, but not to Flatterie. Exit

Enter a Seruitor.

Ser. And late five thousand: to Varro and to Isidore
He owes nine thousand, besides my former summe,
Which makes it five and twenty. Still in motion
Of raging waste? It cannot hold, it will not.
If I wast Gold, steale but a beggers Dogge,
And give it Timon, why the Dogge coines Gold
If I would sell my Horse, and buy twenty moe
Better then he; why give my Horse to Timon,
Aske nothing, give it him, it Foles me straight
And able Horses: No Porter at his gate,
But rather one that smiles, and still invites
All that passe by. It cannot hold, no reason
Can found his state in safety. Caphis hoe,
Caphis I say.

Enter Caphis.

Ca. Heere sir, what is your pleasure.
Ser. Get on your cloake, & haste you to Lord Timon,
Importune him for my Moneyes, be not ceast
With slighe denialls; nor then silenc'd, when
Commend me to your Master, and the Cap
Playes in the right hand, thus: but tell him,
My Vses cry to me; I must serue my turne
Out of mine owne, his dayes and times are past,
And my reliances on his fracted dates
Haue smit my credit. I loue, and honour him,
But must not breake my backe, to heale his finger.
Immediate are my needs, and my releefe
Must not be tost and turn'd to me in words,
But finde supply immediate. Get you gone,
Put on a most importunate aspect,
A visage of demand: for I do feare
When every Feather sticks in his owne wing,
Lord Timon will be left a naked gull,
Which flashes now a Phœnix, get you gone.
Ca. I go sir.
Ser. I go sir?
Take the Bonds along with you,
And haue the dates in. Come.
Ca. I will Sir.
Ser. Go. Exeunt

Enter Steward, with many bills in his hand.

Stew. No care, no stop, so senseless of expence,
That he will neither know how to maintaine it,
Not cease his flow of Riot. Takes no accompt
How things go from him, nor resume no care
Of what is to continue: neuer minde,
Was to be so vnwise, to be so kinde.
What shall be done, he will not heare, till feele:
I must be round with him, now he comes from hunting.
Fye, fie, fie, fie.

Enter Caphis, Isidore, and Varro.

Ca. Good even Varro: what, you come for money?
Var. Is not your businesse too?
Ca. It is, and yours too, Isidore?
Isid. It is so.

Ca. Would we were all discharged.
Var. I feare it,
Ca. Heere comes the Lord.

Enter Timon, and his Train.

Tim. So soone as dinner done, we will take leaue,
My Alcibiades. With me, what is your will?
Ca. My Lord, here is a note of certaine dues.
Tim. Dues? whence are you?
Ca. Of Athens heere, my Lord.
Tim. Go to my Steward.
Ca. Please it your Lordship, he hath put me off
To the succession of new days this month.
My Master is awak'd by great Occasion,
To call vpon his own, and humbly prayes you,
That with your other Noble parts you suddenly
In giuing him his right.
Tim. Mine honest Friend,
I prythee but repaire to me next morning.
Ca. Nay, good my Lord.
Tim. Containe thy selfe gentlefriend.
Var. One Varro seruant, my good Lord.
Isid. Seruant Isidore here, humbly prayes you for your money.
Ca. If you did know my Lord my Master.
Var. 'Twas due on Saturday, 'twas promis'd on Wednesday and past.
Isi. Your Seruant paies ere all my Lord, still Am forc'd expeditely to your Lordship.
Tim. Come on, be patient.
I do beseech you good my Lords be patient.
Her mistrisse vpon you infinitely. Courtesie stays
How goes the world, that I am thus encountred
With clamorous demands of debt, broken bonds,
And the detention of long since due debts
Against my Honor?
Ser. Please you Gentlemen,
The time is vnseasonable to this behaviour.
Your importunate cries, till after dinner,
That I may make his Lordship understand
Wherefore you are not paid.
Tim. Do so my Friends, see them well entertained.
Ser. Pray draw neere.

Enter Apemantus and his Train.

Capt. Stay, stay, here comes the Foole with Apemantus, let's hast to him.
Var. Hang him, he's a dog.
Isid. A plague vpon him dog!
Var. How dost Foole?
Apem. Dost thy Dinner eat thy fellow?
Var. I speake not to thee.
Apem. No tis to thy selfe. Come away.
Isi. There's the Fool hangs on your back.
Apem. No thou stand'st single, thou art not on him yet.
Capt. What dis the Dog?
Apem. He hath a tail like a dog, how else?
Whores sons, Bankrouts, Seruants.
All. What are these?
Apem. Alas.
All. Why?
Apem. The [illegible]
you [illegible]
Isid. [illegible]
All. Come [illegible]
How [illegible]

Mary.

[illegible] upon you.
[illegible] rowe their
[illegible] all'd despe-
Exeunt.
[illegible] from mee the
[illegible] ard?
[illegible] my Friends againe
[illegible] Varro: All,
[illegible] icials.
[illegible] ou onely speake from your diffe-
[illegible] t so much left to, furnish out a mo-

Foole. She's e'ne setting on water to scal'd such Chickens as you are. Would we could see you at Corinth.

Ape. Good, Gramercy.

Enter Page.

Foole. Looke you, heere comes my Masters Page.

Page. Why how now Captaine? what do you in this wise Company.
How dost thou Apemantus?

Ape. Would I had a Rod in my mouth, that I might answer thee profitably

Boy. Prythee Apemantus reade me the superscription of these Letters, I know not which is which.

Ape. Canst not read?

Page No.

Ape. There will litle Learning dye then that day thou art hang'd. This is to Lord Timon, this to Alcibiades. Go thou was't borne a Bastard, and thou't dye a Bawd.

Page. Thou was't whelpt a Dogge, and thou shalt famish a Dogges death.
Answer not, I am gone. Exit

Ape. E'ne so thou out-runst Grace,
Foole I will go with you to Lord Timons.

Foole. Will you leaue me there?

Ape. If Timon stay at home.
You three serue three Vsurers?

All. I would they serv'd vs.

Ape. So would I:
As good a tricke as ever Hangman serv'd Theefe.

Foole. Are you three Vsurers men?

All. I Foole.

Foole. I think no Vsurer, but ha's a Foole to his Seruant. My Mistris is one, and I am her Foole: when men come to borrow of your Masters, they approach sadly, and go away merry: but they enter my Masters house merrily, and go away sadly. The reason of this?

Var. I could render one.

Ap. Do it then, that we may account thee a Whoremaster, and a Knaue, which notwithstanding thou shalt be no lesse esteemed.

Varro. What is a Whoremaster Foole?

Foole. A Foole in good cloathes, and something like thee. 'Tis a spirit, sometime t'appeares like a Lord, sometime like a Lawyer, sometime like a Philosopher, with two stones moe then's artificiall one. Hee is verie often like a Knight; and generally, in all shapes that man goes vp and downe in, from fourescore to thirteen, this spirit walkes in.

Var. Thou art not altogether a Foole:

Foole. Nor thou altogether a Wist man,
As much foolerie as I haue, so much wit thou lack'st.

Apo. That answer might haue become Apemantus.

All. Aside, aside, heere comes Lord Timon.

Enter Timon and Steward.

Ape. Come with me (Foole) come.

Foole. I do not always follow Louer, elder Brother, and Woman, sometime the Philosopher.

Stew. Pray you walken eere,
Ile speake with you anon. Exeunt.

Tim. You make me meruell wherefore ere this time
Had you not fully hide my state before me,
That I might so haue rated my expence
As I had leaue of meanes.

Stew. You would not heare me:
At many leysures I propose.

Tim. Go too:
Perchance some single vantages you tooke,
When my indisposition put you backe,
And that vnaptnesse made your minister
Thus to excuse your selfe.

Stew. O my good Lord,
At many times I brought in my accompes,
Laid them before you, you would throw them off,
And say you found them in mine honestie.
When for some trifling present you haue bid me
Returne so much, I haue shooke my head, and wept:
Yes 'gainst th'Authoritie of manners, pray'd you
To hold your hand more close: I did indure
Not fildome, nor no slight checkes, when I haue
Prompted you in the ebbe of your estate,
And your great flow of debts; my lou'd Lord,
Though you heare now (too late) yet now's a time,
The greatest of your having, lackes a halfe,
To pay your present debts.

Tim. Let all my Land be sold.

Stew. Tis all engag'd, some forfeyted and gone,
And what remaines will hardly stop the mouth
Of present dues; the future comes space:
What shall defend the interim, and at length
How goes our reck'ning?

Tim. To Lacedemon did my Land extend.

Stew. O my good Lord, the world is but a word,
Were it all yours, to giue it in a breath,
How quickly were it gone.

Tim. You tell me true.

Stew. If you suspect my Husbandry or Falsehood,
Call me before th'exactest Auditors,
And set me on the proofe. So the Gods blesse me,
When all our Offices haue beene oppressi
With riotous Feeders, when our Vaults haue wept
With drunken spilth of Wine; when every roome
Hath blaz'd with Lights, and bray'd with Minstrelsie,
I haue retyr'd me to a wastefull cocke,
And set mine eyes at flow.

Tim. Prythee no more.

Stew. Heauens haue I said, the bounty of this Lord:
How many prodigall bits haue Slaues and Peasants
This night englutted: who is not Timons,
What heart, head, sword, force, meanes, but is L. Timon:
Great Timon, Noble, Worthy, Royall Timon:
Ah, when the meanes are gone, that buy this praise,
The breath is gone, whereof this praise is made:
Feast won, fast lost; one cloud of Winter showres,
These flyes are couch't.

Tim. Come sermon me no further.
No villanous bounty yet hath past my heart;
Vnwisely, not ignobly haue I given.
Why dost thou weepe, canst thou the conscience lacke,
To thinke I shall lacke friends: secure thy heart,
If I would broach the vessels of my loue,
And try the argument of hearts, by borrowing,
Men, and mens fortunes could I frankly vse
As I can bid thee speake.

Stew. Assurance blesse your thoughts.

Tim. And in some sort these wants of mine are crowned,
That I account them blessings. For by these
Shall I trie Friends. You shall perceiue
How you mistake my Fortunes;
I am wealthie in my Friends.
Within there, Flaminius, Seruilius?

Seru.

Enter three Servants.

Ser. My Lord, my Lord.

Tim. I will dispatch you severally.
You to Lord Lucius, to Lord Lucullus you, I hunted
with his Honor to day; you to Sempronius; commend me
to their loues; and I am proud say, that my occasions
haue found time to vse 'em toward a supply of money: let
the request be fifty Talents.

Flam. As you haue said, my Lord.

Serv. Lord Lucius and Lucullus? Humh.

Tim. Go you sir to the Senators;
Of whom, euen to the States best health; I haue
Deserv'd this Hearing: bid 'em send o'th'instant
A thousand Talents to me.

Ser. I haue beene bold
(For that I knew it the most generall way)
To them, to vse your Signet, and your Name,
But they do shake their heads, and I am heere
No richer in returne.

Tim. Is't true? Can't be?

Serv. They answer in a joynt and corporate voice,
That now they are at fall, want Treasure cannot
Do what they would, are sorrie: you are Honourable,
But yet they could haue wisht, they know not,
Something hath beene amisse; a Noble Nature
May catch a wrench; would all were well; 'tis pity,
And so intending other serious matters,
After distastefull looks; and these hard Fractions
With certaine half-caps, and cold moving nods,
They frost me into Silence.

Tim. You Gods reward them:
Prythee man looke cheerely. These old Fellowes
Haue their ingratitude in them Hereditary:
Their blood is cak'd, 'tis cold, it seldome flowes,
'Tis lacke of kindely warmth, they are not kinde;
And Nature, as it growes againe toward earth,
Is fashion'd for the journey, dull and heavy.
Go to Ventidius (prythee be not sad,
Thou art true, and honest; Ingeniously I speake,
No blame belongs to thee:) Ventidius lately
Buried his Father, by whose death hee's stepp'd
Into a great estate: When he was poore,
Imprison'd, and in scarcitie of Friends,
I clear'd him with fiue Talents: Greet him from me,
Bid him suppose, some good necessity
Touches his Friend, which craues to be remembred
With those fiue Talents; that had, giue't these Fellowes
To whom 'tis instant due. Ne'r speake, or think,
That Timons fortunes 'mong his Friends can sinke.

Serv. I would I could not thinke it:
That thought is Bounties Foe;
Being free it selfe, it thinkes all others so. Exeunt

Flaminius waiting to speaky with a Lord from his Master, enters a seruant to him.

Ser. I haue told my Lord of you, he is comming down
to you.

Flam. I thanke you Sir.

Enter Lucullus.

Ser. Heere's my Lord.

Luc. One of Lord Timons men? A Gift I warrant.
Why this hits right: I dreamt of a Siluer Basen & Ewre
to night. Flaminius, honest Flaminius, you are verie respectively welcome sir. Fill me some Wine. And how does that Honourable, Complete, Free-hearted Gentleman of Athens, thy very bountifull good Lord and Mayster?

Flam. His health is well sir.

Luc. I am right glad that his health is well sir: and what hast thou there vnder thy Cloake, pretty Flaminius?

Flam. Faith, nothing but an empty box Sir, which in my Lords behalfe, I come to entreat your Honor to supply: who hauing great and instant occasion to vse fiftie
Talents, hath sent to your Lordship to furnish him: nothing doubting your present assistance therein.

Luc. La, la, la, la: Nothing doubting sayes hee? Alas
good Lord, a Noble Gentleman 'tis, if he would not keep so good's house. Many a time and often I ha din'd with him, and told him on't, and come againe to supper to him
of purpose, to haue him spend lesse, and yet he would embrace no counsell, take no warning by my comming, every man has his fault, and honesty is his. I ha told him on't,
but I could nere get him from't.

Enter Seruant with Wine.

Ser. Please your Lordship, heere is the Wine.

Luc. Flaminius, I haue noted thee always wise.
Heere's to thee.

Flam. Your Lordship speakes your pleasure.

Luc. I haue obserued thee always for a towardlie prompt spirit, giue thee thy due, and one that knowes
what belongs to reason; and canst vse the time well, if the time vse thee well. Good parts in thee; get you gone sir-
rah. Draw neerer honest Flaminius. Thy Lords a bountifull Gentleman, but thou art wise, and thou know'st
well enough (although thou com'st to me) that this is no
time to lend money, especially vpon bare friendshippe
without securitie. Here's three Solidares for thee, good
Boy winke at me, and say thou saw'st mee not. Fare thee
well.

Flam. Is't possible the world should so much differ,
And we alise that liued? Fly damned basenesse
To him that worships thee.

Luc. Ha? Now I see thou art a Foole, and fit for thy Master. Exit L.

Flam. May these adde to the number, may scald thee:
Let moulten Coine be thy damnation.
Thou disease of a friend, and not himselfe:
Has friendship such a faint and milkie heart,
It turnes in lesse then two nights? O you Gods!
I feele my Masters passion. This Slaue vnto his Honor,
Has my Lords meate in him:
Why should it thriue, and turne to Nutriment,
When he is turn'd to poyson?
O may Diseases only worke vpon't:
And when he's sicke to death, let not that part of Nature
Which my Lord payd for, be of any power
To expell sicknesse, but prolong his hower. Exit.

Enter Lucius, with three strangers.

Luc. Who the Lord Timon? He is my very good friend
and an Honourable Gentleman.

1 We know him for no lesse, though we see but strun-gers to him. But I can tell you one thing my Lord, and which I heare from common rumours, now Lord Timons
happie hourres are done and past, and his estate shrinkes
from him.

Lucius. Fye no, doe not beleeue it: he cannot want
for money.

2. But beleeue you this my Lord, that not long ago,
one of his men was with the Lord Lucullus, to borrow so many Talents, nay vrg'd extreamly for't, and shewed
what

THE LIFE OF TYMON OF ATHENS.

Actus Primus. Scœna Prima.

Enter Poet, Painter, Iweller, Merchant, and Marrow, at seuerall doores.

Poet.

GOod day Sir.

Pain. I am glad y're well.

Poet. I haue not seene you long, how goes the World?

Pain. It weares sir, as it growes.

Poet. I that's well knowne:
But what particular Rarity? What strange,
Which manifold record not matches: see
Magicke of Bounty, all these spirits thy power
Hath coniur'd to attend.
I know the Merchant.

Pain. I know them both: th'others a Iweller.

Mer. O 'tis a worthy Lord.

Iew. Nay that's most fixt.

Mer. A most incomparable man, breath'd as it were,
To an vntyreable and continuate goodnesse:
He passes.

Iew. I haue a Iewell heere.

Mer. O pray let's see't. For the Lord Timon, sir?

Iewel. If he will touch the estimate. But for that—

Poet. When we for recompence haue prais'd the vild,
It staines the glory in that happy Verse,
Which aptly sings the good.

Mer. 'Tis a good forme.

Iewel. And rich: heere is a Water looke ye.

Pain. You are rapt sir, in some worke, some Dedication to the great Lord.

Poet. A thing slips idlely from me.
Our Poesie is as a Gowne, which vses
From whence 'tis nourisht: the fire i'th Flint
Shewes not, till it be strooke: our gentle flame
Prouokes it selfe, and like the current flyes
Each bound it chafes. What haue you there?

Pain. A Picture sir: when comes your Booke forth?

Poet. Vpon the heeles of my presentment sir.
Let's see your peece.

Pain. 'Tis a good Peece.

Poet. So 'tis, this comes off well, and excellent.

Pain. Indifferent.

Poet. Admirable: How this grace
Speakes his owne standing: what a mentall power
This eye shootes forth? How bigge imagination
Moues in this Lip, to th'dumbnesse of the gesture,
One might interpret.

Pain. It is a pretty mocking of the life:
Heere is a touch: Is't good?

Poet. I will say of it,
It Tutors Nature, Artificiall strife
Liues in these touches, liuelier then life.

Enter certaine Senators.

Pain. How this Lord is followed.

Poet. The Senators of Athens, happy men.

Pain. Looke moe.

Po. You see this confluence, this great flood of visitors.
I haue in this rough worke, shap'd out a man
Whom this beneath world doth embrace and hugge
With amplest entertainment: My free drift
Halts not particularly, but moues itselfe
In a wide Sea of wax, no leuell'd malice
Infects one comma in the course I hold,
But flies an Eagle flight, bold, and forth on,
Leauing no Tract behinde.

Pain. How shall I vnderstand you?

Poet. I will vnbolt to you.
You see how all Conditions, how all Minds,
As well of glib and slipp'ry Creatures, as
Of Graue and austere qualitie, tender downe
Their seruices to Lord Timon: his large Fortune,
Vpon his good and gracious Nature hanging,
Subdues and properties to his loue and tendance
All sorts of hearts; yea, from the glasse-fac'd Flatterer
To Apemantus, that few things loues better
Then to abhorre himselfe; euen he drops downe
The knee before him, and returnes in peace
Most rich in Timons nod.

Pain. I saw them speake together.

Poet. Sir, I haue vpon a high and pleasant hill
Feign'd Fortune to be thron'd.
The Base o'th' Mount
Is rank'd with all deserts, all kinde of Nectures
That labour on the bosome of this Sphere,
To propagate their states; among'st them all,
Whose eyes are on this Soueraigne Lady fixt,
One do I personate of Lord Timons frame,
Whom Fortune with her Iuory hand wafts to her,
Whose present grace, to present slaues and seruants
Translates his Rivals.

Pain. 'Tis conceyu'd, to scope
This Throne, this Fortune, and this Hill me thinkes

With one men becken'd from the rest below,
Bowing his head against the steepy Mount
To climbe his happinesse, would be well expresst
In our Condition.

Poet. Nay Sir, but heare me on:
All those which were his Fellowes but of late,
Some better then his valew; on the moment
Follow his strides, his Lobbies fill with tendance,
Raine Sacrificiall whisperings in his eare,
Make Sacred even his stirrop, and through him
Drinke the free Ayre.

Pain. I marry, what of these?

Poet. When Fortune in her shift and change of mood
Spurnes downe her late beloued; all his Dependants
Which labour'd after him to the Mountaines top,
Even on their knees and hand, let him sit downe,
Not one accompanying his declining foot.

Pain. Tis common:
A thousand moral Paintings I can shew,
That shall demonstrate these quiche blowes of Fortunes,
More pregnantly then words. Yet you do well,
To shew Lord Timon, that meane eyes haue seene
The foot above the head.

Trumpets sound.
Enter Lord Timon, addressing himself courteously to every Suitor.

Tim. Imprison'd is he, say you?

Mes. I my good Lord, five Talents is his debt,
His means most short, his Creditors most straites
Your Honourable Letter he desires
To those haue shut him vp, which failing,
Perioda his comfort.

Tim. Noble Ventidius, well:
I am not of that Feather, to shake off
My Friend when he must neede me. I do know him
A Gentleman, that well deserues a helpe,
Which he shall haue. He pay the debt, and free him.

Mes. Your Lordship euer binides him.

Tim. Commend me to him, I will send his ransome,
And being enfranchised bid him come to me;
'Tis not enough to helpe the Feeble vp,
But to support him after. Fare you well.

Mes. All happinesse to your Honor. Exit.

Enter an old Athenian.

Olde. Lord Timon, heare me speake.

Tim. Freely good Father.

Olde. Thou hast a Seruant nam'd Lucilius.

Tim. I haue so: What of him?

Olde. Most Noble Timon, call the man before thee.

Tim. Attends he heere, or no? Lucilius.

Luc. Heere at your Lordships seruice.

Olde. This Fellow heere, L. Timon, this thy Creature,
By night frequents my house. I am a man
That from my first haue beene inclin'd to thrift,
And my estate deserues an Heyre more rais'd,
Then one which holds a Trencher.

Tim. Well: what further?

Old. One only Daughter haue I, no Kin else,
On whom I may comforte what I haue got:
The Maid is fair, a'th'youngest for a Bride,
And I haue bred her at my dearest cost
In Qualities of the best. This man of thine
Attempts her loue: I prythee (Noble Lord)
Ioyne with me to forbid him her resort,
My selfe haue spoke in vaine.

Tim. The man is honest.

Olde. Therefore he will be Timon,
His honestly rewards him in it selfe,
It must not beare my Daughter.

Tim. Does she loue him?

Olde. She is yong and apt:
Our owne precedent passions do instruct vs
What leuities in youth.

Tim. Loue you the Maid?

Luc. I my good Lord, and she accepts of it.

Olde. If in her Marriage my consent be missing,
I call the Gods to witnesse, I will choose
Mine heyre from forth the Beggers of the world,
And dispossesse her all.

Tim. How shall she be endowed,
If she be mated with an equall Husband?

Olde. Three Talents on the present; in future, all.

Tim. This Gentleman of mine
Hath seru'd me long:
To build his Fortune, I will straine a little,
For 'tis a Bond in men. Give him thy Daughter,
What you bestow, in him I'le counterpoize,
And make him weigh with her.

Olde. Most Noble Lord,
Pawne me to this your Honour, she is his.

Tim. My hand to thee,
Mine Honour on my promise.

Luc. Humbly I thanke your Lordship, never may
That state or Fortune fall into my keeping,
Which is not owed to you. Exit

Poet. Vouchsafe my Labour,
And long liue your Lordship.

Tim. I thanke you, you shall heare from me soon:
Go not away. What haue you there, my Friend?

Pain. A peece of Painting, which I do beseech
Your Lordship to accept.

Tim. Painting is welcome.
The Painting is almost the Naturall man:
For since Dishonor Trafficks with mans Nature,
He is but out-side: These Pensil'd Figures are Even such as they give out. I like your worke,
And you shall finde I like it; Waite attendance
Till you haue further from me.

Pain. The Gods preserue ye.

Tim. Well sure you Gentlemen: give me your hand,
We must needs dine together: sir your Iewell
Hath suffered vnder praise.

Iewel. What my Lord, dispraise?

Tim. A mere faciety of Commendations,
If I should pay you for't as 'tis extold,
It would vnclew me quite.

Iewel. My Lord, 'tis rated
As those which sell would giue: but you well know,
Things of like valew differing in the Owners,
Are prized by their Masters. Beleeu't deare Lord,
You mend the Iewell by the wearing it.

Tim. Well mock'd. Enter Apermantus.

Mer. No my good Lord, he speakes the common tonge
Which all men speake with him.

Tim. Looke who comes heere, will you be chid?

Iewel. We'l beare with your Lordship.

Mer. He'l spare none.

Tim. Good morrow to thee,
Gentle Apermantus.

Ape. Till I be gentle, stay thou for thy good morrow.
When thou art Timons dogge, and thefe Knaues honeft.
Tim. Why doft thou call them Knaues, thou know'ft them not.
Ape. Are they not Athenians?
Tim. Yes.
Ape. Then I repent not.
Iew. You know me, Apemantus?
Ape. Thou know'ft I do, I call'd thee by thy name.
Tim. Thou art proud Apemantus?
Ape. Of nothing fo much, as that I am not like Timon
Tim. Whether art going?
Ape. To knocke out an honeft Athenians braines.
Tim. That's a deed thou't dye for.
Ape. Right, if doing nothing be death by th'Law.
Tim. How lik'ft thou this picture Apemantus?
Ape. The beft, for the innocence.
Tim. Wrought he not well that painted it.
Ape. He wrought better that made the Painter, and yet he's but a filthy peece of worke.
Pain. Y'are a Dogge.
Ape. Thy Mothers of my generation: what's fhe, if I be a Dogge?
Tim. Wilt dine with me Apemantus?
Ape. No: I eate not Lords.
Tim. And thou should'ft, thou'd'ft anger Ladies.
Ape. O they eate Lords;
So they come by great bellies.
Tim. That's a lafciuious apprehenfion.
Ape. So, thou apprehend'ft it,
Take it for thy labour.
Tim. How doft thou like this Iewell, Apemantus?
Ape. Not fo well as plain-dealing, which will not caft a man a Doit.
Tim. What doft thou thinke 'tis worth?
Ape. Not worth my thinking.
How now Poet?
Poet. How now Philofopher?
Ape. Thou lyeft.
Poet. Art not one?
Ape. Yes.
Poet. Then I lye not.
Ape. Art not a Poet?
Poet. Yes.
Ape. Then thou lyeft:
Looke in thy laft worke, where thou haft feign'd him a worthy Fellow.
Poet. That's not feign'd, he is fo.
Ape. Yes he is worthy of thee, and to pay thee for thy labour. He that loues to be flattered, is worthy o'th flatterer. Heauens, that I were a Lord.
Tim. What wouldft do then Apemantus?
Ape. E'ne as Apemantus does now, hate a Lord with my heart.
Tim. What thy felfe?
Ape. I.
Tim. Wherefore?
Ape. That I had no angry wit to be a Lord.
Art not thou a Merchant?
Mer. I Apemantus.
Ape. Traffick confound thee, if the Gods will not.
Mer. If Trafficke do it, the Gods do it.
Ape. Trafficke thy God, & thy God confound thee.

Trumpet founds. Enter a Meffenger.

Tim. What Trompets thee?
Mef. 'Tis Alcibiades, and fome twenty Horfe
All of Companionfhip.
Tim. Pray entertaine them, giue them guide to vs.
You muft needs dine with me: go not you hence
Till I haue thankt you: when dinners done
Shew me this peece, I am loyfull of your fights.

Enter Alcibiades with the reft.

Moft welcome Sir.
Ape. So, fo; their Aches contract, and ftarue your fupple loyntes: that there should bee fmall loue amongft thefe fweet Knaues, and all this Carnafie. The ftraine of mans bred out into Baboon and Monkey.
Alc. Sir, you haue faw'd my longing, and I feed
Moft hungerly on your fight.
Tim. Right welcome Sir:
Ere we depart, we'l fhare a bountiouis time
In different pleafures.
Pray you let vs in. Exeunt.

Enter two Lords.

1. Lord What time a day is't Apemantus?
Ape. Time to be honeft.
1 That time ferues ftill.
Ape. The moft accurfed thou that ftill omitft it.
2 Thou art going to Lord Timons Feaft.
Ape. I, to fee meate fill Knaues, and Wine heat fooles.
2 Farthee well, farthee well.
Ape. Thou art a Foole to bid me farewell twice.
2 Why Apemantus?
Ape. Should'ft haue kept one to thy felfe, for I meant to giue thee none.
1 Hang thy felfe.
Ape. No I will do nothing at thy bidding:
Make thy requeftes to thy Friend.
2 Away vnpeaceable Dogge,
Or Ile fpurne thee hence.
Ape. I will fly like a dogge, the heales o'th'Affe.
1 Hee's oppofite to humanity.
Comes fhall we in,
And tafte Lord Timons bountie: he out-goes
The verie heart of kindneffe.
2 He powres it out: Plutus the God of Gold
Is but his Steward: no meede but he repayes
Seuen-fold aboue itfelfe: No guift to him,
But breeds the giuer a returne: exceeding
All vfe of quittance.
1 The Nobleft minde he carries,
That euer gouern'd man.
2 Long may he liue in Fortune. Shall we in?
Ile keepe you Company. Exeunt.

Hoboyes Playing loud Muficke.

A great Banquet feru'd in: and then, Enter Lord Timon, the States, the Athenian Lords, Venuidius which Timon redeem'd from prison. Then comes dropping after all Apemantus discontentedly like himself.

Venuid. Moft honoured Timon,
It hath please'd the Gods to remember my Fathers age,
And call him to long peace:
He is gone happy, and has left me rich:
Then, as in grateful Vertue I am bound
To your free heart, I do returne those Talents
Doubled with thankes and feruice, from whofe helpe
I deriu'd libertie.
Tim. O by no meanes,
Honeft Venuidius: You mistake my loue,

I gaue

I guess it freely euer, and ther's none
Can truely say he giues, if he receiues:
If our betters play at that game, we must not dare
To imitate them: faults that are rich are faire.

Vlat. A Noble spirit.

Tim. Nay my Lords, Ceremony was but deuis'd at first
To set a gloss on faint deeds, hollow welcomes,
Recanting goodnesse, sorry ere 'tis showne:
But where there is true friendship, there need no none.
Pray sit, more welcome are ye to my Fortunes,
Then my Fortunes to me.

1. Lord. My Lord, we alwaies haue confest it.

Apem. Ho ho, confest it? Hang'd it? Haue you not?

Tim. O Apemantus, you are welcome.

Apem. No: You shall not make me welcome:
I come to haue thee thrust me out of doores.

Tim. Fie, th'art a churle, ye haue got a humour there
Does not become a man, 'tis much too blame:
They say my Lords, fra furor brevis est,
But yond man is verie angrie.
Go, let him haue a Table by himselfe:
For he does neither affect companie,
Nor is he fit for't indeed.

Apem. Let me stay at thine apperill Timon,
I come to obserue, I giue thee warning on't.

Tim. I take no heede of thee: Th'art an Athenian,
therefore welcome: I my selfe would haue no power,
prythee let my meate make thee silent.

Apem. I scorne thy meate, 'twould choake me: for I should ere flatter thee. Oh you Gods! What a number of men eats Timon, and he sees 'em not? It grieues me to see so many dip their meate in one mans blood, and
all the madnesse is, he cheeres them vp too.
I wonder men dare trust themselues with men.
Me thinks they should enuite them without knives,
Good for their meate, and safer for their liues.
There's much example for't, the fellow that sits next him,
now parts bread with him, pledges the breath of him in a diuided draught: is the readiest man to kill him. 'Tis
beene proued, if I were a huge man I should feare to drinke at meales, least they should spoe my wind-pipes
dangerous notes, great men should drinke with harnesse
on their throates.

Tim. My Lord in heart: and let the health go round.

2. Lord. Let it flow this way my good Lord.

Apem. Flow this way? A brave fellow. He keepes his tides well, those healths will make thee and thy state
looke ill, Timon.
Heere's that which is too weake to be a sinner,
Honest water, which ne'er left man i'th'mire:
This and my food are equall, there's no odes,
Feasts are to proud to giue thanks to the Gods.

Apemantus Grace.

Immortall Gods, I craue no pelfe,
I pray for no man but my selfe,
Graunt I may never prouse so fond,
To trust man on his Oath or Bond.
Or a Harlot for her weeping,
Or a Dogge that seemes a sleeping,
Or a keeper with my freedome,
Or my friends if I should need 'em.
Amen. So fall to't:
Richmen sin, and I eat root.
Much good dich thy good heart, Apemantus

Tim. Captaine,
Alcibiades, your hearts in the field now.

Alci. My heart is euer at your seruice, my Lord.

Tim. You had rather be at a breakefast of Enemies,
then a dinner of Friends.

Alci. So they were bleeding new my Lord there's no
meat like 'em, I could wish my best friend at such a Feast.

Apem. Would all those Flatterers were thine Enemies
then, that then thou might'st kill 'em: & bid me to 'em.

1. Lord. Might we but haue that happinesse my Lord,
that you would once vse our hearts, whereby we might expresse some part of our zeales, we should thinke our selues for euer perfect.

Timon. Oh no doubt my good Friends, but the Gods
themselues haue prouided that I shall haue much helpe
from you: how had you beene my Friends else. Why
haue you that charitable title from thousands? Did not you chiefely belong to my heart? I haue told more of you to my selfe, then you can with modestie speake in your owne behalfe. And thus farre I confirme you. O h you Gods (thinke I,) what need we haue any Friends, if we should ever haue need of 'em? They were the most needlesse Creatures liuing; should we ever haue vse for
'em? And would most resemble sweete Instruments
hung vp in Cases, that keepes their sounds to them-
selues. Why I haue often wisht my selfe poorer, that
I might come nearer to you: we are borne to do benefits. And what better or preparer can we call our owne, then the riches of our Friends? Oh what a precious comfort 'tis, to haue so many like Brothers commanding
one anothers Fortunes. Oh loyes, e'ne made away er't can be borne: mine eies cannot hold out water mine thinks
to forget their Faults. I drinke to you.

Apem. Thou weep'st to make them drinke, Timon.

2. Lord. Joy had the like conception in our eies,
And at that instant, like a babe sprung vp.

Apem. Ho, ho: I laugh to thinke that babe a bastard

3. Lord. I promise you my Lord you mou'd me much.

Apem. Much.

Sound Tucket. Enter the Maskers of Amazons, with Lutes in their hands dancing and playing.

Tim. What means that Trumpe? How now?

Enter Seruant.

Ser. Please you my Lord, there are certaine Ladies
Most desirous of admittance.

Tim. Ladies? what are their wills?

Ser. There comes with them a fore-runner my Lord,
which beares that office, to signifie their pleasures.

Tim. I pray let them be admitted.

Enter Cupid with the Masque of Ladies.

Cup. Haile to thee worthy Timon and to all that of his Bounties tasten the free best Sences acknowledge thee their Patron, and come freely to gratulate thy plentious
bosome.
There taste, touch all pleas'd from thy Table rise:
They onely now come but to Feast thine eies.

Timo. They'r welcome all, let 'em haue kind admit-
tance. Musicke make their welcome.

Luc. You see my Lord, how ample y'are belou'd.

Apem. Hoyday,
What a sweepe of vanitie comes this way.
They dance? They are madwomen,

Like Madneſſe is the glory of this life,
As this pompe ſhewes to a little oyle and roote.
We make our ſelues Fooles, to diſport our ſelues,
And ſpend our Flatteries, to drinke thoſe men,
Vpon whoſe Age we voyde it vp again
With poyſonous Spight and Enuy.
Who liues, that's not depraued, or depraues;
Who dyes, that beares not, one ſpurne to their graues
Of their Friends guift:
I ſhould feare, thoſe that dance before me now,
Would one day ſtampe vpon me: 'Tis bene done,
Men ſhun their doores againſt a ſetting Sunne.

The Lords riſe from Table, with much adoring of Timon, and to ſhew their loues, each ſingle out an Amazon, and all Dance, men with women, a lofty ſtraine or two to the Hoboyes, and ceaſe.

Tim. You haue done our pleaſures
Much grace (faire Ladies)
Set a faire faſhion on our entertainment,
Which was not halfe ſo beautifull, and kinde:
You haue added worth vnto't, and luſter,
And entertain'd me with mine owne deuice.
I am to thanke you for't.

1 Lord. My Lord you take vs euen at the beſt.

Apem. Faith for the worſt is filthy, and would not hold taking, I doubt me.

Tim. Ladies, there is an idle banquet attends you,
Pleaſe you to diſpoſe your ſelues.

All La. Moſt thankfully, my Lord. Exeunt.

Tim. Flaminius.

Fla. My Lord.

Tim. The little Casket, bring me hither.

Fla. Yes, my Lord. More Iewels yet?
There is no croſſing him in's humor,
Elſe I ſhould tell him well, y faith I ſhould;
When all's ſpent, hee'ld be croſt then, and he could.
'Tis pitty Bounty had not eyes behinde,
That man might ne're be wretched for his minde. Exit.

1 Lord. Where be our men?

Ser. Heere my Lord, in readineſſe.

2 Lord. Our Horſes.

Tim. O my Friends:
I haue one word to ſay to you: Looke you, my good L.
I moſt intreat you honour me ſo much,
As to aduance this Iewell, accept it, and weare it,
Kinde my Lord.

1 Lord. I am ſo farre already in your guifts.

All. So are we all.

Enter a Seruant.

Ser. My Lord, there are certaine Nobles of the Senate newly alighted, and come to viſit you.

Tim. They are fairely welcome.

Enter Flaminius.

Fla. I beſeech your Honor, vouchſaſe me a word, it does concerne you neere.

Tim. Neere? why then another time I'le heare thee.
I prythee let's be prouided to ſhew them entertainment.

Fla. I ſcarſe know how.

Enter another Seruant.

Ser. May it pleaſe your Honor, Lord Lucius
(Out of his free loue) hath preſented to you
Foure Milke-white Horſes, trapt in Siluer.

Tim. I ſhall accept them fairely: let the Preſents
Be worthily entertain'd.

Enter a third Seruant.

How now? What newes?

3. Ser. Pleaſe you my Lord, that honourable Gentleman Lord Lucullus, entreats your companie to morrow, to hunt with him, and he's ſent your Honour two brace of Grey-hounds.

Tim. I'le hunt with him,
And let them be receiu'd, not without faire Reward.

Fla. What will this come to?
He commands vs to prouide, and give great gifts, and all out of an empty Coffer:
Nor will he know his Purſe, or yeeld me this,
To ſhew him what a Begger his heart is,
Being of no power to make his wiſhes good.
His promiſes fly ſo beyond his ſtate,
That what he ſpeaks is all in debt, he owes for euery word:
He is ſo kinde, that he now payes intereſt for't;
His Land's put to their Bookes. Well, would I were
Gently put out of Office, before I were forc'd out:
Happier is he that has no friend to feede,
Then ſuch that do e'ne Enemies exceede.
I bleed inwardly for my Lord. Exit

Tim. You do your ſelues much wrong,
You bate too much of your owne merits.
Heere my Lord, a trifle of our Loue.

2 Lord. With more then common thankes
I will receiue it.

3. Lord. O he's the very ſoule of Bounty

Tim. And now I remember my Lord, you gaue good words the other day of a Bay Courſer I rod on. Tis yours becauſe you lik'd it.

1. L. Oh, I beſeech you pardon mee, my Lord, in that.

Tim. You may take my word my Lord: I know no man can iuſtly praiſe, but what he does affect. I weighe my Friends affection with mine owne: I'le tell you true, I'le call to you.

All Lor. O none ſo welcome.

Tim I take all, and your ſeuerall viſitations
So kinde to heart, 'tis not enough to giue.
Me thinkes, I could deale Kingdomes to my Friends,
And ere be weare. Alcibiades,
Thou art a Soldiour, therefore ſeldome rich,
It comes in Charitie to thee: for all thy liuing
Is mong'ſt the dead: and all the Lands thou haſt
Lye in a pitcht field.

Alc. I, defil'd Land, my Lord.

1. Lord. We are ſo vertuoſly bound.

Tim. And ſo am I to you.

2. Lord. So infinitely endeer'd.

Tim. All to you. Lights, more Lights.

1 Lord. The beſt of Happines, Honor, and Fortunes
Keepe with you Lord Timon.

Tim. Ready for his Friends. Exeunt Lords

Apem. What a coiles heere, ſerving of becks, and ſmiling out of countenance. I doubt whether their Legges be worth the ſummes that are giuen for 'em.
Friendſhips full of dregges,
Me thinkes falſe hearts, ſhould never haue ſound legges.
Thus honeſt Fooles lay out their wealth on Curtſies.

Tim. Now Apemantus (if thou wert not ſullen)
I would be good to thee.

Apem. No, I'le nothing; for if I ſhould be brib'd too, there would be none left to raile vpon thee, and then thou wouldſt ſinne the faſter. Thou giu'ſt ſo long Timon (I feare me) thou wilt giue away thy ſelfe in paper ſhortly. What needs theſe Feaſts, pompes, and Vaine-glories?

Tim.

Tim. Nay, and you begin to raile on Societie once, I am sworne not to give regard to you. Farewell, & come with better Musicke. Exit

Apem. So: Thou wilt not heare mee now, thou shalt not then. Ile locke thy heaven from thee:
O that mens eares should be
To Counsell deafe, but not to Flatterie. Exit

Enter a Senator.

Sen. And late five thousand: to Varro and to Isidore
He owes nine thousand, besides my former summe,
Which makes it five and twenty. Still in motion
Of raging waste? It cannot hold, it will not.
If I want Gold, steale but a beggers Dogge,
And give it Timon, why the Dogge coines Gold.
If I would sell my Horse, and buy twenty more
Better than he; why give my Horse to Timon,
Take nothing, give it him, it Foles me straight
And ables Horses: No Porter at his gate,
But rather one that smiles, and still invites
All that passe by. It cannot hold, no reason
Can sound his state in safety. Caphis hoe,
Caphis I say.

Enter Caphis.

Ca. Heere sir, what is your pleasure.
Sen. Get on your cloaks, & haste you to Lord Timon,
Importune him for my Moneyes, be not ceast
With slights denials; nor then silenc'd, when
Commend me to your Master, and the Cap
Playes in the right hand, thus: but tell him,
My Vses cry to me; I must serve my turne
Out of mine owne, his dayes and times are past,
And my reliances on his fracted dates
Have smit my credit. I love, and honour him,
But must not breake my backe, to heale his finger.
Immediate are my needs, and my releefe
Must not be tost and turn'd to me in words,
But finde supply immediate. Get you gone,
Put on a most importunate aspect,
A visage of demand: for I do feare
When every Feather sticks in his owne wing,
Lord Timon will be left a naked gull,
Which flashes now a Phœnix, get you gone.
Ca. I go sir.
Sen. I go sir?
Take the Bonds along with you,
And haste the dates in. Come.
Ca. I will Sir.
Sen. Go. Exeunt

Enter Steward, with many bills in his hand.

Stew. No care, no stop, so senselesse of expence,
That he will neither know how to maintaine it,
Nor cease his flow of Riot. Takes no accompt
How things go from him, nor restraine no care
Of what is to continue: never minde,
Was to be so vawise, to be so kinde.
What shall be done, he will not heare, till feele:
I must be round with him, now he comes from hunting.
Fye, fie, fie, fie.

Enter Caphis, Isidore, and Varro.

Ca. Good even Varro: what, you come for money?
Var. Is't not your business too?
Ca. It is, and yours too, Isidore?
Isid. It is so.
Ca. Would we were all discharg'd.
Var. I feare it,
Ca. Heere comes the Lord.

Enter Timon, and his Traine.

Tim. So soone as dinners done, wee'l forth against
My Alcibiades. With me, what is your will?
Ca. My Lord, heere is a note of certaine dues.
Tim. Dues? whence are you?
Ca. Of Athens heere, my Lord.
Tim. Go to my Steward.
Ca. Please it your Lordship, he hath put me off
To the succession of new dayes this moneth:
My Master is swak'd by great Occasion,
To call vpon his owne, and humbly prayes you,
That with your other Noble parts, you'l suite,
In giving him his right.
Tim. Mine honest Friend,
I prythee but repaire to me next morning.
Ca. Nay, good my Lord.
Tim. Containe thy selfe, good Friend.
Var. One Varrous seruant, my good Lord.
Isid From Isidore, he humbly prayes your speedy payment.
Ca. If you did know my Lord, my Masters wants.
Var. 'Twas due on forfeyture my Lord, fixe weeke, and past.
Isi. Your Steward puts me off my Lord, and I
Am sent expressly to your Lordship.
Tim. Give me breath:
I do beseech you good my Lords keepe on,
Ile waite vpon you instantly. Come hither. pray you
How goes the world, that I am thus encountred
With clamorous demands of debt, broken Bonds,
And the detention of long since due debts
Against my Honor?
Stew. Please you Gentlemen,
The time is vnagreeable to this business:
Your importunacie cease, till after dinner,
That I may make his Lordship understand
Wherefore you are not paid.
Tim. Do so my Friends, see them well entertain'd.
Stew. Pray draw neere. Exit.

Enter Apemantus and Fools.

Caph. Stay, stay, here comes the Foole with Apemantus, let's ha some sport with 'em.
Var. Hang him, hee'l abuse vs.
Isid. A plague vpon him dogge.
Var. How dost Foole?
Ape. Dost Dialogue with thy shadow?
Var. I speake not to thee.
Ape. No 'tis to thy selfe. Come away.
Isi. There's the Foole hangs on your backe already.
Ape. No thou stand'st single, th'art not on him yet.
Caph. Where's the Foole now?
Ape. He last ask'd the question. Poore Rogues, and Vsurers men, Bands betweene Gold and want.
All. What are we Apemantus?
Ape. Asses.
All. Why?
Ape. That you ask me what you are, & do not know your selues. Speake to 'em Fools.
Fools. How do you Gentlemen?
All. Gramercies good Foole:
How does your Mistris?

Fools.

Fools. She's e'ne setting on water to scal'd such Chickens as you are. Would we could see you at Corinth.

Ape. Good, Gramercy.

Enter Page.

Fools. Looke you, heere comes my Masters Page.

Page. Why how now Captaine? what do you in this wise Company.
How dost thou Apemantus?

Ape. Would I had a Rod in my mouth, that I might answer thee profitably

Boy. Prythee Apemantus reade me the superscription of these Letters, I know not which is which.

Ape. Canst not read?

Page. No.

Ape. There will litle Learning dye then that day thou art hang'd. This is to Lord Timon, this to Alcibiades. Go thou was't borne a Bastard, and thou't dye a Bawd.

Page. Thou was't whelpt a Dogge, and thou shalt famish a Dogges death.
Answer not, I am gone. Exit

Ape. E'ne so thou out-runst Grace,
Foole I will go with you to Lord Timons.

Fools. Will you leave me there?

Ape. If Timon stay at home.
You three serve three Vsurers?

All. I would they serv'd vs.

Ape. So would I:
As good a tricke as ever Hangman serv'd Theefe.

Fools. Are you three Vsurers men?

All. I Foole.

Fools. I think no Vsurer, but ha's a Foole to his Servant. My Mistris is one, and I am her Foole: when men come to borrow of your Masters, they approach sadly, and go away merry: but they enter my Masters house merrily, and go away sadly. The reason of this?

Var. I could render one.

Ap. Do it then, that we may account thee a Whoremaster, and a Knaue, which notwithstanding thou shalt be no lesse esteemed.

Varro. What is a Whoremaster Foole?

Fools. A Foole in good cloathes, and something like thee. 'Tis a spirit, sometime t'appeares like a Lord, sometime like a Lawyer, sometime like a Philosopher, with two stones moe then's artificiall one. Hee is verie often like a Knight; and generally, in all shapes that man goes vp and downe in, from fourescore to thirteen, this spirit walkes in.

Var. Thou art not altogether a Foole:

Fools. Nor thou altogether a Wist man,
As much foolerie as I haue, so much wit thou lack'st.

Apo. That answer might haue become Apemantus.

All. Aside, aside, heere comes Lord Timon.

Enter Timon and Steward.

Ap. Come with me (Foole) come.

Fools. I do not alwayes follow Louer, elder Brother, and Woman, sometime the Philosopher.

Stew. Pray you walk neere,
Ile speake with you anon. Exeunt.

Tim. You make me mervell wherefore ere this time
Had you not fully laide my state before me,
That I might so haue rated my expence
As I had leaue of meanes.

Stew. You would not heare me:
At many leysures I propose.

Tim. Go too:
Perchance some single vantages you tooke,
When my indisposition put you backe,
And that vnaptnesse made your minister
Thus to excuse your selfe.

Stew. O my good Lord,
At many times I brought in my accompes,
Laid them before you, you would throw them off,
And say you found them in mine honestie.
When for some trifling present you haue bid me
Returne so much, I have shooke my head, and wept:
Yes 'gainst th'Authoritie of manners, pray'd you
To hold your hand more close: I did indure
Not sildome, nor no slight checkes, when I haue
Prompted you in the ebbe of your estate,
And your great flow of debts; my lou'd Lord,
Though you heare now (too late) yet nowes a time,
The greatest of your having, lackes a halfe,
To pay your present debts.

Tim. Let all my Land be sold.

Stew. 'Tis all engag'd, some forfeyted and gone,
And what remainer will hardly stop the mouth
Of present dues; the future comes apace:
What shall defend the interim, and at length
How goes our reck'ning?

Tim. To Lacedemon did my Land extend.

Stew. O my good Lord, the world is but a word,
Were it all yours, to give it in a breach,
How quickely were it gone.

Tim. You tell me true.

Stew. If you suspect my Husbandry or Falsehood,
Call me before th'exactest Auditors,
And set me on the proofe. So the Gods blesse me,
When all our Offices haue beene oppreft
With riotous Feeders, when our Vaults haue wept
With drunken spilth of Wine; when every roome
Hath blaz'd with Lights, and braid with Minstrelsie,
I haue retyr'd me to a wastefull cocke,
And set mine eyes at flow.

Tim. Prythee no more.

Stew. Heavens, haue I said, the bounty of this Lord:
How many prodigall bits haue Slaues and Peasants
This night englutted: who is not Timons,
What heart, head, sword, force, meanes, but is L. Timon:
Great Timon, Noble, Worthy, Royall Timon:
Ah, when the meanes are gone, that buy this praise,
The breath is gone, whereof this praise is made:
Feast won, fast lost; one cloud of Winter showres,
These flyes are coucht.

Tim. Come sermon me no further.
No villanous bounty yet hath past my heart;
Vnwisely, not ignobly haue I given.
Why dost thou weepe, canst thou the conscience lacke,
To thinke I shall lacke friends: secure thy heart,
If I would broach the vessels of my loue,
And try the argument of hearts, by borrowing,
Men, and mens fortunes could I frankely vse
As I can bid thee speake.

Stew. Assurance blesse your thoughts.

Tim. And in some sort these wants of mine are crowned,
That I account them blessings. For by these
Shall I trie Friends. You shall perceiue
How you mistake my Fortunes:
I am wealthie in my Friends.
Within there, Flaminius, Seruilius?

Enter

Enter three Servants.

Ser. My Lord, my Lord.

Tim. I will dispatch you severally.
You to Lord Lucius, to Lord Lucullus you. I bessed
with his Honor to day; you to Sempronius; commend me
to their loues; and I am proud say, that my occasions
haue found time to vse 'em toward a supply of money: let
the request be fifty Talents.

Flam. As you haue said, my Lord.

Serv. Lord Lucius and Lucullus? Humh.

Tim. Go you sir to the Senators;
Of whom, euen to the States best health; I haue
Deseru'd this Hessing: bid 'em send o'th'instant
A thousand Talents to me.

Ser. I haue beene bold
(For that I knew it the most generall way)
To them, to vse your Signet, and your Name,
But they do shake their heads, and I am heere
No richer in returne.

Tim. Is't true? Can't be?

Serv. They answer in a loyne and corporate voice,
That now they are at fall, want Treasure cannot
Do what they would, are sorrie: you are Honourable,
But yet they could haue wishe, they know not,
Something hath beene amisse; a Noble Nature
May catch a wrench; would all were well; 'tis pity,
And so intending other serious matters,
After distastefull looks; and these hard Fractions
With certaine halfe-caps, and cold moaing nods,
They frozne me into Silence.

Tim. You Gods reward them:
Prythee man looke cheerely. These old Fellowes
Haue their ingratitude in them Hereditary:
Their blood is cak'd, 'tis cold, it sildome flowes,
'Tis lacke of kindely warmth, they are not kinde;
And Nature, as it growes again toward earth,
Is fashion'd for the journey, dull and heavy.
Go to Ventidius (prythee be not sad,
Thou art true, and honest; Ingenuously I speake,
No blame belongs to thee:) Ventidius lately
Buried his Father, by whose death hee's stepp'd
Into a great estate: When he was poore,
Imprison'd, and in scarfitie of Friends,
I clear'd him with fiue Talents: Greet him from me,
Bid him suppose, some good necessity
Touches his Friend, which creues to be remembred
With those fiue Talents; that he, gine't those Fellowes
To whom 'tis instant due. Ner'r speake, or think,
That Timons fortunes 'mong his Friends can sinke.

Serv. I would I could not thinke it:
That thought is Bounties Foe;
Being free it selfe, it thinkes all others so. Exeunt

Flaminius waiting to speake with a Lord from his Master, enters a seruant to him.

Ser. I haue told my Lord of you, he is comming down
to you.

Flam. I thanke you Sir.

Enter Lucullus.

Ser. Heere's my Lord.

Luc. One of Lord Timons men? A Gift I warrant.
Why this hits right: I dreamt of a Siluer Basen & Ewre
to night. Flaminius, honest Flaminius, you are verie re-spectiuely welcome sir. Fill me some Wine. And how does that Honourable, Complaisant, Free-hearted Gentleman of Athens, thy very bountifull good Lord and Master?

Flam. His health is well sir.

Luc. I am right glad that his health is well sir: and what hast thou there vnder thy Cloake, pretty Flaminius?

Flam. Faith, nothing but an empty box Sir, which in my Lords behalfe, I come to intreat your Honor to supply: who hauing great and instant occasion to vse fifty
Talents, hath sent to your Lordship to furnish him: nothing doubting your present assistance therein.

Luc. La, la, la, la: Nothing doubting sayes hee? Alas
good Lord, a Noble Gentleman 'tis, if he would not keep so good a house. Many a time and often I ha din'd with him, and told him on't, and some againe to supper to him
of purpose, to haue him spend lesse, and yet he would embrace no counsell, take no warning by my comming, every man has his fault, and honesty is his. I ha told him on't,
but I could nere get him from't.

Enter Seruant with Wine.

Ser. Please your Lordship, heere is the Wine.

Luc. Flaminius, I haue noted thee always wise.
Heere's to thee.

Flam. Your Lordship speakes your pleasure.

Luc. I haue obserued thee always for a towardlie
prompt spirit, give thee thy due, and one that knowes
what belongs to reason; and canst vse the time well, if the time vse thee well. Good parts in thee: get you gone sir-
rah. Draw neerer honest Flaminius. Thy Lords a bountifull Gentleman, but thou art wise, and thou know'st
well enough (although thou com'st to me) that this is no
time to lend money, especially vpon bare friendshippe
without securitie. Here's three Solidares for thee, good
Boy winke at me, and say thou saw'st mee not. Fare thee
well.

Flam. Is't possible the world should so much differ,
And we alias that liued? Fly damned baseneſſe
To him that worships thee.

Luc. Ha? Now I see thou art a Poole, and fit for thy Master. Exit L.

Flam. May these adde to the number, that may scald thee:
Let moulten Coine be thy damnation,
Thou disease of a friend, and not himselfe:
Has friendship such a faint and milkie heart,
It turnes in lesse then two nights? O you Gods!
I feele my Masters passion. This Slaue vnto his Honor,
Has my Lords meate in him:
Why should it thriue, and turne to Nutriment,
When he is turn'd to poyson?
O may Diseases only worke vpon't:
And when he's sicke to death, let not that part of Nature
Which my Lord paid for, be of any power
To expell sicknesse, but prolong his hower. Exit.

Enter Lucius, with three strangers.

Luc. Who the Lord Timon? He is my very good friend
and an Honourable Gentleman.

1 We know him for no lesse, though we are but strar-
gers to him. But I can tell you one thing my Lord, and which I heare from common rumours, now Lord Timons
happie howres are done and past, and his estate shrinkes
from him.

Lucius. Fye no, doe not believe it: he cannot want
for money.

2 But beleeue you this my Lord, that not long ago,
one of his men was with the Lord Lucullus, to borrow so
many Talents, nay vrg'd extreamly for't, and shewed
what

what necessity belong'd too't, and yet was deny'de.

Lust. How?

2 I tell you, deny'de my Lord.

Lust. What a strange case was that? Now before the Gods I am asham'd on't. Denied that honourable man? There was verie little Honour shew'd in't. For my owne part, I must needes confesse, I have received some small kindnesses from him, as Money, Plate, Jewels, and such like Trifles; nothing comparing to his: yet had hee mistooke him, and sent to me, I should ne're have denied his Occasion so many Talents.

Enter Servilius.

Servil. See, by good hap yonders my Lord, I have swet to see his Honor. My Honor'd Lord.

Lucil. Servilius? You are kindely met Sir: Farthewell, commend me to thy Honourable vertuous Lord, my very exquisite Friend.

Servil. May it please your Honour, my Lord hath sent ——

Lucil. Ha! what ha's he sent? I am so much endeered to that Lord; hee's ever sending: how shall I thank him, thinkt'st thou? And what has he sent now?

Servil. Has only sent his present Occasion now my Lord; requesting your Lordship to supply his instant vse with so many Talents.

Lucil. I know his Lordship is but merry with me, He cannot want fifty five hundred Talents.

Servil. But to the same end, hee wants less, my Lord. If his occasion were not vertuous, I should not urge it halfe so faithfully.

Luc. Doft thou speake seriously Servilius?

Servil. Vpon my soule 'tis true Sir.

Lucil. What a wicked Beast was I to disfurnish my selfe against such a good time, when I might ha shewn my selfe Honourable? How vnluckily it happed, that I should Purchase the day before for a little part, and vndo a great deale of Honour? Servilius, now before the Gods I am not able to do (the more beast I say) I was sending to vse Lord Timon my selfe, these Gentlemen can witnesse; but I would not for the wealth of Athens I had done't now. Commend me bountifully to his good Lordship, and I hope his Honor will conceive the fairest of mee, because I have no power to be kinde. And tell him this from me, I count it one of my greatest afflictions say, that I cannot pleasure such an Honourable Gentleman. Good Servilius, will you befriend mee so farre, as to vse mine owne words to him?

Ser. Yes Sir, I shall. Exit Servil.

Lucil. Ile looke you out a good turne Servilius. True as you said, Timon is shrunke indeede, And he that's once deny'de, will hardly speede. Exit.

1 Do you observe this Hostilius?

2 I, to well.

1 Why this is the worlds soule, And iust of the same peece Is every Flatterers sport: who can call him his Friend That dips in the same dish? For in my knowing Timon has bin this Lords Father, And kept his credit with his purse: Supported his estate, nay Timons money Has pold his men their wages. He ne're drinkes, But Timons Silver treads vpon his Lip, And yet, oh see the monstrousnesse of man, When he lookes out in an vngratefull shape; He does deny him (in respect of his) What charitable man afford to Beggers.

3 Religion groanes at it.

1 For mine owne part, I never tasted Timon in my life Nor came any of his bounties over me, To mark me for his Friend. Yet I protest, For his right Noble minde, illustrious Vertue, And Honourable Carriage, Had his necessity made vse of me, I would have put my wealth into Donation, And the best halfe should have return'd to him, So much I love his heart: But I perceiue, Men must learne now with pity to dispeare, For Policy sits above Conscience. Exeunt.

Enter a third seruant with Sempronius, another of Timons Friends.

Sump. Must he needs trouble me in't? Hum. 'Bouc all others? He might have tried Lord Lucius, or Lucullus, And now Ventidgius is wealthy too, Whom he redeem'd from prison. All these Owes their estates vpto him.

Ser. My Lord, They have all ben touch'd, and found Base-Mettle, For they have all denied him.

Sump. How? Have they deny'de him? Has Ventidgius and Lucullus deny'de him, And does he send to me? Three? Humh? It shewes but little love, or iudgement in him. Must I be his last Refuge? His Friends, (like Physicians) Thrive, give him over: Must I take th'Cure vpon me? Has much disgrac'd me in't, I am angry at him, That might have knowne my place. I see no sense for't, But his Occasions might have wooed me first: For in my conscience, I was the first man That ere received guift from him. And does he thinke so backwardly of me now, That Ile requite it last? No: So it may prove an Argument of Laughter To th'rest, and 'mong'st Lords be thought a Foole: I'de rather then the worth of thrice the summe, Had sent to me first, but for my mindes sake: I'de such a courage to do him good. But now return, And with their faint reply, this answer ioyne; Who bates mine Honor, shall not know my Coyne. Exit.

Ser. Excellent: Your Lordships a goodly Villain: the diuell knew not what he did, when hee made man Politicke; he crossed himselfe by't: and I cannot thinke, but in the end, the Villanies of man will set him cleare. How fairely this Lord strives to appeare foule? Takes Vertuous Copies to be wicked: like those, that vnder hote ardent zeale, would set whole Realmes on fire, of such a nature is his politike loue.

This was my Lords best hope, now all are fled Save onely the Gods. Now his Friends are dead. Doores that were ne're acquainted with their Wards Many a bounteous yeere, must be imploy'd Now to guard sure their Master:

And this is all a liberall course allowes, Who cannot keepe his wealth, must keep his house. Exit.

Enter Varro's man, meeting others. All Timons Creditors to wait for his comming out. Then enter Lucius and Hortensius.

Var. man. Well met, goodmorrow Titus & Hortensius

Titus

Tit. The like to you kinde Varro.

Hort. Lucius, what do we meet together?

Luci. I, and I think one businesse do's command vs all. For mine is money.

Tit. So is theirs, and ours.

Enter Philotus.

Luci. And sir Philotus too.

Phil. Good day at once.

Luci. Welcome good Brother.
What do you thinke the houre?

Phil. Labouring for Nine.

Luci. So much?

Phil. Is not my Lord seene yet?

Luci. Not yet.

Phil. I wonder on't, he was wont to shine at seuen.

Luci. I, but the dayes are wax shorter with him:
You must consider, that a Prodigall course
Is like the Sunnes, but not like his recoverable. I feare:
'Tis deepest Winter in Lord Timons purse, that is: One may reach deepe enough, and yet finde little.

Phil. I am of your feare, for that.

Tit. Ile shew you how t'obserue a strange event:
Your Lord sends now for Money?

Hort. Most true, he doe's.

Tit. And he weares Iewels now of Timons gift,
For which I wait for money.

Hort. It is against my heart.

Luci. Marke how strange it showes,
Timon in this, should pay more then he owes:
And e'ne as if your Lord should weare rich Iewels,
And send for money for 'em.

Hort. I'me weary of this Charge,
The Gods can witnesse:
I know my Lord hath spent of Timons wealth,
And now Ingratitude, makes it worse then stealth.

Varro. Yes, mine's three thousand Crownes:
What's yours?

Luci. Fiue thousand mine.

Varro. 'Tis much deepe, and it should seem by th'sum
Your Masters confidence was above mine,
Else surely his had equall'd.

Enter Flaminius.

Tit. One of Lord Timons men.

Luc. Flaminius? Sir, a word: Pray is my Lord ready to come forth?

Flam. No, indeed he is not.

Tit. We attend his Lordship: pray signifie so much.

Flam. I need not tell him that, he knowes you are too diligent.

Enter Steward in a Cloake, muffled

Luci. Ha: is not that his Steward muffled so?
He goes away in a Cloud: Call him, call him.

Tit. Do you heare, sir?

2. Varro. By your leaue, sir.

Stew. What do ye aske of me, my Friend.

Tit. We waite for certaine Money heere, sir.

Stew. I, if Money were as certaine as your waiting,
I were sure enough.
Why then preferr'd you not your summes and Billes
When your false Masters eate of my Lords meat?
Then they could smile, and fawne vpon his debts,
And take downe th'Interest into their glout'nous Maws.
You do your selues but wrong, to stirre me vp,
Let me passe quietly:
Beleeue't, my Lord and I haue made an end,
I haue no more to reckon, he to spend.

Luci. I, but this answer will not serue.

Stew. If't will not serue, 'tis not so base as you,
For you serue Knaues.

1. Varro. How? What does his cashier'd Worship mutter?

2. Varro. No matter what, he's poore, and that's reuenge enough. Who can speake broader, then he that has no house to put his head in? Such may rayle against great buildings.

Enter Seruilius.

Tit. Oh heere's Seruilius: now we shall know some answere.

Serui. If I might beseech you Gentlemen, to repayre some other houre, I should derive much from't. For taki of my soule, my Lord leanes wondrously to discontent: His comfortable temper has forsooke him, he's much out of health, and keepes his Chamber.

Luci. Many do keepe their Chambers, are not sick:
And if it be so farre beyond his health,
Me thinkes he should the sooner pay his debts,
And make a cleere way to the Gods.

Serui. Good Gods.

Tim. We cannot take this for answer, sir.

Flaminius within. Seruilius helpe, my Lord, my Lord.

Enter Timon in a rage.

Tim. What, are my doores oppos'd against my passage?
Haue I bin euer free, and must my house
Be my retentiue Enemy? My Gaole?
The place which I haue Feasted, does it now
(Like all Mankinde) shew me an Iron heart?

Luci. Put in now Timon.

Tit. My Lord, heere is my Bill.

Luci. Here's mine.

1. Var. And mine, my Lord.

2. Var. And ours, my Lord.

Phil. All our Billes.

Tim. Knocke me downe with 'em, cleane mee to the Girdle.

Luc. Alas, my Lord.

Tim. Cut my heart in summes.

Tit. Mine, fifty Talents.

Tim. Tell out my bloud.

Luc. Fiue thousand Crownes, my Lord.

Tim. Fiue thousand drops payes that.
What yours? and yours?

1. Var. My Lord.

2. Var. My Lord.

Tim. Teare me, take me, and the Gods fall vpon you.

Exit Timon.

Hort. Faith I perceiue our Masters may throwe their caps at their money, these debts may well be call'd desperate ones, for a madman owes 'em. Exeunt.

Enter Timon.

Timon. They haue e'ene put my breath from mee the slaues. Creditors? Diuels.

Stew. My deere Lord.

Tim. What if it should be so?

Stew. My Lord.

Tim. Ile haue it so. My Steward?

Stew. Heere my Lord.

Tim. So feirly? Go, bid all my Friends againe
Lucius, Lucullus, and Sempronius, Vlixes: All,
Ile once more feast the Rascals.

Stew. O my Lord, you onely speake from your distracted soule; there's not so much left to, furnish out a moderate Table.

Tim. Be it not in thy care:
Go I charge thee, invite them all, let in the tide
Of Knaues once more: my Cooke and I'le prouide. Exeunt

Enter three Senators at one door, Alcibiades meeting them, with Attendants.

1 Sen. My Lord, you haue my voyce, too't,
The faults Bloody:
'Tis necessary he should dye:
Nothing emboldens sinne so much, as Mercy.
2 Most true; the Law shall bruise 'em.
Alc Honor, health, and compassion to the Senate.
1 Now Captaine.
Alc. I am an humble Sutor to your Vertues;
For pitty is the vertue of the Law,
And none but Tyrants vse it cruelly.
It pleases time and Fortune to lye heauie
Vpon a Friend of mine, who in hot blood
Hath stept into the Law: which is past depth
To those that (without heede) do plaudge in too't.
He is a Man (setting his Fate aside) of comely Vertues,
Nor did he soyle the fact with Cowardice,
(And Honour in him, which buyes out his fault)
But with a Noble Fury, and faire spirit,
Seeing his Reputation touch'd to death,
He did oppose his Foe:
And with such sober and vnmoued passion
He did behaoue his anger ere 'twas spent,
As if he had but proui'd an Argument
1 Sen. You vndergo too strict a Paradox,
Striuing to make an vgly deed looke faire:
Your words haue tooke such paines, as if they labour'd
To bring Man-slaughter into forme, and set Quarrelling
Vpon the head of Valour; which indeede
Is Valour mis-begot, and came into the world,
When Sects, and Fashions were newly borne.
Hee's truly Valiant, that can wisely suffer
The worst that man can breath,
And make his Wrongs, his Out-sides,
To weare them like his Rayment, carelessly,
And ne're preferre his iniuries to his heart,
To bring it into danger.
If Wrongs be euillies, and inforce vs kill,
What Folly 'tis, to hazard life for ill.
Alci. My Lord.
1 Sen. You cannot make grosse sinnes looke cleare,
To reuenge is no Valour, but to beare.
Alci. My Lords, then vnder fauour, pardon me,
If I speake like a Captaine.
Why do fond men expose themselues to Battell,
And not endure all threats? Sleepe vpon't,
And let the Foes quietly cut their Throats
Without repugnancy? If there be
Such Valour in the bearing, what make wee
Abroad? Why then, Women are more valiant
That stay at home, if Bearing carry it:
And the Asse, more Captaine then the Lyon?
The fellow loaden with Irons, wiser then the Iudge?
If Wisedome be in suffering, Oh my Lords,
As you are great, be pittifully Good,
Who cannot condemne rashnesse in cold blood?
To kill, I grant, is sinnes extreamest Gust,
But in defence, by Mercy, 'tis most iust.
To be in Anger, is impietie:
But who is Man, that is not Angrie.
Weigh but the Crime with this.
2 Sen. You breath in vaine.
Alci. In vaine?
His seruice done at Lacedemon, and Bizantium,
Were a sufficient briber for his life.
1 What's that?
Alc. Why say my Lords ha's done faire seruice,
And slaine in fight many of your enemies:
How full of valour did he beare himselfe
In the last Conflict, and made plentrous wounds?
2 He has made too much plenty with him:
He's a sworne Rioter, he has a sinne
That often drownes him, and takes his valour prisoner.
If there were no Foes, that were enough
To ouercome him. In that Beastly furie,
He has bin knowne to commit outrages,
And cherrish Factions. 'Tis infer'd to vs,
His dayes are foule, and his drinke dangerous.
1 He dyes.
Alci. Hard fate: he might haue dyed in warre.
My Lords, if not for any parts in him,
Though his right arme might purchase his owne time,
And be in debt to none: yet more to moue you,
Take my deserts to his, and ioyne 'em both.
And for I know, your reuerend Ages loue Security,
I'le pawne my Victories, all my Honour to you
Vpon his good returnes.
If by this Crime, he owes the Law his life,
Why let the Warre receiue't in valiant gore,
For Law is strict, and Warre is nothing more.
1 We are for Law, he dyes, vrge it no more
On height of our displeasure: Friend, or Brother,
He forfeits his owne blood, that spilles another.
Alc. Must it be so? It must not bee:
My Lords, I do beseech you know me.
2 How?
Alc. Call me to your remembrances.
3 What.
Alc I cannot thinke but your Age has forgot me,
It could not else be, I should prouo so base,
To sue and be deny'de such common Grace.
My wounds ake at you.
1 Do you dare our anger?
'Tis in few words, but spacious in effect:
We banish thee for euer.
Alc. Banish me?
Banish your dotage, banish vsurie,
That makes the Senate vgly.
1 If after two dayes shine, Athens containe thee,
Attend our weightier Iudgement.
And not to swell our Spirit,
He shall be executed presently. Exeunt.
Alc. Now the Gods keepe you old enough,
That you may liue
Onely in bone, that none may looke on you.
I'm worse then mad: I haue kept backe their Foes
While they haue told their Money, and let out
Their Coine vpon large interest. I my selfe,
Rich onely in large hurts. All those, for this?
Is this the Balsome, that the vsuring Senat
Powres into Captaines wounds? Banishement.
It comes not ill: I hate not to be banisht,
It is a cause worthy my Spleene and Furie,
That I may strike at Athens. I'le cheere vp
My discontented Troopes, and lay for hearts;
'Tis Honour with most Lands to be at ods,
Souldiers should brooke as little wrongs as Gods. Exit.

Enter

Enter divers Friends at severall doores.

1 The good time of day to you, sir.

2 I also wish it to you: I think this Honorable Lord did but try us this other day.

1 Upon that were my thoughts tiring when wee encountred. I hope it is not so low with him as he made it seeme in the triall of his severall Friends.

2 It should not be, by the perswasion of his new Feasting.

1 I should thinke so. He hath sent mee an earnest inviting, which many my neere occasions did urge mee to put off: but he hath conjur'd mee beyond them, and I must needs appeare.

2 In like manner was I in debt to my importunat business, but he would not heare my excuse. I am sorrie, when he sent to borrow of mee, that my Provision was out.

1 I am sicke of that griefe too, as I vnderstand how all things go.

2 Every man heares so: what would hee have borrowed of you?

1 A thousand Peeces.

2 A thousand Peeces?

1 What of you?

3 He sent to me sir ——Heere he comes.

Enter Timon and Attendants.

Tim. With all my heart Gentlemen both; and how fare you?

1 Ever at the best, hearing well of your Lordship.

2 The Swallow followes not Summer more willing, then we your Lordship.

Tim. Nor more willingly leaves Winter, such Summer Birds are men. Gentlemen, our dinner will not recompence this long stay: Feast your eares with the Musicke awhile: If they will fare so harshly o'th' Trompets sound: we shall too's presently.

1 I hope it remaines not vnkindely with your Lordship, that I return'd you an empty Messenger.

Tim. O sir, let it not trouble you.

2 My Noble Lord.

Tim. Ah my good Friend, what cheere?

The Banket brought in.

2 My most Honorable Lord, I am e'ne sick of shame, that when your Lordship this other day sent to me, I was so vnfortunate a Beggar.

Tim. Thinke not on't, sir.

2 If you had sent but two houres before.

Tim. Let it not cumber your better remembrance. Come bring in all together.

3 All cover'd Dishes.

1 Royall Cheere, I warrant you.

3 Doubt not that, if money and the season can yeild it

1 How do you? What's the newes?

3 Alcibiades is banish'd: heare you of it?

Both. Alcibiades banish'd?

3 'Tis so, be sure of it.

1 How? How?

2 I pray you vpon what?

Tim. My worthy Friends, will you draw neere?

3 Ile tell you more anon. Here's a Noble feast toward

2 This is the old man still.

3 Will holds? Will holds?

2 It does: best time will, and so.

3 I do conceyve.

Tim. Each man to his stoole, with that spurre as he would to the lip of his Mistris: your dyet shall bee in all places alike. Make not a Citie Feast of it, to let the meat coole, ere we can agree vpon the first place. Sit, sit. The Gods require our Thankes.

You great Benefactors, sprinkle our Society with Thankefulnesse. For your owne gifts, make your selves prou'd: But reserve still to give, lest your Deities be disposed. Lend to each man enough, that one needs not lend to another. For were your Godheads to borrow of men, men would forsake the Gods. Make the Meate be beloved, more then the Man that gives it. Let no Assembly of Twenty, be without a score of Villaines. If there sit twelve Women at the Table, let a dozen of them be as they are. The rest of your Fees, O Gods, the Senators of Athens, together with the common lye of People, what is amiss in them, you Gods, make suitable for destruction. For these my present friends, as they are to me nothing, so in nothing bless them, and to nothing are they welcome.

Vncouer Dogges, and lap

Some speake. What do's this Lordship mean?

Some other. I know not.

Timon. May you a better Feast never behold
You knot of Mouth-Friends: Smoke, & lukewarm water
Is your perfection. This is Timons last,
Who stucke and spangled you with Flatteries,
Washes it off and sprinkles in your faces
Your reeking villany. Liue loath'd, and long
Most smiling, smooth, detested Parasites,
Curteous Destroyers, affable Wolves, meeke Beares:
You Fooles of Fortune, Trencher-friends, Times Flyes,
Cap and knee-Slaves, vapours, and Minute Iackes.
Of Man and Beast, the infinite Maladie
Crust you quite o're. What do'st thou go?
Soft, take thy Physicke first; thou too, and thou:
Stay I will lend thee money, borrow none.
What? All in Motion? Henceforth be no Feast,
Whereon a Villaine's not a welcome Guest.
Burne house, sinke Athens, henceforth hated be
Of Timon Man, and all Humanity. Exit

Enter the Senators, with other Lords.

1 How now, my Lords?

2 Know you the quality of Lord Timons fury?

3 Push, did you see my Cap?

4 I have lost my Gowne.

1 He's a mad Lord, & nought but humors swaies him. He gave me a Iewell th'other day, and now he has beate it out of my hat.

Did you see my Iewell?

2 Did you see my Cap.

3 Heere 'tis.

4 Heere lyes my Gowne.

1 Let's make no stay.

2 Lord Timon mad.

3 I feel't vpon my bones.

4 One day he gives vs Diamonds, next day stones.

Exeunt the Senators.

Enter Timon.

Tim. Let me looke backe vpon thee. O thou Wall
That girdles in those Wolves, dive in the earth,
And feeze not Athens. Matrons, turne incontinent,
Obedience fayle in Children: Slaves and Fooles

Plucke the graue wrinkled Senate from the Bench,
And minister in their steeds, to generall Filthes.
Conuert o'th'Instant greene Virginity,
Doo't in your Parents eyes. Bankrupts, hold fast
Rather then render backe; out with your Knives,
And cut your Trusters throates. Bound Seruants, steale,
Large-handed Robbers your graue Masters are,
And pill by Law. Maide, to thy Masters bed,
Thy Mistris is o'th'Brothell. Sonne of sixteen,
Plucke the lyn'd Crutch from thy old limping Sire,
With it, beate out his Braines. Piety, and Feare,
Religion to the Gods, Peace, Iustice, Truth,
Domesticke awe, Night-rest, and Neighbour-hood,
Instruction, Maners, Mysteries, and Trades,
Degrees, Obseruances, Customes, and Lawes,
Decline to your confounding contraries.
And yet Confusion liue: Plagues incident to men,
Your potent and infectious Feuours, heape
On Athens ripe for stroke. Thou cold Sciatica,
Cripple our Senators, that their limbes may halt
As lamely as their Manners Lust, and Libertie
Creepe in the Minds and Marrowes of our youth,
That gainst the streame of Vertue they may strue,
And drowne themselues in Riot. Itches, Blaines,
Sowe all th'Athenian bosomes, and their crop
Be generall Leprosie: Breath, infect breath,
That their Society (as their Friendship) may
Be meerely poyson. Nothing Ile beare from thee
But nakednesse, thou detestable Towne,
Take thou that too, with multiplying Bannes:
Timon will to the Woods, where he shall finde
Th'vnkindest Beast, more kinder then Mankinde.
The Gods confound (heare me you good Gods all)
Th'Athenians both within and out that Wall:
And graunt as Timon growes, his hate may grow
To the whole race of Mankinde, high and low.
Amen. Exit.

Enter Steward with two or three Seruants.

1 Heare you M. Steward, where's our Master?
Are we vndone, cast off, nothing remaining?
Stew. Alack my Fellowes, what should I say to you?
Let me be recorded by the righteous Gods,
I am as poore as you.
1 Such a House broke?
So Noble a Master falne, all gone, and not
One Friend to take his Fortune by the arme,
And go along with him.
2 As we do turne our backes
From our Companion, throwne into his graue,
So his Familiars to his buried Fortunes
Slinke all away, leaue their false vowes with him
Like empty purses pickt; and his poore selfe
A dedicated Beggar to the Ayre,
With his disease, of all shunn'd pouerty,
Walkes like contempt alone. More of our Fellowes.
Enter other Seruants.
Stew. All broken Implements of a ruin'd house.
3 Yet do our hearts wear Timons Liuery,
That see I by our Faces: we are Fellowes still,
Seruing alike in sorrow: Leak'd is our Barke,
And we poore Mates, stand on the dying Decke,
Hearing the Surges threat: we must all part
Into this Sea of Ayre.
Stew. Good Fellowes all,
The latest of my wealth Ile share among'st you.
Where euer we shall meete, for Timons sake,
Let's yet be Fellowes. Let's shake our heads, and say
As 'twere a Knell vnto our Masters Fortunes,
We haue seene better dayes. Let each take some:
Nay put out all your hands: Not one word more,
Thus part we rich in sorrow, parting poore
Embrace and part seuerall wayes.
Oh the fleere wretchednesse that Glory brings vs?
Who would not wish to be from wealth exempt,
Since Riches point to Misery and Contempt?
Who would be so mock'd with Glory, or to liue
But in a Dreame of Friendship,
To haue his pompe, and all what state compounds,
But onely painted like his varnisht Friends:
Poore honest Lord, brought lowe by his owne heart,
Vndone by Goodnesse: Strange vnkindall blood,
When mans worst sinne is, He do's too much Good.
Who then dares to be halfe so kinde again?
For Bounty that makes Gods, do still mare Men.
My dearest Lord, blest to be most accurst,
Rich onely to be wretched; thy great Fortunes
Are made thy cheefe Afflictions. Alas (kinde Lord)
Hee's flung in Rage from this ingrateful Seaue
Of monstrous Friends:
Nor has's he with him to supply his life,
Or that which can command it:
Ile follow and enquire him out.
Ile euer serue his minde, with my best will,
Whilst I haue Gold, Ile be his Steward still. Exit.

Enter Timon in the woods.

Tim. O blessed breeding Sun, draw from the earth
Rotten humidity: below thy Sisters Orbe
Infect the ayre. Twin'd Brothers of one wombe,
Whose procreation, residence, and birth,
Scarse is dissimilar: touch them with seuerall fortunes,
The greater scornes the lesser. Not Nature
(To whom all sores lay siege) can beare great Fortune
But by contempt of Nature.
Raise me this Begger, and deny't that Lord,
The Senators shall beare contempt Hereditary,
The Begger Native Honor.
It is the Pastour Lords, the Brothers sides,
The want that makes him leaue: who dares? who dares
In puritie of Manhood stand vpright
And say, this mans a Flatterer. If one be,
So are they all: for euerie grize of Fortune
Is smooth'd by that below. The Learned pate
Duckes to the Golden Foole. All's obliquie:
There's nothing leuell in our cursed Natures
But direct villanie. Therefore be abhorr'd,
All Feasts, Societies, and Throngs of men.
His semblable, yea himselfe Timon disdaines,
Destruction phang mankinde; Earth yeeld me Roots,
Who seekes for better of thee, sawce his palate
With thy most operant Poyson. What is heere?
Gold? Yellow, glittering, precious Gold?
No Gods, I am no idle Votarist,
Roots you cleere Heauens. Thus much of this will make
Blacke, white; fowle, fair; wrong, right;
Base, Noble; Old, young; Coward, valiant.
Ha you Gods! why this? what this. you Gods? why this
Will lugge your Priests and Seruants from your sides:
Plucke stout mens pillowes from below their heads.

This yellow Slaue,
Will knit and breake Religions, bleſſe th'accurſt,
Make the hoare Leproſie ador'd, place Theeues,
And giue them Title, Knee, and approbation
With Senators on the Bench: This is it
That makes the wappen'd Widdow wed againe;
Shee, whom the Spittle-houſe, and vlcerous ſores,
Would caſt the gorge at. This Embalmes and Spices
To'th'Aprill day againe. Come damn'd Earth,
Thou common whore of Mankinde, that puttes oddes
Among the rout of Nations, I will make thee
Do thy right Nature. March afarre off.
Ha? A Drumme? Th'art quicke,
But yet I'le bury thee: Thou'l go (ſtrong Theefe)
When Gouty keepers of thee cannot ſtand:
Nay ſtay thou out for earneſt.

Enter Alcibiades with Drumme and Fife in warlike manner, and Phryne and Timandra.

Alc. What art thou there? ſpeake.
Tim. A Beaſt as thou art. The Canker gnaw thy hart
For ſhewing me againe the eyes of Man.
Alc. What is thy name? Is man ſo hateſull to thee,
That art thy ſelfe a Man?
Tim. I am Miſanthropos, and hate Mankinde.
For thy part, I do wiſh thou wert a dogge,
That I might loue thee ſomething.
Alc. I know thee well:
But in thy Fortunes am valeara'd, and ſtrange.
Tim. I know thee too, and more then that I know thee
I not deſire to know. Follow thy Drumme,
With mans blood paint the ground Gules, Gules:
Religious Canons, civill Lawes are cruell,
Then what ſhould warre be? This fell whore of thine,
Hath in her more deſtruction then thy Sword,
For all her Cherubin looke.
Phrin. Thy lips rot off.
Tim. I will not kiſſe thee, then the rot returnes
To thine owne lippes againe.
Alc. How came the Noble Timon to this change?
Tim. As the Moone do's, by wanting light to giue:
But then renew I could not like the Moone,
There were no Sunnes to borrow of.
Alc. Noble Timon, what friendſhip may I do thee?
Tim. None, but to maintaine my opinion.
Alc. What is it Timon?
Tim. Promiſe me Friendſhip, but performe none.
If thou wilt not promiſe, the Gods plague thee, for thou art a man: if thou do'ſt performe, confound thee, for thou art a man.
Alc. I haue heard in ſome ſort of thy Miſeries.
Tim. Thou ſaw'ſt them when I had proſperitie.
Alc. I ſee them now, then was a bleſſed time.
Tim. As thine is now, held with a brace of Harlots.
Timan. Is this th'Athenian Minion, whom the world Voic'd ſo regardfully?
Tim. Art thou Timandra? Timan. Yes.
Tim. Be a whore ſtill, they loue thee not that vſe thee, giue them diſeaſes, leaving with thee their Luſt. Make vſe of thy ſalt houres, ſeaſon the ſlaues for Tubbes and Bathes, bring downe Roſe-cheeks youth to the Tubfaſt, and the Diet.
Timan. Hang thee Monſter.
Alc. Pardon him ſweet Timandra for his wits
Are drown'd and loſt in his Calamities.
I haue but little Gold of late, brave Timon,
The want whereof, doth daily make reuolt
In my penurious Band. I haue heard and greeu'd
How curſed Athens, mindeleſſe of thy worth,
Forgetting thy great deeds, when Neighbour ſtates
But for thy Sword and Fortune trod vpon them.
Tim. I prythee beate thy Drum, and get thee gone.
Alc. I am thy Friend, and pitty thee deere Timon.
Tim. How doeſt thou pitty him whom ſ doſt trouble,
I had rather be alone.
Alc. Why fare thee well:
Heere is ſome Gold for thee.
Tim. Keepe it, I cannot eate it.
Alc. When I haue laid proud Athens on a heape.
Tim. Warr'ſt thou 'gainſt Athens.
Alc. I Timon, and haue cauſe.
Tim. The Gods confound them all in thy Conqueſt,
And thee after, when thou haſt Conquer'd.
Alc. Why me, Timon?
Tim. That by killing of Villaines
Thou wan't borne to conquer my Country.
Put vp thy Gold. Go on, heeres Gold, go on;
Be as a Planetary plague, when Ioue
Will o're ſome high-Vic'd City, hang his poyſon
In the ſicke ayre: let not thy ſword skip one:
Pitty not honour'd Age for his white Beard,
He is an Vſurer. Strike me the counterfeit Matron,
It is her habite onely, that is honeſt.
Her ſelfe's a Bawd. Let not the Virgins cheeke
Make ſoft thy trenchant Sword: for thoſe Milke peppes
That through the window Barne bore at mens eyes,
Are not within the Leaſe of pitty writ,
But ſet them down horrible Traitors. Spare not the Babe
Whoſe dimpled ſmiles from Fooles exhauſt their mercy;
Thinke it a Baſtard, whom the Oracle
Hath doubtfully pronounced, the throat ſhall cut,
And mince it ſans remorſe. Sweare againſt Obiects,
Put Armour on thine eares, and on thine eyes,
Whoſe proofe, nor yels of Mothers, Maides, nor Babes,
Nor ſight of Priests in holy Veſtments bleeding,
Shall pierce a lot. There's Gold to pay thy Souldiers,
Make large confuſion: and thy fury ſpent,
Confounded be thy ſelfe. Speake not, be gone.
Alc. Haſt thou Gold yet, I'le take the Gold thou giueſt me, not all thy Counſell.
Tim. Doſt thou or doſt thou not, Heauens curſe vpon thee.
Both. Giue vs ſome Gold good Timon, haſt ſ more?
Tim. Enough to make a Whore forſweare her Trade,
And to make Whores, a Bawd. Hold vp you Sluts
Your Aprons mountant; you are not Othable,
Although I know you'l ſweare, terribly ſweare
Into ſtrong ſhudders, and to heauenly Agues
Th'immortall Gods that heare you. Spare your Oathes:
I'le truſt to your Conditions, be whores ſtill.
And he whoſe plous breath ſeeſes to conuert you,
Be ſtrong in Whore, allure him, burne him vp,
Let your cloſe fire predominate his ſmoke,
And be no turne-coats: yet may your paines ſix months
Be quite contrary. And Thatch
Your poore thin Roofes with burthens of the dead,
(Some that were hang'd) no matter:
Weare them, betray with them; Whore ſtill,
Paint till a horſe may myre vpon your face:
A pox of wrinkles.
Both. Well, more Gold, what then?

Beleeue't that we'l do any thing for Gold.

Tim. Consumptions sowe
In hollow bones of man, strike their sharpe shinnes,
And marre mens spurring. Cracke the Lawyers voyce,
That he may never more false Title pleade,
Nor sound his Quillets shrilly: Hoare the Flamen,
That scold'st against the quality of flesh,
And not beleeues himselfe. Downe with the Nose,
Downe with it flat, take the Bridge quite away
Of Iulum, that his particular to foresee (bald
Smels from the generall weale. Make curld'pate Ruffians
And let the vnscarr'd Braggerts of the Warre
Derive some paine from you. Plague all,
That your Activity may defeate and quell
The source of all Erection. There's more Gold.
Do you damne others, and let this damne you,
And ditches graue you all.

Both. More counsell with more Money, bounteous Timon.

Tim. More whore, more Mischeefe first, I haue giuen you earnest.

Alc. Strike vp the Drum towardes Athens, farewell Timon: if I thriue well, Ile visit thee againe.

Tim. If I hope well, Ile neuer see thee more.

Alc. I never did thee harme

Tim. Yes, thou spok'st well of me.

Alc. Call'st thou that harme?

Tim. Men dayly finde it. Get thee away,
And take thy Beagles with thee.

Alc. We but offend him, strike. Exeunt.

Tim. That Nature being sicke of mans vnkindnesse
Should yet be hungry: Common Mother, thou
Whose wombe vnmeasureable, and infinite breft
Teemes and feeds all. whose selfesame Mettle
Whereof thy proud Childe (arrogant man) is puft.
Engenders the blacke Toad, and Adder blew,
The gilded Newt, and eyelesse venom'd Worme,
With all th'abhorred Births below Crispe Heauen,
Whereon Hyperion quickning fire doth shine:
Yeeld him, who all the humane Sonnes do hate,
From foorth thy plenteous bosome, one poore roote:
Ensearre thy Fertile and Conceptious wombe,
Let it no more bring out ingratefull man.
Goe great with Tygers, Dragons, Wolues, and Beares,
Teeme with new Monsters, whom thy vpward face
Hath to the Marbled Mansion all aboue
Never presented. O, a Root, deare thankes:
Dry vp thy Marrowes, Vines, and Plough-torne Leas,
Whereof ingratefull man with Licourish draughts
And Morsels Vnctious, greases his pure minde,
That from it all Consideration slippes ——

Enter Apemantus.

More man? Plague, plague.

Ape. I was directed hither. Men report,
Thou dost affect my Manners, and dost vse them.

Tim. 'Tis then, because thou dost not keepe a dogge
Whom I would imitate. Consumption catch thee.

Ape. This is in thee a Nature but infected,
A poore vnmanly Melancholly sprung
From change of future. Why this Spade? this place?
This Slaue-like Habit, and these lookes of Care?
Thy Flatterers yet weare Silke, drinke Wine, lye soft,
Hugge their diseas'd Perfumes, and haue forgot
That ever Timon was. Shame not these Woods,
By putting on the cunning of a Carper.
Be thou a Flatterer now, and seeke to thriue
By that which has vndone thee; hinge thy knee,
And let his very breath whom thou'lt obseruе
Blow off thy Cap: praise his most vicious strain,
And call it excellent: thou wast told thus:
Thou gau'st thine eares (like Tapsters, that bed welcome)
To Knaues, and all approachers: 'Tis most iust
That thou turne Rascall, had'st thou wealth againe,
Rascals should haue't. Do not assume my likeneſſe.

Tim. Were I like thee, I'de throw away my selfe.

Ape. Thou hast cast away thy selfe, being like thy self
A Madman so long, now a Foole: what think'st
That the bleake ayre, thy boysterous Chamberlaine
Will put thy shirt on warme? Will these moyst Tears,
That haue out-liu'd the Eagle, page thy heeles
And skip when thou point'st out? Will the cold brooke
Candied with Ice, Cawdle thy Morning taste
To cure thy o're-nights surfet? Call the Creatures,
Whose naked Natures liue in all the spight
Of wreckefull Heauen, whose bare vnhoused Trunkes
To the conflicting Elements expos'd
Answer meere Nature: bid them flatter thee.
O thou shalt finde.

Tim. A Foole of thee: depart.

Ape. I loue thee better now, than ere I did.

Tim. I hate thee worse.

Ape. Why?

Tim. Thou flatter'st misery.

Ape. I flatter not, but say thou art a Caytiffe.

Tim. Why do'st thou seeke me out?

Ape. To vex thee.

Tim. Alwayes a Villaines Office, or a Fooles.
Dost please thy selfe in't?

Ape. I.

Tim. What, a Knaue too?

Ape. If thou did'st put this sowre cold habit on
To castigate thy pride, 'twere well: but thou
Dost it enforcedly: Thou'dst Courtier be againe
Wert thou not Beggar: willing misery
Out-liues: incertaine pompe, is crown'd before:
The one is filling still, never compleat:
The other, at high wish: best state Contentlesse,
Hath a distracted and most wretched being,
Worse then the worst, Content.
Thou should'st desire to dye, being miserable.

Tim. Not by his breath, that is more miserable.
Thou art a Slaue, whom Fortunes tender arme
With fauour never claspt: but bred a Dogge.
Had'st thou like vs from our first swath proceeded,
The sweet degrees that this breefe world affords,
To such as may the passiue drugges of it
Freely command'st: thou would'st haue plung'd thy self
In generall Riot, melted downe thy youth
In different beds of Lust, and never learn'd
The Icie precepts of respect, but followed
The Sugred game before thee. But my selfe,
Who had the world as my Confectionarie,
The mouthes, the tongues, the eyes, and hearts of men
At duty more then I could frame employment;
That numberlesse vpon me stucke, as leaues
Do on the Oake, haue with one Winters brush
Fell from their boughes, and left me open, bare,
For every storme that blowes. I to bear this,
That never knew but better, is some burthen
Thy Nature, did commence in sufferance, Time
Hath made thee hard in't. Why should'st thy hate Men?
They never flatter'd thee. What hast thou given?

If thou wilt curse: thy Father (that poore ragge)
Must be thy subiect; who in spight put stuffe
To some shee-Begger, and compounded thee
Poore Rogue, hereditary. Hence, be gone,
If thou hadst not beene borne the worst of men,
Thou hadst beene a Knaue and Flatterer.

Ape. Art thou proud yet?

Tim. I, that I am not thee.

Ape. I, that I was no Prodigall.

Tim. I, that I am one now.
Were all the wealth I haue shut vp in thee,
I'ld giue thee leaue to hang it. Get thee gone:
That the whole life of Athens were in this,
Thus would I eate it.

Ape. Here, I will mend thy Feast.

Tim. First mend thy company, take away thy selfe.

Ape. So I shall mend mine owne, by th'lacke of thine

Tim. 'Tis not well mended so, it is but botche;
If not, I would it were.

Ape. What would'st thou haue to Athens?

Tim. Thee thither in a whirlewind: if thou wilt,
Tell them there I haue Gold, looke, so I haue.

Ape. Heere is no vse for Gold.

Tim. The best, and truest:
For heere it sleepes, and do's no hyred harme.

Ape. Where lyest a nights Timon?

Tim. Vnder that's aboue me.
Where feed'st thou a-dayes Apemantus?

Ape. Where my stomacke findes meate, or rather where I eate it.

Tim. Would poyson were obedient, & knew my mind

Ape. Where would'st thou send it?

Tim. To sawce thy dishes.

Ape. The middle of Humanity thou never knewest, but the extremitie of both ends. When thou wast in thy Gilt, and thy Perfume, they mockt thee for too much Curiositie: in thy Rages thou know'st none, but art despis'd for the contrary. There's a medlar for thee, eate it.

Tim. On what I hate, I feed not.

Ape. Do'st hate a Medler?

Tim. I, though it looke like thee.

Ape. And th'hadst hated Medlers sooner, y'should'st haue loued thy selfe better now. What man didd'st thou euer know vnthrift, that was beloued after his meanes?

Tim. Who without those meanes thou talk'st of, didst thou euer know belou'd?

Ape. My selfe.

Tim. I vnderstand thee: thou had'st some meanes to keepe a Dogge.

Apem. What things in the world canst thou nearest compare to thy Flatterers?

Tim. Women nearest, but men: men are the things themselues. What would'st thou do with the world Apemantus, if it lay in thy power?

Ape. Giue it the Beasts, to be rid of the men.

Tim. Would'st thou haue thy selfe fall in the confusion of men, and remaine a Beast with the Beasts.

Ape. I Timon.

Tim. A beastly Ambition, which the Gods graunt thee t'attaine to. If thou wert the Lyon, the Fox would beguile thee: if thou wert the Lambe, the Foxe would eate thee: if thou wert the Fox, the Lion would suspect thee, when peraduenture thou wert accus'd by the Asse: If thou wert the Asse, thy dulnesse would torment thee; and still thou liu'dst but as a Breakefast to the Wolfe. If thou wert the Wolfe, thy greedinesse would afflict thee, & eat thou should'st beware thy life for thy dinner. Were thou the Vnicorne, pride and wrath would confound thee, and make thine owne selfe the conquest of thy fury. Were thou a Beare, thou would'st be kill'd by the Horse: wert thou a Horse, thou would'st be seas'd by the Leopard: wert thou a Leopard, thou wert Germane to the Lion, and the spottes of thy Kindred, were Iurors on thy life. All thy safety were remotion, and thy defence absence. What Beast could'st thou bee, that were not subiect to a Beast: and what a Beast art thou already, that seest not thy loss in transformation.

Ape. If thou could'st please me
With speaking to me, thou might'st
Haue hit vpon it heere.
The Commonwealth of Athens, is become
A Forrest of Beasts.

Tim. How ha's the Asse broke the wall, that thou art out of the Citie.

Ape. Yonder comes a Poet and a Painter:
The plague of Company light vpon thee:
I will feare to catch it, and glue way.
When I know not what else to do,
Ile see thee againe.

Tim. When there is nothing liuing but thee,
Thou shalt be welcome.
I had rather be a Beggers Dogge,
Then Apemantus.

Ape. Thou art the Cap
Of all the Fooles alive.

Tim. Would thou wert cleane enough
To spit vpon.

Ape. A plague on thee,
Thou art too bad to curse.

Tim. All Villaines
That do stand by thee, are pure.

Ape. There is no Leprosie,
But what thou speak'st.

Tim. If I name thee, Ile beare thee;
But I should infect my hands.

Ape. I would my tongue
Could rot them off.

Tim. Away thou issue of a mangie dogge.
Choller does kill me,
That thou art alive, I swoond to see thee.

Ape. Would thou would'st burst.

Tim. Away thou tedious Rogue, I am sorry I shall lose a stone by thee.

Ape. Beast.

Tim. Slaue.

Ape. Toad.

Tim. Rogue, Rogue, Rogue.
I am sicke of this false world, and will loue nought
But euen the meere necessities vpon't:
Then Timon presently prepare thy graue:
Lye where the light Foame of the Sea may beate
Thy graue stone dayly, make thine Epitaph,
That death in me, as others liues may laugh.
O thou sweete King-killer, and deare diuorce
Twixt naturall Sunne and fire: thou bright defiler
Of Hymens purest bed, thou valiant Mars,
Thou euer, yong, fresh, loued, and delicate wooer,
Whose blush doth thawe the consecrated Snow
That lyes on Diana lap.
Thou visible God,
That souldrest close Impossibilities,
And mak'st them kisse; that speak'st with euerie Tongue

To euerie purpose: O thou touch of hearts,
Thinke thy slaue-man rebels, and by thy vertue
Set them into confounding odds, that Beasts
May haue the world in Empire.

Ape. Would'twere so,
But not till I am dead. Ile say th'hast Gold:
Thou wilt be throng'd too shortly.

Tim. Throng'd too?

Ape. I.

Tim. Thy backe I prythee.

Ape. Liue, and loue thy misery.

Tim. Long liue so, and so dye. I am quit.

Ape. Mo things like men,
Eate Timon, and abhorre them. Exit Apemant.

Enter the Bandetti.

1 Where should he haue this Gold? It is some poore Fragment, some slender Ort of his remainder: the meere want of Gold, and the falling from of his Friendes, droue him into this Melancholly.

2 It is nois'd
He hath a masse of Treasure.

3 Let vs make the assay vpon him, if he care not for't, he will supply vs easily: if he couetously reserue it, how shall's get it?

2 True: for he beares it not about him:
'Tis hid.

1 Is not this hee?

All. Where?

2 'Tis his description.

3 He? I know him.

All. Saue thee Timon.

Tim. Now Theeues.

All. Soldiers, not Theeues.

Tim. Both too, and women Sonnes.

All. We are not Theeues, but men
That much do want.

Tim. Your greatest want is, you want much of meat:
Why should you want? Behold, the Earth hath Rootes
Within this Mile breake forth a hundred Springs:
The Oakes beare Mast, the Briars Scarlet Heps,
The bounteous Housewife Nature, on each bush,
Layes her full Messe before you. Want? why Want?

1 We cannot liue on Grasse, on Berries, Water,
As Beasts, and Birds, and Fishes.

Ti. Nor on the Beasts themselues, the Birds & Fishes,
You must eate men. Yet thankes I must you con,
That you are Theeues profest: that you worke not
In holier shapes: For there is boundlesse Theft
In limited Professions. Rascall Theeues
Heere's Gold. Go, suckle the subtle blood o'th'Grape,
Till the high Feuor seeth your blood to froth,
And so scape hanging. Trust not the Physitian,
His Antidotes are poyson, and he slayes
More then you Rob: Take wealth, and liues together,
Do Villaine do, since you protest to doo't.
Like Workemen, Ile example you with Theerry:
The Sunnes a Theefe, and with his great attraction
Robbes the vaste Sea. The Moones an arrant Theefe,
And her pale fire, she snatches from the Sunne.
The Seas a Theefe, whose liquid Surge, resolues
The Moone into Salt teares. The Earth's a Theefe,
That feeds and breeds by a composture stolne
From gen'rall excrement: each thing's a Theefe.
The Lawes, your curbe and whip, in their rough power
Ha's vncheck'd Theft. Loue not your selues, away,
Rob one another, there's more Gold, cut throates,
All that you meete are Theeues: to Athens go,
Breake open shoppes, nothing can you steale
But Theeues do loose it: steale lesse, for this I giue you,
And Gold confound you howsoere: Amen.

3 Has almost charm'd me from my Profession, by persuading me to it.

1 'Tis in the malice of mankinde, that he thus aduises vs not to haue vs thriue in our mystery.

2 Ile beleeue him as an Enemy,
And giue ouer my Trade.

1 Let vs first see peace in Athens, there is no time so miserable, but a man may be true. Exit Theeues.

Enter the Steward to Timon.

Stew. Oh you Gods!
Is yon'd despis'd and ruinous man my Lord?
Full of decay and stayling? Oh Monument
And wonder of good deeds, euilly bestow'd!
What an alteration of Honor has desp'rate want made?
What vilder thing vpon the earth, then Friends,
Who can bring Noblest minde, to basest ends.
How rarely does it meete with this times guise,
When man was wisht to loue his Enemies:
Grant I may euer loue, and rather woo
Those that would mischeefe me, then those that doo.
Has caught me in his eye, I will present my honest griefe vnto him; and so my Lord, still serue him with my life
My deerest Master.

Tim. Away: what art thou?

Stew. Haue you forgot me, Sir?

Tim. Why dost aske that? I haue forgot all men.
Then, if thou grunt'st, th'art a man.
I haue forgot thee.

Stew. An honest poore seruant of yours.

Tim. Then I know thee not:
I never had honest man about me, I all
I kept were Knaues, to serue in meate to Villaines.

Stew. The Gods are witnesse,
Ne'r did poore Steward weare a truer greefe
For his vndone Lord, then mine eyes for you.

Tim. What, dost thou weepe?
Come neerer, then I loue thee
Because thou art a woman, and disclaim'st
Flinty mankinde: whose eyes do never giue,
But throw Lust and Laughter: pitie's sleeping:
Strange times, weepe with laughing, not with weeping.

Stew. I begge of you to know me, good my Lord,
T'accept my greefe, and whil'st this poore wealth lasts,
To entertaine me as your Steward still.

Tim. Had I a Steward
So true, so iust, and now so comfortable?
It almost turnes my dangerous Nature wilde.
Let me behold thy face: Surely, this man
Was borne of woman.
Forgiue my generall, and exceptlesse rashnesse
You perpetuall sober Gods. I do proclaime
One honest man: Mistake me not, but one:
No more I pray, and hee's a Steward.
How faine would I haue hated all mankinde,
And thou redeem'st thy selfe. But all saue thee,
I fell with Curses.
Me thinkes thou art more honest now, then wise:
For, by oppressing and betraying me,

Thou

Thou mightst hast sooner got another Service:
For many so arrive to second Masters,
Upon their first Lords necke. But tell me true,
(For I must ever doubt, though ne're so sure)
Is not this kindnesse subtle, covetous,
If not a Vsuring kindnesse, and as rich men deale Gulfes,
Expecting in returne twenty for one?

Serv. No my most worthy Master, in whose breast
Doubt, and suspect (alas) are plac'd too late:
You should hast fear'd false times, when you did Feast.
Suspect still comes, where an estate is lest.
That which I shew, Heaven knowes, is merely Love,
Duties, and Zeale, to your unmatched minde.
Care of your Food and Living, and beleeve it,
My most Honour'd Lord,
For any benefit that points to mee,
Either in hope, or present, I'de exchange
For this one wish, that you had power and wealth
To requite me, by making rich your selfe.

Tim. Looke thee, 'tis so: thou singly honest man,
Heere take: the Gods out of my misery
Has sent thee Treasure. Go, live rich and happy.
But thus condition'd: Thou shalt build from men
Hate all, curse all, shew Charity to none,
But let the famished flesh slide from the Bone,
Ere thou relieve the Begger. Give to dogges
What thou denyest to men. Let Prisons swallow 'em,
Debts wither 'em to nothing, be men like blasted woods
And may Diseases licke vp their false bloods,
And so farewell, and thrive.

Serv. O let me stay, and comfort you, my Master.

Tim. If thou hat'st Curses
Stay not: flye, whil'st thou art blest and free:
Ne're see thou man, and let me ne're see thee. Exit

Enter Poet, and Painter.

Pain. As I weake note of the place, it cannot be farre where he abides.

Poet. What's to be thought of him?
Does the Rumor hold for true,
That he's so full of Gold?

Painter. Certaine.
Alcibiades reports it: Phrinica and Timandra
Had Gold of him. He likewise enrich'd
Poore straggling Souldiers, with great quantity
'Tis saide, he gave vnto his Steward
A mighty summe.

Poet. Then this breaking of his,
He's borne but a Try for his Friends?

Painter Nothing else:
You shall see him a Palme in Athens againe,
And flourish with the highest:
Therefore, 'tis not amisse, we tender our loves
To him, in this supposed distresse of his:
It will shew honestly in vs,
And is very likely, to loade our purposes
With what they travaile for,
If it be a just and true report, that goes
Of his having.

Poet. What have you now
To present vnto him?

Painter. Nothing at this time
But my Visiones: onely I will promise him
An excellent Poeme.

Poet. I must serve him so too;
Tell him of an intent that's comming toward him.

Painter. Good as the best.
Promising, is the verie Ayre o'th'Time;
It opens the eyes of Expectation.
Performance, is ever the duller for his act,
And but in the plainer and simpler kinde of people,
The deede of Saying is quite out of vse.
To Promise, is most Courtly and fashionable;
Performance, is a kinde of Will or Testament
Which argues a great sicknesse in his judgement
That makes it.

Enter Timon from his Cave.

Timon. Excellent Workemen,
Thou canst not paint a man so badde
As is thy selfe.

Poet. I am thinking
What I shall say I have provided for him:
It must be a personating of himselfe:
A Satyre against the softnesse of Prosperity,
With a Discoverie of the infinite Flatteries
That follow youth and opulencie.

Timon. Must thou needes
Stand for a Villaine in thine owne Worke?
Wilt thou whip thine owne faults in other men?
Do so, I have Gold for thee.

Poet. Nay, let's seeke him.
Then do we sinne against our owne estate,
When we may profit meete, and come too late.

Painter. True:
When the day serves before blacke-corner'd night;
Finde what thou want'st, by free and offer'd light.
Come.

Tim. I'le meete you at the turne:
What a Gods Gold, that he is worshipt
In a base Temple, than where Swine feede?
'Tis thou that rig'st the Barke, and plow'st the Foame,
Setlest admired reverence in a Slave,
To thee be worshipt, and thy Saints for aye:
Be crown'd with Plagues, that thee alone obey.
Fit I meet them.

Poet. Haile worthy Timon.

Pain. Our late Noble Master.

Timon. Have I once lin'd
To see two honest men?

Poet. Sir:
Having often of your open Bounty tasted,
Hearing you were retyr'd, your Friends falne off,
Whose thankelesse Natures (O abhorred Spirits)
Not all the Whippes of Heaven, are large enough.
What, to you,
Whose Starre-like Nobleness gave life and influence
To their whole being? I am rapt, and cannot cover
The monstrous bulke of this Ingratitude
With any size of words.

Timon. Let it go,
Naked men may see't the better:
You that are honest, by being what you are,
Make them best seene, and knowne.

Pain. He, and my selfe
Have travail'd in the great showre of your gifts,
And sweetly felt it.

Timon. I, you are honest men.

Painter. We are hither come
To offer you our service

Timon. Most honest men:

Why

Why how shall I requite you?
Can you eate Roots, and drinke cold water, no?
Both. What we can do,
We'l do to do you service.
Tim. Y'are honest men,
Y'haue heard that I haue Gold,
I am sure you haue, speake truth, y'are honest men.
Pam. So it is said my Noble Lord, but therefore Came not my Friend, nor I.
Timon. Good honest men: Thou draw'st a counterfeit
Best in all Athens, th'art indeed the best,
Thou counterfes'st most liuely.
Pam. So, so, my Lord.
Tim. E'ne so sir as I say. And for thy fiction,
Why thy Verse swels with stuffe so fine and smooth,
That thou art euen Naturall in thine Art.
But for all this (my honest Natur'd friends)
I must needs say you haue a little fault,
Marry 'tis not monstrous in you, neither wish I
You take much pains to mend.
Both. Beseech your Honour
To make it knowne to vs.
Tim. You'l take it ill.
Both. Most thankefully, my Lord.
Timon. Will you indeed?
Both. Doubt it not worthy Lord.
Tim. There's neuer a one of you but trusts a Knaue,
That mightily deceiues you.
Both. Do we, my Lord?
Tim. I, and you heare him cogge,
See him dissemble,
Know his grosse patchery, loue him, feede him,
Keepe in your bosome, yet remaine assur'd
That he's a made-vp-Villaine
Pam. I know none such, my Lord.
Poet. Nor I.
Timon. Looke you,
I loue you well, Ile giue you Gold
Rid me these Villaines from your companies;
Hang them, or stab them, drowne them in a draught
Confound them by some course, and come to me,
Ile giue you Gold enough.
Both. Name them my Lord, let's know them.
Tim. You that way, and you this:
But two in Company:
Each man apart, all single, and alone,
Yet an arch Villaine keepes him company:
If where thou art, two Villaines shall not be,
Come not neere him. If thou would'st not reside
But where one Villaine is, then him abandon.
Hence, packe, there's Gold, you came for Gold ye slaues.
You haue worke for me; there's payment, hence,
You are an Alcumist, make Gold of that:
Out Rascall dogges. Exeunt

Enter Steward, and two Senators

Stew. It is vaine that you would speake with Timon:
For he is set so onely to himselfe,
That nothing but himselfe, which lookes like man,
Is friendly with him.
1. Sen. Bring vs to his Cave.
It is our part and promise to th'Athenians
To speake with Timon.
2. Sen. At all times alike
Men are not still the same: 'twas Time and Griefe
That fram'd him thus. Time with his fairer hand,
Offering the Fortunes of his former dayes,
The former man may make him bring vs to him
And chanc'd it as it may.
Stew. Heere is his Cave:
Peace and content be heere. Lord Timon, Timon,
Looke out, and speake to Friends: Th'Athenians
By two of their most reuerend Senate greet thee:
Speake to them Noble Timon.

Enter Timon out of his Cave.

Tim. Thou Sunne that comforts burne,
Speake and be hang'd:
For each true word, a blister, and each flattie
Be as a Cauterizing to the root o'th'Tongue,
Consuming it with speaking.
1 Worthy Timon.
Tim. Of none but such as you,
And you of Timon.
1 The Senators of Athens, greet thee Timon.
Tim. I thanke them,
And would send them backe the plague,
Could I but catch it for them.
1 O forget
What we are sorry for our selues in thee:
The Senators, with one consent of loue,
Intreate thee backe to Athens, who haue thought
On speciall Dignities, which vacant lye
For thy best vse and wearing.
2 They confesse
Toward thee, forgetfulnesse too generall grosse;
Which now the publike Body, which doth seldome
Play the re-canter, feeling in it selfe
A lacke of Timon ayde, hath since vnthrall
Of it owne fall, restraining ayde to Timon,
And send forth vs, to make their sorrowed tender,
Together, with a recompence more fruitfull
Than their offence can weigh downe by the Dramme.
I euen such heapes and summes of Loue and Wealth,
As shall to thee blot out, what wrongs were theirs,
And write in thee the figures of their loue,
Ever to read them thine.
Tim. You witch me in it;
Surprize me to the very brinke of teares;
Lend me a Fooles heart, and a womans eyes,
And Ile beweepe these comforts, worthy Senators.
1 Therefore so please thee to returne with vs,
And of our Athens, thine and ours to take
The Captainship, thou shalt be met with thanks,
Allowed with absolute power, and thy good name
Liue with Authoritie: so soone we shall driue backe
Of Alcibiades th'approaches wild,
Who like a Bore too sauage, doth root vp
His Countries peace.
2 And shakes his threatning Sword
Against the walles of Athens.
1 Therefore Timon
Tim. Well sir, I will: therefore will sir thus
If Alcibiades kill my Countrymen,
Let Alcibiades know this of Timon,
That Timon cares not. But if he sacke faire Athens,
And take our goodly aged men by th'Beards,
Giving our holy Virgins to the stainer
Of contumelious, beastly, mad-brain'd warre:
Then let him know, and tell him Timon speaks it,

In pity of our aged, and our youth,
I cannot choose but tell him that I care not,
And let him take't at worst; For their Knives care not.
While you have throats to answer. For my selfe,
There's not a whistle, in th'vnruly Campe,
But I do prize it at my love, before
The reuerend Throat in Athens. So I leaue you
To the protection of the prosperous Gods,
As Thieues to Keepers.

Stew. Stay not, all's in vaine.

Tim. Why I was writing of my Epitaph,
It will be seene to morrow. My long sicknesse
Of Health, and Liuing, now begins to mend,
And nothing brings me all things. Go, liue still,
Be Alcibiades your plague; you his,
And liue so long enough.

1 We speake in vaine.

Tim. But yet I loue my Country, and am not
One that rejoyces in the common wracke,
As common bruite doth put it.

1 That's well spoke.

Tim. Commend me to my loiuing Countreymen.

1 These words become your lippes as they passe thro-
sow them.

2 And enter in our eares, like great Triumphers
In their applauding gates.

Tim. Commend me to them,
And tell them, that to ease them of their griefes,
Their scores of Hostile strokes, their Ashes lefties,
Their pangs of Loue, with other incidents throwes
That Natures fragile Vessell doth sustaine
In lifes vncertaine voyage, I will some kindnes do them,
Ile teach them to preuent wilde Alcibiades wrath.

1 I like this well, he will returne againe.

Tim. I haue a Tree which growes here in my Close,
That mine owne vse inuites me to cut downe,
And shortly must I fell it. Tell my Friends,
Tell Athens, in the sequence of degree,
From high to low throughout, that who so please
To stop Affliction, let him take his haste;
Come hither ere my Tree hath felt the Axe,
And hang himselfe. I pray you do my greeting.

Stew. Trouble him no further, thus you still shall Finde him.

Tim. Come not to me again, but say to Athens,
Timon hath made his everlasting Mansion
Vpon the Beached Verge of the salt Flood,
Who once a day with his embossed Frosh
The turbulent Surge shall couer; thither come,
And let my graue-stone be your Oracle:
Lippes, let foure words go by, and Language end:
What is amisse, Plague and Infection mend.
Graues only be mens works, and Death their gaine;
Sunne, hide thy Beames, Timon hath done his Raigne.

Exit Timon.

1 His discontents are vnremouably coupled to Nature.

2 Our hope in him is dead: let vs returne,
And straine what other meanes is left vnto vs
In our deare peril.

3 It requires swift foot. Exeunt.

Enter two other Senators, with a Messenger.

1 Thou hast painfully discourse'd: are his Files
As full as thy report?

Mess. I haue spoke the least.
Besides his expedition promises present approach.

2 We stand much hazard, if they bring not Timon.

Mess. I met a Carrier, one mine ancient Friend,
Whom though in generall part we were opposed,
Yet our old loue made a particular force,
And made vs speake like Friends. This man was riding
From Alcibiades to Timons Cave,
With Letters of intreaty, which imported
His Fellowship i'th'cause against your City,
In part for his sake moue'd.

Enter the other Senators.

1 Heere come our Brothers.

3 No talke of Timon, nothing of him expect.
The Enemies Drumme is heard, and feareful scouring
Doth choake the ayre with dust: In, and prepare,
Ours is the fall I feare, our Foes the Snare. Exeunt.

Enter a Souldier in the Woods, seeking Timon.

Sol. By all description this should be the place.
Whose heere? Speake hoa. No answer? What is this?
Timon is dead, who hath out-stretcht his span,
Some Beast reade this; There do's not liue a Man.
Dead sure, and this his Graue, what's on this Tomb,
I cannot read; the Character I'le take with wax,
Our Captaine hath in every figure skill;
An aged Interpreter, though yong in dayes:
Before proud Athens he's set downe by this,
Whose fall the marke of his Ambition is. Exit.

Trumpets sound. Enter Alcibiades with his Powers before Athens.

Alc. Sound to this Coward, and lasciuious Towne,
Our terrible approach.

Sounds a Parly.

The Senators appeare vpon the walls.

Till now you haue gone on, and fill'd the time
With all Licentious measure, making your willes
The scope of Iustice. Till now, my selfe and such
As slept within the shadow of your power
Haue wonder'd with our trauerst Armes, and breath'd
Our sufferance vainly: Now the time is flesh,
When crouching Marrow in the beaten strong
Cries (of it selfe) no more: Now breathless wrong,
Shall sit and pant in your great Chaires of ease,
And purse Insolence shall breake his winde
With feare and horrid flight.

1. Sen. Noble, and young;
When thy first griefes were but a meere conceit,
Ere thou had'st power, or we had cause of feare,
We sent to thee, to give thy rages Balme,
To wipe out our Ingratitude, with Loues
Aboue their quantity.

2 So did we woo
Transformed Timon, to our Cities loue
By humble Message, and by promist meanes:
We were not all vnkinde, nor all deserue
The common stroke of warre.

1 These walles of ours,
Were not erected by their hands, from whom
You haue receyu'd your griefe: Nor are they such,
That these great Towres, Trophees, & Schools should fall
For priuate faults in them.

2 Nor are they liuing

Who

Who were the motiues that you first went out,
(Shame that they wanted, cunning in excesse)
Hath brake their hearts. March, Noble Lord,
Into our City with thy Banners spred,
By decimation and a tytheed death;
If thy Reuenges hunger for that Food
Which Nature loathes, take thou the destin'd tenth,
And by the hazard of the spotted dye,
Let dye the spotted.

1 All haue not offended:
For those that were, it is not square to take
On those that are, Reuenge: Crimes, like Lands
Are not inherited, then dearest Countrymen,
Bring in thy ranks, but leaue without thy rage,
Spare thy Athenian Cradle, and those Kin
Which in the blaster of thy wrath must fall
With those that haue offended. like a Shepherd,
Approach the Fold, and cull th infected forth,
But kill not altogether.

2 What thou wilt,
Thou rather shalt inforce it with thy smile,
Then hew too't, with thy Sword.

1 Set but thy foot
Against our rampyr'd gates, and they shall ope:
So thou wilt send thy gentle heart before,
To say thou't enter friendly.

2 Throw thy Glouc,
Or any Token of thine Honour else,
That thou wilt vse the swords to thy redresse,
And not as our Confusion: All thy Powers
Shall make their harbour in our Towne, till we
Haue seal'd thy full desire.

Alc. Then there's my Glouc,
Defend and open your vncharged Ports,
Those Enemies of Timon, and mine owne
Whom you your selues shall set out for reproofe,
Fall and no more; and to aroune your feares
With my more Noble meaning, not a man
Shall passe his quarter, or offend the stream
Of Regular Iustice in your Cities bounds,
But shall be remedied to your publique Lawes
At heauiest answer.

Both. 'Tis most Nobly spoken.

Alc. Descend, and keepe your words.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My Noble Generall, Timon is dead,
Entombd vpon the very hemme o'th'Sea,
And on his Graueslone, this Inscription which
With wan I brought away: whose soft Impression
Interprets for my poore ignorance.

Alcibiades reades the Epitaph.

Heere lies a wretched Corse, of wretched Soule bereft,
Seek not my name: A Plague consume you, wicked Caitiffs left:
Heere lye I Timon, who aliue, all liuing men did hate,
Pasle by, and curse thy fill, but pasle and stay not heere thy gate.
These well expresse in thee thy latter spirits:
Though thou abhorr'd in vs our humane griefes,
Scorn'd'st our Braines flow, and those our droplets, which
From niggard Nature fall; yet Rich Conceit
Taught thee to make vast Neptune weepe for aye
On thy low Graue, on faults forgiuen. Dead
Is Noble Timon, of whose Memorie
Hereafter more. Bring me into your Citie,
And I will vse the Olliue, with my Sword:
Make war breed peace; make peace stint war, make each
Prescribe to other, as each others Leach.
Let our Drummes strike.

Exeunt.

FINIS.

THE ACTORS NAMES.

TIMON of Athens.
Lucius, And
Lucullus, two Flattering Lords.
Apemantus, a Churlish Philosopher.
Sempronius another flattering Lord.
Alcibiades, an Athenian Captaine.
Poet.
Painter.
Jeweller.
Merchant.
Certaine Senators.
Certaine Maskers.
Certaine Theeues.

Flaminius, one of Tymons Seruants.
Seruilius, another.
Caphis.
Varro.
Philo.
Titus.
Lucius.
Hortensius
} Seuerall Seruants to Vsurers.
Ventigius. one of Tymons false Friends.
Cupid.
Sempronius.
With diuers other Seruants,
And Attendants.

THE TRAGEDIE OF IVLIVS CÆSAR.

Actus Primus. Scæna Prima.

Enter Flauius, Marullus, and certaine Commoners ouer the Stage.

Flauius.

HEnce: home you idle Creatures, get you home:
Is this a Holiday? What, know you not (Being Mechanicall) you ought not walke
Vpon a labouring day, without the signe
Of your Profession? Speake, what Trade art thou?
Car. Why Sir, a Carpenter.
Mar. Where is thy Leather Apron, and thy Rule?
What dost thou with thy best Apparell on?
You sir, what Trade are you?
Cob. Truely Sir, in respect of a fine Workman, I am but as you would say, a Cobler.
Mar. But what Trade art thou? Answer me directly.
Cob. A Trade Sir, that I hope I may vse, with a safe Conscience, which is indeed Sir, a Mender of bad soules
Fla. What Trade thou knaue? Thou naughty knaue, what Trade?
Cob. Nay I beseech you Sir, be not out with me: yet if you be out Sir, I can mend you.
Mar. What mean'st thou by that? Mend me, thou saucy Fellow?
Cob. Why sir, Cobble you.
Fla. Thou art a Cobler, art thou?
Cob. Truly sir, all that I liue by, is with the Awle: I meddle with no Tradesmans matters, nor women's matters; but with all I am indeed Sir, a Surgeon to old shoes: when they are in great danger, I recouer them. As proper men as euer trod vpon Neats Leather, haue gone vpon my handy-worke.
Fla. But wherefore art not in thy Shop to day?
Why dost thou lead these men about the streets?
Cob. Truely sir, to wear out their shoes, to get my selfe into more worke. But indeede sir, we make Holyday to see Cæsar, and to reioyce in his Triumph.
Mar. Wherefore reioyce?
What Conquest brings he home?
What Tributaries follow him to Rome,
To grace in Captiue bonds his Chariot Wheeles?
You Blockes, you stones, you worse then senselesse things:
O you hard hearts, you cruell men of Rome,
Knew you not Pompey many a time and oft?
Haue you climb'd vp to Walles and Battlements,
To Towres and Windowes? Yea, to Chimney tops,
Your Infants in your Armes, and there haue sat
The liue-long day, with patient expectation,
To see great Pompey passe the streets of Rome:
And when you saw his Chariot but appeare,
Haue you not made an Vniuersall shout,
That Tyber trembled vnderneath her banks
To heare the replication of your sounds,
Made in her Concaue Shores?
And do you now put on your best attire?
And do you now cull out a Holyday?
And do you now strew Flowers in his way,
That comes in Triumph ouer Pompeys blood?
Be gone,
Runne to your houses, fall vpon your knees,
Pray to the Gods to intermit the plague
That needs must light on this Ingratitude.
Fla. Go, go, good Countrymen, and for this fault
Assemble all the poore men of your sort;
Draw them to Tyber banks, and weepe your teares
Into the Channell, till the lowest streame
Do kisse the most exalted Shores of all.
Exeunt all the Commoners.
See where their basest mettle be not moy'd,
They vanish tongue-tied in their guiltinesse:
Go you downe that way towards the Capitoll,
This way will I: Disrobe the Images,
If you do finde them deckt with Ceremonies.
Mar. May we do so?
You know it is the Feast of Lupercall.
Fla. It is no matter, let no Images
Be hung with Cæsars Trophies: I'le about,
And driue away the Vulgar from the streets;
So do you too, where you perceiue them thick.
These growing Feathers, plucke from Cæsars wing,
Will make him flye an ordinary pitch,
Who else would soare above the view of men,
And keepe vs all in seruile fearefulnesse. Exeunt

Enter Cæsar, Antony for the Course, Calphurnia, Portia, Decius, Cicero, Brutus, Cassius, Casca, a Soothsayer; after them Marullus and Flauius

Cæs. Calphurnia.
Casc. Peace ho, Cæsar speakes.
Cæs. Calphurnia.
Calp. Heere my Lord.
Cæs. Stand you directly in Antonio's way,
When he doth run his course. Antonio.
Ant. Cæsar, my Lord.
Cæs. Forget not in your speed Antonio,
To touch Calphurnia: for our Elders say,

The Barren touched in this holy chace,
Shake off their sterrile curse.
Ant. I shall remember,
When Cæsar sayes, Do this; it is perform'd.
Caes Set on, and leave no Ceremony out.
Sooth. Cæsar.
Caes. Ha? Who calles?
Casc. Bid every noyse be still: peace yet againe.
Caes. Who is it in the presse, that calles on me?
I heare a Tongue shriller then all the Musicke
Cry, Cæsar: Speake. Cæsar is turn'd to heare.
Sooth. Beware the Ides of March.
Caes. What man is that?
Br. A Sooth-sayer bids you beware the Ides of March
Caes. Set him before me, let me see his face.
Casc. Fellow, come from the throng, look vpon Cæsar.
Caes. What sayst thou to me now? Speak once againe.
Sooth. Beware the Ides of March.
Caes. He is a Dreamer, let vs leave him: Passe.
Sennet. Exeunt. Manet Brut & Cass.
Cassi. Will you go see the order of the course?
Brut. Not I.
Cassi. I prey you do.
Brut. I am not Gamesome: I do lacke some part
Of that quicke Spirit that is in Antony:
Let me not hinder Cassius your desires;
Ile leave you.
Cassi. Brutus, I do observe you now of late:-
I have not from your eyes, that gentlenesse
And shew of Love, as I was wont to have:-
You bear too stubborne, and too strange a hand
Over your Friend, that loves you.
Bru. Cassius,
Be not deceiu'd: If I have veyl'd my looke,
I turne the trouble of my Countenance
Merrely vpon my selfe. Vexed I am
Of late, with passions of some difference,
Conceptions onely proper to my selfe,
Which gave some soyle (perhaps) to my Behaviours:
But let not therefore my good Friends be grieu'd
(Among which number Cassius be you one)
Nor construe any further my neglect,
Then that poore Brutus with himselfe at warre,
Forgets the shewes of Loue to other men
Cassi. Then Brutus, I have much mistook your passion,
By meanes whereof, this Breft of mine hath buried
Thoughes of great value, worthy Cogitations.
Tell me good Brutus, Can you see your face?
Brutus. No Cassius:
For the eye sees not it selfe but by reflection,
By some other things.
Cassius. 'Tis true,
And it is very much lamented Brutus,
That you have no such Mirrors, as will turne
Your hidden worthinesse into your eye,
That you might see your shadow:
I have heard,
Where many of the best respect in Rome,
(Except immortall Cæsar) speaking of Brutus,
And groaning vnderneath this Ages yoake,
Have wish'd, that Noble Brutus had his eyes.
Bru. Into what dangers, would you
Leade me Cassius?
That you would have me seeke into my selfe,
For that which is not in me?
Caes. Therefore good Brutus, be prepar'd to heare:
And since you know, you cannot see your selfe
So well as by Reflection; I your Glasse,
Will modestly discover to your selfe.
That of your selfe, which you yet know not of.
And be not iealous on me, gentle Brutus:
Were I a common Laughter, or did vse
To stale with ordinary Oathes my loue
To every new Protester: if you know,
That I do fawne on men, and hugge them hard,
And after scandell them; Or if you know,
That I professe my selfe in Banqueting
To all the Rout, then hold me dangerous.

Flourish, and Shout.

Bru. What meanes this Showting?
I do feare, the People choose Cæsar
For their King.
Cassi. I, do you feare it?
Then must I thinke you would not have it so.
Bru. I would not Cassius, yet I love him well:
But wherefore do you hold me heere so long?
What is it, that you would impart to me?
If it be ought toward the generall good,
Set Honor in one eye, and Death i'th other,
And I will looke on both indifferently:
For let the Gods so speed me, as I love
The name of Honor, more then I feare death.
Cassi. I know that vertue to be in you Brutus,
As well as I do know your outward fauour.
Well, Honor is the subject of my Story:
I cannot tell, what you and other men
Thinke of this life. But for my single selfe,
I had as liefe not be, as live to be
In awe of such a Thing, as I my selfe.
I was borne free as Cæsar. So were you,
We both have fed as well, and we can both
Endure the Winters cold, as well as he.
For once, vpon a Rawe and Gusthie day,
The troubled Tyber, chafing with her Shores,
Cæsar saide to me, Dar'st thou Cassius now
Leape in with me into this angry Flood,
And swim to yonder Point? Vpon the word,
Accoutred as I was, I plunged in,
And bad him follow: so indeed he did.
The Torrent roar'd, and we did buffet it
With lusty Sinewes, throwing it aside,
And stemming it with hearts of Controuersie.
But ere we could arriue the Point propos'd,
Cæsar cride, Helpe me Cassius, or I sinke.
I (as Æneas, our great Ancestor,
Did from the Flames of Troy, vpon his shoulder
The old Anchises beare) so, from the waues of Tyber
Did I the tyred Cæsar: And this Man,
Is now become a God, and Cassius is
A wretched Creature, and must bend his body,
If Cæsar carelessly but nod on him.
He had a Feuer when he was in Spaine,
And when the Fit was on him, I did marke
How he did shake: 'Tis true, this God did shake,
His Coward lippes did from their colour fire,
And that same Eye, whose bend doth awe the World,
Did loose his Lustre: I did heare him grone:
I, and that Tongue of his, that bad the Romans
Marke him, and write his Speeches in their Bookes,
Alas, it cried, Giue me some drinke Titinius,

As a sicke Girle: Ye Gods, it doth amaze me,
A man of such a feeble temper should
So get the start of the Maiestick world,
And bearе the Palme alone.

Shout. Flourish.

Bru. Another generall shout?
I do believe, that these applauses are
For some new Honors, that are heap'd on Cæsar

Cass. Why man, he doth bestride the narrow world
Like a Colossus, and we petty men
Walke vnder his huge legges, and peepe about
To finde our selues dishonourable Graues.
Men at sometime, are Masters of their Fates.
The fault (deere Brutus) is not in our Starres,
But in our Selues, that we are vnderlings.
Brutus and Cæsar: What should be in that Cæsar?
Why should that name be sounded more then yours
Write them together: Yours, is as faire a Name:
Sound them, it doth become the mouth as well:
Weigh them, it is as heavy: Coouse with 'em,
Brutus will start a Spirit as soone as Cæsar.
Now in the names of all the Gods at once,
Vpon what meate doth this our Cæsar feede,
That he is growne so great? Age, thou art sham'd.
Rome, thou hast lost the breed of Noble Bloods.
When went there by an Age, since the great Flood,
But it was famo'd with more then with one man?
When could they say (till now) that talk'd of Rome,
That her wide Walkes incompast but one man?
Now is it Rome indeed, and Roome enough
When there is in it but one onely man.
O! you and I, have heard our Fathers say,
There was a Brutus once, that would have brook'd
Th'eternall Diuell to keepe his Seate in Rome,
As easily as a King.

Bru. That you do loue me, I am nothing iealous:
What you would worke me too, I haue some aym:
How I haue thought of this, and of these times
I shall recount hereafter. For this present,
I would not so (with loue I might intreat you)
Be any further moou'd: What you haue said,
I will consider: what you haue to say
I will with patience heare, and finde a time
Both meete to heare, and answer such high things.
Till then, my Noble Friend, chew vpon this:
Brutus had rather be a Villager,
Then to repute himselfe a Sonne of Rome
Vnder these hard Conditions, as this time
Is like to lay vpon vs.

Cass. I am glad that my weake words
Haue struckе but thus much shew of fire from Brutus.

Enter Cæsar and his Traine.

Bru. The Games are done,
And Cæsar is returning.

Cass. As they passe by,
Pluckе Casca by the Sleeue,
And he will (after his sowre fashion) tell you
What hath proceeded worthy note to day.

Bru. I will do so: but looke you Cassius,
The angry spot doth glow on Cæsars brow,
And all the rest, looke like a chidden Traine;
Calphurnia's Cheeke is pale, and Cicero
Looks with such Ferret, and such fiery eyes
As we haue seene him in the Capitoll
Being crost in Conference, by some Senators.

Cass. Casca will tell vs what the matter is.

Cæs. Antonio.

Ant. Cæsar

Cæs. Let me haue men about me, that are fat,
Sleeke-headed men, and such as sleepe a-nights:
Yond Cassius has a leane and hungry looke,
He thinkes too much: such men are dangerous.

Ant. Feare him not Cæsar, he's not dangerous,
He is a Noble Roman, and well giuen.

Cæs. Would he were fatter; But I feare him not.
Yet if my name were liable to feare,
I do not know the man I should auoyd
So soone as that spare Cassius. He reades much,
He is a great Observer, and he lookes
Quite through the Deeds of men. He loues no Playes,
As thou dost Antony: he heares no Musicke;
Seldome he smiles, and smiles in such a sort
As if he mock'd himselfe, and scorn'd his spirit
That could be mou'd to smile at any thing.
Such men as he, be never at hearts ease,
Whiles they behold a greater then themselues,
And therefore are they very dangerous.
I rather tell thee what is to be feare'd,
Then what I feare: for alwayes I am Cæsar.
Come on my right hand, for this eare is deafe,
And tell me truely, what thou think'st of him. Sennet

Exeunt Cæsar and his Traine.

Casc. You pul'd me by the cloake, would you speake with me?

Bru. I Casca, tell vs what hath chanc'd to day
That Cæsar lookes so sad.

Casc. Why you were with him, were you not?

Bru. I should not then aske Casca what had chanc'd

Casc. Why there was a Crowne offer'd him; & being offer'd him, he put it by with the backe of his hand thus, and then the people fell a shouting.

Bru. What was the second noyse for?

Casc. Why for that too.

Cass. They shouted thrice: what was the last cry for?

Casc. Why for that too.

Bru. Was the Crowne offer'd him thrice?

Casc. I marry was't, and hee put it by thrice, euerie time gentler then other; and at every putting by, mine honest Neighbors shouted.

Cass. Who offer'd him the Crowne?

Casc. Why Antony.

Bru Tell vs the manner of it, gentle Casca.

Casca. I can as well bee hang'd as tell the manner of it: It was meere Foolerie, I did not marke it. I saw Marke Antony offer him a Crowne, yet 'twas not a Crowne neyther, 'twas one of these Coronets: and as I told you, hee put it by once: but for all that, to my thinking, he would faine haue had it. Then hee offered it to him againe: then hee put it by againe: but to my thinking, he was very loath to lay his fingers off it. And then he offered it the third time; hee put it the third time by, and still as hee refus'd it, the rabblement howted, and clapp'd their chopt hands, and throw vppe their sweaty Night-cappes, and vttered such a deale of stinking breath, because Cæsar refus'd the Crowne, that it had (almost) choaked Cæsar: for hee swounded, and fell downe at it: And for mine owne part, I durst not laugh, for feare of opening my Lappes, and receyuing the bad Ayre.

Casi. But soft I pray you: what, did Cæsar swound?

Cask. He fell downe in the Market-place, and foam'd at mouth, and was speechlesse.

Brut. 'Tis very like he hath the Falling sicknesse.

Casi. No, Cæsar hath it not: but you, and I,
And honest Caska, we have the Falling sicknesse.

Cask. I know not what you meane by that, but I am sure Cæsar fell downe. If the tag-ragge people did not clap him, and hisse him, according as he pleas'd, and displeas'd them, as they vse to doe the Players in the Theatre, I am no true man.

Brut. What said he, when he came vnto himselfe?

Cask. Marry, before he fell downe, when he perceiu'd the common Heard was glad he refus'd the Crowne, he pluckt me ope his Doublet, and offer'd them his Throat to cut: and I had beene a man of any Occupation, if I would not haue taken him at a word, I would I might goe to Hell among the Rogues, and so he fell. When he came to himselfe again, he said, If he had done, or said any thing amisse, he desir'd their Worships to thinke it was his infirmitie. Three or foure Wenches where I stood, cryed, Alasse good Soule, and forgaue him with all their hearts: But there's no heed to be taken of them; if Cæsar had stab'd their Mothers, they would haue done no lesse.

Brut. And after that, he came thus sad away.

Cask. I.

Casi. Did Cicero say any thing?

Cask. I, he spoke Greeke.

Casi. To what effect?

Cask. Nay, and I tell you that, I'le ne're looke you i'th' face againe. But those that vnderstood him, smil'd at one another, and shooke their heads: but for mine owne part, it was Greeke to me. I could tell you more newes too: Marullus and Flavius, for pulling Scarffes off Cæsars Images, are put to silence. Fare you well. There was more Foolerie yet, if I could remember it.

Casi. Will you sappe with me to Night, Cascka?

Cask. No, I am promis'd forth.

Casi. Will you Dine with me to morrow?

Cask. I, if I be aliue, and your minde hold, and your Dinner worth the eating.

Casi. Good, I will expect you.

Cask. Doe so: farewell both. Exit.

Brut. What a blunt fellow is this growne to be?
He was quick Mettle, when he went to Schoole.

Casi. So is he now, in execution
Of any bold, or Noble Enterprize,
However he puts on this tardie forme.
This Rudenesse is a Sawce to his good Wit,
Which giues men stomacke to disgest his words
With better Appetite.

Brut. And so it is:
For this time I will leaue you:
To morrow, if you please to speake with me,
I will come home to you: or if you will,
Come home to me, and I will wait for you.

Casi. I will doe so: till then, thinke of the World.
Exit Brutus.

Well Brutus, thou art Noble: yet I see,
Thy Honorable Mettle may be wrought
From that it is disposed: therefore it is meet,
That Noble minds keepe ever with their likes:
For who so firme, that cannot be seduc'd?
Cæsar doth beare me hard, but he loues Brutus.
If I were Brutus now, and he were Casius,
He should not humor me. I will this Night,
In seuerall Hands, in at his Windowes throwe,
As if they came from seuerall Citizens,
Writings, all tending to the great opinion
That Rome holds of his Name: wherein obscurely
Cæsars Ambition shall be glanced at.
And after this, let Cæsar seat him sure,
For we will shake him, or worse dayes endure.
Exit.

Thunder, and Lightning. Enter Cask, and Cicero.

Cic. Good euen, Casca: brought you Cæsar home?
Why are you breathless, and why stare you so?

Cask. Are not you moued, when all the sway of Earth
Shakes, like a thing vnfirme? O Cicero,
I haue seene Tempests, when the scolding Winds
Haue riu'd the knottie Oakes, and I haue seene
Th'ambitious Ocean swell, and rage, and foame,
To be exalted with the threatning Clouds:
But never till to Night, never till now,
Did I goe through a Tempest dropping-fire.
Eyther there is a Ciuill strife in Heauen,
Or else the World, too fawcie with the Gods,
Incenses them to send destruction.

Cic. Why, saw you any thing more wonderfull?

Cask. A common slaue, you know him well by sight,
Held vp his left Hand, which did flame and burne
Like twentie Torches joyn'd; and yet his Hand,
Not sensible of fire, remain'd vnscorch'd.
Besides, I ha'not since put vp my Sword,
Against the Capitoll I met a Lyon,
Who glaz'd vpon me, and went surly by,
Without annoying me. And there were drawne
Vpon a heape, a hundred ghastly Women,
Transformed with their feare, who swore, they saw
Men; all in fire, walke vp and downe the streetes.
And yesterday, the Bird of Night did sit,
Even at Noone-day, vpon the Market place,
Howling, and shrieking. When these Prodigies
Doe so conioynctly meet, let not men say,
These are their Reasons, they are Naturall:
For I believe, they are portentous things
Vnto the Clymate, that they point vpon.

Cic. Indeed, it is a strange disposed time
But men may construe things after their fashion,
Cleane from the purpose of the things themselues.
Comes Cæsar to the Capitoll to morrow?

Cask. He doth: for he did bid Antonie
Send word to you, he would be there to morrow.

Cic. Good-night then, Casca:
This disturbed Skie is not to walke in.

Cask. Farewell Cicero. Exit Cicero.

Enter Cassius.

Casi. Who's there?

Cask. A Romane.

Casi. Casca by your Voyce.

Cask. Your Eare is good.

Cassius, what Night is this?

Casi. A very pleasing Night to honest men.

Cask. Who euer knew the Heauens menace so?

Casi. Those that haue knowne the Earth so full of faults.

For

For my part, I have walk'd about the streets,
Submitting me vnto the perillous Night;
And thus vnbraced, Casca, as you see,
Have bar'd my Bosome to the Thunder-stone:
And when the cresse blew Lightning seem'd to open
The Breast of Heauen, I did present my selfe
Even into the stroke, and very flesh of it. (same
Cask. But wherefore did you so much tempt the Heauens
It is the part of men, to feare and tremble,
When the most mightie Gods, by tokens send
Such dreadfull Heralds, to astonish vs.
Casc. You are dull, Casca.
And those sparkes of Life, that should be in a Roman,
You doe want, or else you vse not.
You looke pale, and gaze, and put on feare,
And call your selfe in wonder,
To see the strange impatience of the Heauens:
But if you would consider the true cause,
Why all these Fires, why all these gliding Ghosts,
Why Birds and Beasts, from quality and kinde,
Why Old men, Fooles, and Children calculate,
Why all these things change from their Ordinance,
Their Natures, and pre-formed Faculties,
To monstrous qualitie; why you shall finde,
That Heauen hath infus'd them with these Spirits,
To make them Instruments of feare, and warning,
Vnto some monstrous State.
Now could I (Casca) name to thee a man,
Most like this dreadfull Night,
That Thunders, Lightens, opens Graues, and roares,
As doth the Lyon in the Capitoll:
A man no mightier then thy selfe, or me,
In personall action; yet prodigious growne,
And feareful, as these strange eruptions are.
Cask. 'Tis Cæsar that you meane:
Is it not, Cassius?
Cass. Let it be who it is: for Romans now
Haue Thewes, and Limbes, like to their Ancestors;
But woe the while, our Fathers minds are dead,
And we are gouern'd with our Mothers spirits,
Our yoake, and sufferance, shew vs Womanish.
Cask. Indeed, they say, the Senators to morrow
Meane to establish Cæsar as a King:
And he shall weare his Crowne by Sea, and Land,
In every place, save here in Italy.
Cass. I know where I will weare this Dagger then;
Cassius from Bondage will deliver Cassius:
Therein, ye Gods, you make the weake most strong;
Therein, ye Gods, you Tyrants doe defeate.
Nor Stone Towers, nor Walls of beaten Brasse,
Nor aire lesse Dungeon, nor strong Linkes of Iron,
Can be retentive to the strength of spirit:
But Life being weeree of these wordily Barres,
Never lacks power to dismisse it selfe.
If I know this, know all the World besides,
That part of Tyrannie that I doe beare,
I can shake off at pleasure. Thunder still.
Cask. So can I:
So every Bond-man in his owne hand beares
The power to cancell his Captiuitie.
Cass. And why should Cæsar be a Tyrant then?
Poore man, I know he would not be a Wolfe,
But that he sees the Romans are but Sheepe:
He were no Lyon, were not Romans Hindes
Those that with haste will make a mightie fire,
Begun it with weake Straws. What trash is Rome?
What Rubbish, and what Offall? when it serues
For the base matter, to illuminate
So vile a thing as Cæsar. But ah Grieve,
Where hast thou led me? I (perhaps) speake this
Before a willing Bond-man: then I know
My seaf were soon be made. But I am arm'd,
And dangers are to me indifferent.
Cask. You speake to Casca, and to such a man,
That is no fleering Tell-tale. Hold, my Hand:
Be factious for redresse of all these Griefes,
And I will set this foot of mine as fast,
As who goes farthest.
Cass. There's a Bargaine made.
Now know you, Casca, I have mou'd already
Some certaine of the Noblest minded Romans
To vnder-goe, with me, an Enterprise,
Of Honorable dangerous consequence;
And I doe know by this, they stay for me
In Pompeyes Porch: for now this fearefull Night,
There is no stare, as walking in the streetes;
And the Complexion of the Elements
Is Fauori, like the Worke we haue in hand,
Most bloodie, fiere, and most terrible.

Enter Cinna.

Casca. Stand close a while, for heere comes one in haste.
Cass. 'Tis Cinna, I doe know him by his Gate,
He is a friend. Cinna, where haste you so?
Cinna. To finde out you: Who's that, Metellus Cymber?
Cass. No, it is Casca, one incorporate
To our Attempts. Am I not stay'd for, Cinna?
Cinna. I am glad on't.
What a fearefull Night is this?
There's two or three of vs haue seene strange sights.
Cass. Am I not stay'd for? tell me.
Cinna. Yes, you are. O Cassius,
If you could but winne the Noble Brutus
To our party——
Cass. Be you content. Good Cinna, take this Paper,
And looke you lay it in the Prætors Chayre,
Where Brutus may but finde it: and throw this
In at his Window: set this vp with Waxe
Vpon old Brutus Statue: all this done,
Repaire to Pompeyes Porch, where you shall finde vs.
Is Decius Brutus and Trebonius there?
Cinna. All, but Metellus Cymber, and hee's gone
To seeke you at your house: Well, I will hie,
And so bestow these Papers as you bed me.
Cass. That done, repaire to Pompeyes Theater.
Exit Cinna.
Come Casca, you and I will yet, ere day,
See Brutus at his house: three parts of him
Is ours already, and the man entire
Vpon the next encounter, yerlds him ours.
Cask. O, he sits high in all the Peoples hearts:
And that which would appeare Offence in vs,
His Countenance, like richest Alchymie,
Will change to Vertue, and to Worthinesse.
Cass. Him, and his worth, and our great need of him,
You have right well conceited: let vs goe,
For it is after Mid-night, and ere day.
We will awake him, and be sure of him.
Exeunt.

Actus Secundus.

Enter Brutus in his Orchard.

Brut. What Lucius, hoe?
I cannot, by the progresse of the Starres,
Giue guesse how neere to day—Lucius, I say?
I would it were my fault to sleepe so soundly.
When Lucius, when? awake, I say: what Lucius?
Enter Lucius.
Luc. Call'd you my Lord?
Brut. Get me a Tapor in my Study, Lucius:
When it is lighted, come and call me here.
Luc. I will, my Lord. Exit
Brut. It must be by his death: and for my part,
I know no personall cause, to spurne at him,
But for the generall. He would be crown'd:
How that might change his nature, there's the question?
It is the bright day, that brings forth the Adder,
And that craues warie walking: Crowne him that,
And then I grounde we put a Sting in him,
That at his will he may doe danger with.
Th'abuse of Greatnesse, is, when it dis-ioynes
Remorse from Power: And to speake truth of Cæsar,
I haue not knowne, when his Affections sway'd
More then his Reason. But 'tis a common proofe,
That Lowlynesse is young Ambitions Ladder,
Whereto the Climber vpward turnes his Face:
But when he once attaines the vpmost Round,
He then vnto the Ladder turnes his Backe,
Lookes in the Clouds, scorning the base degrees
By wnich he did ascend: so Cæsar may;
Then least he may, preuent. And since the Quarrell
Will beare no colour, for the thing he is,
Fashion it thus; that what he is, augmented,
Would runne to these, and these extremities:
And therefore thinke him as a Serpents egge,
Which hatch'd, would as his kinde grow mischieuous;
And kill him in the shell.
Enter Lucius.
Luc. The Taper burneth in your Closet, Sir:
Searching the Window for a Flint, I found
This Paper, thus seal'd vp, and I am sure
It did not lye there when I went to Bed.
Gives him the Letter
Brut. Get you to Bed againe, it is not day:
Is not to morrow (Boy) the first of March?
Luc. I know not, Sir.
Brut. Looke in the Calender, and bring me word.
Luc. I will, Sir. Exit.
Brut. The exhalations, whiizing in the ayre,
Giue so much light, that I may reade by them.
Opens the Letter, and reades.
Brutus thou sleep'st; awake, and see thy selfe:
Shall Rome, &c. speake, strike, redresse
Brutus, thou sleep'st: awake.
Such instigations haue beene often drope,
Where I haue tooke them vp:
Shall Rome, &c. Thus must I piece it out:
Shall Rome stand vnder one mans awe? What Rome?
My Ancestors did from the streetes of Rome
The Tarquin drive, when he was call'd a King.
Speake, strike, redresse. Am I entreated
To speake, and strike? O Rome, I make thee promise,
If the redresse will follow, thou receiuest
Thy full Petition at the hand of Brutus.
Enter Lucius.
Luc. Sir, March is wasted fifteene dayes.
Knocke within.
Brut. 'Tis good. Go to the Gate, some body knocks.
Since Cassius first did whet me against Cæsar,
I haue not slept.
Betweene the acting of a dreadfull thing,
And the first motion, all the Interim is
Like a Phantasma, or a hideous Dreame:
The Genius, and the mortall Instruments
Are then in counsell; and the state of a man,
Like to a little Kingdome, suffers then
The nature of an Insurrection.
Enter Lucius.
Luc. Sir, 'tis your Brother Cassius at the Doore,
Who doth desire to see you.
Brut. Is he alone?
Luc. No, Sir, there are moe with him.
Brut. Doe you know them?
Luc. No, Sir, their Hats are plockt about their Eares,
And half their Faces buried in their Cloakes,
That by no meanes I may discouer them,
By any marke of fauour.
Brut. Let 'em enter:
They are the Faction. O Conspiracie,
Sham'st thou to shew thy dangerous Brow by Night,
When euills are most free? O then, by day
Where wilt thou finde a Caueme darke enough,
To mask thy monstrous Visage? Seek none Conspiracie,
Hide it in Smiles, and Affabilitie:
For if thou path thy native semblance on,
Not Erebus it selfe were dimme enough,
To hide thee from preuention.

Enter the Conspirators, Cassius, Casca, Decius, Cinna, Metellus, and Trebonius.

Cas. I thinke we are too bold vpon your Rest:
Good morrow Brutus, doe we trouble you?
Brut. I haue beene vp this howre, awake all Night:
Know I these men, that come along with you?
Cas. Yes, every man of them; and no man here
But honors you: and every one doth wish,
You had but that opinion of your selfe,
Which every Noble Roman beares of you.
This is Trebonius.
Brut. He is welcome hither.
Cas. This, Decius Brutus.
Brut. He is welcome too.
Cas. This, Casca; this, Cinna; and this, Metellus Cymber.
Brut. They are all welcome.
What watchfull Cares doe interpose themselues
Betwixt your Eyes, and Night?
Cas. Shall I entreat a word? They whisper
Decius. Here lyes the East: doth not the Day breake heere?
Casc. No.
Cin. O pardon, Sir, it doth; and you gray Lines,
That fret the Clouds, are Messengers of Day.
Casc. You shall confesse, that you are both deceiu'd:
Heere, as I point my Sword, the Sonne arises,
Which is a great way growing on the South,
Weigh-

Weighing the youthfull Season of the yeare.
Some two months hence, vp higher toward the North
He first presents his fire, and the high East
Stands on the Capitoll, directly heere.

Bru. Giue me your hands all ouer, one by one.

Cas. And let vs swaare our Resolution.

Bru. No, not an Oath: if not the Face of men,
The sufferance of our Soules, the times Abuse;
If those be Motiues weake, breake off betimes,
And every man hence, to his idle bed:
So let high-sighted-Tyranny range on,
Till each man drop by Lottery. But if these
(As I am sure they do) bear fire enough
To kindle Cowards, and to steele with valour
The melting Spirits of women. Then Countrymen,
What needs we any spurre, but our owne cause
To prickie vs to redresse? What other Bond,
Then secret Romans, that haue spoke the word,
And will not palter? And what other Oath,
Then Honesty to Honesty ingag'd,
That this shall be, or we will fall for it.
Swaare Priests and Cowards, and men Cautelous
Old feeble Carrions, and such suffering Soules
That welcome wrongs: Vnto bad causes, swaare
Such Creatures as men doubt; but do not staine
The euen vertue of our Enterprize,
Nor th'insuppressiue Mettle of our Spirits,
To think, that or our Cause, or our Performance
Did needs an Oath. When every drop of blood
That every Roman beares, and Nobly beares
Is guilty of a seuerall Bastardie,
If he do breake the smallest Particle
Of any promise that hath past from him.

Cas. But what of Cauio? Shall we sound him?
I think he will stand very strong with vs.

Casc. Let vs not leaue him out.

Cyn. No, by no meanes.

Metel. O let vs haue him, for his Siluer haires
Will purchase vs a good opinion:
And buy mens voyces, to commend our deeds:
It shall be said, his judgement rul'd our hands,
Our youths, and wildenesse, shall no whit appeare,
But all be buried in his Grauity.

Bru. O name him not; let vs not breake with him,
For he will neuer follow any thing
That other men begin.

Cas. Then leaue him out.

Casc. Indeed, he is not fit.

Decius. Shall no man else be touch'd, but only Cæsar?

Cas. Decius well say'd: I thinke it is not meet,
Marke Antony, so well beloo'd of Cæsar,
Should out-liue Cæsar, we shall finde of him
A shrew'd Contriuer. And you know, his meanes
If he improue them, may well stretch so farre
As to annoy vs all: which to preuent,
Let Antony and Cæsar fall together.

Bru. Our course will seeme too bloody, Caius Cassius,
To cut the Head off, and then hacke the Limbes:
Like Wrath in death, and Enuy afterwards:
For Antony, is but a Limbe of Cæsar.
Let's be Sacrificers, but not Butchers, Caius:
We all stand vp against the spirit of Cæsar,
And in the Spirit of men, there is no blood:
O that we then could come by Cæsars Spirit,
And not dismember Cæsar! But (alas)
Cæsar must bleed for it. And gentle Friends,
Let's kill him boldly, but not Wrathfully:
Let's carue him, as a Dish fit for the Gods,
Not hew him as a Carkasse fit for Hounds:
And let our Hearts, as subtle Masters do,
Stirre vp their Seruants to an act of Rage,
And after seeme to chide 'em. This shall make
Our purpose Necessary, and not Enuious.
Which so appearing to the common eyes,
We shall be call'd Purgers, not Murderers.
And for Marke Antony, think not of him:
For he can do no more then Cæsars Arme,
When Cæsars head is off.

Cas. Yet I feare him,
For in the ingrafted loue he beares to Cæsar.

Bru. Alas, good Cassius, do not think of him:
If he loue Cæsar, all that he can do
Is to himselfe, take thought, and dye for Cæsar.
And that were much he should: for he is given
To sports, to wildenesse, and much company.

Trib. There is no feare in him; let him not dye,
For he will liue, and laugh at this hereafter.

Clocke strikes.

Bru. Peace, count the Clocke.

Cas. The Clocke hath stricken three.

Trib. 'Tis time to part.

Casc. But is it is doubtfull yet,
Whether Cæsar will come forth to day, or no:
For he is Superstitious growne of late,
Quite from the maine Opinion he held once,
Of Fantasie, of Dreames, and Ceremonies:
It may be, these apparant Prodigies,
The vnreuerent'd Terror of this night,
And the perswasion of his Augurers,
May hold him from the Capitoll to day.

Decius. Never feare that: If he be so resolu'd,
I can ore-sway him: For he loues to heare,
That Vnicornes may be betray'd with Trees,
And Beares with Glasses, Elephants with Holes,
Lyons with Toyles, and men with Flatterers.
But, when I tell him, he hates Flatterers,
He sayes, he does, being then most flattered.
Let me worke:
For I can giue his humour the true bent;
And I will bring him to the Capitoll.

Cas. Nay, we will all of vs, be there to fetch him.

Bru. By the eight houre, is that the vnmost?

Cin. Be that the vnmost, and fails not then.

Met. Caius Ligarius doth beare Cæsar hard,
Who rated him for speaking well of Pompey:
I wonder none of you haue thought of him.

Bru. Now good Metellus go along by him:
He loues me well, and I haue giuen him Reasons,
Send him but hither, and I'le fashion him.

Cas. The morning comes vpon's:
We'l leaue you Brutus,
And friends disperse your selues; but all remember
What you haue said, and shew your selues true Romans.

Bru. Good Gentlemen, looke fresh and merrily.
Let not our looks put on our purpose,
But beare it as our Roman Actors do,
With vntym'd Spirits, and formall Constancie,
And so good morrow to you every one. Exeunt.

Manet Brutus.

Boy: Lucius: Fast asleepe? It is no matter,
Enioy the heavy-heavy-Dew of Slumber.
Thou hast no Figures, nor no Fantasies,

Which

Which bose care drawes, in the braines of men;
Therefore thou sleep'st so sound.

Enter Portia.

Por. Brutus, my Lord.

Bru. Portia? What mean'st you? wherfore rise you now?
It is not for your health, thus to commit
Your weake condition, to the raw cold morning.

Por. Nor for your neither. Y'haue vngently Brutus
Stole from my bed: and yesternight at Supper
You suddainly arose, and walk'd about,
Musing, and sighing, with your armes a-crosse:
And when I ask'd you what the matter was,
You star'd vpon me, with vngentle looks:
I vrg'd you further, then you scratch'd your head,
And too impatiently stamp'd with your foote:
Yet I insisted, yet you answer'd not,
But with an angry wafter of your hand
Gaue signe for me to leaue you: So I did,
Fearing to strengthen that impatience
Which seem'd too much inkindled; and withall,
Hoping it was but an effect of Humor,
Which sometime hath his hours with every man.
It will not let you eate, nor talke, nor sleepe;
And could it worke so much vpon your shape,
As it hath much prevail'd on your Condition,
I should not know you Brutus. Deare my Lord,
Make me acquainted with your cause of griefe.

Bru. I am not well in health, and that is all.

Por. Brutus is wise, and were he not in health,
He would embrace the meanes to come by it.

Bru. Why so I do: good Portia go to bed.

Por. Is Brutus sicke? And is it Physicall
To walke vnbraced, and suckt vp the humours
Of the dankt Morning? What, is Brutus sicke?
And will he steale out of his wholsome bed
To dare the vile contagion of the Night?
And tempt the Rheumy, and vapor-ed Ayre,
To add vnto his sicknesse? No my Brutus,
You haue some sicke Offence within your minde,
Which by the Right and Vertue of my place
I ought to know of: And vpon my knees,
I charme you, by my once commended Beauty,
By all your vowes of Loue, and that great Vow
Which did incorporate and make vs one,
That you vnfold to me, your self; your half
Why you are heavy: and what men to night
Haue had resort to you: for heere haue beene
Some five or seuen, who did hide their faces
Euen from darknesse.

Bru. Kneele not gentle Portia.

Por. I should not neede, if you were gentle Brutus.
Within the Bond of Marriage, tell me Brutus,
Is it excepted, I should know no Secrets
That appertaine to you? Am I your Self,
But as it were in sort, or limitation?
To keepe with you at Meales, comfort your Bed,
And talke to you sometimes? Dwell I but in the Suburbs
Of your good pleasure? If it be no more,
Portia is Brutus Harlot, not his Wife.

Bru. You are my true and honourable Wife,
As dearer to me, as are the ruddy droppes
That visit my sad heart.

Por. If this were true, then should I know this secret.
I grant I am a Woman; but withall,
A Woman that Lord Brutus tooke to Wife:
I grant I am a Woman; but withall,
A Woman well reputed: Cato's Daughter.
Think'st you, I am no stronger then my Sex
Being so Father'd, and so Husbanded?
Tell me your Counsels, I will not disclose 'em:
I haue made strong proofe of my Constancie,
Giuing my self a voluntary wound
Heere, in the Thigh: Can I beare that with patience,
And not my Husbands Secrets?

Bru. O ye Gods!
Render me worthy of this Noble Wife. Knock.
Harke, harke, one knocks: Portia go in a while,
And by and by thy bosome shall partake
The secrets of my Heart.
All my engagements, I will construe to thee,
All the Characterry of my sad browes:
Leaue me with haste. Exit Portia.

Enter Lucius and Ligarius.

Lucius, who's that knocks.

Luc. Heere is a sicke man that would speak with you.

Bru. Caius Ligarius, that Metellus spake of.
Boy, stand aside. Caius Ligarius, how?

Cai. Vouchsafe good morrow from a feeble tongue.

Bru. O what a time haue you chose out brave Caius
To weare a Kerchiefe? Would you were not sicke.

Cai. I am not sicke, if Brutus haue in hand
Any exploit worthy the name of Honor.

Bru. Such an exploit haue I in hand Ligarius,
Had you a healthfull eare to heare of it.

Cai. By all the Gods that Romans bow before,
I heere discard my sicknesse. Soule of Rome,
Brave Sonne, deriu'd from Honourable Loines,
Thou like an Exorcist, hast conior'd vp
My mortified Spirit. Now bid me runne,
And I will strive with things impossible,
Yea get the better of them. What's to do?

Bru. A peece of worke,
That will make sicke men whole.

Cai. But are not some whole, that we must make sicke?

Bru. That must we also. What it is my Caius,
I shall vnfold to thee, as we are going,
To whom it must be done.

Cai. Set on your foote,
And with a heart new-fir'd, I follow you,
To do I know not what: but it sufficeth
That Brutus leads me on. Thunder.

Bru. Follow me then. Exeunt.

Thunder & Lightning.
Enter Iulius Cæsar in his Night-gowne.

Cæsar. Nor Heauen, nor Earth,
Haue beene at peace to night:
Thrice hath Calphurnia, in her sleepe cryed out,
Helpe, ho: They murther Cæsar. Who's within?

Enter a Seruant.

Ser. My Lord.

Cæs. Go bid the Priests do present Sacrifice,
And bring me their opinions of Successe.

Ser. I will my Lord. Exit

Enter Calphurnia.

Cal. What mean you Cæsar? Think you to walke forth?
You shall not stirre out of your house to day.

Cæs. Cæsar shall forth; the things that threatned me,
Ne're look'd but on my backe: When they shall see
The face of Cæsar, they are vanished.

Cal.

Calp. Cæsar: I never stood on Ceremonies,
Yet now they fright me: There is one within,
Besides the things that we have heard and seene,
Recounts most horrid sights seene by the Watch.
A Lionnesse hath whelped in the streets,
And Graues haue yawn'd, and yeelded vp their dead;
Fierce fiery Warriours fight vpon the Clouds
In Ranks and Squadrons, and right forme of Warre
Which drizzel'd blood vpon the Capitoll:
The noise of Battell hurtled in the Ayre:
Horses do neigh, and dying men did grone,
And Ghosts did shrieke and squeale about the streets.
O Cæsar, these things are beyond all vse,
And I do feare them.
Caes. What can be auoyded
Whose end is purpos'd by the mighty Gods?
Yet Cæsar shall go forth: for these Predictions
Are to the world in generall, as to Cæsar.
Calp. When Beggers dye, there are no Comets seen,
The heauens themselues blaze forth the death of Princes
Caes. Cowards dye many times before their deaths,
The valiant neuer taste of death but once:
Of all the Wonders that I yet haue heard,
It seemes to me most strange that men should feare,
Seeing that death, a necessary end
Will come, when it will come.
Enter a Seruant.
What say the Augurers?
Ser. They would not haue you to stirre forth to day.
Plucking the intrailes of an Offering forth,
They could not finde a heart within the beast.
Caes. The Gods do this in shame of Cowardice:
Cæsar should be a Beast without a heart
If he should stay at home to day for feare:
No Cæsar shall not; Danger knowes full well
That Cæsar is more dangerous then he.
We heare two Lyons litter'd in one day,
And I the elder and more terrible,
And Cæsar shall go forth.
Calp. Alas my Lord,
Your wisedome is consum'd in confidence:
Do not go forth to day: Call it my feare,
That keepes you in the house, and not your owne.
We'l send Mark Antony to the Sehate house,
And he shall say, you are not well to day:
Let me vpon my knee, preuaile in this.
Caes. Mark Antony shall say I am not well,
And for thy humour, I will stay at home.
Enter Decius.
Heere's Decius Brutus, he shall tell them so.
Dec. Cæsar, all haile: Good morrow worthy Cæsar,
I come to fetch you to the Senate house.
Caes. And you are come in very happy time,
To beare my greeting to the Senators,
And tell them that I will not come to day:
Cannot, is false: and that I dare not, falser:
I will not come to day, tell them so Decius.
Calp. Say he is sicke.
Caes. Shall Cæsar send a Lye?
Haue I in Conquest stretcht mine Arme so farre,
To be afear'd to tell Grey-beards the truth:
Decius, go tell them, Cæsar will not come.
Dec. Most mighty Cæsar let me know some cause,
Lest I be laught at when I tell them so.
Caes. The cause is in my Will, I will not come,
That is enough to satisfie the Senate.
But for your priuate satisfaction,
Because I loue you, I will let you know,
Calphurnia heere my wife, stayes me at home:
She dreamt to night, she saw my Statue,
Which like a Fountaine, with an hundred spouts
Did run pure blood: and many lusty Romans
Came smiling, & did bathe their hands in it:
And these does she apply, for warnings and portents,
And euils imminent; and on her knee
Hath begg'd, that I will stay at home to day.
Decil. This Dreame is all amisse interpreted,
It was a vision, faire and fortunate:
Your Statue spouting blood in many pipes,
In which so many smiling Romans bath'd,
Signifies, that from you great Rome shall suckle
Reuiuing blood, and that great men shall presse
For Tinctures, Staines, Reliques, and Cognisance.
This by Calphurnia's Dreame is signified.
Caes. And this way haue you well expounded it.
Decil. I haue, when you haue heard what I can say:
And know it now, the Senate haue concluded
To giue this day, a Crowne to mighty Cæsar.
If you shall send them word you will not come,
Their minds may change. Besides, it were a mocke
Apt to be render'd, for some one to say,
Breake vp the Senate, till another time:
When Cæsar's wife shall meete with better Dreames.
If Cæsar hide himselfe, shall they not whisper
Lou Cæsar is afraid?
Pardon me Cæsar for my deere deere loue
To your proceeding, bids me tell you this;
And reason to my loue is liable.
Caes. How foolish do your fears seeme now Calphurnia!
I am ashamed I did yeeld to them.
Giue me my Robe, for I will go.

Enter Brutus, Ligarius, Metellus, Casca, Trebonius, Cynna, and Publius.
And looke where Publius is come to fetch me
Pub. Good morrow Cæsar.
Caes. Welcome Publius.
What Brutus, are you stirr'd so early too?
Good morrow Casca: Caius Ligarius,
Cæsar was neere so much your enemy,
As that same Ague which hath made you leane.
What is't a Clocke?
Bru. Cæsar, 'tis strucken eight.
Caes. I thanke you for your paines and curtesie.
Enter Antony.
See, Antony that Reuels long a-nights
Is notwithstanding vp. Good morrow Antony.
Ant. So to most Noble Cæsar
Caes. Bid them prepare within:
I am too blame to be thus waited for.
Now Cynna, now Metellus: what Trebonius,
I haue an houres talke in store for you:
Remember that you call on me to day:
Be neere me, that I may remember you.
Treb. Cæsar I will: and so neere will I be,
That your best Friends shall wish I had beene further.
Caes. Good Friends go in, and taste some wine with me
And we (like Friends) will straight way go together.
Bru. That every like is not the same, O Cæsar,
The heart of Brutus earnes to thinke vpon. Brutus
Enter Artemidorus.
Caesar, beware of Brutus, take heede of Cassius; come not neere

were Casca, have an eye to Cynna, trust not Trebonius, marke well Metellius Cymber, Decius Brutus loves thee not: Thou hast wrong'd Caius Ligarius. There is but one mind in all these men, and is bent against Cæsar: If thou feest sut Immortall, look about you: Security gives way to Conspiracie. The mighty Gods defend thee.

Thy Lover, Artemidorus.

Heere will I stand, till Cæsar passe along,
And as a Suitor will I give him this:
My heart laments, that Vertue cannot live
Out of the teeth of Emulation.
If thou reade this, O Cæsar, thou mayest live;
If not, the Fates with Traitors do conspire. Exit.

Enter Portia and Lucius.

Por. I prythee Boy, run to the Senate-house,
Stay not to answer me, but get thee gone.
Why doest thou stay?

Luc. To know my errand Madam.

Por. I would have had thee there and heere again
Ere I can tell thee what thou should'st do there:
O Constancie, be strong upon my side,
Set a huge Mountaine 'tweene my Heart and Tongue.
I have a mans minde, but a womans might:
How hard it is for women to keepe counsell.
Art thou heere yet?

Luc. Madam, what should I do?
Run to the Capitoll, and nothing else?
And so returne to you, and nothing else?

Por. Yes, bring me word Boy, if thy Lord look well,
For he went sickly forth: and take good note
What Cæsar doth, what Suitors preffe to him.
Hearke Boy, what noyse is that?

Luc. I heare noise Madam.

Por Prythee listen well:
I heard a buisling Rumor like a Fray,
And the winde brings it from the Capitoll.

Luc. Sooth Madam, I heare nothing.

Enter the Soothsayer.

Por. Come hither Fellow, which way hast thou bin?

Sooth. At mine owne house, good Lady.

Por. What is't a clocke?

Sooth. About the ninth houre Lady.

Por. Is Cæsar yet gone to the Capitoll?

Sooth. Madam not yet, I go to take my stand,
To see him passe on to the Capitoll.

Por. Thou hast some suite to Cæsar, hast thou not?

Sooth. That I have Lady, if it will please Cæsar
To be so good to Cæsar, as to heare me:
I shall beseech him to befriend himselfe.

Por. Why know'st thou any harme's intended towards him?

Sooth. None that I know will be,
Much that I feare may chance:
Good morrow to you: heere the street is narrow:
The throng that followes Cæsar at the heeles,
Of Senators, of Praetors, common Suitors,
Will crowd a feeble man (almost) to death.
Ile get me to a place more voyd, and there
Speake to great Cæsar as he comes along. Exit

Por. I must go in:
Aye me. How weake a thing
The heart of woman is? O Brutus,
The Heavens speede thee in thine enterprise.
Sure the Boy heard me: Brutus hath a suite
That Cæsar will not grant. O, I grow faint:
Run Lucius, and commend me to my Lord,
Say I am merry: Come to me againe
And bring me word what he doth say to thee. Exeunt

Actus Tertius.

Flourish.

Enter Cæsar, Brutus, Cassius, Casca, Decius, Metellius, Trebonius, Cynna, Antony, Lepidus, Artemidorus, Publius, and the Soothsayer

Cæs The Ides of March are come.

Sooth. I Cæsar, but not gone.

Art. Haile Cæsar: Read this Schedule.

Dect Trebonius doth desire you to o're-read
(At your best leysure) this his humble suite.

Art. O Cæsar, reade mine first: for mine's a suite
That touches Cæsar neerer. Read it great Cæsar.

Cæs. What touches us our selfe, shall be last serv'd.

Art. Delay not Cæsar, read it instantly.

Cæs. What, is the fellow mad?

Pub Sirra, give place.

Cass. What, urge you your Peticions in the street?
Come to the Capitoll.

Popil. I wish your enterprize to day may thrive.

Cass. What enterprize Popilius?

Popil. Fare you well.

Bru. What said Popilius Lena?

Cass He wishe to day our enterprize might thrive.
I feare our purpose is discovered.

Bru. Looke how he makes to Cæsar: marke him

Cass. Casca be sodaine, for we feare prevention.

Brutus what shall be done? If this be knowne,
Cassius or Cæsar never shall come backe,
For I will slay my selfe.

Bru. Cassius be constant:
Popilius Lena speakes not of our purposes,
For looke he smiles, and Cæsar doth not change.

Cass. Trebonius knowes his time: for look you Brutus
He drawes Mark Antony out of the way.

Dect. Where is Metellius Cimber, let him go,
And presently preferre his suite to Cæsar.

Bru. He is addrest: preffe neere, and second him.

Cin. Casca, you are the first that reares your hand.

Cæs. Are we all ready? What is now amisse,
That Cæsar and his Senate must redresse?

Metel. Most high, most mighty, and most puissant Cæsar
Metellius Cimber throwes before thy Seate
An humble heart.

Cæs. I must prevent thee Cymber:
These couchings and these lowly courtesies
Might fire the blood of ordinary men,
And turne pre-Ordinance, and first Decree
Into the law of Children. Be not fond.
To think that Cæsar beares such Rebell blood
That will be thaw'd from the true quoitie
With that which meleeth Fooles, I meane sweet words,
Low crooked-curtsies, and base Spaniell fawning.
Thy Brother by decree is banished.
If thou doest bend, and pray, and fawne for him,
I spurne thee like a Curre out of my way:
Know, Cæsar doth not wrong, nor without cause
Will he be satisfied.

Metel. Is there no voyce more worthy than my own

To sound more sweetly in great Caesars eare,
For the repealing of my banish'd Brother?

Bru. I kisse thy hand, but not in flattery Caesar:
Desiring thee, that Publius Cymber may
Have an immediate freedome of repeale.

Caes. What Brutus?

Cass. Pardon Caesar: Caesar pardon:
As low as to thy foote doth Cassius fall,
To begge infranchisement for Publius Cymber.

Caes. I could be well mou'd, if I were as you,
If I could pray to moove, Prayers would moove me:
But I am constant as the Northerne Starre,
Of whose true fixt, and resting quality,
There is no fellow in the Firmament.
The Skies are painted with vnnumbred sparkes,
They are all Fire, and every one doth shine:
But, there's but one in all doth hold his place.
So, in the World; 'Tis furnish'd well with Men,
And Men are Flesh and Blood, and apprehensive;
Yet in the number, I do know but One
That vnassylable holds on his Ranke,
Vnshak'd of Motion: and that I am he,
Let me a little shew it, even in this:
That I was constant Cymber should be banish'd,
And constant do remaine to keepe him so.

Cinna. O Caesar.

Caes. Hence: Wilt thou lift vp Olympus?

Decius. Great Caesar.

Caes. Doth not Brutus bootless kneele?

Casca. Speake hands for me.

They stab Caesar.

Caes. Et Tu Brute?——Then fall Caesar. Dyes

Cin. Liberty, Freedome; Tyranny is dead,
Run hence, proclaime, cry it about the Streets.

Cass. Some to the common Pulpits, and cry out
Liberty, Freedome, and Enfranchisement.

Bru. People and Senators, be not affrighted:
Fly not, stand still: Ambitions debt is paid.

Casca. Go to the Pulpit Brutus.

Dec. And Cassius too.

Bru. Where's Publius?

Cin. Heere, quite confounded with this mutiny.

Met. Stand fast together, least some Friend of Caesars
Should chance——

Bru. Talke not of standing. Publius good cheere,
There is no harme intended to your person,
Not to no Roman else: so tell them Publius.

Cass. And leave vs Publius, least that the people
Rushing on vs, should do your Age some mischiefe.

Bru. Do so, and let no man abide this deede,
But we the Doers.

Enter Trebonius.

Cass. Where is Antony?

Treb. Fled to his House amaz'd:
Men, Wives, and Children, stare, cry out, and run,
As it were Doomesday.

Bru. Fates, we will know your pleasures:
That we shall dye we know, 'tis but the time
And drawing dayes out, that men stand vpon.

Casca. Why he that cuts off twenty yeares of life,
Cuts off so many yeares of fearing death.

Bru. Grant that, and then is Death a Benefit:
So are we Caesars Friends, that have abridg'd
His time of fearing death. Stoope Romans, stoope,
And let vs bathe our hands in Caesars blood
Vp to the Elbowes, and besmeare our Swords:
Then walke we forth, even to the Market place,
And waving our red Weapons o're our heads,
Let's all cry Peace, Freedome, and Liberty.

Cass. Stoop then, and wash. How many Ages hence
Shall this our lofty Scene be acted ouer,
In States vnborne, and Accents yet vnknowne?

Bru. How many times shall Caesar bleed in sport,
That now on Pompeyes Basis lye along,
No worthier then the dust?

Cass. So oft as that shall be,
So often shall the knot of vs be call'd,
The Men that gaue their Country liberty.

Dec. What, shall we forth?

Cass. I, every man away.
Brutus shall leade, and we will grace his heeles
With the most boldest, and best hearts of Rome.

Enter a Seruant.

Bru. Soft, who comes heere? A friend of Antonys.

Ser. Thus Brutus did my Master bid me kneele;
Thus did Mark Antony bid me fall downe,
And being prostrate, thus he bad me say:
Brutus is Noble, Wise, Valiant, and Honest;
Caesar was Mighty, Bold, Royall, and Loving:
Say, I love Brutus, and I honour him;
Say, I fear'd Caesar, honour'd him, and lou'd him.
If Brutus will vouchsafe, that Antony
May safely come to him, and be resole'd
How Caesar hath deserv'd to lye in death,
Mark Antony, shall not loue Caesar dead
So well as Brutus living; but will follow
The Fortunes and Affayres of Noble Brutus,
Thorough the hazards of this vnsured State,
With all true Faith. So sayes my Master Antony.

Bru. Thy Master is a Wise and Valiant Romane,
I never thought him worse:
Tell him, so please him come vnto this place
He shall be satisfied: and by my Honor
Depart vntouch'd.

Ser. I'le fetch him presently. Exit Seruant.

Bru. I know that we shall haue him well to Friend.

Cass. I wish we may: But yet haue I a minde
That feares him much: and my misgiuing still
Falles shrewdly to the purpose.

Enter Antony.

Bru. But heere comes Antony:
Welcome Mark Antony.

Ant. O mighty Caesar! Dost thou lye so low?
Are all thy Conquests, Glories, Triumphes, Spoiles,
Shrinke to this little Measure? Fare thee well.
I know not Gentlemen what you intend,
Who else must be let blood, who else is ranke
If I my selfe, there is no hour so fit
As Caesars death houre; nor no Instrument
Of half that worth, as those your Swords; made rich
With the most Noble blood of all this World.
I do beseech yee, if you beare me hard,
Now, whil'st your purpled hands do reeke and smoake,
Fulfill your pleasure. Liue a thousand yeeres,
I shall not finde my selfe so apt to dye.
No place will please me so, no meane of death,
As heere by Caesar, and by you cut off,
The Choice and Master Spirits of this Age.

Bru. O Antony! Begge not your death of vs:
Though now we must appeare bloody and cruell,
As by our hands, and this our present Act
You see we do: Yet see you but our hands,

And

And this, the bleeding business they have done:
Our hearts you see not, they are pitiefull;
And pitty to the generall wrong of Rome,
As fire drives out fire, so pitty, pitty
Hath done this deed on Caesar. For your part,
To you, our Swords have leaden points Marke Antony:
Our Armes in strength of malice, and our Hearts
Of Brothers temper, do receive you in,
With all kinde loue, good thoughts, and reuerence.

Cassi. Your voyce shall be as strong as any mans,
In the disposing of new Dignities

Bru. Onely be patient, till we have appeas'd
The Multitude, beside themselues with feare,
And then, we will deliuer you the cause,
Why I, that did loue Caesar when I strooke him,
Haue thus proceeded.

Ant. I doubt not of your Wisedome:
Let euerman render me his bloody hand.
First Marcus Brutus will I shake with you;
Next Caius Cassius do I take your hand;
Now Decius Brutus yours; now yours Metellus,
Yours Cinna; and my valiant Casca yours;
Though last, not least in loue, yours good Trebonius.
Gentlemen all: Alas, what shall I say,
My credit now stands on such slippery ground,
That one of two bad waytes you must conceit me,
Either a Coward, or a Flatterer.
That I did loue thee Caesar, O 'tis true:
If then thy Spirit looke vpon vs how,
Shall it not greeue thee deerer then thy death,
To see thy Antony making his peace,
Shaking the bloody fingers of thy Foes?
Most Noble, in the presence of thy Coarse,
Had I as many eyes, as thou hast wounds,
Weeping as fast as they streame forth thy blood,
It would become me better, then to close
In tearmes of Friendship with thine enemies.
Pardon me Iulius, heere was't thou bay'd brauе Hart,
Heere did'st thou fall, and heere thy Hunters stand
Sign'd in thy Spoyle, and Crimson'd in thy Lethee.
O World! thou wast the Forrest to this Hart,
And this indeed, O World, the Hart of thee.
How like a Deere, strooken by many Princes,
Dost thou heere lye?

Cassi. Mark Antony.

Ant. Pardon me Caius Cassius:
The Enemies of Caesar, shall say this:
Then, in a Friend, it is cold Modestie.

Cassi. I blame you not for praising Caesar so,
But what compact mean you to haue with vs?
Will you be prick'd in number of our Friends,
Or shall we on, and not depend on you?

Ant. Therefore I tooke your hands, but was indeed
Sway'd from the point, by looking downe on Caesar.
Friends am I with you all, and loue you all,
Vpon this hope, that you shall giue me Reasons,
Why, and wherein, Caesar was dangerous.

Bru. Or else were this a lounge Spectacle:
Our Reasons are so full of good regard,
That were you Antony, the Sonne of Caesar,
You should be satisfied.

Ant. That's all I seeke,
And am moreouer suitor, that I may
Produce his body to the Market-place,
And in the Pulpit as becomes a Friend,
Speake in the Order of his Funerall.

Bru. You shall Marke Antony.

Cassi. Brutus, a word with you:
You know not what you do; Do not consent
That Antony speake in his Funerall:
Know you how much the people may be mou'd
By that which he will vtter.

Bru. By your pardon:
I will my selfe into the Pulpit first,
And shew the reason of our Caesars death.
What Antony shall speake, I will protest
He speakes by leaue, and by permission:
And that we are contented Caesar shall
Haue all true Rites, and lawfull Ceremonies,
It shall aduantage more, then do vs wrong.

Cassi. I know not what may fall, I like it not.

Bru. Mark Antony, heere take you Caesars body:
You shall not in your Funerall speech blame vs,
But speake all good you can deuise of Caesar,
And say you doo't by our permission:
Else shall you not haue any hand at all
About his Funerall. And you shall speake
In the same Pulpit where to I am going,
After my speech is ended.

Ant. Be it so:
I do desire no more.

Bru. Prepare the body then, and follow vs. Exeunt.

Manet Antony.

O pardon me, thou bleeding peece of Earth;
That I am meeke and gentle with these Butchers.
Thou art the Ruines of the Noblest man
That euer liued in the Tide of Times.
Woe to the hand that shed this costly Blood.
Ouer thy wounds, now do I Prophesie,
(Which like dumbe mouthes do ope their Ruby Lips,
To begge the voyce and vtterance of my Tongue)
A Curse shall light vpon the limbes of men;
Domestick Fury, and fierce Ciuill strife,
Shall cumber all the parts of Italy:
Blood and destruction shall be so in vse,
And dreadfull Obiects so familiar,
That Mothers shall but smile, when they behold
Their Infants quartered with the hands of Warre.
All pitty chok'd with custome of fell deeds,
And Caesars Spirit ranging for Reuenge,
With Ate by his side, come hot from Hell,
Shall in these Confines, with a Monarkes voyce,
Cry hauocke, and let slip the Dogges of Warre,
That this foule deede, shall smell aboue the earth
With Carrion men, groaning for Burial.

Enter Octauio's Seruant.

You seruе Octauius Caesar, do you not?

Ser. I do Marke Antony.

Ant. Caesar did write for him to come to Rome.

Ser. He did receiue his Letters, and is comming,
And bid me say to you by word of mouth———
O Caesar!

Ant. Thy heart is bigge: get thee a-part and weepe.
Passion I see is catching from mine eyes,
Seeing those Beads of sorrow stand in thine,
Began to water. Is thy Master comming?

Ser. He lies to night within seuen Leagues of Rome

Ant. Post backe with speede,
And tell him what hath chanc'd:
Heere is a mourning Rome, a dangerous Rome,
No Rome of safety for Octauius yet,
Hie hence, and tell him so. Yet stay a-while,

Thou shak not backe, till I have borne this course
Into the Market place: There shall I try
In my Oration, how the People take
The cruell issue of these bloody men,
According to the which, thou shalt discourse
To young Octavius, of the state of things.
Lend me your hand. Exeunt

Enter Brutus and goes into the Pulpit, and Cassius, with the Plebeians.

Ple. We will be satisfied: let vs be satisfied.

Bru. Then follow me, and give me Audience friends. Cassius go you into the other Street,
And part the Numbers:
Those that will heare me speake, let 'em stay heere;
Those that will follow Cassius, go with him,
And publike Reasons shall be rendred
Of Cæsar death.

1. Ple. I will heare Brutus speake.

2. I will heare Cassius, and compare their Reasons,
When seuerally we heare them rendred.

3. The Noble Brutus is ascended: Silence.

Bru. Be patient till the last.
Romans, Countrey-men, and Louers, heare mee for my cause, and be silent, that you may heare: Beleeue me for mine Honor, and haue respect to mine Honor, that you may beleeue. Censure me in your Wisedom, and awake your Senses, that you may the better Iudge. If there bee any in this Assembly, any deere Friend of Cæsar, to him I say, that Brutus loue to Cæsar, was no lesse then his. If then, that Friend demand, why Brutus rose against Cæsar, this is my answer: Not that I lou'd Cæsar lesse, but that I lou'd Rome more. Had you rather Cæsar were liuing, and dye all Slaues; then that Cæsar were dead, to liue all Free-men? As Cæsar lou'd mee, I weepe for him; as he was Fortunate, I reioyce at it; as he was Valiant, I honour him: But, as he was Ambitious, I slew him. There is Teares, for his Loue. Ioy, for his Fortune: Honor, for his Valour: and Death, for his Ambition. Who is heere so base, that would be a Bondman? If any, speak, for him haue I offended. Who is heere so rude, that would not be a Romans? If any, speak, for him haue I offended. Who is heere so vile, that will not loue his Countrey? If any, speake, for him haue I offended. I pause for a Reply.

All. None Brutus, none.

Brutus. Then none haue I offended. I haue done no more to Cæsar, then you shall do to Brutus. The Question of his death, is enroll'd in the Capitoll: his Glory not extenuated, wherein he was worthy; nor his offences enforc'd, for which he suffered death.

Enter Mark Antony, with Cæsar's body.

Heere comes his Body, mourn'd by Marke Antony, who though he had no hand in his death, shall receiue the benefit of his dying, a place in the Commonwealth, as which of you shall not. With this I depart, that as I slewe my best Louer for the good of Rome, I haue the same Dagger for my selfe, when it shall please my Country to need my death.

All. Liue Brutus, liue, liue.

1. Bring him with Triumph home vnto his house.

2. Giue him a Statue with his Ancestors.

3. Let him be Cæsar.

4 Cæsar's better parts,
Shall be Crown'd in Brutus.
We'l bring him to his House
With Shouts and Clamors.

Bru. My Country-men.

2. Peace, silence, Brutus speakes.

1. Peace ho.

Bru. Good Countrymen, let me depart alone,
And (for my sake) stay heere with Antony:
Do grace to Cæsars Corpes, and grace his Speech
Tending to Cæsars Glories, which Marke Antony
(By our permission) is allow'd to make.
I do intreat you, not a man depart,
Saue I alone, till Antony haue spoke. Exit

1 Stay ho, and let vs heare Mark Antony.

3 Let him go vp into the publike Chaire,
We'l heare him: Noble Antony go vp.

Ant. For Brutus sake, I am beholding to you.

4 What does he say of Brutus?

3 He sayes, for Brutus sake
He finds himselfe beholding to vs all.

4 'Twere best he speake no harme of Brutus heere?

1 This Cæsar was a Tyrant.

3 Nay that's certaine:
We are blest that Rome is rid of him.

2 Peace, let vs heare what Antony can say.

Ant. You gentle Romans.

All. Peace hoe, let vs heare him.

An. Friends, Romans, Countrymen, lend me your ears
I come to bury Cæsar, not to praise him:
The euill that men do, liues after them,
The good is oft interred with their bones,
So let it be with Cæsar. The Noble Brutus,
Hath told you Cæsar was Ambitious
If it were so, it was a greeuous Fault,
And greeuously hath Cæsar answer'd it.
Heere, vnder leaue of Brutus, and the rest
(For Brutus is an Honourable man,
So are they all; all Honourable men)
Come I to speake in Cæsars Funerall.
He was my Friend, faithfull, and iust to me;
But Brutus sayes, he was Ambitious,
And Brutus is an Honourable man.
He hath brought many Captiues home to Rome,
Whose Ransomes, did the generall Coffers fill:
Did this in Cæsar seeme Ambitious?
When that the poore haue cry'de, Cæsar hath wept:
Ambition should be made of sterner stuffe,
Yet Brutus sayes, he was Ambitious:
And Brutus is an Honourable man.
You all did see, that on the Lupercall,
I thrice presented him a Kingly Crowne,
Which he did thrice refuse. Was this Ambition?
Yet Brutus sayes, he was Ambitious:
And sure he is an Honourable man.
I speake not to disproue what Brutus spoke,
But heere I am, to speake what I do know;
You all did loue him once, not without cause,
What cause with-holds you then, to mourne for him?
O Iudgement! thou art fled to brutish Beasts,
And Men have lost their Reason. Beare with me,
My heart is in the Coffin there with Cæsar,
And I must pause, till it come backe to me.

1 Me thinkes there is much reason in his sayings.

2 If thou consider rightly of the matter,
Cæsar has had great wrong.

3 Has bee Masters? I feare there will a worse come in his place.

4. Mark'd ye his words? he would not take § Crown,
Therefore 'tis certaine, he was not Ambitious.
1. If it be found so, some will deere abide it.
2. Poore soule, his eyes are red as fire with weeping.
3. There's not a Nobler man in Rome then Antony.
4. Now marke him, he begins againe to speake.
Ant. But yesterday, the word of Caesar might
Have stood against the World: Now lies he there,
And none so poore to do him reuerence.
O Maisters! If I were disposd to stirre
Your hearts and minds to Mutiny and Rage,
I should do Brutus wrong, and Cassius wrong:
Who (you all know) are Honourable men.
I will not do them wrong: I rather choose
To wrong the dead, to wrong my selfe and you,
Then I will wrong such Honourable men.
But here's a Parchment, with the Seale of Caesar,
I found it in his Closet, 'tis his Will:
Let but the Commons heare this Testament:
(Which pardon me) I do not meane to reade,
And they would go and kisse dead Caesars wounds,
And dip their Napkins in his Sacred Blood;
Yea, begge a haire of him for Memory,
And dying, mention it within their Wills,
Bequeathing it as a rich Legacie
Vnto their issue.
4 Wee'l heare the Will, reade it Marke Antony.
All. The Will, the Will; we will heare Caesars Will
Ant. Haue patience gentle Friends, I must not read it,
It is not meete you know how Caesar lou'd you:
You are not Wood, you are not Stones, but men:
And being men, hearing the Will of Caesar,
It will inflame you, it will make you mad:
'Tis good you know not that you are his Heires,
For if you should, O what would come of it?
4 Read the Will, wee l heare it Antony:
You shall reade vs the Will, Caesars Will.
Ant. Will you be Patient? Will you stay a-while?
I haue o're-shot my selfe to tell you of it,
I feare I wrong the Honourable men,
Whose Daggers haue stabb'd Caesar: I do feare it.
4 They were Traitors: Honourable men?
All. The Will, the Testament.
2 They were Villaines, Murderers: the Will, read the Will.
Ant. You will compell me then to read the Will:
Then make a Ring about the Corpes of Caesar,
And let me shew you him that made the Will:
Shall I descend? And will you give me leaue?
All. Come downe.
2 Descend.
3 You shall haue leaue.
4 A Ring, stand round.
1 Stand from the Hearse, stand from the Body.
2 Roome for Antony, most Noble Antony.
Ant. Nay prease not so vpon me, stand farre off.
All. Stand backe: roome, beare backe.
Ant. If you haue teares, prepare to shed them now.
You all do know this Mantle, I remember
The first time euer Caesar put it on,
'Twas on a Summer's Euening in his Tent,
That day he ouercame the Nervij.
Looke, in this place ran Cassius Dagger through:
See what a rent the enuious Casca made:
Though this, the wel-beloued Brutus stabb'd,
And as he plucke'd his cursed Steele away:
Marke how the blood of Caesar followed it,
As rushing out of doores, to be resolu'd
If Brutus so vnkindly knock'd, or no:
For Brutus, as you know, was Caesars Angel.
Iudge, O you Gods, how dearely Caesar loo'd him:
This was the most vnkindest cut of all.
For when the Noble Caesar saw him stab,
Ingratitude, more strong then Traitors armes,
Quite vanquish'd him: then burst his Mighty heart,
And in his Mantle, muffling vp his face,
Even at the Base of Pompeys Statue
(Which all the while ran blood) great Caesar fell.
O what a fall was there, my Countrymen?
Then I and you, and all of vs fell downe,
Whil'st bloody Treason flourish'd ouer vs.
O now you weepe, and I perceiue you feele
The dint of pitty: These are gracious droppes
Kinde Soules, what weepe you, when you but behold
Our Caesars Vesture wounded? Looke you heere,
Heere is himselfe, marr'd as you see with Traitors.
1. O piteous spectacle!
2. O Noble Caesar!
3. O woefull day!
4. O Traitors, Villaines!
1. O most bloody sight!
2. We will be reuenge'd: Reuenge
About, seeke, burne, fire, kill, slay.
Let not a Traitor liue.
Ant. Stay Country-men
1. Peace there heare the Noble Antony.
2. We'l heare him, we'l follow him, we'l die with him.
Ant. Good Friends, sweet Friends, let me not stire
To such a sodaine Flood of Mutiny:
They that haue done this Deede, are honourable.
What priuate griefes they haue, alas I know not,
That made them do it: They are Wise, and Honourable,
And will no doubt with Reasons answer you.
I come not (Friends) to steale away your hearts,
I am no Orator, as Brutus is;
But (as you know me all) a plaine blunt man
That loue my Friend, and they know full well,
That gaue me publike leaue to speake of him:
For I haue neyther writ nor words, nor worth,
Action, nor Vtterance, nor the power of Speech,
To stirre mens Blood. I onely speake right on:
I tell you that, which you your selues do know,
Shew you sweet Caesars wounds, poor poor dumb mouths
And bid them speake for me: But were I Brutus,
And Brutus Antony, there were an Antony
Would ruffle vp your Spirits, and put a Tongue
In every Wound of Caesar, that should moue
The stones of Rome, to rise and Mutiny.
All. Wee'l Mutiny.
1 Wee'l burne the house of Brutus.
3 Away then, come, seeke the Conspirators.
Ant. Yet heare me Countrymen, yet heare me speake
All. Peace hoe, heare Antony, most Noble Antony.
Ant. Why Friends, you go to do you know not what:
Wherein hath Caesar thus deserv'd your loues?
Alas you know not, I must tell you then:
You haue forgot the Will I told you of.
All. Most true, the Will, let's stay and heare the Will.
Ant. Heere is the Will, and vnder Caesars Seale:
To every Roman Citizen he gives,
To every sweet all man, seuenty fine Drachmaes.

2. Ple. Most Noble Cæsar, we'l reuenge his death.
3. Ple. O Royall Cæsar.
Ant. Heere me with patience.
All. Peace hoe
Ant. Moreouer, he hath left you all his Walkes,
His priuate Arbors, and new-planted Orchards,
On this side Tyber, he hath left them you,
And to your heyres for euer: common pleasures
To walke abroad, and recreate your selues.
Heere was a Cæsar: when comes such another?
1. Ple. Neuer, never: come, away, away:
We'l burne his body in the holy place,
And with the Brands fire the Traitors houses.
Take vp the body.
2. Ple. Go fetch fire.
3. Ple. Pluck downe Benches.
4. Ple. Pluck downe Formes, Windowes, any thing.
Exit Plebeians.
Ant. Now let it worke: Mischeefe thou art afoot,
Take thou what course thou wilt.
How now Fellow?
Enter Seruant.
Ser. Sir, Octauius is already come to Rome.
Ant. Where is he?
Ser. He and Lepidus are at Cæsars house.
Ant. And thither will I straight, to visit him:
He comes vpon a wish. Fortune is merry,
And in this mood will give vs any thing.
Ser. I heard him say, Brutus and Cassius
Are rid like Madmen through the Gates of Rome.
Ant. Belike they had some notice of the people
How I had moued them. Bring me to Octauius. Exeunt

Enter Cinna the Poet, and after him the Plebeians.

Cinna. I dreame to night, that I did feast with Cæsar,
And things vnlucky charge my Fantasie:
I haue no will to wander foorth of doores,
Yet something leads me forth.
1. What is your name?
2. Whether are you going?
3. Where do you dwell?
4. Are you a married man, or a Batchellor?
2. Answer every man directly.
1. I, and breefely.
4. I, and wisely.
3. I, and truly, you were best.
Cin. What is my name? Whether am I going? Where do I dwell? Am I a married man, or a Batchellour? Then to answer every man, directly and breefely, wisely and truly: wisely I say, I am a Batchellor.
2. That's as much as to say, they are fooles that marry: you'l beare me a bang for that I feare: proceede directly.
Cinna. Directly I am going to Cæsars Funerall.
1. As a Friend, or an Enemy?
Cinna. As a friend.
2. That matter is answered directly.
4. For your dwelling: breefely.
Cinna. Breefely, I dwell by the Capitoll.
3. Your name sir, truly.
Cinna. Truly, my name is Cinna.
1. Teare him to pieces, he's a Conspirator.
Cinna. I am Cinna the Poet, I am Cinna the Poet.
4. Teare him for his bad verses, teare him for his bad Verses.
Cin. I am not Cinna the Conspirator.
4. It is no matter, his name's Cinna, pluck but his name out of his heart, and turne him going.
3. Teare him, teare him; Come Brands hoe, Firebrands: to Brutus, to Cassius, burne all. Some to Decius House, and some to Casca's; some to Ligarius: Away, go.
Exeunt all the Plebeians.

Actus Quartus.

Enter Antony, Octauius, and Lepidus.
Ant. These many then shall die, their names are prickt.
Octa. Your Brother too must dye: consent you Lepidus?
Lep. I do consent.
Octa. Prickt him downe Antony.
Lep. Vpon condition Publius shall not liue,
Who is your Sisters sonne, Marke Antony.
Ant. He shall not liue; looke, with a spot I damn him.
But Lepidus, go you to Cæsars house:
Fetch the Will hither, and we shall determine
How to cut off some charge in Legacies.
Lep. What? shall I finde you heere?
Octa. Or heere, or at the Capitoll. Exit Lepidus
Ant. This is a slight vnmeritable man,
Meet to be sent on Errands: is it fit
The three-fold World diuided, he should stand
One of the three to share it?
Octa. So you thought him,
And tooke his voyce who should be prickt to dye
In our blacke Sentence and Proscription.
Ant. Octauius, I haue seene more dayes then you,
And though we lay these Honours on this man,
To ease our selues of diuers sland'rous loads,
He shall but beare them, as the Asse beares Gold,
To groane and swet vnder the Businesse,
Either led or driuen, as we point the way:
And being brought our Treasure, where we will,
Then take we downe his Load, and turne him off
(Like to the empty Asse) to shake his eares,
And graze in Commons.
Octa. You may do your will:
But he's a tried, and valiant Souldier.
Ant. So is my Horse Octauius, and for that
I do appoint him store of Prouender.
It is a Creature that I teach to fight,
To winde, to stop, to run directly on:
His corporall Motion, gouern'd by my Spirit,
And in some taste, is Lepidus but so:
He must be taught, and train'd, and bid go forth:
A barren spirited Fellow; one that feeds
On Obiects, Arts, and Imitations.
Which out of vse, and stal'de by other men
Begin his fashion. Do not talke of him,
But as a property: and now Octauius,
Listen great things. Brutus and Cassius
Are leuying Powers; We must straight make head:
Therefore let our Alliance be combin'd,
Our best Friends made, our means stretcht,
And let vs presently go sit in Councell,
How couert matters may be best disclos'd,
And open Perils forest answered.
Octa. Let vs do so: for we are at the stake,

And boyed about with many Enemies,
And some that smile haue in their hearts I feare
Millions of Mischeefes. Exeunt

Drum. Enter Brutus, Lucilius, and the Army. Titinius and Pindarus meete them.

Bru. Stand ho.
Lucil. Giue the word ho, and Stand.
Bru. What now Lucilius, is Cassius neere?
Lucil. He is at hand, and Pindarus is come
To do you salutation from his Master.
Bru. He greets me well. Your Master Pindarus
In his owne change, or by ill Officers,
Hath given me some worthy cause to wish
Things done, vndone: But if be be at hand
I shall be satisfied.
Pin. I do not doubt
But that my Noble Master will appeare
Such as he is, full of regard, and Honour.
Bru. He is not doubted. A word Lucilius
How he receiu'd you: let me be resolu'd.
Lucil. With courtesie, and with respect enough,
But not with such familiar instances,
Nor with such free and friendly Conference
As he hath vs'd of old.
Bru. Thou hast describ'd
A hot Friend, cooling: Euer note Lucilius,
When Loue begins to sicken and decay
It vseth an enforced Ceremony.
There are no trickes, in plaine and simple Faith:
But hollow men, like Horses hot at hand,
Make gallant shew, and promise of their Mettle:
Low March within.
But when they should endure the bloody Spurre,
They fall their Crests, and like deceitfull Iades
Sinke in the Triall. Comes his Army on?
Lucil. They meane this night in Sardis to be quarter'd:
The greater part, the Horse in generall
Are come with Cassius.
Enter Cassius and his Powers.
Bru. Hearke, he is arriu'd:
March gently on to meete him.
Cassi. Stand ho.
Bru. Stand ho, speake the word along.
Stand.
Stand.
Stand.
Cassi. Most Noble Brother, you haue done me wrong.
Bru. Iudge me you Gods; wrong I mine Enemies?
And if not so, how should I wrong a Brother.
Cassi. Brutus, this sober forme of yours, hides wrongs,
And when you do them———
Bru. Cassius, be content,
Speake your greefes softly, I do know you well.
Before the eyes of both our Armies heere
(Which should perceiue nothing but Loue from vs)
Let vs not wrangle. Bid them moue away:
Then in my Tent Cassius enlarge your Greefes,
And I will giue you Audience.
Cassi. Pindarus,
Bid our Commanders leade their Charges off
A little from this ground.
Bru. Lucilius, do you the like. and let no man
Come to our Tent, till we haue done our Conference.
Let Lucius and Titinius guard our doore Exeunt
Manet Brutus and Cassius.

Cassi. That you haue wrong'd me, doth appear in this:
You haue condemn'd, and noted Lucius Pella
For taking Bribes heere of the Sardians;
Wherein my Letters, praying on his side,
Because I knew the man was slightred off.
Bru. You wrong'd your selfe to write in such a case.
Cassi. In such a time as this, it is not meet
That every nice offence should beare his Comment.
Bru. Let me tell you Cassius, you your selfe
Are much condemn'd to haue an itching Palme,
To sell, and Mart your Offices for Gold
To Vndeseruers.
Cassi. I, an itching Palme?
You know that you are Brutus that speakes this,
Or by the Gods, this speech were else your last.
Bru. The name of Cassius Honours this corruption,
And Chastisement doth therefore hide his head.
Cassi. Chastisement?
Bru. Remember March, the Ides of March remember:
Did not great Iulius bleede for Iustice sake?
What Villaine touch'd his body, that did stab,
And not for Iustice? What? Shall one of Vs,
That struck the Foremost man of all this World,
But for supporting Robbers: shall we now,
Contaminate our fingers, with base Bribes?
And sell the mighty space of our large Honours
For so much trash, as may be grasped thus?
I had rather be a Dogge, and bay the Moone,
Then such a Romen
Cassi. Brutus, baise not me.
Ile not indure it: you forget your selfe
To hedge me in. I am a Souldier. I,
Older in practice, Abler then your selfe
To make Conditions
Bru. Go too: you are not Cassius.
Cassi. I am.
Bru. I say, you are not.
Cassi. Vrge me no more, I shall forget my selfe:
Haue minde vpon your health: Tempt me no farther.
Bru. Away slight man.
Cassi. Is't possible?
Bru. Heare me, for I will speake.
Must I giue way, and roome to your rash Choller?
Shall I be frighted, when a Madman stares?
Cassi. O ye Gods, ye Gods, Must I endure all this?
Bru. All this? I more: Fret till your proud heart breake.
Go shew your Slaues how Choller ick you are,
And make your Bondmen tremble. Must I bouge?
Must I obserue you? Must I stand and crouch
Vnder your Testie Humour? By the Gods,
You shall digest the Venom of your Spleene
Though it do Split you. For, from this day forth,
Ile vse you for my Mirth, yea for my Laughter
When you are Waspish
Cassi. Is it come to this?
Bru. You say, you are a better Souldier:
Let it appeare so; make your vaunting true,
And it shall please me well. For mine owne part,
I shall be glad to learne of Noble men.
Cassi. You wrong me euery way:
You wrong me Brutus:
I said, an Elder Souldier, not a Better.
Did I say Better?
Bru. If you did, I care not. Cas.
Cassi. When Cæsar liu'd, he durst not thus haue mou'd
Bru. Peace, peace, you durst not so haue tempted him

Cass. I durst not.
Bru. No.
Cass. What? durst not tempt him?
Bru. For your life you durst not.
Cass. Do not presume too much vpon my Loue,
I may do that I shall be sorry for.
Bru. You haue done that you should be sorry for.
There is no terror Cassius in your threats:
For I am Arm'd so strong in Honesty,
That they passe by me, as the idle winde,
Which I respect not. I did send to you
For certaine summes of Gold, which you deny'd me,
For I can raise no money by vile meanes:
By Heauen, I had rather Coine my Heart,
And drop my blood for Drachmas, then to wring
From the hard hands of Peasants, their vile trash
By any indirection. I did send
To you for Gold to pay my Legions,
Which you deny'd me: was this done like Cassius?
Should I haue answer'd Caius Cassius so?
When Marcus Brutus growes so Courteous,
To locke such Raiscall Counters from his Friends,
Be ready Gods with all your Thunder-bolts,
Dash him to pieces.
Cass. I deny'd you not.
Bru. You did.
Cass. I did not. He was but a Foole
That brought my answer back. Brutus hath riu'd my hart:
A Friend should beare his Friends infirmities;
But Brutus makes mine greater then they are.
Bru. I do not, till you practice them on me
Cass. You loue me not.
Bru. I do not like your faults.
Cass. A friendly eye could never see such faults.
Bru. A Flatterers would not, though they do appeare
As huge as high Olympus.
Cass. Come Antony, and yong Octauius come,
Reuenge your selues alone on Cassius,
For Cassius is a-weary of the World:
Hated by one he loues, brau'd by his Brother,
Check'd like a bondman, all his faults obserr'd,
Set in a Note-booke, learn'd, and con'd by roote
To cast into my Teeth. O I could weepe
My Spirit from mine eyes. There is my Dagger,
And here my naked Breast: Within, a Heart
Deerer then Plutos Mine, Richer then Gold:
If that thou bee'st a Roman, take it forth.
I that deny'd thee Gold, will giue my Heart:
Strike as thou did'st at Cæsar: For I know,
When thou did'st hate him worst, thou lou'd'st him better
Then ever thou lou'd'st Cassius
Bru. Sheath your Dagger:
Be angry when you will, it shall haue scope:
Do what you will, Dishonor, shall be Humour.
O Cassius, you are yoaked with a Lambe
That carries Anger, as the Flint beares fire,
Who much inforced, shewes a hastie Sparke,
And straite is cold again.
Cass. Hath Cassius liu'd
To be but Mirth and Laughter to his Brutus,
When griefe and blood ill temper'd, vexeth him?
Bru. When I spoke that, I was ill temper'd too.
Cass. Do you confesse so much? Giue me your hand.
Bru. And my heart too.
Cass. O Brutus!
Bru. What's the matter?
Cass. Haue not you loue enough to bearе with me,
When that rash humour which my Mother gaue me
Makes me forgetfull.
Bru. Yes Cassius, and from henceforth
When you are over-earnest with your Brutus,
He'l think your Mother chides, and leaue you so.

Enter a Poet.

Poet. Let me go in to see the Generals,
There is some grudge betweene 'em, 'tis not meete
They be alone.
Lucil. You shall not come to them.
Poet. Nothing but death shall stay me.
Cas. How now? What's the matter?
Poet. For shame you Generals; what do you meane?
Loue, and be Friends, as two such men should bee,
For I haue seene more yeeres I'me sure then yee.
Cas. Ha, ha, how vildely doth this Cynicke rime?
Bru. Get you hence sirra: Sawcy fellow, hence.
Cas. Beare with him Brutus, 'tis his fashion.
Bru. I'le know his humor, when he knowes his time:
What should the Warres do with these ligging Fooles?
Companion, hence.
Cas. Away, away be gone. Exit Poet
Bru. Lucillius and Titinius bid the Commanders
Prepare to lodge their Companies to night.
Cas. And come your selues, & bring Messala with you
Immediately to vs.
Bru. Lucius, a bowle of Wine.
Cas. I did not thinke you could haue bin so angry.
Bru. O Cassius, I am sicke of many griefes.
Cas. Of your Philosophy you make no vse,
If you giue place to accidentall euils.
Bru. No man beares sorrow better. Portia is dead.
Cas. Ha? Portia?
Bru. She is dead.
Cas. How scap'd I killing, when I crost you so?
O insupportable, and touching loss!
Vpon what sicknesse?
Bru. Impatient of my absence,
And griefe, that yong Octauius with Mark Antony
Haue made themselues so strong: For with her death
That tydings came. With this she fell distrait,
And (her Attendants absent) swallow'd fire.
Cas. And dy'd so?
Bru. Even so.
Cas. O ye immortall Gods!

Enter Boy with Wine, and Tapers.

Bru. Speak no more of her. Giue me a bowl of wine,
In this I bury all vnkindnesse Cassius. Drinks.
Cas. My heart is thirsty for that Noble pledge.
Fill Lucius, till the Wine ore-swell the Cup:
I cannot drinke too much of Brutus loue.

Enter Titinius and Messala.

Brutus. Come in Titinius:
Welcome good Messala.
Now sit we close about this Taper heere,
And call in question our necessities.
Cas. Portius, art thou gone?
Bru. No more I pray you.
Messala, I haue heere receiued Letters,
That yong Octauius, and Marke Antony
Come downe vpon vs with a mighty power,
Bending their Expedition toward Philippi.

Mess. My selfe have Letters of the selfe-same Tenoure.
Bru. With what Addition.
Mes. That by proscription, and billes of Outlarie,
Octavius, Antony, and Lepidus,
Have put to death, an hundred Senators.
Bru. Therein our Letters do not well agree:
Mine speake of seventy Senators, that dy'de
By their proscriptions, Cicero being one.
Cass. Cicero one?
Messa. Cicero is dead, and by that order of proscription
Had you your Letters from your wife, my Lord?
Bru. No Messala.
Messa. Nor nothing in your Letters writ of her?
Bru. Nothing Messala.
Messa. That me thinkes is strange.
Bru. Why aske you?
Heare you ought of her, in yours?
Messa. No my Lord
Bru. Now as you are a Roman tell me true.
Messa. Then like a Roman, beare the truth I tell,
For certaine she is dead, and by strange manner.
Bru. Why farewell Portia. We must die Messala.
With medicating that she must dye once,
I have the patience to endure it now.
Messa. Even so great men, great losses should indure.
Cass. I have as much of this in Art as you,
But yet my Nature could not beare it so.
Bru. Well, to our worke alive. What do you thinke
Of marching to Philippi presently.
Cass. I do not thinke it good.
Bru. Your reason?
Cass. This it is:
'Tis better that the Enemie seeke vs,
So shall he waste his meanes, weary his Souldiers,
Doing himselfe offence, whil'st we lying still,
Are full of rest, defence, and nimblenesse
Bru. Good reasons must of force give place to better
The people 'twixt Philippi, and this ground
Do stand but in a force'd affection:
For they have grug'd vs Contribution.
The Enemy, marching along by them,
By them shall make a fuller number vp,
Come on refreshe, new added, and encourag'd:
From which advantage shall we cut him off.
If at Philippi we do face him there,
These people at our backe
Cass. Heare me good Brother.
Bru. Vnder your pardon. You must note beside,
That we have tride the vtmost of our Friends:
Our Legions are brim full, our cause is ripe.
The Enemy encreaseth every day,
We at the height, are readie to decline
There is a Tide in the affayres of men,
Which taken at the Flood, leades on to Fortune
Omitted, all the voyage of their life,
Is bound in Shallowes, and in Miseries
On such a full Sea are we now a-float,
And we must take the current when it serves,
Or loose our Ventures
Cass. Then with your will go on: wee'l along
Our selves, and meet them at Philippi
Bru. The deepe of night is crept vpon our talke,
And Nature must obey Necessitie,
Which we will niggard with a little rest:
There is no more to say
Cass. No more, good night,
Early to morrow will we rise, and hence.

Enter Lucius.

Bru. Lucius my Gowne: farewell good Messala,
Good night Titinius: Noble, Noble Cassius,
Good night, and good repose.
Cass. O my deere Brother:
This was an ill beginning of the night:
Never come such division 'tweene our soules:
Let it not Brutus.

Enter Lucius with the Gowne

Bru. Every thing is well.
Cass. Good night my Lord.
Bru. Good night good Brother.
Tit. Messa. Good night Lord Brutus.
Bru. Farwell every one. Exeunt
Give me the Gowne. Where is thy Instrument?
Luc. Heere in the Tent.
Bru. What, thou speak'st drowsily?
Poore knave I blame thee not, thou art ore-watch'd.
Call Claudio, and some other of my men,
Ile have them sleepe on Cushions in my Tent.
Luc. Varrus, and Claudio.

Enter Varrus and Claudio.

Var. Cals my Lord?
Bru. I pray you sirs, lye in my Tent and sleepe,
It may be I shall raise you by and by
On business to my Brother Cassius.
Var. So please you, we will stand,
And watch your pleasure.
Bru. I will it not have it so: Lye downe good sirs,
It may be I shall otherwise bethinke me.
Look't Lucius, heere's the booke I sought for so
I put it in the pocket of my Gowne.
Luc. I was sure your Lordship did not give it me.
Bru. Beare with me good Boy, I am much forgetfull.
Canst thou hold vp thy heavie eyes a-while,
And touch thy Instrument a strane or two
Luc. I my Lord, ah't please you.
Bru. It does my Boy:
I trouble thee too much, but thou art willing.
Luc. It is my duty Sir.
Brut. I should not urge thy duty past thy magnitude,
I know young bloods looke for a time of rest
Luc. I have slept my Lord already.
Bru. It was well done, and thou shalt sleepe again:
I will not hold thee long. If I do live,
I will be good to thee.

Musicke, and a Song.

This is a sleepy Tune: O Murd'rous slumber!
Layest thou thy Leaden Mace vpon my Boy,
That playes thee Musicke? Gentle knave good night:
I will not do thee so much wrong to wake thee:
If thou do'st nod, thou break'st thy Instrument,
Ile take it from thee, and (good Boy) good night
Let me see, let me see; is not the Leaf turn'd downe
Where I left reading? Heere it is I thinke.

Enter the Ghost of Caesar.

How ill this Taper burnes. Ha! Who comes heere?
I think it is the weakenesse of mine eyes
That shapes this monstrous Apparition.
It comes vpon me: Art thou any thing?
Art thou some God, some Angell, or some Diuell,
That mak'st my blood cold, and my haire to stare?
Speake to me, what thou art.
Ghost. Thy evill Spirit Brutus?
Bru. Why com'st thou?

Ghost.

Ghost. To tell thee thou shalt see me at Philippi.
Bru. Well: then I shall see thee againe?
Ghost. I, at Philippi.
Bru. Why I will see thee at Philippi then:
Now I haue taken heart, thou vanishest.
Ill Spirit, I would hold more talke with thee.
Boy, Lucius, Varrus, Claudio, Sirs: Awake:
Claudio.
Luc. The strings my Lord, are false.
Bru. He thinkes he shall is at his Instrument.
Lucius, awake.
Luc. My Lord.
Bru. Did'st thou dreame Lucius, that thou so cryedst out?
Luc. My Lord, I do not know that I did cry.
Bru. Yes that thou did'st: Did'st thou see any thing?
Luc. Nothing my Lord.
Bru. Sleepe againe Lucius: Sirra Claudio, Fellow, Thou: Awake.
Var. My Lord.
Clau. My Lord.
Bru. Why did you so cry out sirs, in your sleepe?
Both. Did we my Lord?
Bru. I: saw you any thing?
Var. No my Lord, I saw nothing.
Clau. Nor I my Lord.
Bru. Go, and commend me to my Brother Cassius: Bid him set on his Powres betimes before,
And we will follow.
Both. It shall be done my Lord. Exeunt

Actus Quintus.

Enter Octavius, Antony, and their Army.

Octa. Now Antony, our hopes are answered,
You said the Enemy would not come downe,
But keepe the Hilles and vpper Regions:
It proues not so: their battailes are at hand,
They mean to warne vs at Philippi heere:
Answering before we do demand of them.
Ant. Tut I am in their bosomes, and I know
Wherefore they do it: They could be content
To visit other places, and come downe
With fearefull bravery: thinking by this face
To fasten in our thoughts that they haue Courage;
But 'tis not so.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Prepare you Generals,
The Enemy comes on in gallant shew:
Their bloody signe of Battell is hung out,
And something to be done immediately.
Ant. Octavius, leade your Battaile softly on
Vpon the left hand of the even Field.
Octa. Vpon the right hand I, keepe thou the left.
Ant. Why do you crosse me in this exigent.
Octa. I do not crosse you: but I will do so. March.

Drum. Enter Brutus, Cassius, & their Army.

Bru. They stand, and would haue parley.
Cass. Stand fast Titinius, we must out and talke.
Octa. Mark Antony, shall we giue signe of Battaile?
Ant. No Cæsar, we will answer on their Charge.
Make forth, the Generals would haue some words.
Oct. Stirre not vntill the Signall.
Bru. Words before blowes: is it so Countrymen?
Octa. Not that we loue words better, as you do.
Bru. Good words are better then bad strokes Octavius.
Ant. In your bad strokes Brutus, you giue good words
Witnesse the hole you made in Cæsars heart,
Crying long live, Haile Cæsar.
Cass. Antony,
The posture of your blowes are yet vnknowne;
But for your words, they rob the Hibla Bees,
And leaue them Hony-lesse.
Ant. Not stinglesse too.
Bru. O yes, and soundlesse too:
For you haue stolne their buzzing Antony,
And very wisely threat before you sting.
Ant. Villaine: you did not so, when your vile daggers
Hackt one another in the sides of Cæsar:
You shew'd your teeth like Apes,
And fawn'd like Hounds,
And bow'd like Bondmen, kissing Cæsars feete;
Whil'st damned Casca, like a Curre, behinde
Strooke Cæsar on the necke. O you Flatterers.
Cass. Flatterers! Now Brutus thanke your selfe,
This tongue had not offended so to day,
If Cassius might haue rul'd.
Octa. Come, come, the cause. If arguing make vs sweat,
The proofe of it will turne to redder drops:
Looke, I draw a Sword against Conspirators,
When thinke you that the Sword goes vp againe?
Never till Cæsars three and thirtie wounds
Be well auenge'd; or till another Cæsar
Haue added slaughter to the Sword of Traitors.
Bru. Cæsar, thou canst not dye by Traitors hands,
Vnlesse thou bring'st them with thee.
Octa. So I hope:
I was not borne to dye on Brutus Sword.
Bru. O if thou wer't the Noblest of thy Strayne,
Yong-man, thou could'st not dye more honourable.
Cass. A peeuish School-boy, wanton of such Honor
Joyn'd with a Masker, and a Roueller.
Ant. Old Cassius still.
Octa. Come Antony: away:
Defiance Traitors, hurle we in your teeth.
If you dare fight to day, come to the Field;
If not, when you haue stomacke.

Exeunt Octavius, Antony, and Army

Cass. Why now blow winde, swell Billow,
And swimme Barke:
The Storme is vp, and all is on the hazard.
Bru. Ho Lucilius, heare, a word with you.

Lucilius and Messala stand forth.

Luc. My Lord.
Cass. Messala.
Mess. What says my Generall?
Cass. Messala, this is my Birth-day: as this very day
Was Cassius borne. Give me thy hand Messala:
Be thou my witnesse, that against my will
(As Pompey was) am I compell'd to set
Vpon one Battell all our Liberties.
You know, that I held Epicurus strong,
And his Opinion: Now I change my minde,
And partly credit things that do persuade.
Comming from Sardis, on our former Ensigne
Two mighty Eagles fell, and there they perch'd,
Gorging and feeding from our Souldiers hands,

Who

Who to Philippi heere conforted vs:
This Morning are they fled away, and gone,
And in their steeds, do Ravens, Crowes, and Kites
Fly ore our heads, and downward looke on vs
As we were sickely prey; their shadowes seeme
A Canopy most fatall, vnder which
Our Army lies, ready to giue vp the Ghost.
Messa. Believe not so.
Cassi. I but believe it partly,
For I am fresh of spirit, and resolu'd
To meete all perils, very constantly.
Bru. Even so Lucilius.
Cassi. Now most Noble Brutus,
The Gods to day stand friendly, that we may
Lovers in peace, leade on our dayes to age.
But since the affayres of men rests still incertaine,
Let's reason with the worst that may befall.
If we do lose this Battaile, then is this
The very last time we shall speake together:
What are you then determined to do?
Bru. Even by the rule of that Philosophy,
By which I did blame Cato, for the death
Which he did giue himselfe, I know not how:
But I do finde it Cowardly, and vile,
For feare of what might fall, so to preuent
The time of life, arming my selfe with patience,
To stay the prouidence of some high Powers,
That gouerne vs below.
Cassi. Then, if we loose this Battaile,
You are contented to be led in Triumph
Thorow the streets of Rome.
Bru. No Cassius, no:
Thinke not thou Noble Romane,
That euer Brutus will go bound to Rome,
He bears too great a minde. But this same day
Must end that worke, the Ides of March begun.
And whether we shall meete againe, I know not:
Therefore our euerlasting farewell take:
For ever, and for ever, farewell Cassius,
If we do meete againe, why we shall smile;
If not, why then this parting was well made.
Cassi. For ever, and for ever, farewell Brutus:
If we do meete againe, we'l smile indeede;
If not, 'tis true, this parting was well made.
Bru. Why then leade on. O that a man might know
The end of this dayes businesse, ere it come:
But it sufficeth, that the day will end,
And then the end is knowne. Come ho, away. Exeunt.

Alarum. Enter Brutus and Messala.

Bru. Ride, ride Messala, ride and giue these Billes
Vnto the Legions, on the other side.
Loud Alarum.
Let them set on at once: for I perceiue
But cold demeanor in Octauio's wing:
And sodaine push giues them the ouerthrow:
Ride, ride Messala, let them all come downe. Exeunt

Alarums. Enter Cassius and Titinius.

Cassi. O looke Titinius, looke, the Villaines flye:
My selfe haue to mine owne turn'd Enemy:
This Ensigne heere of mine was turning backe,
I slew the Coward, and did take it from him.
Tinin. O Cassius, Brutus gaue the word too early,
Who losing some advantage on Octauius,
Tooke it too eagerly: his Soldiers fell to spoyle,
Whilst we by Antony are all inclos'd.

Enter Pindarus.

Pind. Fly further off my Lord: flye further off,
Mark Antony: is in your Tents my Lord:
Flye therefore Noble Cassius, flye farre off.
Cassi. This Hill is farre enough. Looke, looke Titinius
Are those my Tents where I perceiue the fire?
Tit. They are, my Lord.
Cassi. Titinius, if thou louest me,
Mount thou my horse, and hide thy spurres in him,
Till he haue brought thee vp to yonder Troopes
And heere againe, that I may rest assur'd
Whether yond Troopes, are Friend or Enemy.
Tit. I will be heere againe, even with a thought. Exit.
Cassi. Go Pindarus, get higher on that hill,
My sight was euer thicke: regard Titinius,
And tell me what thou not'st about the Field.
This day I breathed first, Time is come round,
And where I did begin, there shall I end,
My life is run his compasse. Sirra, what newes?
Pind. Above. O my Lord.
Cassi. What newes?
Pind. Titinius is enclosed round about
With Horsemen, that make to him on the Spurre,
Yet he spurres on. Now they are almost on him:
Now Titinius. Now some light: O he lights too.
Hee's tane. Shout.
And hearke, they shout for ioy.
Cassi. Come downe, behold no more:
O Coward that I am, to liue so long.
To see my best Friend tane before my face.
Enter Pindarus.
Come hither sirrah: In Parthia did I take thee Prisoner,
And then I swore thee, saving of thy life,
That whatsoever I did bid thee do,
Thou should'st attempt it. Come now keepe thine oath,
Now be a Free-man, and with this good Sword
That ran through Caesars bowels, search this bosome.
Stand not to answer: Heere, take thou the Hilts,
And when my face is couer'd, as 'tis now,
Guide thou the Sword —— Caesar, thou art reuenge'd,
Euen with the Sword that kill'd thee.
Pin. So, I am free,
Yet would not so haue beene
Durst I haue done my will. O Cassius,
Farre from this Country Pindarus shall run,
Where never Roman shall take note of him.

Enter Titinius and Messala.

Messa. It is but change, Titinius: for Octauius
Is ouerthrowne by Noble Brutus power,
As Cassius Legions are by Antony.
Titin. These tydings will well comfort Cassius.
Messa. Where did you leaue him.
Titin. All disconsolate,
With Pindarus his Bondman, on this Hill.
Messa. Is not that he that lyes vpon the ground?
Titin. He lies not like the Living. O my heart!
Messa. Is not that hee?
Titin. No, this was he Messala,
But Cassius is no more. O setting Sunne:
As in thy red Rayes thou dost sinke to night;

So in his red blood Cæsius day is set,
The Sonne of Rome is set. Our day is gone,
Clouds, Drowrs, and Dangers come; our deeds are done:
Mistrust of my successe hath done this deed.
Messa. Mistrust of good successe hath done this deed.
O hateful Error, Melancholies Childe:
Why do'st thou shew to the apt thoughts of men
The things that are not? O Error soone conceiu'd,
Thou never com'st vnto a happy byrth,
But kil'st the Mother that engendred thee.
Tu. What Pindarus? Where art thou Pindarus?
Messa. Seeke him Titinius, whilst I go to meet
The Noble Brutus, thrusting this report
Into his eares; I may say thrusting it:
For piercing Steele, and Darts inuenomed,
Shall be as welcome to the eares of Brutus,
As tydings of this fight.
Tit. Hye you Messala,
And I will seeke for Pindarus the while:
Why did'st thou send me forth brauе Cassius?
Did I not meet thy Friends, and did not they Put on my Browes this wreath of Victorie,
And bid me giue it thee? Did'st thou not heare their Alas, thou hast misconstrued every thing. (shouts
But hold thee, take this Garland on thy Brow,
Thy Brutus bid me giue it thee, and I
Will do his bidding. Brutus, come apace,
And see how I regarded Caius Cassius:
By your leaue Gods: This is a Romans part,
Come Cassius Sword, and finde Titinius hart Dies

Alarum. Enter Brutus, Messala, young Cato, Strato, Volumnius, and Lucilius.

Bru. Where, where Messala, doth his body lye?
Messa. Loe yonder, and Titinius mourning it.
Bru. Titinius face is vpward.
Cato He is slaine
Bru. O Iulius Cæsar, thou art mighty yet,
Thy Spirit walkes abroad, and turnes our Swords
In our owne proper Entrailes. Low Alarums.
Cato. Brave Titinius,
Looke where he haue not crown'd dead Cassius.
Bru. Are yet two Romans being such as these?
The last of all the Romans, fat thee well.
It is impossible, that ever Rome
Should breed thy fellow. Friends I owe mo teares
To this dead man, then you shall see me pay.
I shall finde time, Cassius: I shall finde time.
Come therefore, and to Thasos send his body,
His Funerals shall not be in our Campe,
Lest it discomfort vs. Lucillius come,
And come yong Cato, let vs to the Field,
Labio and Flauio set our Battaile on:
'Tis three a clocke, and Romans yet ere night,
We shall try Fortune in a second fight. Exeunt

Alarum. Enter Brutus, Messala, Cato, Lucillius, and Flauius.

Bru. Yet Country-men. O yet hold vp your heads.
Cato What Bastard doth not? Who will go with me?
I will proclaime my name about the Field.
I am the Sonne of Marcus Cato, hoe.
A Foe to Tyrants, and my Countries Friend.
I am the Sonne of Marcus Cato, hoe
Enter Souldiers and fight.
And I am Brutus, Marcus Brutus, I,
Brutus my Countries Friend: Know me for Brutus.
Lou. O yong and Noble Cato, art thou downe?
Why now thou dyest, as brauely as Titinius,
And may'st be honour'd, being Cato's Sonne.
Sold. Yeeld, or thou dyest.
Lou. Onely I yeeld to dye:
There is so much, that thou wilt kill me straight:
Kill Brutus, and be honour'd in his death.
Sold. We must not: a Noble Prisoner.

Enter Antony.

2. Sold. Roome hoe: tell Antony, Brutus is tane.
1. Sold. I le tell thee newes. Heere comes the Generall,
Brutus is tane, Brutus is tane my Lord.
Ant Where is hee?
Lou Safe Antony, Brutus is safe enough:
I dare assure thee, that no Enemy
Shall ever take aliue the Noble Brutus:
The Gods defend him from so great a shame,
When you do finde him, or aliue, or dead,
He will be found like Brutus, like himselfe.
Ant. This is not Brutus friend, but I assure you,
A prize no lesse in worth; keepe this man safe,
Give him all kindnesse. I had rather haue
Such men my Friends, then Enemies. Go on,
And see where Brutus be aliue or dead,
And bring vs word, vnto Octauius Tent:
How every thing is chanc'd Exeunt.

Enter Brutus, Dardanius, Clitus, Strato, and Volumnius.

Brut. Come poore remnants of friends, rest on this Rocke.
Cli. Statilius shew'd the Torch-light, but my Lord
He came not backe: he is or tane, or slaine.
Brut. Sit thee downe, Clitus: slaying is the word,
It is a deed in fashion. Hearke thee, Clitus.
Cli. What I, my Lord? No, not for all the World.
Brut. Peace then, no words.
Cli. I le rather kill my-selfe.
Brut Hearke thee, Dardanius.
Dard. Shall I doe such a deed?
Cli. O Dardanius.
Dard. O Clitus.
Cli. What ill request did Brutus make to thee?
Dard. To kill him, Clitus: looke he meditates.
Cli. Now is that Noble Vessell full of griefe,
That it runnes ouer even at his eyes.
Brut. Come hither, good Volumnius, list a word.
Volum. What says my Lord?
Brut. Why this, Volumnius:
The Ghost of Cæsar hath appear'd to me
Two seuerall times by Night: at Sardis, once;
And this last Night, here in Philippi fields:
I know my houre is come
Volum. Not so, my Lord.
Brut Nay, I am sure it is, Volumnius.
Thou seest the World, Volumnius, how it goes,
Our Enemies haue beat vs to the Pit: Low Alarums.
It is more worthy, to leape in our selves,
Then tarry till they push vs. Good Volumnius,
Thou know'st, that we two went to Schoole together:
Even for that our loue of old, I prethee
Hold thou thy Sword Hilts, whilest I runne on it.
Vol. That's not an Office for a friend, my Lord.
Alarum still.

Cly. Fly, fye my Lord, there is no tarryng heere.
Bru. Farewell to you, and you, and you Volumnius.
Strato, thou hast bin all this while asleepe:
Farewell to thee, to Strato, Countrymen:
My heart doth ioy, that yet in all my life,
I found no man, but he was true to me.
I shall haue glory by this loosing day
More then Octauius, and Marke Antony,
By this vile Conquest shall attaine vnto.
So fare you well at once, for Brutus tongue
Hath almost ended his liues History.
Night hangs vpon mine eyes, my Bones would rest,
That haue but labour'd, to attaine this houre.

Alarum. Cry within, Fly, fly, fly.
Cly. Fly my Lord, fye.
Bru. Hence: I will follow.
I prythee Strato, stay thou by thy Lord,
Thou art a Fellow of a good respect:
Thy life hath had some smatch of Honor in it,
Hold then my Sword, and turne away thy face,
While I do run vpon it. Wilt thou Strato?
Stra. Give me your hand first. Fare you wel my Lord.
Bru. Farewell good Strato. ——Cæsar, now be still
I kill'd not thee with halfe so good a will. Dyes.

Alarum. Retreat. Enter Antony, Octauius, Messala, Lucillius, and the Army.
Octa. What man is that?
Messa. My Masters man. Strato, where is thy Master?
Stra. Free from the Bondage you are in Messala,
The Conquerors can but make a fire of him:
For Brutus onely overcame himselfe,
And no man else hath Honor by his death.
Lucil. So Brutus should be found. I thank thee Brutus
That thou hast proo'd Lucillius saying true.
Octa. All that serv'd Brutus, I will entertaine them.
Fellow, wilt thou bestow thy time with me?
Stra. I, if Messala will preferre me to you.
Octa. Do so, good Messala.
Messa. How dyed my Master Strato?
Stra. I held the Sword, and he did run on it.
Messa. Octauius, then take him to follow thee,
That did the latest service to my Master
Ant. This was the Noblest Romen of them all:
All the Conspirators save onely he,
Did that they did, in envy of great Cæsar:
He, onely in a generall honest thought,
And common good to all, made one of them.
His life was gentle, and the Elements
So mixt in him, that Nature might stand vp,
And say to all the world; This was a man.
Octa. According to his Vertue, let vs vse him
Withall Respect, and Rites of Buriall.
Within my Tent his bones to night shall ly,
Most like a Souldier ordered Honourably:
So call the Field to rest, and let's away,
To part the glories of this happy day. Exeunt omnes.

FINIS.

THE TRAGEDIE OF MACBETH.

Actus Primus. Scæna Prima.

Thunder and Lightning. Enter three Witches.

1. When shall we three meet againe?
In Thunder, Lightning, or in Raine?
2. When the Hurlye-burlye's done,
When the Battaile's lost, and wonne.
3. That will be ere the set of Sonne.
1. Where the place?
2. Vpon the Heath.
3. There to meet with Macbeth
1. I come, Gray-Malkin.
All. Paddock calls anon: faire is foule, and foule is faire,
Hover through the fogge and filthie ayre. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Alarum within. Enter King Malcome, Donalbaine, Lennox, with attendants, meeting a bleeding Captaine.

King. What bloody man is that? he can report,
As seemeth by his plight, of the Reuolt
The newest state.
Mal. This is the Sergeant,
Who like a good and hardie Souldier fought
'Gainst my Captiuitie: Haile braue friend;
Say to the King, the knowledge of the Broyle,
As thou dids't leaue it.
Cap. Doubtfull it stood,
As two spent Swimmers, that doe cling together,
And choake their Art. The merciless Macdonwald
(Worthie to be a Rebell, for to that
The multiplying Villanies of Nature
Doe swarme vpon him) from the Westerne Iles
Of Kernes and Gallowgrosses is supply'd,
And Fortune on his damned Quarry smiling,
Shew'd like a Rebells Whore: but all's too weake:
For braue Macbeth (well he deserues that Name)
Disdayning Fortune, with his brandisht Steele,
Which smoak'd with bloody execution
(Like Valours Minion) carues out his passage,
Till he faced the Slaue:
Which neu'r shookt hands, nor bad farwell to him,
Till he vnseam'd him from the Nauie toth' Chops,
And fix'd his Head vpon our Battlements.

King. O valiant Cousin, worthy Gentleman.
Cap. As whence the Sunne gins his reflection,
Shipwracking Stormes, and direfull Thunders
So from that Spring, whence comfort seem'd to come,
Discomfort swells: Marke King of Scotland, marke,
No sooner Justice had, with Valour arm'd,
Compell'd these skipping Kernes to trust their heeles,
But the Norweyan Lord, surueying vantage,
With furbisht Armes, and new supplyes of men,
Began a fresh assault.
King. Dismay'd not this our Captaines, Macbeth and Banquo?
Cap. Yes, as Sparrowes, Eagles;
Or the Hare, the Lyon:
If I say sooth, I must report they were
As Cannons ouer-charg'd with double Cracks,
So they doubly redoubled strokes vpon the Foe:
Except they meant to bathe in reeking Wounds,
Or memorize another Golgotha,
I cannot tell but I am faint,
My Gashes cry for helpe.
King. So well thy words become thee, as thy wounds,
They smack of Honor both: Goe get him Surgeons.

Enter Rosse and Angus.

Who comes here?
Mal. The worthy Thane of Rosse.
Lenox. What a haste looks through his eyes?
So should he looke, that seemes to speake things strange.
Rosse God save the King.
King. Whence cam'st thou, worthy Thane?
Rosse. From Fife, great King,
Where the Norweyan Banners flout the Skie,
And fanne our people cold.
Norway himselfe, with terrible numbers,
Assisted by that most disloyall Traytor,
The Thane of Cawdor, began a dismall Conflict,
Till that Bellona's Bridegroome, lapt in proofe,
Confronted him with self-comparisons,
Point against Point, rebellious Arme 'gainst Arme,
Curbing his lauish spirit: and to conclude,
The Victorie fell on vs.
King. Great happinesse.
Rosse. That now Sueno, the Norweyes King,
Craues composition
Nor would we deigne him buriall of his men,
Till he disbursed, at Saint Colmes inch,
Ten thousand Dollars, to our generall vse.

King. No

King. No more that Thane of Cawdor shall deceiue
Our Bosome interest: Goe pronounce his present death,
And with his former Title greet Macbeth.
Rosse. Ile see it done.
King. What he hath lost, Noble Macbeth hath wonne.
Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Thunder. Enter the three Witches.

1. Where hast thou beene, Sister?
2. Killing Swine.
3. Sister, where thou?
1. A Saylors Wife had Chestnuts in her Lappe,
And mounche, & mounche, and mounche:
Give me, quoth I.
Aroynt thee, Witch, the rumpe-fed Ronyon cryes.
Her Husband's to Aleppo gone, Master o'th' Tyger:
But in a Syue Ile thither sayle,
And like a Rat without a tayle,
Ile do, Ile do, and Ile do.
2. Ile giue thee a Winde.
1. Th'art kinde.
3. And I another.
1. I my selfe haue all the other,
And the very Ports they blow,
All the Quarters that they know,
I'th' Ship-mans Card.
Ile dreyne him drie as Hay:
Sleepe shall neyther Night nor Day
Hang vpon his Pent-house Lid:
He shall liue a man forbid:
Weariesome Nights, nine times nine,
Shall he dwindle, peake, and pine:
Though his Barke cannot be lost,
Yet it shall be Tempest-tost.
Looke what I haue.
2. Shew me, shew me.
1. Here I haue a Pilots Thumbe,
Wrack'd, as homeward he did come. Drum within.
3. A Drumme, a Drumme:
Macbeth doth come.
All. The weyward Sisters, hand in hand,
Posters of the Sea and Land,
Thus doe goe, about, about,
Thrice to thine, and thrice to mine,
And thrice againe, to make vp nine.
Peace, the Charme's wound vp.

Enter Macbeth and Banquo.

Mach. So foule and faire a day I haue not seene.
Banquo. How farre is't call'd to Soris? What are these,
So wither'd, and so wilde in their attyre,
That looke not like th'Inhabitants o'th'Earth,
And yet are on't? Liue you, or are you aught
That man may question? you seeme to vnderstand me,
By each at once her choppie finger laying
Vpon her skinnie Lips: you should be Women,
And yet your Beards forbid me to interprete
That you are so.
Mac. Speake if you can: what are you?
1. All haile Macbeth, haile to thee Thane of Glamis
2. All haile Macbeth, haile to thee Thane of Cawdor.
3. All haile Macbeth, that shalt be King hereafter.
Banq. Good Sir, why doe you start, and seeme to feare
Things that doe sound so faire? i'th' name of truth
Are ye fantasticall, or that indeed
Which outwardly ye shew? My Noble Partner
You greet with present Grace, and great prediction
Of Noble hauing, and of Royall hope.
That he seemes wrapt withall: to me you speake not.
If you can looke into the Seedes of Time,
And say, which Graine will grow, and which will not,
Speake then to me, who neyther begge, nor feare
Your fauors, nor your hate.
1. Hayle.
2. Hayle.
3. Hayle.
1. Lesser then Macbeth, and greater.
2. Not so happy, yet much happyer.
3. Thou shalt get Kings, though thou be none:
So all haile Macbeth, and Banquo
1. Banquo, and Macbeth, all haile.
Mach. Stay you imperfect Speakers, tell me more.
By Sinells death, I know I am Thane of Glamis,
But how, of Cawdor? the Thane of Cawdor liues
A prosperous Gentleman: And to be King,
Stands not within the prospect of belecfe,
No more then to be Cawdor. Say from whence
You owe this strange Intelligence, or why
Vpon this blasted Heath you stop our way
With such Prophetique greeting?
Speake, I charge you Witches vanish.
Banq. The Earth hath bubbles, as the Water has,
And these are of them: whither are they vanish'd?
Mach. Into the Ayre, and what seem'd corporall,
Melted, as breath into the Winde.
Would they had stay'd
Banq. Were such things here, as we doe speake about?
Or haue we eaten on the insane Root,
That takes the Reason Prisoner?
Mach. Your Children shall be Kings.
Banq. You shall be King.
Mach. And Thane of Cawdor too: weere it not so?
Banq. Toth' selfe-same tune and words. who's here?

Enter Rosse and Angus.

Rosse. The King hath happily receiu'd, Macbeth,
The newes of thy successe, and when he reades
Thy personall Venture in the Rebels fight,
His Wonders and his Praises doe contend,
Which should be thine, or his: silenc'd with that,
In viewing o're the rest o'th'selfe-same day,
He findes thee in the stout Norweyan Ranks,
Nothing afeard of what thy selfe dost make
Strange Images of death, as thick as Tale
Can post with post, and every one did bearc
Thy praises in his Kingdomes great defence,
And pow'd them downe before him.
Ang. Wee are sent,
To giue thee from our Royall Master thanks,
Onely to herald thee into his sight,
Not pay thee.
Rosse. And for an earnest of a greater Honor,
He bad me, from him, call thee Thane of Cawdor

In which addition, hence-forth worthy Thane,
For it is mine.

Banq. What, can the Deuill speake true?

Mach. The Thane of Cawdor liues:
Why doe you dresse me in borrowed Robes?

Ang. Who was the Thane, liues yet,
But vnder heauie Iudgement bears that Life,
Which he deserues to loose
Whether he was combin'd with those of Norway,
Or did lyne the Rebell: with hidden helpe,
And vantage; or that with both he labour'd
In his Countreyes wracke, I know not
But Treasons Capitall, confess'd, and proue'd,
Haue overthrowne him.

Mach. Glamys, and Thane of Cawdor:
The greatest is behinde. Thankes for your paines,
Doe you not hope your Children shall be Kings,
When those that gaue the Thane of Cawdor to me,
Promis'd no lesse to them.

Banq. That trusted home,
Might yet enkindle you vnto the Crowne,
Besides the Thane of Cawdor. But 'tis strange:
And oftentimes, to winne vs to our harme,
The Instruments of Darknesse tell vs Truths,
Winne vs with honest Trifles, to betray's
In deepest consequence.
Cousins, a word, I pray you.

Mach. Two Truths are told,
As happy Prologues to the swelling Act
Of the Imperiall Theame. I thanke you Gentlemen.
This supernaturall solliciting
Cannot be ill; cannot be good.
If ill? why hath it given me earnest of successe,
Commencing in a Truth? I am Thane of Cawdor.
If good? why doe I yeeld to that suggestion,
Whose horrid Image doth vnfixe my Heire,
And make my seated Heart knock at my Ribbes,
Against the vse of Nature? Present Feares
Are lesse then horrible Imaginings:
My Thought, whose Murther yet is but fantasticall,
Shakes so my single state of Man,
That Function is smother'd in surmise,
And nothing is, but what is not.

Banq. Looke how our Partner's rapt.

Mach. If Chance will haue me King,
Why Chance may Crowne me,
Without my stire.

Banq. New Honors come vpon him
Like our strange Garments, cleave not to their mould,
But with the aid of vse.

Mach. Come what come may,
Time, and the Houre, runs through the roughest Day.

Banq. Worthy Macbeth, we stay vpon your leysure.

Mach. Giue me your fauour.
My dull Brayne was wrought with things forgotten.
Kinde Gentlemen, your paines are registred,
Where every day I turne the Leafe,
To reade them.
Let vs toward the King: thinke vpon
What hath chanc'd: and at more time,
The Interim hauing weigh'd it, let vs speake
Our free Hearts each to other.

Banq. Very gladly.

Mach. Till then enough:
Come friends. Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Flourish. Enter King, Lennox, Malcolme, Donalbaine, and Attendants.

King. Is execution done on Cawdor?
Or not those in Commission yet return'd?

Mal. My Liege, they are not yet come back.
But I haue spoke with one that saw him die:
Who did report, that very frankly hee
Confess'd his Treasons, implor'd your Highnesse Pardon.
And set forth a deepe Repentance:
Nothing in his Life became him,
Like the leaving it. Hee dy'de,
As one that had beene studied in his death,
To throw away the dearest thing he ow'd,
As 'twere a carelesse Trifle.

King. There's no Art,
To finde the Mindes construction in the Face:
He was a Gentleman, on whom I built
An absolute Trust.

Enter Macbeth, Banquo, Rosse, and Angus.

O worthyest Cousin,
The sinne of my Ingratitude even now
Was heauie on me. Thou art so farre before,
That swiftest Wing of Recompence is slow,
To overtake thee. Would thou hadst lesse deserv'd,
That the proportion both of thanks, and payment,
Might haue been mine: only I haue left to say,
More is thy due, then more then all can pay.

Mach. The seruice, and the loyalty I owe,
In doing it, payes it selfe.
Your Highnesse part, is to receiue our Duties:
And our Duties are to your Throne, and State,
Children, and Seruants; which doe but what they should,
By doing every thing safe toward your Loue
And Honor.

King. Welcome hither:
I haue begun to plant thee, and will labour
To make thee full of growing. Noble Banquo,
That hast no lesse deserv'd, nor must be knowne
No lesse to haue done so: Let me enfold thee,
And hold thee to my Heart.

Banq. There if I grow,
The Harvest is your owne.

King. My plenteous Ioyes,
Wanton in fulnesse, seeke to hide themselues
In drops of sorrow. Sonnes, Kinsmen, Thanes,
And you whose places are the nearest, know,
We will establish our Estate vpon
Our eldest, Malcolme, whom we name hereafter,
The Prince of Cumberland: which Honor must
Not vnaccompanied, inuest him only,
But signes of Nobleness, like Starres, shall shine
On all deservers. From hence to Enuernes,
And bindes vs further to you.

Mach. The Rest is Labor, which is not vs'd for you:
Ile be my selfe the Herbinger, and make ioyfull
The hearing of my Wife, with your approach:
So humbly take my leaue.

King. My worthy Cawdor.

Mach. The Prince of Cumberland: that is a step,
On which I must fall downe, or else o're-leape,

For in my way it lyes. Starres hide your fires,
Let not Light see my black and deepe desires:
The Eye winke at the Hand; yet let that bee,
Which the Eye fears, when it is done to see. Exit.

King. True, worthy Banquo: he is full so valiant,
And in his commendations, I am fed:
It is a Banquet to me. Let's after him,
Whose care is gone before, to bid vs welcome:
It is a peerelesse Kinsman. Flourish. Exeunt.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Macbeths wife alone with a Letter.

Lady. They met me in the day of success: and I have learn'd by the perfect'st report, they have more in them, then mortall knowledge. When I burnt in desire to question them further, they made themselves Ayre, into which they vanish'd. Whiles I stood rapt in the wonder of it, came Messenger from the King, who all-hail'd me Thane of Cawdor, by which Title before, these weyward Sisters saluted me, and referr'd me to the coming on of time, with hails King that shalt be. This have I thought good to deliver thee (my dearest Partner of Greatnesse) that thou might'st not loose the dues of rejoycing by being ignorant of what Greatnesse is promis'd thee. Lay it to thy heart, and farewell.

Glamys thou art, and Cawdor, and shalt be
What thou art promis'd: yet doe I feare thy Nature,
It is too full o'th' Milke of humane kindnesse,
To catch the nearest way. Thou would'st be great,
Art not without Ambition, but without
The illnesse should attend it. What thou would'st highly,
That would'st thou holily: would'st not play false,
And yet would'st wrongly winne.
Thould'st haue, great Glamys, that which cryes,
Thus thou must doe, if thou haue it;
And that which rather thou do'st feare to doe,
Then wishest should be vndone. High thee hither,
That I may powre my Spirits in thine Eare,
And chastise with the valour of my Tongue
All that impedes thee from the Golden Round,
Which Fate and Metaphysicall ayde doth seeme
To haue thee crown'd withall. Enter Messenger.
What is your tidings?

Mess. The King comes here to Night.

Lady. Thou rt mad to say it.
Is not thy Master with him? who, were't so,
Would haue inform'd for preparation.

Mess. So please you, it is true: our Thane is comming:
One of my fellowes had the speed of him;
Who almost dead for breath, had scarcely more
Then would make vp his Message.

Lady. Giue him tending,
He brings great newes. Exit Messenger.
The Raven himselfe is hoarse,
That croaks the fatall entrance of Duncan
Vnder my Battlements. Come you Spirits,
That tend on mortall thoughts, vnsex me here,
And fill me from the Crowne to the Toe, top-full
Of direst Cruelties: make thick my blood,
Stop vp th'access, and passage to Remorse,
That no compunctious visitings of Nature
Shake my fell purpose, nor keepe peace between Th'effect, and it. Come to my Women's Breasts,
And take my Milke for Gall, you murth'ring Ministers,
Where-ever, in your sightless substances,
You wait on Nature's Mischiefe. Come thick Night,
And pall thee in the dunnest smoake of Hell,
That my keene Knife see not the Wound it makes,
Nor Heaven peepe through the Blanket of the darke,
To cry, hold, hold. Enter Macbeth.
Great Glamys, worthy Cawdor,
Greater then both, by the all-haile hereafter,
Thy Letters haue transported me beyond
This ignorant present, and I feele now
The future in the instant.

Mach. My dearest Loue,
Duncan comes here to Night.

Lady. And when goes hence?

Mach. To morrow, as he purposes.

Lady. O never,
Shall Sunne that Morrow see.
Your Face, my Thane, is as a Booke, where men
May reade strange matters, to beguile the time.
Looke like the time, beare welcome in your Eye,
Your Hand, your Tongue: looke like th'innocent flower,
But be the Serpent vnder't. He that's comming,
Must be prouided for: and you shall put
This Nights great Business into my dispatch,
Which shall to all our Nights, and Days to come,
Give solely soueraigne sway, and Mastery.

Mach. We will speake further.

Lady. Onely looke vp cleare:
To alter fauor, ever is to feare:
Leaue all the rest to me. Exeunt.

Scena Sexta.

Hoboyes, and Torches. Enter King, Malcolme, Donalbaine, Banquo, Lenox, Macduff, Rosse, Angus, and Attendants.

King. This Castle hath a pleasant seat,
The ayre nimbly and sweetly recommends it selfe
Vnto our gentle senses.

Bang. This Guest of Summer,
The Temple-haunting Martlet does approue,
By his loued Mansionry, that the Heauens breath
Smells wooingly here: no Iutty frieze,
Buttrice, nor Coigne of Vantage, but this Bird
Hath made his pendant Bed, and procreant Cradle,
Where they must breed, and haue: I haue observ'd
The ayre is delicate. Enter Lady.

King. See, see, our honor'd Hostesse:
The Loue that followes vs, sometime is our trouble,
Which still we thanke as Loue. Herein I teach you,
How you shall bid God-ylld vs for your paines,
And thanke vs for your trouble.

Lady. All our services,
In every point twice done, and then done double,
Were poore, and single Business, to contend
Against those Honors deepe, and broad,
Wherewith your Maiestie loades our House:
For those of old, and the late Dignities,
Heap'd vp to them, we rest your Seruitors.

King. Where's the Thane of Cawdor?
We coutnt him at the heeles, and had a purpose
To be his Purveyor: But he rides well,
And his great Loue (sharpe as his Spurre) hath holp him
To his home before vs: Faire and Noble Hostesse
We are your guest to night.
La. Your Seruants ever,
Haue theirs, themselues, and what is theirs in compt,
To make their Audit at your Highnesse pleasure,
Still to returne your owne.
King. Give me your hand:
Conduct me to mine Host we loue him highly,
And shall continue our Graces towards him.
By your leaue Hostesse. Exeunt

Scena Septima.

Hoboyes. Torches.
Enter a Sewer, and diuers Seruants with Dishes and Seruice ouer the Stage. Then enter Macbeth.

Mach. If it were done, when 'tis done, then 'twere well,
It were done quickly: If th'Assassination
Could trammell vp the Consequence, and catch
With his surcease, Successe: that but this blow
Might be the be all, and the end all. Heere,
But here, vpon this Bankes and Schoolse of time,
We'd iumpe the life to come. But in these Cases,
We still haue iudgement here, that we but teach
Bloody Instructions, which being taught, returne
To plague th'Inuentor. This even-handed Iustice
Commends th'Ingredience of our poyson'd Chalice
To our owne lips. Hee's heere in double trust;
First, as I am his Kinsman, and his Subiect,
Strong both against the Deed: Then, as his Host,
Who should against his Murtherer shut the doore,
Not beare the knife my selfe. Besides, this Duncan
Hath borne his Faculties so meeke; hath bin
So cleare in his great Office, that his Vertues
Will pleade like Angels, Trumpet-tongu'd against
The deepe damnation of his taking off:
And Pitty, like a naked New-borne-Babe,
Striding the blast, or Heauens Cherubin, hott'd
Vpon the sightlesse Curriers of the Ayre,
Shall blow the horrid deed in every eye,
That teares shall drowne the winde. I haue no Spurre
To pricke the sides of my intent, but only
Vaulting Ambition, which ore-leapes itselfe,
And falles on th'other. Enter Lady.
How now? What Newes?
La. He has almost supt: why haue you left the chamber?
Mac. Hath he ask'd for me?
La. Know you not, he has?
Mac. We will proceed no further in this Business:
He hath Honour'd me of late, and I haue bought
Golden Opinions from all sorts of people,
Which would be worne now in their newest gloss,
Not cast aside so soone.
La. Was the hope drunke,
Wherein you dress't your selfe? Hath it slept since?
And wakes it now to looke so greene, and pale,
At what it did so freely? From this time,
Such I account thy loue. Art thou affeer'd
To be the same in thine owne Act, and Valour,
As thou art in desire? Would'st thou haue that
Which thou esteem'st the Ornament of Life,
And liue a Coward in thine owne Estimate?
Letting I dare not, wait vpon I would,
Like the poore Cat i'th'Addage.
Mach. Prythee peace:
I dare do all that may become a man,
Who dares no more, is none.
La. What Beast was't then
That made you breake this enterprise to me?
When you durst do it, then you were a man:
And to be more then what you were, you would
Be so much more the man. Nor time, nor place
Did then adhere, and yet you would make both:
They haue made themselues, and that their fitnesse now
Do's vnmake you. I haue given Suck, and know
How tender 'tis to loue the Babe that milkes me,
I would, while it was smiling in my Face,
Haue pluckt my Nipple from his Boneless Gummes,
And dashe the Braines out, had I so sworne
As you haue done to this.
Mach. If we should fail?
Lady. We fail?
But screw your courage to the sticking place,
And we'le not fayle: when Duncan is asleepe,
(Whereto the rather shall his days hard Iourney Soundly inuite him) his two Chamberlaines
Will I with Wine, and Wassell, so conuince,
That Memorie, the Warder of the Braine,
Shall be a Fume, and the Receit of Reason
A Limbeck only: when in Swinish sleepe,
Their drenched Natures lyes as in a Death,
What cannot you and I performe vpon
Th'vnguarded Duncan? What not put vpon
His spungie Officers? who shall beare the guilt
Of our great quell.
Mach. Bring forth Men-Children onely;
For thy vndaunted Mettle should compose
Nothing but Males. Will it not be receiu'd,
When we haue mark'd with blood those sleepie two
Of his owne Chamber, and vs'd their very Daggers
That they haue don't?
Lady. Who dares receiue it other,
As we shall make our Griefes and Clamor sore,
Vpon his Death?
Mach. I am settled, and bend vp
Each corporall Agent to this terrible Feat.
Away, and mock the time with fairest show,
False Face must hide what the false Heart doth know.
Exeunt.

Actus Secundus. Scena Prima.

Enter Banquo, and Fleance, with a Torch before him.

Banq. How goes the Night, Boy?
Fleance. The Moone is downe: I haue not heard the Clock.
Banq. And she goes downe at Twelue.
Fleance. I take't, 'tis later, Sir.
Banq. Hold, take my Sword:
There's Husbandry in Heauen,
Their Candles are all out: take thee that too.

A heauie Summons lyes like Lead vpon me,
And yet I would not sleepe:
Merciful Powers, restraine in me the cursed thoughts
That Nature giues way to in repose.

Enter Macbeth, and a Seruant with a Torch.

Giue me my Sword: who's there?
Mach. A Friend.
Banq. What Sir, not yet at rest? the King's a bed.
He hath beene in vnusuall Pleasure,
And sent forth great Largesse to your Officers.
This Diamond he greetes your Wife withall,
By the name of most kind Hostesse.
And shut vp in measurelesse content.
Mac. Being vnprepar'd,
Our will became the seruant to defect,
Which else should free hase wrought.
Banq. All's well.
I dreamt last Night of the three weyward Sisters.
To you they haue shew'd some truth.
Mach. I thinke not of them.
Yet when we can entreat an houre to serue,
We would spend it in some words vpon that Busineſſe
If you would graunt the time.
Banq. At your kind'ſt leysure.
Mach. If you shall cleaue to my consent,
When 'tis, it shall make Honor for you.
Banq. So I lose none,
In seeking to augment it, but still keepe
My Bosome franchis'd, and Allegeance cleare,
I shall be counsail'd.
Mach. Good repose the while.
Banq. Thankes Sir: the like to you. Exit Banquo.
Mach Goe bid thy Mistresse, when my drinke is ready
She strike vpon the Bell. Get thee to bed. Exit.
Is this a Dagger, which I see before me,
The Handle toward my Hand? Come, let me clutch thee
I haue thee not, and yet I see thee still.
Art thou not fatall Vision, sensible
To feeling, as to sight? or art thou but
A Dagger of the Minde, a false Creation,
Proceeding from the heat-oppressed Braine?
I see thee yet, in forme as palpable,
As this which now I draw.
Thou marshall'ſt me the way that I was going,
And such an Instrument I was to vse.
Mine Eyes are made the fooles o'th'other Sences,
Or else worth all the rest: I see thee still;
And on thy Blade, and Dudgeon, Gouts of Blood,
Which was not so before. There's no such thing:
It is the bloody Busineſſe, which informes
Thus to mine Eyes. Now o're the one halfe World
Nature seemes dead, and wicked Dreames abuse
The Curtain'd sleepe: Witchcraft celebrates
Pale Hecates Offrings: and wither'd Murther,
Alarum'd by his Centinell, the Wolfe,
Whose howle's his Watch, thus with his stealthy pace,
With Tarquins rauishing sides, towards his designe
Moues like a Ghost. Thou sowre and firme-set Earth
Heare not my steps, which they may walke, for feare
Thy very stones prate of my where-about,
And take the present horror from the time,
Which now suits with it. Whiles I threat, he liues:
Words to the heat of deedes too cold breath giues.

A Bell rings.

I goe, and it is done: the Bell inuites me.
Heare it not, Duncan, for it is a Knell,
That summons thee to Heauen, or to Hell. Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Lady.

La. That which hath made them drunk, hath made me bold:
What hath quench'd them, hath given me fire.
Hearke, peace: it was the Owle that shriek'd,
The fatall Bell-man, which gives the stern'ſt good-night.
He is about it, the Doores are open:
And the surfeited Groomes doe mock their charge
With Snores. I haue drugg'd their Possets,
That Death and Nature doe contend about them,
Whether they liue, or dye.

Enter Macbeth

Mach Who's there? what hoa?
Lady. Alack, I am afraid they haue awak'd,
And 'tis not done: th'attempt, and not the deed,
Confounds vs: hearke: I lay o'their Daggers ready,
He could not misse 'em. Had he not resembled
My Father as he slept, I had done't.
My Husband?
Mach. I haue done the deed:
Didst thou not heare a noyse?
Lady. I heard the Owle schreame, and the Crickets cry.
Did not you speake?
Mach. When?
Lady Now.
Mach. As I descended?
Lady. I.
Mach. Hearke, who lyes i'th' second Chamber?
Lady. Donalbane.
Mac. This is a sorry sight.
Lady. A foolish thought, to say a sorry sight.
Mach. There's one did laugh in's sleepe,
And one cry'd Murther, that they did wake each other:
I stood, and heard them: But they did say their Prayers,
And addrest them againe to sleepe.
Lady. There are two lodg'd together.
Mach. One cry'd God blesse vs, and Amen the other,
As they had seene me with these Hangmans hands:
Listning their feare, I could not say Amen,
When they did say God blesse vs
Lady. Consider it not so deepely
Mac. But wherefore could not I pronounce Amen?
I had most need of Blessing, and Amen stuck in my throat.
Lady. These deeds must not be thought
After these wayes: so, it will make vs mad.
Mach Methought I heard a voyce cry, Sleep no more:
Macbeth does murther Sleepe, the innocent Sleepe,
Sleepe that knits vp the rauel'd Sleeue of Care,
The death of each dayes Life, sore Labors Bath,
Balme of hurt Mindes, great Natures second Course,
Chiefe nourisher in Life's Feast
Lady What doe you meane?
Mach. Still it cry'd, Sleepe no more to all the House:
Glamis hath murther'd Sleepe, and therefore Cawdor
Shall sleepe no more: Macbeth shall sleepe no more.
Lady. Who was it, that thus cry'd? why worth by Thane,
You doe vnbend your Noble strength, to think
So braine-sickly of things: Goe get some Water,

And

And wash this filthie Witnesse from your Hand.
Why did you bring these Daggers from the place?
They must lye there: goe carry them, and smeare
The sleepie Groomes with blood.
Mach. Ile goe no more:
I am afraid, to thinke what I have done:
Looke on't again, I dare not.
Lady. Infirme of purpose:
Give me the Daggers: the sleeping, and the dead,
Are but as Pictures: 'tis the Eye of Childhood,
That feares a painted Devill. If he doe bleed,
Ile gilde the Faces of the Groomes withall,
For it must seeme their Guilt. Exit.
Knocke within.
Mach. Whence is that knocking?
How is't with me, when every noyse appalls me?
What Hands are here? hah: they pluck out mine Eyes.
Will all great Neptune Ocean wash this blood
Clean from my Hand? no: this my Hand will rather
The multitudinous Seas incarnadine,
Making the Greene one, Red.

Enter Lady.

Lady. My Hands are of your colour: but I shame
To weare a Heart so white. Knocke.
I heare a knocking at the South entry:
Retyre we to our Chamber:
A little Water cleares vs of this deed.
How easie is it then? your Constancie
Hath left you unattended. Knocke.
Hearke, more knocking.
Get on your Night-Goune, least occasion call vs,
And show vs to be Watchers: be not lost
So poorely in your thoughts.
Mach. To know my deed, Knocke.
'Twere best not know my selfe.
Wake Duncan with thy knocking:
I would thou could'st. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter a Porter.

Knocking within.

Porter. Here's a knocking indeede: if a man were Porter of Hell Gate, he should have old turning the Key. Knock. Knock, Knock, Knock. Who's there i'th'name of Belzebub? Here's a Farmer, that hang'd himselfe on th'expectation of Plenties: Come in time, have Napkins enow about you, here you'le sweat for't. Knock. Knock, knock. Who's there in th'other Devils Name? Faith here's an Equiuocator, that could sweare in both the Scales against either Scale, who committed Treason enough for Gods sake, yet could not equiuocate to Heaven: oh come in, Equiuocator. Knock. Knock, Knock, Knock. Who's there? Faith here's an English Taylor come hither, for stealing out of a French Hose: Come in Taylor, here you may rost your Goose. Knock. Knock, Knock, Knock. Never at quiet: What are you? but this place is too cold for Hell. Ile Deuill-Porter it no further: I had thought to have let in some of all Professions, that goe the Primrose way to th'everlasting Bonfire. Knock. Anon, anon, I pray you remember the Porter.

Enter Macduff, and Lennox.

Macd. Was it so late, friend, ere you went to Bed,
That you doe lye so late?
Port. Faith Sir, we were carowsing till the second Cock:
And Drinke, Sir, is a great provoker of three things.
Macd. What three things does Drinke especially provoke?
Port. Marry, Sir, Nose-painting, Sleepe, and Vrine.
Lechery, Sir, it provokes, and vnprovokes: it provokes the desire, but it takes away the performance. Therefore much Drinke may be said to be an Equiuocator with Lechery: it makes him, and it marres him; it sets him on, and it takes him off; it perswades him, and dis-heartens him; makes him stand to, and not stand to: in conclusion, equiuocates him in a sleepe, and giving him the Lye, leaves him.
Macd. I beleeue, Drinke gaue thee the Lye last Night.
Port. That it did, Sir, i'the very Throat on me: but I requited him for his Lye, and (I thinke) being too strong for him, though he toorke vp my Legges sometime, yet I made a Shift to cast him.

Enter Macbeth.

Macd. Is thy Master stirring?
Our knocking has awak'd him; here he comes.
Lenox. Good morrow, Noble Sir.
Mach. Good morrow both.
Macd. Is the King stirring, worthy Thane?
Mach. Not yet.
Macd. He did command me to call timely on him,
I have almost slipt the houre.
Mach. Ile bring you to him.
Macd. I know this is a joyfull trouble to you:
But yet 'tis one.
Mach. The labour we delight in, Physicks paine:
This is the Doore.
Macd. Ile make so bold to call, for 'tis my limited service. Exit Macduff.
Lenox. Goes the King hence to day?
Mach. He does: he did appoint so.
Lenox. The Night has been vnruly:
Where we lay, our Chimneys were blowne downe,
And (as they say) lamentings heard i'th'Ayre;
Strange Shrieames of Death,
And Prophesying, with Accents terrible,
Of dyre Combustion, and confus'd Events,
New hatch'd vnto th' woefull time.
The obscure Bird clamor'd the liue-long Night.
Some say, the Earth was feuerous,
And did shake.
Mach. 'Twas a rough Night.
Lenox. My young remembrance cannot parallel
A fellow to it.

Enter Macduff.

Macd. O horror, horror, horror,
Tongue nor Heart cannot conceiue, nor name thee.
Mach. and Lenox. What's the matter?
Macd. Confusion now hath made his Masterpeece:
Most sacrilegious Murther hath broke ope
The Lords anointed Temple, and stole thence
The Life o'th' Building.
Mach. What is't you say, the Life?
Lenox. Meane you his Maiestie?
Macd. Approch the Chamber, and destroy your sight
With a new Gorgon. Doe not bid me speake:

ſe,and then ſpeake your ſelues: awake,awake,

Exeunt Macbeth and Lenox.

Ring the Alarum Bell: Murther,and Treaſon,
Banquo,and Donalbaine: Malcolme awake,
Shake off this Downey ſleepe,Deaths counterfeit,
And looke on Death it ſelfe: vp,vp,and ſee
The great Doomes Image: Malcolme,Banquo,
As from your Graues riſe vp,and walke like Spirights,
To countenance this horror. Ring the Bell.

Bell ringe. Enter Lady.

Lady. What's the Buſineſſe?
That ſuch a hideous Trumpet calls to parley
The ſleepers of the Houſe? ſpeake,ſpeake.

Macd. O gentle Lady,
'Tis not for you to heare what I can ſpeake:
The repetition in a Womans eare,
Would murther as it fell.

Enter Banquo.

O Banquo,Banquo, Our Royall Maſter's murther'd.

Lady. Woe,alas:
What,in our Houſe?

Ban. Too cruell,any where.
Deare Duff,I prythee contradict thy ſelfe,
And ſay,it is not ſo.

Enter Macbeth,Lenox,and Roſſe.

Mach. Had I but dy'd an houre before this chance,
I had liu'd a bleſſed time: for from this inſtant,
There's nothing ſerious in Mortalitie:
All is but Toyes: Renowne and Grace is dead,
The Wine of Life is drawne,and the meere Lees
Is left this Vault,to brag of.

Enter Malcolme and Donalbaine.

Donal. What is amiſſe?

Mach. You are,and doe not know't:
The Spring,the Head,the Fountaine of your Blood
Is ſtopt, the very Source of it is ſtopt.

Macd. Your Royall Father's murther'd.

Mal. Oh,by whom?

Lenox. Thoſe of his Chamber,as it ſeem'd,had done't:
Their Hands and Faces were all badg'd with blood,
So were their Daggers,which vnwip'd,we found
Vpon their Pillowes: they ſtar'd,and were diſtracted,
No mans Life was to be truſted with them.

Mach. O,yet I doe repent me of my furie,
That I did kill them.

Macd. Wherefore did you ſo?

Mach. Who can be wiſe,amaz'd,temp'rate,& furious,
Loyall,and Neutrall,in a moment? No man:
Th'expedition of my violent Loue
Out-run the pawſer,Reaſon. Here lay Duncan,
His Siluer ſkinne,lac'd with his Golden Blood,
And his gaſh'd Stabs,look'd like a Breach in Nature,
For Ruines waſtfull entrance: there the Murtherers,
Steep'd in the Colours of their Trade; their Daggers
Vnmannerly breech'd with gore: who could reframe,
That had a heart to loue; and in that heart,
Courage,to make's loue knowne?

Lady. Helpe me hence,hoa.

Macd. Looke to the Lady.

Mal. Why doe we hold our tongues,
That moſt may clayme this argument for ours?

Donal. What ſhould be ſpoken here,
Where our Fate hid in an augure hole,
May ruſh,and ſeize vs? Let's away,
Our Teares are not yet brew'd.

Mal. Nor our ſtrong Sorrow
Vpon the foot of Motion.

Banq. Looke to the Lady:
And when we haue our naked Frailties hid,
That ſuffer in expoſure; let vs meet,
And queſtion this moſt bloody place of wreake,
To know it further. Feares and ſcruples ſhake vs:
In the great Hand of God I ſtand,and thence,
Againſt the vnſtaid vulg'd pretence,I fight
Of Treaſonous Malice.

Macd. And ſo doe I.

All. So all.

Mach. Let's briefly put on manly readineſſe,
And meet i'th' Hall together.

All. Well conceiued. Exeunt.

Male. What will you doe?
Let's not conſort with them:
To ſhew an vnfelt Sorrow,is an Office
Which the falſe man do's eaſie.
Ile to England.

Don. To Ireland,I:
Our ſeperated fortune ſhall keepe vs both the ſafer:
Where we are,there's Daggers in mens ſmiles;
The neere in blood,the neerer bloody.

Male. This murtherous Shaft that's ſhot,
Hath not yet lighted:and our ſafeſt way,
Is to auoid the ayme. Therefore to Horſe,
And let vs not be dainticr of leaue-taking,
But ſhift away: there's warrant in that Theft,
Which ſteales it ſelfe,when there's no mercie left.

Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Roſſe,with an Old man.

Old man. Threeſcore and ten I can remember well,
Within the Volume of which Time,I haue ſeene
Houres dreadfull,and things ſtrange: but this ſore Night
Hath trifled former knowings.

Roſſ. Ha,good Father,
Thou ſeeſt the Heauens,as troubled with mans Act,
Threatens his bloody Stage: byth' Clock 'tis Day,
And yet darke Night ſtrangles the trauailing Lampe:
Is't Nights predominance,or the Dayes ſhame,
That Darkneſſe does the face of Earth intombe,
When liuing Light ſhould kiſſe it?

Old man. 'Tis vnnaturall,
Euen like the deed that's done: On Teuſday laſt,
A Faulcon towring in her pride of place,
Was by a Mowſing Owle hawkt at,and kill'd.

Roſſ. And Duncans Horſes,
(A thing moſt ſtrange, and certaine)
Beauteous,and ſwift,the Minions of their Race,
Turn'd wilde in nature,broke their ſtalls,flong out,
Contending 'gainſt Obedience,as they would Make Warre with Mankinde.

Old man. 'Tis ſaid,they eate each other.

Roſſ. They did ſo:

To th'amazement of mine eyes that look'd vpon't.

Enter Macduffe.

Heere comes the good Macduffe.
How goes the world Sir, now?

Macd. Why see you not?

Rosse. Is't known who did this more then bloody deed?

Macd. Those that Macbeth hath slaine.

Rosse. Alas the day,
What good could they pretend?

Macd. They were subborned,
Malcolme, and Donalbaine the Kings two Sonnes
Are stolne away and fled, which puts vpon them
Suspition of the deed.

Rosse. 'Gainst Nature still,
Thriftlesse Ambition, that will raven vp
Thine owne lives meanes: Then 'tis most like,
The Soueraignty will fall vpon Macbeth.

Macd. He is already nam'd, and gone to Scone
To be inuested.

Rosse. Where is Duncans body?

Macd. Carried to Colmeskill,
The Sacred Store-house of his Predecessors,
And Guardian of their Bones.

Rosse. Will you to Scone?

Macd. No Cosin, Ile to Fife.

Rosse Well, I will thither.

Macd. Well may you see things wel done there: Adieu
Least our old Robes sit easier then our new.

Rosse. Farewell, Father

Old M. Gods benyson go with you, and with those
That would make good of bad, and Friends of Foes.

Exeunt omnes.

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Enter Banquo.

Banq. Thou hast it now, King, Cawdor, Glamis, all,
As the weyard Women promis'd, and I feare
Thou play'd'st most fowly for't. yet it was saide
It should not stand in thy Posterity,
But that my selfe should be the Roote, and Father
Of many Kings. If there come truth from them,
As vpon thee Macbeth, their Speeches shine,
Why by the verities on thee made good,
May they not be my Oracles as well,
And set me vp in hope. But hush, no more.

Sonet sounded. Enter Macbeth as King, Lady Lennox, Rosse, Lords, and Attendants.

Mach. Heere's our chiefe Guest.

La. If he had beene forgotten,
It had bene as a gap in our great Feast,
And all-thing vnbecomming.

Mach. To night we hold a solemne Supper sit,
And Ile request your presence.

Banq. Let your Highnesse
Command vpon me, to the which my duties
Are with a most indissoluble tye
For ever knit.

Mach Ride you this afternoone?

Ban. I, my good Lord.

Mach We should haue else desir'd your good advice
(Which still hath been both grave, and prosperous)
In this dayes Councell: but we'le take to morrow.
Is't farre you ride?

Ban. As farre, my Lord, as will fill vp the time
'Twixt this, and Supper. Goe not my Horse the better,
I must become a borrower of the Night,
For a darke hour, or twaine.

Mach. Faile not our Feast.

Ban. My Lord, I will not.

Mach. We heare our bloody Cozens are bestow'd
In England, and in Ireland, not confessing
Their cruell Parricide, filling their hearers
With strange invention. But of that to morrow,
When therewithall, we shall haue cause of State,
Crauing vs iointly. Hye you to Horse:
Adieu, till you returne at Night.
Goes Fleance with you?

Ban. I, my good Lord: our time does call vpon's.

Mach I wish your Horses swift, and sure of foot:
And so I doe commend you to their backs.
Farewell. Exit Banquo.
Let every man be master of his time,
Till seven at Night, to make societie
The sweeter welcome:
We will keepe our selfe till Supper time alone:
While then, God be with you. Exeunt Lords.
Sirrha, a word with you: Attend those men
Our pleasure?

Seruant. They are, my Lord, without the Palace
Gate.

Mach Bring them before vs. Exit Seruant.
To be thus, is nothing, but to be safely thus:
Our feares in Banquo sticke deepe,
And in his Royaltie of Nature reignes that
Which would be fear'd. 'Tis much he dares,
And to that dauntlesse temper of his Minde,
He hath a Wisdome, that doth guide his Valour,
To act in safetie. There is none but he,
Whose being I doe feare: and vnder him,
My Genius is rebuk'd, as it is said
Mark Anthonies was by Cæsar. He chid the Sisters,
When first they put the Name of King vpon me,
And bad them speake to him. Then Prophet-like,
They hayl'd him Father to a Line of Kings
Vpon my Head they plac'd a fruitlesse Crowne,
And put a barren Scepter in my Gripe,
Thence to be wrenche with an vnlineall Hand,
No Sonne of mine succeeding: if 't be so,
For Banquo's Issue haue I fil'd my Minde,
For them, the gracious Duncan haue I murther'd,
Put Rancours in the Vessell of my Peace
Onely for them, and mine eternall Iewell
Giuen to the common Enemie of Man,
To make them Kings, the Seedes of Banquo King.
Rather then so, come Fate into the Lyst,
And champion me to th'vtterance.
Who's there?

Enter Seruant, and two Murtherers.

Now goe to the Doore, and stay there till we call.

Exit Seruant.

Was it not yesterday we spake together?

Murth. It was, so please your Highnesse.

Mach. Well then,
Now haue you consider'd of my speeches:

Know,

Know, that it was he, in the times past,
Which held you so vnder fortune,
Which you thought had been our innocent selfe.
This I made good to you, in our last conference,
Past in probatione with you:
How you were borne in hand, how crost:
The Instruments: who wrought with them:
And all things else, that might
To halfe a Soule, and to a Nouice crazd,
Say, Thus did Banquo.

1. Murth. You made it knowne to vs.

Mach. I did so:
And went further, which is now
Our point of second meeting.
Doe you finde your patience so predominant,
In your nature, that you can let this goe?
Are you so Gospell'd, to pray for this good man,
And for his Issue, whose heauie hand
Hath bow'd you to the Graue, and begger'd
Yours for euer?

1. Murth. We are men, my Liege.

Mach. I, in the Catalogue ye goe for men,
As Hounds, and Greyhounds, Mongrels, Spaniels, Curres,
Shoughes, Water-Rugs, and Demy-Wolues are clipt
All by the Name of Doggs: the valued file
Distinguishes the swift, the slow, the subtle,
The House-keeper, the Hunter, every one
According to the gift, which bounteous Nature
Hath in him clos'd: whereby he does receiue
Particular addition, from the Bill,
That writes them all alike: and so of men.
Now, if you haue a station in the file,
Not i'th' worst ranke of Manhood, say't,
And I will put that Businesse in your Bosomes,
Whose execution takes your Enemie off,
Grapples you to the heart, and loue of vs,
Who wease our Health but sickly in his Life,
Which in his Death were perfect.

2. Murth. I am one, my Liege,
Whom the vile Blowes and Bastes of the World
Hath so incens'd, that I am reckless what I doe,
To spight the World.

1. Murth. And I another,
So weare with Disasters, tugg'd with Fortune,
That I would set my Life on any Chance,
To mend it, or be rid on't.

Mach. Both of you know Banquo was your Enemie.

Murth. True, my Lord

Mach. So is he mine: and in such bloody distance,
That every minute of his being, thrusts
Against my neer'st of Life: and though I could
With bare-fac'd power sweepe him from my sight,
And bid my will auouch it; yet I must not,
For certaine friends that are both his, and mine,
Whose loues I may not drop, but wayle his fall,
Who I my selfe struck downe: and thence it is,
That I to your assistance doe make loue,
Masking the Businesse from the common Eye,
For sundry weightie Reasons.

2. Murth. We shall, my Lord,
Performe what you command vs.

1. Murth Though our Liues—

Mach. Your Spirits shine through you.
Within this houre, at most,
I will aduise you where to plant your selues,
Acquaint you with the perfect Spy o'th' time,
The moment on't, for't must be done to Night,
And something from the Pallace: always thought,
That I require a clearenesse; and with him,
To leaue no Rubs nor Bothes in the Worke:
Fleance, his Sonne, that keepes him companie,
Whose abiding is no lesse materiall to me,
Then is his Fathers, must embrace the fate
Of that darke houre: resolue your selues apart,
Ile come to you anon.

Murth. We are resolu'd, my Lord.

Mach. Ile call vpon you straight: abide within,
It is concluded: Banquo, thy Soules flight,
If it finde Heauen, must finde it out to Night. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Macbeths Lady, and a Seruant.

Lady. Is Banquo gone from Court?

Seruant. I, Madame, but returnes againe to Night.

Lady. Say to the King, I would attend his leysure,
For a few words.

Seruant. Madame, I will. Exit.

Lady. Nought's had, all's spent,
Where our desire is got without content:
'Tis safer, to be that which we destroy,
Then by destruction dwell in doubtfull ioy.

Enter Macbeth.

How now, my Lord, why doe you keepe alone?
Of sorryest Fancies your Companions making,
Vsing those Thoughts, which should indeed haue dy'd
With them they think on: things without all remedie
Should be without regard: what's done, is done.

Mach. We haue scorch'd the Snake, not kill'd it:
Shee'le close, and be her selfe, whilest our poore Malice
Remaines in danger of her former Tooth.
But let the frame of things dis-ioyne,
Both the Worlds suffer,
Ere we will eate our Meale in feare, and sleepe
In the affliction of these terrible Dreames,
That shake vs Nightly: Better be with the dead,
Whom we, to gayne our peace, haue sent to peace,
Then on the torture of the Minde to lye
In restlesse extasie.
Duncane is in his Graue.
After Lifes fitfull Feuer, he sleepes well,
Treason ha's done his worst: nor Steele, nor Poyson,
Malice domestique, forraine Leuie, nothing,
Can touch him further.

Lady. Come on
Gentle my Lord, sleeke o're your rugged Looke,
Be bright and iouiall among your Guests to Night.

Mach. So shall I Loue, and so I pray be you:
Let your remembrance apply to Banquo,
Present him Eminence, both with Eye and Tongue:
Vnsafe the while, that wee must laue
Our Honors in these flattering streames,
And make our Faces Vizards to our Hearts,
Disguising what they are.

Lady. You must leaue this.

Mach. O, full of Scorpions is my Minde, deare Wife:
Thou know'st, that Banquo and his Fleance liues.

Lady But

Lady. But in them, Natures Coppie's not eterne.
Mach. There's comfort yet, they are assaileable,
Then be thou iocund: ere the Bat hath flown
His Cloyster'd flight, ere to black Hecats summons
The shard-borne Beetle, with his drowsie hums,
Hath rung Nights yawning Peale,
There shall be done a deed of dreadfull note.
Lady. What's to be done?
Mach Be innocent of the knowledge, dearest Chuck
Till thou applaud the deed: Come, seeling Night,
Skarfe vp the tender Eye of pitiffull Day,
And with thy bloodie and invisible Hand
Cancell and tearre to pieces that great Bond,
Which keepes me pale. Light thickens,
And the Crow makes Wing toth' Rookie Wood:
Good things of Day begin to droope, and drowse,
Whiles Nights black Agents to their Prey's doe rowse.
Thou marvell'st at my words: but hold thee still,
Things bad begun, make strong themselves by ill:
So prythee goe with me Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter three Murtherers.

1 But who did bid thee ioyne with vs?
3. Macbeth.
2. He needes not our mistrust, since he delivers
Our Offices, and what we haue to doe,
To the direction iust
1 Then stand with vs
The West yet glimmers with some streakes of Day.
Now spurres the lated Traveller space,
To gayne the timely Inne, and neere approches
The subiect of our Watch
3. Hearke, I heare Horses.
Banquo within. Giue vs a Light there, hoa.
2. Then 'tis hee:
The rest, that are within the note of expectation,
Already are i'th' Court.
1. His Horses goe about.
3. Almost a mile: but he does vsually,
So all men doe, from hence toth' Pallace Gate
Make it their Walke.

Enter Banquo and Fleance, with a Torch.

2. A Light, a Light
3. 'Tis hee.
1. Stand too't.
Ban. It will be Rayne to Night.
1. Let it come downe.
Ban. O, Treacherie!
Flye good Fleance, flye, flye, flye,
Thou may'st reuenge. O Slaue!
3. Who did strike out the Light?
1. Was't not the way?
3. There's but one downe: the Sonne is fled.
2. We haue lost
Best halfe of our Affaire.
1. Well, let's away, and say how much is done.
Exeunt

Scena Quarta.

Banquet prepar'd. Enter Macbeth, Lady, Rosse, Lenox, Lords, and Attendants.

Mach. You know your owne degrees, sit downe:
At first and last, the hearty welcome.
Lords. Thankes to your Maiesty.
Mach. Our selfe will mingle with Society,
And play the humble Host.
Our Hostesse keepes her State, but in best time
We will require her welcome.
Le. Pronounce it for me Sir, to all our Friends,
For my heart speakes, they are welcome.
Enter first Murtherer.
Mach. See they encounter thee with their hearts thanks
Both sides are even: heere I'le sit i'th'mid'st,
Be large in mirth, anon wee'l drinke a Measure
The Table round. There's blood vpon thy face.
Mur. 'Tis Banquo's then.
Mach. 'Tis better thee without, then he within.
Is he dispatch'd?
Mur. My Lord his throat is cut, that I did for him
Mac. Thou art the best o'th' Cut-throats,
Yet hee's good that did the like for Fleance:
If thou did'st it, thou art the Non-pareill.
Mur. Most Royall Sir
Fleance is scap'd.
Mach. Then comes my Fit againe:
I had else beene perfect;
Whole as the Marble, founded as the Rocke,
As broad, and generall, as the casing Ayre:
But now I am cabin'd, crib'd, confin'd, bound in
To saucy doubts, and feares. But Banquo's safe?
Mur. I, my good Lord: safe in a ditch he bides,
With twenty trenched gashes on his head;
The least a Death to Nature.
Mach. Thankes for that:
There the growne Serpent lyes, the worme that's fled
Hath Nature that in time will Venom breed,
No teeth for th'present. Get thee gone, to morrow
Wee'l heare our selues again. Exit Murderer
Lady. My Royall Lord,
You do not giue the Cheere, the Feast is sold
That is not often vouch'd, while 'tis a making:
'Tis given, with welcome: to feede were best at home:
From thence, the sawce to meate is Ceremony,
Meeting were bare without it

Enter the Ghost of Banquo, and sits in Mathabs place.

Mach. Sweet Remembrancer:
Now good digestion waite on Appetite,
And health on both
Lenox. May't please your Highnesse sit.
Mach. Here had we now our Countries Honor, roof'd,
Were the grac'd person of our Banquo present:
Who, may I rather challenge for vnkindnesse,
Then pitty for Mischance.
Rosse. His absence (Sir)
Layes blame vpon his promise. Please't your Highnesse
To grace vs with your Royall Company?

Mach.

Mach. The Table's full.
Lenox. Heere is a place reserv'd Sir,
Mach. Where?
Lenox. Heere my good Lord.
What is't that moues your Highnesse?
Mach. Which of you haue done this?
Lords. What, my good Lord?
Mach. Thou canst not say I did it: never shake
Thy goory lockes at me.
Rosse. Gentlemen rise, his Highnesse is not well.
Lady. Sit worthy Friends: my Lord is often thus,
And hath beene from his youth. Pray you keepe Seat.
The fit is momentary, vpon a thought
He will againe be well. If much you note him
You shall offend him, and extend his Passion,
Feed, and regard him not. Are you a man?
Mach. I, and a bold one, that dare looke on that
Which might appall the Diuell.
La. O proper stuffe:
This is the very painting of your feare:
This is the Ayre-drawne-Dagger which you said
Led you to Duncan. O, these flaws and starts
(Impostors to true feare) would well become
A woman story, at a Winters fire
Authoris'd by her Grandam: shame it selfe,
Why do you make such faces? When all's done
You looke but on a stoole.
Mach. Prythee see there:
Behold, looke, lo, how say you:
Why what care I, if thou canst nod, speake too.
If Charnell houses, and our Graues must send
Those that we bury, backe; our Monuments
Shall be the Maws of Kytes.
La. What? quite vnmann'd in folly.
Mach. If I stood heere, I saw him.
La. Fie for shame.
Mach. Blood hath bene shed ere now, i'th'olden time
Ere humane Statute purg'd the gentle Weale:
I, and since too, Murthers haue bene perform'd
Too terrible for the eare. The times haue bene,
That when the Braines were out, the man would dye,
And there an end: But now they rise againe
With twenty mortall murthers on their crowns,
And push vs from our stooles. This is more strange
Then such a murther is.
La. My worthy Lord
Your Noble Friends do lacke you.
Mach. I do forget:
Do not mute at me my most worthy Friends,
I haue a strange infirmity, which is nothing
To those that know me. Come, Loue and health to all,
Then I'le sit downe: Giue me some Wine, fill full:
Enter Ghost.
I drinke to th'generall ioy o'th'whole Table,
And to our deere Friend Banquo, whom we miſse:
Would he were heere: to all, and him we thirſt,
And all to all.
Lords. Our duties, and the pledge.
Mac. Auaunt, & quit my ſight, let the earth hide thee:
Thy bones are marrowleſſe, thy blood is cold:
Thou haſt no ſpeculation in those eyes
Which thou doſt glare with.
La. Thinke of this good Peeres.
But as a thing of Cuſtome: 'Tis no other,
Onely it ſpoyles the pleaſure of the time.
Mach. What man dare, I dare:
Approach thou like the rugged Ruſſian Beare,
The arm'd Rhinoceros, or th'Hircan Tiger,
Take any ſhape but thee, and my ſtaid Nerues
Shall never tremble. Or be aliue againe,
And dare me to the Deſert with thy Sword:
If trembling I inhabit then, protect me
The Baby of a Girle. Hence horrible ſhadow,
Vnreall mock'ry hence. Why ſo, being gone
I am a man againe: pray you ſit ſtill.
La. You haue diſpla'd the mirth,
Broke the good meeting, with moſt admir'd diſorder.
Mach. Can ſuch things be,
And ouercome vs like a Summers Cloud,
Without our ſpeciall wonder? You make me ſtrange
Euen to the diſpoſition that I owe,
When now I think you can behold ſuch ſights,
And keepe the naturall Ruby of your Cheeks,
When mine is blanch'd with feare.
Roſſe. What ſights, my Lord?
La. I pray you ſpeake not: he growes worſe & worſe
Qu'eſtion enrages him: at once, goodnight.
Stand not vpon the order of your going,
But go at once.
Len. Good night, and better health
Attend his Maieſty.
La. A kinde goodnight to all. Exit Lords.
Mach. It will haue blood they ſay:
Blood will haue Blood:
Stones haue beene knowne to move, & Trees to ſpeake:
Augures, and vnderſtood Relations, have
By Maggot Pyes, & Choughes, & Rookes brought forth
The ſecret'ſt man of Blood. What is the night?
La. Almoſt at odds with morning, which is which.
Mach. How ſay'ſt thou that Macduff denies his perſon
At our great bidding.
La. Did you ſend to him Sir?
Mach. I heare it by the way: But I will ſend:
There's not a one of them but in his houſe
I keepe a Seruant Feed. I will to morrow
(And betimes I will) to the weyrd Siſters.
More ſhall they ſpeake: for now I am bent to know
By the worſt meanes, the worſt, for mine owne good,
All cauſes ſhall giue way. I am in blood
Steep'd in ſo farre, that ſhould I wade no more,
Returning were as tedious as go ore:
Strange things I haue in head, that will to hand,
Which muſt be acted, ere they may be ſcand.
La. You lacke the ſeaſon of all Natures, ſleepe.
Mach. Come, we'l to ſleepe: My ſtrange & ſelf-abuſe
Is the initiate feare, that wants hard vſe:
We are yet but young indeed. Exeunt.

Scena Quinta.

Thunder. Enter the three Witches, meeting Hecate.

1 Why how now Hecate, you looke angrily?
Hec. Haue I not reaſon (Beldams) as you are?
Saucy, and mere-bold, how did you dare
To Trade, and Trafficke with Macbeth,
In Riddles, and Affaires of death,
And

And I the Mistris of your Charmes,
The close contriver of all harmes,
Was never call'd to heare my part,
Or shew the glory of our Art?
And which is worse, all you have done
Hath been but for a wayward Sonne,
Spight full, and wrathfull, who (as others do)
Loues for his owne ends, not for you.
But make amends now: Get you gon,
And at the pit of Acheron
Meete me i'th' Morning: thither he
Will come, to know his Destinie.
Your Vessels, and your Spels prouide,
Your Charmes, and every thing beside;
I am for th' Ayre: This night I'le spend
Vnto a dismell, and a Fatell end.
Great business must be wrought ere Noone.
Vpon the Corner of the Moone
There hangs a vap'rous drop, profound,
I'le catch it ere it come to ground;
And that distill'd by Magicke sliights,
Shall raise such Artificiall Sprights,
As by the strength of their illusion,
Shall draw him on to his Confusion.
He shall sperne Fate, scorne Death, and beare
His hopes 'boue Wisedome, Grace, and Feare:
And you all know, Security
Is Mortals cheefest Enemie.

Musicke, and a Song.

Hearke, I am call'd: my little Spirit sit
Sits in a Foggy cloud, and stayes for me.

Song within. Come away, come away, &c.

1 Come, let's make haste, shee'l soone be-
Backe againe. Exeunt.

Scæna Sexta.

Enter Lennox, and another Lord.

Lenox. My former Speeches,
Haue but hit your Thoughts
Which can interpret farther: Onely I say
Things haue bin strange, borne. The gracious Duncan
Was pitied of Macbeth: marry he was dead:
And the right valiant Banquo walk'd too late,
Whom you may say (if't please you) Fleance kill'd,
For Fleance fled: Men must not walke too late.
Who cannot want the thought, how monstrous
It was for Malcolme, and for Donalbane
To kill their gracious Father? Damned Fact,
How it did grieue Macbeth? Did he not straight
In pious rage, the two delinquents teare,
That were the Slaues of drinke, and thralles of sleepe?
Was not that Nobly done? I, and wisely too:
For 't would haue anger'd any heart aliue
To heare the men deny't. So that I say,
He ha's borne all things well, and I do thinke,
That had he Duncans Sonnes vnder his Key,
(As, and't please Heauen he shall not) they should finde
What 'twere to kill a Father: So should Fleance.
But peace; for from broad words, and cause he fayl'd
His presence at the Tyrants Feast, I heare
Macduffe liues in disgrace. Sir, can you tell
Where he bestowes himselfe?

Lord. The Sonnes of Duncan
(From whom this Tyrant holds the due of Birth)
Liues in the English Court, and is receyu'd
Of the most Pious Edward, with such grace,
That the malevolence of Fortune, nothing
Takes from his high respect. Thither Macduffe
Is gone, to pray the Holy King, vpon his ayd
To wake Northumberland, and warlike Seyward,
That by the helpe of these (with him aboue)
To ratifie the Worke) we may againe
Giue to our Tables meate, sleepe to our Nights:
Free from our Feasts, and Banquets bloody knives;
Do faithfull Homage, and receiue free Honors,
All which we pine for now. And this report
Hath so exasperate their King, that hee
Prepares for some attempt of Warre.

Len. Sent he to Macduffe?

Lord. He did: and with an absolute Sir, not I
The cloudy Messenger turnes me his backe,
And hums; as who should say, you'l rue the time
That clogges me with this Answer.

Lenox. And that well might
Aduise him to a Caution, t'hold what distance
His wisedome can prouide. Some holy Angell
Flye to the Court of England, and vnfold
His Message ere he come, that a swift blessing
May soone returne to this our suffering Country,
Vnder a hand secur'd.

Lord. I'le send my Prayers with him. Exeunt

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Thunder. Enter the three Witches.

1 Thrice the brinded Cat hath mew'd.
2 Thrice, and once the Hedge-Pigge whin'd.
3 Harpier cries, 'tis time, 'tis time.
1 Round about the Caldron go:
In the poysoned Entrailes throw
Toad, that vnder cold stone,
Dayes and Nights, has thirty one:
Sweltred Venom sleeping got,
Boyle thou first i'th' charmed pot.

All. Double, double, toile and trouble;
Fire burne, and Cauldron bubble.

2 Fillet of a Fenny Snake,
In the Cauldron boyle and bake:
Eye of Newt, and Toe of Frogge,
Wooll of Bat, and Tongue of Dogge:
Adders Forke, and Blinde-wormes Sting,
Lizards legge, and Howlets wing:
For a Charme of powerfull trouble,
Like a Hell-broth, boyle and bubble.

All. Double, double, toyle and trouble,
Fire burne, and Cauldron bubble.

3 Scale of Dragon, Tooth of Wolfe,
Witches Mummey, Maw, and Gulfe
Of the rauin'd salt Sea shaike:
Roote of Hemlocke, digg'd i'th' darke:
Liuer of Blaspheming Iew,
Gall of Goate, and Slippes of Yew,
Sliuer'd in the Moones Ecclipse:

Mole of Tartar, and Tartars lips:
Finger of Birth-strangled Babe,
Ditch-deliver'd by a Drab,
Make the Gruel thicke, and slab.
Adde thereto a Tigers Chaudron,
For th'ingredience of our Cauldron.
All. Double, double, toyle and trouble,
Fire burne, and Cauldron bubble.
2 Coole it with a Baboones blood,
Then the Charme is firme and good.

Enter Hecate, and the other three Witches.

Hec. O well done: I commend your paines,
And every one shall share i'th'gaines:
And now about the Cauldron sing
Like Elues and Fairies in a Ring,
Inchanting all that you put in.
Musicke and a Song. Black Spirits, &c.
2 By the pricking of my Thumbes,
Something wicked this way comes:
Open Locke, who ever knockes.
Enter Macbeth.
Mach. How now you secrets, black, & midnight Hags?
What is't you do?
All. A deed without a name.
Mach. I conjure you, by that which you Professe,
(Howeere you come to know it) answer me:
Though you untye the Winds, and let them fight
Against the Churches: Though the yesty Waues
Confound and swallow Navigation vp:
Though bladed Corne be lodg'd, & Trees blown downe,
Though Castles topple on their Warders heads:
Though Pallaces, and Pyramids do slope
Their heads to their Foundations: Though the treasure
Of Natures Germaine, tumble altogether,
Even till destruction sicken: Answer me
To what I aske you.
1 Speake.
2 Demand.
3 We'l answer.
1 Say, if th'hadst rather heare it from our mouthes,
Or from our Masters.
Mach. Call 'em: let me see 'em.
1 Powre in Sowes blood, that hath eaten
Her nine Farrow: Grease that's sweaten
From the Murderers Gibbet, throw
Into the Flame.
All. Come high or low:
Thy Selfe and Office deaftly show. Thunder.
1. Apparition, an Armed Head.
Mach. Tell me, thou vnknowne power.
1 He knowes thy thought:
Heare his speech, but say thou nought.
1 Appar. Macbeth, Macbeth, Macbeth:
Beware Macduff,
Beware the Thane of Fife: dismisse me. Enough.
He Descends.
Mach. What ere thou art, for thy good caution, thanks
Thou hast harp'd my feare aright. But one word more.
1 He will not be commanded: heere's another
More potent then the first. Thunder.
2 Apparition, a Bloody Child.
2 Appar. Macbeth, Macbeth, Macbeth.
Mach. Had I three eares, I'd heare thee.
2 Appar. Be bloody, bold, & resolute:
Laugh to scorne
The powre of man: For none of woman borne
Shall harme Macbeth. Descends.
Mac. Then live Macduff: what need I feare of thee?
But yet I'le make assurance: double sure,
And take a Bond of Fate: thou shalt not live,
That I may tell pale-hearted Feare, it lies;
And sleepe in spight of Thunder. Thunder.
3 Apparition, a Child Crowned, with a Tree in his hand.
What is this, that rises like the issue of a King,
And wears vpon his Baby-brow, the round
And top of Soueraignty?
All. Listen, but speake not too't.
3 Appar. Be Lyon mettled, proud, and take no care:
Who chafes, who frets, or where Conspirers are:
Macbeth shall neuer vanquish'd be, vntill
Great Bymam Wood, to high Dunsinane Hill
Shall come against him. Descend.
Mach. That will never bee:
Who can impresse the Forrest, bid the Tree
Vnfixe his earth-bound Root? Sweet boodments, good:
Rebellious dead, rise never till the Wood
Of Bymam rise, and our high plac'd Macbeth
Shall live the Lease of Nature, pay his breath
To time, and mortall Customs. Yet my Hart
Throbs to know one thing: Tell me, if your Art
Can tell so much: Shall Banquo's issue ever
Reigne in this Kingdome?
All. Seeke to know no more.
Mach. I will be satisfied. Deny me this,
And an eternall Curse fall on you: Let me know.
Why stokes that Caldron? & what noise is this? Hoboyes
1 Shew.
2 Shew.
3 Shew.
All. Shew his Eyes, and grieue his Hart,
Come like shadowes, so depart.
A show of eight Kings, and Banquo last, with a glasse in his hand.
Mach. Thou art too like the Spirit of Banquo: Downe:
Thy Crowne do's seare mine Eye-bals. And thy haire
Thou other Gold-bound-brow, is like the first:
A third, is like the former. Filthy Hagges,
Why do you shew me thus? ——A fourth? Start eyes!
What will the Line stretch out to th'crackle of Doomes?
Another yet? A seuenth? I'le see no more:
And yet the eight appeares, who beares a glasse,
Which shewes me many more: and some I see,
That two-fold Balles, and treble Scepters carry.
Horrible sight: Now I see 'tis true,
For the Blood-bolter'd Banquo smiles vpon me,
And points at them for his. What? is this so?
1 I Sir, all this is so. But why
Stands Macbeth thus amazedly?
Come Sisters, cheere we vp his spirights,
And shew the best of our delights.
I'le Charme the Ayre to giue a sound,
While you performe your Antique round:
That this great King may kindly say,
Our duties, did his welcome pay. Musicke.
The Witches Dance, and vanish.
Mach. Where are they? Gone?
Let this pernicious houre,
Stand aye accursed in the Kalender.
Come in, without there. Enter Lenox.
Lenox. What's your Graces will.

Mach. Saw you the Weyard Sisters?
Lenox. No my Lord.
Mach. Came they not by you?
Lenox. No indeed my Lord.
Mach. Infected be the Ayre whereon they ride,
And damn'd all those that trust them. I did heare
The gallopping of Horse. Who was't came by?
Len. 'Tis two or three my Lord, that bring you word:
Macduff is fled to England.
Mach. Fled to England?
Len. I, my good Lord.
Mach. Time, thou anticipst'st my dread exploits:
The flighty purpose never is o're-tooke
Vnless the deed go with it. From this moment,
The very firstlings of my heart shall be
The firstlings of my hand. And even now
To Crown my thoughts with Acts: be it thought & done:
The Castle of Macduff, I will surprize,
Seize vpon Fife; giue to th'edge o'th'Sword
His Wife, his Babes, and all vnfortunate Soules
That trace him in his Line. No boasting like a Foole,
This deed I'le do, before this purpose coole,
But no more sights. Where are these Gentlemen?
Come bring me where they are. Exeunt

Scena Secunda.

Enter Macduffes Wife, her Son, and Rosse.

Wife. What had he done, to make him fly the Land?
Rosse. You must haue patience Madam.
Wife. He had none:
His flight was madnesse: when our Actions do not,
Our feares do make vs Traitors.
Rosse. You know not
Whether it was his wisedome, or his feare.
Wife. Wisedom? to leaue his wife, to leaue his Babes,
His Mansion, and his Titles, in a place
From whence himselfe do's flye? He loues vs not,
He wants the naturall touch. For the poore Wren
(The most diminutive of Birds) will fight,
Her young ones in her Nest, against the Owle:
All is the Feare, and nothing is the Loue;
As little is the Wisedome, where the flight
So runnes against all reason.
Rosse. My dearest Cooz,
I pray you schoole your selfe. But for your Husband,
He is Noble, Wise, Iudicious, and best knowes
The fits o'th'Season. I dare not speake much further,
But cruell are the times, when we are Traitors
And do not know our selues: when we hold Rumor
From what we feare, yet know not what we feare,
But floate vpon a wilde and violent Sea
Each way, and none. I take my leaue of you:
Shall not be long but I'le be heere againe:
Things at the worst will cease, or else climbe vpward,
To what they were before. My pretty Cousine,
Blessing vpon you.
Wife. Father'd he is,
And yet he's Father-lesse.
Rosse. I am so much a Foole, should I stay longer
It would be my disgrace, and your discomfort.
I take my leaue at once. Exit Rosse.

Wife. Sirra, your Fathers dead,
And what will you do now? How will you liue?
Son. As Birds do Mother.
Wife. What with Wormes, and Flyes?
Son. With what I get I meane, and so do they.
Wife. Poore Bird,
Thou'dst never Feare the Net, nor Lime,
The Pitfall, nor the Gin.
Son. Why should I Mother?
Poore Birds they are not set for:
My Father is not dead for all your saying.
Wife. Yes, he is dead:
How wilt thou do for a Father?
Son. Nay how will you do for a Husband?
Wife. Why I can buy me twenty at any Market.
Son. Then you'l by 'em to sell againe.
Wife. Thou speak'st withall thy wit,
And yet I'faith with wit enough for thee.
Son. Was my Father a Traitor, Mother?
Wife. I, that he was
Son. What is a Traitor?
Wife. Why one that sweares, and lyes.
Son. And be all Traitors, that do so.
Wife. Euery one that do's so, is a Traitor,
And must be hang'd.
Son. And must they all be hang'd, that swear and lye?
Wife. Every one.
Son. Who must hang them?
Wife. Why, the honest men.
Son. Then the Liars and Swearers are Fools: for there are Lyars and Swearers enow, to beate the honest men, and hang vp them.
Wife. Now God helpe thee, poore Monkie:
But how wilt thou do for a Father?
Son. If he were dead, you'd weepe for him: if you would not, it were a good signe, that I should quickely haue a new Father.
Wife. Poore prattler, how thou talk'st?
Enter a Messenger.
Mes. Bless you faire Dame: I am not to you known,
Though in your state of Honor I am perfect;
I doubt some danger do's approach you neerely.
If you will take a homely mans advice,
Be not found heere: Hence with your little ones
To fright you thus. Me thinks I am too savage:
To do worse to you were fell Cruelty,
Which is too nie your person. Heauen preserue you,
I dare abide no longer. Exit Messenger
Wife. Whether should I flye?
I haue done no harme. But I remember now
I am in this earthly world: where to do harme
Is often laudable, to do good sometime
Accounted dangerous folly. Why then (alas)
Do I put vp that womanly defence,
To say I haue done no harme?
What are these faces?
Enter Murtherers.
Mur. Where is your Husband?
Wife. I hope in no place so vnsanctified,
Where such as thou may'st finde him.
Mur. He's a Traitor.
Son. Thou ly'st thou shagge-ear'd Villaine.
Mur. What you Egge?
Yong fry of Treachery?
Son. He has kill'd me Mother,
Run away I pray you. Exit crying Murther.

Scæna Tertia.

Enter Malcolme and Macduffe.

Mal. Let vs seeke out some desolate shade, & there
Weepe our sad bosomes empty.
Macd. Let vs rather
Hold fast the mortall Sword; and like good men,
Bestride our downfall Birthdome: each new Morne,
New Widdowes howle, new Orphans cry, new sorowes
Strike heaven on the face, that it resounds
As if it felt with Scotland, and yell'd out
Like Syllable of Dolour.
Mal. What I believe, I'le waile;
What know, believe; and what I can redresse,
As I shall finde the time to friend: I will.
What you have spoke, it may be so perchance.
This Tyrant, whose sole name blisters our tongues,
Was once thought honest: you have lou'd him well,
He hath not touch'd you yet. I am yong, but something
You may discerne of him through me, and wisedome
To offer vp a weake, poore innocent Lambe
T'appease an angry God.
Macd. I am not treacherous.
Male. But Macbeth is.
A good and vertuous Nature may recoy le
In an Imperiall charge. But I shall crave your pardon:
That which you are, my thoughts cannot transpose;
Angels are bright still, though the brightest fell.
Though all things foule, would wear the brows of grace
Yet Grace must still looke so.
Macd. I have lost my Hopes.
Male. Perchance even there
Where I did finde my doubts.
Why in that rawnesse left you Wife, and Childe?
Those precious Motives, those strong knots of Loue,
Without leave-taking. I pray you,
Let not my Iealousies, be your Dishonors,
But mine owne Safeties: you may be rightly just,
What ever I shall thinke.
Macd. Bleed, bleed poore Country,
Great Tyranny, lay thou thy basis sure,
For goodnesse dare not check thee: wear ye thy wrongs,
The Title, is affear'd. Far thee well Lord,
I would not be the Villaine that thou think'st,
For the whole Space that's in the Tyrants Grasps,
And the rich East to boot.
Mal. Be not offended:
I speake not as in absolute feare of you:
I thinke our Country sinkes beneath the yoake,
It weepes, it bleeds, and each new day a gash
Is added to her wounds. I thinke withall,
There would be hands vplifted in my right:
And here from gracious England have I offer
Of goodly thousands. But for all this,
When I shall treade vpon the Tyrants head,
Or wear it on my Sword; yet my poore Country
Shall have more vices then it had before,
More suffer, and more sundry weyes then ever,
By him that shall succeede.
Macd. What should he be?
Mal. It is my selfe I meane: in whom I know
All the particulars of Vice so grafted,
That when they shall be open'd, blacke Macbeth
Will seeme as pure as Snow, and the poore State
Esteeme him as a Lambe, being compar'd
With my confinelesse harmes.
Macd. Not in the Legions
Of horrid Hell, can come a Diuell more damn'd
In evills, to top Macbeth.
Mal. I grant him Bloody,
Luxurious, Auaricious, False, Deceitfull,
Sodaine, Malicious, smacking of every sinne
That has a name. But there's no bottome, none
In my Voluptuousnesse: Your Wives, your Daughters,
Your Matrons, and your Maides, could not fill vp
The Cesterne of my Lust, and my Desire
All continent Impedaments would o're-bear,
That did oppose my will. Better Macbeth,
Then such an one to reigne.
Macd. Boundlesse intemperance
In Nature is a Tyranny: It hath beene
Th'vnstanch'd emptying of the happy Throne,
And fall of many Kings. But fear not yet
To take vpon you what is yours: you may
Conuey your pleasures in a spacious plenty,
And yet seeme cold. The time you may so hoodwinke:
We have willing Dames enough: there cannot be
That Vulture in you, to deuoure so many
As will to Greatnesse dedicate themselues,
Finding it so inclinde.
Mal With this, there growes
In my most ill-compos'd Affection, such
A stanchlesse Auarice, that were I King,
I should cut off the Nobles for their Lands,
Desire his Iewels, and this others House,
And my more-having, would be as a Sewer
To make me hunger more, that I should forge
Quarrels vniust against the Good and Loyall,
Destroying them for wealth.
Macd. This Auarice
sticks deeper: growes with more pernicious roots
Then Summer-seeming Lust: and it hath been
The Sword of our slaine Kings: yet do not feare,
Scotland hath Foysons, to fill vp your will
Of your meere Owne. All these are portable,
With other Graces weigh'd.
Mal. But I have none. The King-becoming Graces,
As Iustice, Verity, Temp'rance, Stablenesse,
Bounty, Perseuerance, Mercy, Lowlinesse,
Deuotion, Patience, Courage, Fortitude,
I have no relish of them, but abound
In the diuision of each seuerall Crime,
Acting it many weyes. Nay, had I power, I should Pour the sweet Milke of Concord, into Hell,
Vproare the vniuersall peace, confound
All vnity on earth.
Macd. O Scotland, Scotland.
Mal. If such a one be fit to gouerne, speake:
I am as I have spoken.
Macd. Fit to gouern? No not to liue. O Natiõ miserable!
With an vntitled Tyrant, bloody Scepired,
When shalt thou see thy wholsome dayes against?
Since that the truell Issue of thy Throne
By his owne Interdiction stands accust,
And do's blaspheme his breed? Thy Royall Father
Was a most Saintred-King: the Queene that bore thee,
Oftner vpon her knees, then on her feet,
Dy'de every day she liu'd. Fare thee well,

Thou

These Emils thou repeat'st vpon thy tetle,
Hath banish'd me from Scotland. O my Breft,
Thy hope ends heere.
Mal. Macduff, this Noble passion
Childe of integrity, hath from my soule
Wip'd the blacke Scruples, reconcil'd my thoughes
To thy good Truth, and Honor. Diuellish Macbeth,
By many of these traines, hath sought to win me
Into his power: and modeft Wisedome pluckes me
From ouer-credulous haft: but God aboue
Deale betweene thee and me; For euen now
I put my selfe to thy Direction, and Vnspeake mine owne detraction. Heere abiure
The taints, and blames I laide vpon my selfe,
For strangers to my Nature. I am yet
Vnknowne to Woman, neuer was forsworne,
Scarfety haue coueted what was mine owne.
At no time broke my Faith, would not betray
The Deuill to his Fellow, and delight
No lesse in truth then life. My first false speaking
Was this vpon my selfe. What I am truly
Is thine, and my poore Countries to command:
Whither indeed, before thy heere approach
Old Seyward with ten thousand warlike men
Already at a point, was setting foorth:
Now we'l together, and the chance of goodnesse
Be like our warranted Quarrell. Why are you silent?
Macd Such welcome, and vnwelcome things at once
'Tis hard to reconcile.
Enter a Doctor.
Mal. Well, more anon. Comes the King forth
I pray you?
Doct. I Sir: there are a crew of wretched Soules
That stay his Cure: their malady conuinces
The great assay of Art. But at his touch,
Such sanctity hath Heauen given his hand,
They presently amend. Exit.
Mal. I thanke you Doctor.
Macd. What's the Disease he meanes?
Mal. 'Tis call'd the Euill.
A most myraculous worke in this good King,
Which often since my heere remaine in England,
I haue seene him do: How he solicites heauen
Himselfe best knowes: but strangely visited people
All swolne and Vlcerous, pittifull to the eye,
The meere despaire of Surgery, he cures,
Hanging a golden stampe about their necks,
Put on with holy Prayers, and 'tis spoken
To the succeeding Royalty he leaues
The healing Benediction. With this strange vertue,
He hath a heauenly gift of Prophesie,
And sundry Blessings hang about his Throne,
That speake him full of Grace.
Enter Rosse.
Macd. See who comes heere.
Malc. My Country man: but yet I know him not.
Macd. My euer gentle Cozen, welcome hither.
Malc. I know him now. Good God betimes remoue
The meanes that makes vs Strangers.
Rosse. Sir, Amen.
Macd. Stands Scotland where it did?
Rosse. Alas poore Country,
Almost afraid to know it selfe. It cannot
Be call'd our Mother, but our Grauе; where nothing
But who knowes nothing, is once seene to smile:
Where sighes, and groanes, and shrieks that rent the ayre
Are made, not mark'd: Where violent sorrow seemes
A Moderne extasie: The Deadmans knell,
Is there scarse ask'd for who, and good mens liues
Expire before the Flowers in their Caps,
Dying, or ere they sicken.
Macd. Oh Relation, too nice, and yet too true.
Malc. What's the newest griefe?
Rosse. That of an houres age, doth hisse the speaker,
Each minute teemes a new one.
Macd. How do's my Wife?
Rosse. Why well.
Macd. And all my Children?
Rosse. Well too.
Macd. The Tyrant ha's not batter'd at their peace?
Rosse. No, they were well at peace, when I did leaue 'em
Macd. Be not a niggard of your speech: How goe's?
Rosse. When I came hither to transport the Tydings
Which I haue heauily borne, there ran a Rumour
Of many worthy Fellowes, that were out,
Which was to my beleefe witnest the rather,
For that I saw the Tyrants Power a-foot.
Now is the time of helpe. your eye in Scotland
Would create Soldiours, make our women fight,
To doffe their dire distresses.
Malc. Bee't their comfort
We are comming thither: Gracious England hath
Lent vs good Seyward, and ten thousand men,
An older, and a better Souldier, none
That Christendome gives out.
Rosse. Would I could answer
This comfort with the like. But I haue words
That would be howl'd out in the desert ayre,
Where hearing should not latch them.
Macd. What concerne they,
The generall cause, or is it a Fee-griefe
Due to some single breft?
Rosse. No minde that's honest
But in it shares some woe, though the maine part
Pertaines to you alone.
Macd. If it be mine
Keepe it not from me, quickly let me haue it.
Rosse. Let not your eares despise my tongue for euer,
Which shall possesse them with the heauiest sound
That euer yet they heard.
Macd. Humh: I guesse at it.
Rosse. Your Castle is surpris'd: your Wife, and Babes
Sauagely slaughter'd: To relate the manner
Were on the Quarry of these murther'd Deare
To adde the death of you.
Malc. Merciful Heauen:
What man, ne're pull your hat vpon your browes:
Give sorrow words; the griefe that do's not speake,
Whispers the o're-fraught heart, and bids it breake.
Macd. My Children too?
Ro. Wife, Children, Seruants, all that could be found.
Macd. And I must be from thence? My wife kill'd too?
Rosse. I haue said.
Malc. Be comforted.
Let's make vs Med'cines of our great Reuenge,
To cure this deadly greefe.
Macd. He ha's no Children. All my pretty ones?
Did you say All? Oh Hell-Kite! All?
What, All my pretty Chickens, and their Dammе
At one fell swoope?
Malc. Dispute it like a man.
Macd. I shall do so:

But I must also feele it as a man;
I cannot but remember such things were
That were most precious to me: Did heauen looke on,
And would not take their part? Sinfull Macduff,
They were all strooke for thee: Naught that I am,
Not for their owne demerits, but for mine
Fell slaughter on their soules: Heauen rest them now.

Mal. Be this the Whetstone of your sword, let griefe
Conuert to anger: blunt not the heart, enrage it.

Macd. O I could play the woman with mine eyes,
And Braggart with my tongue. But gentle Heauens,
Cut short all intermission: Front to Front,
Bring thou this Fiend of Scotland, and my selfe
Within my Swords length set him, if he scape
Heauen forgiue him too.

Mal. This time goes manly:
Come go we to the King, our Power is ready,
Our lacke is nothing but our leaue. Macbeth
Is ripe for shaking, and the Powres aboue
Put on their instruments: Receiue what cheere you may,
The Night is long, that never findes the Day. Exeunt

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter a Doctor of Physicke, and a Waiting Gentlewoman.

Doct. I haue too Nights watch'd with you, but can perceiue no truth in your report. When was it shee last walk'd?

Gent. Since his Maiesty went into the Field, I haue seene her rise from her bed, throw her Night-Gown vpon her, vnlocke her Closset, take foorth paper, folde it, write vpon't, read it, afterwards Seale it, and againe returne to bed; yet all this while in a most fast sleepe.

Doct. A great perturbation in Nature, to receyue at once the benefit of sleep, and do the effects of watching. In this slumbry agitation, besides her walking, and other actuall performances, what (at any time) haue you heard her say?

Gent. That Sir, which I will not report after her.

Doct. You may to me, and 'tis most meet you should.

Gent. Neither to you, nor any one, having no witnesse to confirme my speech. Enter Lady, with a Taper.
Lo you, heere she comes: This is her very guise, and vpon my life fast asleepe: obserue her, stand close.

Doct. How came she by that light?

Gent. Why it stood by her: she has light by her continually, 'tis her command.

Doct. You see her eyes are open.

Gent. I but their sense are shut.

Doct. What is it she do's now?
Looke how she rubbes her hands.

Gent. It is an accustom'd action with her, to seeme thus washing her hands: I haue knowne her continue in this a quarter of an houre.

Lad. Yet heere's a spot.

Doct. Heark, she speaks, I will set downe what comes from her, to satisfie my remembrance the more strongly.

La. Out damned spot: out I say. One: Two: Why then 'tis time to doo't: Hell is murky. Fye, my Lord, fie, a Souldier, and affeard? what need we feare? who knowes it, when none can call our powre to accompte: yet who would haue thought the olde man to haue had so much blood in him.

Doct. Do you marke that?

Lad. The Thane of Fife, had a wife: where is she now? What will these hands ne're be cleane? No more o'this my Lord, no more o'that: you marre all with this starting.

Doct. Go too, go too:
You haue knowne what you should not.

Gent. She ha's spoke what shee should not, I am sure of that: Heauen knowes what she ha's knowne.

La. Heere's the smell of the blood still: all the perfumes of Arabia will not sweeten this little hand. Oh, oh, oh.

Doct. What a sigh is there? The heart is sorely charg'd.

Gent. I would not haue such a heart in my bosome, for the dignity of the whole body.

Doct. Well, well, well.

Gent. Pray God it be sir.

Doct. This disease is beyond my practise: yet I haue knowne those which haue walkt in their sleep, who haue dyed holily in their beds.

Lad. Wash your hands, put on your Night-Gowne, looke not so pale: I tell you yet againe Banquo's buried, he cannot come out on's grame.

Doct. Euen so?

Lady. To bed, to bed: there's knocking at the gate: Come, come, come, come, give me your hand: What's done, cannot be vndone. To bed, to bed, to bed. Exit Lady.

Doct. Will she go now to bed?

Gent. Directly.

Doct. Foule whisp'rings are abroad: vnnaturall deeds
Do breed vnnaturall troubles: infected minds
To their deafe pillowes will discharge their Secrets:
More needs she the Diuine, then the Physitian:
God, God forgiue vs all. Looke after her,
Remoue from her the meanes of all annoyance,
And still keepe eyes vpon her: So good night,
My minde she ha's mated, and amaz'd my sight.
I thinke, but dare not speake.

Gent. Good night good Doctor. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Drum and Colours. Enter Menteth, Cathnes, Angus, Lennox, Souldiers.

Ment. The English powre is neere, led on by Malcolm,
His Vnkle Seyward, and the good Macduff.
Reuenges burne in them: for their deere causes
Would to the bleeding, and the grim Alarme
Excite the mortified man.

Ang. Neere Byrnan wood
Shall we well meet them, that way are they comming.

Cath. Who knowes if Donalbaine be with his brother?

Len. For certaine Sir, he is not: I haue a Tale
Of all the Gentry; there is Seywards Sonne,
And many vnruffe youths, that euen now
Protest their first of Manhood.

Ment. What do's the Tyrant.

Cath. Great Dunsinane he strongly Fortifies:
Some say he's mad: Others, that lesser hate him,
Do call it valiant Fury, but for certaine

He

He cannot buckle his distempar'd cause
Within the belt of Rule.
Ang. Now do's he feele
His secret Murthers sticking on his hands,
Now minutely Revolts vpbraid his Faith-breach:
Those he commands, moue onely in command,
Nothing in loue: Now do's he feele his Title
Hang loose about him, like a Giants Robe
Vpon a dwarfish Theefe.
Ment. Who then shall blame
His pester'd Senses to recoyle, and start,
When all that is within him, do's condemne
It selfe, for being there.
Cath. Well, march we on,
To gaue Obedience, where 'tis truly ow'd:
Meet we the Med'cine of the sickly Weale,
And with him poure we in our Countries purge,
Each drop of vs.
Lenox. Or so much as it needes,
To dew the Soueraigne Flower, and drowne the Weeds:
Make we our March towards Birnan. Exeunt marching.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Macbeth, Doctor, and Attendants.

Mach. Bring me no more Reports, let them flye all:
Till Byrnane wood remoue to Dunsinane,
I cannot taint with Feare. What's the Boy Malcolme?
Was he not borne of women? The Spirits that know
All mortall Consequences, haue pronounc'd me thus:
Feare not Macbeth, no man that's borne of women
Shall ere haue power vpon thee. Then fly false Thanes,
And mingle with the English Epicures,
The mindes I sway by, and the heart I beare,
Shall never sagge with doubt, nor shake with feare.
Enter Seruant.
The diuell damne thee blacke, thou cream-fac'd Loone:
Where got'st thou that Goose-looke.
Ser. There is ten thousand.
Mach. Geese Villaine?
Ser. Souldiers Sir.
Mach. Go prickle thy face, and ouer-red thy feare
Thou Lilly-liuer'd Boy. What Soldiers, Patch?
Death of thy Soule, those Linnen cheeks of thine
Are Counsellors to feare. What Soldiers Whey-face?
Ser. The English Force, so please you.
Mach. Take thy face hence. Seyton. I am sick at heart,
When I behold: Seyton, I say, this push
Will cheere me ever, or dis-ease me now.
I haue liu'd long enough: my way of life
Is fallen into the Seare, the yellow Leafe,
And that which should accompany Old-Age,
As Honor, Loue, Obedience, Troopes of Friends,
I must not looke to haue: but in their steed,
Curses, not loud but deepe, Mouth-honor, breath
Which the poore heart would faine deny, and dare not.
Seyton?
Enter Seyton.
Sey. What's your gracious pleasure?
Mach. What Newes more?
Sey. All is confirm'd my Lord, which was reported.
Mach. I'le fight, till from my bones, my flesh be hackt
Giue me my Armor.
Sey. 'Tis not needed yet.
Mach. I'le put it on:
Send out moe Horses, skirre the Country round,
Hang those that talke of Feare. Giue me mine Armor:
How do's your Patient, Doctor?
Doct. Not so sicke my Lord,
As she is troubled with thicke-coming Fancies
That keepe her from her rest.
Mach. Cure of that:
Can'st thou not Minister to a minde diseas'd,
Plucke from the Memory a rooted Sorrow,
Raze out the written troubles of the Braine,
And with some sweet Oblitious Antidote
Cleanse the stuff'd bosome, of that perilous stuffe
Which weighes vpon the heart?
Doct. Therein the Patient
Must minister to himselfe.
Mach. Throw Physicke to the Dogs, I'le none of it.
Come, put mine Armour on: giue me my Staffe:
Seyton, send out: Doctor, the Thanes fly from me
Come sir, dispatch. If thou could'st Doctor, cast
The Water of my Land, finde her Disease,
And purge it to a sound and pristine Health,
I would applaud thee to the very Echo,
That should applaud again. Pull't off I say,
What Rubarb, Cyme, or what Purgatiue drugge
Would scoure these English hence: hear'st ye of them?
Doct. I my good Lord: your Royall Preparation
Makes vs heare something.
Mach. Bring it after me:
I will not be afraid of Death and Bane,
Till Birnane Forrest come to Dunsinane.
Doct. Were I from Dunsinane away, and cleere,
Profit againe should hardly draw me heere. Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Drums and Colours. Enter Malcolme, Seyward, Menteith, Seyward's Sonne, Mentath, Cathnes, Angus, and Soldiers Marching.

Malc. Cousins, I hope the dayes are neere at hand
That Chambers will be safe.
Ment. We doubt it nothing.
Sey. What wood is this before vs?
Ment. The wood of Birnane.
Malc. Let every Souldier hew him downe a Bough,
And beare it before him, thereby shall we shadow
The numbers of our Hoast, and make discovery
Errs in report of vs.
Sold. It shall be done.
Sey. We learne no other, but the confident Tyrant
Keepes still in Dunsinane, and will indure
Our setting downe before it.
Malc. 'Tis his maine hope:
For where there is aduantage to be given,
Both more and lesse haue given him the Reuolt,
And none serue with him, but constrained things,
Whose hearts are absent too.
Macd. Let our iust Censures
Attend the true event, and put we on Industrious

Industrious Souldiership.
Sey. The time approaches,
That will with due decision make vs know
What we shall say we have, and what we owe:
Thoughts speculative, their vnsure hopes relate,
But certaine issue, strokes must arbitrate,
Towards which, advance the warre. Exeunt marching

Scena Quinta.

Enter Macbeth, Seyton, & Souldiers, with, Drum and Colours.

Mach. Hang out our Banners on the outward walls,
The Cry is still, they come: our Castles strength
Will laugh a Siege to scorne: Heere let them lye,
Till Famine and the Ague eate them vp:
Were they not forc'd with those that should be ours,
We might haue met them dareful, beard to beard,
And beate them backward home. What is that noyse?
A Cry within of Women.
Sey. It is the cry of women, my good Lord.
Mach. I haue almost forgot the taste of Feares:
The time ha's beene, my sences would haue cool'd
To heare a Night-shrieke, and my Fell of haire
Would at a dismall Treatise rowze, and stirre
As life were in't. I haue supt full with horrors,
Direnesse familiar to my slaughterous thoughts
Cannot once start me. Wherefore was that cry?
Sey. The Queene (my Lord) is dead.
Mach. She should haue dy'de hereafter;
There would haue beene a time for such a word:
To morrow, and to morrow, and to morrow,
Creepes in this petty pace from day to day,
To the last Syllable of Recorded time:
And all our yesterdayes, haue lighted Fooles
The way to dusty death. Out, out, breefe Candle,
Life's but a walking Shadow, a poore Player,
That struts and frets his houre vpon the Stage,
And then is heard no more. It is a Tale
Told by an Ideot, full of sound and fury
Signifying nothing. Enter a Messenger.
Thou com'st to vse thy Tongue: thy Story quickly.
Mes. Gracious my Lord,
I should report that which I say I saw,
But know not how to doo't.
Mach. Well, say sir.
Mes. As I did stand my watch vpon the Hill
I look'd toward Byrnane, and anon me thought
The Wood began to move.
Mach. Lyar, and Slaue.
Mes. Let me endure your wrath, if't be not so:
Within this three Mile may you see it comming.
I say, a moving Grove.
Mach. If thou speak'st false,
Vpon the next Tree shall thou hang alive
Till Famine cling thee: If thy speech be sooth,
I care not if thou dost for me as much.
I pull in Resolution, and begin
To doubt th'Equiuocation of the Fiend,
That lies like truth. Feare not, till Byrnane Wood
Do come to Dunsinane, and now a Wood
Comes toward Dunsinane. Arme, Arme, and out,
If this which he auouches, do's appeare,
There is not flying hence, nor tarrying here.
I 'ginne to be a-weary of the Sun,
And wish th'estate o'th'world were now vndon.
Ring the Alarum Bell, blow Winde, come wracke,
At least we'l dye with Harnesse on our backe. Exeunt

Scena Sexta.

Drummes and Colours.
Enter Malcolme, Seyward, Macduffe, and their Arme, with Boughes.

Mal. Now neere enough:
Your leauy Skreenes throw downe,
And shew like those you are: You (worthy Vncle)
Shall with my Cosin your right Noble Sonne
Leade our first Battell. Worthy Macduffe, and we Shall take vpon's what else remaines to do,
According to our order.
Sey. Fare you well:
Do we but finde the Tyrants power to night,
Let vs be beaten, if we cannot fight.
Macd. Make all our Trumpets speak, giue them all breath
Those clamorous Harbingers of Blood, & Death. Exeunt
Alarums continued.

Scena Septima.

Enter Macbeth.

Mach. They haue tied me to a stake, I cannot fly,
But Beare like I must fight the course. What's he
That was not borne of Woman? Such a one
Am I to feare, or none.
Enter young Seyward.
Y. Sey. What is thy name?
Mach. Thou'lt be affraid to heare it.
Y. Sey. No: though thou call'st thy selfe a hotter name
Then any is in hell.
Mach. My name's Macbeth.
Y. Sey. The diuell himselfe could not pronounce a Title
More hatefull to mine eare.
Mach. No: nor more fearefull.
Y. Sey. Thou lyest abhorred Tyrant, with my Sword
Ile proue the lye thou speak'st.
Fight, and young Seyward slaine.
Mach. Thou was't borne of woman;
But Swords I smile at. Weapons laugh to scorne,
Brandish'd by man that's of a Woman borne. Exit
Alarums. Enter Macduffe.
Macd. That way the noise is: Tyrant shew thy face,
If thou beest slaine, and with no stroke of mine,
My Wife and Children's Ghosts will haunt me still:
I cannot strike at wretched Kernes, whose armes
Are hyr'd to beare their Staues; either thou Macbeth
Or else my Sword with an vnbatered edge
I sheath again vndeeded. There thou should'st be,
By this great clatter, one of greatest note

Seems

Seemes bruised. Let me finde him Fortune,
And more I begge not. Exit. Alarums.

Enter Malcolme and Seyward.

Sey. This way my Lord, the Castles gently rendred:
The Tyrants people, on both sides do fight,
The Noble Thanes do bravely in the Warre,
The day almost it selfe professes yours,
And little is to do.
Malc. We haue met with Foes
That strike beside vs.
Sey. Enter Sir, the Castle. Exeunt. Alarum

Enter Macbeth.

Mach. Why should I play the Romen Foole, and dye
On mine owne sword? whiles I see liues, the gashes
Do better vpon them.

Enter Macduff.

Macd. Turne Hell-hound, turne.
Mach. Of all men else I haue auoyded thee:
But get thee backe, my soule is too much charg'd
With blood of thine already.
Macd. I haue no words,
My voice is in my Sword, thou bloodier Villaine
Then termes can giue thee out. Fight: Alarum
Mach. Thou loosest labour,
As easie may'st thou the intrenchant Ayre
With thy keene Sword impresse, as make me bleed:
Let fall thy blade on vulnerable Crests,
I beare a charmed Life, which must not yeeld
To one of woman borne.
Macd. Dispaire thy Charme,
And let the Angell whom thou still hast seru'd
Tell thee, Macduff was from his Mothers womb
Vntimely ript.
Mach. Accursed be that tongue that tels mee so;
For it hath Cow'd my better part of man:
And be these Iugling Fiends no more beleeu'd,
That palter with vs in a double sense,
That keepe the word of promise to our eare,
And breake it to our hope. Ile not fight with thee.
Macd. Then yeeld thee Coward,
And liue to be the shew, and gaze o'th' time.
We'l haue thee, as our rarer Monsters are Painted vpon a pole, and vnder-writ,
Heere may you see the Tyrant.
Mach. I will not yeeld
To kisse the ground before young Malcolmes feet,
And to be baited with the Rabbles curse.
Though Byrnane wood be come to Dunsinane,
And thou oppos'd, being of no woman borne,
Yet I will try the last. Before my body,
I throw my warlike Shield: Lay on Macduff,
And damn'd be him, that first cries hold, enough.
Exeunt fighting. Alarums.

Enter Fighting, and Macbeth slaine.

Retreat, and Flourish. Enter with Drummes and Colours, Malcolm, Seyward, Rosse, Thanes, & Soldiers.

Mal. I would the Friends we misse, were safe arriu'd.
Sey. Some must go off: and yet by these I see,
So great a day as this is cheapely bought.
Mal. Macduff is missing, and your Noble Sonne.
Rosse Your son my Lord, has paid a soulders debt,
He onely liu'd but till he was a man,
The which no sooner had his Prowesse confirm'd
In the vnshrinking station where he fought,
But like a man he dy'de.
Sey. Then he is dead?
Rosse. I, and brought off the field: your cuse of sorrow
Must not be measur'd by his worth, for then
It hath no end.
Sey. Had he his hurts before?
Rosse. I, on the Front.
Sey. Why then, Gods Soldier be he:
Had I as many Sonnes, as I haue haires,
I would not wish them to a fairer death:
And so his Knell is knoll'd.
Mal. He's worth more sorrow,
And that Ile spend for him.
Sey. He's worth no more,
They say he parted well, and paid his score,
And so God be with him. Here comes newer comfort.

Enter Macduff, with Macbeths head.

Macd. Haile King, for so thou art.
Behold where stands
Th'Vsurpers cursed head: the time is free:
I see thee compast with thy Kingdomes Pearle,
That speake my salutation in their minds:
Whose voyces I desire aloud with mine.
Haile King of Scotland.
All. Haile King of Scotland. Flourish.
Mal. We shall not spend a large expence of time,
Before we reckon with your seuerall loues,
And make vs euen with you. My Thanes and Kinsmen
Henceforth be Earles, the first that euer Scotland
In such an Honor nam'd: What's more to do,
Which would be planted newly with the time,
As calling home our exil'd Friends abroad,
That fled the Snares of watchfull Tyranny,
Producing forth the cruell Ministers
Of this dead Butcher, and his Fiend-like Queene;
Who (as 'tis thought) by selfe and violent hands,
Tooke off her life. This, and what needfull else
That call's vpon vs, by the Grace of Grace,
We will performe in measure, time, and place:
So thankes to all at once, and to each one,
Whom we inuite, to see vs Crown'd at Scone.
Flourish. Exeunt Omnes.

FINIS.

THE TRAGEDIE OF HAMLET, Prince of Denmarke.

Actus Primus. Scæna Prima.

Enter Bernardo and Francisco two Centinels.

Bernardo.

Who's there?

Fran. Nay answer me: Stand & vnfold yourselfe.

Ber. Long live the King.

Fran. Bernardo?

Ber. He.

Fran. You come most carefully vpon your hour.

Ber. 'Tis now strook twelue, get thee to bed Francisco.

Fran. For this releefe much thankes: 'Tis bitter cold, And I am sicke at heart.

Ber. Haue you had quiet Guard?

Fran. Not a Mouse stirring.

Ber. Well, goodnight. If you do meet Horatio and Marcellus, the Rivals of my Watch, bid them make haste.

Enter Horatio and Marcellus.

Fran. I thinke I heare them. Stand: who's there?

Hor. Friends to this ground.

Mar. And Liege-men to the Dane.

Fran. Giue you good night.

Mar. O farwel honest Soldier, who hath relieu'd you?

Fra. Bernardo has my place: giue you goodnight.

Exit Fran.

Mar. Holla Bernardo.

Ber. Say, what is Horatio there?

Hor. A peece of him.

Ber. Welcome Horatio, welcome good Marcellus.

Mar. What, has this thing appear'd again to night.

Ber. I haue seene nothing.

Mar. Horatio faies, 'tis but our Fantasie,
And will not let beleefe take hold of him
Touching this dreaded sight, twice seene of vs,
Therefore I haue intreated him along
With vs, to watch the minutes of this Night,
That if againe this Apparition come,
He may approue our eyes, and speake to it.

Hor. Tush, tush, 'twill not appeare.

Ber. Sit downe a-while,
And let vs once again assaile your eares,
That are so fortified against our Story,
What we two Nights haue seene.

Hor. Well, sit we downe,
And let vs heare Bernardo speake of this.

Ber. Last night of all,
When yond same Starre that's Westward from the Pole
Had made his course t'illume that part of Heauen
Where now it burnes, Marcellus and my selfe,
The Bell then beating one.

Mar. Peace, breake thee of: Enter the Ghost.
Looke where it comes again.

Ber. In the same figure, like the King that's dead.

Mar. Thou art a Scholler; speake to it Horatio.

Ber. Looks it not like the King? Marke it Horatio.

Hora. Most like: It harrowes me with feare & wonder.

Ber. It would be speake too.

Mar. Question it Horatio.

Hor. What art thou that vsurp'st this time of night,
Together with that Faire and Warlike forme
In which the Maiesty of buried Denmarke
Did sometimes march: By Heauen I charge thee speake.

Mar. It is offended.

Ber. See, it stalkes away.

Hor. Stay: speake; speake: I Charge thee speake.

Exit the Ghost.

Mar. 'Tis gone, and will not answer.

Ber. How now Horatio? You tremble & look pale:
Is not this something more than Fantasie?
What thinke you on't?

Hor. Before my God, I might not this believe
Without the sensible and true auouch
Of mine owne eyes.

Mar. Is it not like the King?

Hor. As thou art to thy selfe,
Such was the very Armour he had on,
When th'Ambitious Norway combated:
So frown'd he once, when in an angry parle
He smote the sledded Pollax on the Ice.
'Tis strange.

Mar. Thus twice before, and just at this dead hour,
With Martiall stalke, hath he gone by our Watch.

Hor. In what particular thought to work, I know not:
But in the gross and scope of my Opinion,
This bodes some strange eruption to our State.

Mar. Good now sit downe, & tell me he that knowes
Why this same strict and most obseruant Watch,
So nightly toyles the subiect of the Land,
And why such daily Cast of Brasse Cannon
And Forraigne Mart for Implements of warre:
Why such impressa of Ship-wrights, whose sore Task
Do'st not diuide the Sunday from the week,
What might be toward, that this feuerie haste
Doth make the Night ioyn Labourer with the day:
Who is't that can inform me

Hor. That can I,

At least the whisper goes so: Our last King,
Whose Image euen but now appear'd to vs,
Was (as you know) by Fortinbras of Norway,
(Thereto prick'd on by a most emulate Pride)
Dar'd to the Combate. In which, our Valiant Hamlet,
(For so this side of our knowne world esteem'd him)
Did slay this Fortinbras: who by a Seal'd Compact,
Well ratified by Law, and Heraldrie,
Did forfeite (with his life) all those his Lands
Which he stood seiz'd on, to the Conqueror:
Against the which, a Moity competent
Was gaged by our King: which had return'd
To the Inheritance of Fortinbras,
Had he bin Vanquisher, as by the same Co'nant
And carriage of the Article designe,
His sell to Hamlet. Now sir, young Fortinbras,
Of vnimproued Mettle, hot and full,
Hath vn the skirts of Norway, heere and there,
Shark'd vp a List of Landlesse Resolutes,
For Foode and Diet, to some Enterprise
That hath a stomacke in't: which is no other
(And it doth well appeare vnto our State)
But to recouer of vs by strong hand
And terms Compulsatiue, those foresaid Lands
So by his Father lost: and this (I take it)
Is the maine Motiue of our Preparations,
The Source of this our Watch, and the cheefe head
Of this post-hast, and Romage in the Land.

Enter Ghost again.

But soft, behold: Loe, where it comes againe:
Ile crosse it, though it blast me. Stay Illusion:
If thou hast any sound, or vse of Voyce,
Speake to me. If there be any good thing to be done,
That may to thee do ease, and grace to me; speak to me.
If thou art priuy to thy Countries Fate
(Which happily foreknowing may auoyd) Oh speake.
Or, if thou hast vp-hoorded in thy life
Extorted Treasure in the wombe of Earth,
(For which, they say, you Spirits oft walke in death)
Speake of it. Stay, and speake. Stop it Marcellus.

Mar. Shall I strike at it with my Partizan?

Hor. Do, if it will not stand.

Bern. 'Tis heere.

Hor. 'Tis heere.

Mar. 'Tis gone. Exit Ghost.

We do it wrong, being so Maleficall
To offer it the shew of Violence,
For it is as the Ayre, inuulnerable,
And our vaine blowes, malicious Mockery.

Bern. It was about to speake, when the Cocke crew.

Hor. And then it started, like a guilty thing
Vpon a fearfull Summons. I haue heard,
The Cocke that is the Trumpet to the day,
Doth with his lofty and shrill-sounding Throate
Awake the God of Day: and at his warning,
Whether in Sea, or Fire, in Earth, or Ayre,
Th'extrauagant, and erring Spirit, hyes
To his Confine. And of the truth heerein,
This present Obiect made probation.

Mar. It faded on the crowing of the Cocke.
Some say, that ever 'gainst that Season comes
Wherein our Saiuiours Birth is celebrated,
The Bird of Dawning singeth all night long:
And then (they say) no Spirit can walke abroad,
The nights are wholsome, then no Planets strike,
No Fairy talkes, nor Witch hath power to Charme:
So hallow'd, and so gracious is the time.

Hor. So haue I heard, and do in part beleeue it.
But looke, the Morne in Rosset mantle clad,
Walkes o're the dew of yon high Easteine Hill,
Breake we our Watch vp, and by my aduice
Let vs impart what we haue seene to night
Vnto young Hamlet. For vpon my life,
This Spirit dumbe to vs, will speake to him:
Do yon consent we shall acquaint him with it,
As needfull in our Loues, fitting our Duty?

Mar. Let do't I pray, and I this morning know
Where we shall finde him most conueniently. Exeunt

Scena Secunda.

Enter Claudius King of Denmarke, Gertrude the Queene, Hamlet, Polonius, Laertes, and his Sister Ophelia, Lords Attendant.

King. Though yet of Hamlet our deere Brothers death
The memory be greene: and that it vs befitted
To bestre our hearts in greefe, and our whole Kingdome
To be contracted in one brow of woe:
Yet so farre hath Discretion fought with Nature,
That we with wisest sorrow thinke on him,
Together with remembrance of our selues.
Therefore our sometimes Sister, now our Queen,
Th'Imperiall Ioyntresse of this warlike State,
Haue we, as 'twere, with a defeated ioy,
With one Auspicious, and one Dropping eye,
With mirth in Funerall, and with Dirge in Marriage,
In equall Scale weighing Delight and Dole
Taken to Wife; nor haue we heerein barr'd
Your better Wisedomes, which haue freely gone
With this affaire along, for all our Thankes.
Now follows, that you know young Fortinbras,
Holding a weake supposall of our worth;
Or thinking by our late deere Brothers death,
Our State to be disioyn'd, and out of Frame,
Colleagued with the dreame of his Aduantage;
He hath not fayl'd to pester vs with Message,
Importing the surrender of those Lands
Lost by his Father: with all Bonds of Law
To our most valiant Brother. So much for him.

Enter Voltemand and Cornelius.

Now for our selfe, and for this time of meeting
Thus much the businesse is. We haue heere writ
To Norway, Vncle of young Fortinbras,
Who Impotent and Bedrid, scarsely heares
Of this his Nephewes purpose, to suppresse
His further gate heerein. In that the Leuies,
The Lists, and full proportions are all made
Out of his subiect: and we heere dispatch
You good Cornelius, and you Voltemand,
For bearing of this greeting to old Norway,
Giuing to you no further personall power
To business with the King, more then the scope
Of these dilated Articles allow:
Farewell and let your haste commend your duty.

Vol. In that, and all things, will we shew our duty.

King. We doubt it nothing, heartily farewell.

Exit Voltemand and Cornelius.

And now Laertes, what's the newes with you?

You told vs of some suite. What is't Laertes?
You cannot speake of Reason to the Dane,
And loose your voyce. What would'st thou beg Laertes,
That shall not be my Offer, not thy Asking?
The Head is not more Native to the Heart,
The Hand more Instrumentall to the Mouth,
Then is the Throne of Denmarke to thy Father.
What would'st thou haue Laertes?

Lae. Dread my Lord,
Your leaue and fauour to returne to France,
From whence, though willingly I came to Denmarke
To shew my duty in your Coronation,
Yet now I must confesse, that duty done,
My thoughts and wishes bend again towards France,
And bow them to your gracious leaue and pardon.

King. Haue you your Fathers leaue?
What sayes Polonius?

Pol. He hath my Lord:
I do beseech you giue him leaue to go.

King. Take thy faire houre Laertes, time be thine,
And thy best graces spend it at thy will:
But now my Cosin Hamlet, and my Sonne?

Ham. A little more then kin, and lesse then kinde.

King. How is it that the Clouds still hang on you?

Ham. Not so my Lord, I am too much i'th'Sun.

Queen. Good Hamlet cast thy nightly colour off,
And let thine eye looke like a Friend on Denmarke.
Do not for ever with thy veyled lids
Seeke for thy Noble Father in the dust;
Thou know'st 'tis common, all that liues must dye,
Passing through Nature, to Eternity.

Ham. Madam, it is common.

Queen. If it be;
Why seemes it so particular with thee.

Ham. Seemes Madam? Nay, it is: I know not Seemes:
'Tis not alone my Inky Cloake (good Mother)
Nor Customary suites of solemne Blacke,
Nor windy suspiration of forc'd breath,
No, nor the fruitfull Riuer in the Eye,
Nor the dejected hauiour of the Visage,
Together with all Formes, Moods, shewes of Griefe,
That can denote me truly. These indeed Seeme,
For they are actions that a man might play:
But I haue that Within, which passeth show;
These, but the Trappings, and the Suites of woe.

King. 'Tis sweet and commendable
In your Nature Hamlet,
To giue these mourning duties to your Father:
But you must know, your Father lost a Father,
That Father lost, lost his, and the Suruiuer bound
In filiall Obligation, for some term
To do obsequious Sorrow. But to perseuer
In obstinate Condolement, is a course
Of impious stubbornesse. 'Tis vnmanly greefe,
It shewes a will most incorrect to Heauen,
A Heart vnfortified, a Minde impatient,
An Vnderstanding simple, and vnschool'd:
For, what we know must be, and is as common
As any the most vulgar thing to sense,
Why should we in our peeuish Opposition
Take it to heart? Fye, 'tis a fault to Heauen,
A fault against the Dead, a fault to Nature,
To Reason most absurd, whose common Theame
Is death of Fathers, and who still hath cried,
From the first Corse, till he that dyed to day,
This must be so. We pray you throw to earth
This vnpreuailing woe, and think of vs
As of a Father; For let the world take note,
You are the most immediate to our Throne,
And with no lesse Nobility of Loue,
Then that which deerest Father beares his Sonne,
Do I impart towards you. For your intent
In going backe to Schoole in Wittenberg,
It is most retrograde to our desire:
And we beseech you, bend you to remaine
Heere in the cheere and comfort of our eye,
Our chiefest Courtier Cosin, and our Sonne.

Qu. Let not thy Mother lose her Prayers Hamlet.
I prythee stay with vs, go not to Wittenberg.

Ham. I shall in all my best
Obey you Madam.

King. Why 'tis a loueing, and a faire Reply,
Be as our selfe in Denmarke. Madam come,
This gaeste and vnforc'd accord of Hamlet
Sits smiling to my heart; in grace whereof,
No iocund health that Denmarke drinkes to day,
But the great Cannon to the Clouds shall tell,
And the Kings Rouse, the Heauens shall bruite again,
Respeaking earthly Thunder. Come away. Exeunt

Manet Hamlet.

Ham. Oh that this too too sullid Flesh, would melt,
Thaw, and resolue itselfe into a Dew:
Or that the Euerlasting had not fixt
His Cannon 'gainst Self-slaughter. O God, O God!
How weary, stale, flat, and vnprofitable
Seemes to me all the vses of this world?
Fie on't? Oh fie, fie, 'tis an vnweeded Garden
That growes to Seed: Things rank, and grosse in Nature
Possesse it meerely. That it should come to this:
But two months dead: Nay, not so much, not two,
So excellent a King, that was to this
Hyperion to a Satyre: so loueing to my Mother,
That he might not beteeme the winds of heauen
Visit her face too roughly. Heauen and Earth
Must I remember: why she would hang on him,
As if encrease of Appetite had growne
By what it fed on; and yet within a month?
Let me not thinke on't: Frailty, thy name is woman.
A little Month, or ere those shoues were old,
With which she followed my poore Fathers body
Like Niobe, all teares. Why she, even she.
(O Heauen! A beast that wants discourse of Reason
Would haue mourn'd longer) married with mine Vncle,
My Fathers Brother: but no more like my Father,
Then I to Hercules. Within a Moneth?
Ere yet the salt of most vnrighteous Teares
Had left the flushing of her gaoled eyes,
She married. O most wicked speed, to post
With such dexterity to Incestuous sheets:
It is not, nor it cannot come to good.
But breake my heart, for I must hold my tongue.

Enter Horatio, Bernard, and Marcellus.

Hor. Haile to your Lordship.

Ham. I am glad to see you well:
Horatio, or I do forget my selfe.

Hor. The same my Lord,
And your poore Seruant ever.

Ham. Sir my good friend,
I'le change that name with you:
And what make you from Wittenberg Horatio?

Ma.

Marcellus.

Mar. My good Lord.

Ham. I am very glad to see you: good even Sir.
But what in faith make you from Wittenberge?

Hor. A truant disposition, good my Lord.

Ham. I would not heare your Enemy say so;
Nor shall you doe mine eare that violence,
To make it truster of your owne report
Against your selfe. I know you are no Truant:
But what is your affaire in Elsinour?
We'l teach you to drinke deepe, ere you depart.

Hor. My Lord, I came to see your Fathers Funerall.

Ham. I pray thee doe not mock me (fellow Student)
I thinke it was to see my Mothers Wedding.

Hor. Indeed my Lord, it followed hard vpon.

Ham. Thrift, thrift Horatio: the Funerall Bak-meats
Did coldly furnish forth the Marriage Tables;
Would I had met my dearest foe in heaven,
Ere I had ever seene that day Horatio.
My father, me thinkes I see my father.

Hor. Oh where my Lord?

Ham. In my minds eye (Horatio)

Hor. I saw him once; he was a goodly King.

Ham. He was a man, take him for all in all:
I shall not look vpon his like againe.

Hor. My Lord, I think I saw him yesternight.

Ham. Saw? Who?

Hor. My Lord, the King your Father.

Ham. The King my Father.

Hor. Season your admiration for a while
With an attent eare; till I may deliver
Vpon the witnesse of these Gentlemen,
This marvell to you.

Ham. For Heavens loue let me heare.

Hor. Two nights together, had these Gentlemen
(Marcellus and Bernardo) on their Watch.
In the dead wast and middle of the night
Beene thus encountred. A figure like your Father,
Armd at all points exactly, Cap a Pe,
Appeares before them, and with sollemne march
Goes slow and stately: By them thrice he walkt,
By their oppresst and feare-surprized eyes.
Within his Truncheons length; whilst they bestil'd
Almost to Jelly with the Act of feare,
Stand dumbe and speake not to him. This to me
In dreadfull secrecie impart they did,
And I with them the third Night kept the Watch,
Whereas they had deliver'd both in time,
Forme of the thing; each word made true and good,
The Apparition comes. I knew your Father:
These hands are not more like.

Ham. But where was this?

Mar. My Lord, vpon the platforme where we watch.

Ham. Did you not speake to it?

Hor. My Lord, I did;
But answere made it none: yet once methought
It lifted vp it head, and did addresse
It selfe to motion, like as it would speake:
But even then, the Morning Cocke crew loud;
And at the sound it shrunke in haste away,
And vanisht from our sights.

Ham. Tis very strange.

Hor. As I doe live my honoured Lord 'tis true.
And we did thinke it were downe in our duty
To let you know of it.

Ham. Indeed, indeed Sirs, but this troubles me
Hold you the watch to Night?

Both. We doe my Lord.

Ham. Arm'd, say you?

Both. Arm'd, my Lord.

Ham. From top to toe?

Both. My Lord, from head to foote.

Ham. Then saw you not his face?

Hor. O yes, my Lord, he wore his Beaver vp.

Ham. What, looke he frowningly?

Hor. A countenance more in sorrow then in anger.

Ham. Pale, or red?

Hor. Nay very pale.

Ham. And fixt his eyes vpon you?

Hor. Most constantly.

Ham. I would I had beene there.

Hor. It would have much amaz'd you.

Ham. Very like, very like: staid it long? (dred.

Hor. While one with moderate haste might tell a hun-

All. Longer, longer.

Hor. Not when I saw't.

Ham. His Beard was griziled no.

Hor. It was, as I have seene it in his life,
A Sable Silver'd. (gaine.

Ham. I'le watch to Night; perchance 'twill walke a-

Hor. I warrant you it will.

Ham. If it assume my noble Fathers person,
I'le speake to it, though Hell it selfe should gape
And bid me hold my peace. I pray you all,
If you have hitherto concealed this sight,
Let it bee tenable in your silence still;
And whatsoever els shall hap to night,
Give it an understanding but no tongue;
I will requite your loues; so, fare ye well:
Vpon the Platforme twixt eleven and twelve,
I'le visit you.

All. Our duty to your Honour. Exeunt.

Ham. Your loue, as mine to you: farewell.
My Fathers Spirit in Armes? All is not well:
I doubt some foule play: would the Night were come;
Till then sit still my soule; foule deeds will rise,
Though all the earth overwhelm them to mens eies. Exit.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Laertes and Ophelia.

Laer. My necessaries are imbark't; Farewell:
And Sister, as the Winds give Benefit,
And Conuoy is assistant; doe not sleepe,
But let me heare from you.

Ophel. Doe you doubt that?

Laer. For Hamlet, and the trifling of his fancies,
Hold it a fashion and a toy in Blood;
A Violet in the youth of Primy Nature;
Froward, not permanent; sweet not lasting
The suppliance of a minute? No more.

Ophel. No more but so.

Laer. Think it no more.
For nature crescent does not grow alone,
In thewes and Bulke: but in his Temple wrous,
The inward service of the Minde and Soule
Growes wide withall. Perhaps he loues you now,
And now no soyle nor cautell doth besmerch
The vertue of his feare: but you must feare

His greatnesse weigh'd, his will is not his owne;
For he himselfe is subiect to his Birth:
He may not, as vnaduised persons doe,
Carue for himselfe; for, on his choyce depends
The sanctity and health of the weole State.
And therefore must his choyce be circumscrib'd
Vnto the voyce and yeelding of that Body,
Whereof he is the Head. Then if he sayes he loues you,
It fits your wisdome so farre to beleeue it;
As he is in his peculiar Sect and force
May giue his saying deed: which is no further,
Then the maine voyce of Denmark goes withall.
Then weigh what losse your Honour may sustaine,
If with too credent eare you list his Songs;
Or lose your Heart; or your chaste Treasure open
To his vnmatured importunity.
Feare it Ophelia, feare it my deare Sister,
And keepe within the rearе of your Affection;
Out of the shot and danger of Desire.
The chariest Maid is Prodigall enough,
If she vnmaske her beauty to the Moone:
Vertue is selfe scapes not calumnious strokes,
The Canker Galls, the Infants of the Spring
Too oft before the buttons be disclos'd,
And in the Morne and liquid dew of Youth,
Contagious blastmenes are most immanent.
Be wary then, best safety lies in feare;
Youth to it selfe rebels, though none else neare.
Ophe. I shall th'effect of this good Lesson keepe,
As watchmen to my heart: but good my Brother
Doe not as some vngracious Pastors doe,
Shew me the steepe and thorny way to Heaven;
Whilst like a puff and reckless Libertine
Himselfe, the Primrose path of dalliance treads,
And reaks not his owne reade.
Laer. Oh, feare me not.
Enter Polonius.
I stay too long; but here my Father comes:
A double blessing is a double grace;
Occasion smiles vpon a second leaue.
Polon. Yet here Laertes! Aboard, aboard for shame,
The winde sits in the shoulder of your saile,
And you are staid for there: my blessing with you;
And these few Precepts in thy memory,
See thou Character. Giue thy thoughts no tongue,
Nor any vnproportion'd thought his Act:
Be thou familiar; but by no meanes vulgar:
The friends thou hast, and their adoption tride,
Grapple them to thy Soule, with hoopes of Steele:
But doe not dull thy palme, with entertainment
Of each vnhatch't, vnfledg'd Comrade. Beware
Of entrance to a quarrell: but being in
Bear't that th'opposed may beware of thee.
Giue every man thine eare; but few thy voyce:
Take each mans censure; but reserue thy iudgement:
Costly thy habit as thy purse can buy;
But not expreſt in fancie; rich, not gawdie:
For the Apparell oft proclaimes the man.
And they in France of the best rauck and station,
Are of a most select and generous chiefe in that.
Neither a borrower, nor a lender be;
For loue oft loses both it selfe and friend:
And borrowing dulls the edge of Husbandry.
This aboue all; to thine own selfe be true:
And it must follow, as the Night the Day,
Thou canst not then be false to any man.
Farewell: my Blessing season this in thee.
Laer. Most humbly doe I take my leaue, my Lord.
Polon. The time inuites you, goe, your seruants tend.
Laer. Farewell Ophelia, and remember well
What I haue said to you.
Ophe. Tis in my memory locke,
And you your selfe shall keepe the key of it.
Laer. Farewell. Exit Laer.
Polon. What is't Ophelia he hath said to you?
Ophe. So please you, something touching the L. Hamlet
Polon. Marry, well bethought:
Tis told me he hath very oft of late
Given priuate time to you; and you your selfe
Haue of your audience been most free and bounteous.
If it be so, as so tis put on me;
And that in way of caution: I must tell you,
You doe not vnderstand your selfe so cleerely,
As it behoues my Daughter, and your Honour.
What is betweene you, giue me vp the truth?
Ophe. He hath my Lord of late, made many tenders
Of his affection to me.
Polon. Affection, puh. You speake like a greene Girle,
Vnsifted in such perilous Circumstance.
Doe you believe his tenders, as you call them?
Ophe. I do not know, my Lord, what I should think.
Polon. Marry I'le teach you; thinke your selfe a Baby,
That you haue tane his tenders for true pay,
Which are not sterling. Tender your selfe more dearly;
Or not to crack the winde of the poore Phrase,
Roaring it thus, you'l tender me a foole.
Ophe. My Lord, he hath importun'd me with loue,
In honourable fashion.
Polon. I, fashion you may call it, go too, go too.
Ophe. And hath given countenance to his speech,
My Lord, with all the vowes of Heaven.
Polon. I, Springes to catch Woodcocks. I doe know
When the Bloud burnes, how Prodigall the Soule
Giues the tongue vowes: these blazes, Daughter,
Giuing more light then heate; extinct in both,
Euen in their promise, as it is a making;
You must not take for fire. For this time Daughter,
Be somewhat scanter of your Maiden presence;
Set your entreatments at a higher rate,
Then a command to parley. For Lord Hamlet,
Beleeue so much in him, that he is young,
And with a larger tether may he walke,
Then may be given you. In few, Ophelia,
Doe not believe his vowes; for they are Broakers,
Not of the eye, which their Inuestments show:
But meere implorators of vnholy Suits,
Breathing like sanctified and pious bonds,
The better to beguile. This is for all.
I would not, in plaine termes, from this time forth,
Haue you so slander any moment leisure,
As to give words or talke with the Lord Hamlet:
Looke to't, I charge you; come your waies.
Ophe. I shall obey my Lord. Exeunt.

Enter Hamlet, Horatio, Marcellus.
Ham. The Ayre bites shrewdly: is it very cold?
Hor. It is a nipping and an eager ayre.
Ham. What hour now?
Hor. I think it lacks of twelue.
Mar. No, it is stroke. (Sonus.
Hor. Indeed I heard it not: then it drawes neere the
Wherein the Spirit held his wont to walke.

What does this mesne my Lord? (rouse,
Ham. The King doth wake to night, and takes his
Keepes wassels and the swaggering vpspring reeles,
And as he draines his draughts of Renish downe,
The kettle Drum and Trumpet thus bray out
The triumph of his Pledge.
Horat. Is it a custome?
Ham. I marry ist;
And to my mind, though I am native heere,
And to the manner borne: It is a Custome
More honour'd in the breach, then the obseruance.
Enter Ghost.
Hor. Looke my Lord, it comes.
Ham. Angels and Ministers of Grace defend vs
Be thou a Spirit of health, or Goblin damn'd,
Bring with thee ayres from Heauen, or blasts from Hell
Be thy events wicked or charitable,
Thou com'st in such a questionable shape
That I will speake to thee. Ile call thee Hamlet,
King, Father, Royall Dane: Oh, oh, answer me,
Let me not burst in Ignorance; but tell
Why thy Canoniz'd bones Hearsed in death,
Haue burst their cerements; why the Sepulcher
Wherein we saw thee quietly enterr'd,
Hath op'd his ponderous and Marble iawes,
To cast thee vp againe? What may this mean?
That thou dead Corse again in compleat steele,
Reuisits thus the glimpses of the Moone,
Making Night hideous? And we fooles of Nature,
So horridly to shake our disposition,
With thoughts beyond thee; reaches of our Soules,
Say, why is this? wherefore? what should we doe?
Ghost beckons Hamlet.
Hor It beckons you to goe away with it,
As if it some impartment did desire
To you alone.
Mar. Looke with what courteous action
It waftes you to a more remoued ground:
But doe not goe with it.
Hor. No, by no meanes.
Ham. It will not speake: then will I follow it.
Hor. Doe not my Lord.
Ham. Why, what should be the feare?
I doe not set my life at a pins fee;
And for my Soule, what can it doe to that?
Being a thing immortall as it selfe:
It woues me forth againe; Ile follow it.
Hor. What if it tempt you toward the Flood my Lord?
Or to the dreadfull Sonnet of the Cliffe,
That beetles o're his base into the Sea,
And there assumes some other horrible forme,
Which might deprive your Souereignty of Reason,
And draw you into madnesse thinke of it?
Ham. It wafts me still: goe on, Ile follow thee.
Mar. You shall not goe my Lord.
Ham. Hold off your hand.
Hor. Be rul'd, you shall not goe.
Ham. My fate cries out,
And makes each petty Artire in this body,
As hardy as the Nemian Lions nerue:
Still am I call'd? Vnhand me Gentlemen:
By Heau'n, Ile make a Ghost of him that lets me:
I say away, goe on, Ile follow thee.
Exeunt Ghost & Hamlet.
Hor He waxes desperate with imagination.
Mar. Let's follow: 'tis not fit thus to obey him.
Hor. Haue after, to what issue will this come?
Mar. Something is rotten in the State of Denmarke.
Hor. Heauen will direct it.
Mar. Nay, let's follow him. Exeunt.
Enter Ghost and Hamlet. (ther.
Ham Where wilt thou lead me? speak; Ile go no fur-
Gho. Marke me
Ham. I will.
Gho. My hower is almost come,
When I to sulphurous and tormenting Flames
Must render vp my selfe.
Ham. Alas poore Ghost.
Gho. Pitty me not, but lend thy serious hearing
To what I shall vnfold.
Ham. Speake, I am bound to heare.
Gho. So art thou to reuenge, when thou shalt heare.
Ham. What?
Gho. I am thy Fathers Spirit,
Doom'd for a certaine terme to walke the night;
And for the day confin'd to fast in Fiers,
Till the foule crimes done in my dayes of Nature
Are burnt and purg'd away? But that I am forbid
To tell the secrets of my Prison-House;
I could a Tale vnfold, whose lightest word
Would harrow vp thy soule, freeze thy young blood,
Make thy two eyes like Starres, start from their Spheres,
Thy knotty and combined locks to part,
And each particular haire to stand on end,
Like Quilles vpon the fretfull Porpentine:
But this eternall blason must not be
To eares of flesh and blood; list Hamlet, oh list,
If thou didst ever thy deare Father loue.
Ham. Oh Heauen!
Gho. Revenge his foule and most vnnaturall Murther.
Ham. Murther?
Ghost. Murther most foule, as in the best it is;
But this most foule, strange, and vnnaturall.
Ham. Haste, haste me to know it,
That with wings as swift
As meditation, or the thoughts of Loue,
May sweepe to my Reuenge.
Ghost. I finde thee apt,
And duller shouldst thou be then the fat weede
That roots it selfe in ease, on Lethe Wharfe,
Would'st thou not stirre in this. Now Hamlet heare:
It's giuen out, that sleeping in mine Orchard,
A Serpent stung me: so the whole eare of Denmarke,
Is by a forged process of my death
Rankly abus'd: But know thou Noble youth,
The Serpent that did sting thy Fathers life,
Now weares his Crowne.
Ham. O my Prophetick soule: mine Vncle?
Ghost. I that incestuous, that adulterate Beast
With witchcraft of his wits, hath Traitorous guiftes.
Oh wicked Wit, and Gifts, that haue the power
So to seduce? Won to to this shameful Lust
The will of my most seeming vertuous Queene:
Oh Hamlet, what a falling off was there,
From me, whose loue was of that dignity,
That it went hand in hand, even with the Vow
I made to her in Marriage; and to decline
Vpon a wretch, whose Naturall gifts were poore
To those of mine. But Vertue, as it never will be moued,
Though Lewdnesse court it in a shape of Heauen:
So Lust, though to a radiant Angell link'd,
Will sate it selfe in a Celestiall bed, & prey on Garbage.

But soft, me thinkes I sent the Morningis Ayre;
Briefe let me be: Sleeping within mine Orchard,
My custome always in the afternoone;
Vpon my secure hower thy Vncle stole
With iuyce of cursed Hebenon in a Viall,
And in the Porches of mine eares did poure
The leaperous Distillment; whose effect
Holds such an enmity with blood of Man,
That swift as Quick-siluer, it courses through
The naturall Gates and Allies of the Body;
And with a sodaine vigour it doth posset
And curd, like Aygre droppings into Milke,
The thin and wholsome blood: so did it mine;
And a most instant Tetter bak'd about,
Most Lazar-like, with vile and loathsome crust,
All my smooth Body.
Thus was I, sleeping, by a Brothers hand,
Of Life, of Crowne, and Queene at once dispatche;
Cut off euen in the Blossomes of my Sinne,
Vnhouzzled, disappointed, vnaneld,
No reckoning made, but sent to my account
With all my imperfections on my head;
Oh horrible, Oh horrible, most horrible:
If thou hast nature in thee beare it not;
Let not the Royall Bed of Denmarke be
A Couch for Luxury and damned Incest.
But howsoeuer thou pursuest this Act,
Taint not thy mind; nor let thy Soule contriue
Against thy Mother ought; leaue her to heauen,
And to those Thornes that in her bosome lodge,
To pricke and sting her. Fare thee well at once;
The Glow-worme showes the Matine to be neere,
And gins to pale his vneffectuall Fire:
Adue, adue, Hamlet: remember me. Exit.

Ham Oh all you host of Heauen! Oh Earth: what else?
And shall I couple Hell? Oh fie: hold my heart;
And you my sinnewes, grow not instant Olds
But bearе me stiffely vp: Remember thee?
I, thou poore Ghost, while memory holds a seate
In this distracted Globe: Remember thee?
Yea, from the Table of my Memory,
Ile wipe away all trivial fond Records,
All saws of Bookes, all formes, all pressures past,
That youth and observation copied there;
And thy Commandment all alone shall liue
Within the Booke and Volume of my Braine,
Vnmixt with baser matter; yes, yes, by Heauen:
Oh most pernicious woman!
Oh Villaine, Villaine, smiling damned Villaine!
My Tables, my Tables; meet it is I set it downe,
That one may smile, and smile and be a Villaine;
At least I'm sure it may be so in Denmarke;
So Vncle there you are: now to my word;
It is; Adue, Adue, Remember me: I haue sworn't.

Hor & Mar. within. My Lord, my Lord.

Enter Horatio and Marcellus.

Mar. Lord Hamlet.
Hor. Heauen secure him.
Mar. So be it.
Hor. Illo, ho, ho, my Lord.
Ham. Hillo, ho, ho, boy; come bird, come.
Mar. How ist my Noble Lord?
Hor. What newes, my Lord?
Ham. Oh wonderfull!
Hor. Good my Lord tell it.
Ham. No you'l reueale it.
Hor. Not I, my Lord, by Heauen.
Mar. Nor I, my Lord. (think it?
Ham. How say you then, would heart of man once
But you'l be secret?
Both. I, by Heau'n, my Lord.
Ham. There's nere a villaine dwelling in all Denmarke
But he's an arrant knaue.
Hor. There needs no Ghost my Lord, come from the Graue, to tell vs this.
Ham. Why right, you are i'th' right;
And so, without more circumstance at all,
I hold it fit that we shake hands, and part:
You, as your busines and desires shall point you:
For every man has business and desire,
Such as it is: and for mine owne poore part,
Looke you, Ile goe pray.
Hor. These are but wild and hurling words, my Lord.
Ham. I'm sorry they offend you heartily:
Yes faith, heartily.
Hor. There's no offence my Lord.
Ham. Yes, by Saint Patrick, but there is my Lord,
And much offence too, touching this Vision heere:
It is an honest Ghost, that let me tell you:
For your desire to know what is betweene vs,
O'remaster't as you may. And now good friends,
As you are Friends, Schollers and Soldiers,
Giue me one poore request.
Hor. What is't my Lord? we will.
Ham Never make known what you haue seen to night.
Both. My Lord, we will not.
Ham Nay, but swear't.
Hor. In faith my Lord, not I.
Mar. Not I my Lord: in faith.
Ham. Vpon my sword.
Marcell. We haue sworne my Lord already.
Ham Indeed, vpon my sword Indeed.
Gho. Sweare. Ghost cries vnder the Stage.
Ham. Ah ha boy, say'st thou so. Art thou there true-penny? Come on you here this fellow in the sellarage
Consent to sweare.
Hor. Propose the Oath my Lord.
Ham. Never to speake of this that you haue seen,
Sweare by my sword.
Gho. Sweare.
Ham. Hic & vbique? Then we'l shift for ground,
Come hither Gentlemen,
And lay your hands against vpon my sword,
Never to speake of this that you haue heard:
Sweare by my Sword.
Gho. Sweare. (shift
Ham. Well said old Mole, can'st worke i'th' ground so
A worthy Pioner, once more remoue good friends.
Hor. Oh day and night; but this is wondrous strange.
Ham. And therefore as a stranger giue it welcome.
There are more things in Heauen and Earth, Horatio,
Then are dreamt of in our Philosophy. But come,
Here as before, never so helpe you mercy,
How strange or odde so ere I beare my selfe;
(As I perchance hereafter shall think meet
To put an Antick disposition on:)
That you at such time seeing me, never shall
With Armes encumbred thus, or thus, head shake;
Or by pronouncing of some doubtfull Phrase;
As well, we know, or we could and if we would,
Or if we list to speake; or there be and if there might,
Or such ambiguous giving out to note,

That you know ought of me; this not to doe.
So grace and mercy at your most neede helpe you:
Sweare.
Ghost. Sweare.
Ham. Rest, rest perturbed Spirit: so Gentlemen,
With all my loue I doe commend me to you;
And what so poore a man as Hamlet is,
May doe t'expresse his loue and friending to you,
God willing shall not lacke: let vs goe in together,
And still your fingers on your lippes I pray,
The time is out of ioynt: Oh cursed spight,
That euer I was borne to set it right.
Nay, come let's goe together. Exeunt.

Actus Secundus.

Enter Polonius, and Reynaldo.

Polon. Giue him his money, and these notes Reynaldo
Reynol I will my Lord.
Polon. You shall doe marueis wisely: good Reynaldo,
Before you visite him you make inquiry
Of his behauiour.
Reynol. My Lord, I did intend it.
Polon. Marry, well said;
Very well said. Looke you Sir,
Enquire me first what Danskers are in Paris;
And how, and who; what means; and where they keepe
What company, at what expence: and finding
By this encompassement and drift of question,
That they doe know my sonne. Come you more neerer
Then your particular demands will touch it,
Take you as 'twere some distant knowledge of him,
And thus I know his father and his friends,
And in part him. Doe you marke this Reynaldo?
Reynol. I, very well my Lord
Polon. And in part him, but you may say not well,
But if't be he I meane, hees very wilde;
Addicted so and so; and there put on him
What forgeries you please: marry, none so ranke,
As may dishonour him; take heed of that;
But Sir, such wanton, wild, and vsuall slipe,
As are Companions noted and most knowne
To youth and liberty.
Reynol. As gaming my Lord.
Polon. I, or drinking, fencing, swearing,
Quarelling, drabbing. You may goe so farre.
Reynol. My Lord that would dishonour him.
Polon. Faith no, as you may season it in the charge;
You must not put another scandall on him,
That hee is open to Incontinencie;
That's not my meaning: but breath his faults so quaintly,
That they may seeme the taints of liberty;
The flash and out-breake of a fiery minde,
A sauageness in vnreclaim'd blood of generall assault.
Reynol. But my good Lord.
Polon. Wherefore should you doe this?
Reynol. I my Lord, I would know that.
Polon. Marry Sir, here's my drift,
And I believe it is a fetch of warrant:
You laying these slight sullieyes on my Sonne,
As 'twere a thing a little soil'd i'th' working: (sound,
Marke you your party in conuerse; him you would
Hauing euer seene. In the prenominate crimes,
The youth you breath of guilty, be assur'd
He closes with you in this consequence:
Good sir, or so, or friend, or Gentleman.
According to the Phrase and the Addition,
Of man and Country.
Reynol. Very good my Lord.
Polon. And then Sir does he this?
He does: what was I about to say?
I was about to say something: where did I leaue?
Reynol. At closes in the consequence:
At friend, or so, and Gentleman.
Polon. At closes in the consequence, I marry,
He closes with you thus. I know the Gentleman,
I saw him yesterday, or tother day;
Or then or then, with such and such; and as you say,
There was he gaming, there o'retooke in's Rouse,
There falling out at Tennis; or perchance,
I saw him enter such a house of sale;
Videlicet, a Brothell, or so forth. See you now;
Your bait of falshood, takes this Cape of truth;
And thus doe we of wisedome and of reach
With windlesses, and with assaies of Bias,
By indirections finde directions out:
So by my former Lecture and aduice
Shall you my Sonne; you haue me, haue you not?
Reynol. My Lord I haue.
Polon. God buy you; fare you well.
Reynol. Good my Lord.
Polon. Obserue his inclination in your self.
Reynol. I shall my Lord.
Polon. And let him plye his Musicke
Reynol Well, my Lord Exit.

Enter Ophelia.

Polon Farewell:
How now Ophelia, what's the matter?
Ophe. Alas my Lord, I haue beene so affrighted.
Polon. With what, in the name of Heauen?
Ophe. My Lord, as I was sewing in my Chamber,
Lord Hamlet with his doublet all vnbrac'd,
No hat vpon his head, his stockings foul'd,
Vngartred, and downe gyed to his Anckle,
Pale as his shirt, his knees knocking each other,
And with a looke so piteous in purport,
As if he had been loosed out of hell,
To speake of horrors: he comes before me.
Polon. Mad for thy Loue?
Ophe. My Lord, I doe not know: but truly I do feare it.
Polon. What said he?
Ophe. He tooke me by the wrist, and held me hard;
Then goes he to the length of all his arme;
And with his other hand thus o're his brow,
He fals to such perusall of my face,
As he would draw it. Long staid he so,
At last, a little shaking of mine Arme:
And thrice his head thus waning vp and downe,
He rais'd a sigh, so piteous and profound,
That it did seeme to shatter all his bulke,
And end his being. That done, he lets me goe,
And with his head over his shoulders turn'd,
He seem'd to finde his way without his eyes,
For out doores he went without their helpe;
And to the last, bended their light on me.
Polon. Goe with me. I will goe seeke the King,
This is the very extasie of Loue,
Whose violent property foredoes it selfe,

And

And lends the will to desperate Vndertakings,
As oft as any passion vnder Heauen,
That does afflict our Nature. I am sorrie,
What haue you giuen him any hard words of late?

Oph. No my good Lord: but as you did commaund,
I did repell his Letters, and denyde
His access to me.

Pol. That hath made him mad.
I am sorrie that with better speed and iudgement
I had not quoted him. I feare he did but trifle,
And meant to wracke thee: but beshrew my iealousie:
It seemes it is as proper to our Age,
To cast beyond our selues in our Opinions,
As it is common for the younger sort
To lacke discretion. Come, go we to the King,
This must be knowne, (& being kept close) might moue
More griefe to hide, then hate to vtter loue. Exeunt

Scena Secunda.

Enter King, Queene, Rosencrans, and Guildenstern.
Corne Cum alijs.

King. Welcome deere Rosencrance and Guildenstern.
Moreouer, that we much did long to see you,
The neede we haue to vse you, did prouoke
Our hastie sending. Something haue you heard
Of Hamlets transformation: so I call it,
Since not th'exterior, nor the inward man
Resembles that it was. What it should bee
More then his Fathers death, that thus hath put him
So much from th'vnderstanding of himselfe,
I cannot deeme of. I intreat you both,
That being of so young dayes brought vp with him:
And since so Neighbour'd to his youth, and humour,
That you vouchsafe your rest heere in our Court
Some little time: so by your Companies
To drawe him on to pleasures, and to gether
So much as from Occasions you may gleane,
That open'd lies within our remedie.

Qu. Good Gentlemen, he hath much talk'd of you,
And sure I am, two men there are not liuing,
To whom he more adheres. If it will please you
To shew vs so much Gentrie, and good will,
As to expend your time with vs a-while,
For the supply and profit of our Hope,
Your Visitation shall receiue such thankes
As fits a Kings remembrance.

Rosin. Both your Maiesties
Might by the Soueraigne power you haue of vs,
Put your dread pleasures, more into Command
Then to Entreatie.

Guil. We both obey,
And here giue vp our selues, in the full bent,
To lay our Seruices freely at your feete,
To be commanded.

King. Thankes Rosencrance, and gentle Guildenstern.

Qu. Thankes Guildenstern and gentle Rosencrance.
And I beseech you instantly to visit
My too much changed Sonne.
Go some of ye,
And bring the Gentlemen where Hamlet is.

Guil. Heauens make our presence and our practises
Pleasant and helpfull to him. Exeu.

Queene. Amen.

Enter Polonius.

Pol. Th'Ambassadors from Norway, my good Lord,
Are ioyfully return'd.

King. Thou still hast bin the Father of good News.

Pol. Haue I, my Lord? Assure you, my good Liege,
I hold my duties, as I hold my Soule,
Both to my God, one to my gracious King:
And I do thinke, or else this brame of mine
Hunts not the traile of Policie, so sure
As I haue vs'd to do: that I haue found
The very cause of Hamlets Lunacie.

King. Oh speake of that, that I do long to heare.

Pol. Giue first admittance to th'Ambassadors,
My Newes shall be the Newes to that great Feast.

King. Thy selfe do grace to them, and bring them in.
He tels me my sweet Queene, that he hath found
The head and fountaine of all your Sonnes distempers.

Qu. I doubt it is no other, but the maine,
His Fathers death, and our o're-hasty Marriage.

Enter Polonius, Voltimand, and Cornelius.

King. Well, we shall sift him. Welcome good Friends
Say Voltimand, what from our Brother Norway?

Volt. Most faire returne of Greetings, and Desires.
Vpon our first, he sent out to suppresse
His Nephewes Leuies, which to him appear'd
To be a preparation 'gainst the Polack:
But better look'd into, he truly found
It was against your Highnesse, whereat grieued,
That so his Sicknesse, Age, and Impotence
Was falsely borne in hand, sends out Arrests
On Fortinbras, which he (in breefe) obeyes,
Receiues rebuke from Norway: and in fine,
Makes Vow before his Vnkle, neuer more
To giue th'assay of Armes against your Maiestie.
Whereon old Norway, ouercome with ioy,
Giues him three thousand Crownes in Annuall Fee,
And his Commission to imploy those Souldiers
So leuied as before, against the Polack:
With an entreaty herein further shewne,
That it might please you to giue quiet passe
Through your Dominions, for his Enterprize,
On such regards of safety and allowance,
As thereon are set downe.

King. It likes vs well:
And at our more consider'd time we'l read,
Answer, and thinke vpon this Businesse.
Meane time we thanke you, for your well-tooke Labour.
Go to your rest, at night we'l Feast together.
Most welcome home. Exit Ambas.

Pol. This business is very well ended.
My Liege, and Madam, to expostulate
What Maiestie should be, what Duetie is,
Why day is day; night, night; and time is time,
Were nothing but to waste Night, Day and Time.
Therefore, since Brevitie is the Soule of Wit,
And tediousnesse, the limbes and outward flourishes,
I will be breefe. Your Noble Sonne is mad:
Mad call I it; for to define true Madnesse,
What is't, but to be nothing else but mad.
But let that go.

Qu. More matter, with lesse Art.

Pol. Madam, I swear I vse no Art at all:
That he is mad, 'tis true: 'Tis true 'tis pitie,
And pitie it is true: A foolish figure,
But farewell it: for I will vse no Art.

Mad

Mad let vs grant him then: and now remaines
That we finde out the cause of this effect,
Or rather say, the cause of this defect;
For this effect defective, comes by cause,
Thus it remaines, and the remainder thus. Perpend,
I haue a daughter: haue, whil'st she is mine,
Who in her Duie and Obedience, marke,
Hath giuen me this: now gather, and surmise.

The Letter.

To the Celestiall, and my Soules Idoll, the most beautified Ophelia

That's an ill Phrase, a vilde Phrase, beautified is a vilde Phrase: but you shall heare these in her excellent white bosome, these.

Qu. Came this from Hamlet to her.

Pol. Good Madam stay awhile, I will be faithfull.

Doubt thou, the Starres are fire,
Doubt, that the Sunne doth moue:
Doubt Truth to be a Liar,
But neuer Doubt, I loue.
O deare Ophelia, I am ill at these Numbers: I haue not Art to reckon my groans; but that I loue thee best, oh most Best, believe it. Adieu.

Thine euermore most deare Lady whilst this Machine is to him, Hamlet.

This in Obedience hath my daughter shew'd me:
And more aboue hath his solicitings,
As they fell out by Time, by Meanes, and Place,
All giuen to mine eare.

King. But how hath she receiu'd his Loue?

Pol. What do you thinke of me?

King. As of a man, faithfull and Honourable.

Pol. I would fane proue so. But what might you think? When I had seene this hot loue on the wing, As I perceiued it, I must tell you that Before my Daughter told me, what might you Or my deere Maiestie your Queene here, think, If I had play'd the Deske or Table-booke, Or giuen my heart a winking, mute and dumbe, Or look'd vpon this Loue, with idle sight, What might you thinke? No, I went round to worke, And (my young Mistris) thus I did bespeake Lord Hamlet is a Prince out of thy Sphere, This must not be: and then, I Precepts gaue her, That she should locke her selfe from his Resort, Admit no Messengers, receiue no Tokens: Which done, she tooke the Fruites of my Aduice, And he repulsed. A short Tale to make, Fell into a Sadnesse, then into a Fast, Thence to a Watch, thence into a Weaknesse, Thence to a Lightnesse, and by this declension Into the Madnesse whereon now he raues, And all we waile for.

King. Do you thinke 'tis this?

Qu. It may be very likely.

Pol. Hath there bene such a time, I'de fain know that, That I haue positiuely said, 'tis so, When it proo'd otherwise?

King. Not that I know.

Pol. Take this from this, if this be otherwise, If Circumstances leade me, I will finde Where truth is hid, though it were hid indeede Within the Center.

King. How may we try it further?

Pol. You know sometimes He walkes foure houres together, heere In the Lobby.

Qu. So he ha's indeed.

Pol. At such a time I'le loose my Daughter to him, Be you and I behinde an Arras then, Marke the encounter: If he loue her not, And be not from his reason falne thereon; Let me be no Assistant for a State, And keepe a Farme and Carters.

King. We will try it.

Enter Hamlet reading on a Booke.

Qu. But looke where sadly the poore wretch Comes reading.

Pol. Away I do beseech you, both away, I'le board him presently. Exit King & Queene. Oh giue me leaue. How does my good Lord Hamlet?

Ham. Well, God-a-mercy.

Pol. Do you know me, my Lord?

Ham. Excellent, excellent well: y'are a Fishmonger.

Pol. Not I my Lord.

Ham. Then I would you were so honest a man.

Pol. Honest, my Lord?

Ham. I for, to be honest as this world goes, is to be one man pick'd out of two thousand.

Pol. That's very true, my Lord.

Ham. For if the Sun breed Magots in a dead dogge, being a good kissing Carrion———
Haue you a daughter?

Pol. I haue my Lord.

Ham. Let her not walke i'th' Sunne: Conception is a blessing, but not as your daughter may conceiue. Friend looke too't.

Pol. How say you by that? Still harping on my daughter: yet he knew me not at first; he said I was a Fishmonger: he is farre gone, farre gone: and truly in my youth, I suffred much extremity for loue: very neere this. Ile speake to him againe. What do you read my Lord?

Ham. Words, words, words.

Pol. What is the matter, my Lord?

Ham. Betweene who?

Pol. I meane the matter you meane, my Lord.

Ham. Slanders Sir: for the Satyrical slaue saies here, that old men haue grey Beards; that their faces are wrinkled; their eyes purging thicke Amber, or Plum-Tree Gumme: and that they haue a plentifull locke of Wit, together with weake Hammes. All which Sir, though I most powerfully, and potently believe; yet I holde it not Honestie to haue it thus set downe: For you your selfe Sir, should be old as I am, if like a Crab you could go backward.

Pol. Though this be madnesse,
Yet there is Method in't: will you walke
Out of the ayre my Lord?

Ham. Into my Grame?

Pol. Indeed that is out o'th' Ayre:
How pregnant (sometimes) his Replies are!
A happinesse,
That often Madnesse hits on,
Which Reason and Sanktie could not
So prosperously be deliuer'd of.
I will leaue him,
And forthwith contriue the meanes of meeting
Betweene him, and my daughter
My Honourable Lord, I will most humbly
Take my leaue of you.

Ham. You cannot Sir take from me any thing, that I will more willingly part withall, except my life, my life.

Polon. Fare you well my Lord.

Ham. These tedious old fooles.

Polon. You goe to seeke my Lord Hamlet; there hee is.

Enter Rosencrans and Guildenstarne.

Rosen. God save you Sir.

Guild. Mine honour'd Lord?

Rosen. My most deare Lord?

Ham. My excellent good friends? How do'st thou Guildenstarne? Oh, Rosencrans; good Lads: How doe ye both?

Rosen. As the indifferent Children of the earth.

Guild. Happy in that we are not over-happy: on Fortunes Cap, we are not the very Button.

Ham. Nor the Soales of her Shoo?

Rosen. Neither my Lord.

Ham. Then you live about her waste, or in the middle of her favour?

Guil. Faith, her privates, we.

Ham. In the secret parts of Fortune? Oh, most true: she is a Strumpet. What's the newes?

Rosen. None my Lord; but that the World's growne honest.

Ham. Then is Doomesday neere: But your newes is not true. Let me question more in particular: what have you my good friends, deserved at the hands of Fortune, that she sends you to Prison hither?

Guil. Prison, my Lord?

Ham. Denmark's a Prison.

Rosen. Then is the World one.

Ham. A goodly one, in which there are many Confines, Wards, and Dungeons; Denmark being one o'th' worst.

Rosen. We think not so my Lord.

Ham. Why then 'tis none to you; for there is nothing either good or bad, but thinking makes it so: to me it is a prison.

Rosen. Why then your Ambition makes it one: 'tis too narrow for your minde.

Ham. O God, I could be bounded in a nutshell, and count my selfe a King of infinite space; were it not that I have bad dreames.

Guil. Which dreames indeed are Ambition: for the very substance of the Ambitious, is merely the shadow of a Dreame.

Ham. A dreame is selfe is but a shadow.

Rosen. Truely, and I hold Ambition of so airy and light a quality, that it is but a shadowes shadow.

Ham. Then are our Beggers bodies; and our Monarchs and out-stretcht Heroes the Beggers Shadowes: shall wee to th' Court: for, by my fey I cannot reason?

Both. We'l wait upon you.

Ham. No such matter. I will not sort you with the rest of my servants: for to speake to you like an honest man: I am most dreadfully attended; but in the beaten way of friendship, What make you at Elsenour?

Rosen. To visit you my Lord, no other occasion.

Ham. Begger that I am, I am even poore in thanks; but I thanke you: and sure dere friends my thanks are too deare a halfepeny; were you not sent for? Is it your owne inclining? Is it a free visitation? Come, deale iustly with me: come, come; nay speake.

Guil. What should we say my Lord?

Ham. Why any thing. But to the purpose; you were sent for; and there is a kinde confession in your looks, which your modesties have not craft enough to colour, I know the good King & Queene have sent for you.

Rosen. To what end my Lord?

Ham. That you must teach me: but let mee conjure you by the rights of our fellowship, by the consonancy of our youth, by the Obligation of our ever-preserved love, and by what more deare, a better proposer could charge you withall; be even and direct with me, whether you were sent for or no.

Rosen. What say you?

Ham. Nay then I have an eye of you: if you love me, hold not off.

Guil. My Lord, we were sent for.

Ham. I will tell you why; so shall my anticipation prevent your discovery of your secrecie to the King and Queene: moult no feather, I have of late, but wherefore I know not, lost all my mirth, forgone all custome of exercises; and indeed, it goes so heavenly with my disposition; that this goodly frame the Earth, seemes to me a sterrile Promontory; this most excellent Canopy the Ayre, look you, this brave ore-hanging, this Mareiestall Roofe, fretted with golden fire: why, it appeares no other thing to mee, then a foule and pestilent congregation of vapours. What a piece of worke is a man! how Noble in Reason? how infinite in faculty? in forme and moving how expresse and admirable? in Action, how like an Angel? in apprehension, how like a God? the beauty of the world, the Paragon of Animals; and yet to me, what is this Quintessence of Dust? Man delights not me; no, nor Woman neither; though by your smiling you seeme to say so.

Rosen. My Lord, there was no such stuffe in my thoughts.

Ham. Why did you laugh, when I said, Man delights not me?

Rosen. To thinke, my Lord, if you delight not in Man, what Lenton entertainement the Players shall receive from you: wee coasted them on the way, and hither are they comming to offer you Service.

Ham. He that playes the King shall be welcome; his Maiesty shall have Tribute of me: the adventurous Knight shal vse his Foyle and Target: the Lover shall not sigh gratis, the humorous man shall end his part in peace: the Clowne shall make those laugh whose lungs are tickled a'th' sere: and the Lady shall say her mind freely; or the blanke Verse shall halt for't: what Players are they?

Rosen. Even those you were wont to take delight in the Tragedians of the City.

Ham. How chances it they travaile? their residence both in reputation and profit was better both ways.

Rosen. I think their Inhibition comes by the means of the late Innouation?

Ham. Doe they hold the same estimation they did when I was in the City? Are they so follow'd?

Rosen. No indeed, they are not.

Ham. How comes it? doe they grow rusty?

Rosen. Nay, their endeavour keepes in the wonted pace; But there is Sir an eyrie of Children, little Yeffes, that cryes out on the top of question; and are most tyrannically clap't for't: these are now the fash-

fashion, and so be-rattled the common Stages (so they call them) that many wearing Rapiers, are afraide of Goose-quills, and dare scarse come thither.

Ham. What are they Children? Who maintaines 'em? How are they escoted? Will they pursue the Quality no longer then they can sing? Will they not say afterwards if they should grow themselves to common Players (as it is like most if their means are no better) their Writers do them wrong, to make them exclaim against their owne Succession.

Rosc. Faith there has bene much to do on both sides: and the Nation holds it no sinne, to tarre them to Controuersie. There was for a while, no money bid for argument, vnlesse the Poet and the Player went to Cuffes in the Question.

Ham. Is't possible?

Guild. Oh there has bene much throwing about of Braines.

Ham. Do the Boyes carry it away?

Rosc. I that they do my Lord Hercules & his load too.

Ham. It is not strange: for mine Vncle is King of Denmarke, and those that would make mowes at him while my Father liued; give twenty, forty, an hundred Ducates a peece, for his picture in Little. There is something in this more then Naturall, if Philosophie could finde it out.

Flourish for the Players.

Guil. There are the Players.

Ham. Gentlemen, you are welcome to Elsinnore: your hands, come: The appurtenance of Welcome, is Fashion and Ceremony. Let me comply with you in the Garbe, lest my extent to the Players (which I tell you must show fairely outward) should more appeare like entertainment then yours. You are welcome: but my Vncles Father, and Aunt Mother are deceiu'd.

Guil. In what my dearest Lord?

Ham. I am but mad North, North-West: when the Winde is Southerly, I know a Hawke from a Handsaw.

Enter Polonius.

Pol. Well be with you Gentlemen.

Ham. Hearke you Guildenstern, and you too: at each eare a hearer: that great Baby you see there, is not yet out of his swaddling cloutes.

Rosc. Happily he's the second time come to them: for they say, an old man is twice a childe.

Ham. I will Prophesie. He comes to tell me of the Players. Mark it, you say right Sir: for a Monday morning 'twas so indeed.

Pol. My Lord, I haue Newes to tell you.

Ham. My Lord, I haue Newes to tell you. When Rosius an Actor in Rome —

Pol. The Actors are come hither my Lord.

Ham. Buzze, buzze.

Pol. Vpon mine Honor.

Ham. Then can each Actor on his Asse —

Polon. The best Actors in the world, either for Tragedie, Comedie, Historie, Pastorall: Pastoricall-Comicall-Historicall-Pastorall: Tragicall-Historicall: Tragicall-Comicall-Historicall-Pastorall: Scene indiuisible, or Poem vnlimited. Seneca cannot be too heavy, nor Plautus too light, for the law of Writ, and the Liberty. These are the onely men.

Ham. O Iephta Iudge of Israel, what a Treasure had'st thou?

Pol. What a Treasure had he, my Lord?

Ham. Why one faire Daughter, and no more, The which he loued passing well.

Pol. Still on my Daughter.

Ham. Am I not i'th'right old Iephta?

Polon. If you call me Iephta my Lord, I haue a daughter that I loue passing well.

Ham. Nay that followes not.

Polon What followes then, my Lord?

Ham. Why, As by lot, God wot: and then you know, It came to passe, as most like it was: The first rowe of the Pons Chanson will shew you more. For looke where my Abridgements come.

Enter foure or five Players.

You're welcome Masters, welcome all. I am glad to see thee well: Welcome good Friends. O my olde Friend? Thy face is valiant since I saw thee last: Com'st thou to beard me in Denmarke? What, my yong Lady and Mistris? By'lady your Ladyship is nearer Heauen then when I saw you last, by the altitude of a Choppine. Pray God your voice like a peece of vncurrant Gold be not crack'd within the ring. Masters, you are all welcome: we'l e'ne to't like French Falconers, flie at any thing we see: we'l haue a Speech straight. Come give vs a taste of your quality: come, a passionate speech.

1. Play. What speech, my Lord?

Ham. I heard thee speak me a speech once, but it was never Acted. or if it was, not above once, for the Play I remember pleas'd not the Million, 'twas Caesars to the Generall: but it was (as I receiu'd it, and others, whose iudgement in such matters, cried in the top of mine) an excellent Play; well digested in the Scenes, set downe with as much modestie, as cunning. I remember one said there was no Sallets in the lines, to make the matter sauoury; nor no matter in the phrase, that might indite the Author of affectation, but cal'd it an honest method. One cheefe Speech in it, I cheefely lou'd, 'twas Aeneas Tale to Dido, and thereabout of it especially, where he speaks of Priams slaughter. If it liue in your memory, begin at this Line, let me see, let me see: The rugged Pyrrhus like th'Hyrcanian Beast. It is not so: it begins with Pyrrhus The rugged Pyrrhus, he whose Sable Armes Blacke as his purpose, did the night resemble When he lay couched in the Ominous Horse, Hath now this dread and blacke Complexion smear'd With Heraldry more dismall: Head to foote Now is he to take Gentles, horridly Trick'd With blood of Fathers, Mothers, Daughters, Sonnes, Bak'd and impasted with the parching streets, That lend a tyrannous, and damned light To their vilde Murthers, roasted in wrath and fire, And thus o're-flaed with coagulate gore, VVith eyes like Carbuncles, the hellish Pyrrhus Old Grandsire Priam seekes.

Pol. Fore God, my Lord, well spoken, with good accent, and good discretion.

1. Player. Anon he findes him, Striking too short at Greeks. His antique Sword, Rebellious to his Arme, lyes where it falles Repugnant to command: vnequall match, Pyrrhus at Priam drives, in Rage strikes wide: But with the whiffe and winde of his fell Sword, Th'vnnerued Father fals. Then senseleſſe Ilium, Seeming to feele his blow, with flaming top Stoopes to his Base, and with a hideous crash Takes Prisoner Pyrrhus eare. For lo, his Sword Which was declining on the Milkie head Of Reuerend Priam, seem'd i'th'Ayre to stiche:

So

So as a painted Tyrant Pyrrhus stood,
And like a Newtrall to his will and matter, did nothing.
But as we often see against some stormes,
A silence in the Heauens, the Rackes stand still,
The bold winds speechlesse, and the Orbe below
As hush as death: Anon the dreadfull Thunder
Doth rend the Region. So after Pyrrhus pause,
A roused Vengeance sets him new a-worke,
And never did the Cyclops hammers fall
On Mars his Armours, forg'd for proofe Eterne,
With lesse remorse then Pyrrhus bleeding sword
Now falles on Priam.
Out, out, thou Strumpet-Fortune, all you Gods,
In generall Synod take away her power:
Breake all the Spokes and Fallies from her wheele,
And boole the round Nave downe the hill of Heauen,
As low as to the Fiends.

Pol. This is too long.

Ham. It shall to'th Barber, with your beard. Prythee say on: He's for a Iigge, or a tale of Bawdry, or he sleepes. Say on; come to Hecuba.

1. Play. But who, O who, had seen the inobled Queene.

Ham. The inobled Queene?

Pol. That's good: Inobled Queene is good.

1. Play. Run barefoot vp and downe,
Threatning the flame
With Bisson Rheume: A clout about that head,
Where late the Diadem stood, and for a Robe
About her lanke and all o're-teemed Loines,
A blanket in th'Alarum of feare caught vp.
Who this had seene, with tongue in Venome steep'd,
'Gainst Fortunes State, would Treason haue pronounc'd?
But if the Gods themselues did see her then,
When she saw Pyrrhus make malicious sport
In mincing with his Sword her Husbands limbes;
The instant Burst of Clamour that she made
(Vnlesse things mortall moue them not at all)
Would haue made milche the Burning eyes of Heauen,
And passion in the Gods.

Pol. Looke where he has not turn'd his colour, and has teares in's eyes. Pray you no more.

Ham. 'Tis well, Ile haue thee speake out the rest, soone. Good my Lord, will you see the Players well bestow'd. Do ye heare, let them be well vs'd: for they are the Abstracts and breefe Chronicles of the time. After your death, you were better haue a bad Epitaph, then their ill report while you liued.

Pol. My Lord, I will vse them according to their desert.

Ham. Gods bodykins man, better. Vse every man after his desert, and who should scape whipping: vse them after your own Honor and Dignity. The lesse they deserue, the more merit is in your bountie. Take them in.

Pol. Come sirs. Exit Polon.

Ham. Follow him Friends: we'l heare a play to morrow. Dost thou heare me old Friend, can you play the murther of Gonzago?

Play. I my Lord.

Ham. We'l haet to morrow night. You could for a need study a speech of some dozen or sixteene lines, which I would set downe, and insert in't? Could ye not?

Play. I my Lord.

Ham. Very well. Follow that Lord, and looke you mock him not. My good Friends, Ile leaue you til night you are welcome to Elsinnore?

Ros. Good my Lord. Exeunt.

Manet Hamlet.

Ham. I so, God buy'ye: Now I am alone.
Oh what a Rogue and Peasant slaue am I?
Is it not monstrous that this Player heere,
But in a Fixion, in a dreame of Passion,
Could force his soule so to his whole conceit,
That from her working, all his visage wann'd;
Teares in his eyes, distraction in's Aspect,
A broken voyce, and his whole Function suiting
With Formes, to his Conceit? And all for nothing?
For Hecuba!
What's Hecuba to him, or he to Hecuba,
That he should weepe for her? What would he doe,
Had he the Motiue and the Cue for passion
That I haue? He would drowne the Stage with teares,
And cleaue the generall eare with horrid speech,
Make mad the guilty, and amaze the free,
Confound the ignorant, and amaze indeed,
The very facuty of Eyes and Eares. Yet I,
A dull and muddy-mettled Rascall, peake
Like Iohn a-dreames, vnpregnant of my cause,
And can say nothing: No, not for a King,
Vpon whose property, and most dearе life,
A damn'd defeate was made. Am I a Coward?
Who calles me Villaine? breaks my pate a-crosse?
Plucks off my Beard, and blowes it in my face?
Tweakes me by'th Nose? gives me the Lye i'th Throate,
As deepe as to the Lungs? Who does me this?
Ha? Why I should take it: for it cannot be,
But I am Pigeon-Liuer'd, and lacke Gall
To make Oppression bitter, or ere this,
I should haue fatted all the Region Kites
With this Slaues Offall, bloudy, a Bawdy villaine,
Remorselesse, Treacherous, Lecherous, kindless villaine!
Oh Vengeance!
Who? What an Asse am I? I sure, this is most brauе,
That I, the Sonne of the Deere murthered,
Prompted to my Reuenge by Heauen, and Hell,
Must (like a Whore) vnpacke my heart with words,
And fall a Cursing like a very Drab,
A Scullion? Fye vpon't: Foh. About my Braine.
I haue heard, that guilty Creatures sitting at a Play,
Haue by the very cunning of the Scenе,
Beene struck so to the soule, that presently
They haue proclaim'd their Malefactions.
For Murther, though it haue no tongue, will speake
With most miraculous Organ. Ile haue these Players,
Play something like the murder of my Father,
Before mine Vncle. Ile observe his looke,
Ile tent him to the quicke: If he but blench
I know my course. The Spirit that I haue seene
May be the Diuell, and the Diuel hath power
T'assume a pleasing shape, yea and perhaps
Out of my Weaknesse, and my Melancholly,
As he is very potent with such Spirits,
Abuses me to damne me. Ile haue grounds
More Relatiue than this: The Play's the thing,
Wherein Ile catch the Conscience of the King. Exit

Enter King, Queene, Polonius, Ophelia, Rosencrans, Guildenstern, and Lords.

King. And can you by no drift of circumstance
Get from him why he puts on this Confusion:
Grating so harshly all his dayes of quiet

With turbulent and dangerous Lunacy.

Rosin. He does confesse he feeles himselfe distracted, But from what cause he will by no meanes speake.

Guil. Nor do we finde him forward to be sounded, But with a crafty Madnesse keeps aloofe: When we would bring him on to some Confession Of his true state.

Qu. Did he receiue you well?

Rosin. Most like a Gentleman.

Guild. But with much forcing of his disposition.

Rosin. Niggard of question, but of our demands Most free in his reply.

Qu. Did you assay him to any pastime?

Rosin. Madam, it so fell out, that certaine Players We ore-wrought on the way: of these we told him, And there did seeme in him a kinde of joy To heare of it. They are about the Court, And (as I thinke) they haue already order This night to play before him.

Pol. 'Tis most true: And he beseech'd me to intreate your Maiesties To heare, and see the matter.

King. With all my heart, and it doth much content me To heare him so inclin'd. Good Gentlemen, Give him a further edge, and driue his purpose on To these delights.

Rosin. We shall my Lord. Exeunt.

King. Sweet Gertrude leaue vs too, For we haue closely sent for Hamlet hither, That he, as 'twere by accident, may there Affront Ophelia. Her Father, and my selfe (lawful espials) Will so bestow our selues, that seeing vnseene We may of their encounter frankely iudge, And gather by him, as he is behaued, If 't be th'affliction of his loue, or no. That thus he suffers for.

Qu. I shall obey you, And for your part Ophelia, I do wish That your good Beauties be the happy cause Of Hamlets wildenesse. so shall I hope your Vertues Will bring him to his wonted way againe, To both your Honors.

Oph. Madam, I wish it may.

Pol. Ophelia, walke you heere. Gracious so please ye We will bestow our selues: Reade on this booke, That shew of such an exercise may colour Your loneliness. We are oft too blame in this, 'Tis too much prou'd, that with Deuotions visage, And pious Action, we do sugge o're The diuell himselfe.

King. Oh 'tis true: How smart a lash that speech doth give my Conscience? The Harlots Cheeke beautied with plaist'ring Art Is not more vgly to the thing that helpes it, Then is my deede, to my most painted word. Oh heauie burthen!

Pol. I heare him comming, let's withdraw my Lord. Exeunt.

Enter Hamlet.

Ham. To be, or not to be, that is the Question: Whether 'tis Nobler in the minde to suffer The Slings and Arrowes of outragious Fortune, Or to take Armes against a Sea of troubles, And by opposing end them. to dye, to sleepe No more; and by a sleepe, to say we end The Heart-ake, and the thousand Naturall shockes That Flesh is heyre too? 'Tis a consummation Deuoutly to be wish'd. To dye to sleepe, To sleepe, perchance to Dreame; I, there's the rub, For in that sleepe of death, what dreames may come, When we haue shuffled off this mortall coile, Must give vs pause. There's the respect That makes Calamity of so long life. For who would beare the Whips and Scornes of time, The Oppressors wrong, the poore mans Contumely, The pangs of dispriz'd Loue, the Lawes delay, The insolence of Office, and the Spurnes That patient merit of the vnworthy takes, When he himselfe might his Quietus make With a bare Bodkin? Who would these Fardles beare To grunt and sweat vnder a weary life, But that the dread of something after death, The vndiscouered Countrey, from whose Borne No Traueller returnes, Puzzels the will, And makes vs rather beare those ills we haue, Then flye to others that we know not of. Thus Conscience does make Cowards of vs all, And thus the Native hew of Resolution Is sicklied o're, with the pale cast of Thought, And enterprizes of great pith and moment, With this regard their Currants turne away, And loose the name of Action. Soft you now, The faire Ophelia? Nimph, in thy Orizons Be all my sinnes remembred.

Oph. Good my Lord, How does your Honor for this many a day?

Ham. I humbly thanke you. well, well, well.

Oph. My Lord, I haue Remembrances of yours, That I haue longed long to re-deliuer. I pray you now, receiue them.

Ham. No, no, I never gaue you ought.

Oph. My honor'd Lord, I know right well you did, And with them words of so sweet breath compos'd, As made the things more rich, then perfume left: Take these againe, for to the Noble minde Rich gifts wax poore, when giuers proue vnkinde. There my Lord.

Ham. Ha, ha: Are you honest?

Oph. My Lord.

Ham. Are you faire?

Oph. What means your Lordship?

Ham. That if you be honest and faire, your Honesty should admit no discourse to your Beautie.

Oph. Could Beautie my Lord, haue better Commerce then your Honestie?

Ham. I truelie: for the power of Beautie, will sooner transforme Honestie from what it is, to a Bawd, then the force of Honestie can translate Beautie into his likenesse. This was sometime a Paradox, but now the time gives it proofe. I did loue you once.

Oph. Indeed my Lord, you made me believe so.

Ham. You should not haue beleeved me. For vertue cannot so inoculate our old stocke, but we shall relish of it. I loued you not.

Oph. I was the more deceiued.

Ham. Get thee to a Nunnerie. Why wouldst thou be a breeder of Sinners? I am my selfe indifferent honest, but yet I could accuse me of such things, that it were better my Mother had not borne me. I am very proud, reuengefull, Ambitious, with more offences at my beeke, then I haue thoughts to put them in imagination, to give them shape, or time to act them in. What should such Fel-

Fellowes as I do, crawling betweene Heaven and Earth.
We are arrant Knaves all, believe none of vs. Goe thy wayes to a Nunnery. Where's your Father?

Oph. At home, my Lord.

Ham. Let the doores be shut vpon him, that he may play the Foole no way, but in's owne house. Farewell.

Oph. O help him, you sweet Heavens.

Ham. If thou doest Marry, Ile give thee this Plague for thy Dowrie. Be thou as chaste as Ice, as pure as Snow, thou shalt not escape Calumny. Get thee to a Nunnery.
Go, Farewell. Or if thou wilt needs Marry, marry a fool:
for Wise men know well enough, what monsters you make of them. To a Nunnery go, and quickly too. Far-
well.

Oph. O heavenly Powers, restore him.

Ham. I have heard of your prattlings too wel enough.
God has given you one pace, and you make your selfe no-
ther: you gidge, you amble, and you lispe, and nickname
Gods creatures, and make your Wanconnesse, your Ignorance. Go too, Ile no more on't, it hath made me mad.
I say, we will have no more Marriages. Those that are married already, all but one shall live, the rest shall keep as they are. To a Nunnery, go. Exit Hamlet

Oph. O what a Noble minde is heere o're-throwne?
The Courtiers, Soldiers, Schollers: Eye, tongue, sword,
Th'expectancie and Rose of the faire State,
The glasse of Fashion, and the mould of Forme,
Th'observ'd of all Observers, quite, quite downe.
Haue I of Ladies most deject and wretched,
That suck'd the Honie of his Musicke Vowes:
Now see that Noble, and most Soueraigne Reason,
Like sweet Bels iangled out of tune, and harsh,
That vnmatch'd Forme and Feature of blowne youth,
Blasted with extasie. Oh woe is me,
T'have seene what I have seene: see what I see.

Enter King, and Polonius.

King. Loue? His affections do not that way tend,
Nor what he spake, though it lack d Forme a little,
Was not like Madnesse. There's something in his soule?
O're which his Melancholly sits on brood,
And I do doubt the hatch, and the disclose
Will be some danger, which to preuent
I haue in quicke determination
Thus set it downe. He shall with speed to England
For the demand of our neglected Tribute:
Haply the Seas and Countries different
With variable Obiects, shall expell
This something setled matter in his heart:
Whereon his Braines still beating, puts him thus
From fashion of himselfe. What think you on't?

Pol. It shall do well. But yet do I believe
The Origin and Commencement of this greefe
Sprung from neglected loue. How now Ophelia?
You needs not tell vs, what Lord Hamlet saide,
We heard it all. My Lord, do as you please,
But if you hold it fit after the Play,
Let his Queene Mother all alone entreat him
To shew his Greefes: let her be round with him,
And Ile be plac'd so, please you in the eare
Of all their Conference. If she finde him not,
To England send him: Or confine him where
Your wisedome best shall thinke.

King. It shall be so.
Madnesse in great Ones, must not vnwatch'd go.

Exeunt.

Enter Hamlet, and two or three of the Players.

Ham. Speake the Speech I pray you, as I pronounc'd
it to you trippingly on the Tongue: But if you mouth it, as many of your Players do, I had as lieue the Town-Cryer had spoke my Lines. Nor do not saw the Ayre too much your hand thus, but vse all gently; for in the verie Torrent, Tempest, and (as I may say) the Whirle-winde of Passion, you must acquire and beget a Temperance that may give it Smoothnesse. O it offends mee to the Soule, to see a robustious Pery-wig-pated Fellow, tenre a Passion to tatters, to verie ragges, to split the eares of the Groundlings: who (for the most part) are capeable of nothing, but inexplicable dumbe shewes, & noise: I could have such a Fellow whipt for o're-doing Termagant: it out-Herod's Herod. Pray you auoid it.

Player. I warrant your Honor.

Ham. Be not too tame neyther: but let your own Discretion be your Tutor. Suite the Action to the Word,
the Word to the Action, with this speciall obseruance
That you ore-stop not the modestie of Nature: for any thing so ouer-done, is frō the purpose of Playing, whose end both at the first and now, was and is, to hold as 'twere
the Mirrour vp to Nature; to shew Vertue her owne
Feature, Scorne her owne image, and the verie Age and Bodie of the Time, his forme and pressure. Now, this ouer-done, or come tardie off, though it make the vnskilfull laugh, cannot but make the Iudicious grieue; The censure of the which One, must in your allowance o'e-way a whole Theater of Others. Oh, there be Players that I haue seene Play, and heard others praise, and that highly (not to speake it prophanely) that neyther having the accent of Christians, nor the gate of Christian, Pagan, or Norman, have so strutted and bellowed, that I have thought some of Natures Iourney-men had made men, and not made them well, they imitated Humanity so abhominably.

Play. I hope we have reform'd that indifferently with vs, Sir.

Ham. O reforme it altogether. And let those that play your Clowne, speake no more then is set downe for them. For there be of them, that will themselues laugh, to set on some quantitie of barren Spectators to laugh too, though in the meane time, some necessary Question of the Play be then to be considered: that's Villainous, &
shewes a most pittifull Ambition in the Foole that vses
it. Go make you readie. Exit Players

Enter Polonius, Rosencrance, and Guildenstern.

How now my Lord,
Will the King heare this peece of Worke?

Pol. And the Queene too, and that presently.

Ham. Bid the Players make haste. Exit Polonius.

Will you two helpe to hasten them?

Both. We will my Lord. Exeunt.

Enter Horatio.

Ham. What hoa, Horatio?

Hora. Heere sweet Lord, at your Seruice.

Ham. Horatio, thou art euen as iust a man
As euer my Conuersation coop'd withall.

Hora. O my deere Lord.

Ham. Nay do not thinke I flatter:
For what aduancement may I hope from thee,
That no Reuenew hast, but thy good spirits

To feed & cloath thee. Why should the poore be flatter'd?
No, let the Candied tongue, like absurd pompe,
And crooke the pregnant Hindges of the knee,
Where thrift may follow fawning? Dost thou heare,
Since my deere Soule was Mistris of my choyse,
And could of men distinguish, her election
Hath seal'd thee for her selfe. For thou hast beene
As one in suffering all, that suffers nothing,
A man that Fortunes buffets, and Rewards
Hath ta'ne with equall Thankes. And blest are those,
Whose Blood and Judgement are so well co-mingled,
That they are not a Pipe for Fortunes finger,
To sound what stop she please. Give me that man,
That is not Passions Slaue, and I will weare him
In my hearts Core: I, in my Heart of heart,
As I do thee. Something too much of this.
There is a Play to night before the King,
One Scene of it comes neere the Circumstance
Which I haue told thee, of my Fathers death.
I prythee, when thou seest that Act a-foot,
Even with the very Comment of my Soule
Observe mine Vncle: If his occulted guilt,
Do not itselfe vnkennell in one speech,
It is a damned Ghost that we haue seene:
And my Imaginations are as foule
As Vulcans Stythe. Give him needfull note,
For I mine eyes will rivet to his Face:
And after we will both our judgements joyne,
To censure of his seeming.

Hora. Well my Lord.
If he stale ought the whil'st this Play is Playing,
And scape detecting, I will pay the Theft.

Enter King, Queene, Polonius, Ophelia, Rosencrawne, Guildenstorne, and other Lords attendant, with his Guard carrying Torches. Danish March. Sound a Flourish.

Ham. They are comming to the Play: I must be idle
Get you a place.

King. How fares our Cosin Hamlet?

Ham. Excellent I faith, of the Camelions dish: I eate the Ayre promise-crammed, you cannot feed Capons so.

King. I haue nothing with this answer Hamlet, these words are not mine.

Ham. No, nor mine. Now my Lord, you plaid once i'th' Vniversity, you say?

Polon. That I did my Lord, and was accounted a good Actor.

Ham. And what did you enact?

Pol. I did enact Iulius Cæsar. I was kill'd i'th' Capitol: Brutus kill'd me.

Ham. It was a brutish part of him, to kill so Capitall a Calfe there. Be the Players ready?

Rosen. I my Lord, they stay vpon your patience.

Qu. Come hither my good Hamlet, sit by me.

Ha. No good Mother, here's Mettle more attractive.

Pol. Oh ho, do you mark that?

Ham. Lady, shall I lye in your Lap?

Opha. No my Lord.

Ham. I mean, my Head vpon your Lap?

Opha. I my Lord.

Ham. Do you think I meant Country matters?

Opha. I think nothing, my Lord.

Ham. That's a faire thought to ly between Maids legs.

Opha. What is my Lord?

Ham. Nothing.

Opha. You are merrie, my Lord?

Ham. Who I?

Opha. I my Lord.

Ham. Oh God, your only Iigge-maker: what should a man do, but be merrie. For looke you how cheerefully my Mother looke, and my Father dyed within's two Houres.

Opha. Nay, 'tis twice two moneths, my Lord.

Ham. So long? Nay then let the Diuel weare blacke, for I'le haue a suite of Sables. Oh Heauens! dye two moneths ago, and not forgotten yet? Then there's hope, a great man's Memorie, may out-liue his life halfe a yeere: But by'ladie he must build Churches then: or else shall he suffer not thinking on, with the Hobby-horse, whose Epitaph is, For o, For o, the Hobby-horse is forgot.

Hobyes play. The dumbe shew enters.

Enter a King and Queene, very louingly; the Queene embracing him. She kneeles, and makes show of Protestation vnto him. He takes her vp, and declines his head vpon her neck. Layes him downe vpon a Banke of Flowers. She seeing him a-sleepe, leaues him. Anon comes in a Fellow, takes off his Crowne, kisses it, and powres poyson in the King's eares, and Exits. The Queene returnes, finides the King dead, and makes passionate Action. The Poyson'r, with some two or three Mutes comes in again, seeming to lament with her. The dead body is carried away: The Poyson'r Woos the Queene with Gifts, she seemes loath and vnwilling awhile, but in the end, accepts his loue. Exeunt

Opha. What means this, my Lord?

Ham. Marry this is Miching Mallecho, that means Mischeefe.

Opha. Belike this shew imports the Argument of the Play?

Ham. We shall know by these Fellowes: the Players cannot keepe counsell, they'l tell all.

Opha. Will they tell vs what this shew meant?

Ham. I, or any shew that you'l shew him. Bee not you asham'd to shew, he's not shame to tell you what it meanes.

Opha. You are naught, you are naught, I'le marke the Play

Enter Prologue.

For vs, and for our Tragedie,
Heere stooping to your Clemerie:
We beg your hearing patiently.

Ham. Is this a Prologue, or the Posie of a Ring?

Opha. 'Tis brieffe my Lord.

Ham. As Women's loue.

Enter King and his Queene.

King. Full thirtie times hath Phœbus Cart gone round,
Neptunes salt Wash, and Tellus Orbed ground:
And thirtie dozen Moones with borrowed sheene,
About the World haue times twelue thirties beene,
Since loue our hearts, and Hymen did our hands
Vnite commutall, in most sacred Bands.

Bap. So many iourneys may the Sonne and Moone
Make vs againe count o'ers, ere loues be done.
But woe is me, you are so sicke of late,
So far from cheere, and from your former state,
That I distrust you: yet though I distrust,
Discomfort you (my Lord) it nothing must:
For women's Feare and Loue, holds quantitie,

In neither ought, or in extremity:
Now what my loue is, proofe hath made you know,
And as my Loue is siz'd, my Feare is so.

King. Faith I must leaue thee Loue, and shortly too:
My operant Powers my Functions leaue to do:
And thou shalt liue in this faire world behinde,
Honour'd, belou'd, and haply, one as kinde.
For Husband shalt thou———

Bap. Oh confound the rest:
Such Loue, must needs be Treason in my brest:
In second Husband, let me be accurst,
None wed the second, but who kill'd the first.

Ham. Wormwood, Wormwood.

Bapt. The instances that second Marriage moue,
Are base respects of Thrift, but none of Loue.
A second time, I kill my Husband dead,
When second Husband kisses me in Bed.

King. I do beleeue you. Think what now you speak:
But what we do determine, oft we breake.
Purpose is but the slaue to Memorie,
Of violent Birth, but poore validitie:
Which now like Fruite vnripe stickes on the Tree,
But fall vnshak'en, when they mellow bee.
Most necessary 'tis, that we forget
To pay our selues, what to our selues is debt:
What to our selues in passion we propose,
The passion ending, doth the purpose lose.
The violence of other Greefe or Ioy,
Their owne conductors with themselues destroy:
Where Ioy most Reuels, Greefe doth most lament;
Greefe ioyes, Ioy greeues on slender accident,
This world is not for aye, nor 'tis not strange
That euen our Loues should with our Fortunes change.
For 'tis a question left vs yet to proue,
Whether Loue lead Fortune, or else Fortune Loue.
The great man downe, you marke his fauourites flies,
The poore aduanc'd, makes Friends of Enemies:
And hitherto doth Loue on Fortune tend.
For who not needs, shall neuer lacke a Frend:
And who in want a hollow Friend doth try,
Directly seasons him his Enemie.
But orderly to end, where I begin,
Our Wilies and Faces do so contrary run,
That our Deuices still are ouerthrowne,
Our thoughts are ours, their ends none of our owne.
So thinke thou wilt no second Husband wed
But die thy thoughts, when thy first Lord is dead

Bap. Nor Earth to giue me food, nor Heauen light,
Sport and repose locke from me day and night:
Each opposite that blankes the face of Ioy,
Meet what I would haue well, and it destroy:
Both heere, and hence, pursue me lasting strife,
If once a Widdow, euer I be Wife.

Ham. If she should breake it now.

King. 'Tis deeply sworne:
Sweet, leaue me heere a while,
My spirits grow dull, and fainc I would beguile
The tedious day with sleepe.

Qu. Sleepe rocke thy Braine, Sleepes
And neuer come mischance betweene vs twaine. Exit

Ham. Madam, how like you this Play?

Qu. The Lady protests to much me thinkes.

Ham. Oh but shee'l keepe her word.

King. Haue you heard the Argument, is there no Offence in't?

Ham. No, no, they do but iest, poyson in iest, no Offence i'th' world.

King. What do you call the Play?

Ham. The Mouse-trap: Marry how? Tropically: This Play is the Image of a murder done in Vienna: Gonzago is the Dukes name, his wife Baptista: you shall see anon: 'tis a knauish peece of worke: But what o'that? Your Maiestie, and we that haue free soules, it touches vs not: let the gall'd iade winchesse withers are vnrung.

Enter Lucianus.

This is one Lucianus nephew to the King.

Ophe. You are a good Chorus, my Lord.

Ham. I could interpret betweene you and your loue, if I could see the Puppets dallying.

Ophe. You are keene my Lord, you are keene.

Ham. It would cost you a groaning, to take off my edge.

Ophe. Still better and worse.

Ham. So you mistake Husbands.
Begin Murderer. Pox, leaue thy damnable Faces, and begin. Come, the crooking Rauen doth bellow for Reuenge.

Lucian. Thoughts blacke, hands apt,
Drugges fit, and Time agreeing
Confederate season, else, no Creature seeing:
Thou mixture ranke, of Midnight Weeds collected,
With Hecats Ban, thrice blasted, thrice infected,
Thy naturall Magicke, and dire properties,
On wholsome life, vsurpe immediately.

Powres the poyson in his eares.

Ham. He poysons him i'th Garden for's estate: His name's Gonzago: the Story is extant and writ in choyce Italian. You shall see anon how the Murtherer gets the loue of Gonzago's wife.

Ophe. The King rises.

Ham. What, frighted with false fire.

Qu. How fares my Lord?

Pol. Giue o're the Play.

King. Giue me some Light. Away.

All. Lights, Lights, Lights. Exeunt

Manet Hamlet & Horatio.

Ham. Why let the stricken Deere go weepe,
The Hart vngalled play:
For some must watch, while some must sleepe:
So runnes the world away.
Would not this Sir, and a Forrest of Feathers, if the rest of my Fortunes turne Turke with me; with two Prouincial Roses on my rac'd Shoes, get the a Fellowship in a cry of Players sir.

Hor. Halfe a share.

Ham. A whole one I,
For thou dost know: Oh Damon deere,
This Realme dismantled was of Ioue himselfe,
And now reigneth here.
A very very Paiocke.

Hora. You might haue Rim'd.

Ham. Oh good Horatio, I'le take the Ghosts word for a thousand pound. Did'st perceiue?

Hora. Very well my Lord.

Ham. Vpon the talke of the poysoning?

Hora. I did very well note him

Enter Rosencrance and Guildenstern.

Ham. Oh, ha? Come some Musick. Come, Recorders
For if the King like not the Comedie,
Why then belike he likes it not perdie.
Come some Musicke.

Guild. Good my Lord, vouchsafe me a word with you

Ham.

Ham. Sir, a whole History.
Guild. The King, sir.
Ham. I sir, what of him?
Guild. Is in his retyrement, marvellous distemper'd.
Ham. With drinke Sir?
Guild. No my Lord, rather with choller.
Ham. Your wisedome should shew is selfe more richer, to signifie this to his Doctor. for for me to put him to his Purgation, would perhaps plundge him into farre more Choller.
Guild. Good my Lord put your discourse into some frame, and start not so wildely from my affayre.
Ham. I am tame Sir, pronounce.
Guild. The Queene your Mother, in most great affliction of spirit, hath sent me to you.
Ham. You are welcome.
Guild. Nay, good my Lord, this courtesie is not of the right breed. If it shall please you to make me a wholsome answer, I will doe your Mothers commandment: if not, your pardon, and my retume shall bee the end of my Businesse.
Ham. Sir, I cannot.
Guild What, my Lord?
Ham. Make you a wholsome answere: my wits diseas'd. But sir, such answers as I can make, you shal command: or rather you say, my Mother: therfore no more but to the matter. My Mother you say.
Rosin. Then thus she sayes: your behaviour hath stroke her into amazement, and admiration.
Ham. Oh wonderfull Sonne, that can so astonish a Mother. But is there no sequell at the heeles of this Mothers admiration?
Rosin. She desires to speake with you in her Closset, ere you go to bed.
Ham. We shall obey, were she ten times our Mother. Have you any further Trade with vs?
Rosin. My Lord, you once did love me.
Ham. So I do still, by these pickers and stealers.
Rosin. Good my Lord, what is your cause of distemper? You do freely barre the doore of your owne Liberties, if you deny your greefes to your Friend.
Ham. Sir I lacke Advancement.
Rosin. How can that be, when you have the voyce of the King himselfe, for your Succession in Denmarke?
Ham. I, but while the grasse growes, the Proverbe is something musty.

Enter one with a Recorder.

O the Recorder. Let me see, to withdraw with you, why do you go about to recouer the winde of me, as if you would drive me into a toyle?
Guild. O my Lord, if my Duties be too bold, my loue is too vnmannerly.
Ham. I do not well vnderstand that. Will you play vpon this Pipe?
Guild. My Lord, I cannot.
Ham. I pray you.
Guild. Beleeue me, I cannot.
Ham. I do beseech you.
Guild. I know no touch of it, my Lord.
Ham. Tis as easie as lying: gouerne these Ventiges with your finger and thumbe, giue it breath with your mouth, and it will discourse most excellent Musicke. Looke you, these are the stoppes.
Guild. But these cannot I command to any vtterance of harmony. I haue not the skill.
Ham. Why looke you now, how vnworthy a thing you make of me: you would play vpon mee; you would seeme to know my stops: you would pluck out the heart of my Mysterie; you would sound mee from my lowest Note, to the top of my Compasse: and there is much Musicke, excellent Voice, in this little Organe, yet cannot you make it. Why do you thinke, that I am easier to bee plaid on, then a Pipe? Call me what Instrument you will, though you can fret me, you cannot play vpon me. God blesse you Sir.

Enter Polonius.

Polon. My Lord, the Queene would speak with you, and presently.
Ham. Do you see that Cloud? that's almost in shape like a Camell.
Polon. By'th'Masse, and it's like a Camell indeed.
Ham. Me thinkes it is like a Weazell.
Polon. It is back'd like a Weazell.
Ham. Or like a Whale?
Polon. Verie like a Whale.
Ham. Then will I come to my Mother, by and by: They foole me to the top of my bent.
I will come by and by.
Polon. I will say so. Exit.
Ham. By and by, is easily said. Leaue me Friends:
'Tis now the verie witching time of night,
When Churchyards yawne, and Hell it selfe breathe out
Contagion to this world. Now could I drink hot blood,
And do such bitter businesse as the day
Would quake to looke on. Soft now, to my Mother:
Oh Heart, loose not thy Nature; let not euer
The Soule of Nero, enter this firme bosome:
Let me be cruell, not vnnaturall,
I will speake Daggers to her, but vse none:
My Tongue and Soule in this be Hypocrites.
How in my words someuer she be shent,
To giue them Seales, never my Soule consent.

Enter King, Rosincrance, and Guildenstarne.

King. I like him not, nor stands it safe with vs,
To let his madnesse range. Therefore prepare you,
I your Commission will forthwith dispatch,
And he to England shall along with you:
The termes of our estate, may not endure
Hazard so dangerous as doth hourely grow
Out of his Lunacies.
Guild. We will our selues prouide:
Most holie and Religious feare it is
To keepe those many many bodies safe
That liue and feede vpon your Maiestie.
Rosin. The single
And peculiar life is bound
With all the strength and Armour of the minde,
To keepe it selfe from noyance: but much more,
That Spirit, vpon whose spirit depends and rests
The lives of many, the cease of Maiestie
Dies not alone; but like a Gulfe doth draw
What's neere it, with it. It is a massie wheele
Fixt on the Somnet of the highest Mount,
To whose huge Spokes, ten thousand lesser things
Are mortiz'd and adioyn'd: which when it falles,
Each small annexment, pettie consequence
Attends the boystrous Ruine. Never alone
Did the King sighe, but with a generall grone.
King. Arme you, I pray you to this speedie Voyage;
For we will Fetters put vpon this feare,

Which now goes too free-footed.

Both. We will haste vs. Exeunt Gent

Enter Polonius.

Pol. My Lord, he's going to his Mothers Closset.
Behinde the Arras Ile conceiu my selfe
To heare the Processe. Ile warrant she'l tax him home,
And as you said, and wisely was it said,
'Tis meete that some more audience then a Mother,
Since Nature makes them partiall, should o're-heare
The speech of vantage. Fare you well my Liege,
Ile call vpon you ere you go to bed,
And tell you what I know.

King. Thankes deere my Lord.
Oh my offence is ranke, it smells to heauen,
It hath the primall eldest curse vpon't,
A Brothers murther. Pray can I not,
Though inclination be as sharpe as will:
My stronger guilt, defeats my strong intent,
And like a man to double business bound,
I stand in pause where I shall first begin,
And both neglect; what if this cursed hand
Were thicker then it selfe with Brothers blood,
Is there not Raine enough in the sweet Heauens
To wash it white as Snow? Whereto serues mercy,
But to confronte the visage of Offence?
And what's in Prayer, but this two-fold force,
To be fore-stalled ere we come to fall,
Or pardon'd being downe? Then Ile looke vp,
My fault is past. But oh, what forme of Prayer
Can serue my turne? Forgiue me my foule Murther:
That cannot be, since I am still possest
Of those effects for which I did the Murther.
My Crowne, mine owne Ambition, and my Queene:
May one be pardon'd, and retaine th'offence?
In the corrupted currants of this world,
Offences gilded hand may shoue by Iustice,
And oft 'tis seene, the wicked prize it selfe
Buyes out the Law; but 'tis not so above,
There is no shuffling, there the Action lyes
In his true Nature, and we our selues compell'd
Euen to the teeth and forehead of our faults,
To giue in euidence. What then? What rests?
Try what Repentance can. What can it not?
Yet what can it, when one cannot repent?
Oh wretched state! Oh bosome, blacke as death!
Oh limed soule, that struggling to be free,
Art more engag'd: Helpe Angels, make assay:
Bow stubborne knees, and heart with strings of Steele,
Be soft as sinewes of the new-borne Babe,
All may be well.

Enter Hamlet.

Ham. Now might I do it pat, now he is praying,
And now Ile doo't, and so he goes to Heauen,
And so am I reuenge'd: that would be scann'd,
A Villaine killes my Father, and for that
I his foule Sonne, do this same Villaine send
To heauen. Oh this is hyre and Salleryy, not Reuenge.
He tooke my Father grossely, full of bread,
With all his Crimes broad blowne, as fresh as May,
And how his Audit stands, who knowes, saue Heauen:
But in our circumstance and course of thought
'Tis heauie with him: and am I then reueng'd,
To take him in the purging of his Soule,
When he is fit and season'd for his passage? No.
Vp Sword, and know thou a more horrid hent
When he is drunke asleepe: or in his Rage,
Or in th'incestuous pleasure of his bed,
At gaming, swearing, or about some act
That has no relish of Saluation in't,
Then trip him, that his heeles may kicke at Heauen,
And that his Soule may be as damn'd and blacke
As Hell, whereto it goes. My Mother stayes,
This Physicke but prolongs thy sickly dayes. Exit.

King. My words fly vp, my thoughts remain below:
Words without thoughts, never to Heauen go. Exit.

Enter Queene and Polonius.

Pol. He will come straight:
Looke you lay home to him,
Tell him his pranks haue been too broad to bear with,
And that your Grace hath scree'ned, and stoode betweene
Much heate, and him. Ile sileace me e'ene here:
Pray you be round with him.

Ham.within. Mother, mother, mother.

Qu. Ile warrant you, feare me not.
Withdraw, I heare him comming.

Enter Hamlet.

Ham. Now Mother, what's the matter?

Qu. Hamlet, thou hast thy Father much offended.

Ham. Mother, you haue my Father much offended.

Qu. Come, come, you answer with an idle tongue.

Ham. Go, go, you question with an idle tongue.

Qu. Why how now Hamlet?

Ham. Whats the matter now?

Qu. Haue you forgot me?

Ham. No by the Rood, not so:
You are the Queene, your Husbands Brothers wife,
But would you were not so. You are my Mother.

Qu. Nay, then Ile set those to you that can speake.

Ham. Come, come, and sit you downe, you shall not boudge:
You go not till I set you vp a glasse,
Where you may see the inmost part of you?

Qu. What wilt thou do? thou wilt not murther me?
Helpe, helpe, hoa.

Pol. What hoa, helpe, helpe, helpe.

Ham. How now, a Rat? dead for a Ducate, dead.

Pol. Oh I am slaine. Killes Polonius

Qu. Oh me, what hast thou done?

Ham. Nay I know not, is it the King?

Qu. Oh what a rash, and bloody deed is this?

Ham. A bloody deed, almost as bad good Mother,
As kill a King, and marrie with his Brother.

Qu. As kill a King?

Ham. I Lady, 'twas my word.
Thou wretched, rash, intruding foole farewell,
I tooke thee for thy Betters, take thy Fortune,
Thou find'st to be too busie, is some danger.
Leaue wringing of your hands, peace, sit you downe,
And let me wring your heart, for so I shall
If it be made of penetrable stuffe;
If damned Custome haue not braz'd it so,
That it is proofe and bulwarke against Sense.

Qu. What haue I done, that thou dar'st wag thy tong,
In noise so rude against me?

Ham. Such an Act
That blurres the grace and blush of Modestie,
Calls Vertue Hypocrite, takes off the Rose
From the faire forehead of an innocent loue,
And makes a blister there. Makes marriage vowes
As false as Dicers Oathes. Oh such a deed,

As from the body of Contraction plucke
The very soule, and sweete Religion makes
A rapsodie of words. Heauens face doth glow,
Yea this solidity and compound masse,
With triftfull visage as against the doome,
Is thought-sicke at the act.

Qu. Aye me; what act, that roares so lowd, & thunders in the Index.

Ham. Looke heere vpon this Picture, and on this,
The counterfet presentment of two Brothers:
See what a grace was seated on his Brow.
Hyperions curles, the front of Love himselfe,
An eye like Mars, to threaten or command
A Station, like the Herald Mercurie
New lighted on a heauen kissing hill:
A Combination, and a forme indeed,
Where every God did seeme to set his Seale,
To giue the world assurance of a man.
This was your Husband. Looke you now what follows.
Heere is your Husband, like a Mildew'd eare
Blasting his wholsom breath. Haue you eyes?
Could you on this faire Mountaine leaue to feed,
And batten on this Moore? Ha? Haue you eyes?
You cannot call it Love: For at your age,
The hey-day in the blood is tame, it's humble,
And waites vpon the Iudgement: and what Iudgement
Would step from this, to this? What diuell was it,
That thus hath cozened you at hoodman-blinde?
O Shame! where is thy Blush? Rebellious Hell,
If thou canst mutine in a Matrons bones,
To flaming youth, let Vertue be as waxe,
And melt in her owne fire. Proclaime no shame,
When the compulsiue Ardure giues the charge,
Since Frost itselfe, as actively doth burne,
As Reason ponders Will.

Qu. O Hamlet, speake no more.
Thou turn'st mine eyes into my very soule,
And there I see such blacke and grained spots,
As will not leaue their Tinct.

Ham. Nay, but to liue
In the rankest sweat of an enseamed bed,
Stew'd in Corruption; hoouing and making loue
Ouer the nasty Stye.

Qu. Oh speake to me, no more,
These words like Daggers enter in mine eares.
No more sweet Hamlet.

Ham. A Murderer, and a Villaine:
A Slaue, that is not twentieth part the tythe
Of your precedent Lord. A vice of Kings,
A Cutpurse of the Empire and the Rule.
That from a shelfe, the precious Diadem stole,
And put it in his Pocket.

Qu. No more.

Enter Ghost.

Ham. A King of shreds and patches.
Saue me; and houer o're me with your wings
You heauenly Guards. What would you gracious figure?

Qu. Alas he's mad

Ham. Do you not come your tardy Sonne to chide,
That lapt'st in Time and Passion, lets go by Th'important acting of your dread command? Oh say.

Ghost. Do not forget: this Visitation
Is but to whet thy almost blunted purpose.
But looke, Amazement on thy Mother sits;
O step betweene her, and her fighting Soule,
Concept in weakest bodies, strongest workes.
Speake to her Hamlet.

Ham. How is it with you Lady?

Qu. Alas, how is't with you?
That you bend your eye on vacancie,
And with their corporall ayre do hold discourse.
Forth at your eyes, your spirits wildely peepe,
And as the sleeping Soldiours in th'Alarme,
Your bedded haire, like life in excrements,
Start vp, and stand an end. Oh gentle Sonne,
Vpon the heate and flame of thy distemper
Sprinkle coole patience. Whereon do you looke?

Ham. On him, on him; look you how pale he glares,
His forme and cause conioyn'd, preaching to stones,
Would make them capeable. Do not looke vpon me,
Least with this pitteous action you conuert
My sterne effects: then what I haue to do,
Will want true colour; teares perchance for blood.

Qu. To who do you speake this?

Ham. Do you see nothing there?

Qu. Nothing at all, yet all that is I see

Ham. Nor did you nothing heare?

Qu. No, nothing but our selues.

Ham. Why look you there: looke how it steals away
My Father in his habite, as he liued.
Looke where he goes euen now out at the Portall. Exit.

Qu. This is the very coynage of your Braine,
This bodilesse Creation extasie is very cunning in.

Ham. Extasie!
My Pulse as yours doth temperately keepe time,
And makes as healthfull Musicke. It is not madnesse
That I haue vttered; bring me to the Test
And I the matter will re-word which madnesse
Would gamboll from. Mother, for loue of Grace,
Lay not a flattering Vnction to your soule,
That not your trespasse, but my madnesse speakes:
It will but skin and film the Vlcerous place,
Whil'st ranke Corruption mining all within,
Infects vnseene. Confesse your selfe to Heauen,
Repent what's past, auoyd what is to come,
And do not spread the Compost on the Weedes,
To make them ranke. Forgiue me this my Vertue,
For in the fatnesse of this pursie times,
Vertue itselfe, of Vice must pardon begge,
Yea courb, and woe, for leaue to do him good.

Qu. Oh Hamlet,
Thou hast cleft my heart in twaine.

Ham. O throw away the worser part of it,
And liue the purer with the other halfe.
Good night, but go not to mine Vnkles bed,
Assume a Vertue, if you haue it not, refraine to night,
And that shall lend a kinde of easinesse
To the next abstinence. Once more goodnight,
And when you are desirous to be blest
Ile blessing begge of you. For this same Lord,
I do repent: but heauen hath pleas'd it so,
To punish me with this, and this with me,
That I must be their Scourge and Minister.
I will bestow him, and will answer well
The death I gaue him: so againe, good night.
I must be cruell, onely to be kinde;
Thus bad begins, and worse remaines behinde.

Qu. What shall I do?

Ham. Not this by no meanes that I bid you do:
Let the blunt King tempt you againe to bed,
Pinch Wanton on your cheeke, call you his Mouse,
And let him for a paire of reeuche kisses,

Or pulling in your neckes with his damn'd Fingers,
Makes you to ravell all this matter out,
That I essentially am not in madnesse.
But made in craft. Twere good you let him know,
For who that's but a Queene, faire, sober, wise,
Would from a Paddocke, from a Bat, a Gibbe,
Such deere concreaunces hide. Who would do so,
No in despighe of Sense and Secrecie,
Vnpeggue the Basket on the houses top:
Let the Birds flye, and like the famous Ape
To try Conclusions in the Basket, creape
And breake your owne necke downe.

Qu. Be thou assur'd, if words be made of breath,
And breath of life: I have no life to breath
What thou hast said to me.

Ham. I must to England, you know that?

Qu. Alacke I had forgot: 'Tis so concluded on.

Ham. This man shall set me packing:
Ile lugge the Guts into the Neighbor roome,
Mother goodnight. Indeede this Counsellor
Is now most still, most secret, and most grave,
Who was in life, a foolish prating Knave.
Come sir, to draw toward an end with you.
Good night Mother.

Exit Hamlet tugging in Polonius.

Enter King.

King. There's matters in these sighes.
These profound heaves
You must translate: 'Tis fit we understand them.
Where is your Sonne?

Qu. Ah my good Lord, what have I seene to night?

King. What Gertrude? How do's Hamlet?

Qu. Mad as the Seas, and winde, when both contend
Which is the Mightier, in his lawlesse fit
Behinde the Arras, hearing something stirre,
He whips his Rapier out, and cries a Rat, a Rat,
And in his brainish apprehension killes
The vnseene good old man.

King. Oh heavy deed:
It had bin so with vs had we beene there:
His Liberty is full of threats to all,
To you your selfe, to vs, to every one.
Alas, how shall this bloody deede be answered?
It will be laide to vs, whose providence
Should have kept short, restrain'd, and out of haunt,
This mad young man. But so much was our love,
We would not vnderstand what was most fit,
But like the Owner of a foule disease,
To keepe it from divulging, let's it feede
Even on the pith of life. Where is he gone?

Qu. To draw apart the body he hath kild,
O're whom his very madnesse like some Ore
Among a Mineral of Metrels base
Shewes it selfe pure. He weepes for what is done.

King. Oh Gertrude, come away:
The Sun no sooner shall the Mountaines touch,
But we will ship him hence, and this vilde deed,
We must with all our Majesty and Skill
Both countenance, and excuse. Enter Ros. & Guild.
Ho Guildenstern:
Friends both go joyne you with some further ayde:
Hamlet in madnesse hath Polonius slaine,
And from his Mother Closset hath he drag'd him.
Go seeke him out, speake fair, and bring the body
Into the Chappell. I pray you haste in this. Exit Gent.
Come Gertrude, we'l call vp our wisest friends,
To let them know both what we mean to do,
And what's vnmatch'd done. Oh come away,
My soule is full of discord and dismay. Exeunt

Enter Hamlet.

Ham. Safely stowed.

Gentlemen within. Hamlet, Lord Hamlet.

Ham. What noise? Who calls on Hamlet?
Oh here they come. Enter Ros. and Guildenstern.

Ro. What have you done my Lord with the dead body?

Ham. Compounded it with dust, whereto 'tis Kinne.

Rosin. Tell vs where 'tis, that we may take it thence,
And bear it to the Chappell.

Ham. Do not believe it.

Rosin. Believe what?

Ham. That I can keepe your counsell, and not mine owne. Besides, to be demanded of a Spunge, what replication should be made by the Sonne of a King.

Rosin. Take you me for a Spunge, my Lord?

Ham. I sir, that sokes vp the Kings Countenance, his Rewards, his Authorities (but such Officers do the King best service in the end. He keepes them like an Ape in the corner of his jaw, first mouth'd to be last swallowed, when he needes what you have glean'd, it is but squeezing you, and Spunge you shall be dry again.

Rosin. I vnderstand you not my Lord.

Ham. I am glad of it: a knavish speech sleepes in a foolish eare.

Rosin. My Lord, you must tell vs where the body is, and go with vs to the King.

Ham. The body is with the King, but the King is not with the body. The King is a thing ——

Guild. A thing my Lord?

Ham. Of nothing: bring me to him, hide Fox, and all after. Exeunt

Enter King.

King. I have sent to seeke him, and to find the bodie:
How dangerous is it that this man goes loose:
Yet must not we put the strong Law on him:
He's loued of the distracted multitude,
Who like not in their judgement, but their eyes:
And where 'tis so, th'Offenders scourge is weigh'd
But neerer the offence: to bear all smooth, and even,
This sodaine sending him away, must seeme
Deliberate pause, diseases desperate growne,
By desperate appliance are relieved,
Or not at all. Enter Rosencrans.
How now? What hath befalne?

Rosin. Where the dead body is bestow'd my Lord,
We cannot get from him.

King. But where is he?

Rosin. Without my Lord, guarded to know your pleasure.

King. Bring him before vs.

Rosin. Hoe, Guildenstern? Bring in my Lord.

Enter Hamlet and Guildenstern.

King. Now Hamlet, where's Polonius?

Ham. At Supper.

King. At Supper? Where?

Ham. Not where he eats, but where he is eaten, a certaine connocation of wormes are e'ne at him. Your worm is your onely Emperor for diet. We fat all creatures else to fat vs, and we fat our selfe for Magots. Your fat King, and your leane Begger is but variable service to dishes, but to one Table that's the end.

King. What doest thou mean by this?

Ham. Nothing but to shew you how a King may go a Progresse through the guts of a Begger.

King. Where is Polonius.

Ham. In heaven, send thither to see. If your Messenger finde him not there, seeke him i'th other place your selfe: but indeed, if you finde him not this moneth, you shall nose him as you go vp the staires into the Lobby.

King. Go seeke him there.

Ham. He will stay till ye come.

K. Hamlet, this deed of thine, for thine especial safety
Which we do tender, as we deerely greeue
For that which thou hast done, must send thee hence
With fiery Quicknesse. Therefore prepare thy selfe,
The Barke is readie, and the winde at helpe,
Th'Associates tend, and every thing at bent
For England.

Ham. For England?

King. I Hamlet.

Ham. Good.

King. So is it, if thou knew'st our purposes.

Ham. I see a Cherube that see's him: but come, for England. Farewell deere Mother.

King. Thy loving Father Hamlet

Hamlet. My Mother: Father and Mother is man and wife: man & wife is one flesh, and so my mother. Come, for England. Exit

King. Follow him at foote.
Tempt him with speed aboord:
Delay it not, I'le haue him hence to night.
Away, for every thing is Seal'd and done
That else leanes on th'Affaire pray you make haste
And England, if my loue thou holdst at ought,
As my great power thereof may giue thee sense,
Since yet thy Cicatrice looks raw and red
After the Danish Sword, and thy free awe
Payes homage to vs; thou mayst not coldly set
Our Soueraigne Processe, which imports at full
By Letters conniuing to that effect
The present death of Hamlet. Do it England,
For like the Hecticke in my blood he rages,
And thou must cure me: Till I know 'tis done,
Howe'er my happes, my loyes were ne'r begun. Exit

Enter Fortinbras with an Arme.

For. Go Captaine, from me greet the Danish King,
Tell him that by his license, Fortinbras
Claimes the conueyance of a promis'd March
Ouer his Kingdome. You know the Rendezuous:
If that his Maiesty would ought with vs,
We shall expresse our duetie in his eye,
And let him know so.

Cap. I will doo't, my Lord.

For. Go safely on. Exit.

Enter Queene and Horatio.

Qu. I will not speake with her.

Hor. She is importunate, indeed distract, her moode will needs be pitied.

Qu. What would she haue?

Hor. She speakes much of her Father; says she heares
There's tricks i'th'world, and hems, and beats her heart,
Spurnes enviously at Strawes, speakes things in doubt,
That carry but halfe sense: Her speech is nothing,
Yet the vnshaped vse of it doth moue
The hearers to Collection; they aym at it,
And botch the words vp fit to their owne thoughts,
Which as her winkes, and nods, and gestures yeild them,
Indeed would make one thinke there would be thought,
Though nothing sure, yet much vnhappily.

Qu. Twere good she were spoken with,
For she may strew dangerous coniectures
In ill breeding minds. Let her come in.
To my sicke soule (as sinnes true Nature is)
Each toy seemes Prologue, to some great amisse,
So full of Artlesse iealousie is guilt,
It spill's it selfe, in fearing to be spilt.

Enter Ophelia distracted.

Ophe. Where is the beauteous Maiesty of Denmark.

Qu. How now Ophelia?

Ophe. How should I your true loue know from another one?
By his Cockle hat and staffe, and his Sandal shoone.

Qu. Alas sweet Lady: what imports this Song?

Ophe. Say you? Nay pray you marke.
He is dead and gone Lady, he is dead and gone,
At his head a grasse-greene Turfe, at his heelles a stone.

Enter King.

Qu. Nay but Ophelia.

Ophe. Pray you marke.
White his Shroud as the Mountaine Snow.

Qu. Alas looke heere my Lord.

Ophe. Larded with sweet flowers:
Which bewept to the grave did not go,
With true-loue flowers.

King. How do ye, pretty Lady?

Ophe. Well, God dil'dyou. They say the Owle was a Bakers daughter. Lord, wee know what we are, but know not what we may be. God be at your Table.

King. Conceit vpon her Father

Ophe. Pray you let's haue no words of this. but when they aske you what it meanes, say you this:
To morrow is S. Valentines day, all in the morning betime,
And I a Maid at your Window, to be your Valentine
Then vp he rose, & don'd his clothes, & dopt the chamber doore,
Let in the Maid, that out a Maid, never departed more.

King. Pretty Ophelia.

Ophe. Indeed la? without an oath I'le make an end on.
By gis, and by S. Charity,
Alacke, and fie for shame:
Young men will do't, if they come to't,
By Cocke they are to blame
Quoth she before you tumbled me.
You promis'd me to Wed
So would I ha done by yonder Sonne,
And chaw hadst not come to my bed.

King. How long hath she bin thus?

Ophe. I hope all will be well. We must bee patient, but I cannot choose but weepe, to thinke they should lay him i'th'cold ground: My brother shall knowe of it, and so I thanke you for your good counsell. Come, my Coach: Goodnight Ladies: Goodnight sweet Ladies: Goodnight, goodnight. Exit.

King. Follow her close,
Giue her good watch I pray you:
Oh this is the poyson of deepe greefe, it springs
All from her Fathers death. Oh Gertrude, Gertrude,
When sorrowes comes, they come not single spies,
But in Battaliues. First, her Father slaine,
Next your Sonne gone, and he most violent Author
Of his owne just remoue: the people muddied,
Thicke and vnwholsome in their thoughts, and whispers
For good Polonius death; and we have done but greenly
In hugger mugger to interre him. Poore Ophelia
Diuided from her selfe, and her faire Iudgement

Without the which we are Pictures, or meere Beasts.
Last, and as much containing as all these,
Her Brother is in secret come from France,
Keepes on his wonder, keepes himselfe in clouds,
And wants not Buzzers to infect his eare
With pestilent Speeches of his Fathers death,
Where in necessitie of matter Beggard,
Will nothing sticke our persons to Arraigne
In eare and eare. O my deere Gertrude, this,
Like to a murdering Peece in many places,
Gives me superfluous death. A Noise within.

Enter a Messenger.

Qu. Alacke, what noyse is this?
King. Where are my Switzers?
Let them guard the doore. What is the matter?
Mes. Save your selfe, my Lord.
The Ocean (over-peering of his List)
Entes not the Flats with more impetuous haste
Then young Laertes, in a Riotous head,
Ore-beares your Officers, the rabble call him Lord,
And as the world were now but to begin,
Antiquity forgot, Custome not knowne,
The Ratifiers and props of every word,
They cry choose we? Laertes shall be King,
Caps, hands, and tongues, applaud it to the clouds,
Laertes shall be King, Laertes King.
Qu. How cheerefully on the false Traile they cry,
Oh this is Counter you false Danish Dogges.
Noise within. Enter Laertes.
King. The doores are broke.
Laer. Where is the King, sirs? Stand you all without.
All. No, let's come in.
Laer. I pray you give me leave.
All. We will, we will.
Laer. I thanke you: Keepe the doore.
Oh thou vilde King, give me my Father.
Qu. Calmely good Laertes.
Laer. That drop of blood, that calmes
Proclaimes me Bastard:
Cries Cuckold to my Father, brands the Harlot
Even here between the chaste unsmirched brow
Of my true Mother.
King. What is the cause Laertes,
That thy Rebellion lookes so Gyant-like?
Let him go Gertrude: Do not feare our person:
There's such Divinity doth hedge a King,
That Treason can but peepe to what it would,
Acts little of his will. Tell me Laertes,
Why thou art thus Incensd? Let him go Gertrude.
Speake man.
Laer. Where's my Father?
King. Dead.
Qu. But not by him.
King. Let him demand his fill.
Laer. How came he dead? Ile not be Iugg'd with.
To hell Allegiance: Vowes, to the blackest diuell.
Conscience and Grace, to the profoundest Pit.
I dare Damnation: to this point I stand,
That both the worlds I give to negligence,
Let come what comes: onely Ile be reueng'd
Most throughly for my Father.
King. Who shall stay you?
Laer. My Will, not all the world,
And for my means, Ile husband them so well,
They shall go farre with little.
King. Good Laertes:
If you desire to know the certainte
Of your deere Fathers death, if writ in your revenge,
That Soop-flake you will draw both Friend and Foe,
Winner and Looser.
Laer. None but his Enemies.
King. Will you know them then.
La. To his good Friends, thus wide Ile ope my Armes
And like the kinde Life-rend'ring Pelitican,
Repast them with my blood.
King. Why now you speake
Like a good Childe, and a true Gentleman.
That I am guiltlesse of your Fathers death,
And am most sensible in greefe for it,
It shall as level to your Judgement pierce
As day do's to your eye.

A noise within. Let her come in.

Enter Ophelia.

Laer. How now? what noise is that?
Oh heate drie vp my Braines, teares seven times salt,
Burne out the Sense and Vertue of mine eye.
By Heaven, thy madnesse shall be payed by weight,
Till our Scale turnes the beame. Oh Rose of May,
Deere Maid, kinde Sister, sweet Ophelia:
Oh Heavens, is't possible, a young Maids wits,
Should be as mortall as an old mans life?
Nature is fine in Love, and where 'tis fine,
It sends some precious instance of it selfe
After the thing it loves.

Ophe. They bore him bare-faced on the Bier,
Hey non nony, nony, hey nony:
And on his grave rained many a teare,
Fare you well my Dove.

Laer. Had'st thou thy wits, and did'st persuade Reuenge, it could not moue thus.
Ophe. You must sing downe a-downe, and you call him a-downe-a. Oh, how the wheele becomes it? It is the false Steward that stole his masters daughter.
Laer. This nothings more then matter.
Ophe. There's Rosemary, that's for Remembrance. Pray loue remember: and there is Paconcies, that's for Thoughts.
Laer. A document in madnesse, thoughts & remembrance fitted.
Ophe. There's Fennell for you, and Columbines: there's Rew for you, and here's some for me. We may call it Herbe-Grace a Sundaies: Oh you must weare your Rew with a difference. There's a Daysie, I would give you some Violets, but they wither'd all when my Father dyed: They say, he made a good end;
For bonny sweet Robin is all my ioy.
Laer. Thought, and Affliction, Passion, Hell itself
She turnes to Favour, and to prettinesse.
Ophe. And will he not come again,
And will he not come again?
No, no, he is dead, go to thy Death-bed,
He never will come again.
His Beard as white as Snow,
All Flaxen was his Pole.
He is gone, he is gone, and we cast away mone,
Gramercy on his Soule.
And of all Christian Soules, I pray God.
God buy ye. Exeunt Ophelia
Laer. Do you see this, you Gods?
King. Laertes, I must common with your greefe,
Or you deny me right: go but apart,

Make

Make choice of whom your wisest Friends you will,
And they shall heare and judge 'twixt you and me;
If by direct or by Collateral hand
They finde vs touch'd, we will our Kingdome give,
Our Crowne, our Life, and all that we call Ours
To you in satisfaction. But if not,
Be you content to lend your patience to vs,
And we shall joyntly labour with your soule
To give it due content.

Laer. Let this be so:
His means of death his obscure buriall;
No Trophee, Sword, nor Hatchment o're his bones,
No Noble rite, nor formall ostentation,
Cry to be heard, as 'twere from Heaven to Earth,
That I must call in question.

King. So you shall:
And where th'offence is, let the great Axe fall.
I pray you go with me. Exeunt

Enter Horatio, with an Attendant.

Hora. What are they that would speake with me?

Ser. Saylors sir, they say they haue Letters for you.

Hor. Let them come in,
I do not know from what part of the world
I should be greeted, if not from Lord Hamlet.

Enter Saylor.

Say. God blesse you Sir.

Hor. Let him blesse thee too.

Say. He shall Sir, and't please him. There's a Letter for you Sir: It comes from th'Ambassadours that was bound for England, if your name be Horatio, as I am let to know it is.

Reads the Letter.

Horatio, When thou shalt haue overlook'd this, give these Fellowes some meanes to the King: They haue Letters for him. Ere we were two dayes old at Sea, a Pyrate of very Warlicke appointment gaue vs Chase. Finding our selues too slow of Saile, we put on a compelled Valour. In the Grapple, I boarded them. On the instant they got cleare of our Shippe, so I alone became their Prisoner. They haue dealt with me, like Theeves of Mercy, but they knew what they did. I am to do a good turne for them. Let the King haue the Letters I haue sent, and repaire thou to me with as much haste as thou wouldst fly death. I haue words to speake in your eare, will make thee dumbe, yet are they much too light for the bore of the Matter. These good Fellowes will bring thee where I am. Rosencrance and Guildenstarne, hold their course for England. Of them I haue much to tell thee, Farewell.

He that thou knowest thine,
Hamlet.

Come, I will give you way for these your Letters,
And do't the speedier, that you may direct me
To him from whom you brought them. Exit.

Enter King and Laertes.

King. Now must your conscience my acquaintance seal,
And you must put me in your heart for Friend,
Sith you haue heard, and with a knowing ear,
That he which hath your Noble Father slaine,
Pursued my life.

Laer. It well appeares. But tell me,
Why you proceeded not against these feares,
So crimefull, and so Capitall in Nature,
As by your Safety, Wisedome, all things else,
You mainly were stirr'd vp?

King. O for two speciall Reasons,
Which may to you (perhaps) seeme much vnsinnewed,
And yet to me they are strong. The Queen his Mother,
Lives almost by his lookes: and for my selfe,
My Vertue or my Plague, be it either which,
She's so conionctiue to my life and soule;
That as the Starre moues not but in his Sphere,
I could not but by her. The other Motiue,
Why to a publike count I might not go,
Is the great loue the generall gender beare him,
Who dipping all his Faults in their affection,
Would like the Spring that turneth Wood to Stone,
Conuert his Gyues to Graces. So that my Arrowes
Too slightly timbred for so loud a Winde,
Would haue reuerted to my Bow againe,
And not where I had aym'd them.

Laer. And so haue I a Noble Father lost,
A Sister driuen into desperate termes,
Who was (if praises may go backe againe)
Stood Challenger on mount of all the Age
For her perfections. But my reuenge will come.

King. Breake not your sleepes for that,
You must not thinke
That we are made of stuffe, so flat, and dull,
That we can let our Beard be shooke with danger,
And thinke it pastime. You shortly shall heare more,
I lou'd your Father, and we loue our Selfe,
And that I hope will teach you to imagine.——

Enter a Messenger.

How now? What Newes?

Mes. Letters my Lord from Hamlet. This to your Maiesty: this to the Queene.

King. From Hamlet? Who brought them?

Mes. Saylors my Lord they say, I saw them not:
They were giuen me by Claudio, he receiu'd them.

King. Laertes you shall heare them:
Leaue vs. Exit Messenger

High and Mighty, you shall know I am set naked on your Kingdome. To morrow shall I beg leaue to see your Kingly Eyes. when I shall (first making your Pardon thereunto) recount th'Occasions of my sodaine and more strange returne.
Hamlet.

What should this meane? Are all the rest come backe?
Or is it some abuse? Or no such thing?

Laer. Know you the hand?

Kin. 'Tis Hamlets Character, naked and in a Post-script here he sayes alone: Can you aduise me?

Laer. I'm lost in it my Lord; but let him come,
It warmes the very sicknesse in my heart,
That I shall liue and tell him to his teeth;
Thus diddest thou.

Kin. If it be so Laertes, as how should it be so:
How otherwise will you beat'rd by me?

Laer. If so you'l not o'rerule me to a peace.

Kin. To thine owne peace: if he be now return'd,
As checking at his Voyage, and that he meanes
No more to vndertake it; I will worke him
To an exployt now ripe in my Deuice,
Vnder the which he shall not choose but fall;
And for his death no winde of blame shall breath,
But even his Mother shall vncharge the practice,
And call it accident: Some two Monthes hence
Here was a Gentleman of Normandy,
I'se seene my selfe, and serv'd against the French,
And they ran well on Horseback; but this Gallant

Had

Had witchcraft in't; he grew into his Seat,
And so such wondrous doing brought his Horse,
As had he beene encorps't and demy-Natur'd
With the brave Beast, so farre he past my thought,
That I in forgery of shapes and trickes,
Come short of what he did.

Laer. A Norman was't?

Kin. A Norman.

Laer. Vpon my life Lamond.

Kin. The very same.

Laer. I know him well, he is the Brooch indeed,
And Iemme of all our Nation.

Kin. He mad confession of you,
And gaue you such a Masterly report,
For Art and exercise in your defence;
And for your Rapier most especially,
That he cryed out, t'would be a sight indeed,
If one could match you Sir. This report of his
Did Hamlet so envenom with his Envy,
That he could nothing doe but wish and begge,
Your sodaine comming ore to play with him;
Now out of this.

Laer. Why out of this, my Lord?

Kin Laertes was your Father deare to you?
Or are you like the painting of a sorrow,
A face without a heart?

Laer. Why aske you this?

Kin. Not that I thinke you did not love your Father,
But that I know Love is begun by Time:
And that I see in passages of proofe,
Time qualifies the sparke and fire of it:
Hamlet comes backe: what would you vndertake,
To show your selfe your Fathers sonne indeed,
More then in words?

Laer. To cut his throat i'th' Church.

Kin. No place indeed should murder Sanctuarize;
Revenge should haue no bounds: but good Laertes
Will you doe this, keepe close within your Chamber,
Hamlet return'd, shall know you are come home:
Wee'l put on those shall praise your excellence,
And set a double vernish on the fame
The Frenchman gaue you, bring you in fine together,
And wager on your heads, he being remisse,
Most generous, and free from all contriuing,
Will not peruse the Foiles? So that with ease,
Or with a little shuffling, you may choose
A Sword vnbaited, and in a passe of practice,
Requit him for your Father.

Laer. I will doe't,
And for that purpose I'le annoint my Sword:
I bought an Vnction of a Mountebanke
So mortall, I but dipt a knife in it,
Where it drawes blood, no Cataplasme so rare,
Collected from all Simples that haue Vertue
Vnder the Moone, can saue the thing from death,
That is but scratcht withall: I'le touch my point,
With this contagion, that if I gall him slightly,
It may be death.

Kin Let's further thinke of this,
Weigh what conuenience both of time and meanes
May fit vs to our shape, if this should faile;
And that our drift looke through our bad performance,
'Twere better not assaid; therefore this Project
Should haue a backe or second, that might hold,
If this should blast in proofe: Soft, let me see
Wee'l make a solemne wager on your commings,
I'ha't: when in your motion you are hot and dry,
As make your bouts more violent to the end,
And that he cals for drinke; I'le haue prepar'd him
A Chalice for the nonce; whereon but sipping,
If he by chance escape your venom'd stuck,
Our purpose may hold there; how sweet Queene.

Enter Queene.

Queen. One woe doth tread vpon anothers heele,
So fast they'l follow: your Sister's drown'd Laertes.

Laer. Drown'd! O where?

Queen. There is a Willow growes aslant a Brooke,
That shewes his hore leaues in the glassie streame:
There with fantasticke Garlands did she come,
Of Crow-flowers, Nettles, Daysies, and long Purples,
That liberall Shepheards giue a grosser name;
But our cold Maids doe Dead Mens Fingers call them:
There on the pendant boughes, her Coronet weeds
Clambring to hang; an enuious sliver broke,
When downe the weedy Trophies, and her selfe,
Fell in the weeping Brooke, her clothes spread wide,
And Mermaid-like, a while they bore her vp,
Which time she chaunted snatches of old tunes,
As one incapable of her owne distresse,
Or like a creature Native, and indued
Vnto that Element: but long it could not be,
Till that her garments, heavy with her drinke,
Pul'd the poore wretch from her melodious buy,
To muddy death.

Laer. Alas then, is she drown'd?

Queen. Drown'd, drown'd.

Laer. Too much of water hast thou poore Ophelia,
And therefore I forbid my teares: but yet
It is our tricke, Nature her custome holds,
Let shame say what it will; when these are gone
The woman will be out: Adue my Lord,
I haue a speech of fire, that fame would blaze,
But that this folly doubes it. Exit.

Kin. Let's follow, Gertrude:
How much I had to doe to calme his rage?
Now feare I this will giue it start againe;
Therefore let's follow. Exeunt.

Enter two Clowns.

Clown. Is she to bee buried in Christian burial, that wilfully seekes her owne saluation?

Other. I tell thee she is, and therefore make her Grauе straight, the Crowner hath sate on her, and finds it Christian burial.

Clo. How can that be, vnlesse she drowned her selfe in her owne defence?

Other. Why 'tis found so.

Clo. It must be Se offendendo, it cannot bee else: for heere lies the point; If I drowne my selfe wittingly, it argues an Act: and an Act hath three branches. It is an Act to doe and to performe; argall she drown'd her selfe wittingly.

Other. Nay but heare you Goodman Delue.

Clown. Give me leaue; heere lies the water; good: heere stands the man; good: If the man goe to this water and drowne himselfe; it is well he will, he goes, marke you that? But if the water come to him & drowne him; hee drownes not himselfe. Argall, hee that is not guilty of his owne death, shortens not his owne life.

Other. But is this law?

Clo. I marry is't, Crowners Quest Law.

Other. Will you ha the truth on't: if this had not beene a Gentlewoman, shee should haue beene buried out of Christian Buriall.

Clo. Why there thou say'st. And the more pitty that great folke should haue countenance in this world to drowne or hang themselves, more then their even Christian. Come, my Spade; there is no ancient Gentlemen, but Gardiners, Ditchers and Grave-makers; they hold vp Adams Profession.

Other. Was he a Gentleman?

Clo. He was the first that ever bore Armes.

Other. Why he had none.

Clo. What, a't a Heathen? how dost thou vnderstand the Scripture? the Scripture sayes Adam dig'd; could hee digge without Armes? Ile put another question to thee: if thou answerest me not to the purpose, confesse thy selfe——

Other. Go too.

Clo. What is he that builds stronger then either the Mason, the Shipwright, or the Carpenter?

Other. The Gallowes maker; for that Frame outliues a thousand Tenants.

Clo. I like thy wit well in good faith, the Gallowes does well; but how does it well? it does well to those that doe ill: now, thou dost ill to say the Gallowes is built stronger then the Church: Argall, the Gallowes may doe well to thee. Too't againe, Come.

Other. Who builds stronger then a Mason, a Shipwright, or a Carpenter?

Clo. I, tell me that, and vnyoake.

Other. Marry, now I can tell.

Clo. Too't.

Other. Masse, I cannot tell.

Enter Hamlet and Horatio a farre off.

Clo. Cudgell thy braines no more about it; for your dull Asse will not mend his pace with beating, and when you are ask't this question next, say a Grave-maker: the Houses that he makes, lasts till Doomesday: go, get thee to Yaughan, fetch me a stoope of Liquor.

Sings.

In youth when I did loue, did loue,
me thought it was very sweete:
To contract O the time for a my behoue,
O me thought there was nothing meete.

Ham. Has this fellow no feeling of his business, that he sings at Grave-making?

Hor. Custome hath made it in him a property of easinesse.

Ham. Tis e'n so; the hand of little Imployment hath the daintier sense.

Clowne sings.

But Age with his stealing steps
hath clawed me in his clutch:
And hath shipped me intil the Land,
as if I had never beene such.

Ham. That Scull had a tongue in it, and could sing once: how the knaue iowles it to th' ground, as if it were Cayns Iaw-bone, that did the first murther: It might be the Pate of a Politician which this Asse o're Offices: one that could circumuent God, might it not?

Hor. It might, my Lord.

Ham. Or of a Courtier, which could say, Good Morrow sweet Lord: how dost thou, good Lord? this might be my Lord such a one, that prais'd my Lord such a one's Horse, when he meant to begge it; might it not?

Hor. I, my Lord.

Ham. Why e'en so: and now my Lady Wormes, Chapleffe, and knocks about the Mazzard with a Sexton's Spade; heere's fine Reuolution, if wee had the tricke to see't. Did these bones cost no more the breeding, but to play at Loggets with 'em? mine ake to thinke on't.

Clowne sings.

A Pickhaxe and a Spade, a Spade
for and a shrouding-Sheete:
O a Pit of Clay for to be made,
for such a Guest is meete.

Ham. There's another: why might not that bee the Scull of a Lawyer? where be his Quiddits now? his Quillets? his Cases? his Tenures, and his Tricks? why doe's he suffer this rude knaue now to knocke him about the Sconce with a dirty Shouell, and will not tell him of his Action of Battery? hum. This fellow might be in's time a great buyer of Land, with his Statutes, his Recognizances, his Fines, his double Vouchers, his Recoueries: Is this the fine of his Fines, and the recouery of his Recoueries, to haue his fine Pate full of fine Dirt? will his Vouchers vouch him no more of his Purchases, and double ones too, then the length and breadth of a peare of Indentures? the very Conueyances of his Lands will hardly lye in this Boxe; and must the Inheritor himselfe haue no more? ha?

Hor. Not a iot more, my Lord.

Ham. Is not Parchment made of Sheep-skinnes?

Hor. I my Lord, and of Calfe-skinnes too.

Ham. They are Sheepe and Calues that seek out assurance in that. I will speake to this fellow whose Grave's this Sir?

Clo. Mine Sir:

O a Pit of Clay for to be made,
for such a Guest is meete.

Ham. I thinke it be thine indeed: for thou liest in't.

Clo. You lye out on't Sir, and therefore it is not yours for my part, I doe not lye in't; and yet it is mine.

Ham. Thou dost lye in't, to be in't and say 'tis thine: 'tis for the dead, not for the quicke, therefore thou lyest.

Clo. Tis a quicke lye Sir, 't will away againe from me to you.

Ham. What man dost thou digge it for?

Clo. For no man Sir.

Ham. What woman then?

Clo For none neither.

Ham. Who is to be buried in't?

Clo. One that was a woman Sir; but rest her Soule, shee's dead.

Ham. How absolute the knaue is? wee must speake by the Carde, or equiuocation will vndoe vs: by the Lord Horatio, these three yeares I haue taken note of it, the Age is growne so picked, that the toe of the Peasant comes so neere the heeles of our Courtier, hee galls his Kibe. How long hast thou been a Grave-maker?

Clo. Of all the dayes i'th' yeare, I came too't that day that our last King Hamlet o'recame Fortinbras.

Ham. How long is that since?

Clo. Cannot you tell that? every fooleе can tell that: It was the very day, that young Hamlet was borne, hee that was mad, and sent into England.

Ham. I marry, why was he sent into England?

Clo. Why, because he was mad; hee shall recouer his wits there; or if he do not, it's no great matter there.

Ham.

Ham. Why?

Cle. 'Twill not be seene in him, there the men are as mad as he.

Ham. How came he mad?

Cle. Very strangely they say

Ham. How strangely?

Cle. Faith e'ene with loosing his wits.

Ham. Vpon what ground?

Cle. Why heere in Denmarke: I haue bin foreteene heere, man and Boy thirty yeares.

Ham. How long will a man lie 'ith' earth ere he rot?

Cle. I faith, if he be not rotten before he die (as we haue many pocky Corses now adaies, that will scarce hold the laying in) he will last you some eight yeare, or nine yeare. A Tanner will last you nine year e.

Ham. Why he, more then another?

Cle. Why sir, his hide is so tan'd with his Trade, that he will keepe out water a great while. And your water, is a sore Decayer of your horson dead body. Heres a Scull now: this Scul, has laine in the earth three & tweenty years.

Ham. Whose was it?

Cle. A whoreson mad Fellowes it was; Whose doe you thinke it was?

Ham. Nay, I know not.

Cle. A pestilence on him for a mad Rogue, a pou'rd Flaggon of Renish on my head once. This same Scull Sir, this same Scull sir, was Yorick Scull, the Kings Iester.

Ham. This?

Cle. E'ene that.

Ham. Let me see. Alas poore Yorick, I knew him Horatio, a fellow of infinite Iest; of most excellent fancy, he hath borne me on his backe a thousand times: And how abhorred my Imagination is, my gorge rises at it. Heere hung those lipps, that I haue kist I know not how oft. Where be your Iibes now? Your Gambols? Your Songs? Your flashes of Merriment that were woot to set the Table on a Rore? No one now, to mock your own Ieering? Quite chopfalne? Now get you to my Ladies Chamber, and tell her, let her paint an inch thicke, to this fauour she must come. Make her laugh at that: prythee Horatio tell me one thing.

Hor. What's that my Lord?

Ham. Dost thou thinke Alexander looke o'this fashion i'th' earth?

Hor. E'ene so.

Ham. And smelt so? Puh.

Hor. E'ene so, my Lord.

Ham. To what base vses we may returne Horatio. Why may not Imagination trace the Noble dust of Alexander, till he find it stopping a bunghole.

Hor. 'Twere to consider: too curiously to consider so.

Ham. No faith, not a iot. But to follow him thather with modestie enough, & likelihood to lead it; as thus. Alexander died: Alexander was buried: Alexander returneth into dust; the dust is earth; of earth we make Lome, and why of that Lome (whereto he was conuerted) might they not stopp a Beere-barrell?
Imperiall Cæsar, dead and turn'd to clay,
Might stop a hole to keepe the winde away.
Oh, that that earth, which kept the world in awe,
Should patch a Wall, t'expell the winters flaw.
But soft, but soft, aside; heere comes the King.

Enter King, Queene, Laertes, and a Coffin, with Lords attendant.

The Queene, the Courtiers. Who is that they follow,
And with such maimed rites? This doth betoken,
The Corse they follow, did with desperate hand,
Fore do it owne life; 'twas some Estate.
Couch we a while, and mark.

Laer. What Ceremony else?

Ham. That is Laertes, a very Noble youth: Mark.

Laer. What Ceremony else?

Priest. Her Obsequies haue bin as farre inlarg'd,
As we haue warrantis, her death was doubtfull,
And but that great Command, o're-swaies the order,
She should in ground vnsanctified haue lodg'd,
Till the last Trumpet. For charitable praiers,
Shardes, Flints, and Peebles, should be thro wne on her:
Yet heere she is allowed her Virgin Rites,
Her Maiden strewments, and the bringing home
Of Bell and Buriall.

Laer. Must there no more be done?

Priest. No more be done:
We should prophane the seruice of the dead,
To sing sage Requiem, and such rest to her
As to peace-parted Soules.

Laer. Lay her i'th' earth,
And from her faire and vnpolluted flesh,
May Violets spring. I tell thee (churlish Priest)
A Ministring Angell shall my Sister be,
When thou liest howling!

Ham. What, the faire Ophelia?

Queene. Sweets, to the sweet farewell.
I hop'd thou should'st haue bin my Hamlets wife:
I thought thy Bride-bed to haue decke (sweet Maid)
And not t'haue strew'd thy Graue.

Laer. Oh terrible woer,
Fall ten times treble, on that cursed head
Whose wicked deed, thy most Ingenuous sense
Depriu'd thee of. Hold off the earth a while,
Till I haue caught her once more in mine armes:

Leaps in the grave.

Now pile your dust, vpon the quicke, and dead,
Till of this flat a Mountaine you haue made,
To o're top old Pelion, or the skyish head
Of blew Olympus.

Ham. What is he, whose griefes
Beares such an Emphasis? whose phrase of Sorrow
Conture the wandring Starres, and makes them stand
Like wonder-wounded hearers? This is I,
Hamlet the Dane.

Laer. The deuill take thy soule.

Ham. Thou prai'st not well,
I prythee take thy fingers from my throat;
Sir though I am not Splenatiue, and rash,
Yet haue I something in me dangerous,
Which let thy wiseneſse feare. Away thy hand.

King. Pluck them asunder.

Qu. Hamlet, Hamlet

Gen. Good my Lord be quiet.

Ham. Why I will fight with him vppon this Theme,
Vntill my eielids will no longer wag.

Qu. Oh my Sonne, what Theame?

Ham. I lou'd Ophelia; forty thousand Brothers
Could not (with all their quantitie of Loue)
Make vp my summe. What wilt thou do for her?

King. Oh he is mad Laertes,

Qu. For loue of God forbeare him.

Ham. Come show me what thou'lt doe.
Woo't weepe? Woo't fight? Woo't teare thy selfe?
Woo't drinke vp Esile, eate a Crocodile?

Ile doo't. Doſt thou come heere to whine;
To outface me with leaping in her Graue?
Be buried quicke with her, and ſo will I.
And if thou prate of Mountaines; let them throw
Millions of Akers on vs; till our ground
Sindging his pate againſt the burning Zone,
Make Oſſa like a wart. Nay, and thou'l mouth,
Ile rant as well as thou.

Kin. This is meere Madneſſe:
And thus awhile the fit will worke on him:
Anon as patiente as the female Doue,
When that her golden Coplet are diſclos'd;
His ſilence will ſit drooping.

Ham. Heare you Sir:
What is the reaſon that you vſe me thus?
I loud you ever; but it is no matter:
Let Hercules himſelfe doe what he may,
The Cat will Mew, and Dogge will haue his day. Exit.

Kin. I pray you good Horatio wait vpon him,
Strengthen you patience in our laſt nights ſpeech,
We'l put the matter to the preſent puſh:
Good Gertrude ſet ſome watch ouer your Sonne,
This Graue ſhall haue a liuing Monument:
An houre of quiet ſhortly ſhall we ſee;
Till then, in patience our proceeding be. Exeunt.

Enter Hamlet and Horatio.

Ham. So much for this Sir; now let me ſee the other,
You doe remember all the Circumſtance.

Hor. Remember it my Lord?

Ham. Sir, in my heart there was a kinde of fighting,
That would not let me ſleepe; me thought I lay
Worſe then the mutines in the Bilboes, raſhly,
(And praiſe be raſhneſſe for it) let vs know,
Our indiſcretion ſometimes ſerues vs well,
When our deare plots do pauſe, and that ſhould teach vs,
There's a Diuinity that ſhapes our ends,
Rough-hew them how we will.

Hor. That is moſt certaine.

Ham. Vp from my Cabin
My ſea-gowne ſcarft about me in the darke,
Grop'd I to finde out them; had my deſire,
Finger'd their Packet, and in fine, withdrew
To mine owne roome againe, making ſo bold,
(My feares forgetting manners) to vnſeale
Their grand Commiſſion, where I found Horatio,
Oh royall knauery: An exact command,
Larded with many ſeuerall ſorts of reaſon,
Importing Denmarks health, and Englands too,
With hoo, ſuch Bugges and Goblins in my life,
That on the ſuperuize no leiſure bated,
No not to ſtay the grinding of the Axe,
My head ſhould be ſtruck off.

Hor. Iſt poſſible?

Ham. Here's the Commiſſion, read it at more leiſure:
But wilt thou heare me how I did proceed?

Hor. I beſeech you.

Ham. Being thus benetted round with Villainies,
Ere I could make a Prologue to my braines,
They had begun the Play. I ſate me downe,
Deuis'd a new Commiſſion, wrote it faire,
I once did hold it as our Statiſts doe,
A baſeneſſe to write faire; and laboured much
How to forget that learning: but Sir now,
It did me Yeomans ſeruice: wilt thou know
The effects of what I wrote?

Hor. I, good my Lord.

Ham. An earneſt Conjuration from the King,
As England was his faithfull Tributary,
As loue betweene them, as the Palme ſhould flourith,
As Peace ſhould ſtill her wheaten Garland weare,
And ſtand a Comma 'tweene their amities,
And many ſuch like Aſſis of great charge,
That on the view and know of theſe Contents,
Without debatement further, more or leſſe,
He ſhould the bearers put to ſodaine death,
Not ſhriuing time allowed.

Hor. How was this ſeal'd?

Ham. Why, euen in that was Heauen ordinate;
I had my fathers Signet in my Purſe,
Which was the Modell of that Danith Seale:
Folded the Writ vp in forme of the other,
Subſcrib'd it, gau't th' impreſſion, plac't it ſafely,
The changeling never knowne: Now, the next day
Was our Sea Fight, and what to this was ſemente,
Thou know'ſt already.

Hor. So Guildenſterne and Roſencrance, go too't.

Ham. Why man, they did make loue to this employment
They are not neere my Conſcience; their debate
Doth by their owne inſinuation grow:
'Tis dangerous, when the baſer nature comes
Betweene the paſſe, and fell incenſed points
Of mighty oppoſites.

Hor. Why, what a King is this?

Ham. Does it not, thinkſt thee, ſtand me now vpon
He that hath kil'd my King, and whor'd my Mother,
Popt in betweene th'election and my hopes,
Throwne out his Angle for my proper life,
And with ſuch coozenage; is't not perfect conſcience,
To quit him with this arme? And is't not to be damn'd
To let this Canker of our nature come
In further euill.

Hor. It muſt be ſhortly knowne to him from England
What is the iſſue of the buſineſſe there.

Ham. It will be ſhort,
The interim's mine, and a mans life's no more
Then to ſay one: but I am very ſorry good Horatio,
That to Laertes I forgot my ſelfe;
For by the image of my Cauſe, I ſee
The Portraiture of his; Ile coune his fauours:
But ſure the bravery of his griefe did put me
Into a Towring paſſion.

Hor. Peace, who comes heere?

Enter young Oſricke.

Oſr. Your Lordſhip is right welcome back to Den-(marke.

Ham. I humbly thank you Sir, doſt know this water flie?

Hor. No my good Lord.

Ham. Thy ſtate is the more gracious; for 'tis a vice to know him: he hath much Land, and fertile; let a Beaſt be Lord of Beaſts, and his Crib ſhall ſtand at the Kings Meſſe; 'tis a Chough; but as I ſaw ſpacious in the poſſeſſion of dirt.

Oſr. Sweet Lord, if your friendſhip were at leyſure, I ſhould impart a thing to you from his Maieſty.

Ham. I will receiue it with all diligence of ſpirit; put your Bonet to his right vſe, 'tis for the head.

Oſr. I thanke your Lordſhip, 'tis very hot.

Ham. No, believe mee 'tis very cold, the winde is Northerly.

Oſr. It is indifferent cold my Lord indeed.

Ham. Mee thinkes it is very ſoultry, and hot for my Complexion.

Oſricke.

Osr. Exceedingly, my Lord, it is very soultry, as 'twere I cannot tell how: but my Lord, his Maiesty bad me signifie to you, that he ha's laid a great wager on your head: Sir, this is the matter.

Ham. I beseech you remember.

Osr. Nay, in good faith, for mine ease in good faith: Sir, you are not ignorant of what excellence Laertes is at his weapon.

Ham. What's his weapon?

Osr. Rapier and dagger.

Ham. That's two of his weapons; but well.

Osr. The sir King ha's wag'd with him six Barbary Horses, against the which he impon'd as I take it, six French Rapiers and Poniards, with their affignes, as Girdle, Hangers or so: three of the Carriages, in faith are very dearе to fancy, very responsive to the hilts, most delicate carriages, and of very liberall conceit.

Ham. What call you the Carriages?

Osr. The Carriages Sir, are the hangers.

Ham. The phrase would bee more Germaine to the matter: If we could carry Cannon by our sides; I would it might be Hangers till then; but on six Barbary Horses against six French Swords: their Affignes, and three liberall conceited Carriages, that's the French bet against the Danish; why is this impon'd as you call it?

Osr. The King Sir, hath laid that in a dozen passes betweene you and him, hee shall not exceed you three hits; He hath one twelue for mine, and that would come to imediate tryall, if your Lordship would vouchsafe the Answere.

Ham. How if I answere no?

Osr. I meane my Lord, the opposition of your person in tryall.

Ham. Sir, I will walke heere in the Hall; if it please his Maiestie, 'tis the breathing time of day with me; let the Foyles bee brought, the Gentleman willing, and the King hold his purpose; I will win for him if I can: if not, Ile gaine nothing but my shame, and the odde hits.

Osr. Shall I redeliuer you e'en so?

Ham. To this effect Sir, after what flourish your nature will.

Osr. I commend my duty to your Lordship.

Ham. Yours, yours; hee does well to commend it himselfe, there are no tongues else for's tongue.

Hor. This Lapwing runs away with the shell on his head.

Ham. He did Complie with his Dugge before hee suck'd it: thus has he and mine more of the same Beauy that I know the drossie age dotes on, only got the tune of the time, and outward habit of encounter, a kinde of yesty collection, which carries them through & through the most fond and winnowed opinions; and due but blow them to their trialls: the Bobbles are out.

Hor. You will lose this wager, my Lord.

Ham. I doe not thinke so, since he went into France, I haue beene in continuall practice; I shall winne at the odder: but thou wouldest not thinke how all heere about my heart: but it is no matter.

Hor. Nay, good my Lord.

Ham. It is but foolery; but it is such a kinde of gain-giving as would perhaps trouble a woman.

Hor. If your minde dislike any thing, obey. I will forestall their repaire hither, and say you are not fit.

Ham. Not a whit, we defie Augury; there's a speciall Providence in the fall of a sparrow. If it be now, 'tis not to come: if it bee not to come, it will bee now: if it be not now, yet it will come; the readinesse is all, since a man ha's ought of what he leaues. What is't to leaue betimes?

Enter King, Queene, Laertes and Lords, with other Attendants with Foyles, and Gantlets, a Table and Flagons of Wine on it.

Kin. Come Hamlet, come, and take this hand from me.

Ham. Giue me your pardon Sir. I've done you wrong,
But pardon't as you are a Gentleman.
This presence knowes,
And you must needs haue heard how I am punisht
With sore distraction? What I haue done
That might your nature honour, and exception
Roughly awake, I heere proclaime was madnesse:
Was t Hamlet wrong'd Laertes? Never Hamlet.
If Hamlet from himselfe be tane away:
And when he's not himselfe, do's wrong Laertes,
Then Hamlet does it not, Hamlet denies it:
Who does it then? His madnesse? If t be so,
Hamlet is of the Faction that is wrong'd,
His madnesse is poore Hamlets Enemy.
Sir, in this Audience,
Let my disclaiming from a purpos'd euill,
Free me so farre in your most generous thoughts,
That I haue shot mine Arrow o're the house,
And hurt my Mother.

Laer. I am satisfied in Nature,
Whose motiue in this case should stirre me most
To my Reuenge. But in my termes of Honor
I stand aloofe, and will no reconciliement,
Till by some elder Masters of knowne Honor,
I haue a voyce, and prefident of peace
To keepe my name vngorg'd. But till that time,
I do receiue your offer'd loue like loue,
And will not wrong it.

Ham. I do embrace it freely,
And will this Brothers wager frankely play.
Giue vs the Foyles: Come on.

Laer. Come one for me.

Ham. Ile be your foile Laertes, in mine ignorance,
Your Skill shall like a Starre i'th' darkest night,
Stickle fiery off indeede.

Laer. You mocke me Sir.

Ham. No by this hand.

King. Giue them the Foyles young Osricke,
Cousen Hamlet, you know the wager.

Ham. Verie well my Lord,
Your Grace hath laide the odds a'th' weaker side.

King. I do not feare it,
I haue seene you both:
But since he is better'd, we haue therefore odds.

Laer. This is too heauy,
Let me see another.

Ham. This likes me well,
These Foyles haue all a length. Prepare to play.

Osricke. I my good Lord.

King. Set me the Stopes of wine vpon that Table:
If Hamlet gue the first, or second hit,
Or quit in answer of the third exchange,
Let all the Battlements their Ordinance fire,
The King shal drinke to Hamlets better breath,
And in the Cup an vnion shal he throw
Richer then that, which foure successiue Kings
In Denmarkes Crowne haue worne.

Give me the Cups,
And let the Kettle to the Trumpets speake,
The Trumpet to the Cannoneer without,
The Cannons to the Heavens, the Heaven to Earth,
Now the King drinkes to Hamlet. Come, begin,
And you the Iudges beare a wary eye.
Ham. Come on sir.
Laer. Come on sir. They play.
Ham. One.
Laer. No.
Ham. Iudgement.
Osr. A hit, a very palpable hit.
Laer. Well: again.
King. Stay, give me drinke.
Hamlet, this Pearle is thine,
Here's to thy health. Give him the cup.
Trumpets sound, and shot goes off.
Ham. Ile play this bout first, set by a-while.
Come: Another hit; what say you?
Laer. A touch, a touch, I do confesse.
King. Our Sonne shall win.
Qu. He's fat, and scant of breath.
Heere's a Napkin, rub thy browes,
The Queene Carowses to thy fortune, Hamlet.
Ham. Good Madam.
King. Gertrude, do not drinke.
Qu. I will my Lord;
I pray you pardon me.
King. It is the poyson'd Cup, it is too late.
Ham. I dare not drinke yet Madam,
By and by.
Qu. Come, let me wipe thy face.
Laer. My Lord, Ile hit him now.
King. I do not thinke't.
Laer. And yet 'tis almost 'gainst my conscience.
Ham. Come for the third.
Laertes, you but dally,
I pray you passe with your best violence,
I am afraid you make a wanton of me.
Laer. Say you so? Come on. Play.
Osr. Nothing neither way.
Laer. Have at you now.
In scuffling they change Rapiers.
King. Part them, they are incens'd.
Ham. Nay come, again.
Osr. Looke to the Queene there hoa.
Hor. They bleed on both sides. How is't my Lord?
Osr. How is't Laertes?
Laer. Why as a Woodcocke
To mine Springe, Osricke,
I am luftily kill'd with mine owne Treachery.
Ham. How does the Queene?
King. She sounds to see them bleede.
Qu. No, no, the drinke, the drinke.
Oh my deere Hamlet, the drinke, the drinke,
I am poyson'd.
Ham. Oh Villany! How? Let the doore be lock'd.
Treacherie, seeke it out.
Laer. It is heere Hamlet.
Hamlet, thou art slaine,
No Medicine in the world can do thee good.
In thee, there is not halfe an houre of life;
The Treacherous Instrument is in thy hand,
Vnbated and envenom'd: the foule practise
Hath turn'd it selfe on me. Loe, heere I lye,
Never to rise againe: Thy Mother poyson'd:
I can no more, the King, the King's too blame.
Ham. The point envenom'd too,
Then venome to thy worke.
Hurts the King.
All. Treason, Treason.
King. O yet defend me Friends, I am but hurt.
Ham. Heere thou incestuous, murdrous,
Damned Dane,
Drinke off this Potion: Is thy Vnion heere?
Follow my Mother. King Dyes.
Laer. He is iustly serv'd.
It is a poyson temp'red by himselfe:
Exchange forgiuenesse with me, Noble Hamlet;
Mine and my Fathers death come not vpon thee,
Nor thine on me. Dyes.
Ham. Heaven make thee free of it, I follow thee.
I am dead Horatio, wretched Queene adieu.
You that looke pale, and tremble at this chance,
That are but Mutes or audience to this acte:
Had I but time (as this fell Sergeant death
Is strick'd in his Arrest) oh I could tell you.
But let it be: Horatio, I am dead,
Thou liu'st, report me and my causes right
To the vnsatisfied.
Hor. Never beleeue it.
I am more an Antike Roman then a Dane:
Heere's yet some Liquor left.
Ham. As th'art a man, give me the Cup.
Let go, by Heaven I le haue't.
Oh good Horatio, what a wounded name,
(Things standing thus vnknowne) shall liue behind me.
If thou did'st ever hold me in thy heart,
Absent thee from felicitie awhile,
And in this harsh world draw thy breath in paine,
To tell my Storie.
March afarre off, and shout within.
What warlike noyse is this?

Enter Osricke.

Osr. Young Fortinbras, with conquest come fro Poland
To th'Ambassadors of England giues this warlike volly.
Ham. O I dye Horatio:
The potent poyson quite o're-crowes my spirit,
I cannot liue to heare the Newes from England,
But I do prophesie th'election lights
On Fortinbras, he has my dying voyce,
So tell him with the occurrents more and lesse,
Which have solicited. The rest is silence. O, o, o, o. Dyes
Hora. Now cracke a Noble heart:
Goodnight sweet Prince,
And flights of Angels sing thee to thy rest,
Why do's the Drumme come hither?

Enter Fortinbras and English Ambassador, with Drumme, Colours, and Attendants.

Fortin. Where is this sight?
Hor. What is it ye would see;
If ought of woe, or wonder, cease your search.
For. His quarry cries on havocke. Oh proud death,
What feast is toward in thine eternall Cell,
That thou so many Princes, at a shoote,
So bloodily hast struck.
Amb. The sight is dismall,
And our affaires from England come too late,
The eares are senselesse that should give vs hearing,
To tell him his commandment is fulfill'd,

That Rosencrans and Guildenstarne are dead:
Where should we haue our thankes?
Ho. Not from his mouth,
Had it th'abilitie of life to thanke you:
He neuer gaue commaund'ment for their death.
But since so iumpe vpon this bloodie question,
You from the Polake warres, and you from England
Are heere arriued. Giue order that these bodies
High on a stage be placed to the view,
And let me speake to th'yet vnknowing world,
How these things came about. So shall you heare
Of carnall, bloudie, and vnnaturall acts,
Of accidentall iudgements, casuall slaughters
Of death's put on by cunning, and forc'd cause,
And in this vpshot, purposes mistooke,
Falne on the Inuentors heads. All this can I
Truly deliuer.
For. Let vs hast to heare it,
And call the Noblest to the Audience.
For me, with sorrow, I embrace my Fortune,
Those some Rites of memory in this Kingdome,
Which are to claime, my vantage doth
Inuite me.
Ho. Of that I shall haue alwayes cause to speake,
And from his mouth
Whose voyce will draw on more:
But let this same be presently perform'd,
Euen whiles mens mindes are wilde,
Lest more mischance
On plots, and errors happen.
For. Let foure Capteines
Beare Hamlet like a Souldier to the Stage,
For he was likely, had he beene put on
To haue prou'd most royally:
And for his passage,
The Souldiours Musicke, and the rites of Warre
Speake loudly for him.
Take vp the body; Such a sight as this
Becomes the Field, but heere shewes much amis.
Go, bid the Souldiers shoote.
Exeunt Marching after the which, a Peal of Ordinance are shot off.

FINIS.

THE TRAGEDIE OF KING LEAR.

Actus Primus. Scœna Prima.

Enter Kent, Gloucester, and Edmund.

Kent.

I Thought the King had more affected the Duke of Albany, then Cornwall.

Glou. It did always seeme so to vs: But now in the diuision of the Kingdome, it appeares not which of the Dukes he valewes most, for qualities are so weigh'd, that curiosity in neither, can make choise of eithers moity.

Kent. Is not this your Son, my Lord?

Glou. His breeding Sir, hath bin at my charge. I haue so often blush'd to acknowledge him, that now I am braz'd too't

Kent. I cannot conceiue you.

Glou. Sir, this yong Fellowes mother could; whereupon she grew round womb'd, and had indeede (Sir) a Sonne for her Cradle, ere she had a husband for her bed. Do you smell a fault?

Kent. I cannot wish the fault vndone, the issue of it, being so proper.

Glou. But I haue a Sonne, Sir, by order of Law, some yeere elder then this; who, yet is no deerer in my account, though this Knaue came somthing sawcily to the world before he was sent for: yet was his Mother fayre, there was good sport at his making, and the horson must be acknowledged. Doe you know this Noble Gentleman, Edmund?

Edm. No, my Lord.

Glou. My Lord of Kent:
Remember him hereafter, as my Honourable Friend.

Edm. My seruices to your Lordship.

Kent. I must loue you, and sue to know you better.

Edm. Sir, I shall study deseruing.

Glou. He hath bin out nine yeares, and away he shall againe. The King is comming.

Sonnet. Either King Lear, Cornwall, Albany, Gonerill, Regan, Cordelia, and attendants.

Lear. Attend the Lords of France & Burgundy, Gloster.

Glou. I shall, my Lord. Exit.

Lear. Meane time we shal expresse our darker purpose.
Giue me the Map there. Know, that we haue diuided
In three our Kingdome: and 'tis our fast intent,
To shake all Cares and Businesse from our Age,
Conferring them on yonger strengths, while we
Vnburthen'd crawle toward death. Our son of Cornwal,
And you our no lesse loving Sonne of Albany,
We haue this houre a constant will to publish
Our daughters seuerall Dowers, that future strife
May be preuented now. The Princes, France & Burgundy,
Great Riuals in our yongest daughters loue,
Long in our Court, haue made their amorous sojourne,
And heere are to be answer'd. Tell me my daughters
(Since now we will diuest vs both of Rule,
Interest of Territory, Cares of State)
Which of you shall we say doth loue vs most,
That we, our largest bounties may extend
Where Nature doth with merit challenge. Gonerill,
Our eldest borne, speake first.

Gon. Sir, I loue you more then word can weild ye matter,
Deerer then eye-sight, space, and liberty,
Beyond what can be valewed, rich or rare,
No lesse then life, with grace, health, beauty, honor:
As much as Childe ere lou'd, or Father found.
A loue that makes breath poore, and speech vnable,
Beyond all manner of so much I loue you.

Cor. What shall Cordelia speake? Loue, and be silent.

Lear. Of all these bounds euen from this Line, to this,
With shadowie Forrests, and with Champains rich'd
With plenteous Riuers, and wide-skirted Meades
We make thee Lady. To thine and Albanies issues
Be this perpetuall. What sayes our second Daughter?
Our deerest Regan, wife of Cornwall?

Reg. I am made of that selfe-mettle as my Sister,
And prize me at her worth. In my true heart,
I finde she names my very deede of loue:
Only she comes too short, that I professe
My selfe an enemy to all other ioyes,
Which the most precious square of sense professes,
And finde I am alone felicitate
In your deere Highnesse loue.

Cor. Then poore Cordelia,
And yet not so, since I am sure my loue's
More ponderous then my tongue.

Lear. To thee, and thine hereditarie ever,
Remaine this ample third of our faire Kingdome,
No lesse in space, validitie, and pleasure
Then that conferr'd on Gonerill. Now our Ioy,
Although our last and least: to whose yong loue,
The Vines of France, and Milke of Burgundie,
Striue to be interest. What can you say, to draw
A third, more opilent then your Sisters? speake.

Cor. Nothing my Lord.

Lear. Nothing?

Cor. Nothing.
Lear. Nothing will come of nothing, speake againe
Cor. Vnhappie that I am, I cannot heave
My heart into my mouth: I love your Maiesty
According to my bond, no more nor lesse.
Lear. How, how Cordelia? Mend your speech a little,
Lest you may marre your Fortunes.
Cor. Good my Lord,
You have begot me, bred me, lou'd me.
I returne those duties backe as are right fit,
Obey you, Loue you, and most Honour you.
Why haue my Sisters Husbands, if they say
They loue you all? Happily when I shall wed.
That Lord, whose hand must take my plight, shall carry
Halfe my loue with him, halfe my Care, and Duties,
Sure I shall never marry like my Sisters.
Lear But goes thy heart with this?
Cor. I my good Lord.
Lear. So young, and so vntender?
Cor. So young my Lord, and true.
Lear. Let it be so, thy truth then be thy dowre:
For by the sacred radience of the Sonne,
The misteries of Hecat and the night:
By all the operation of the Orbes,
From whom we do exist, and cease to be,
Heere I disclaime all my Paternall care,
Propinquity and property of blood,
And as a stranger to my heart and me.
Hold thee from this for euer. The barbarous Scythian,
Or he that makes his generation messes
To gorge his appetite, shall to my bosome
Be as well neighbour'd, pitied, and releeu'd,
As thou my sometime Daughter.
Kent Good my Liege.
Lear. Peace Kent,
Come not betweene the Dragon and his wrath,
I lou'd her most, and thought to set my rest
On her kind nursery. Hence and avoid my sight:
So be my grave my peace, as here I give
Her Fathers heart from her; call France, who stirres?
Call Burgundy, Cornwall, and Albany,
With my two Daughters Dowres, digest the third,
Let pride which she calls plainnesse, marry her.
I doe invest you iointly with my power,
Preheminence, and all the large effects
That troope with Maiesty. Our selfe by Monthly course,
With reservation of an hundred Knights,
By you to be sustain'd, shall our abode
Make with you by due turne, onely we shall retaine
The name, and all th'addition to a King: the Sway,
Reuenew, Execution of the rest,
Beloued Sonnes be yours, which to confirme,
This Coronet part betweene you.
Kent. Royall Lear,
Whom I have ever honor'd as my King,
Lou'd as my Father, as my Master follow'd,
As my great Patron thought on in my prayers.
Le. The bow is bent & drawne, make from the shaft.
Kent. Let it fall rather, though the forke invade
The region of my heart, be Kent vnmannerly,
When Lear is mad, what wouldst thou do old man?
Think'st thou that duties shall haue dread to speake,
When power to flattery bowes?
To plainnesse honour's bound,
When Maiesty falls to folly, reserue thy state,
And in thy best consideration checke
This hideous rashnesse, answere my life, my judgement
Thy youngest Daughter do's not loue thee least,
Nor are those empty hearted, whose low sounds
Reuerbe no hollownesse.
Lear. Kent, on thy life no more.
Kent. My life I never held but as pawne
To wage against thine enemies, nere feare to lose it,
Thy safety being motive.
Lear. Out of my sight.
Kent. See better Lear, and let me still remaine
The true blanke of thine eie.
Kent. Now by Apollo,
Lear. Now by Apollo, King
Thou swear'st thy Gods in vaine.
Lear. O Vassall! Miscreant.
Alb. Corn. Deare Sir forbeare.
Kent. Kill thy Physitian, and thy fee bestow
Vpon the foule disease, reuoke thy gifte,
Or whil'st I can vent clamour from my throate,
Ile tell thee thou dost euill.
Lea. Heare me recreant, on thine allegeance heare me
That thou hast sought to make vs breake our vows,
Which we durst never yet; and with strain'd pride,
To come betwixt our sentences, and our power,
Which, nor our nature, nor our place can beare;
Our potencie made good, take thy reward.
Fiue dayes we do allot thee for provision,
To shield thee from disasters of the world,
And on the fiat to turne thy hated backe
Vpon our kingdome; if on the tenth day following,
Thy banisht trunke be found in our Dominions,
The moment is thy death, away. By Iupiter,
This shall not be reuok'd.
Kent Fare thee well King, sith thus thou wilt appeare
Freedome lives hence, and banishment is here;
The Gods to their deere shelter take thee Maid,
That iustly think'st, and hast most rightly said:
And your large speeches, may your deeds approue,
That good effects may spring from words of loue:
Thus Kent, O Princes, bids you all adew,
Hee'l shape his old course, in a Country new. Exit.

Flourish. Enter Gloster with France, and Burgundy, Attendants.

Cor Heere's France and Burgundy, my Noble Lord
Lear. My Lord of Burgundie,
We first addresse toward you, who with this King
Hath riuald for our Daughter; what in the least
Will you require in present Dower with her,
Or cease your quest of Loue?
Bur. Most Royall Maiesty,
I craue no more then hath your Highnesse offer'd,
Nor will you tender lesse?
Lear. Right Noble Burgundy,
When she was deare to vs, we did hold her so,
But now her price is fallen: Sir, there she stands,
If ought within that little seeming substance,
Or all of it with our displeasure piec'd,
And nothing more may fitly like your Grace,
Shee's there, and she is yours.
Bur. I know no answer.
Lear. Will you with those infirmities she owes,
Vnfriended, new adopted to our hate,
Dow'rd with our curse, and stranger'd with our oath,
Take her or leaue her.

Bur. Pardon me Royall Sir,
Election makes not vp in such conditions.
Le. Then leaue her sir, for by the powre that made me,
I tell you all her wealth. For you great King,
I would not from your loue make such a stray,
To match you where I hate, therefore beseech you
T'auert your liking a more worthier way,
Then on a wretch whom Nature is asham'd
Almost t'acknowledge hers.
Fra. This is most strange,
That she whom even but now, was your obiect,
The argument of your praise, balme of your age,
The best, the dearest, should in this trice of time
Commit a thing so monstrous, to dismantle
So many folds of fauour: sure her offence
Must be of such vnnaturall degree,
That monsters it: Or your fore-vouch'd affection
Fall into taint, which to believe of her
Must be a faith that reason without miracle
Should never plant in me.
Cor. I yet beseech your Maiesty.
If for I want that glib and oylie Art,
To speake and purpose not, since what I will intend,
I'le do't before I speake, that you make knowne
It is no vicious blot, murther, or foulenesse,
No vncharitable action or dishonoured step
That hath deprin'd me of your Grace and fauour,
But euen for want of that, for which I am richer,
A still soliciting eye, and such a tongue,
That I am glad I haue not, though not to haue it,
Hath lost me in your liking.
Lear. Better thou had'st
Not beene borne, then not t'haue pleas'd me better.
Fra. Is it but this? A tardinesse in nature,
Which often leaues the history vnspoke
That it intends to do: my Lord of Burgundy,
What say you to the Lady? Loue's not loue
When it is mingled with regards, that stands
Aloofe from th'entire point, will you haue her?
She is herselfe a Dowrie.
Bur. Royall King,
Giue but that portion which your selfe propos'd,
And here I take Cordelia by the hand,
Dutchesse of Burgundie.
Lear. Nothing, I haue sworne, I am firme.
Bur. I am sorry then you haue so lost a Father,
That you must loose a husband.
Cor. Peace be with Burgundie,
Since that respect and Fortunes are his loue,
I shall not be his wife.
Fra. Fairest Cordelia, that art most rich being poore,
Most choise forsaken, and most lou'd despis'd,
Thee and thy vertues here I seize vpon,
Be it lawfull I take vp what's cast away.
Gods, Gods! 'Tis strange, that from their cold'st neglect
My Loue should kindle to enflam'd respect.
Thy dowrelesse Daughter King, throwne to my chance,
Is Queene of vs, of ours, and our faire France:
Not all the Dukes of wattrish Burgundy,
Can buy this vnprizd precious Maid of me.
Bid them farewell Cordelia, though vnkinde,
Thou loost here a better where to finde.
Lear. Thou hast her France, let her be thine, for we Haue no such Daughter, nor shall euer see
That face of hers againe, therefore be gone,
Without our Grace, our Loue, our Benizon:
Come Noble Burgundie. Flourish. Exeunt.
Fra. Bid farewell to your Sisters.
Cor. The Iewels of our Father, with wash'd eies Cordelia leaues you, I know you what you are,
And like a Sister am most loth to call
Your faults as they are named. Loue well our Father:
To your professed bosomes I commit him,
But yet alas, stood I within his Grace,
I would prefer him to a better place,
So farewell to you both.
Regn. Prescribe not vs our duties.
Gon. Let you study
Be to content your Lord, who hath receiu'd you
At Fortunes alms, you haue obedience scanted,
And well are worth the want that you haue wanted.
Cor. Time shall vnfold what plighted cunning hides,
Who couers faults, at last with shame deriides:
Well may you prosper.
Fra. Come my faire Cordelia. Exit France and Cor.
Gon. Sister, it is not little I haue to say,
Of what most neerely appertaines to vs both,
I think our Father will hence to night. (with vs.
Reg. That's most certaine, and with you: next moneth
Gon. You see how full of changes his age is, the obseruation we haue made of it hath beene little; he alwaies lou'd our Sister most, and with what poore iudgement he hath now cast her off, appeares too grossely.
Reg. 'Tis the infirmity of his age, yet he hath ever but slenderly knowne himselfe.
Gon. The best and soundest of his time hath bin but rash, then must we looke from his age, to receiue not alone the imperfections of long ingrafted condition, but therewithall the vnruly way-wardnesse, that infirme and choleriqke yeares bring with them.
Reg. Such vnconstant starts are we like to haue from him, as this of Kents banishment.
Gon. There is further complement of leaue-taking betweene France and him, pray you let vs sit together, if our Father carry authority with such disposition as he bears, this last surrender of his will but offend vs.
Reg. We shall further think of it.
Gon. We must do something, and i'th' heate. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Bastard.

Bast. Thou Nature art my Goddesse, to thy Law
My services are bound, wherefore should I
Stand in the plague of custome, and permit
The curiosity of Nations, to deprine me?
For that I am some twelue, or fourteene Moonshines
Lag of a Brother? Why Bastard? Wherefore base?
When my Dimensions are as well compact,
My minde as generous, and my shape as true
As honest Madame issue? Why brand they vs
With Base? With base nes Bastardie? Base, Base?
Who in the lustie stealth of Nature, take
More composition, and fierce qualitie,
Then doth within a dull stale tyred bed
Goe to th'creating a whole tribe of Fops
Got'tweene a sleepe, and wake? Well then,
Legitimate Edgar, I must haue your land,
Our Fathers loue, is to the Bastard Edmund,
As to th'legitimate: fine word: Legitimate.

Well, my Legitimate, if this Letter speed,
And my invention thriue, Edmond the base
Shall to'th'Legitimate: I grow, I prosper:
Now Gods, stand vp for Bastards.

Enter Gloucester.

Glo. Kent banish'd thus? and France in choller parted?
And the King gone to night? Prefixed his power,
Confin'd to exhibition? All this done
Vpon the gad? Edmond, how now? What newes?

Bast. So please your Lordship, none.

Glou. Why so earnestly seeke you to put vp that Letter?

Bast. I know no newes, my Lord.

Glou. What Paper were you reading?

Bast. Nothing my Lord.

Glou. No? what needed then that terrible dispatch of it into your Pocket? The quality of nothing, hath not such neede to hide it selfe. Let's see: come, if it be nothing, I shall not neede Spectacles.

Bast. I beseech you Sir, pardon me; it is a Letter from my Brother, that I haue not all o're-read; and for so much as I haue perus'd, I finde it not fit for your o're-looking.

Glou. Give me the Letter, Sir.

Bast. I shall offend, either to detaine, or giue it:
The Contents, as in part I vnderstand them,
Are too blame.

Glou. Let's see, let's see.

Bast. I hope for my Brothers iustification, he wrote this but as an essay, or taste of my Vertue.

Glou. reads. This policie, and reuerence of Age, makes the world bitter to the best of our times: keeps our Fortunes from vs, till our oldnesse cannot relish them. I begin to finde an idle and fond bondage, in the oppression of aged tyranny, who sways not as it hath power, but as it is suffer'd. Come to me, that of this I may speake more. If our Father would sleepe till I wak'd him, you should enioy half his Reuenew for ever, and live the beloued of your Brother. Edgar.

Hum? Conspiracy? Sleepe till I wake him, you should enioy half his Reuenew: my Sonne Edgar, had thee a hand to write this? A heart and braine to breede it in? When came you to this? Who brought it?

Bast. It was not brought me, my Lord; there's the cunning of it. I found it thrown in at the Casement of my Closet.

Glou. You know the character to be your Brothers?

Bast. If the matter were good my Lord, I durst swear it were his: but in respect of that, I would faine thinke it were not.

Glou. It is his.

Bast. It is his hand, my Lord: but I hope his heart is not in the Contents.

Glo. Has he never before sounded you in this business?

Bast. Never my Lord. But I haue heard him oft maintaine it to be fit, that Sonnes at perfect age, and Fathers declin'd, the Father should bee as Ward to the Son, and the Sonne manage his Reuenew.

Glou. O Villain, villain: his very opinion in the Letter. Abhorred Villaine, vnnaturall, detested, brutish Villaine; worse then brutish: Go sirrah, seeke him: He apprehend him. Abhominable Villaine, where is he?

Bast. I do not well know my L. If it shall please you to suspend your indignation against my Brother, til you can derive from him better testimony of his intent, you should run a certaine course; where, if you violently proceed against him, mistaking his purpose, it would make a great gap in your own Honor, and shake in peeces, the heart of his obedience. I dare pawne downe my life for him, that he hath writ this to feele my affection to your Honor, to no other pretence of danger.

Glou. Thinke you so?

Bast. If your Honor iudge it meete, I will place vs where you shall heare vs confesse of this, and by an incisiue aduenture heare your satisfaction, and that without any further delay, than this very Morning.

Glou. He cannot bee such a Monster. Edmond, seeke him out: winde me into him, I pray you: frame the business after your own wisdomes. I wouldst vnfeeling selfe, to be in a due resolution.

Bast. I will seeke him Sir, presently: conceiue the business as I shall find meanes, and acquaint you withal.

Glou. These late Eclipses in the Sun and Moone portend no good to vs: though the wisedome of Nature can reason it thus, and thus, yet Nature finds itselfe scourg'd by the sequent effects. Loue cooles, friendship falls off, Brothers diuide. In Cities, mutinies; in Countries, discord; in Palaces, Treason; and the Bond crack'd, 'twixt Sonne and Father. This villaine of mine comes vnder the prediction; there's Son against Father, the King falls from bias of Nature, there's Father against Childe. We haue seene the best of our time. Machinations, hollownesse, treachery, and all ensuing disorders follow vs disquiet vs to our Graues. Find out this Villain, Edmond, it shall lie thee nothing, do it carefully: and the Noble & vnstained Kent banish'd; his offence, honesty. 'Tis strange. Exit.

Bast. This is the excellent foppery of the world, that when we are sicke in fortune, often the surfeits of our own behaviour, we make guilty of our disasters, the Sun, the Moone, and Starres, as if we were villaines on necessitie, Fooles by heauenly compulsion, Knaues, Theeves, and Treachers by Spherical predominance. Drunkards, Liars, and Adulterers by an enforc'd obedience of Planetary influence; and all that we are euill in, by a diuine thrusting on. An admirable euasion of Whore-master man, to lay his Goatish disposition on the charge of a Starre. My father compounded with my mother vnder the Dragons taile, and my Nativity was vnder Vrsa Maior, so that is followes, I am rough and Lecherous. I should have bin that I am, had the maidenlieest Starre in the firmament twinkled on my bastardizing.

Enter Edgar.

Pat: he comes like the Catastrophe of the old Comedie: my Cue is villanous Melancholly, with a sighe like Tom o'Bedlam. —— O these Eclipses do portend these diuisions. Fa, Sol, La, Me.

Edg. How now Brother Edmond, what serious contemplation are you in?

Bast. I am thinking Brother of a prediction I read this other day, what should follow these Eclipses.

Edg. Do you busie your selfe with that?

Bast. I promise you, the effects he writes of succeed vnhappily.
When saw you my Father last?

Edg. The night gone by.

Bast. Spake you with him?

Edg. I, two houres together.

Bast. Parted you in good termes? Found you no displeasure in him, by word, nor countenance?

Edg. None at all.

Bast. Bethink your selfe wherein you may haue offended him: and at my entreaty forbeare his presence, vntill some little time hath qualified the heat of his displeasure, which at this instant so rageth in him, that with the conclude chiefe of your person, it would scarcely stay.

Edg. Some Villaine hath done me wrong.

Edm. That's my feare, I pray you have a continuance forbearance till the speed of his rage goes slower: and as I say, retire with me to my lodging, from whence I will fitly bring you to heare my Lord speake: pray ye goe, there's my key: if you do stirre abroad, goe arm'd.

Edg. Arm'd, Brother!

Edm. Brother, I advise you to the best, I am no honest man, if ther be any good meaning toward you: I have told you what I have seene, and heard: But faintly. Nothing like the image, and horror of it, pray you away.

Edg. Shall I heare from you anon? Exit.

Edm. I do serve you in this business:
A Credulous Father, and a Brother Noble,
Whose nature is so farre from doing harmes,
That he suspects none: on whose foolish honestie
My practises ride easie: I see the businesse.
Let me, if not by birth, have lands by wit,
All with me's meete, that I can fashion fit. Exit.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Gonerill, and Steward.

Gon. Did my Father strike my Gentleman for chiding of his Foole?

Ste. I Madam.

Gon. By day and night, he wrongs me, every houre
He flashes into one grosse crime, or other,
That sets vs all at odds: I'le not endure it;
His Knights grow riotous, and himselfe upbraides vs
On every trifle. When he returnes from hunting,
I will not speake with him, say I am sicke,
If you come slacke of former services,
You shall do well, the fault of it I'le answer.

Ste. He's comming Madam, I heare him.

Gon. Put on what weary negligence you please,
You and your Fellowes: I'de have it come to question;
If he distaste it, let him to my Sister,
Whose mind and mine I know in that are one,
Remember what I have said.

Ste. Well Madam.

Gon. And let his Knights have colder looks among you: what growes of it no matter, advise your fellowes so, I'le write straight to my Sister to hold my course prepare for dinner. Exeunt

Scena Quarta.

Enter Kent.

Kent. If but as well I other accents borrow,
That can my speech defuse, my good intent
May carry through it selfe to that full issue
For which I raz'd my likenesse. Now banisht Kent,
If thou canst serve where thou dost stand condemn'd,
So may it come, thy Master whom thou lov'st,
Shall find thee full of labours.

Horns within. Enter Lear and Attendants.

Lear. Let me not stay a lot for dinner, go get it ready: how now, what art thou?

Kent. A man Sir.

Lear. What dost thou professe? What wouldst thou with vs?

Kent. I do professe to be no lesse then I seeme; to serve him truely that will put me in trust, to love him that is honest, to converse with him that is wise and saies little, to feare iudgement, to fight when I cannot choose, and to eate no fish.

Lear. What art thou?

Kent. A very honest hearted Fellow, and as poore as the King.

Lear. If thou be'st as poore for a subject, as he's for a King, thou art poore enough. What wouldst thou?

Kent. Service.

Lear. Who wouldst thou serve?

Kent. You.

Lear. Do'st thou know me fellow?

Kent. No Sir, but you have that in your countenance, which I would faine call Master.

Lear. What's that?

Kent. Authority.

Lear. What services canst thou do?

Kent. I can keepe honest counsaile, ride, run, mortar a curious tale in telling it, and deliver a plaine message bluntly: that which ordinary men are fit for, I am qualified in, and the best of me, is Diligence.

Lear. How old art thou?

Kent. Not so young Sir to love a woman for singing, nor so old to dote on her for any thing. I have years on my backe forty eight.

Lear. Follow me, thou shalt serve me, if I like thee no worse after dinner, I will not part from thee yet. Dinner ho, dinner, where's my knaue? my Foole? Go you and call my Foole hither. You you Sirrah, where's my Daughter?

Enter Steward.

Ste. So please you ——— Exit.

Lear. What saies the Fellow there? Call the Clotpole backe: where's my Foole? Ho, I think the world's asleepe, how now? Where's that Mongrell?

Knigh. He saies my Lord, your Daughters is not well.

Lear. Why came not the slaue backe to me when I call'd him?

Knigh. Sir, he answered me in the roundest manner, he would not.

Lear. He would not?

Knight. My Lord, I know not what the matter is, but to my iudgement your Highnesse is not entertain'd with that Ceremonious affection as you were wont, there's a great abatement of kindnesse appeares as well in the generall dependants, as in the Duke himselfe also, and your Daughter.

Lear. Ha? Saist thou so?

Knigh. I beseech you pardon me my Lord, if I bee mistaken, for my duty cannot be silent, when I thinke your Highnesse wrong'd.

Lear. Thou hast remembred me of mine owne Conception, I have perceiued a most faint neglect of late, which I have rather blamed as mine owne jealous curiositie, then as a very pretence and purpose of unkindnesse; I will looke further into't: but where's my Foole? I have not seene him this two dayes.

Knight. Since my young Ladies going into France Sir,

Sir, the Foole hath much pined away.

Lear. No more of that, I have noted it well, goe you and tell my Daughter, I would speake with her. Goe you call hither my Foole; Oh you Sir, you, come you hither Sir, who am I Sir?

Enter Steward.

Ste. My Ladies Father.

Lear. My Ladies Father? my Lords knaue, you whoreson dog, you slaue, you cure.

Ste. I am none of these my Lord,
I beseech your pardon.

Lear. Do you bandy lookes with me, you Rascall?

Ste. Ile not be strucken my Lord.

Kent. Nor tript neither, you base Foot-ball player.

Lear. I thanke thee fellow.
Thou seru'st me, and Ile loue thee.

Kent. Come sir, arise, away, Ile teach you differences: away, away, if you will measure your lubbers length again, tarry, but away, goe too, have you wisedome, so.

Lear. Now my friendly knaue I thanke thee, there's earnest of thy seruice.

Enter Foole.

Foole. Let me hire him too, here's my Coxcombe.

Lear. How now my pretty knaue, how dost thou?

Foole. Sirrah, you were best take my Coxcombe.

Lear. Why my Boy?

Foole. Why for taking ones part that's out of fauour, nay, & thou canst not smile as the wind sits, thou'lt catch colde shortly, there take my Coxcombe: why this fellow he's banish'd two on's Daughters, and did the third a blessing against his will, if thou follow him, thou must needs weare my Coxcombe. How now Nuncle? would I had two Coxcombes and two Daughters.

Lear. Why my Boy?

Fool. If I gaue them all my liuing, I'd keepe my Coxcombes my selfe, there's mine, beg another of thy Daughters.

Lear. Take heed Sirrah, the whip.

Foole. Truth's a dog must to kennell, he must bee whipt out, when the Lady Brach may stand by'th'fire and stinke.

Lear. A pestilent gall to me.

Foole. Sirha, Ile teach thee a speech.

Lear. Do.

Foole. Marke it Nuncle;
Haue more than thou showest,
Speake lesse than thou knowest,
Lend lesse than thou owest,
Ride more than thou goest,
Learne more than thou trowest,
Set lesse than thou throwest;
Leaue thy drinke and thy whore,
And keepe in a dore,
And thou shalt haue more,
Then two tens to a score.

Kent. This is nothing Foole.

Foole. Then 'tis like the breath of an vnfeed Lawyer, you gaue me nothing for't, can you make no vse of nothing Nuncle?

Lear. Why no Boy,
Nothing can be made out of nothing.

Foole. Prythee tell him, so much the rent of his land comes to, he will not believe a Foole.

Lear. A bitter Foole.

Foole. Do'st thou know the difference my Boy, betweene a bitter Foole, and a sweet one.

Lear. No Lad, teach me.

Foole. Nuncle, giue me an egge, and Ile giue thee two Crowns.

Lear. What two Crowns shall they be?

Foole. Why after I have cut the egge i'th'middle, and eate vp the meate, the two Crowns of the egge: when thou clouest thy Crowns i'th'middle, and gau'st away both parts, thou bor'st thine Asse on thy backe o'er the dirt, thou had'st little wit in thy bald crowne, when thou gau'st thy golden one away; if I speake like my selfe in this, let him be whipt that first findes it so.
Fooles had ne're less grace in a yeare,
For wisemen are growne foppish,
And know not how their wits to weare,
Their manners are so apish.

Le. When were you wont to be so full of Songs sirrah?

Foole. I haue vsed it Nuncle, ere since thou mad'st thy Daughters thy Mothers, for when thou gau'st them the rod, and put'st downe thine owne breeches, then sing
For sodaine joy did weepe,
And I for sorrow sung,
That such a King should play bo-peepe,
And goe the Foole among.
Pry'thy Nuncle keepe a Schoolemaster that can teach thy Foole to lie, I would faine learne to lie.

Lear. And you lie sirrah, we'l haue you whipt.

Foole. I marueil what kin thou and thy daughters are, they'l haue me whipt for speaking true: thou'lt haue me whipt for lying, and sometimes I am whipt for holding my peace. I had rather be any kind o'thing than a Foole, and yet I would not be thee Nuncle, thou hast pared thy wit o'both sides, and left nothing i'th'middle, heere comes one o'the parings.

Enter Gonerill.

Lear. How now Daughter? what makes that Frontlet on? You are too much of late i'th'frowne.

Foole. Thou wast a pretty fellow when thou hadst no need to care for her frowning, now thou art an Vnshapt a figure, I am better than thou art now, I am a Foole, thou art nothing. Yes forsooth I will hold my tongue, so your face bids me, though you say nothing.
Mum, mum, he that keepes nor crust, nor crum,
Weary of all, shall want some. That's a shaul'd Peascod.

Gon. Not only Sir this, your all-licenst'd Foole,
But other of your insolent retinue
Do hourly Carpe and Quarrell, breaking forth
In rankе, and (not to be endur'd) riots Sir.
I had thought by making this well knowne vnto you,
To haue found a safe redresse, but now grown fantastick
By what your selfe too late haue spoke and done,
That you protect this course, and put it on
By your allowance, which if you should, the fault
Would not scape censure nor the redresses sleepe,
Which in the tender of a wholesome weale,
Might in their working do you that offence,
Which else were shame, that then necessitie
Will call discreet proceeding.

Foole. For you know Nuncle, the Hedge-Sparrow fed the Cuckoo so long, that it's had it head bit off by it young, so out went the Candle, and we were left darkling.

Lear. Are you our Daughter? (down

Gon. I would you would make vse of your good wit, (Wherreof I know you are fraught), and put away These dispositions, which of late transport you From what you rightly are.

Foole. May not an Asse know, when the Cart drawes
the Horse?
Whoop Iugge I loue thee.
Lear. Do's any heere know me?
This is not Lear:
Do's Lear walke thus? Speake thus? Where are his eies?
Either his Notion weakens, his Discernings
Are Lethargied. Ha! Waking? 'Tis not so?
Who is it that can tell me who I am?
Foole. Lears shadow.
Lear. Your name, faire Gentlewoman?
Gon. This admiration Sir, is much o'th'fauour
Of other your new prankes. I do beseech you
To vnderstand my purposes aright:
As you are Old, and Reuerend, should be Wise.
Heere do you keepe a hundred Knights and Squires,
Men so disorder'd, so deboshd, and bold,
That this our Court infected with their manners,
Shewes like a riotous Inne; Epicurisme and Lust
Makes it more like a Tauerne, or a Brothell,
Then a grac'd Pallace. The shame it selfe doth speake
For instant remedy. Be then desir'd
By her, that else will take the thing she begges,
A little to disquantity your Traine,
And the remainders that shall still depend,
To be such men as may beseem your Age,
Which know themselues, and you.
Lear. Darknesse, and Diuels,
Saddle my horses: call my Traine together.
Degenerate Bastard, Ile not trouble thee;
Yet haue I left a daughter.
Gon. You strike my people, and your disorder'd rable, make Seruants of their Betters.

Enter Albany.

Lear. Woe, that too late repents:
Is it your will, speake Sir? Prepare my Horses.
Ingratitude! thou Marble-hearted Fiend,
More hideous when thou shew'st thee in a Child,
Then the Sea-monster.
Alb. Pray Sir be patient.
Lear. Detested Kite, thou lyest.
My Traine are men of choice, and rarest parts,
That all particulars of duties know,
And in the most exact regard, support
The worships of their name. O most small fault,
How vgly did'st thou in Cordelia shew?
Which like an Engine, wrenche my frame of Nature
From the fixt place: drew from my heart all loue,
And added to the gall. O Lear, Lear, Lear!
Beate at this gate that let thy Folly in,
And thy deere Iudgement out. Go, go, my people.
Alb My Lord, I am guiltlesse, as I am ignorant
Of what hath moued you.
Lear. It may be so, my Lord.
Heare Nature, heare deere Goddesse, heare:
Suspend thy purpose, if thou did'st intend
To make this Creature fruitfull:
Into her Wombe conuey sterility,
Dry vp in her the Organs of increase,
And from her derogate body, never spring
A Babe to honor her. If she must teeme,
Create her childe of Spleene, that it may liue
And be a thwart disnatur'd torment to her.
Let it stampe wrinkles in her brow of youth,
With cadent Teares fret Channels in her cheekes,
Turne all her Mothers paines, and benefits
To laughter, and contempt: That she may feele,
How sharper then a Serpents tooth it is,
To haue a thankless Childe. Away, away. Exit.
Alb. Now Gods that we adore,
Whereof comes this?
Gon. Never afflict your selfe to know more of it;
But let his disposition haue that scope
As dotage gives it.

Enter Lear.

Lear. What fifty of my Followers at a clap?
Within a fortnight?
Alb. What's the matter, Sir?
Lear. Ile tell thee:
Life and death, I am asham'd
That thou hast power to shake my manhood thus,
That these hot teares, which breake from me perforce
Should make thee worth them.
Blastes and Fogges vpon thee:
Th'vntented woundings of a Fathers curse
Pierce every sense about thee. Old fond eyes,
Beweepe this cause againe, Ile pluckeye out,
And cast you with the waters that you loose
To temper Clay. Ha! Let it be so.
I haue another daughter,
Who I am sure is kinde and comfortable:
When she shall heare this of thee, with her nailes
Shee'lflea thy Wolfish visage. Thou shalt finde,
That Ile resume the shape which thou dost thinke
I haue cast off for ever. Exit.
Gon. Do you marke that?
Alb. I cannot be so partiall Goneril,
To the great loue I beare you.
Gon. Pray you content. What Oswald, hoa?
You Sir, more Knaue then Foole, after your Master.
Foole. Nunkle Lear, Nunkle Lear,
Tarry, take the Foole with thee:
A Fox, when one has caught her,
And such a Daughter,
Should sore to the Slaughter,
If my Cap would buy a Halter,
So the Foole followes after. Exit
Gon. This man hath had good Counsell,
A hundred Knights?
'Tis politike, and safe to let him keepe
At point a hundred Knights: yes, that on every dreame,
Each buz, each fancie, each complaint, dislike,
He may enguard his dotage with their powres,
And hold our lives in mercy. Oswald, I say.
Alb. Well, you may feare too farre.
Gon. Safer then trust too farre;
Let me still take away the harmes I feare,
Not feare still to be taken. I know his heart,
What he hath vtter'd I haue writ my Sister:
If she sustaine him, and his hundred Knights
When I haue shew'd th'vnfitnesse.

Enter Steward.

How now Oswald?
What haue you writ that Letter to my Sister?
Stew. I Madam.
Gon. Take you some company, and away to horse,
Inform her full of my particular feare,
And thereto adde such reasons of your owne,
As may compact it more. Get you gone,

And

And hasten your returne; no, no, my Lord,
This milky gentlenesse, and course of yours
Though I condemne not, yet vnder pardon
Your are much more at task for want of wisedome,
Then prais'ed for harmefull mildnesse.
Alb. How farre your eies may pierce I cannot tell;
Striving to better, oft we marre what's well.
Gon. Nay then ———
Alb. Well, well, th'vsue. Exeunt

Scena Quinta.

Enter Lear, Kent, Gentlemen, and Foole.

Lear. Go you before to Gloster with these Letters; acquaint my Daughter no further with any thing you know, then comes from her demand out of the Letter, if your Dilligence be not speedy, I shall be there afore you.
Kent. I will not sleepe my Lord, till I haue deliuered your Letter. Exit.
Foole. If a mans braines were in's heeles, wert not in danger of kybes?
Lear. I Boy.
Foole. Then I prythee be merry, thy wit shall not go slip-shod.
Lear. Ha, ha, ha.
Fool. Shale see thy other Daughter will vse thee kindly, for though shat's as like this, as a Crabbe's like an Apple, yet I can tell what I can tell.
Lear. What can'st tell Boy?
Foole. She will taste as like this as, a Crabbe do's to a Crab: thou canst tell why ones nose stands i'th'middle on's face?
Lear. No.
Foole. Why to keepe ones eyes of either side 's nose, that what a man cannot smell out, he may spy into.
Lear. I did her wrong.
Foole. Can'st tell how an Oyster makes his shell?
Lear. No.
Foole. Nor I neither; but I can tell why a Snaile has's a house.
Lear. Why?
Foole. Why to put's head in, not to give it away to his daughters, and leaue his hornes without a case.
Lear. I will forget my Nature, so kind a Father? Be my Horses ready?
Foole. Thy Asses are gone about 'em; the reason why the seuen Starres are no mo then seuen, is a pretty reason.
Lear. Because they are not eight.
Foole. Yes indeed, thou would'st make a good Foole.
Lear. To tak't againe perforce; Monster Ingratitude!
Foole. If thou wert my Foole Nunckle, I'd haue thee beaten for being old before thy time.
Lear. How's that?
Foole. Thou shouldst not haue bin old, till thou hadst bin wise.
Lear. O let me not be mad, not mad sweet Heauen: keepe me in temper, I would not be mad. How now are the Horses ready?
Gent. Ready my Lord.
Lear. Come Boy.
Fool. She that's a Maid now, ay laughs at my departure
Shall not be a Maid long, vnleesse things be cut shorter.
Exeunt.

Actus Secundus. Scena Prima.

Enter Bastard, and Curan, seuerally.

Bast. Saue thee Curan.
Cur. And your Sir, I haue bin
With your Father, and giuen him notice
That the Duke of Cornwall, and Regan his Dutchesse
Will be here with him this night.
Bast. How comes that?
Cur. Nay I know not, you haue heard of the newes abroad, I mean the whispe'rd ones, for they are yet but ear-kissing arguments.
Bast. Not I: pray you what are they?
Cur. Haue you heard of no likely Warres toward, Twixt the Dukes of Cornwall, and Albany?
Bast. Not a word.
Cur. You may do then in time.
Fare you well Sir. Exit.
Bast. The Duke be here to night? The better best,
This weaues it selfe perforce into my business,
My Father hath set guard to take my Brother,
And I haue one thing of a queasie question
Which I must act, Briefenesse, and Fortune worke.
Enter Edgar.
Brother, a word, diffend; Brother I say,
My Father watches: O Sir, fly this place,
Intelligence is giuen where you are hid;
You haue now the good aduantage of the night,
Haue you not spoken 'gainst the Duke of Cornwall?
Hee's comming hither, now i'th' night, i'th' haste,
And Regan with him, haue you nothing said
Vpon his partie 'gainst the Duke of Albany?
Aduise your selfe.
Edg. I am sure on't, not a word.
Bast. I hear my Father comming, pardon me
In cunning, I must draw my Sword vpon you:
Draw, seeme to defend your selfe,
Now gue you well.
Yeeld, come before my Father, light hoa, here,
Fly Brother, Torches, Torches, so farewell.
Exit Edgar.
Some blood drawne on me, would beget opinion
Of my more fierce endeuour. I haue seene drunkards
Do more then this in sport; Father, Father,
Stop, stop, no helpe?

Enter Glostor, and Seruants with Torches.

Glo. Now Edmund, where's the villaine?
Bast. Here stood he in the dark, his sharpe Sword out,
Mumbling of wicked charmes, conniuing the Moone
To stand auspicious Mistris.
Glo. But where is he?
Bast. Looke Sir, I bleed.
Glo. Where is the villaine, Edmund?
Bast. Fled this way Sir, when by no meanes he could.
Glo. Pursue him, ho: go after. By no meanes, what?
Bast. Persuade me to the murther of your Lordship.

But

But that I told him the reuenging Gods,
'Gainst Parricides did all the thunder bend,
Spoke with how manifold, and strong a Bond
The Child was bound to'th' Father; Sir in fine,
Seeing how lothly opposite I stood
To his vnnaturall purpose, in fell motion
With his prepared Sword, he charges home
My vnprouided body, lasch'd mine arme;
And when he saw my best alarum'd spirits
Bold in the quarrels right, roux'd to th'encounter,
Or whether gasted by the noyse I made,
Full sodainely he fled.

Glost. Let him fly farre:
Not in this Land shall he remaine vncaught
And found; dispatch, the Noble Duke my Master,
My worthy Arch and Patron comes to night,
By his authoritie I will proclaime it,
That he which finds him shall deserue our thankes,
Bringing the murderous Coward to the stake:
He that conceales him death.

Bast. When I dissuaded him from his intent,
And found him pight to doe it, with curst speech
I threaten'd to discouer him; he replied,
Thou vnpossessing Bastard, dost thou thinke,
If I would stand against thee, would the reposall
Of any trust, vertue, or worth in thee
Make thy words faith'd? No, what should I denie,
(As this I would, though thou didst produce
My very Character) I'ld turne it all
To thy suggestion, plot, and damned practise:
And thou must make a dullard of the world,
If they not thought the profits of my death
Were very pregnant and potentiall spirits
To make thee seeke it. Tucket within.

Glo. O strange and fastned Villaine,
Would he deny his Letter, said he?
Harke, the Dukes Trumpets, I know not wher he comes;
All Ports I le barre, the villaine shall not scape,
The Duke must grant me that: besides, his picture
I will send farre and neere, that all the kingdome
May haue doe note of him, and of my land,
(Loyall and naturall Boy) Ile worke the meanes
To make thee capable.

Enter Cornwall, Regan, and Attendants.

Corn. How now my Noble friend, since I came hither
(Which I can call but now,) I haue heard strangeneſſe.

Reg. If it be true, all vengeance comes too short
Which can pursue th'offender; how dost my Lord?

Glo. O Madam, my old heart is crack'd, it's crack'd.

Reg. What, did my Fathers Godsonne seeke your life?
He whom my Father nam'd, your Edgar?

Glo. O Lady, Lady, shame would haue it hid.

Reg. Was he not companion with the riotous Knights
That tended vpon my Father?

Glo. I know not Madam, 'tis too bad, too bad.

Bast. Yes Madam, he was of that consort.

Reg. No marrailе then, though he were ill affected,
'Tis they haue put him on the old mans death,
To haue th'expence and waſt of his Reuenues:
I haue this present euening from my Sister
Beene well inform'd of them, and with such cautions,
That if they come to sojourne at my house,
Ile not be there.

Corn. Nor I, assure thee Regan;
Edmund, I heare that you haue shewne your Father
A Child-like Office.

Bast. It was my duty Sir.

Glo. He did bewray his practise, and receiu'd
This hurt you see, striuing to apprehend him.

Corn. Is he pursued?

Glo. I my good Lord.

Corn. If he be taken, he shall never more
Be fear'd of doing harme, make your owne purpose,
How in my strength you please: for you Edmund,
Whose vertue and obedience doth this instant
So much commend it selfe, you shall be ours,
Nature's of such deepe trust, we shall much need:
You we first seize on.

Bast. I shall serue you Sir truely, how euer else.

Glo. For him I thanke your Grace.

Corn. You know not why we came to visit you?

Reg. Thus out of season, thredding darke ey'd night,
Occasions Noble Glost er of some prize,
Wherein we must haue vse of your aduise.
Our Father he hath writ, so hath our Sister,
Of differences, which I best though it fit
To answere from our home: the seuerall Messengers
From hence attend dispatch, our good old Friend,
Lay comforts to your bosome, and bestow
Your needfull counsaile to our businesses,
Which craues the instant vse.

Glo. I serue you Madam,
Your Graces are right welcome. Exeunt. Flourish.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Kent, and Steward seuerally.

Stew. Good dawning to thee Friend, art of this house?

Kent. I.

Stew. Where may we set our horses?

Kent. I'th'myre.

Stew. Prythee, if thou lou'st me, tell me.

Kent. I loue thee not.

Ste. Why then I care not for thee.

Kent. If I had thee in Lapthory Pinfold, I would make thee care for me.

Ste. Why do'st thou vse me thus? I know thee not.

Kent. Fellow I know thee.

Ste. What do'st thou know me for?

Kent. A Knaue, a Rascall, an eater of broken meates, a base, proud, shallow, beggerly, three-suited-hundred pound, filthy woosted-stocking knaue, a Lilly-liuered, action-taking, whoreson glasse-gazing super-serviceable finicall Rogue, one Trunke-inheriting slaue, one that would'st be a Bawd in way of good seruice, and art nothing but the composition of a Knaue, Begger, Coward, Pandar, and the Sonne and Heire of a Mongrill Bitch, one whom I will beate into clamours whining, if thou deny'st the least syllable of thy addition.

Stew. Why, what a monstrous Fellow art thou, thus to raile on one, that is neither knowne of thee, nor knowes thee?

Kent. What a brazen-fac'd Varlet art thou, to deny thou knowest me? Is it two dayes since I tripe vp thy heeles, and beate thee before the King? Draw you rogue.

for

for though it be night, yet the Moone shines, Ile make a sop oth' Moonshine of you, you whoreson Cullyenly Barber-monger, draw.

Stew. Away, I have nothing to do with thee.

Kent. Draw you Rascall, you come with Letters against the King, and take Vanitie the puppets part, against the Royalties of her Father: draw you Rogue, or Ile so carbonado your shanks, draw you Rascall, come your wales.

Ste. Helpe, ho, murther, helpe.

Kent. Strike you slaue: stand rogue, stand you neat slaue, strike.

Stew. Helpe ho, murther, murther.

Enter Bastard, Cornwall, Regan, Gloster, Seruants.

Bast. How now, what's the matter? Part.

Kent. With you goodman Boy, if you please, come, Ile flesh ye, come on yong Master.

Glo. Weapons? Armes? what's the matter here?

Corn. Keepe peace vpon your liues, he dies that strikes again, what is the matter?

Reg. The Messengers from our Sister, and the King

Corn. What is your difference, speake?

Stew. I am scarce in breath my Lord.

Kent. No Marrell, you haue so bestir'd your valour, you cowardly Rascall, nature disclaimes in thee: a Taylor made thee.

Corn. Thou art a strange fellow, a Taylor make a man?

Kent. A Taylor Sir, a Stone-cutter, or a Painter, could not haue made him so ill, though they had bin but two yeares oth'trade.

Corn. Speake yet, how grew your quarrell?

Ste. This ancient Ruffian Sir, whose life I haue spar'd at suite of his gray-beard.

Kent. Thou whoreson Zed, thou vnnecessary letter: my Lord, if you will giue me leaue, I will tread this vnbolted villaine into mortar, and daube the wall of a Iakes with him. Spare my gray-beard, you wagtaile?

Corn. Peace sirrah,
You beastly knaue, know you no reuerence?

Kent. Yes Sir, but anger hath a priuiledge.

Corn. Why art thou angrie?

Kent. That such a slaue as this should weare a Sword, Who weares no honesty: such smiling rogues as these, Like Rats oft bite the holy cords atwaine, Which are t'intrince, t'vnloose: smooth every passion That in the natures of their Lords rebell, Being oile to fire, snow to the colder moodes, Reuenge, affirme, and turne their Halcion beakes With every gall, and varly of their Masters, Knowing nought (like dogges) but following: A plague vpon your Epileptickie visage, Smoile you my speeches, as I were a Foole? Goose, if I had you vpon Sarum Plaine, I'ld driue ye cackling home to Camelot.

Corn. What art thou mad old Fellow?

Glost. How fell you out, say that?

Kent. No contraries hold more antipathy, Then I, and such a knaue.

Corn. Why do'st thou call him Knaue? What is his fault?

Kent. His countenance likes me not.

Corn. No more perchance do's mine, nor his, nor hers.

Kent. Sir, 'tis my occupation to be plaine, I haue seene better faces in my time, Then stands on any shoulder that I see Before me, at this instant.

Corn. This is some Fellow, Who having beene prais'd for bluntnesse, doth affect A saucy roughnes, and constraines the garb Quite from his Nature. He cannot flatter he, An honest mind and plaine, he must speake truth, And they will take it so, if not, he's plaine. These kind of Knaues I know, which in this plainnesse Harbour more craft, and more corrupter ends, Then twenty silly docking obseruants, That stretch their duties nicely.

Kent. Sir, in good faith, in sincere verity, Vnder th'allowance of your great aspect, Whose influence like the wreath of radiant fire On flicking Phœbus front.

Corn. What mean'st by this?

Kent. To go out of my dialect, which you discommend so much; I know Sir, I am no flatterer, he that beguild you in a plaine accent, was a plaine Knaue, which for my part I will not be, though I should win your displeasure to entreat me too't.

Corn. What was th'offence you gaue him?

Ste. I never gaue him any:
It pleas'd the King his Master very late To strike at me vpon his misconstruction, When he compact, and flattering his displeasure Tript me behind: being downe, insulted, rail'd, And put vpon him such a deale of Man, That worthied him, got praises of the King, For him attempting, who was self-subdued, And in the fleshment of this dead exploite, Drew on me here again.

Kent. None of these Rogues, and Cowards But Aiax is their Foole.

Corn. Fetch forth the Stocks?
You stubborne ancient Knaue, you reuerent Beggar, We'l teach you.

Kent. Sir, I am too old to learne:
Call not your Stocks for me, I serue the King, On whose imployment I was sent to you, You shall doe small respects, show too bold malice Against the Grace, and Person of my Master, Stocking his Messenger.

Corn. Fetch forth the Stocks;
As I haue life and Honour, there shall he sit till Noone.

Reg. Till noone? till night my Lord, and all night too.

Kent. Why Madam, if I were your Fathers dog, You should not vse me so.

Reg. Sir, being his Knaue, I will. Stocks brought out.

Corn. This is a Fellow of the selfe same colour, Our Sister speakes of. Come, bring away the Stocks.

Glo. Let me beseech your Grace, not to do so, The King his Master, needs must take it ill That he so slightly valued in his Messenger, Should haue him thus restrained.

Corn. Ile answere that.

Reg. My Sister may recieue it much more worse, To haue her Gentleman abus'd, assaulted.

Corn. Come my Lord, away. Exit.

Glo. I am sorry for thee friend, 'tis the Duke pleasure, Whose disposition all the world well knowes Will not be rub'd nor stopt, Ile entreat for thee.

Kent. Pray do not Sir, I haue watch'd and travell'd hard, Some time I shall sleepe out, the rest Ile whistle. A good mans fortune may grow out at heelies Glo.

...ome you good morrow.

Glo. The Duke's too blunt in this,
I will be ill taken. Exit.

Kent. Good King, that must approue the common saw,
Thou out of Heauens benediction com'st
To the warme Sun.
Approach thou Beacon to this vnder Globe,
That by thy comfortable Beames I may
Peruse this Letter. Nothing almost sees miracles
But miserie. I know 'tis from Cordelia,
Who hath most fortunately beene inform'd
Of my obscured course. And shall finde time
From this enormous State, seeking to giue
Losses their remedies. All weary and o'er-watch'd,
Take vantage heauie eyes, not to behold
This shameful lodging. Fortune good-night,
Smile once more, turne thy wheele.

Enter Edgar.

Edg. I heard my self proclaim'd,
And by the happy hollow of a Tree,
Escap'd the hunt. No Port is free, no place
That guard, and most vnlaxall vigilance
Do's not attend my taking. While I may scape
I will preserue my selfe: and am bethought
To take the basest, and most poorest shape
That euer penury in contempt of man,
Brought neere to beast; my face I'le grime with filth,
Blanket my loines, elfe all my haires in knots,
And with presented nakednesse out-face
The Winds, and perseccutions of the skies;
The Country gives me proofe, and precedent
Of Bedlam beggers, who with roaring voices,
Strike in their num'd and mortified Armes,
Pins, Wooden-pricks, Nayles, Sprigs of Rosemarie:
And with this horrible object, from low Farmes,
Poore pelting Villages, Sheeps-Cotes, and Mills,
Sometimes with Lunaticke bans, sometimes with Prayers
Inforce their charitie: poore Turlygod, poore Tom,
That's something yet: Edgar I nothing am. Exit.

Enter Lear, Fool, and Gentleman.

Lea. 'Tis strange that they should so depart from home,
And not send backe my Messenger.

Gent. As I learn'd,
The night before, there was no purpose in them
Of this remoue.

Kent. Haile to thee Noble Master.

Lear. Ha? Mak'st thou this shame thy pastime?

Kent. No my Lord.

Fool. Hah, ha, he wears Cruell Garters. Horses are tide by the heads, Dogges and Beares, by th'neck, Monkies by th'loynes, and Men by th'legs: when a man ouerlasties at legs, then he wears wooden nether-stocks.

Lear. What's he,
That hath so much thy place mistooke
To set thee here?

Kent. It is both he and she,
Your Son, and Daughter.

Lear. No.

Kent. Yes.

Lear. No I say.

Kent. I say yea.

Lear. By Iupiter I swear no.

Kent. By Iuno, I swear I.

Lear. They durst not do't:
They could not, would not do't: 'tis worse than murther,
To do vpon respect such violent outrage:
Resolue me with all modest haste, which way
Thou might'st deserue, or they impose this vsage,
Comming from vs.

Kent. My Lord, when at their home
I did commend your Highnesse Letters to them,
Ere I was risen from the place, that shewed
My duetie kneeling, came there a reeking Post,
Stew'd in his haste, halfe breathless, panting forth
From Goneril his Mistris, salutations;
Deliuer'd Letters spight of intermission,
Which presently they read; on those contents
They summon'd vp their meiny, straight tooke Horse,
Commanded me to follow, and attend
The leisure of their answer, gaue me cold looks,
And meeting heere the other Messenger,
Whose welcome I perceiu'd had poison'd mine,
Being the very fellow which of late
Displaid so saucily against your Highnesse,
Hazing more man then wit about me, drew;
He rais'd the house, with loud and coward cries,
Your Sonne and Daughter found this trespasse worth
The shame which heere it suffers. {way,

Fool. Winters not gone yet, if the wild'st Geese fly that Feathers that weare rogs, do make their Children blind,
But Fathers that beare bags, shall see their children kind.
Fortune that arrant whore, ne'ere turns the key toth' poore.
But for all this thou shalt haue as many Dolors for thy Daughters, as thou canst tell in a yeare.

Lear. Oh how this Mother swels vp toward my heart!
Hysterica passio, downe thou climing sorrow,
Thy Elements below where is this Daughter?

Kent. With the Earle Sir, here within.

Lear. Follow me not, stay here. Exit.

Gent. Made you no more offence,
But what you speake of?

Kent. None:
How chance the the King comes with so small a number?

Fool. And thou hadst beene set i'th' Stocks for that question, thoud'st well deserv'd it.

Kent. Why Foole?

Fool. We'l set thee to schoole to an Ant, wouldst thee then's no labouring i'th' winter. All that follow their noses, are led by their eyes, but blinde men, and there's not a nose among twenty, but can smell him that's stinking; let go thy hold, when a great wheele runs downe a hill, lest it breake thy necke with following. But the great one that goes vpward, let him drawthee after: when a wiseman gives thee better counsell, give me mine again, I would haue none but knaues follow it, since a Foole gives it,
That Sir, which serues and seekes for gaine,
And followes but for forme;
Will packe, when it begins to raine,
And leaue thee in the storme.
But I will tarry, the Foole will stay,
And let the wiseman flie:
The knaue turnes Foole that runs away,
The Foole no knaue perdie.

Enter Lear, and Glester.

Kent. Where learn'd you this Foole?

Fool. Not i'th' Stocks Foole.

Lear. Deny to speake with me?
They are sicke, they are weary,
They haue travell'd all the night? meere fetches,
The images of reuolt and flying off.
Fetch me a better answer.
Glo. My dearest Lord,
You know the fiery quality of the Duke,
How vnremoueable and fixt he is
In his owne course.
Lear. Vengeance, Plague, Death, Confusion:
Fiery? What quality? Why Gloster, Gloster,
I'ld speake with the Duke of Cornwall, and his wife.
Glo. Well my good Lord, I haue inform'd them so.
Lear. Inform'd them? Do'st thou vnderstand me man.
Glo. I my good Lord.
Lear. The King would speake with Cornwall,
The deare Father
Would with his Daughter speake, commands, tends, seruice,
Are they inform'd of this? My breath and blood: (nice,
Fiery? The fiery Duke, tell the hot Duke that ——
No, but not yet, may be he is not well,
Infirmity doth still neglect all office,
Whereto our health is bound, we are not our selues,
When Nature being oppreſt, commands the mind
To suffer with the body; I'le forbeare,
And am fallen out with my more headier will,
To take the indispos'd and sickly fit,
For the sound man. Death on my state: wherefore
Should he sit heere? This act persuades me,
That this remotion of the Duke and her
Is practise only. Giue me my Seruant forth;
Goe tell the Duke, and's wife, I'ld speake with them:
Now, presently: bid them come forth and heare me,
Or at their Chamber doore I'le beate the Drum,
Till it cry sleepe to death.
Glo. I would haue all well betwixt you. Exit.
Lear Oh me my heart! My rising heart! But downe.
Fools. Cry to it Nunckle, as the Cockney did to the Eeles, when she put 'em i'th' Paſte aliue, she knapt 'em o'th' coxcombs with a sticke, and cryed downe wantons, downe; 'twas her Brother, that in pure kindneſse to his Horſe buttered his Hay.

Enter Cornwall, Regan, Gloster, Seruants.

Lear. Good morrow to you both.
Corn. Haile to your Grace. Kent here set at liberty.
Reg. I am glad to see your Highneſse.
Lear Regan, I thinke your are. I know what reason
I haue to thinke so, if thou should'st not be glad,
I would diuorce me from thy Mother Tombe,
Sepulchring an Adulteresse. O are you free?
Some other time for that. Beloued Regan,
Thy Sisters naught: oh Regan, she hath tied
Sharpe-tooth'd vnkindneſse, like a vulture heere,
I can scarce speake to thee, thou'lt not beleeue
With how depraue'd a quality. Oh Regan.
Reg I pray you Sir, take patience. I haue hope
You lesse know how to value her desert,
Then she to scant her duties.
Lear. Say? How is that?
Reg. I cannot thinke my Sister in the least
Would faile her Obligation. If Sir perchance
She haue restrained the Riots of your Followers,
'Tis on such ground, and to such wholesome end,
As cleeres her from all blame.
Lear. My curses on her.
Reg. O Sir, you are old,
Nature in you stands on the very Verge
Of his confine: you should be ruld, and led
By some discretion, that discernes your state
Better than you your selfe: therefore I pray you,
That to our Sister, you do make returne,
Say you haue wrong'd her.
Lear. Aske her forgiuenesse?
Do you but marke how this becomes the house?
Deare daughter, I confesse that I am old;
Age is vnnecessary: on my knees I beggo,
That you'l vouchsafe me Raiment, Bed, and Food.
Reg. Good Sir, no more: these are vnsightly tricks:
Returne you to my Sister.
Lear. Never Regan:
She hath abated me of halfe my Traine;
Look'd blacke vpon me, struck me with her Tongue
Most Serpent-like, vpon the very Heart.
All the stor'd Vengeances of Heauen, fall
On her ingratefull top: strike her young bones
You taking Ayres, with Lamenesse.
Corn. Fye sir, fie.
Le. You nimble Lightnings, dart your blinding flames
Into her scornfull eyes: Infect her Beauty,
You Fen-sock'd Fogges, drawne by the powerfull Sunne,
To fall, and blister.
Reg. O the blest Gods!
So will you wish on me, when the rash moode is on.
Lear. No Regan, thou shalt never haue my curse.
Thy tender-hefted Nature shall not giue
Thee o're to harshneſse: Her eyes are fierce, but thine
Do comfort, and not burne. 'Tis not in thee
To grudge my pleasures, to cut off my Traine,
To bendy hasty words, to scant my sizes,
And in conclusion, to oppose the bole
Against my comming in. Thou better know'ſt
The Offices of Nature, bond of Childhood,
Effects of Curtesie, dues of Gratitude:
Thy halfe o'th' Kingdome hast thou not forgot,
Wherein I thee endow'd.
Reg. Good Sir, to'th' purpose. Tucket sounds.
Lear. Who put my man i'th' Stocks?
Enter Steward.
Corn. What Trumpet's that?
Reg. I know't, my Sisters: this approues her Letter,
That she would soone be heere. Is your Lady come?
Lear. This is a Slaue, whose easie borrowed pride
Dwells in the fickly grace of her he followes.
Out Varlet, from my sight.
Corn. What means your Grace?
Enter Gonerill.
Lear. Who stocks my Seruant? Regan, I haue good hope
Thou did'st not know on't.
Who comes here? O Heauens!
If you do loue old men; if your sweet sway
Allow Obedience: if you your selues are old,
Make it your cause: Send downe, and take my part.
Art not asham'd to looke vpon this Beard?
O Regan, will you take her by the hand?
Gon. Why not by th'hand Sir? How haue I offended?
All's not offence that indiscretion finds,
And dotage termes so.
Lear. O sides, you are too tough!
Will you yet hold?
How came my man i'th' Stocks?
Corn. I set him there, Sir: but his owne Disorders
Deserued

Deserv'd much less advancement.

Lear. You? Did you?

Reg. I pray you Father being weake, seeme so.
If till the expiration of your Moneth
You will returne and soiourne with my Sister,
Dismissing halfe your traine, come then to me,
I am now from home, and out of that provision
Which shall be needfull for your entertainement.

Lear. Returne to her? and fifty men dismiss'd?
No, rather I abiure all roofes, and chuse
To wage against the enmity oth'ayre,
To be a Comrade with the Wolfe, and Owle,
Necessities sharpe pinch. Returne with her?
Why the hot-bloodied France, that dowerlesse tooke
Our youngest borne, I could as well be brought
To knee his Throne, and Squire-like pension beg,
To keepe base life a foote; returne with her?
Perswade me rather to be slaue and sampler
To this detested groome.

Gon. At your choice Sir.

Lear. I prythee Daughter do not make me mad,
I will not trouble thee my Child; farewell:
We'l no more meete, no more see one another.
But yet thou art my flesh, my blood, my Daughter,
Or rather a disease that's in my flesh,
Which I must needs call mine. Thou art a Byle,
A plague sore, or imbossed Carbuncle
In my corrupted blood. But I'le not chide thee,
Let shame come when it will, I do not call it,
I do not bid the Thunder-bearer shoote,
Nor tell tales of thee to high-iudging Ioue.
Mend when thou can'st, be better at thy leisure,
I can be patient, I can stay with Regan,
I and my hundred Knights.

Reg. Not altogether so,
I look'd not for you yet, nor am prouided
For your fit welcome, giue care Sir to my Sister,
For those that mingle reason with your passion,
Must be content to think you old, and so,
But she knowes what she doe's.

Lear. Is this well spoken?

Reg. I dare auouch it Sir, what fifty Follows are?
Is it not well? What should you need of more?
Yea, or so many? Sith that both charge and danger,
Speake 'gainst so great a number? How in one house
Should many people, vnder two commands
Hold amity? 'Tis hard, almost impossible.

Gon. Why might not you my Lord, receiue attendance
From those that she calls Seruants, or from mine?

Reg. Why not my Lord?
If then they chance'd to slacke ye,
We could controull them; if you will come to me,
(For now I spie a danger) I entreate you
To bring but fiue and twentie, no more
Will I giue place or notice.

Lear. I gaue you all.

Reg. And in good time you gaue it.

Lear. Made you my Guardians, my Depositaries,
But kept a reseruation to be followed
With such a number? What, must I come to you
With fiue and twenty? Regan, said you so?

Reg. And speak't again my Lord, no more with me.

Lea. Those wicked Creatures yet do look wel fauor'd
When others are more wicked, not being the worst
Stands in some rankes of praise, I'le go with thee,
Thy fifty yet doth double fiue and twenty.
And thou art twice her Loue.

Gon. Heare me my Lord;
What need you fiue and twenty? Ten? Or fiue?
To follow in a house, where twice so many
Haue a command to tend you?

Reg. What need one?

Lear. O reason not the need: our basest Beggers
Are in the poorest thing superfluous,
Allow not Nature, more than Nature needs:
Mans life is cheape as Beasts. Thou art a Lady;
If only to go warme were gorgeous,
Why Nature needs not what thou gorgeous wear'st,
Which scarcely keepes thee warme, but for true need:
You Heauens, giue me that patience, patience I need,
You see me heere (you Gods) a poore old man,
As full of griefe as age, wretched in both,
If it be you that stirres these Daughters hearts
Against their Father, foole me not so much,
To bear it tamely; touch me with Noble anger,
And let not womens weapons, water drops,
Staine my mans cheeks. No you vnnaturall Hags,
I will haue such reuenges on you both,
That all the world shall——I will do such things,
What they are yet, I know not, but they shalbe
The terrors of the earth? you think I'le weepe,
No, I'le not weepe, I haue full cause of weeping.

Storme and Tempest.

But this heart shal breake into a hundred thousand flaxes
Or ere I'le weepe: O Foole, I shall go mad. Exeunt.

Corn. Let vs withdraw, 'twill be a Storme.

Reg. This house is little, the old man an'd people,
Cannot be well bestow'd.

Gon. 'Tis his owne blame hath put himselfe from rest,
And must needs taste his folly.

Reg. For his particular, I'le receiue him gladly,
But not one follower.

Gon. So am I purpos'd.
Where is my Lord of Glaster?

Enter Glaster.

Corn. Followed the old man forth, he is return'd.

Glo. The King is in high rage.

Corn. Whether is he going?

Glo. He cals to Horse, but will I know not whether.

Corn. 'Tis best to giue him way, he leads himselfe.

Gon. My Lord, entreate him by no meanes to stay.

Glo. Alacke the night comes on, and the high winds
Do sorely ruffle, for many Miles about
There's scarce a Bush.

Reg. O Sir, no wilfull man,
The iniuries that they themselues procure,
Must be their Schoole-Masters: shut vp your doores,
He is attended with a desperate traine,
And what they may incense him too, being apt,
To have his ears abus'd, wisedome bids feare.

Cor. Shut vp your doores my Lord, 'tis a wil'd night,
My Regan counsels well: come out oth'Storme. Exeunt.

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Storme still. Enter Kent, and a Gentleman, seuerally.

Kent. Who's there besides foule weather?

Gen. One minded like the weather, most vnquietly

Kent. I know you: Where's the King?
Gent. Contending with the fretfull Elements;
Bids the winde blow the Earth into the Sea,
Or swell the curled Waters 'boue the Maine,
That things might change, or cease.
Kent. But why is with him?
Gent. None but the Fools, who labours to out-strift
His heart-strooke injuries.
Kent. Sir, I do know you,
And dare vpon the warrant of my note
Commend a deere thing to you. There is diuision
(Although as yet the face of it is couer'd
With mutuall cunning) 'twixt Albany, and Cornwall:
Who haue, as who haue not, that their great Starres
Thron'd and set high; Seruants, who seeme no lesse,
Which are to France the Spies and Speculations
Intelligence of our State. What hath bin seene,
Either in snuffes, and packings of the Dukes,
Or the hard Reine which both of them hath borne
Against the old kinde King; or something deeper,
Whereof (perchance) these are but furnishings.
Gent. I will talke further with you.
Kent. No, do not:
For confirmation that I am much more
Then my out-wall; open this Purse, and take
What it containes. If you shall see Cordelia,
(As feare not but you shall) shew her this Ring,
And she will tell you who thee Fellow is
That yet you do not know. Fye on this Storme,
I will go seeke the King.
Gent. Giue me your hand.
Haue you no more to say?
Kent. Few words, but to effect more then all yet;
That when we haue found the King, in which your pain
That way, I'le this: He that first lights on him,
Holla the other. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Storme still. Enter Lear, and Fools.

Lear. Blow winds, & crack your cheeks; Rage, blow
You Cataracts, and Hyrricano's spout,
Till you haue drench'd our Steeples, drown the Cocks.
You Sulph'rous and Thought-executing Fires,
Vaunt-curriers of Oake-cleuing Thunder-bolts,
Singe my white head. And thou all-shaking Thunder,
Strike flat the thicke Rotundity o'th'world,
Crache Natures moulds, all germaines spill at once
That makes ingratefull Man.
Fools. O Nuncle, Court holy-water in a dry house, is better then this Rain-water out o'doore. Good Nuncle, in, ask thy Daughters blessing, heere's a night pitties neither Wisemen, nor Fools.
Lear. Rumble thy belly full: spit Fire, spout Raine:
Nor Raine, Winde, Thunder, Fire are my Daughters;
I taxe not you, you Elements with vnkindnesse.
I never gaue you Kingdome, call'd you Children;
You owe me no subscription. Then let fall
Your horrible pleasure. Heere I stand your Slaue,
A poore, infirme, weake, and disp'se'd old man:
But yet I call you Seruile Ministers,
That will with two pernicious Daughters joyne
Your high-engender'd Battailes, 'gainst a head
So old, and white as this. Oho! 'tis foule.
Fools. He that has a house to put's head in, has a good Head-peece:
The Codpiece that will house, before the head has any;
The Head, and he shall Louse: so Beggers marry many.
The man yonder makes his Toe, when he his Hart should make,
Shall of a Corne cry woe, and turne his sleepe no wake.
For there was neuer yet faire woman, but shee made mouthes in a glasse.

Enter Kent.

Lear. No, I will be the pacierne of all patience,
I will say nothing.
Kent. Who's there?
Fools. Marry here's Grace, and a Codpiece, that's a Wiseman, and a Fools.
Kent. Alas Sir are you here? Things that loue night,
Loue not such nights as these: The wrathfull Skies
Gallow the very wanderers of the dark:
And make them keepe their Caues: Since I was man,
Such shoots of Fire, such bursts of horrid Thunder,
Such groanes of roaring Winde, and Raine, I never Remember to haue heard. Man's Nature cannot carry
Th'affliction, nor the feare.
Lear. Let the great Godds
That keepe this dreadfull pudder o're our heads,
Finde out their enemies now. Tremble thou Wretch,
That hast within thee vndiuulged Crimes
Vnwhipt of Iustice. Hide thee, thou Bloudy hand;
Thou Periur'd, and thou Statutor of Vertue
That art Incestuous. Caitiffe, to pieces shake
That vnder couert, and conuenient seeming
He's practis'd on man's life. Close pent-vp guilts,
Rise yonr concealing Continents, and cry
These dreadfull Summoners grace. I am a man,
More sinn'd against, than sinning.
Kent. Alacke, bare-headed?
Gracious my Lord, hard by heere is a Houell,
Some friendship will it lend you 'gainst the Tempest:
Repose you there, while I to this hard house,
(More harder then the stones whereof 'tis rais'd,
Which euen but now, demanding after you,
Denyed me to come in) returne, and force
Their scanted curtesie.
Lear. My wits begin to turne.
Come on my boy. How dost my boy? Art cold?
I am cold my self. Where is this straw, my Fellow?
The Art of our Necessities is strange,
And can make vile things precious. Come, your Houel,
Poore Fools, and Knaues, I haue one part in my heart
That's sorry yet for thee.
Fools. He that has and a little-tyne wit,
With heigh-ho, the Winde and the Raine,
Must make content with his Fortunes fit,
Though the Raine is raineth every day.
Le. True Boy: Come bring vs to this Houell. Exit.
Fools. This is a braue night to cooler Courtiers:
Ile speake a Prophesie ere I go:
When Priests are more in word, then matter;
When Brewers marre their Malt with water;
When Nobles are their Taylors Tutors
No Heretiques burn'd, but wanthes Sutors;
When every Case in Law, is right;
No Squire in debt, nor no poore Knight;
When Slanders do not liue in Tongues;
Nor Cut-purses come not to throngs;
When Vsurers tell their Gold i'th Field,

And

And Bawdes, and whores, do Churches build,
Then shal the Realme of Albion, come to great confusion:
Then comes the time, who lives to see't,
That going shalbe vs'd with feet. (time.
This prophecie Merlin shall make, for I live before his
Exit.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Glester, and Edmund.

Glo. Alacke, alacke Edmund, I like not this vnnaturall dealing; when I desired their leave that I might pity him, they tooke from me the vse of mine owne house, charg'd me on paine of perpetuall displeasure, neither to speake of him, entreat for him, or any way sustaine him.

Bast. Most sauage and vnnaturall.

Glo. Go too; say you nothing. There is diuision between the Dukes, and a worse matter then that: I haue receiued a Letter this night, 'tis dangerous to be spoken, I haue lock'd the Letter in my Closet, these inuiries the King now bears, will be reuenged home; there is part of a Power already footed, we must incline to the King. I will looke him, and priuily relieue him; goe you and maintaine talke with the Duke, that my charity be not of him perceiued; If he aske for me, I am ill, and gone to bed, if I die for it, (as no lesse is threatned me) the King my old Master must be relieued. There is strange things toward Edmund, pray you be carefull. Exit.

Bast. This Curtesie forbid thee, shall the Duke
Instantly know, and of that Letter too;
This seemes a faire deserving, and must draw me
That which my Father loseth: no lesse then all,
The younger rises, when the old doth fall. Exit.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Lear, Kent, and Foole.

Kent Heere is the place my Lord, good my Lord enter,
The tyrany of the open night's too rough
For Nature to endure. Storme still

Lear. Let me alone.

Kent. Good my Lord enter heere.

Lear. Wilt breake my heart?

Kent. I had rather breake mine owne,
Good my Lord enter.

Lear. Thou think'ſt 'tis much that this contentious
Inuades vs to the skin so: 'tis to thee, (storme
But where the greater malady is fixt,
The lesser is scarce felt. Thou'dſt shun a Bear,
But if they flight lay toward the roaring Sea,
Thou'dſt meete the Bear i'th' mouth, when the mind's
The bodies delicate: the tempest in my mind, free,
Doth from my sences take all feeling else,
Saue what beates there, Filial! ingratitude,
Is it not as this mouth should tear this hand
For lifting food too't? But I will punish home;
No, I will weepe no more; in such a night,
To shut me out? Poure on, I will endure:
In such a night as this? O Regan, Gonerill,
Your old kind Father, whose franke heart gaue all,
O that way madnesse lies, let me shun that;
No more of that.

Kent. Good my Lord enter here.

Lear. Prythee go in thy selfe, seeke thine owne ease,
This tempest will not giue me leaue to ponder
On things would hurt me more, but I'le goe in,
In Boy, go first. You houselesse poueritie, Exit.
Nay get thee in; I'le pray, and then I'le sleepe.
Poore naked wretches, where so ere you are
That bide the pelting of this pitiliesse storme,
How shall your House-lesse heads, and vnfed sides,
Your loop'd, and window'd raggednesse defend you
From seasons such as these? O I have tane
Too little care of this: Take Physicke, Pompe,
Expose thy selfe to feele what wretches feele,
That thou maist shake the superflux to them,
And shew the Heauens more just.

Enter Edgar, and Foole.

Edg. Fathom, and half, Fathom and halfe; poore Tom.

Foole. Come not in heere Nuncle, here's a spirit, helpe me, helpe me.

Kent. Give me thy hand, who's there?

Foole. A spirit, a spirit, he sayes his name's poore Tom.

Kent. What art thou that dost grumble there i'th' straw? Come forth.

Edg Away, the foule Fiend followes me, through the sharpe Hawthorne blow the winde. Humh, go to thy bed and warme thee.

Lear. Did'ſt thou give all to thy Daughters? And art thou come to this?

Edgar. Who gives any thing to poore Tom? Whom the foule fiend hath led through Fire, and through Flame, through Sword, and Whirle-Poole, o're Bog, and Quagmire, that hath laid Knives vnder his Pillow, and Halters in his Pew, set Ratsbane by his Porridge, made him Proud of heart, to ride on a Bay trotting Horse, over foure inch'e Bridges, to course his owne shadow for a Traitor. Bless thy five Wits, Tom's a cold. O do, de, do, de, do de, bless thee from Whirle-Winde, Starre-blasting, and taking, do poore Tom some charitie, whom the foule Fiend vexes. There could I haue him now, and there, and there again, and there. Storme still.

Lear. Ha's his Daughters brought him to this passe? Could'ſt thou saue nothing? Would'ſt thou give 'em all?

Foole. Nay, he reserv'd a Blanket, else we had bin all sham'd.

Lea. Now all the plagues that in the pendulous aire
Hang fated o're mens faults, light on thy Daughters.

Kent. He hath no Daughters Sir.

Lear. Death Traitor, nothing could haue subdu'd
To such a lownesse, but his vnkind Daughters. (Nature
Is it the fashion, that discarded Fathers,
Should haue thus little mercy on their flesh:
Judicious punishment, 'twas this flesh begot
Those Pelicane Daughters.

Edg. Pillicock sat on Pillicock hill, alow, alow, loo, loo.

Foole. This cold night will turne vs all to Fooles, and Madmen.

Edgar. Take heed o'th' foule Fiend, obey thy Parents, keepe thy words Iustice, swearе not, commit not,
with

with mans sworne Spouse; let not thy Sweet-heart on proud array. Tom's a cold.

Lear. What has thou bin?

Edg. A Seruingman? Proud in heart, and minde; that curl'd my haire, wore Gloues in my cap; seru'd the Lust of my Mistris heart, and did the act of darknesse with her. Swore as many Oathes, as I spake words, & broke them in the sweet face of Heauen. One, that slept in the contriuing of Lust, and wak'd to doe it. Wine lou'd I deerely, Dice deerely; and in Women, out-Paramour'd the Turke. False of heart, light of eare, bloody of hand Hog in sloth, Fox in stealth, Wolfe in greedinesse, Dog in madnes, Lyon in prey. Let not the creaking of shoes, Nor the rustling of Silkes, betray thy poore heart to women. Keepe thy foote out of Brothels, thy hand out of Plackets, thy pen from Lenders Bookes, and defye the foule Fiend. Still through the Hawthorne blowes the cold winde: Sayes suum, mun, nonny, Dolphin my Boy, Boy Sessy: let him trot by. Storme still.

Lear. Thou wert better in a Grane, then to answere with thy vncouer'd body, this extremitie of the Skies. Is man no more then this? Consider him well. Thou ow'st the Worme no Silke; the Beast, no Hide; the Sheepe, no Woell, the Cat, no perfume. Ha? Here's three on's are sophisticated. Thou art the thing it selfe; vnaccommodated man, is no more but such a poore, bare, forked Animall as thou art. Off, off you Lendings: Come, vnbutton heere.

Enter Gloucester, with a Torch.

Fools. Prythee Nuncle be contented, 'tis a naughtie night to swimme in. Now a little fire in a wilde Field, were like an old Lechers heart, a small spark, all the rest on's body, cold: Looke, heere comes a walking fire.

Edg. This is the foule Flibbertigibbet; hee begins at Curfew, and walkes at first Cocke: Hee gises the Web and the Pin, squints the eye, and makes the Hare-lippe; Mildewes the white Wheate, and hurts the poore Creature of earth.

Swithold footed thrice the old,
He met the Night-Mare, and her nine-fold;
Bid her a-light, and her troth-plight,
And aroynt thee Witch, aroynt thee.

Kent. How fares your Grace?

Lear. What's he?

Kent. Who's there? What is't you seeke?

Glou. What are you there? Your Names?

Edg. Poore Tom, that eates the swimming Frog, the Toad, the Tod-pole, the wall-Newt, and the water: that in the furie of his heart, when the foule Fiend rages, eats Cow-dung for Sallets; swallowes the old Rat, and the ditch-Dogge; drinkes the green Mantle of the standing Poole: who is whipt from Tything to Tything, and stocks, punish'd, and imprison'd: who hath three Suites to his backe, six shirts to his body:

Horse to ride, and weapon to weare:
But Mice, and Rats, and such small Deare,
Haue bin Toms food, for seuen long yeare:

Beware my Follower. Peace Smulkin, peace thou Fiend.

Glou. What, hath your Grace no better company?

Edg. The Prince of Darknesse is a Gentleman. Modo he's call'd, and Mahu.

Glou. Our flesh and blood, my Lord, is growne so vilde, that it doth hate what gets it.

Edg. Poore Tom's a cold.

Glou. Go in with me; my duty cannot suffer T'obey in all your daughters hard commands:
Though their Iniunction be to barre my doores,
And let this Tyrannous night take hold vpon you,
Yet haue I ventured to come seeke you out,
And bring you where both fire, and food is ready.

Lear. First let me talke with this Philosopher,
What is the cause of Thunder?

Kent. Good my Lord take his offer,
Go into th'house.

Lear. Ile talke a word with this same learned Theban:
What is your study?

Edg. How to preuent the Fiend, and to kill Vermine.

Lear. Let me stake you one word in priuate.

Kent. Importune him once more to go my Lord,
His wits begin t'vnsettle.

Glou. Canst thou blame him? Storme still
His Daughters seeke his death: Ah, that good Kent,
He said it would be thus: poore banish'd man,
Thou sayest the King growes mad, Ile tell thee Friend
I am almost mad my selfe. I had a Sonne,
Now out-law'd from my blood: he sought my life
But lately: very late: I lou'd him (Friend)
No Father his Sonne deerer: true to tell thee,
The greefe hath crazd my wits. What a night's this?
I do beseech your grace.

Lear. O cry you mercy, Sir:
Noble Philosopher, your company.

Edg. Tom's a cold.

Glou. In fellow there, into th'Houel; keep thee warm.

Lear. Come, let's in all.

Kent. This way, my Lord.

Lear. With him;
I will keepe still with my Philosopher.

Kent. Good my Lord, sooth him:
Let him take the Fellow.

Glou. Take him you on.

Kent. Sirra, come on: go along with vs.

Lear. Come, good Athenian.

Glou. No words, no words, hush.

Edg. Childe Rowland to the darke Tower came,
His word was still, fie, foh, and fumme,
I smell the blood of a Brittish man. Exeunt

Scena Quinta.

Enter Cornwall, and Edmund.

Corn. I will haue my revenge, ere I depart his house.

Bast. How my Lord, I may be censured, that Nature thus giues way to Loyaltie, something feares me to thinke of.

Corn. I now perceiue, it was not altogether your Brothers euill disposition made him seeke his death: but a prouoking merit set a-worke by a reproueable badnesse in himselfe.

Bast. How malicious is my fortune, that I must repent to be iust? This is the Letter which he spoake of; which approues him an intelligent partie to the aduantages of France. O Heauens! that this Treason were not; or not I the detector.

Corn. Go with me to the Dutchesse.

Bast. If the matter of this Paper be certain, you haue mighty business in hand.

Corn.

Corn. True or false, it hath made thee Earle of Gloucester: seeke out where thy Father is, that he may be ready for our apprehension.

Bast. If I finde him comforting the King, it will stuffe his suspition more fully. I will persever in my course of Loyalty, though the conflict be sore between that, and my blood.

Corn. I will lay trust vpon thee: and thou shalt finde a deere Father in my loue. Exeunt.

Scena Sexta.

Enter Kent, and Gloucester.

Glou. Heere is better then the open ayre, take it thankfully: I will peece out the comfort with what addition I can: I will not be long from you. Exit

Kent. All the powre of his wits, haue given way to his impatience: the Gods reward your kindnesse.

Enter Lear, Edgar, and Fools.

Edg. Fraterretto cals me, and tells me Nero is an Angler in the Lake of Darknesse: pray Innocent, and beware the foule Fiend.

Fool. Prythee Nunkle tell me, whether a madman be a Gentleman, or a Yeoman.

Lear. A King, a King.

Fool. No, he's a Yeoman, that ha's a Gentleman to his Sonne: for hee's a mad Yeoman that sees his Sonne a Gentleman before him.

Lear. To sauе a thousand wich red burning spits
Come hissing in vpon 'em.

Edg. Blesse thy fiue wits.

Kent. O pitty: Sir, where is the patience now
That you so oft haue boasted to retaine?

Edg. My teares begin to take his part so much,
They mere my counterfeiting.

Lear. The little dogges, and all;
Trey, Blanch, and Sweet-heart: see, they barke at me.

Edg. Tom, will throw his head at them: Auaunt you Curres, be thy mouth or blacke or white:
Tooth that poysons if it bite:
Mastiffe, Grey-hound, Mongrill, Grim,
Hound or Spaniell, Brache, or Hym:
Or Bobtaile tighe, or Trouble talle.
Tom will make him weepe and waile,
For with throwing thus my head;
Dogs keepe the hatch, and all are fled.
Do, de, de, de: sese: Come, march to Wakes and Feyres,
And Market Townes: poore Tom thy horne is dry.

Lear Then let them Anatomize Regan: See what breeds about her heart. Is there any cause in Nature that make these hard-hearts. You sir, I entertaine for one of my hundred; only, I do not like the fashion of your garments. You will say they are Persian; but let them bee chang'd.

Enter Glester.

Kent. Now good my Lord, lye heere, and rest awhile.

Lear. Make no noise, make no noise, draw the Curtaines: so, so, we'l go to Supper i'th'morning.

Fool. And I'le go to bed at noone.

Glou. Come hither Friend:
Where is the King my Master?

Kent. Here Sir, but troubles him me, his wits are gon.

Glou. Good friend, I prythee take him in thy armes;
I haue ore-heard a plot of death vpon him:
There is a Litter ready, lay him in't,
And drive toward Dover friend, where thou shalt meete
Both welcome, and protection. Take vp thy Master,
If thou should'st dally halfe an houre, his life
With thine, and all that offer to defend him,
Stand in assured losse. Take vp, take vp,
And follow me, that will to some provision
Give thee quicke conduct. Come, come, away. Exeunt

Scena Septima.

Enter Cornwall, Regan, Goneril, Bastard, and Seruants.

Corn. Post speedily to my Lord your husband, shew him this Letter, the Army of France is landed: seeke out the Traitor Gloucster.

Reg. Hang him instantly.

Gon. Plucke out his eyes.

Corn. Leaue him to my displeasure. Edmund, keepe you our Sister company: the reuenges wee are bound to take vppon your Traitorous Father, are not fit for your beholding. Advise the Duke where you are going, to a most festiuate preparation: wé are bound to the like. Our Postes shall be swift, and intelligent betwixt vs. Farewell deere Sister, farewell my Lord of Gloucster.

Enter Steward.

How now? Where's the King?

Stew. My Lord of Gloucster hath conuey'd him hence
Some fiue or six and thirty of his Knighes
Hot Questrists after him, met him at gate,
Who, with some other of the Lords, dependants,
Are gone with him toward Dover; where they boast
To haue well armed Friends.

Corn. Get horses for your Mistris.

Gon. Farewell sweet Lord, and Sister. Exit

Corn. Edmund farewell: go seek the Traitor Gloster,
Pinnion him like a Theefe, bring him before vs:
Though well we may not passe vpon his life
Without the forme of Iustice: yet our power
Shall do a cert'fie to our wrath, which men
May blame, but not controuell.

Enter Gloucester, and Seruants.

Who's there? the Traitor?

Reg. Ingratefull Fox, 'tis he.

Corn. Binde fast his corky armes.

Glou. What meanes your Graces?
Good my Friends consider you are my Ghests:
Do me no foule play, Friends.

Corn. Binde him I say.

Reg. Hard, hard: O filthy Traitor.

Glou. Vnuertiefull Lady, as you are, I'me none.

Corn. To this Chaire bande him,
Villaine, thou shalt finde.

Glou. By the kinde Gods, 'tis most ignobly done
To plucke me by the Beard.

Reg. So white, and such a Traitor?

Glou. Naughty Ladie,
These haires which thou dost rauish from my chin
Will quicken and accuse thee. I am your Host,
With Robbers hands, my hospitable fauours

You

You should not ruffle thus. What will you do?
Corn. Come Sir,
What Letters had you late from France?
Reg. Be simple answer'd, for we know the truth.
Corn. And what confederacie haue you with the Traitors, late-footed in the Kingdome?
Reg. To whose hands
You haue sent the Lunatick King: Speake.
Glou. I haue a Letter guessingly set downe
Which came from one that's of a neutrall heart,
And not from one oppos'd.
Corn. Cunning.
Reg. And false.
Corn. Where hast thou sent the King?
Glou. To Douer.
Reg. Wherefore to Douer?
Was't thou not charg'd at perill.
Corn. Wherefore to Douer? Let him answer that.
Glou. I am tyed to th'Stake,
And I must stand the Course.
Reg. Wherefore to Douer?
Glou. Because I would not see thy cruell Nailes
Pluck out his poore old eyes: nor thy fierce Sister,
In his Anointed flesh. sticke boarish phangs.
The Sea, with such a stormes as his bare head,
In Hell-blacke-night indur'd, would haue buoy'd vp
And quench'd the Stelled fires:
Yet poore old heart, he holpe the Heauens to raine.
If Wolues had at thy Gate howl'd that sterne time,
Thou should'st haue said, good Porter turne the Key:
All Cruels else subscribe: but I shall see
The winged Vengeance ouertake such Children.
Corn. See't shalt thou neuer. Fellowes hold § Chaire,
Vpon these eyes of thine, I'le set my foore.
Glou. He that will think to liue, till he be old,
Giue me some helpe. ——O cruell! O you Gods.
Reg One side will mocke another: Th'other too.
Corn If you see vengeance
Serv Hold your hand, my Lord:
I haue seru'd you ever since I was a Childe.
But better seruice haue I never done you,
Then now to bid you hold.
Reg. How now, you dogge?
Ser If you did weare a beard vpon your chin,
I'd shake it on this quarrell. What do you mean?
Corn. My Villaine?
Serv. Nay then come on, and take the chance of anger.
Reg. Giue me thy Sword. A peasant stand vp thus?
Killes him
Ser Oh I am slame: my Lord, you haue one eye left
To see some mischefe on him. Oh
Corn. Left it see more, preuent it; Out vile gelly:
Where is thy lustre now?
Glou. All dark and comfortlesse?
Where's my Sonne Edmund?
Edmund, enkindle all the sparkes of Nature
To quit this horrid acte.
Reg. Out treacherous Villaine,
Thou call'st on him, that hates thee. It was he
That made the ouerture of thy Treasons to vs:
Who is too good to pitty thee.
Glou. O my Follies! then Edgar was abus'd,
Kinde Gods, forgiue me that, and prosper him.
Reg. Go thrust him out at gates, and let him smell
His way to Douer. Exit with Gloucester.
How is't my Lord? How looke you?
Corn. I haue receiu'd a hurt: Follow me Lady:
Turne out that eyeless Villaine: throw this Slaue
Vpon the Dunghill: Regan, I bleed apace,
Vnkindly comes this hurt. Giue me your arr . Exeunt.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter Edgar.

Edg. Yet better thus, and known to be contemn'd,
Then still contemn'd and flatter'd, to be worst
The lowest, and most deiected thing of Fortune,
Stands still in esperance, liues not in feare:
The lamentable change is from the best,
The worst returnes to laughter. Welcome then,
Thou vnstubstantiall ayre that I embrace:
The Wretch that thou hast blowne vnto the worst,
Owes nothing to thy blasts.
Enter Gloucester, and an Old man.
But who comes here? My Father poorely led?
World, World, O world!
But that thy strange mutations make vs hate thee,
Life would not yeelde to age.
Oldm. O my good Lord, I haue bene your Tenant,
And your Fathers Tenant, these fourescore yeares.
Glou. Away, get thee away: good Friend be gone,
Thy comforts can do me no good at all,
Thee, they may hurt.
Oldm. You cannot see your way.
Glou. I haue no way, and therefore want no eyes:
I stumbled when I saw. Full oft 'tis seene,
Our means secure vs, and our meere defects
Proue our Commodities. Oh dere Sonne Edgar,
The food of thy abused Fathers wrath:
Might I but liue to see thee in my touch,
I'd say I had eyes again.
Oldm. How now? who's there?
Edg. O Gods! Who is't can say I am at the worst?
I am worse then ere I was.
Old. 'Tis poore mad Tom.
Edg. And worse I may be yet: the worst is not,
So long as we can say this is the worst
Oldm. Fellow, where goest?
Glou. Is it a Beggar-man?
Oldm. Madman, and beggar too.
Glou. He has some reason, else he could not beg.
I'th'last nights storme, I such a fellow saw,
Which made me thinke a Man, a Worme. My Sonne
Came then into my minde, and yet my minde
Was then scarse Friends with him.
I haue heard more since:
As Flies to wanton Boyes, are we to th'Gods,
They kill vs for their sport.
Edg. How should this be?
Bad is the Trade that must play Foole to sorrow,
Ang'ring it selfe, and others. Bless thee Master.
Glou. Is that the naked Fellow?
Oldm. I, my Lord.
Glou. Get thee away: If for my sake
Thou wilt ore-take vs hence a mile or twaine
I'th'way toward Douer, do it for ancient loue,
And bring some couering for this naked Soule,
Which I'le intreate to leade me.
Old. Alacke sir, he is mad

Glou. 'Tis the times plagues,
When Madmen leade the blinde:
Do as I bid thee, or rather do thy pleasure:
Above the rest, be gone.
Olds. Ile bring him the best Parrell that I have Come on't, what will. Exit
Glou. Sirrah, naked fellow.
Edg. Poore Tom's a cold. I cannot daub it further.
Glou. Come hither fellow.
Edg. And yet I must:
Bleſſe thy ſweeme eyes, they bleede.
Glou. Know'ſt thou the way to Dover?
Edg. Both Style, and gate; Horſeway, and foot-path:
poore Tom hath bin ſcar'd out of his good wits. Bleſſe thee good man's ſonne, from the foule Fiend.
Glou. Here take this purſe, ſ whom the heav'ns plagues
Have humbled to all ſtrokes: that I am wretched
Makes thee the happier: Heavens deale ſo ſtill:
Let the ſuperfluous, and Loſt-dieted man,
That ſlaves your ordinance, that will not ſee
Becauſe he do's not feele, feele your powre quickly:
So diſtribution ſhould vndoe exceſſe,
And each man have enough. Doſt thou know Dover?
Edg. I Maſter.
Glou. There is a Cliffe, whoſe high and bending head
Looke fearfully in the confined Deepe:
Bring me but to the very brimme of it,
And Ile repayre the miſery thou do'ſt beare
With ſomething rich about me: from that place,
I ſhall no leading neede.
Edg. Give me thy arme;
Poore Tom ſhall leade thee. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Gonerill, Baſtard, and Steward.

Gon. Welcome my Lord. I marvell our mild husband
Not met us on the way. Now, where's your Maſter?
Stew. Madam within, but never man ſo chang'd:
I told him of the Army that was Landed:
He ſmil'd at it. I told him you were comming,
His anſwer was, the worſe. Of Gloſter's Treachery,
And of the loyall Service of his Sonne
When I informd him, then he call'd me Sot,
And told me I had turn'd the wrong ſide out:
What moſt he ſhould diſlike, ſeemes pleaſant to him;
What like, offenſive.
Gon. Then ſhall you go no farther.
It is the Cowiſh terror of his ſpirit
That dares not vndertake: He'l not feele wrongs
Which tye him to an anſwer: our wiſhes on the way
May prove effects. Backe Edmond to my Brother,
Haſten his Muſters, and conduct his powres.
I muſt change names at home, and give the Diſtaſte
Into my Husbands hands. This truſtie Servant
Shall paſſe betweene vs: ere long you are like to heare
(If you dare venture in your own behalfe)
A Miſtreſſes command. Wear this; ſpare ſpeech,
Decline your head. This kiſſe, if it durſt ſpeake
Would ſtretch thy Spirits vp into the aye
Concerne, and ſure thou well.
Baſt. Yours in the ranks of death. Exit.
Gon. My moſt deare Gloſter.
Oh, the difference of man, and man,
To thee a Womans ſervices are due,
My Foole vſurpes my body.
Stew. Madam, here come's my Lord.
Enter Albany.
Gon. I have beene worth the whiſtle.
Alb. Oh Gonerill,
You are not worth the duſt which the rude winde
Blowes in your face.
Gon. Milke-Liver'd man,
That bear'ſt a cheeke for blowes, a head for wrongs,
Who haſt not in thy browes an eye-diſcerning
Thine Honor, from thy ſuffering.
Alb. See thy ſelfe diveli:
Proper deformitie ſeemes not in the Fiend
So horrid as in woman.
Gon. Oh vaine Foole.
Enter a Meſſenger.
Meſ. Oh my good Lord, the Duke of Cornwall dead,
Slaine by his Servant, going to put out
The other eye of Gloucſter.
Alb. Gloucſters eyes.
Meſ. A Servant that he bred, thrill'd with remorſe,
Oppoſ'd againſt the act: bending his Sword
To his great Maſter, who, threat-enrag'd
Flew on him, and amongſt them fell'd him dead,
But not without that harmefull ſtroke, which ſince
Hath pluckt him after.
Alb. This ſhewes you are above
You Iuſtices, that theſe our neather crimes
So ſpeedily can venge. But (O poore Gloucſter)
Loſt he his other eye?
Meſ. Both, both, my Lord.
This Letter Madam, comes a ſpeedy anſwer:
'Tis from your Siſter.
Gon. One way I like this well,
But being widdow, and my Gloucſter with her,
May all the building in my fancie pluckt
Vpon my hateful life. Another way
The Newes is not ſo tart. Ile read, and anſwer.
Alb. Where was his Sonne,
When they did take his eyes?
Meſ. Come with my Lady hither.
Alb. He is not here.
Meſ. No my good Lord, I met him backe againe.
Alb. Knowes he the wickednes?
Meſ. I my good Lord: 'twas he informd againſt him
And quit the houſe on purpoſe, that their puniſhment
Might have the freer courſe.
Alb. Gloucſter, I live
To thanke thee for the love thou ſhew'ſt the King,
And to revenge thine eyes. Come hither Friend,
Tell me what more thou know'ſt. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter with Drum and Colours, Cordelia, Gentlemen, and Souldiours.

Cor. Alacke, 'tis he: why he was met even now
As mad as the vext Sea, ſinging alowd,
Crown'd with rankeſt Fenitar, and ſurrow weeds,
With Hardokes, Hemlocke, Nettles, Cuckoo flowers,
Dunnet

Darnell, and all the idle weedes that grow
In our sustaining Corne. A Cencery send forth;
Search every Acre in the high-growne field,
And bring him to our eye. What can more wisedome
In the restoring his bereaved Sense; he that helpes him,
Take all my outward worth.

Gon. There is meanes Madam:
Our foster Nurse of Nature, is repose,
The which he lackes: that to provoke in him
Are many Simples operative, whose power
Will close the eye of Anguish.

Cord. All blest Secrets,
All you vnpublish'd Vertues of the earth
Spring with my teares; be aydant, and remediate
In the Goodmans desires: seeke, seeke for him,
Lest his vngouern'd rage, dissolue the life
That wants the meanes to leade it.

Enter Messenger.

Mes. Newes Madam,
The British Powres are marching hitherward.

Cor. 'Tis knowne before. Our preparation stands
In expectation of them. O deere Father,
It is thy business that I go about: Therfore great France
My mourning, and importun'd teares hath pittied:
No blowne Ambition doth our Armes incite,
But loue, deere loue, and our ag'd Fathers Rite:
Soone may I heare, and see him Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Regan, and Steward.

Reg. But are my Brothers Powres set forth?

Stew. I Madam.

Reg. Himselfe in person there?

Stew. Madam with much ado:
Your Sister is the better Souldier.

Reg. Lord Edmund spake not with your Lord at home?

Stew. No Madam.

Reg. What might import my Sisters Letter to him?

Stew I know not, Lady.

Reg. Faith he is posted hence on serious matter:
It was great ignorance, Gloucsters eyes being out
To let him liue. Where he arriues, he moues
All hearts against vs: Edmund, I thinke is gone
In pity of his misery, to dispatch
His nighted life: Moreouer to descry
The strength o'th'Enemy.

Stew. I must needs after him, Madam, with my Letter.

Reg. Our troopes set forth to morrow, stay with vs:
The wayes are dangerous.

Stew. I may not Madam:
My Lady charg'd my duble in this busines.

Reg. Why should she write to Edmund?
Might not you transport her purposes by word? Belike,
Some things, I know not what. Ile loue thee much
Let me vnseale the Letter.

Stew. Madam, I had rather———

Reg. I know your Lady do's not loue her Husband,
I am sure of that: and at her late being heere,
She gaue strange Eliads, and most speaking looks
To Noble Edmund. I know you are of her bosome.

Stew. I, Madam?

Reg. I speake in vnderstanding: Yiere: I know't.
Therefore I do aduise you take this note:
My Lord is dead: Edmund, and I haue talk'd,
And more concernes is he for my hand
Then for your Ladies: You may gather more:
If you do finde him, pray you giue him this,
And when your Mistris heares thus much from you,
I pray desire her call her wisedome to her.
So fare you well:
If you do chance to heare of that blinde Traitor,
Preferment falls on him, that cuts him off.

Stew. Would I could meet Madam, I should show
What party I do follow.

Reg. Fare thee well Exeunt.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Gloucester, and Edgar.

Glou. When shall I come to th'top of that same hill?

Edg. You do climbe vp it now. Look how we labor.

Glou. Me thinkes the ground is eeuen.

Edg. Horrible steepe.
Hearke, do you heare the Sea?

Glou. No truly.

Edg. Why then your other Senses grow imperfect
By your eyes anguish.

Glou. So may it be indeed.
Me thinkes thy voyce is alter'd, and thou speak'st
In better phrase, and matter then thou did'st.

Edg. Y'are much deceiu'd: In nothing am I chang'd
But in my Garments.

Glou. Me thinkes y'are better spoken.

Edg. Come on Sir,
Heere's the place: stand still: how fearefull
And dizie 'tis, to cast ones eyes so low,
The Crowes and Choughes, that wing the midding aye
Shew scarse so grosse as Beetles. Halfe way downe
Hangs one that gathers Sampire: dreadfull Trade:
Me thinkes he seemes no bigger then his head.
The Fishermen, that walk'd vpon the beach
Appeare like Mice: and yond tall Anchoring Barke,
Diminish'd to her Cocke: her Cocke, a Buoy
Almost too small for sight. The murmuring Surge,
That on th'vnumbered idle Pebble chafes
Cannot be heard so high. Ile looke no more,
Least my braine turne, and the deficient sight
Topple downe headlong.

Glou Set me where you stand.

Edg. Giue me your hand:
You are now within a foote of th'extreme Verge:
For all beneath the Moone would I not leape vpright.

Glou. Let go my hand.
Heere Friend's another purse: in it, a Jewell
Well worth a poore mans taking. Fayries, and Gods
Prosper it with thee. Go thou further off,
Bid me farewell, and let me heare thee going.

Edg. Now fare ye well, good Sir.

Glou. With all my heart.

Edg. Why I do trifle thus with his dispaire,
Is done to cure it.

Glou. O you mighty Gods!
This world I do renounce, and in your sights

Shake

Shake patiently my great affliction off:
It I could beare it longer, and not fall
To quarrell with your great opposeless wilfull,
My teares, and broken pert of Nature should
Burne in self-ore. If Edgar live, O bless him:
Now Fellow, fare thee well.

Edg. Gone Sir, farewell:
And yet I know not how conceit may rob
The Treasury of life, when life it self
Yeelds to the Theft. Had he bin where he thought,
By this had thought bin past. Aliue, or dead?
Hoa, you Sir: Friend, heare you Sir, speake:
Thus might he pass indeed: yet he reuiues.
What are you Sir?

Glou. Away, and let me dye.

Edg. Had'st thou beene aught
But Gossamore, Feathers, Ayre,
(So many fathome downe precipitating)
Thou'dst shiuer'd like an Egge: but thou do'st breath:
Hast healthy sublstance, bleed'st not, speak'st, art sound,
Ten Mastes at each, make not the altitude
Which thou hast perpendicularly fell,
Thy life's a Myracle. Speake yet againe.

Glou. But have I fallen, or no?

Edg. From the dreadd Sommet of this Chalkie Bourne
Looke vp a height, the shrill-gorg'd Larke so farre
Cannot be seene, or heard: Do but looke vp.

Glou. Alacke, I have no eyes:
Is wretchednesse deprive that benefit
To end it falle by death? Twas yet some comfort
When misery could beguile the Tyrants rage,
And frustrate his proud will.

Edg. Giue me your arme.
Vp, so: How is't? Feele you your Legges? You stand.

Glou. Too well, too well.

Edg. This is above all strangeneffe,
Vpon the crowne o'th'Cliffe. What thing was that
Which parted from you?

Glou. A poore vnfortunate Beggar.

Edg. As I stood heere below, me thought his eyes
Were two full Moones: he had a thousand Noses,
Horns wealk'd, and waued like the enraged Sea:
It was some Fiend: Therefore thou happy Father,
Think that the clearest Gods, who make them Honors
Of meere Impossibilities, haue preserued thee.

Glou. I do remember now: henceforth Ile beare
Affliction, till it do cry out it selfe
Enough, enough, and die. That thing you speake of,
I cloube it for a man: often 'twould say
The Fiend, the Fiend, he led me to that place.

Edgar. Beare free and patient thoughts.

Enter Lear.

But who comes heere?
The safer sense will ne're accommodate
His Master thus.

Lear. No, they cannot touch me for crying. I am the King himselfe.

Edg. O thou side-piercing sight!

Lear. Nature's above Art, in that respect. There's your Prese-money. That fellow handles his bow, like a Crow-keeper: drew meat a Clothiers yard. Looke, looke, a Mouse: peace, peace, this peece of toasted Cheese will doe't. There's my Gauntlet, Ile prove it on a Gyant. Bring vp the browne Bills. O well flown Bird: I'th' clout, i'th' clout: Hewgh. Give the word.

Edg. Sweet Marioram.

Lear. Passe.

Glou. I know that voice.

Lear. Ha! Gonerill with a white beard? They flatter'd me like a Dogge, and told mee I had the white hayres in my Beard, ere the blacke ones were there. To say I, and no, to every thing that I said: I, and no too, was no good Diuinity. When the rains came to wet me once, and the winde to make me chatter: when the Thunder would not peace at my bidding, there I found 'em, there I smelt 'em out. Go too, they are not men o'their words: they told me, I was every thing: 'Tis a Lye, I am not Ague-proofe.

Glou. The tricke of that voyce, I do well remember: Is't not the King?

Lear. I, every inch a King.
When I do stare, see how the Subiect quakes.
I pardon that man's life. What was thy cause?
Adultery? thou shalt not dye: dye for Adultery?
No, the Wren goes too't, and the small gilded Fly
Do's lecher in my sight. Let Copulation thriue:
For Glouster's bastard Son was kinder to his Father,
Than my Daughters got 'tweene the lawfull sheets.
Too't Luxury pell-mell, for I lacke Souldiers.
Behold yond simpring Dame, whose face betweene her
Forkes presages Snow; that minces Vertue, & do's shake the head to heare of pleasures name. The Fitchew, nor the soyled Horse goes too't with a more riotous appetite. Downe from the waste they are Centaures, though Women all above: but to the Girdle do the Gods inherit, beneath is all the Fiends. There's hell, there's darkeness, there is the sulphurous pit; burning, scalding stench, consumption: Fye, fie, fie; pah, pah: Giue me an Ounce of Cinet; good Apothecary sweeten my imagination:
There's money for thee.

Glou. O let me kisse that hand.

Lear. Let me wipe it first,
It smellies of Mortality.

Glou. O reu'd peece of Nature, this great world
Shall so wease out to naught.
Do'st thou know me?

Lear. I remember thine eyes well enough: dost thou squint at me? No, doe thy worst blinde Cupid, Ile not loue. Reade thou this challenge, marke but the penning of it.

Glou. Were all thy Letters Suns, I could not see.

Edg. I would not take this from report,
It is, and my heart breakes at it.

Lear. Read.

Glou. What with the Case of eyes?

Lear. Oh ho, are you there with me? No eies in your head, nor no money in your purse? Your eyes are in a heavy case, your purse in a light, yet you see how this world goes.

Glou. I see it feelingly.

Lear. What, art mad? A man may see how this world goes, with no eyes. Looke with thine eares: See how yond Iustice railes vpon yond simple theefe. Hearke in thine eare: Change places, and handy-dandy, which is the Iustice, which is the theefe: Thou hast seene a Fur-mers dogge barke at a Begger?

Glou. I Sir.

Lear. And the Creature run from the Cur? Thou might'st behold the great image of Authoritie, a Dogg's obey'd in Office. Thou, Rascall Beadle, hold thy bloody hand: why dost thou lash that Whore? Strip thy owne backe, thou hoby lusts to vse her in that kind, for which thou whip'st her. The Vsurer hangs the Cozener. Thro-rough

rough caster'd cloathes great Vices do appeare: Robes, and Furr'd gowns hide all. Place sinnes with Gold, and the strong Lance of Iustice, hurtlesse breakes: Arme'n in ragges, a Pigmies straw do's pierce it. None do's offend, none, I say none, I'le able 'em; take that of me my Friend, who haue the power to seale th'accusers lips. Get thee glasse-eyes, and like a scurvy Politician, seeme to see the things thou dost not. Now, now, now, now. Pull off my Bootes: harder, harder, so.

Edg. O matter, and impertinency mixt, Reason in Madnesse.

Lear. If thou wilt weepe my Fortunes, take my eyes. I know thee well enough, thy name is Gloucster: Thou must be patient; we came crying hither: Thou know'st, the first time that we smell the Ayre We wawle, and cry. I will preach to thee: Marke.

Glou. Alacke, alacke the day.

Lear. When we are borne, we cry that we are come To this great stage of Fooles. This a good blocke: It were a delicate stratagem to shoo A Troope of Horse with Felt: Ile put't in proofe, And when I haue stolne vpon these Son in Lawes, Then kill, kill, kill, kill, kill, kill.

Enter a Gentleman.

Gent. Oh heere he is: lay hand vpon him, Sir. Your most deere Daughter ——

Lear. No rescue? What, a Prisoner? I am euen The Naturall Foole of Fortune. Vse me well, You shall haue ransome. Let me haue Surgeons, I am cut to'th'Braines.

Gent. You shall haue any thing.

Lear. No Seconds? All my feiste? Why, this would make a man, a man of Salt To vse his eyes for Garden water-pots. I wil die bravely, Like a smugge Bridegroome. What? I will be Iouiall: Come, come, I am a King, Masters, know you that?

Gent. You are a Royall one, and we obey you.

Lear. Then there's life in't. Come, and you get it, You shall get it by running: Sa, sa, sa, sa. Exit.

Gent. A sight most pitifull in the meanest wretch, Past speaking of in a King. Thou hast a Daughter Who redeemes Nature from the generall curse Which twaine haue brought her to.

Edg. Haile gentle Sir.

Gent. Sir, speed you: what's your will?

Edg. Do you heare ought (Sir) of a Battell toward.

Gent. Most sure, and vulgar: Euery one heares that, which can distinguish sound.

Edg. But by your fauour: How neere's the other Army?

Gent. Neere, and on speedy foot: the maine descry Stands on the hourely thought.

Edg. I thanke you Sir, that's all.

Gent. Though that the Queen on special cause is here Her Army is mou'd on. Exit.

Edg. I thanke you Sir.

Glou. You euer gentle Gods, take my breath from me, Let not my worser Spirit tempt me againe To dye before you please.

Edg. Well pray you Father.

Glou. Now good sir, what are you?

Edg. A most poore man, made tame to Fortunes blows Who, by the Art of knowne, and feeling sorrowes, Am pregnant to good pity. Give me your hand, I'le leade you to some biding.

Glou. Heartie thankes: The bounties, and the benisons of Heauen To boot, and boot.

Enter Steward.

Stew. A peoplesh'd prize: most happie That eyelesse head of thine, was first fram'd flesh To raise my fortunes. Thou old, vnhappy Traitor, Breefely thy selfe remember: the Sword is out That must destroy thee.

Glou. Now let thy friendly hand Put strength enough to't.

Stew. Wherefore, bold Peasant, Dar'st thou support a publish'd Traitor? Hence, Least that th'infection of his fortune take Like hold on thee. Let go his arme.

Edg. Chill not let go Zir, Without vurther 'casion.

Stew. Let go Slaue, or thou dy'st.

Edg. Good Gentleman goe your gaine, and let poore volke passe: and 'chud ha' bin zwaggerd out of my life, 'twould not ha'bin so long as 'tis, by a vortnight. Nay, come not neere th'old man: keepe out che vor ye, or ise try whether your Costard, or my Ballow be the harder; chill be plaine with you.

Stew. Out Dunghill.

Edg. Chill picke your teeth Zir: come, no matter vor your foynes.

Stew. Slaue thou hast slaine me: Villain, take my purse; If euer thou wilt thriue, bury my bodie, And give the Letters which thou find'st about me, To Edmund Earle of Gloucster: seeke him out Vpon the English party. Oh vntimely death, death.

Edg. I know thee well. A seruiceable Villaine, As dutefull to the vices of thy Mistris, As badnesse would desire.

Glou. What, is he dead?

Edg. Sit you down Father: rest you. Let's see these Pockets; the Letters that he speakes of May be my Friends: he's dead; I am only sorry He had no other Deathsman. Let vs see: Leaue gentle wax, and manners: blame vs not To know our enemies minds, we rip their hearts, Their Papers is more lawfull.

Reads the Letter.

Let our reciprocall vowes be remembred. You haue many opportunities to cut him off: if your will want not, time and place will be frutefully offer'd. There is writing deliu'd of the receipt of the Conqueror, when ever I the Prisoner, and he bid my Gaole, from the bottled mouth whereof, do mine one, and pay the place for your Labour.

Your (wife, so I would say) affectionate Seruant. Gonerill.

Oh indigestion'd spaces of Women will, A plot vpon her vertuous Husbands life, And the exchange my Brother: heere in the sands Thee I'le rake vp, the post vnsanctified Of murtherous Lechers: and in the mature time, With this vngracious paper strike the sight Of the death-practis'd Duke: for him 'tis well, That of thy death, and business, I can tell.

Glou. The King is mad: How stiffe is my vilde sense That I stand vp, and haue ingenious feeling Of my huge Sorrowes? Better I were distract, So should my thoughts be seuer'd from my griefes, Drum afarre off.

And woes, by wrong imaginations lose

The knowledge of themselues.
Edg. Giue me your hand:
Farre off methinkes I heare the beaten Drumme.
Come Father, Ile beffow you with a Friend. Exeunt.

Scena Septima.

Enter Cordelia, Kent, and Gentlemen.

Cor. O thou good Kent,
How shall I liue and worke
To match thy goodneſſe?
My life will be too ſhort,
And every meaſure faile me.
Kent. To be acknowledg'd Madam is o're-pai'd,
All my reports go with the modeſt truth,
Nor more, nor clipt, but ſo.
Cor. Be better ſuited,
Theſe weedes are memories of thoſe worſer houres:
I prythee put them off.
Kent. Pardon deere Madam,
Yet to be knowne ſhortens my made intent,
My boone I make it, that you know me not,
Till time, and I, thinke meete.
Cor. Then be't ſo my good Lord:
How do's the King?
Gent. Madam ſleepes ſtill.
Cor. O you kind Gods!
Cure this great breach in his abuſed Nature,
Th'vnſtun'd and ſtarring ſenſes, O wonde vp,
Of this childe-changed Father.
Gent. So pleaſe your Maieſty,
That we may wake the King, he hath ſlept long?
Cor. Be gouern'd by your knowledge, and proceede
I'th'ſway of your owne will: is he array'd?

Enter Lear in a chaire carried by Seruants.

Gent. I Madam: in the heauineſſe of ſleepe,
We put freſh garments on him.
Be by good Madam when we do awake him,
I doubt of his Temperance.
Cor. O my deere Father, reſtauration hang
Thy medicine on my lippes, and let this kiſſe
Repaire thoſe violent harmes, that my two Siſters
Haue in thy Reuerence made.
Kent. Kind and deere Princeſſe.
Cor. Had you not bin their Father, theſe white flakes
Did challenge pitty of them. Was this a face
To be oppoſ'd againſt the iarring winde?
Mine Enemies dogge, though he had bit me,
Should haue ſtood that night againſt my fire,
And wa'ſt thou faine (poore Father)
To houell thee with Swine and Rogues forlorne,
In ſhort, and mufty ſtraw? Alacke, alacke,
'Tis wonder that thy life and wits, at once
Had not concluded all. He wakes, ſpeake to him.
Gent. Madam do you, 'tis fitteſt.
Cor. How does my Royall Lord?
How fares your Maieſty?
Lear. You do me wrong to take me out o'th'graue,
Thou art a Soule in bliſſe, but I am bound
Vpon a wheele of fire, that mine owne teares
Do ſcal'd like moltan Lead.
Cor. Sir, do you know me?
Lear. You are a ſpirit I know, where did you dye?
Cor. Still, ſtill, far wide.
Gent. He's ſcarſe awake,
Let him alone a while.
Lear. Where haue I bin?
Where am I? Faire day light?
I am mightily abus'd; I ſhould eu'n dye with pitty
To ſee another thus. I know not what to ſay:
I will not ſweare theſe are my hands: let's ſee,
I feele this pin pricke, would I were aſſur'd
Of my condition.
Cor. O looke vpon me Sir,
And hold your hand in benediction o're me,
You muſt not kneele.
Lear. Pray do not mocke me:
I am a very foolifh fond old man,
Fourecſcore and vpward,
Not an houre more, nor leſſe:
And to deale plainely,
I feare I am not in my perfect mind.
Me thinkes I ſhould know you, and know this man,
Yet I am doubtfull: For I am mainely ignorant
What place this ſtrand all the ſkill I haue
Remembers not theſe garments: nor I know not
Where I did lodge laſt night. Do not laugh at me,
For (as I am a man) I thinke this Lady
To be my childe Cordelia.
Cor. And ſo I am: I am.
Lear. Be your teares wet?
Yes faith: I pray weepe not,
If you haue poyſon for me, I will drinke it:
I know you do not loue me, for your Siſters
Haue (as I do remember) done me wrong.
You haue ſome cauſe, they haue not.
Cor. No cauſe, no cauſe.
Lear. Am I in France?
Kent. In your owne kingdome Sir.
Lear. Do not abuſe me.
Gent. Be comforted good Madam, the great rage
You ſee is kill'd in him: deſire him to go in,
Trouble him no more till further ſettling.
Cor. Will pleaſe your Highneſſe walke?
Lear. You muſt beare with me:
Pray you now forget, and forgiue,
I am old and foolifh. Exeunt.

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter with Drumme and Colours, Edmund, Regan, Gentlemen, and Souldiers.

Bast. Know of the Duke if his laſt purpoſe hold,
Or whether ſince he is aduiſ'd by ought
To change the courſe, he's full of alteration,
And ſelfe-reproaching, bring his conſtant pleaſure.
Reg. Our Siſters man is certainely miſcarried.
Bast. 'Tis to be doubted Madam.
Reg. Now ſweet Lord,

You know the goodnesse I intend vpon you:
Tell me but truly, but then speake the truth,
Do you not loue my Sister?
Bast. In honour'd Loue.
Reg. But haue you never found my Brothers way,
To the forfended place?
Bast. No by mine honour, Madam.
Reg. I never shall endure her, deere my Lord
Be not familiar with her.
Bast. Feare not, she and the Duke her husband.

Enter with Drum and Colours, Albany, Gonerill, Souldiers.

Alb. Our very loving Sister, well be-met:
Sir, this I heard, the King is come to his Daughter
With others, whom the rigour of our State
Forc'd to cry out.
Regan. Why is this reason'd?
Gon. Combine together 'gainst the Enemie:
For these domesticke and particular broiles,
Are not the question heere.
Alb. Let's then determine with th'ancient of warre
On our proceeding.
Reg. Sister you'le go with vs?
Gon. No.
Reg. 'Tis most conuenient, pray go with vs.
Gon. Oh ho, I know the Riddle. I will goe.
Exeunt both the Armies.

Enter Edgar.

Edg. If ere your Grace had speech with man so poore,
Heare me one word.
Alb. Ile ouertake you, speake.
Edg. Before you fight the Battaile, ope this Letter:
If you haue victory, let the Trumpet sound
For him that brought it: wretched though I seeme,
I can produce a Champion, that will proue
What is vouched there. If you miscarry,
Your business of the world hath so an end,
And machination ceases. Fortune loues you.
Alb. Stay till I haue read the Letter.
Edg. I was forbid it:
When time shall serue, let but the Herald cry,
And I'le appeare again. Exit.
Alb. Why fare thee well, I will o're-looke thy paper

Enter Edmund.

Bast. The Enemy's in view, draw vp your powers,
Heere is the guesse of their true strength and Forces,
By diligent discouerie, but your haste
Is now req'd on you.
Alb. We will greet the time Exit.
Bast. To both these Sisters haue I sworne my loue:
Each iealous of the other, as the stung
Are of the Adder. Which of them shall I take?
Both? One? Or neither? Neither can be enioy'd
If both remaine alive: To take the Widdow,
Exasperates, makes mad her Sister Gonerill,
And hardly shall I carry out my side,
Her husband being alive. Now then, we'l vse
His countenance for the Battaile, which being done,
Let her who would be rid of him, deuise
His speedy taking off. As for the mercie
Which he intends to Lear and to Cordelia,
The Battaile done, and they within our power,
Shall neuer see his pardon: for my state,
Stands on me to defend, not to obtaine. Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Alarum within. Enter with Drumme and Colours, Lear, Cordelia, and Souldiers, ouer the Stage, and Exeunt.

Enter Edgar, and Gloster.

Edg. Heere Father, take the shadow of this Tree
For your good host: pray that the right may thriue:
If ever I returne to you again,
Ile bring you comfort.
Glo. Grace go with you Sir. Exit.
Alarum and Retreat within.
Enter Edgar.
Edgar. Away old man, give me thy hand, away:
King Lear hath lost, he and his Daughter ta'ne,
Give me thy hand: Come on.
Glo. No further Sir, a man may rot even heere.
Edg. What in ill thoughts again?
Men must endure
Their going hence, even as their coming hither,
Ripenesse is all come on.
Glo. And that's true too. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter in conquest with Drum and Colours, Edmund, Lear, and Cordelia, as prisoners, Souldiers, Captaine.

Bast. Some Officers take them away: good guard,
Vntill their greater pleasures first be knowne
That are to censure them.
Cor. We are not the first,
Who with best meaning haue incurr'd the worst:
For thee oppressed King I am cast downe,
My selfe could else out-frowne false Fortunes frowns.
Shall we not see these Daughters, and these Sisters?
Lear. No, no, no, no: come let's away to prison,
We two alone will sing like Birds i'th'Cage:
When thou dost aske me blessing, Ile kneele downe
And aske of thee forgiuenesse: So we'l liue,
And pray, and sing, and tell old tales, and laugh
At gilded Butterflies: and heere (poore Rogues)
Talke of Court newes, and we'l talke with them too,
Who loose, and who winne; who's in, who's out;
And take vpon's the mystery of things,
As if we were Gods spies: And we'l weare out
In a wall'd prison, packs and sects of great ones,
That ebbe and flow by th'Moone.
Bast. Take them away.
Lear. Vpon such sacrifices my Cordelia,
The Gods themselues throw Incense.
Haue I caught thee?
He that parts vs, shall bring a Brand from Heaven,
And fire vs hence, like Foxes: wipe thine eyes.
The good yeares shall deuoure them, flesh and fell,

Ere

Ere they shall make vs weepe?
We'le see e'm starv'd first: come. Exit.
Bast. Come hither Captaine, hearke.
Take thou this note, go follow them to prison,
One step I have advanc'd thee, if thou do'st
As this instructs thee, thou dost make thy way
To Noble Fortunes: know thou this, that men
Are as the time is; to be tender minded
Do's not become a Sword, thy great imployment
Will not bear question; either say thou'st do't,
Or thrive by other meanes.
Cap. I'le do't my Lord.
Bast. About it, and write happy, when th'hast done,
Marke I say instantly, and carry it so
As I have set it downe. Exit Captaine.

Flourish. Enter Albany, Gonerill, Regan, Souldiers.

Alb. Sir, you have shew'd to day your valiant strine
And Fortune led you well: you have the Captives
Who were the opposites of this dayes strife:
I do require them of you so to vse them,
As we shall find their merites, and our safety
May equally determine.
Bast. Sir, I thought it fit,
To send the old and miserable King to some retention,
Whose age has Charmes in it, whose Title more,
To pluck the common bosome on his side,
And turne our imprest Lances in our eies
Which do command them. With him I sent the Queene:
My reason all the same, and they are ready
To morrow, or at further space, t'appeare
Where you shall hold your Session.
Alb. Sir, by your patience,
I hold you but a subiect of this Warre,
Not as a Brother.
Reg. That's as we list to grace him.
Methinkes our pleasure might have bin demanded
Ere you had spoke so farre. He led our Powers,
Bore the Commission of my place and person,
The which immediacie may well stand vp,
And call it selfe your Brother.
Gon. Not so hot:
In his owne grace he doth exalt himselfe,
More than in your addition.
Reg. In my rights,
By me invested, he compeers the best.
Alb. That were the most, if he should husband you.
Reg. Iesters do oft prove Prophets.
Gon. Hola, hola,
That eye that told you so, look'd but a squint.
Reg. Lady I am not well, else I should answer
From a full flowing stomach. Generall,
Take thou my Souldiers, prisoners, peculiar,
Dispose of them, of me, the walls is thine:
Witnesse the world, that I create thee heere
My Lord, and Master.
Gon. Meane you to enioy him?
Alb. The let alone lies not in your good will.
Bast. Nor in thine Lord.
Alb. Half-blood ed fellow, yes.
Reg. Let the Drum strike, and prove my title thine.
Alb. Stay yet, heare reason: Edmund, I arrest thee
On capitall Treason; and in thy arrest,
This guilded Serpent: for your claime fair Sisters,
I bare it in the interest of my wife,
'Tis she is sub-contracted to this Lord,
And I her husband contradict your Bans.
If you will marry, make your loues to me,
My Lady is bespoke.
Gon. An enterlude.
Alb. Thou art armed Glester,
Let the Trumpet sound:
If none appeare to prove vpon thy person,
Thy heynous, manifest, and mony Treasons,
There is my pledge: I'le make it on thy heart
Ere I taste bread, thou art in nothing less
Than I have here proclaim'd thee.
Reg. Sicke, O sicke.
Gon. If not, I'le ne're trust medicine.
Bast. There's my exchange, what in the world he is
That names me Traitor, villain-like he lies,
Call by the Trumpet: he that dares approach;
On him, on you, who not, I will maintaine
My truth and honor firmely.

Enter a Herald.

Alb. A Herald, ho.
Trust to thy single vertue, for thy Souldiers
All leaued in my name, haue in my name
Took their discharge.
Regan. My sicknesse growes vpon me.
Alb. She is not well, conuey her to my Tent.
Come hither Herald, let the Trumpet sound,
And read out this. A Trumpet sounds.

Herald reads.

If any man of qualitie or degree, within the lists of the Army, will maintaine vpon Edmund, supposed Earle of Glester, that he is a manifold Traitor, let him appeare by the third sound of the Trumpet: he is bold in his defence. 1 Trumpet.
Her. Againe. 2 Trumpet.
Her. Againe. 3 Trumpet.
Trumpet answers within.

Enter Edgar armed.

Alb. Aske him his purposes, why he appeares
Vpon this Call o'th'Trumpet.
Her. What are you?
Your name, your quality, and why you answer
This present Summons?
Edg. Know my name is lost
By Treasons tooth: bare-gnewne, and Canker-bit,
Yet am I Noble as the Adversary
I come to cope.
Alb. Which is that Adversary?
Edg. What's he that speakes for Edmund Earle of Glo-
Bast. Himselfe, what saist thou to him? (ster?
Edg. Draw thy Sword.
That if my speech offend a Noble heart,
Thy arme may do thee Iustice, heare is mine:
Behold it is my priuiledge,
The priuiledge of mine Honours,
My oath, and my profession. I protest,
Maugre thy strength, place, youth, and eminence,
Despite thy victor-Sword, and fire new Fortune,
Thy valor, and thy heart, thou art a Traitor:
False to thy Gods, thy Brother, and thy Father,
Conspirant 'gainst this high illustrious Prince,
And from th'extremest vpward of thy head,
To the discent and dust below thy foote,

A most Toad-spotted Traitor. Say thou no,
This Sword, this arme, and my best spirits are bent
To prouse vpon thy heart, whereto I speake,
Thou lyest.

Bast. In wisedome I should aske thy name,
But since thy out-side lookes so faire and Warlike,
And that thy tongue (some say) of breeding breathes,
What safe, and nicely I might well delay,
By rule of Knight-hood, I disdaine and spurne:
Backe do I tosse these Treasons to thy head,
With the hell-hated Lye, ore-whelme thy heart,
Which for they yet glance by, and scarely bruise,
This Sword of mine shall giue them instant way,
Where they shall rest for euer. Trumpets speake.

Alb. Saue him, saue him. Alarums. Fights.

Gon. This is practise Gloster,
By th'law of Warre, thou wast not bound to answer
An vnknowne opposite: thou art not vanquish'd,
But cozend, and beguild.

Alb. Shut your mouth Dame,
Or with this paper shall I stop it: hold Sir,
Thou worse then any name, reade thine owne euill:
No tearing Lady, I perceiue you know it.

Gon. Say if I do, the Lawes are mine not thine,
Who can araigne me for't? Exit.

Alb. Most monstrous! O, know'st thou this paper?

Bast. Ask me not what I know.

Alb. Go after her, she's desperate, gouerne her.

Bast. What you haue charg'd me with,
That haue I done,
And more, much more, the time will bring it out.
'Tis past, and so am I: But what art thou
That hast this Fortune on me? If thou'rt Noble,
I do forgiue thee.

Edg. Let's exchange charity:
I am no lesse in blood then thou art Edmund,
If more, the more th'hast wrong'd me.
My name is Edgar and thy Fathers Sonne,
The Gods are iust, and of our pleasant vices
Make instruments to plague vs:
The darke and vitious place where thee he got,
Cost him his eyes.

Bast. Th'hast spoken right, 'tis true,
The Wheele is come full circle, I am heere.

Alb. Me thought thy very gaze did prophesie
A Royall Noblenesse: I must embrace thee,
Let sorrow split my heart, if euer I
Did hate thee, or thy Father.

Edg. Worthy Prince I know'e.

Alb. Where hast you hid your selfe?
How haue you knowne the miseries of your Father?

Edg. By nursing them my Lord. List a breefe tale,
And when 'tis told, O that my heart would burst.
The bloody proclamation to escape
That follow'd me so neere, (O our lives sweetnesse,
That we the paine of death would hourely dye,
Rather then die at once) taught me to shift
Into a mad-mans rags, t'assume a semblance
That very Dogges disdain'd: and in this habit
Met I my Father with his bleeding Rings,
Their precious Stones new lost: become his guide,
Led him, begg'd for him, saw'd him from dispaire.
Never (O fault) reuel'd my selfe vnto him,
Vntill some halfe houre past when I was arm'd,
Not sure, though hoping of this good successe,
I ask'd his blessing, and from first to last
Told him our pilgrimage. But his flaw'd heart
(Alacke too weake the conflict to support)
Twixt two extremes of passion, ioy and griefe,
Burst smilingly.

Bast. This speech of yours hath mou'd me,
And shall perchance do good: but speake you on,
You looke as you had something more to say.

Alb. If there be more, more woefull, hold it in,
For I am almost ready to dissolue,
Hearing of this.

Enter a Gentleman.

Gen. Helpe, helpe: O helpe.

Edg. What kinde of helpe?

Alb. Speake man.

Edg. What meanes this bloody Knife?

Gen. 'Tis hot, it smokes, it came euen from the heart of——O she's dead.

Alb. Who dead? Speake man.

Gen. Your Lady Sir, your Lady; and her Sister
By her is poyson'd: she confesses it.

Bast. I was contracted to them both, all three
Now marry in an instant.

Edg. Here comes Kent.

Enter Kent.

Alb. Produce the bodies, be they aliue or dead:
Gonerill and Regans bodies brought out.
This iudgement of the Heauens that makes vs tremble
Touches vs not with pitty: O, is this he?
The time will not allow the complement
Which very manners vrges.

Kent. I am come
To bid my King and Master aye good night.
Is he not here?

Alb. Great thing of vs forgot,
Speake Edmund, where's the King? and where's Cordelia?
Seest thou this object Kent?

Kent. Alacke, why thus?

Bast. Yet Edmund was belou'd:
The one the other poison'd for my sake,
And after slew herselfe.

Alb. Euen so: couer their faces.

Bast. I pant for life: some good I meane to do
Despight of mine owne Nature. Quickly send,
(Be briefe in it) to th Castle, for my Writ
Is on the life of Lear, and on Cordelia:
Nay, send in time.

Alb. Run, run, O run.

Edg. To who my Lord? Who has the Office?
Send thy token of repreeue.

Bast. Well thought on, take my Sword,
Giue it the Captaine.

Edg. Haste thee for thy life.

Bast. He hath Commission from thy Wife and me,
To hang Cordelia in the prison, and
To lay the blame vpon her owne dispaire,
That she for-did her selfe.

Alb. The Gods defend her, beare him hence awhile.

Enter Lear with Cordelia in his armes.

Lear. Howle, howle, howle: O your are men of stones,
Had I your tongues and eyes, I'd vse them so,
That Heauens vault should crack: she's gone for euer.
I know when one is dead, and when one liues,
She's dead as earth: Lend me a Looking-glasse,

If that her breath will mist or staine the stone,
Why then she lives.
Kent. Is this the promis'd end?
Edg. Or image of that horror.
Alb. Fall and cease.
Lear. This feather stirs, she lives: if it be so,
It is a chance which do's redeeme all sorrowes
That ever I have felt.
Kent. O my good Master.
Lear. Prythee away.
Edg. 'Tis Noble Kent your Friend.
Lear. A plague vpon you Murderous, Traitors all,
I might have saw'd her, now she's gone for ever:
Cordelia, Cordelia, stay a little. Ha:
What is't thou saist? Her voice was ever soft,
Gentle, and low, an excellent thing in woman.
I kill'd the Slave that was a hanging thee.
Gent. 'Tis true (my Lords) he did.
Lear. Did I not fellow?
I have seene the day, with my good biting Faulchion
I would have made him skip: I am old now,
And these same crosses spoile me. Who are you?
Mine eyes are not o'th'best, I'le tell you straight.
Kent. If Fortune brag of two, she lou'd and hated,
One of them we beheld.
Lear. This is a dull sight, are you not Kent?
Kent. The same: your Seruant Kent,
Where is your Seruant Caius?
Lear. He's a good fellow, I can tell you that,
He'le strike and quickly too, he's dead and rotten.
Kent. No my good Lord, I am the very man.
Lear. I'le see that straight.
Kent. That from your first of difference and decay,
Have follow'd your sad steps.
Lear. You are welcome hither.
Kent. Nor no man else.
All's cheerlesse, darke, and deadly,
Your eldest Daughters have fore-done themselves,
And desperately are dead
Lear. I so I thinke.
Alb. He knowes not what he sees, and vnsense so it
That we present vs to him.

Enter a Messenger.

Edg. Very boottlesse.
Mess. Edmund is dead my Lord.
Alb. That's but a trifle heere:
You Lords and Noble Friends, know our intent,
What comfort to this great decay may come,
Shall be appli'd. For vs we will resigne,
During the life of this old Maiesty
To him our absolute power, you to your rights,
With boote, and such addition as your Honours
Have more than merited. All Friends shall Taste the wages of their vertue, and all Foes
The cup of their deseruings: O see, see.
Lear. And my poore Foole is hang'd: no, no, no life?
Why should a Dog, a Horse, a Rat haue life,
And thou no breath at all? Thou'lt come no more,
Never, never, never, never, never.
Pray you vnde this Button. Thanke you Sir,
Do you see this? Looke on her? Looke her lips,
Looke there, looke there. He dies.
Edg. He faints, my Lord, my Lord.
Kent. Breake heart, I prythee breake.
Edg. Looke vp my Lord.
Kent. Vex not his ghost, O let him passe, he hates him,
That would vpon the wracke of this tough world
Stretch him out longer.
Edg. He is gon indeed.
Kent. The wonder is, he hath endur'd so long,
He but vsurpt his life.
Alb. Bestow them from hence, our present business
Is generall woe: Friends of my soule, you twaine,
Rule in this Realme, and the gor'd state sustaine.
Kent. I haue a iourney Sir, shortly to go,
My Master calls me, I must not say no.
Edg. The waight of this sad time we must obey,
Speake what we feele, not what we ought to say:
The oldest hath borne most, we that are yong,
Shall never see so much, nor live so long.
Exeunt with a dead March.

FINIS.

THE TRAGEDIE OF
Othello, the Moore of Venice.

Actus Primus. Scœna Prima.

Enter Rodorigo, and Iago.

Rodorigo.
Never tell me, I take it much vnkindly
That thou (Iago) who hast had my purse,
As if th'strings were thine, shoud'st know of this.
Ia. But you'l not heare me. If ever I did dream
Of such a matter, abhorre me.
Rodo. Thou told'st me,
Thou did'st hold him in thy hate.
Iago. Despise me
If I do not. Three Great-ones of the Citie,
(In personall suite to make me his Lieutenant)
Off-capt to him: and by the faith of man
I know my price, I am worth no worse a place.
But he (as loving his owne pride, and purposes)
Evades them, with a bombast Circumstance,
Horribly stuft with Epithetes of warre,
Non-suites my Mediators. For certes, says he,
I have already chose my Officer. And what was he?
For-sooth, a great Arithmatician,
One Michael Cassio, a Florentine,
(A Fellow almost damn'd in a fair Wife)
That never saw a Squadron in the Field,
Nor the division of a Battaile knowes
More then a Spinster. Valesse the Bookish Theorick:
Wherein the Tongued Consuls can propose
As Masterly as he. Meere prattle (without practise)
Is all his Soaldiership. But he (Sir) had th'election;
And I (of whom his eies had seene the proofe
At Rhodes, at Cipres, and on others grounds
Christen'd, and Heathen) must be be-lee'd, and calm'd
By Debitor, and Creditor. This Counter-caster,
He (in good time) must his Lieutenant be,
And I (blesse the marke) his Moorship's Ancient.
Rod. By heaven, I rather would have bin his hangman.
Iago. Why, there's no remedie.
'Tis the curse of Service;
Preferment goes by Letter, and affection,
And not by old gradation, where each second
Stood Heire to th'first. Now Sir, be judge your selfe,
Whether I in any just terme am Affin'd
To love the Moore?
Rod. I would not follow him then.
Iago. O Sir content you.
I follow him to serve my turne vpon him.
We cannot all be Masters, nor all Masters
Cannot be truely follow'd. You shall marke
Many a duteous and knee-crooking knaue;
That (doting on his owne obsequious bondage)
Wears out his time, much like his Master's Asse,
For nought but Provender, & when he's old Cashier'd.
Whip me such honest knaues. Others there are
Who trym'd in Formes, and visages of Duties,
Keepe yet their hearts attending on themselues,
And throwing but showes of Service on their Lords
Doe well thrise by them.
And when they have lin'd their Coates
Doe themselues Homage.
These Fellowes have some soule,
And such a one do I professe my selfe. For (Sir)
It is as sure as you are Rodorigo,
Were I the Moore, I would not be Iago:
In following him, I follow but my selfe.
Heaven is my Iudge, not I for love and duties,
But seeming so, for my peculiar end:
For when my outward Action doth demonstrate
The native act, and figure of my heart
In Complement extern, 'tis not long after
But I will weare my heart vpon my sleeve
For Daws to peckes at; I am not what I am.
Rod. What a full Fortune do'th the Thicke-lipped
If he can carry't thus?
Iago. Call vp her Father:
Rouse him, make after him, poyson his delight,
Proclaime him in the Streets. Increase her kindrens,
And though he in a fertile Clymate dwell,
Plague him with Flies: though that his Ioy be Ioy,
Yet throw such chances of vexation on't,
As it may loose some colour.
Rodo. Heere is her Fathers house, I'le call aloud.
Iago. Do, with like timorous accent, and dire yell,
As when (by Night and Negligence) the Fire
Is spied in populous Citties.
Rodo. What hoe: Brabantio, Signior Brabantio, hoe.
Iago. Awake what hoe, Brabantio: Theeves, Theeves.
Looke to your house, your daughter, and your Bags,
Theeves, Theeves.
Bra. Above. What is the reason of this terrible
Summons? What is the matter there?
Rodo. Signior is all your Familie within?
Iago. Are your Doores lock'd?
Bra. Why? Wherefore ask you this?
Iago. Sir, y'are rob'd, for shame put on your Gowne,
Your

Your heart is burst, you have lost half your soule
Even now, now, very now, an old blacke Ram
Is tupping your white Ewe. Arise, arise,
Awake the snorting Citizens with the Bell,
Or else the deuill will make a Grand-sire of you.
Arise I say.
Bra. What, have you lost your wits?
Rod. Most reuerend Signior, do you know my voice?
Bra. Not I: what are you?
Rod. My name is Roderigo.
Bra. The worser welcome:
I have charg'd thee not to haunt about my doores:
In honest plainenesse thou hast heard me say,
My Daughter is not for thee. And now in madnesse
(Being full of Supper, and distempring draughtes)
Vpon malicious knauerie, dost thou come
To start my quiet.
Rod. Sir, Sir, Sir.
Bra. But thou must needs be sure,
My spirits and my place haue in their power
To make this bitter to thee.
Rod. Patience good Sir.
Bra. What tell'st thou me of Robbing?
This is Venice: my house is not a Grange.
Rod. Most graue Brabantio,
In simple and pure soule, I come to you
Ia. Sir: you are one of those that will not serue God, if the deuill bid you. Because we come to do you seruice, and you thinke we are Ruffians, you'le haue your Daughter couer'd with a Barbary horse, you'le haue your Nephewes neigh to you, you'le haue Coursers for Cousins: and Gennets for Germaines.
Bra. What prophane wretch art thou?
Ia. I am one Sir, that comes to tell you, your Daughter and the Moore, are making the Beast with two backs.
Bra. Thou art a Villaine.
Iago. You are a Senator.
Bra. This thou shalt answere. I know thee Roderigo.
Rod. Sir, I will answere any thing. But I beseech you If't be your pleasure, and most wise consent,
(As partly I find it is) that your faire Daughter,
At this odde Euen and dull watch o'th night
Transported with no worse nor better guard,
But with a knaue of common hire, a Gundelier,
To the grosse clasps of a Lascliuous Moore:
If this be knowne to you, and your Allowance,
We then haue done you bold, and saucie wrongs.
But if you know not this, my Manners tell me,
We haue your wrong rebuke. Do not beleeue
That from the sence of all Ciuilitie,
I thus would play and trifle with your Reuerence.
Your Daughter (if you haue not given her leaue)
I say againe, hath made a grosse reuolt,
Tying her Duties, Beautie, Wit, and Fortunes
In an extrauagant, and wheeling Stranger,
Of here, and every where: straight satisfie your selfe.
If she be in her Chamber, or your house,
Let loose on me the Iustice of the State
For thus deluding you.
Bra. Strike on the Tinder, hoa:
Giue me a Taper: call vp all my people,
This Accident is not vnlike my dreame,
Beleefe of it oppresses me already.
Light, I say, light. Exit.
Iag. Farewell: for I must leaue you.
It seemes not meete, nor wholesome to my place
To be produced, (as if I stay, I shall,)
Against the Moore. For I do know the State,
(How euer this may gall him with some checke)
Cannot with safetie cast him. For he's embark'd
With such loud reason to the Cyprus Warres,
(Which euen now stands in Act) that for their soules
Another of his Fadome, they haue none,
To lead their Business. In which regard,
Though I do hate him as I do hell pinnes,
Yet, for necessitie of present life,
I must show out a Flag, and signe of Loue,
(Which is indeed but signe) that you shal surely find him
Lead to the Sagittary the raised Search:
And there will I be with him. So farewell. Exit.

Enter Brabantio, with Seruants and Torches.

Bra. It is too true an euill. Gone she is,
And what's to come of my despised time,
Is naught but bitternesse. Now Roderigo,
Where dost thou see her? (Oh vnhappie Girle)
With the Moore sayst thou? (Who would be a Father?)
How dost thou know 'twas she? (Oh she deceiues me Past thought:) what said she to you? Get more Tapers:
Raise all my Kindred. Are they married thinke you?
Rod. Truely I thinke they are.
Bra. Oh Heauen: how got she out?
Oh treason of the blood.
Fathers, from hence trust not your Daughters minds
By what you see them act. Is there not Charmes,
By which the properties of Youth, and Maidhood
May be abus'd? Haue you not read Roderigo,
Of some such thing?
Rod. Yes Sir: I haue indeed.
Bra. Call vp my Brother: oh would you had had her.
Some one way, some another. Doe you know
Where we may apprehend her, and the Moore?
Rod. I thinke I can discouer him, if you please
To get good Guard, and go along with me.
Bra. Pray you lead on. At every house I'le call,
(I may command at most) get Weapons (hoa)
And raise some speciall Officers of night:
On good Roderigo, I will deserue your paines. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Othello, Iago, Attendants, with Torches.

Ia. Though in the trade of Warre I haue slaine men,
Yet do I hold it very stuffe o'th conscience
To do no contrib'd Murder: I lacke Iniquitie
Sometime to do me seruice. Nine, or ten times
I had thought t'have yerk'd them here vnder the Ribbes.
Othello. 'Tis better as it is.
Iago. Nay but he prated,
And spoke such scurvy, and prouoking termes
Against your Honor, that with the little godlinesse I haue
I did full hard forbeare him. But I pray you Sir,
Are you fast married? Be assur'd of this,
That the Magnifico is much belou'd,
And hath in his effect a voice potentiall
As double as the Dukes: He will diuorce you.
Or put vpon you, what restraint or greeuance,

The

The Law (with all his might, to enforce it on)
Will giue him Cable.
Othel. Let him do his spight;
My Seruices, which I haue done the Signorie
Shall out-tongue his Complaints. 'Tis yet to know,
Which when I know, that boasting is an Honour,
I shall promulgate. I fetch my life and being,
From Men of Royall Seige. And my demerites
May speake (vnbonnetted) to as proud a Fortune
As this that I haue reach'd. For know Iago,
But that I loue the gentle Desdemona,
I would not my vnhoused free condition
Put into Circumscription, and Confine,
For the Seas worth. But looke, what Lights come yond?

Enter Cassio, with Torches.

Iago. Those are the raised Father, and his Friends:
You were best go in.
Othel. Not I: I must be found.
My Parts, my Title, and my perfect Soule
Shall manifest me rightly. Is it they?
Iago. By Iouis, I thinke no.
Othel. The Seruants of the Dukes?
And my Lieutenant?
The goodnesse of the Night vpon you (Friends)
What is the Newes?
Cassio. The Duke do's greet you (Generall)
And he requires your haste, Post-haste appearance,
Euen on the instant.
Othello. What is the matter, think'st you?
Cassio. Something from Cypres, as I may diuine:
It is a business of some heate. The Gallies
Haue sent a dozen sequent Messengers
This very night, at one anothers heeles:
And many of the Consuls, rais'd and met,
Are at the Dukes already. You haue bin hotly call'd for,
When being not at your Lodging to be found,
The Senate hath sent about three seuerall Quests,
To search you out.
Othel. 'Tis well I am found by you:
I will but spend a word here in the house,
And goe with you.
Cassio. Ancient, what makes he heere?
Iago. Faith, he to night hath boarded a Land Carrack,
If it proue lawfull prize, he's made for ever.
Cassio. I do not vnderstand.
Iago. He's married.
Cassio. To who?
Iago. Marry to —— Come Captaine, will you go?
Othel. Haue with you.
Cassio. Here come another Troope to seeke for you.

Enter Brabantio, Rodorigo, with Officers, and Torches.

Iago. It is Brabantio: Generall be aduis'd,
He comes to bad intent.
Othello. Holla, stand there.
Rodo. Signior, it is the Moore.
Bra. Downe with him, Theeue.
Iago. You, Rodorigo? Come Sir, I am for you.
Othe. Keepe vp your bright Swords, for the dew will rust them. Good Signior, you shall more command with yeares, then with your Weapons.
Bra. Oh thou foule Theeue,
Where hast thou stow'd my Daughter?
Damn'd as thou art, thou hast enchanted her
For I'le refere me to all things of Sense,
(If she in Chaines of Magick were not bound)
Whether a Maid, so tender, Faire, and Happie,
So opposite to Marriage, that she shun'd
The wealthy curled Darlings of our Nation,
Would euer haue (t'incurre a generall mocke)
Run from her Guardage to the sooty bosome,
Of such a thing as thou: to feare, not to delight.
Iudge me the world, if 'tis not grosse in sense,
That thou hast practis'd on her with foule Charms,
Abus'd her delicate Youth, with Drugs or Minerals,
That weakens Motion. I'le hau't disputed on,
'Tis probable, and palpable to thinking:
I therefore apprehend and do attach thee,
For an abuser of the World, a practiser
Of Arts inhibited, and out of warrant:
Lay hold vpon him, if he do resist
Subdue him, at his perill.
Othe. Hold your hands
Both you of my inclining, and the rest.
Were it my Cue to fight, I should haue known it
Without a Prompter. Whither will you that I goe
To answere this your charge?
Bra. To Prison, till fit time
Of Law, and course of direct Sessions
Call thee to answer.
Othe. What if I do obey?
How may the Duke be therewith satisfi'd,
Whose Messengers are here about my side,
Vpon some present business of the State,
To bring me to him.
Officer. 'Tis true most worthy Signior,
The Dukes in Counsell, and your Noble-selfe,
I am sure is sent for.
Bra. How? The Duke in Counsell?
In this time of the night? Bring him away:
Mine's not an idle Cause. The Duke himselfe,
Or any of my Brothers of the State,
Cannot but feele this wrong, as 'twere their owne:
For if such Actions may haue passage free,
Bond-slaues, and Pagans shall our Statesmen be. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Duke, Senators, and Officers.

Duke. There's no composition in this Newes.
That gives them Credit.
1. Sen. Indeed, they are disproportioned.
My Letters say, a Hundred and seuen Gallies.
Duke. And mine a Hundred forty.
2. Sen. And mine two Hundred:
But though they iumpe not on a iust accompt,
(As in these Cases, where the aymes reports,
'Tis oft with difference) yet do they all confirme
A Turkish Fleete, and bearing vp to Cypres.
Duke. Nay, it is possible enough to iudgement:
I do not so secure me in the Error,
But the maine Article I do approue
In fearefull sense.
Sayler within. What hoa, what hoa, what hoa.
Enter Sayler.

Officer. A Messenger from the Galliss.

Duke. Now? What's the business?

Sator. The Turkish Preparation makes for Rhodes,
So was I bid report here to the State,
By Signior Angelo.

Duke. How say you by this change?

1. Sen. This cannot be
By no assay of reason. 'Tis a Pageant
To keep vs in false gaze, when we consider
Th'importancie of Cyprus to the Turke;
And let our selues againe but vnderstand,
That as it more concernes the Turke then Rhodes,
So may he with more facile question beare it,
For that it stands not in such warrelike brace,
But altogether lackes th'abilities
That Rhodes is dress'd in. If we make thought of this,
We must not think the Turke is so vnskillfull,
To leaue that latest, which concernes him first,
Neglecting an attempt of ease, and gaine
To wake, and wage a danger profitlesse.

Duke. Nay, in all confidence he's not for Rhodes.

Officer. Here is more Newes.

Enter a Messenger.

Messen. The Ottomites, Reuerend, and Gracious,
Steering with due course toward the Ile of Rhodes,
Haue there inuounted them with an after Fleete.

1. Sen. I, so I thought: how many, as you guesse?

Mess. Of thirtie Saile: and now they do re-stem
Their backward course, bearing with frank appearance
Their purposes toward Cyprus. Signior Montano,
Your trustie and most Valiant Seruitour,
With his free duetie, recommends you thus,
And prayes you to beleeue him.

Duke. 'Tis certaine then for Cyprus:
Marcus Luccicos is not he in Towne?

1. Sen. He's now in Florence.

Duke. Write from vs,
To him, Post, Post-hoste, dispatch.

1. Sen. Here comes Brabantio, and the Valiant Moore.

Enter Brabantio, Othello, Cassio, Iago, Rodorigo, and Officers.

Duke. Valiant Othello, we must straight employ you,
Against the generall Enemy Ottoman.
I did not see you: welcome gentle Signior,
We lack't your Counsaile, and your helpe to night.

Bra. So did I yours: Good your Grace pardon me.
Neither my place, nor ought I heard of business
Hath rais'd me from my bed; nor doth the generall care
Take hold on me. For my perticular griefe
Is of so flood-gate, and ore-bearing Nature,
That it engluts, and swallowes other sorrowes,
And it is still it selfe.

Duke. Why? What's the matter?

Bra. My Daughter: oh my Daughter!

Sen. Dead?

Bra. I, to me.
She is abus'd, stolne from me, and corrupted
By Spels, and Medicines, bought of Mountebanks;
For Nature, so preposterously to erre,
(Being not deficient, blind, or lame of sense,)
Sans witch-craft could not.

Duke. Who ere he be, that in this foule proceeding
Hath thus beguil'd your Daughter of her selfe,
And you of her, the bloodie Booke of Law,
You shall your selfe read, in the better letter,
After your owne sense: yea, though our proper Son
Stood in your Action.

Bra. Humbly I thanke your Grace,
Here is the man; this Moore, whom now it seemes
Your speciall Mandate, for the State affaires
Hath hither brought.

All. We are verie sorry for't.

Duke. What in your owne part, can you say to this?

Bra. Nothing, but this is so.

Oth. Most Potent, Graue, and Reuerend Signiors,
My very Noble, and approu'd good Masters;
That I haue tane away this old mans Daughter,
It is most true: true I haue married her;
The verie head, and front of my offending,
Hath this extent; no more. Rude am I, in my speech,
And little bless'd with the soft phrase of Peace;
For since these Armes of mine, had seuen yeares pith,
Till now, some nine Moones wasted, they haue vs'd
Their dearest action, in the Tented Field:
And little of this great world can I speake,
More than pertaines to Feats of Broiles, and Battaile,
And therefore little shall I grace my cause,
In speaking for my selfe. Yet, (by your gracious patience,)
I will a round vnvarnish'd a Tale de liuer,
Of my whole course of Loue
What Drugges, what Charmes,
What Conjuration, and what mighty Magicke,
(For such proceeding I am charg'd withall)
I won his Daughter.

Bra. A Maiden, never bold:
Of Spirit so still, and quiet, that her Motion
Blush'd at her selfe, and she, in spight of Nature,
Of Yeares, of Country, Credite, every thing
To fall in Loue, with what she fear'd to looke on;
It is a judgement maim'd, and most imperfect.
That will confesse Perfection so could erre
Against all rules of Nature, and must be driuen
To find out practises of cunning hell
Why this should be. I therefore vouch againe,
That with some Mixtures, powrefull o're the blood,
Or with some Drams, (conjur'd to this effect)
He wrought vp on her.
To vouch this, is no proofe,
Without more wider, and more ouer Tett
Than these thin habits and poore likely-hoods
Of moderne seeming, do prefer against him.

Sen. But Othello, speake,
Did you, by indirect, and forced courses
Subdue, and poyson this yong Maides affections?
Or came it by request, and such fare question
As foule, to foule affordeth?

Othel. I do beseech you,
Send for the Lady to the Sagittary,
And let her speake of me before her Father;
If you do finde me foule, in her report,
The Trust, the Office, I do hold of you,
Not only take away, but let your Sentence
Euen fall vpon my life.

Duke. Fetch Desdemona hither.

Oth. Auncient, conduct them:
You best know the place.
And tell she come, as truely as to heauen,
I do confesse the vices of my blood,
So ministry to your Graue eares, Ile present

How

How I did thrive in this faire Ladies loue,
And she in mine.

Duke. Say it Othello.

Oth. Her Father lou'd me, oft inuited me:
Still question'd me the Storie of my life,
From yeare to yeare: the Battaile, Sieges, Fortune,
That I haue past.
I ran is through, euen from my boyish daies,
To th'very moment that he bad me tell it.
Wherein I spoke of most disastrous chances:
Of moving Accidents by Flood and Field,
Of hair-breadth scapes: th'imminent deadly breach,
Of being taken by the Insolent Foe,
And sold to slauery. Of my redemption thence,
And portance in my Trauellours behoue.
Wherein of Antars vast, and Deserts idle,
Rough Quarries, Rocks, Hills, whose head touch heauen,
It was my hint to speake. Such was my Processe,
And of the Cannibals that each others eate,
The Anthropophagi, and men whose heads
Grew beneath their shoulders. These things to heare,
Would Desdemona seriously incline
But still the house Affaires would draw her hence
Which euer as she could with haste dispatch,
She'd come againe, and with a greedie eare
Deuoure vp my discourse. Which I obseruing,
Tooke once a pliant houre, and found good meanes
To draw from her a prayer of earnest heart,
That I would all my Pilgrimage dilate,
Whereof by parcels she had something heard,
But nee instinctively: I did consent,
And often did beguile her of her teares,
When I did speake of some distressefull stroke
That my youth suffer'd: My Storie being done,
She gaue me for my paines a world of kisses:
She swore in faith 'twas strange: 'twas passing strange,
'Twas pittifull: 'twas wondrous pittifull.
She wish'd she had not heard it, yet she wish'd
That Heauen had made her such a man. She thank'd me,
And bad me, if I had a Friend that lou'd her,
I should but teach him how to tell my Story,
And that would woo her. Vpon this hint I spake,
She lou'd me for the dangers I had past,
And I lou'd her, that she did pitty them.
This onely is the witch-craft I haue vs'd
Here comes the Ladie: Let her witnesse it.

Enter Desdemona, Iago, Attendants.

Duke. I thinke this tale would win my Daughter too,
Good Brabantio, take vp this mongled matter at the best:
Men do their broken Weapons rather vse,
Then their bare hands.

Bra. I pray you heare her speake?
If she confesse that she was half the wooer,
Destruction on my head, if my bad blame
Light on the man. Come hither gentle Mistris,
Do you perceiue in all this Noble Companie,
Where most you owe obedience?

Des. My Noble Father,
I do perceiue here a diuided duie.
To you I am bound for life, and education:
My life and education both do learne me,
How to respect you. You are the Lord of duty,
I am hitherto your Daughter. But here's my Husband,
And so much duie, as my Mother shew'd
To you, preferring you before her Father:
So much I challenge, that I may professe
Due to the Moore my Lord.

Bra. God be with you: I haue done.
Please it your Grace, on to the State Affaires
I had rather to adopt a Child, then get it.
Come hither Moore,
I here do giue thee that with all my heart,
Which but thou hast already with all my heart
I would keepe from thee. For your sake (Iaunell)
I am glad at soule, I haue no other Child,
For thy escape would teach me Tyrannie
To hang clogges on them. I haue done my Lord.

Duke. Let me speake like your selfe:
And lay a Sentence,
Which as a grise, or step may helpe these Louers.
When remedies are past, the griefes are ended
By seeing the worst, which late on hopes depended.
To mourne a Mischeefe that is past and gone,
Is the next way to draw new mischiefe on.
What cannot be preseru'd, when Fortune takes:
Patience, her Iniury a mock'ry makes.
The rob'd that smiles, steales something from the Thiefe,
He robs himselfe, that spends a bootlesse griefe.

Bra. So let the Turke of Cyprus vs beguile,
We loose it not so long as we can smile:
He bestes the Sentence well, that nothing bestes,
But the free comfort which from thence he hatest.
But he bestes both the Sentence, and the sorrow,
That to pay griefe, must of poore Patience borrow.
These Sentences, to Sugar, or to Gall,
Being drong on both sides, are Equinocall.
But words are words, I never yet did heare:
That the bruised heart was pierc'd through the eare.
I humbly beseech you proceed to th'Affaires of State.

Duke The Turke with a most mighty Preparaunce makes for Cyprus: Othello, the Fortitude of the place is best known to you. And though we haue there a Substitute of most allowed sufficiencie, yet opinion, a sour souerainge Mistris of Effects, throwes a more safe voice on you: you must therefore be content to slubber the glosse of your new Fortunes, with this more stubborne, and boystrous expedition.

Oth. The Tirsot Cuftome, most Graue Senators,
Hath made the flinty and Steele Couch of Warre
My thrice-driuen bed of Downe. I do aguize
A Naturall and prompt Alacritie,
I finde in hardnesse: and do vndertake
This present Warres against the Ottomites.
Most humbly therefore bending to your State,
I craue fit disposition for my Wife,
Due reference of Place, and Exhibition,
With such Accomodation and beseet
As seeuels with her breeding.

Duke. Why at her Fathers?

Bra. I will not hauc it so.

Oth. Nor I.

Des. Nor would I there reside,
To put my Father in impatient thoughts
By being in his eye. Most Gracious Duke,
To my vnfolding, lend your prosperous eare,
And let me finde a Charter in your voice
T'assist my simplenesse.

Duke. What would you Desdemona?

Des. That I loue the Moore, to liue with him,
My downe-light violence, and storme of Fortunes,

May

My trumpet to the world. My heart's subdu'd
Even to the very quality of my Lord:
I saw Othello's visage in his mind,
And to his Honours and his valiant parts,
Did I my soule and Fortunes consecrate.
So that (deere Lords) if I be left behind
A Moth of Peace, and he go to the Warre,
The Rites for why I loue him, are bereft me:
And I a heauie interim shall support
By his deere absence. Let me go with him.

Oth. Let her haue your voice.
Vouch with me Heauen, I therefore beg it not
To please the palate of my Appetite:
Nor to comply with heat the yong affects
In my defunct, and proper satisfaction.
But to be free, and bounteous to her minde:
And Heauen defend your good soules, that you think
I will your serious and great business scant
When she is with me. No, when light wing'd Toyes
Of feather'd Cupid, seele with wanton dulnesse
My speculatiue, and offic'd Instrument:
That my Disports corrupt, and taint my business:
Let House-wiues make a Skillet of my Helme,
And all indigne, and base aduersities,
Make head against my Estimation.

Duke. Be it as you shall priuately determine,
Either for her stay, or going: th'Affaire cries hasti
And speed must answer it.

Sen. You must away to night.

Oth. With all my heart.

Duke. At nine i'th'morning, here wee'l meete againe.
Othello, leaue some Officer behind
And he shall our Commission bring to you:
And such things else of qualitie and respect
As doth import you.

Oth. So please your Grace, my Ancient,
A man he is of honesty and trust:
To his conueyance I assigne my wife,
With what else needfull, your good Grace shall think
To be sent after me.

Duke. Let it be so:
Good night to every one. And Noble Signior,
If Vertue no delighted Beautie lacke,
Your Son-in-law is farre more Faire then Blacke.

Sen. Adieu braue Moore, vse Desdemona well.

Bra. Looke to her (Moore) if thou hast eies to see
She has deceiu'd her Father, and may thee. Exeu

Oth. My life vpon her faith. Honest Iago,
My Desdemona must I leaue to thee:
I prythee let thy wife attend on her,
And bring them after in the best aduantage.
Come Desdemona, I haue but an houre
Of Loue, of wordly matter, and direction
To spend with thee. We must obey the time. Exit.

Rod. Iago.

Iago. What saist thou Noble heart?

Rod. What will I do, think'st thou?

Iago. Why go to bed and sleepe.

Rod. I will incontinently drowne my selfe.

Iago. If thou do'st, I shall never loue thee after. Why thou silly Gentleman?

Rod. It is sillyness to liue, when to liue is torment: and then haue we a prescription to dye, when death is our Physition.

Iago. Oh villanous: I haue look'd vpon the world for foure times seuen yeares, and since I could distinguish betwixt a Benefit, and an Iniurie: I never found man that knew how to loue himselfe. Ere I would say, I would drowne my selfe for the loue of a Gynney Hen, I would change my Humanity with a Baboone.

Rod. What should I do? I confesse it is my shame to be so fond, but it is not in my vertue to amend it.

Iago. Vertue? A figge, 'tis in our selues that we are thus, or thus. Our Bodies are our Gardens, to the which, our Wills are Gardiners. So that if we will plant Nettels, or sowe Lettice: Set Hisope, and weede vp Time: Supplie it with one gender of Herbes, or distract it with many: either to haue it sterrill with idlenesse, or manured with Industry, why the power, and Corrigeable authoritie of this lies in our Wills. If the braine of our liues had not one Scale of Reason, to poise another of Sensualitie, the blood, and basenesse of our Natures would conduct vs to most preposterous Conclusions. But we haue Reason to coole our raging Motions, our carnall Stings, or rebelled Lusts: whereof I take this, that you call Loue, to be a Sect, or Seyen.

Rod. It cannot be.

Iago. It is meerly a Lust of the blood, and a permission of the will. Come, be a man: drowne thy selfe? Drown Cats, and blind Puppies. I haue profest me thy Friend, and I confesse me knit to thy deserving, with Cables of perdurable toughnesse. I could neuer better steed thee then now. Put Money in thy purse: follow thou the Warres, defeate thy fauour, with an vsurp'd Beard. I say put Money in thy purse. It cannot be long that Desdemona should continue her loue to the Moore. Put Money in thy purse: nor he his to her. It was a violent Commencement in her, and thou shalt see an answerable Sequestration, put but Money in thy purse. These Moores are changeable in their wills: fill thy purse with Money. The Food that to him now is as luscious as Locusta, shall be to him shortly, as bitter as Coloquintida. She must change for youth: when she is sated with his body she will find the errors of her choice. Therefore, put Money in thy purse. If thou will needs damne thy selfe, do it a more delicate way then drowning. Make all the Money thou canst: If Sanctimonie, and a frail vow, betwixt an erring Barbarian, and super-subtle Venetian be not too hard for my wits, and all the Tribe of hell, thou shalt enioy her: therefore make Money: a pox of drowning thy selfe, it is clean out of the way. Seeke thou rather to be hang'd in Compassing thy ioy, then to be drown'd, and go without her.

Rodo. Wilt thou be fast to my hopes, if I depend on the issue?

Iago. Thou art sure of me: Go make Money: I haue told thee often, and I re-tell thee againe, and againe, I hate the Moore. My cause is hearted; thine hath no lesse reason. Let vs be conionctiue in our reuenge, against him. If thou canst Cuckold him, thou dost thy selfe a pleasure, me a sport. There are many Euents in the Wombe of Time, which will be deliuered. Trauerse, go, prouide thy Money. We will haue more of this to morrow. Adieu.

Rod. Where shall we meete i'th'morning?

Iago. At my Lodging.

Rod. Ile be with thee betimes.

Iago. Go too, farewell. Do you heare Rodrigo?

Rod. Ile sell all my Land. Exit

Iago. Thus do I ever make my Foole, my purse:
For I mine owne gain'd knowledge should prophane
If I would time expend with such Snipe,

But

But for my Sport, and Profit: I hate the Moore,
And it is thought abroad, that 'twixt my Sheets
He has done my Office. I know not if't be true,
But I, for mere suspition in that kinde,
Will do, as if for Surety. He holds me well,
The better shall my purpose worke on him:
Cassio's a proper man: Let me see now,
To get his Place, and to plume vp my will
In double Knauery. How? How? Let's see.
After some time, to abuse Othello's eares,
That he is too familiar with his wife:
He hath a person, and a smooth dispose
To be suspected: fram'd to make women false.
The Moore is of a free, and open Nature,
That thinkes men honest, that but seeme to be so,
And will as tenderly be led by'th Nose
As Asses are:
I have't: it is engendred · Hell, and Night,
Must bring this monstrous Birth, to the worlds light.

Actus Secundus. Scena Prima.

Enter Montano, and two Gentlemen.

Mon. What from the Cape, can you discerne at Sea?
1 Gent. Nothing at all, it is a high wrought Flood:
I cannot 'twixt the Heauen, and the Maine,
Descry a Saile.
Mon. Me thinks, the wind hath spoke aloud at Land,
A fuller blast ne're shooke our Bastiements:
If it hath ruffian'd so vpon the Sea,
What ribbes of Oake, when Mountaines melt on them,
Can hold the Mortise. What shall we heare of this?
2 A Segregancon of the Turkish Fleet:
For do but stand vpon the Foaming Shore,
The chidden Billow seemes to pelt the Clouds,
The winde-shak'd-Surge, with high & monstrous Maine
Seemes to cast water on the burning Beare,
And quench the Guards of th'euer-fixed Pole:
I never did like molestation view
On the enchafed Flood.
Mon. If that the Turkish Fleete
Be not ensheltered, and embay'd, they are drown'd,
It is impossible to beare it out.

Enter a Gentleman.

3 Newes Ladies: our wares are done:
The desperate Tempest hath so bang'd the Turkes,
That their designement halts. A Noble ship of Venice,
Hath seene a greeuous wracke and sufferance
On most part of their Fleet.
Mon. How? Is this true?
3 The Ship is here put in: A Veronesa, Michael Cassio
Lieutenant to the warlike Moore, Othello,
Is come on Shore: the Moore himselfe at Sea,
And is in full Commission heere for Cyprus.
Mon. I am glad on't:
'Tis a worthy Gouernour.
3 But this same Cassio, though he speake of comfort,
Touching the Turkish losse, yet he lookes sadly,
And prayes the Moore be safe; for they were parted
With foule, and violent Tempest.
Mon. Pray Heauens he be:
For I have seen't him, and the rare commaunds
Like a full Soldier. Let's to the Sea-side (hoa)
As well to see the Vessell that's come in,
As to throw-out our eyes for brave Othello,
Even till we make the Maine, and th'Eriall blue,
An indistinct regard.
Gent. Come, let's do so;
For every Minute is expectancie
Of more Arriuancie.

Enter Cassio.

Cass. Thankes you, the valiant of this warlike Ile,
That so approueme the Moore: Oh let the Heauens
Give him defence against the Elements,
For I have lost him on a dangerous Sea.
Mon. Is he well ship'd?
Cassio. His Bark is stoutly Timber'd, and his Pylot
Of verie expert, and approu'd Allowance;
Therefore my hope's (not surfeited to death)
Stand in bold Cure.
Within. A Saile, a Saile, a Saile.
Cassio. What noise?
Gent. The Toune is empty; on the brow o'th'Sea
Stand ranks of People, and they cry, a Saile.
Cassio. My hopes do shape him for the Gouernor.
Gent. They do discharge their Shot of Courtesie,
Our Friends, at least.
Cassio. I pray you Sir, go forth,
And give vs truth who 'tis that is arriu'd.
Gent. I shall. Exit.
Mon. But good Lieutenant, is your Generall wiu'd?
Cassio. Most fortunately: he hath achieu'd a Maid
That paragons description, and wilde Fame;
One that excels the quirkes of Blazoning pens,
And in th'essentiall Vesture of Creation,
Do's tire the Ingrosser.
Enter Gentleman.
How now? Who has's put in?
Gent. 'Tis one Iago, Ancient to the Generall.
Cassio. He's had most fauourable, and happie speed
Tempests themselues, high Seas, and howling winds,
The gutter'd-Rockes, and Congregated Sands,
Traitors ensteep'd, to enclogge the guiltlesse Keele,
As having sence of Beauty, do omit
Their mortall Natures, letting go safely by
The Diuine Desdemona.
Mon. What is she?
Cassio. She that I spake of·
Our greet Captaine Captaine,
Left in the conduct of the bold Iago,
Whose footing here anticipates our thoughts,
A Senights speed. Great Iouer, Othello guard,
And swell his Saile with thine owne powerfull breath,
That he may bless this Bay with his tall Ship,
Make Ioues quicke pauses in Desdemonas Armes,
Give renew'd fire to our extincted Spirits.

Enter Desdemona, Iago, Rodorigo, and Emilia.

Oh behold,
The Riches of the Ship is come on shore:
You men of Cyprus, let her haue your knees.
Haile to thee Ladie: and the grace of Heauen,
Before, behinde thee, and on every hand
Enwheele thee round.
Des. I thanke you, Valiant Cassio,
What tydings can you tell of my Lord?

Cas. He is not yet arriu'd, nor know I ought
But that he's well, and will be shortly heere.
Des. Oh, but I feare:
How lost you company?
Cassio. The great Contention of Sea, and Skies
Parted our fellowship. But heaske, a Saile.
Within. A Saile, a Saile.
Gent. They giue this greeting to the Citadell:
This likewise is a Friend.
Cassio. See for the Newes:
Good Ancient, you are welcome. Welcome Mistris:
Let it not gaule your patience (good Iago)
That I extend my Manners. 'Tis my breeding,
That giues me this bold shew of Curtesie.
Iago. Sir, would she giue you somuch of her lippes,
As of her tongue she oft bestowes on me,
You would haue enough.
Des. Alas: she has no speech.
Iago. Infaith too much:
I finde it still, when I haue leaue to sleepe.
Marry before your Ladyship, I grant,
She puts her tongue a little in her heart,
And chides with thinking.
Æmil. You haue little cause to say so.
Iago. Come on, come on: you are Pictures out of doore: Bells in your Parlours: Wilde-Cats in your Kitchens: Saints in your Iniuries: Diuels being offended: Players in your Housewifery, and Housewives in your Beds.
Des. Oh, fie vpon thee, Slanderer.
Iago. Nay, it is true: or else I am a Turke,
You rise to play, and go to bed to worke.
Æmil. You shall not write my praise.
Iago. No, let me not.
Desde. What would'st write of me, if thou should'st praise me?
Iago. Oh, gentle Lady, do not put me too,t,
For I am nothing, if not Criticall.
Des. Come on, assay.
There's one gone to the Harbour?
Iago. I Madam.
Des. I am not merry: but I do beguile
The thing I am, by seeming otherwise.
Come, how would'st thou praise me?
Iago. I am about it, but indeed my inuention comes from my pate, as Birdlyme do's from Freeze, it plucks out Braines and all. But my Muse labours, and thus she is deliuer'd.
If she be faire, and wise: fairenesse and wit,
The one for ost, the other vseth it.
Des. Well prais'd:
How if she be Blacke and Witty?
Iago. If she be blacke, and therein to haue a wit,
She'le find a white, that shall her blackenesse fit.
Des. Worse, and worse.
Æmil. How if Faire, and Foolish?
Iago. She euer yet was foolish that was faire,
For euen her folly helpe her to an heire.
Desde. These are old fond Paradoxes, to make Fooles laugh i'th'Alehouse. What miserable praise hast thou for her that's Foule, and Foolish.
Iago. There's none so foule and foolish thereunto,
But do's foule pranks which faire, and wise-men do.
Desde. Oh heauy ignorance: thou praisest the worst best. But what praise could'st thou bestow on a deseruing woman indeed? One, that in the authority of her merit, did iustly put on the vouch of very malice itselfe.

Iago. She that was ever faire, and never proud,
Had Tongue at will, and yet was never loud:
Never lacks Gold, and yet went never gay,
Fled from her wish, and yet said now I may.
She that being angred, her reuenge being wie,
Bad her wrong stay, and her displeasure flie:
She that in wisdome never was so frasle,
To change the Cods-head for the Salmons tasle:
She that could thinke, and ne'r disclose her mind,
See Suitors following, and not looke behind:
She was a wight, (if ever such wightes were)
Des. To do what?
Iago. To suckle Fooles, and chronicle small Beere.

Desde. Oh most lame and impotent conclusion. Do not learne of him Æmilia, though he be thy husband. How say you (Cassio) is he not a most prophane, and liberall Counsailor?
Cassio. He speakes home (Madam) you may relish him more in the Souldier, then in the Scholler.
Iago. He takes her by the palme: I, well said, whiffer. With as little a web as this, will I ensnare as great a Fly as Cassio. I smile vpon her, do: I will giue thee in thine owne Courtship. You say true, 'tis so indeed. If such tricks as these strip you out of your Lieutenantrie, it had beene better you had not kiss'd your three fingers so oft, which now againe you are most apt to play the Sir, in. Very good: well kiss'd, and excellent Curtsie: 'tis so indeed. Yet againe, your fingers to your lippes? Would they were Clister-pipes for your sake.
The Moore I know his Trumpet.
Cassio 'Tis truely so.
Des. Let's meete him, and receiue him.
Cassio. Loe, where he comes.

Enter Othello, and Attendants.

Oth O, my faire Warriour.
Des. My deere Othello.
Oth. It giues me wonder great, as my content
To see you heere before me.
Oh my Soules Ioy:
If after every Tempest, come such Calmes,
May the winds blow, till they haue waken'd death:
And let the labouring Barke climbe hills of Seas
Olympus high: and duck againe as low,
As hell's from Heauen. If it were now to dye,
'Twere now to be most happy. For I feare,
My Soule hath her content so absolute,
That not another comfort like to this,
Succeedes in vnknowne Fate.
Des. The Heauens forbid
But that our Loues
And Comforts should encrease
Euen as our dayes do grow.
Oth. Amen to that (sweet Powers)
I cannot speake enough of this content,
It stoppes me heere: it is too much of loy.
And this and this the greatest discords be
That ere our hearts shall make.
Iago. Oh you are well tun'd now: But I'le set downe the pegge that make this Musicke, as honest as I am.

Othe. Come: let vs to the Castle.
News (Friends) our Warres are done:
The Turkes are drown'd.
How do's my old Acquaintance of this Ile?
(Honey) you shall be well desir'd in Cyprus,
I have found great love amongst them. Oh my Sweet,
I prattle out of fashion, and I dote
In mine owne comforts. I prythee, good Iago,
Go to the Bay, and disembarke my Coffers:
Bring thou the Master to the Citadell,
He is a good one, and his worthynesse
Do's challenge much respect. Come Desdemona,
Once more well met at Cyprus.

Exeunt Othello and Desdemona.

Iago. Do thou meet me presently at the Harbour. Come hither, if thou be'st Valiant, (as they say base men being in Love, have then a Nobilitie in their Natures, more then is native to them) hell-me; the Lieutenant to night watches on the Court of Guard. First, I must tell thee this: Desdemona, is directly in love with him.

Rod. With him? Why, 'tis not possible.

Iago. Lay thy finger thus: and let thy soule be instructed. Marke me with what violence she first lov'd the Moore, but for bragging, and telling her fantastical lies. To love him still for prating, let not thy discreet heart thinke it. Her eye must be fed. And what delight shall she have to looke on the Deuill? When the Blood is made dull with the Act of Sport, there should be a game to enflame it, and to give Satiety a fresh appetite. Loueliness in favour, sympathy in yeares, Manners, and Beauties: all which the Moore is defective in. Now for want of these required Conuenences, her delicate tenderness will finde it selfe abus'd, begin to heave the gorge, disrellish and abhorre the Moore, very Nature will instruct her in it, and compell her to some second choice. Now Sir, this granted (as it is a most pregnant and vnforc'd position) who stands so eminent in the degree of this Fortune, as Cassio do's: a knaue very voluble: no further conscionable, then in putting on the meere forme of Ciuill, and Humane seeming, for the better compasse of his fait, and most hidden loose Affection? Why none, why none: A slipper, and subtle knaue, a finder of occasion: that he's an eye can stampe, and counterfeit Advantages, though true Advantage never present it selfe. A drueliish knaue: besides, the knaue is handsome, young: and hath all those requisites in him, that folly and greene minden looke after. A pestilent complest knaue, and the woman hath found him already.

Rode. I cannot believe that in her, she's full of most bless'd condition.

Iago. Bless'd figges-end. The Wine she drinkes is made of grapes. If she had beene bless'd, she would never have lou'd the Moore: Bless'd pudding. Didst thou not see her paddle with the palme of his hand? Didst not marke that?

Rod. Yes, that I did: but that was but courtesie.

Iago. Lecherie by this hand: an Index, and obscure prologue to the History of Lust and foule Thoughts. They met so neere with their lippes, that their breathes embrac'd together. Villanous thoughts Roderigo, when theese mutabilities so marshall the way, hard at hand comes the Master, and maine exercise, th'incorporate conclusion: Pish. But Sir, be you rul'd by me. I have brought you from Venice. Watch you to night: for the Command, Ile lay't vpon you. Cassio knowes you not: Ile not be farre from you. Do you finde some occasion to anger Cassio, either by speaking too loud, or taxing his discipline, or from what other course you please, which the time shall more fauorably minister.

Rod. Well.

Iago. Sir, he's rash, and very sudden in Choller: and happely may strike at you, provoke him that he may: for cast out of that will I cause these of Cyprus to Mutiny, Whose qualification shall come into no true taste again, but by the displacing of Cassio. So shall you have a shorter journey to your desires, by the means I shall then have to preferre them. And the impediment most profitably removed, without the which there is no expectation of our prosperitie.

Rode. I will do this, if you can bring it to any opportunitie.

Iago. I warrant thee. Meete me by and by at the Citadell. I must fetch his Necessaries a Shore. Farewell.

Rode. Adieu. Exit.

Iago. That Cassio loues her, I do well beleeue't:
That she loues him, 'tis apt, and of great Credit.
The Moore (how beit that I endure him not)
Is of a constant, loueing Noble Nature,
And I dare thinke, he'le proue to Desdemona
A most dearre husband. Now I do loue her too,
Not out of absolute Lust, (though peradventure
I stand accomptant for as great a sin)
But partly led to diet my Revenge,
For that I do suspect the lusthie Moore
Hath leap'd into my Seate. The thought whereof,
Doth (like a poysonous Mineral) gnaw my Inwards:
And nothing can, or shall content my Soule
Till I am even'd with him, wife, for wife.
Or failing so, yet that I put the Moore,
At least into a Iealousie so strong
That iudgement cannot cure. Which thing to do,
If this poore Trash of Venice, whom I trace
For his quicke hunting, stand the putting on,
Ile have our Michael Cassio on the hip,
Abuse him to the Moore, in the rightest guise
(For I feare Cassio with my Night-Cap too)
Make the Moore thanke me, loue me, and reward me,
For making him egregiously an Asse,
And practising vpon his peace, and quiet,
Even to madnesse. 'Tis heere: but yet confus'd,
Knauerries plaine face, is never seene, till vs'd. Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Othello's, Herald with a Proclamation.

Herald. It is Othello's pleasure, our Noble and Valiant Generall. That vpon certaine tydings now arriu'd, importing the meere perdition of the Turkish Fleete: every man put himselfe into Triumph. Some to dance, some to make Bonfires, each man, to what Sport and Reuels his addition leads him. For besides these beneficiall Newes, it is the Celebration of his Nuptiall. So much was his pleasure should be proclaimed. All offices are open, & there is full libertie of Feasting from this pre-present houre of sine, till the Bell have told eleuen.

Blesse the Isle of Cyprus, and our Noble Generall Othello. Exeu.

Enter Othello, Desdemona, Cassio, and Attendants.

Otho. Good Michael, looke you to the guard to night.
Let's teach our selues that Honourable stop,
Not to out-sport discretion.
Cas. Iago, hath direction what to do.
But notwithstanding with my personall eye
Will I looke to't.
Otho. Iago, is most honest:
Michael, goodnight. To morrow with your earliest,
Let me haue speech with you. Come my deere Loue,
The purchase made, the fruites are to ensue,
That profit's yet to come 'tweene me, and you.
Goodnight.

Enter Iago.

Cas. Welcome Iago: we must to the Watch.
Iago. Not this houre Lieutenant: 'tis not yet ten o'th'clocke. Our Generall cast vs thus early for the loue of his Desdemona: Who, let vs not therefore blame; he hath not yet made wanton the night with her: and she is sport for Iouc.
Cas. She's a most exquisite Lady.
Iago. And Ile warrant her, full of Game.
Cas. Indeed shes a most fresh and delicate creature.
Iago. What an eye she has?
Methinkes it sounds a parley to prouocation.
Cas. An inuiting eye:
And yet me thinker right modest.
Iago. And when she speakes,
Is it not an Alarum to Loue?
Cas. She is indeed perfection.
Iago. Well: happinesse to their Sheetes. Come Lieutenant, I haue a stope of Wine, and neere without are a brace of Cypruss Gallants, that would faine haue a measure to the health of blacke Othello.
Cas. Not to night, good Iago. I haue very poore, and vnhappie Braines for drinking. I could well wish Courtesie would inuent some other Custome of entertainment.
Iago. Oh, they are our Friends: but one Cup, Ile drinke for you.
Cassio. I haue drunke but one Cup to night, and that was craftily qualified too; and behold what inouation it makes heere. I am infortunate in the infirmity, and dare not taske my weaknesse with any more.
Iago. What man? 'Tis a night of Reuels, the Gallants desire it.
Cas. Where are they?
Iago. Heere, at the doore: I pray you call them in.
Cas. Ile do't, but it dislikes me. Exit.
Iago. If I can fasten but one Cup vpon him
With that which he hath drunke to night already,
He'l be as full of Quarrell, and offence
As my yong Mistris dogge.
Now my sicke Foole Roderigo,
Whom Loue hath turn'd almost the wrong side out,
To Desdemona hath to night Carrowes'd.
Potations, pottle-deepe; and he's to watch.
Three else of Cyprus, Noble swelling Spirites,
(That hold their Honours in a wary distance,
The very Elements of this Warrelike Isle)
Haue I to night flustet'd with flowing Cups,
And they Watch too.
Now 'mongst this Flocke of drunkards
Am I put to our Cassio in some Action
That may offend the Isle. But here they come.

Enter Cassio, Montano, and Gentlemen.

If Consequence do but approue my dreame,
My Boate sailes freely, both with winde and Streame.
Cas. Fore heauen, they haue given me a rouse already.
Mon. Good-faith a little one: not past a pint, as I am a Souldier.
Iago. Some Wine hoa.
And let me the Cannakin clinke, clinke:
And let me the Cannakin clinke.
A Souldiers a man: Oh, man's life's but a span,
why then let a Souldier drinke.
Some Wine Boyes.
Cas. 'Fore Heauen: an excellent Song.
Iago. I learn'd it in England: where indeed they are most potent in Potting. Your Dane, your Germaine, and your swag-belly'd Hollander, (drinke hoa) are nothing to your English.
Cassio. Is your Englishmen so exquisite in his drinking?
Iago. Why, he drinkes you with facilitie, your Dane dead drunke. He swaeates not to ouerthrow your Almaine. He giues your Hollander a vomit, ere the next Pottle can be fill'd.
Cas. To the health of our Generall.
Mon. I am for it Lieutenant: and Ile do you Iustice.
Iago Oh sweet England.
King Stephen was and a worthy Peere,
His Breeches cost him but a Crowne,
He held them Six pence all to dearc,
With that he cal d the Tailor Lowse a
He was a wight of high Renowne,
And thou art but of low degree:
'Tis Pride that pulls the Country downe,
And take thy auld Cloaky about thee.
Some Wine hoa.
Cassio. Why this is a more exquisite Song then the other.
Iago. Will you hear't again?
Cas. No: for I hold him to be vnworthy of his Place, that do's those things. Well: heau'ns above all: and there be soules must be saued, and there be soules must not be saued.
Iago. It's true, good Lieutenant.
Cas. For mine owne part, no offence to the Generall, nor any man of qualitie: I hope to be saued.
Iago. And so do I too Lieutenant.
Cassio. I: (but by your leaue) not before me. The Lieutenant is to be saued before the Ancient. Let's haue no more of this: let's to our Affaires. Forgiue vs our sinnes: Gentlemen let's looke to our business. Do not thinke Gentlemen, I am drunke: this is my Ancient, this is my right hand, and this is my left. I am not drunke now: I can stand well enough, and I speake well enough.
Gent. Excellent well.
Cas. Why very well then: you must not thinke then, that I am drunke. Exeu.
Mont. To th'Platforme (Masters) come, let's see the Watch.
Iago. You see this Fellow, that is gone before,
He's a Souldier, fit to stand by Caesar,
And giue direction. And do but see his vice,
'Tis to his vertue, a just Equinox,

The

The one as long as th'other. 'Tis pitie of him:
I feare the trust Othello puts him in,
On some odde time of his infirmitie
Will shake this Island.

Mont. But is he often thus?

Iago. 'Tis ever more his prologue to his sleepe,
He'le watch the Horologe a double Set,
If Drinke rocke not his Cradle.

Mont. It were well
The Generall were put in mind of it:
Perhaps he sees it not, or his good nature
Prizes the vertue that appeares in Cassio,
And lookes not on his evills: is not this true?

Enter Rodorigo.

Iago. How now Rodorigo?
I pray you after the Lieutenant, go.

Mon. And 'tis great pitty, that the Noble Moore
Should hazard such a Place, as his owne Second
With one of an ingraft Infirmitie,
It were an honest Action, to say so
To the Moore.

Iago. Not I, for this faire Island,
I do love Cassio well: and would do much
To cure him of this evill. But heare, what noise?

Enter Cassio pursuing Rodorigo.

Cas. You Rogue: you Rascall.

Mon. What's the matter Lieutenant?

Cas. A Knave teach me my duties? Ile beate the Knave into a Twiggen-Bottle.

Rod. Beate me?

Cas. Dost thou prate, Rogue?

Mon. Nay, good Lieutenant:
I pray you Sir, hold your hand.

Cassio Let me go (Sir)
Or Ile knocke you o're the Mazzard.

Mon. Come, come: you're drunke.

Cassio. Drunke?

Iago. Away I say: go out and cry a Mutinie.
Nay good Lieutenant. Alas Gentlemen:
Helpe hoa Lieutenant. Sir Montano:
Helpe Masters. Heere's a goodly Watch indeed.
Who's that which rings the Bell: Diablo, hoa:
The Towne will rise. Fie, fie Lieutenant,
You'le be asham'd for ever.

Enter Othello, and Attendants

Othe. What is the matter heere?

Mon. I bleed still, I am hurt to th'death. He dies.

Othe. Hold for your lives.

Iag. Hold hoa: Lieutenant, Sir Montano, Gentlemen:
Have you forgot all place of sense and duties?
Hold. The Generall speaks to you: hold for shame.

Oth. Why how now hoa? From whence ariseth this?
Are we turn'd Turkes? and to our selves do that
Which Heaven hath forbid the Ottomittes:
For Christian shame, put by this barberous Brawles:
He that stirs next, to carve for his owne rage,
Holds his soule light: He dies upon his Motion.
Silence that dreadfull Bell, it frights the Isle,
From her propriety. What is the matter, Masters?
Honest Iago that lookes dead with greeting,
Speake: who began this? On thy love I charge thee?

Iago. I do not know: Friends all, but now, even now.
In Quarter, and in terms like Bride, and Groome
Devesting them for Bed: and then, but now:
(As if some Planet had vnwisted men)
Swords out, and cliking one at others breastes,
In opposition bloody. I cannot speake
Any beginning to this peevish odds,
And would, in Action glorious, I had lost
Those legges, that brought me to a part of it.

Othe. How comes it (Michael) you are thus forgot?

Cas. I prey you pardon me, I cannot speake.

Othe. Worthy Montano, you were wont to be civill:
The gravitie, and stillnesse of your youth
The world hath noted. And your name is great
In mouthes of wisest Censure. What's the matter
That you vnlace your reputation thus,
And spend your rich opinion, for the name
Of a night-brawler? Give me satisfaction to it.

Mon. Worthy Othello, I am hurt to danger,
Your Officer Iago, can informe you.
While I spare speech which something now offends me
Of all that I do know, nor know I ought
By me, that's said, or done amiss this night,
Vnlesse self-charitie be sometimes a vice,
And to defend our selves, it be a sinne
When violence assailes vs.

Othe. Now by Heaven,
My blood begins my safer Guides to rule,
And passion (having my best judgement collaid)
Assaies to leade the way. If I once stir,
Or do but lift this Arme, the best of you
Shall sinke in my rebuke. Give me to know
How this foule Rout began: Who set it on,
And he that is approv'd in this offence,
Though he had twinn'd with me, both at a birth,
Shall loose me. What in a Towne of warre,
Yet wilde, the peoples hearts brim-full of feare,
To Manage private, and domestic Quarrell?
In night, and on the Court and Guard of safetie?
'Tis monstrous: Iago, who began't?

Mon. If partially Affin'd, or league in office,
Thou dost deliver more, or lesse than Truth,
Thou art no Souldier.

Iago. Touch me not so neere,
I had rather have this tongue cut from my mouth,
Then it should do offence to Michael Cassio.
Yet I persuade my selfe, to speake the truth
Shall nothing wrong him. This is Generall:
Montano and my selfe being in speech,
There comes a Fellow, crying out for helpe,
And Cassio following him with determin'd Sword
To execute vpon him. Sir, this Gentleman,
Steppes in to Cassio, and entreats his pauses
My selfe, the crying Fellow did pursue,
Least by his clamour (as it so fell out)
The Towne might fall in fright. He, (swift of foote)
Out-ran my purpose: and I return'd then rather
For that I heard the clinke, and fall of Swords,
And Cassio high in oath: Which till to night
I nere might say before. When I came backe
(For this was briefe) I found them close together
At blow, and thrust, even as againe they were
When you your selfe did part them.
More of this matter cannot I report.
But Men are Men: The best sometimes forgot,
Though Cassio did some little wrong to him,
As men in rage strike those that wish them best,
Yet surely Cassio, I believe receiv'd
From him that fled, some strange Indignitie,
Which patience could not passe.

Oth. I know Iago
Thy honestie, and loue doth mince this matter,
Making it light to Cassio: Cassio, I loue thee,
But never more be Officer of mine.

Enter Desdemona attended.

Looke if my gentle Loue be not rais'd vp:
Ile make thee an example.
Des. What is the matter (Deare?)
Oth. All's well, Sweeting:
Come away to bed. Sir for your hurts,
My selfe will be your Surgeon. Lead him off:
Iago, looke with care about the Towne,
And silence those whom this vil'd brawle distracted.
Come Desdemona, 'tis the Souldiers life,
To haue their Balmy slumbers wak'd with strife. Exit.
Iago. What are you hurt Lieutenant?
Cas. I, past all Surgery.
Iago. Marry Heauen forbid.
Cas. Reputation, Reputation, Reputation: Oh I haue lost my Reputation. I haue lost the immortall part of myselfe, and what remaines is bestiall. My Reputation, Iago, my Reputation.
Iago. As I am an honest man I had thought you had receiued some bodily wound; there is more sence in that then in Reputation. Reputation is an idle, and most false imposition; oft got without merit, and lost without deseruing. You haue lost no Reputation at all, vnleſſe you repute your selfe such a loofer. What man, there are more wayes to recouer the Generall again. You are but now cast in his moode, (a punishment more in policie, then in malice) euen so as one would beate his offenceless dogge, to affright an Imperious Lyon. Sue to him again, and he's yours.
Cas. I will rather sue to be despis'd, then to deceiue so good a Commander, with so slight, so drunken, and so indiscreet an Officer. Drunke? And speake Parrot? And squabble? Swagger? Swearе? And discourse Fustian with ones owne shadow? Oh thou invisible spirit of Wine, if thou hast no name to be knowne by, let vs call thee Diuell.
Iago. What was he that you follow'd with your Sword? What had he done to you?
Cas. I know not.
Iago. Is't possible?
Cas. I remember a messe of things, but nothing distinctly: a Quarrell, but nothing wherefore. Oh, that men should put an Enemie in their mouthes, to steale away their Braines? that we should with ioy, pleasance, reuell and applause, transforme our selues into Beasts.
Iago. Why? But you are now well enough: how came you thus recouered?
Cas. It hath pleas'd the diuell drunkenesse, to giue place to the diuell wrath, one vnperfectnesse, shewes me another to make me frankly despise my selfe.
Iago. Come, you are too seuere a Moraller. As the Time, the Place, & the Condition of this Country stands I could heartily wish this had not befalne: but since it is, as it is, mend it for your owne good.
Cas. I will aske him for my Place againe, he shall tell me, I am a drunkard: had I as many mouthes as Hydra, such an answer would stop them all. To be now a sensible man, by and by a Foole, and presently a Beast. Oh strange! Every inordinate cup is vnblest, and the Ingredient is a diuell, Iago. Come, come: good wine, is a good familiar Creature, if it be well vs'd: exclaime no more against it. And good Lieutenant, I thinke, you thinke I loue you.
Cassio. I haue well approued it, Sir. I drunke?
Iago. You, or any man liuing, may be drunke at a time man. I tell you what you shall do: Our General's Wife, is now the Generall. I may say so, in this respect, for that he hath deuoted, and giuen vp himselfe to the Contemplation, marke: and deuotement of her parts and Graces. Confesse your selfe freely to her: Importune her helpe to put you in your place againe. She is of so free, so kinde, so apt, so blessed a disposition, she holds it a vice in her goodnesse, not to do more then she is requested. This broken ioyne betweene you, and her husband, entreat her to splinter. And my Fortunes against any lay worth naming, this crocke of your Loue, shall grow stonger, then it was before.
Cassio. You aduise me well.
Iago. I protest in the sincerities of Loue, and honest kindnesse.
Cassio. I thinke it freely: and betimes in the morning, I will beseech the vertuous Desdemona to vndertake for me: I am desperate of my Fortunes if they check me.
Iago. You are in the right: good night Lieutenant, I must to the Watch.
Cassio. Good night, honest Iago.

Exit Cassio.

Iago. And what's he then.
That saies I play the Villaine?
When this aduise is free I giue, and honest,
Proball to thinking, and indeed the course
To win the Moore againe.
For 'tis most easie
Th'inclyning Desdemona to subdue
In any honest Suite. She's frean'd as fruitefull
As the free Elements. And then for her
To win the Moore, were to renounce his Baptisme,
All Seales, and Sinbols of redeemed sin:
His Soule is so enfetter'd to her Loue,
That she may make, vnmake, do what she lift,
Euen as her Appetite shall play the God,
With his weake Function. How am I then a Villaine,
To Counsell Cassio to this parallell course,
Directly to his good? Diuinitie of hell,
When diuels will the blackest sinnes put on,
They do suggest at first with heauenly shewes,
As I do now. For whiles this honest Foole
Plies Desdemona, to repaire his Fortune,
And she for him, pleades strongly to the Moore,
Ile powre this pestilence into his eare:
That she repeales him, for her bodies Lust:
And by how much she striues to do him good,
She shall vnde her Credite with the Moore.
So will I turne her vertue into pitch,
And out of her owne goodnesse make the Net,
That shall en-mesh them all.
How now Rodorigo?

Enter Rodorigo.

Rodorigo. I do follow heere in the Chace, not like a Hound that hunts, but one that filles vp the Cry. My Money is almost spent; I haue bin to night exceedingly well Cudgell'd: And I thinke the issue will will bee, I shall have so much experience for my pains;

And so, with no money at all, and a little more Wit, returne again to Venice.

Iago. How poore are they that have not Patience?
What wound did ever heale but by degrees?
Thou know'st we worke by Wit, and not by Witchcraft
And Wit depends on dilatory time:
Does not go well? Cassio hath beaten thee,
And thou by that small hurt hath cashier'd Cassio
Though other things grow faire against the Sun,
Yet Fruites that blossome first, will first be ripe:
Content thy selfe, a-while. In troth 'tis Morning;
Pleasure, and Action, make the houres seeme short.
Retire thee, go where thou art Billeted:
Away, I say, thou shalt know more hereafter:
Nay get thee gone. Exit Rodrigo.
Two things are to be done:
My Wife must move for Cassio to her Mistris:
Ile set her on my selfe, a-while, to draw the Moore apart,
And bring him ianope, when he may Cassio finde
Soliciting his wife: I, that's the way:
Dull not Device, by coldnesse, and delay. Exit.

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Enter Cassio, Musicians, and Clowne.

Cassio. Masters, play here, I will content your paines,
Something that's briefe: and bid good morrow Generall.

Clo. Why Masters, have your Instruments been in Naples, that they speake i'th' Nose thus?

Mus. How Sir? how?

Clo. Are these I pray you, wind-Instruments?

Mus. I marry are they sir.

Clo. Oh, thereby hangs a tale.

Mus. Whereby hangs a tale, sir?

Clow. Marry sir, by many a wind Instrument that I know. But Masters, here's money for you: and the Generall so likes your Musick, that he desires you for loues sake to make no more noise with it.

Mus. Well Sir, we will not.

Clo. If you have any Musicke that may not be heard, too't again. But (as they say) no more Musicke, the Generall doe's not greatly care.

Mus. We have none such, sir.

Clow. Then put up your Pipes in your bagge, for Ile away. Go, vanish into aire, away. Exit Mus.

Cassio Dost thou heare me, mine honest Friend?

Clo No, I heare not your honest Friend:
heare you.

Cassio. Prythee keepe vp thy Quillets, there's a poore peece of Gold for thee: if the Gentlewoman that attends the Generall be stirring, tell her, there's one Cassio entreats her a litle in fauour of Speech. Wilt thou do this?

Clo. She is stirring sir: if she will stirre hither, I shall seeme to notifie vnto her. Exit Clo.

Enter Iago.

In happy time, Iago.

Iago. You have not bin a-bed then?

Cassio. Why no: the day had broke before we parted. I have made bold (Iago) to send in to your wife.
My suit to her is, that she will to vertuous Desdemona Preferre me to your Musicke.

Iago. By'ffaithes very forward.
Anon for this, I will set your Musicke.
And I'le direct mysonne to draw the Moore
Out of the way, that your conference may be more free. Exit

Cassio. I humbly thanke you for't. I never knew
A Florentine more kind, and honest.

Enter Emilia.

Emil. Good morrow (good Lieutenant) I am sorry
For your displeasure: but all will sure be well.
The Generall and his wife are talking of it,
And the speeches for you friendly. The Moore replies
That he you hurt is of great Fame in Cyprus,
And great Affinitie: and that in wholesome Wisdome
He might not but refuse you. But he protests he loves you
And needs no other Suitor, but his likings
To bring you in again.

Cassio. Yet I beseech you,
If you think fit, or that it may be done,
Give me advantage of some brief Discourse
With Desdemona alone.

Emil. Pray you come in:
I will bestow you where you shall have time
To speake your bosome freely.

Cassio. I am much bound to you.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Othello, Iago, and Gentlemen.

Oth. These Letters give (Iago) to the Pylot,
And by him do my duties to the Senate:
That done, I will be walking on the Workes,
Repaire there to me.

Iago. Well, my good Lord, I'le do't.

Oth. This Fortification (Gentlemen) shall we see't?

Gent. Well waite vpon your Lordship. Exeunt

Scena Tertia.

Enter Desdemona, Cassio, and Emilia.

Des. Be thou assur'd (good Cassio) I will do
All my abilities in thy behalfe.

Emil. Good Madam do:
I warrant it grieues my Husband,
As if the cause were his.

Des. Oh that's an honest Fellow. Doubt not Cassio
But I will haue my Lord, and you again
As friendly as you were.

Cassio. Bounteous Madam,
Whatever shall become of Michael Cassio,
He's never any thing but your seruant.

Des. I know't: I thanke you: you do loue my Lord.
You loue him now he long, and he you will shortly
He shall in strongest sense stand no further off,
Then to a politicke distance.

Cassio. I, but Lady,
That policie may either hold so long,
Or feede vpon such nice and wonted dieta,
Or breede itself so out of Circumstance,
That I being absent, and my place supply'd,
My Generall will forget my Loue, and Seruice.

Des. Do not doubt that: before Emilia here,

I give thee warrant of thy place. Assure thee,
If I do vow a friendship, I'le performe it
To the last Article. My Lord shall never rest.
I'le watch him tame, and talke him out of patience;
His Bed shall seeme a Schoole, his Board a Shrift,
I'le interrupt each thing he do's
With Cassio's suite: Therefore be merry Cassio,
For thy Solicitor shall rather dye,
Then give thy cause away.

Enter Othello, and Iago.

Emil. Madam, here comes my Lord.
Cassio. Madam, I'le take my leaue.
Des. Why stay, and heare me speake.
Cassio. Madam, not now: I am very ill at ease,
Vnfit for mine owne purposes.
Des. Well, do your discretion. Exit Cassio.
Iago. Hah? I like not that.
Othel. What dost thou say?
Iago. Nothing my Lord; or if—I know not what.
Othel. Was not that Cassio parted from my wife?
Iago. Cassio my Lord? No sure, I cannot thinke it
That he would steale away so guilty-like,
Seeing your coming.
Oth. I do believe 'twas he.
Des. How now my Lord?
I haue bin talking with a Suitor here,
A man that languishes in your displeasure.
Oth. Who is't you meane?
Des. Why your Lieutenant Cassio: Good my Lord,
If I haue any grace, or power to moue you,
His present reconciliation take.
For if he be not one, that truly loues you,
That errs in Ignorance, and not in Cunning,
I haue no judgement in an honest face.
I prythee call him backe.
Oth. Went he hence now?
Des. I sooth; so humbled,
That he hath left part of his greefe with mee
To suffer with him. Good Loue, call him backe.
Othel. Not now (sweet Desdemona) some other time.
Des. But shall't be shortly?
Oth. The sooner (Sweet) for you.
Des. Shall't be to night, at Supper?
Oth. No, not to night.
Des. To morrow Dinner then?
Oth. I shall not dine at home:
I meete the Captaines at the Cittadell.
Des. Why then to morrow night, on Tuesday morne,
On Tuesday noone, or night; on Wednesday Morne.
I prythee name the time, but let it not Exceed three dayes. Infaith hee's penitent:
And yet his Trespasse, in our common reason
(Saue that they say the warres must make example)
Out of her beef, is not almost a fault
T'incurre a priuate checke. When shall he come?
Tell me Othello. I wonder in my Soule
What you would aske me, that I should deny,
Or stand so mam'ring on? What? Michael Cassio,
That came a woing with you? and so many a time
(When I haue spoke of you disprainingly)
Hath ta'ne your part, to haue so much to do
To bring him in? Trust me, I could do much.
Oth. Prythee no more: Let him come when he will;
I will deny thee nothing.
Des. Why, this is not a Boone:
'Tis as I should entreate you wear your Gloues,
Or feede on nourishing dishes, or keepe you warme,
Or see to you, to do a peculiar profit
To your owne person. Nay, when I haue a suite
Wherein I mean to touch your Loue indeed,
It shall be full of poise, and difficult weight,
And fearefull to be granted.
Oth. I will deny thee nothing.
Whereon, I do beseech thee, grant me this,
To leaue me but a little to my selfe.
Des. Shall I deny you? No: farewell my Lord.
Oth. Farewell my Desdemona, I'le come to thee straite.
Des. Emilia come; be as your Fancies teach you:
What ere you be, I am obedient. Exit.
Oth. Excellent wretch: Perdition catch my Soule
But I do loue thee: and when I loue thee not,
Chaos is come again.
Iago. My Noble Lord.
Oth. What dost thou say Iago?
Iago. Did Michael Cassio
When he woo'd my Lady, know of your loue?
Oth. He did, from first to last:
Why dost thou aske?
Iago. But for a satisfaction of my Thought,
No further harme.
Oth. Why of thy thought, Iago?
Iago. I did not thinke he had bin acquainted with her.
Oth. O yes, and went between vs very oft.
Iago. Indeed?
Oth. Indeed? I indeed. Discern'st thou ought in that?
Is he not honest?
Iago. Honest, my Lord?
Oth. Honest? I, Honest.
Iago. My Lord, for ought I know.
Oth. What do'st thou thinke?
Iago. Thinke, my Lord?
Oth. Thinke, my Lord? Alas, thou echoest me;
As if there were some Monster in thy thought
Too hideous to be shewne. Thou dost mean something:
I heard thee say even now, thou lik'st not that,
When Cassio left my wife. What did'st not like?
And when I told thee, he was of my Counsaile,
Of my whole course of wooing; thou cried'st, Indeede?
And did'st contract, and purse thy brow together,
As if thou then hadd'st shut vp in thy Braine
Some horrible Conceite. If thou do'st loue me,
Shew me thy thought.
Iago. My Lord, you know I loue you.
Oth. I thinke thou do'st:
And for I know thou'rt full of Loue, and Honestie,
And weigh'st thy words before thou giu'st them breath,
Therefore these stops of thine, fright me the more:
For such things in a false disloyall Knaue
Are tricks of Custome: but in a man that's just,
They're close dilations, working from the heart,
That Passion cannot rule.
Iago. For Michael Cassio,
I dare be sworne, I thinke that he is honest.
Oth. I thinke so too.
Iago. Men should be what they seeme,
Or those that be not, would they might seeme none.
Oth. Certaine, men should be what they seeme.
Iago. Why then I thinke Cassio's an honest man.
Oth. Nay, yet there's more in this?
I prythee speake to me, as to thy thinkings,
As thou dost ruminate, and giue thy worst of thoughts

The

The worst of words.

Iago Good my Lord pardon me,
Though I am bound to every Act of duetie,
I am not bound to that: All Slaues are free:
Vtter my Thoughts? Why say, they are vile, and false?
As where's that Palace, wherein no foule things
Sometimes intrude not? Who has's that breast so pure,
Wherein vncleanly Apprehensions
Keepe Leetes, and Law-dayes, and in Sessions sit
With meditations lawfull?

Oth. Thou do'st conspire against thy Friend (Iago)
If thou but think'st him wrong'd, and mak'st his care
A stranger to thy Thoughts.

Iago. I do beseech you,
Though I perchance am vicious in my guesse
(As I confesse it is my Natures plague
To spy into Abuses, and of my Iealoufie
Shapes faults that are not) that your wisedome
From one, that so imperfectly conceits,
Would take no notice, nor build your selfe a trouble
Out of his scattering, and vnsure obseruance:
It were not for your quiet, nor your good,
Nor for my Manhood, Honesty, and Wisedome,
To let you know my thoughts.

Oth. What dost thou meane?

Iago. Good name in Man, & woman (deere my Lord)
Is the immediate Iewell of their Soules;
Who steales my purse, steales trash:
'Tis something, nothing;
'Twas mine, 'tis his, and has bin slaue to thousands:
But he that filches from me my good Name,
Robs me of that, which not enriches him,
And makes me poore indeed.

Oth. Ile know thy Thoughts.

Iago. You cannot, if my heart were in your hand,
Nor shall not, whil'st 'tis in my custodie.

Oth. Ha?

Iago. Oh, beware my Lord, of iealoufie,
It is the greene-ey'd Monster, which doth mocke
The meate it feeds on. That Cuckold lives in blisse,
Who certaine of his Fate, loues not his wronger:
But oh, what damned minutes tells he o're,
Who dotes, yet doubts: Suspects, yet soundly loues?

Oth. O miserie.

Iago Poore, and Content, is rich, and rich enough,
But Riches finelesse, is as poore as Winter,
To him that ever feares he shall be poore:
Good Heauen, the Soules of all my Tribe defend
From Iealoufie.

Oth. Why? why is this?
Think'st thou, I'd make a Life of Iealoufie;
To follow still the changes of the Moone
With fresh suspitions? No: to be once in doubt,
Is to be resolu'd: Exchange me for a Goat,
When I shall turne the business of my Soule
To such exsufficate, and blow'd Surmises,
Matching thy inference. 'Tis not to make me Iealous,
To say my wife is faire, feeds well, loues company,
Is free of Speech, Sings, Plays, and Dances:
Where Vertue is, these are more vertuous.
Nor from mine owne weake merites, will I draw
The smallest feare, or doubt of her reuolt,
For she had eyes, and chose me. No Iago,
Ile see before I doubt; when I doubt, proue;
And on the proofe, there is no more but this,
Away at once with Loue, or Iealoufie.

Io. I am glad of this: For now I shall have reason
To shew the Loue and Duty that I bearre you
With franker spirit. Therefore (as I am bound)
Receiue it from me. I speake not yet of proofe:
Looke to your wife, obserue her well with Cassio,
Weare your eyes, thus: not Iealious, nor Secure:
I would not have your free, and Noble Nature,
Out of selfe-Bounty, be abus'd: Looke to't:
I know our Country disposition well:
In Venice, they do let Heauen see the pranks
They dare not shew their Husbands.
Their best Conscience,
Is not to leaue't vndone, but keep vnknowne.

Oth. Dost thou say so?

Iago. She did deceiue her Father, marrying you,
And when she seem'd to shake, and feare your loaths,
She lou'd them most.

Oth. And so she did.

Iago. Why go too then:
She that so young could giue out such a Seeming
To seele her Fathers eyes vp, close as Oaks,
He thought 'twas Witchcraft.
But I am much too blame:
I humbly do beseech you of your pardon
For too much loving you.

Oth. I am bound to thee for euer.

Iago. I see this hath a little dash'd your Spirits:

Oth. Not a iot, not a iot.

Iago. Trust me, I feare it has:
I hope you will consider what is spoke
Comes from your Loue.
But I do see, y'are moov'd:
I am to pray you, not to straine my speech
To grosser issues, nor to larger reach,
Then to Suspition.

Oth. I will not.

Iago. Should you do so (my Lord)
My speech should fall into such vilde successe,
Which my Thoughts aym'd not.
Cassio's my worthy Friend:
My Lord, I see y'are moov'd.

Oth. No, not much moov'd:
I do not think but Desdemona's honest.

Iago Long live she so;
And long live you to think so.

Oth. And yet how Nature erring from itselfe.

Iago. I, there's the point:
As (to be bold with you)
Not to affect many proposed Matches
Of her owne Clime, Complexion, and Degree,
Whereto we see in all things, Nature tends:
Foh, one may smel in such, a will most rank,
Foule disproportions. Thoughts vnnatural.
But (pardon me) I do not in position
Distinctly speake of her, though I may feare
Her will, recoyling to her better iudgement,
May fall to match you with her Country formes,
And happily repent.

Oth. Farewell, farewell:
If more thou dost perceiue, let me know more:
Set on thy wife to obserue.
Leaue me Iago.

Iago. My Lord, I take my leaue.

Oth. Why did I marry?
This honest Creature (doubtlesse)
Sees, and knowes more, much more then he vnfolds.

Iag

Iago. My Lord, I would I might increase your Honor
To seas this thing no farther: Leave it to time,
Although 'tis fit that Cassio have his Place;
For sure he fillies it vp with great Ability;
Yet if you please, to him off a-while:
You shall by that perceiue him, and his meanes:
Note if your Lady straine his Entertainment
With any strong, or vehement importunitie,
Much will be seene in that: In the mean time,
Let me be thought too busie in my fears,
(As worthy cause I haue to feare I am)
And hold her free, I do beseech you Honor.
Oth. Feare not my gouernment.
Iago. I once more take my leaue. Exit.
Oth. This Fellow's of exceeding honesty,
And knowes all Qualities with a learn'd Spirit
Of human dealings. If I do proue her Haggard,
Though that her Iesses were my deere heart-strings,
I'ld whiffle her off, and let her downe the winde
To prey at Fortune. Haply, for I am blacke,
And haue not those soft parts of Conuersation
That Chamberers haue: Or for I am declin'd
Into the vale of yeares (yet that's not much)
She's gone. I am abus'd, and my relieufe
Must be to loath her. Oh Curse of Marriage!
That we can call these delicate Creatures ours,
And not their Appetites? I had rather be a Toad,
And liue vpon the vapour of a Dungeon,
Then keepe a corner in the thing I loue
For others vses. Yet 'tis the plague to Great-ones,
Prerogatiu'd are they less then the Base,
'Tis destiny vnshunnable, like death:
Even then, this forked plague is Fated to vs,
When we do quicken. Looke where she comes:

Enter Desdemona and Aemilia.

If she be false, Heauen mock'd it selfe:
I'le not beleeue't.
Des. How now, my deere Othello?
Your dinner, and the generous Islanders
By you inuited, do stand your presence.
Oth. I am too blame.
Des. Why do you speake so faintly?
Are you not well?
Oth. I haue a paine vpon my Forehead, heere.
Des. Why that's with watching, 'twill away againe.
Let me but binde it hard, within this houre
It will be well.
Oth. Your Napkin is too little:
Let it alone: Come, I'le go in with you. Exit.
Des. I am very sorry that you are not well.
Aemil. I am glad I haue found this Napkin:
This was her first remembrance from the Moore,
My wayward Husband hath a hundred times
Wo'd me to steale it. But she so loues the Token,
(For he conior'd her, she should ever keepe it)
That she reserues it euermore about her,
To kisse, and talke too. I'le haue the worke tane out,
And giu't Iago: what he will do with it
Heauen knowes, not I:
I nothing, but to please his Fantasie.

Enter Iago.

Iago. How now? What do you heere alone?
Aemil. Do not you chide: I haue a thing for you.
Iago. You haue a thing for me?
It is a common thing ——
Aemil. Hah?
Iago. To haue a foolish wife.
Aemil. Oh, is that all? What will you giue me now
For that same Handkerchiefe.
Iago. What Handkerchiefe?
Aemil. What Handkerchiefe?
Why that the Moore first gaue to Desdemona,
That which so often you did bid me steale.
Iago. Hast stolne it from her?
Aemil. No: but she let it drop by negligence,
And to th'aduentage, I being heere, took't vp:
Looke, heere 'tis.
Iago. A good wench, give it me.
Aemil. What will you do with't, that you haue beene
so earnest to haue me filch it?
Iago. Why, what is that to you?
Aemil. If it be not for some purpose of import,
Giu't me againe. Poore Lady, she'l run mad
When she shall lacke it.
Iago. Be not acknowne on't:
I haue vse for it. Go, leaue me. Exit Aemil.
I will in Cassio's Lodging loose this Napkin,
And let him finde it. Trifles light as ayre,
Are to the iealious, confirmations strong,
As proofes of holy Writ. This may do something.
The Moore already changes with my poyson:
Dangerous conceits, are in their Natures poysons,
Which at the first are scarce found to distaste:
But with a little act vpon the blood,
Burne like the Mines of Sulphure. I did say so.

Enter Othello.

Looke where he comes: Not Poppy, nor Mandragora,
Nor all the drowsie Syrrops of the world
Shall euer medicine thee to that sweete sleepe
Which thou ow'd'st yesterday.
Oth. Ha, ha, false to me?
Iago. Why how now Generall? No more of that.
Oth. Auaunt, be gone: Thou hast set me on the Rack:
I swearre 'tis better to be much abus'd,
Then but to know't a little.
Iago. How now, my Lord?
Oth. What sense had I, in her stolne houres of Lust?
I saw't not, thought it not: it hurt'd not me:
I slept the next night well, fed well, was free, and merrie.
I found not Cassio's kisses on her Lippes:
He that is robb'd, not wanting what is stolne,
Let him not know't, and he's not robb'd at all.
Iago. I am sorry to heare this?
Oth. I had beene happy, if the generall Campe,
Pyoners and all, had tasted her sweet Body,
So I had nothing knowne. Oh now, for euer
Farewell the Tranquill minde; farewell Content;
Farewell the plumed Troopes, and the bigge Warres,
That makes Ambition, Vertue! Oh farewell,
Farewell the neighing Steed, and the shrill Trumpe,
The Spirit-stirring Drum, th'Eare-piercing Fife,
The Royall Banner, and all Qualitie.
Pride, Pompe, and Circumstance of glorious Warre:
And O you mortall Engines, whose rude throates
Th'immortall Ioues dread Clamours, counterfet,
Farewell: Othello's Occupation's gone.
Iago. Is't possible my Lord?
Oth. Villaine, be sure thou proue my Loue a Whore;
Be sure of it: Giue me the Ocular proofe,

Or by the worth of mine eternall Soule,
Thou had'ſt bin better haue bin borne a Dog
Then anſwer my wak'd wrath.
Iago. Is't come to this?
Oth. Make me to ſee't: or (at the leaſt) ſo proue it,
That the probation bear no Hinge, nor Loope,
To hang a doubt on: Or woe vpon thy life.
Iago. My Noble Lord.
Oth. If thou doſt ſlander her, and torture me,
Never pray more: Abandon all remorſe
On Horrors head, Horrors accumulate:
Do deeds to make Heaven weepe, all Earth amaz'd;
For nothing canſt thou to damnation adde,
Greater then that.
Iago. O Grace! O Heauen forgiue me!
Are you a Man? Haue you a Soule? or Senſe?
God bye you: take mine Office. Oh wretched Foole,
That lou'ſt to make thine Honeſty, a Vice!
Oh monſtrous world! Take note, take note (O World)
To be direct and honeſt, is not ſafe.
I thanke you for this profit, and from hence
Ile loue no Friend, ſith Loue breeds ſuch offence.
Oth. Nay ſtay: thou ſhould'ſt be honeſt.
Iago. I ſhould be wiſe; for Honeſtie's a Foole,
And loſes that it workes for.
Oth. By the World,
I think my Wife be honeſt, and think ſhe is not:
I think that thou art iuſt, and think thou art not:
Ile haue ſome proofe. My name that was as freſh
As Diana Viſage, is now begrim'd and blacke
As mine owne face. If there be Cords, or Knoaes,
Poyſon, or Fire, or ſuffocating ſtreames,
Ile not indure it. Would I were ſatis fied.
Iago. I ſee you are eaten vp with Paſſion:
I do repent me, that I put it to you.
You would be ſatisfied?
Oth. Would? Nay, and I will.
Iago. And may: but how? How ſatisfied, my Lord
Would you the ſuper-viſion groſſely gape on?
Behold her top'd?
Oth. Death, and damnation. Oh!
Iago. It were a tedious difficulty, I think,
To bring them to that Proſpect: Damne them then,
If euer mortall eyes do ſee them bouſter
More then their owne. What then? How then?
What ſhall I ſay? Where's Satisfaction?
It is impoſſible you ſhould ſee this,
Were they as prime as Goates, as hot as Monkeyes,
As ſalt as Wolues in pride, and Fooles as groſſe
As Ignorance, made drunke. But yet, I ſay,
If imputation, and ſtrong circumſtances,
Which leade directly to the doore of Truth,
Will giue you ſatisfaction, you might haue't.
Oth. Giue me a liuing reaſon ſhe's diſloyall.
Iago. I do not like the Office.
But ſith I am entred in this cauſe ſo faere
(Prick'd too't by fooliſh Honeſty, and Loue)
I will go on. I lay with Caſſio lately,
And being troubled with a raging tooth,
I could not ſleepe. There are a kinde of men,
So loſt of Soule, that in their ſleepes will mutter
Their Affayres: one of this kinde is Caſſio:
In ſleepe I heard him ſay, ſweet Deſdemona,
Let vs be wary, let vs hide our Loues,
And then (Sir) would he gripe, and wring my hand:
Cry, oh ſweet Creature: then kiſſe me hard,
As if he plucke vp kiſſes by the roottes,
That grew vpon my lippes, laid his Leg ouer my Thigh,
And ſigh, and kiſſe, and then cry curſed Fate,
That gaue thee to the Moore.
Oth. O monſtrous! monſtrous!
Iago. Nay, this was but his Dreame.
Oth. But this denoted a fore-gone conclufion,
'Tis a ſhrew'd doubt, though it be but a Dreame.
Iago. And this may helpe to thicken other proofes,
That do demonſtrate thinly.
Oth. Ile teare her all to peeces.
Iago. Nay yet be wiſe: yet we ſee nothing done,
She may be honeſt yet: Tell me but this,
Haue you not ſometimes ſeene a Handkerchiefe
Spotted with Strawberries, in your wiues hand?
Oth. I gaue her ſuch a one: 'twas my firſt gift.
Iago. I know not that: but ſuch a Handkerchief
(I am ſure it was your wiues) did I to day
See Caſſio wipe his Beard with.
Oth. If it be that.
Iago. If it be that, or any, it was hers.
It ſpeakes againſt her with the other proofes.
Othel. O that the Slaue had forty thouſand liues.
One is too poore, too weake for my reuenge.
Now do I ſee 'tis true. Looke here Iago,
All my fond loue thus do I blow to Heauen. 'Tis gone.
Ariſe blacke vengeance, from the hollow hell,
Yeeld vp (O Loue) thy Crowne, and hearted Throne
To tyrannous Hate. Swell bolſome with thy fraught,
For 'tis of Aſpicks tongues.
Iago. Yet be content.
Oth. Oh blood, blood, blood.
Iago. Patience I ſay: your minde may change.
Oth. Never Iago. Like to the Pontickie Sea,
Whoſe Icie Current, and compulſiue courſe,
Ne'r keepes retyring ebbe, but keepes due on
To the Propontick, and the Hellepont:
Euen ſo my bloody thoughts, with violent pace
Shall ne'r looke backe, ne'r ebbe to humble Loue,
Till that a capeable, and wide Reuenge
Swallow them vp. Now by yond Marble Heauen,
In the due reuerence of a Sacred vow,
I heere engage my words.
Iago. Do not riſe yet:
Witneſſe you euer-burning Lights aboue,
You Elements, that clip vs round about,
Witneſſe that heere Iago doth giue vp
The execution of his wit, hands, heart,
To wrong'd Othello's Service. Let him command,
And to obey ſhall be in me remorſe,
What bloody buſineſſe euer.
Oth. I greet thy loue,
Not with vaine thanks, but with acceptance bounteous,
And will vpon the inſtant put thee too't.
Within thefe three dayes let me heare thee ſay,
That Caſſio's not aliue.
Iago. My Friend is dead:
'Tis done at your Requeſt.
But let her liue.
Oth. Damne her lewde Minx:
O damne her, damne her.
Come go with me a-part, I will withdraw
To furniſh me with ſome ſwift meanes of death
For the faire Diuell
Now art thou my Lieutenant.
Iago. I am your owne for euer. Exeunt.

Scena

Scena Quarta.

Enter Desdemona, Æmilia and Clown.

Des. Do you know Sirrah, where Lieutenant Cassio lyes?

Clow. I dare not say he lies any where.

Des. Why man?

Clo. He's a Souldier, and for me to say a Souldier lyes, 'tis stabbing.

Des. Go too: where lodges he?

Clo. To tell you where he lodges, is to tell you where I lye.

Des. Can any thing be made of this?

Clo. I know not where he lodges, and for mee to devise a lodging, and say he lies heere, or he lies there, were to lye in mine owne throat.

Des. Can you enquire him out? and be edified by report?

Clo. I will Catechize the world for him, that is, make Questions, and by them answer.

Des. Seeke him bidde him come hither. tell him, I have moou'd my Lord on his behalfe, and hope all will be well.

Clo. To do this, is within the compasse of man Wit, and therefore I will attempt the doing it. Exit Clo.

Des. Where should I loose the Handkerchiefe, Æmelia?

Æmil. I know not Madam.

Des. Believe me, I had rather have lost my purse Full of Crezadoes. And but my Noble Moore Is true of minde, and made of no such baseness, As jealous Creatures are, it were enough To put him to ill thinking.

Æmil. Is he not jealious?

Des. Who, he? I think the Sun where he was borne, Drew all such humors from him.

Æmil. Looke where he comes.

Enter Othello.

Des. I will not leave him now, till Cassio be Call'd to him. How is't with you, my Lord?

Oth. Well my good Lady. Oh hardnes to dissemble! How do you, Desdemona?

Des. Well, my good Lord.

Oth. Give me your hand. This hand is moist my Lady.

Des. It hath felt no age, nor knowne no sorrow.

Oth. This argues fruitfulnesse, and liberall heart: Hot, hot, and moyst. This hand of yours requires A sequester from Liberty: Fasting, and Prayer, Much Castigation, Exercise devout, For here's a yong, and sweating Divell here That commonly rebels: 'Tis a good hand, A frank one.

Des. You may (indeed) say so: For 'twas that hand that gave away my heart.

Oth. A liberall hand. The hearts of old, gave hands: But our new Heraldry is hands, not hearts.

Des. I cannot speake of this: Come, now your promise.

Oth. What promise Chucke?

Des. I have sent to bid Cassio come speake with you.

Oth. I have a salt and sorry Rheume offends me: Lend me thy Handkerchiefe.

Des. Heere my Lord.

Oth. That which I gave you.

Des. I have it not about me.

Oth. Not?

Des. No indeed, my Lord.

Oth. That's a fault: That Handkerchiefe Did an Ægypcian to my Mother give: She was a Charmer, and could almost read The thoughts of people. She told her, while she kept it, 'Twould make her Amiable, and subdue my Father Entirely to her love: But if she lost it, Or made a Gift of it, my Fathers eye Should hold her loathed, and his Spirits should hunt After new Fancies. She dying, gave it me, And bid me (when my Fate would have me Wiv'd) To give it her. I did so; and take heede on't, Make it a Darling, like your precious eye: To loose't, or give't away, were such perdition, As nothing else could match.

Des. Is't possible?

Oth. 'Tis true There's Magicke in the web of it: A Sybill that had numbered in the world The Sun to course, two hundred compasses, In her Prophetticke furie sew'd the Worke: The Wormes were hallowed, that did breede the Silke, And it was dyde in Mummey, which the Skilfull Conserv'd of Maidens hearts.

Des. Indeed? Is't true?

Oth. Most veritable, therefore looke too't well.

Des. Then would to Heaven, that I had never feene't!

Oth. Ha? wherefore?

Des. Why do you speake so startingly and rash?

Oth. Is't lost? Is't gon? Speak, is't out o'th'way?

Des. Blesse vs.

Oth. Say you?

Des. It is not lost. but what and if it were?

Oth. How?

Des. I say it is not lost.

Oth. Fetcht, let me see't.

Des. Why so I can: but I will not now: This is a trickie to put me from my suite, Pray you let Cassio be receiv'd again.

Oth. Fetch me the Handkerchiefe, My minde misgives.

Des. Come, come: you'l never meete a more sufficient man.

Oth. The Handkerchiefe.

Des. A man that all his time Hath founded his good Fortunes on your love; Shar'd dangers with you.

Oth. The Handkerchiefe.

Des. Infooth. you are too blame.

Oth. Away. Exit Othello.

Æmil. Is not this man jealious?

Des. I ne'r saw this before. Sure, there's some wonder in this Handkerchilde, I am most unhappy in the losse of it.

Æmil. 'Tis not a yeare or two shewes vs a man: They are all but Stomackes, and we all but Food, They eate vs hongerly, and when they are full They belch vs.

Enter Iago, and Cassio.

Looke you, Cassio and my Husband.

Iago. There is no other way: 'tis she must doo't: And lou'e the happinesse: go, and importune her.

Des.

Des. How now (good Cassio) what's the newes with you?

Cassio. Madam, my former suite. I do beseech you,
That by your vertuous meanes, I may againe
Exist, and be a member of his love,
Whom I, with all the Office of my heart
Intirely honour, I would not be delayd.
If my offence, be of such mortall kinde,
That nor my Service past, nor present Sorrowes,
Nor purpos'd merit in futurity,
Can ransome me into his love againe,
But to know so, must be my benefit:
So shall I clothe me in a forc'd content,
And shut my selfe vp in some other course
To Fortunes Alms.

Des. Alas (thrice-gentle Cassio)
My Aduocation is not now in Tune;
My Lord, is not my Lord; nor should I know him,
Were he in Fauour, as in Humour alter'd.
So helpe me every spirit sanctified,
As I have spoken for you all my best,
And stood within the blanke of his displeasure
For my free speech. You must awhile be patient:
What I can do, I will: and more I will
Then for my selfe, I dare. Let that suffice you.

Iago. Is my Lord angry?

Æmil. He went hence but now:
And certainly in strange vnquietnesse.

Iago. Can he be angry? I have seene the Cannon
When it hath blown his Ranks into the Ayre,
And like the Diuell from his very Arme
Puff'd his owne Brother: And is he angry?
Something of moment then: I will go meet him,
There's matter in't indeed, if he be angry. Exit

Des. I prythee do so. Something sure of State,
Either from Venice, or some vnhatch'd practise
Made demonstrable here in Cyprus, to him,
Hath puddled his clearе Spirit: and in such cases,
Mens Natures wrangle with inferiour things,
Though great ones are their object. 'Tis ever so.
For lets our finger ake, and it endues
Our other healthfull members, even to a sense
Of paine. Nay, we must thinke men are not Gods,
Nor of them looke for such obseruance
As fits the Bridal. Beshrew me much, Æmilia,
I was (vnhandsome Warrior, as I am)
Arraigning his vnkindnesse with my soule:
But now I finde, I had suborn'd the Witnesse,
And he's indited falsely.

Æmil. Pray heauen it be
State matters, as you thinke, and no Conception,
Nor no Iealious Toy, concerning you.

Des. Alas the day, I never gaue him cause.

Æmil. But Iealious soules will not be answer'd so;
They are not ever Iealious for the cause,
But Iealious, for they're Iealious it is a Monster
Begot vpon it selfe, borne on it selfe.

Des. Heauen keepe the Monster from Othello's mind.

Æmil. Lady, Amen.

Des. I will go seeke him. Cassio, walke heere about:
If I doe finde him fit, I'le moue your suite,
And seeke to effect it to my vtermost. Exit

Cas. I humbly thanke your Ladyship.

Enter Bianca.

Bian. Saue you Friend Cassio.

Cassio. What make you from home?
How is't with you, my most faire Bianca?
Indeed (sweet Loue) I was coming to your house.

Bian. And I was going to your Lodging Cassio.
What? keepe a week away? Seuen dayes, and Nights?
Eight score eight houres? And Loues absence heauen
More tedious then the Diall, eight score times?
Oh weary reck'ning.

Cassio. Pardon me, Bianca:
I haue this while with leaden thoughts been pest,
But I shall in a more continuate time
Strike off this score of absence. Sweet Bianca
Take me this worke out.

Bianca. Oh Cassio, whence came this?
This is some Token from a newer Friend,
To the sels-Absence: now I feele a Cause:
Is't come to this? Well, well.

Cassio. Go to, woman:
Throw your vilde guesses in the Diuels teeth,
From whence you haue them. You are iealious now,
That this is from some Mistris, some remembrance;
No, in good troth Bianca.

Bian. Why, who's is it?

Cassio. I know not neither:
I found it in my Chamber,
I like the worke well; Ere it be demanded
(As like enough it will) I would haue it copied:
Take it, and doo't, and leaue me for this time.

Bian. Leaue you? Wherefore?

Cassio. I do attend heere on the Generall,
And thinke it no addition, nor my wish
To haue him see me woman'd.

Bian. Why, I pray you?

Cassio. Not that I loue you not.

Bian. But that you do not loue me.
I pray you bring me on the way a little,
And say, if I shall see you soone enough?

Cassio. 'Tis but a little way that I can bring you,
For I attend heere: But I'le see you soone.

Bian. 'Tis very good. I must be circumstance'd.
Exeunt omnes.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter Othello, and Iago.

Iago. Will you think so?

Oth. Think so, Iago?

Iago. What, to kiss in priuate?

Oth. An vnauthorm'd kisse?

Iago. Or to be naked with her Friend in bed,
An hour, or more, not meaning any harme?

Oth. Naked in bed (Iago) and not meane harme?
It is hypocrisie against the Diuell:
They that mean vertuously, and yet do so,
The Diuell their vertue tempts, and they tempt Heauen.

Iago. If they do nothing, 'tis a Veniall slip:
But if I give my wife a Handkerchiefe.

Oth. What then?

Iago. Why then 'tis hers (my Lord) and being her,
She may (I thinke) bestow't on any man.

Oth. She is Protectresse of her honor too:
May she giue that?

Iago. Her honor is an Essence that's not seene,
They haue it very oft, that haue it not.
But for the Handkerchiefe.
Otho. By heauen, I would most gladly haue forgot it:
Thou saidst (oh, it comes ore my memorie,
As doth the Raven o're the infectious house:
Boading to all) he had my Handkerchiefe.
Iago. I: what of that?
Otho. That's not so good now.
Iag. What if I had said, I had seene him do you wrong?
Or heard him say (as Knaues be such abroad,
Who hauing by their owne importunate suit,
Or voluntary dotage of some Mistris,
Conuinced or supply'd them, cannot chuse
But they must blab.)
Oth. Hath he said any thing?
Iago. He hath (my Lord) but be you well assur'd,
No more then he'le vn-sweare.
Oth. What hath he said?
Iago. Why, that he did: I know not what he did.
Otho. What? What?
Iago. Lye.
Oth. With her?
Iago. With her? On her: what you will.
Otho. Lye with her? lye on her? We say lye on her, when they be-lye-her. Lye with her: that's foulsome: Handkerchiefe: Confessions: Handkerchiefe. To confesse, and be hang'd for his labour. First, to be hang'd, and then to confesse: I tremble at it. Nature would not inuest her selfe in such shadowing passion, without some Instruction. It is not words that shakes me thus, (pish) Noses, Eares, and Lippes: is't possible. Confesse? Handkerchiefe? O diuell. Falls in a Trance.
Iago. Work on,
My Medicine works. Thus credulous Fooles are caught,
And many worthy, and chast Dames even thus,
(All guiltlesse) meere reproach: what ho? My Lord?
My Lord, I say: Othello.

Enter Cassio.

How now Cassio?
Cas. What's the matter?
Iago: My Lord is falne into an Epilepsie,
This is his second Fit: he had one yesterday.
Cas. Rub him about the Temples.
Iago. The Lethargie must haue his quiet course:
If not, he foames at mouth: and by and by
Breakes out to sauage madnesse. Looke, he stirres:
Do you withdraw your selfe a little while,
He will recouer straight: when he is gone,
I would on great occasion, speake with you.
How is it Generall? Haue you not hurt your head?
Otho. Dost thou mocke me?
Iago. I mocke you not, by Heauen:
Would you would beare your Fortune like a Man.
Otho. A Horned man's a Monster, and a Beast.
Iago. There's many a Beast then in a populous City,
And many a ciuill Monster.
Otho. Did he confesse it?
Iago. Good Sir, be a man:
Thinke vnto bearded fellow that's but yeak'd
May draw with you. There's Millions now alive,
That nightly lye in those vnproper beds,
Which they dare swaere peculiar. Your case is better.
Oh, 'tis the spight of hell, the Fiends Arch-mock,
To lip a wanton in a secure Couch,
And to suppose her chast. No, let me know,
And knowing what I am, I know what she shall be.
Oth. Oh, thou art wise: 'tis certaine.
Iago. Stand you a while apart,
Confine your selfe but in a patient List,
Whil'st you were here, o're-whelmed with your griefe
(A passion most resulting such a man)
Cassio came hither. I shifted him away,
And layd good scuses vpon your Extasie,
Bad him anon returne: and heere speake with me,
The which he promis'd. Do but encaue your selfe,
And marke the Fleeres, the Gybes, and notable Scornes
That dwell in every Region of his face.
For I will make him tell the Tale anew;
Where, how, how oft, how long ago, and when
He hath, and is againe to cope your wife.
I say, but marke his gesture: marry Patience,
Or I shall say y'are all in all in Spleene,
And nothing of a man.
Otho. Do'st thou heare, Iago,
I will be found most cunning in my Patience:
But (do'st thou heare) most bloody.
Iago. That's not amisse,
But yet keepe time in all: will you withdraw?
Now will I question Cassio of Bianca,
A Hufwife, that by selling her desires
Buyes her selfe Bread, and Cloath. It is a Creature
That dotes on Cassio, (as 'tis the Strumpets plague
To be-guile many, and be-guil'd by one)
He, when he heares of her, cannot refraine
From the excesse of Laughter. Heere he comes.

Enter Cassio.

As he shall smile, Otheello shall go mad:
And his vnbookish Iealousie must construe
Poore Cassio's smiles, gestures, and lights behaviours
Quite in the wrong. How do you Lieutenant?
Cas. The worser, that you giue me the addition,
Whose want even kilies me.
Iago. Ply Desdemona well, and you are sure on't:
Now, if this Suit lay in Bianca's dowre,
How quickly should you speed?
Cas. Alas poore Caitiffe.
Oth. Looke how he laughes already.
Iago. I never knew woman loue man so.
Cas. Alas poore Rogue, I thinke indeed she loues me
Oth. Now he denies it faintly: and laughes it out.
Iago. Do you heare Cassio?
Oth. Now he importunes him
To tell it o're: go too, well said, well said.
Iago. She gives it out, that you shall marry her.
Do you intend it?
Cas. Ha, ha, ha.
Oth. Do ye triumph, Roman? do you triumph?
Cas. I marry. What? A customer? prythee beare
Some Charitie to my wit, do not thinke it
So vnwholesome. Ha, ha, ha.
Oth. So, so, so, so: they laugh, that winnes.
Iago. Why the cry goes, that you marry her.
Cas. Prythee say true.
Iago. I am a very Villaine else.
Oth. Haue you scor'd me? Well.
Cas. This is the Monkeys owne giuing out:
She is perswaded I will marry her
Out of her owne loue, and flattery, not out of my promise.

Oth. Iago becomes me: now he begins the story.

Cassio. She was heere even now: she haunts me in every place. I was the other day talking on the Sea-banke with certaine Venetians, and thither comes the Bauble, and falls me thus about my neck.

Oth. Crying oh deere Cassio, as it were: his gesture imports it.

Cassio. So hangs, and lolls, and weepes vpon me. So shakes, and pulls me. Ha, ha, ha.

Oth. Now he tells how she plaid him to my Chamber: oh, I see that nose of yours, but not that dogge, I shall throw it to.

Cassio. Well, I must leave her companie.

Iago. Before me: looke where she comes.

Enter Bianca.

Cas. 'Tis such another Fitchew! marry a perfum'd one? What do you meane by this haunting of me?

Bian. Let the diuell, and his dam haunt you: what did you meane by that same Handkerchiefe, you gaue me even now? I was a fine Foole to take it: I must take out the worke? A likely piece of worke, that you should finde it in your Chamber, and know not who left it there. This is some Minxes token, & I must take out the worke? There, giue it your Hobbey-horse, wherefoever you had it, I'le take out no worke on't.

Cassio. How now, my sweete Bianca? How now? How now?

Oth. By Heaven, that should be my Handkerchiefe.

Bian. If you'le come to supper to night you may, if you will not, come when you are next prepar'd for. Exit

Iago. After her: after her.

Cas. I must, shee'l ryule in the streets else.

Iago. Will you sup there?

Cassio. Yes, I intend so.

Iago. Well, I may chance to see you: for I would very faine speake with you.

Cas. Prythee come: will you?

Iago. Go too: say no more.

Oth. How shall I murther him, Iago.

Iago. Did you perceiue how he laugh'd at his vice?

Oth. Oh, Iago

Iago. And did you see the Handkerchiefe?

Oth. Was that mine?

Iago. Yours by this hand: and to see how he prizes the foolish woman your wife: she gaue it him, and he hath gi'n it his whore.

Oth. I would haue him nine yeeres a killing: A fine woman, a faire woman, a sweete woman?

Iago. Nay, you must forget that.

Othello. I, let her rot and perish, and be damn'd to night, for she shall not liue. No, my heart is turn'd to stone: I strike it, and it hurts my hand. Oh, the world hath not a sweeter Creature: she might lye by an Emperour's side, and command him Taskes.

Iago. Nay, that's not your way.

Oth. Hang her, I do but say what she is: so delicate with her Needle: an admirable Musitian. Oh she will sing the Saueageneſſe out of a Beare: of so high and plenteous wit, and inuention?

Iago. She's the worse for all this.

Oth. Oh, a thousand, a thousand times:
And then of so gentle a condition?

Iago. Too gentle.

Oth. Nay that's certaine:
But yet the pitty of it, Iago: oh Iago, the pitty of it Iago.

Iago. If you are so fond ouer her iniquitie: give her patent to offend, for if it touch not you, it comes near no body.

Oth. I will chop her into Messes: Cuckold me?

Iago. Oh, 'tis foule in her.

Oth. With mine Officer?

Iago. That's fouler.

Oth. Get me some poyson, Iago, this night. I'le not expostulate with her: least her body and beauty vnprouide my mind againe: this night Iago.

Iago. Do it not with poyson, strangle her in her bed, Euen the bed she hath contaminated.

Oth. Good, good:
The Iustice of it pleases: very good.

Iago. And for Cassio, let me be his vnderstaker:
You shall heare more by midnight.

Enter Lodouico, Desdemona, and Attendants.

Oth. Excellent good: What Trumpet is that same?

Iago. I warrant something from Venice,
'Tis Lodouico, this, comes from the Duke.
See, your wife's with him.

Lodo. Saue you worthy Generall.

Oth. With all my heart Sir.

Lod. The Duke, and the Senators of Venice gaue you.

Oth. I kiſſe the Instrument of their pleasures.

Des. And what's the newes, good cousin Lodouico?

Iago. I am very glad to see you Signiour
Welcome to Cyprus.

Lod. I thanke you: how do's Lieuetenant Cassio?

Iago. Liues Sir,

Des. Cousin, there's falne between him, & my Lord,
An vnkind breach: but you shall make all well.

Oth. Are you sure of that?

Des. My Lord?

Oth. This ſaile you not to do, as you will ——

Lod. He did not call: he's busie in the paper.
Is there diuision 'twixt my Lord, and Cassio?

Des. A most vnhappy one: I would do much
T'atone them for the loue I beare to Cassio.

Oth. Fire, and brimstone.

Des. My Lord.

Oth. Are you wise?

Des. What is he angrie?

Lod. May be th'Letter mou'd him.
For as I thinke, they do command him home,
Deputing Cassio in his Gouernment.

Des. Trust me, I am glad on't.

Oth. Indeed?

Des. My Lord?

Oth. I am glad to see you mad.

Des. Why, sweete Othello?

Oth. Diuell.

Des. I haue not deserv'd this.

Lod. My Lord, this would not be beleev'd in Venice,
Though I should sweare I saw't. 'Tis very much,
Make her amends: she weepes.

Oth. Oh diuell, diuell:
If that the Earth could teeme with woman's teares,
Each drop she falls, would prouse Crocodile:
Out of my sight.

Des. I will not stay to offend you,

Lod. Truely obedient Lady:
I do beseech your Lordship call her backe.

Oth. Mistris.
Des. My Lord.
Oth. What would you with her, Sir?
Lod. Who I, my Lord?
Oth. I, you did wish, that I would make her turne:
Sir, she can turne, and turne and yet go on
And turne again. And she can weepe, Sir, weepe.
And she's obedient: as you say obedient
Very obedient: proceed you in your teares.
Concerning this Sir, (oh well-painted passion)
I am commanded home: get you away
I'le send for you anon Sir I obey the Mandate,
And will returne to Venice. Hence, auaunt:
Cassio shall have my Place. And Sir, to night
I do entreat, that we may sup together.
You are welcome Sir to Cyprus.
Goates, and Monkeys. Exit.
Lod. Is this the Noble Moore, whom our full Senate
Call all in all sufficient? Is this the Nature
Whom Passion could not shake? Whose solid vertue
The shot of Accident, nor dart of Chance
Could neither graze, nor pierce?
Iago. He is much chang'd.
Lod. Are his wits safe? Is he not light of Braine?
Iago. He's that he is: I may not breath my censure.
What he might beeif what he might, he is not,
I would to heauen he were.
Lod. What? Strike his wife?
Iago. Faith that was not so well: yet would I knew
That stroke would prove the worst.
Lod. Is it his vse?
Or did the Letters, worke vpon his blood,
And new create his fault?
Iago. Alas, alas:
It is not honestie in me to speake
What I haue seene, and known. You shall obserue him,
And his owne courses will denote him so,
That I may save my speech: do but go after
And marke how he continues.
Lod. I am sorry that I am deceiu'd in him. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Othello and Æmilia.

Oth. You haue seene nothing then?
Æmil. Nor euer heard: nor euer did suspect.
Oth. Yes, you have seene Cassio, and she together.
Æmil. But then I saw no harme: and then I heard,
Each syllable that breath made vp between them.
Oth. What? Did they never whispes?
Æmil. Never, my Lord.
Oth. Nor send you out o'th' way?
Æmil. Never.
Oth. To fetch her Fan, her Gloues, her Mask, nor no-
Æmil. Never my Lord. (thing?
Oth. That's strange.
Æmil. I durst (my Lord) to wager, she is honest:
Lay downe my Soule at stake: If you think other,
Remoue your thought. It doth abuse your bosome:
If any wretch hath put this in your head,
Let Heauen requit it with the Serpents curse,
For if she be not honest, chaste, and true,
There's no man happy. The purest of their Wiues
Is foule as Slander.
Oth. Bid her come hither: go. Exit Æmilia
She swies enough: yet she's a simple Bawd
That cannot sly as much. This is a subtile Whore:
A Closet Lock and Key of Villanous Secrets,
And yet she'le kneele, and pray: I haue seene her do't.

Enter Desdemona and Æmilia.

Des. My Lord, what is your will?
Oth. Pray you Chucke come hither.
Des. What is your pleasure?
Oth. Let me see your eyes: looke in my face.
Des. What horrible Fancie's this?
Oth. Some of your Function Mistris:
Leaue Protestants alone, and shut the doores
Cough, or cry hem, if any bodyeome:
Your Mystery, your Mystery. May dispatch. Exit Æmi.
Des. Vpon my knee, what doth your speech import?
I vnderstand a Fury in your words.
Oth. Why? What art thou?
Des. Your wife my Lord: your true and loyall wife.
Oth. Come swear it: damne thy selfe, least being like one of Heaven, the diuells themselues should feare to seize thee. Therefore be double damn'd, swear thou art honest.
Des. Heauen doth truely know it.
Oth. Heauen truely knowes, that thou art false as hell.
Des. To whom my Lord?
With whom? How am I false?
Oth. Ah Desdemona, away, away, away.
Des. Alas the heavy day: why do you weepe?
Am I the motiue of these teares my Lord?
If happely you my Father do suspect,
An Instrument of this your calling backe,
Lay not your blame on me: if you haue lost him,
I haue lost him too.
Oth. Had it pleas'd Heauen,
To try me with Affliction, had they rain'd
All kind of Sores, and Shames on my bare-head:
Steep'd me in poueritie to the very lippes.
Given to Captiuitie, me, and my vtmost hopes,
I should haue found in some place of my Soule
A drop of patience. But alas, to make me
The fixed Figure for the time of Scorne,
To point his slow, and moving finger at.
Yet could I beare that too, well, very well:
But there where I haue garnerd vp my heart,
Where either I must liue, or beare no life,
The Fountaine from the which my current runnes,
Or else dries vp: to be discarded thence,
Or keepe it as a Cesterne, for foule Toades
To knot and gender in. Turne thy complexion there:
Patience, thou young and Rose-lip'd Cherubin,
I heere looke grim as hell.
Des. I hope my Noble Lord esteemes me honest.
Oth. Oh I, as Summer Flyes are in the Shambles,
That quicken even with blowing. Oh thou weed:
Who art so louely faire, and smell'st so sweete,
That the Sense akes at thee,
Would thou had'st never bin borne.
Des. Alas, what ignorant sin haue I committed?
Oth. Was this faire Paper? This most goodly Booke
Made to write Whore vpon? What committed,

Committed? Oh, thou publicke Commoner,
I should make very Forges of my cheekes,
That would to Cynders burne vp Modestie,
Did I but speake thy deedes. What commited?
Heauen stoppes the Nose at it, and the Moone winks:
The bawdy winde that kisses all it meetes,
Is hush'd within the hollow Myne of Earth
And will not hear't. What commited?

Des. By Heauen you do me wrong.

Otho. Are not you a Strumpet?

Des. No, as I am a Christian.
If to preserue this vessell for my Lord,
From any other foule vnlawfull touch
Be not to be a Strumpet, I am none.

Otho. What, not a Whore?

Des. No, as I shall be saw'd.

Otho. Is't possible?

Des. Oh Heauen forgiue vs.

Otho. I cry you mercy then.
I tooke you for that cunning Whore of Venice,
That married with Othello. You Mistris,

Enter Æmilia.

That haue the office opposite to Saint Peter,
And keepes the gate of hell. You, you: I you,
We haue done our course: there's money for your paines:
I pray you turne the key, and keepe our counsaile. Exit.

Æmil. Alas, what do's this Gentleman conceiue?
How do you Madam? how do you my good Lady?

Des. Faith, halfe a sleepe.

Æmi. Good Madam,
What's the matter with my Lord?

Des. With who?

Æmil. Why, with my Lord, Madam?

Des. Who is thy Lord?

Æmil. He that is yours, sweet Lady

Des. I haue none: do not talke to me, Æmilia,
I cannot weepe: nor answeres haue I none,
But what should go by water. Prythee to night,
Lay on my bed my wedding sheetes, remember,
And call thy husband hither.

Æmil. Heere's a change indeed. Exit.

Des. 'Tis meete I should be vs'd so: very meete.
How haue I bin behaw'd, that he might sticke
The small'st opinion on my least misvse?

Enter Iago, and Æmilia.

Iago. What is your pleasure Madam?
How is't with you?

Des. I cannot tell: those that do teach young Babes
Do it with gentle meanes, and easie taskes
He might haue chid me so: for in good faith
I am a Child to chiding.

Iago. What is the matter Lady?

Æmil. Alas (Iago) my Lord hath so bewhor'd her,
Throwne such dispight, and heavy termes vpon her
That true hearts cannot beare it.

Des. Am I that name, Iago?

Iago. What name, (faire Lady?)

Des. Such as she said my Lord did say I was.

Æmil. He call'd her whore: a Begger in his drinke,
Could not haue laid such termes vpon his Callet.

Iago. Why did he so?

Des. I do not know: I am sure I am none such

Iago. Do not weepe, do not weepe: alas the day.

Æmil. Hath she forsooke so many Noble Matches?
Her Father? And her Country? And her Friends?
To be call'd Whore? Would it not make one weepe?

Des. It is my wretched Fortune.

Iago. Beshrew him for't:
How comes this Tricke vpon him?

Des. Nay, Heauen doth know.

Æmi. I will be hang'd, if some eternall Villaine,
Some base and infinuating Rogue,
Some cogging, cozening Slaue, to get some Office,
Haue not deuis'd this Slander: I will be hang'd else.

Iago. Fie, there is no such man: it is impossible.

Des. If any such there be, Heauen pardon him.

Æmil. A halter pardon him:
And hell gnaw his bones.
Why should he call her Whore?
Who keepes her companie?
What Place? What Time?
What Forme? What Iiklyhood?
The Moore's abus'd by some most villanous Knaue,
Some base notorious Knaue, some scurvy Fellow
Oh Heauens, that such companions thou'd'st vnfold,
And put in every honest hand a whip
To lash the Rascalls naked through the world,
Euen from the East to th'West.

Iago. Speake within doore.

Æmil. Oh fie vpon them: some such Squire he was
That turn'd your wit, the seamy-side without,
And made you to suspect me with the Moore.

Iago. You are a Foole: go too.

Des. Alas Iago,
What shall I do to win my Lord againe?
Good Friend, go to him: for by this light of Heauen,
I know not how I lost him. Heere I kneele:
If ere my will did trespasse 'gainst his Loue,
Either in discourse of thought, or actuall deed,
Or that mine Eyes, mine Eares, or any Sense
Delighted them: or any other Forme,
Or that I do not yet, and euer did,
And euer will, (though he do shake me off
To beggerly diuorcement) Loue him dearely,
Comfort forswere me. Vnkindnesse may do much,
And his vnkindnesse may defeat my life,
But never taint my Loue. I cannot say Whore,
It do's abhorre me now I speake the word,
To do the Act, that might the addition earne,
Not the worlds Masse of vanitie could make me.

Iago. I pray you be content: 'tis but his humour:
The busnesse of the State do's him offence.

Des. If 'twere no other.

Iago. It is but so, I warrant,
Heark'e how these Instruments summon to supper:
The Messengers of Venice stayes the meate,
Go in, and weepe not: all things shall be well.

Exeunt Desdemona and Æmilia.

Enter Rodorigo.

How now Rodorigo?

Rod. I do not finde
That thou deal'st iustly with me.

Iago. What in the contrarie?

Rodor. Every day thou daffs me with some dauice Iago, and rather, as it seemes to me now, keep'st from me all conuenience, then suppliest me with the least aduantage of hope: I will indeed no longer endure it. Nor am I yet perswaded to put vp in peace, what already I haue foolishly suffered.

Iago. Will you heare me Rodorigo?

Rodori. I haue heard too much: and your words and Performances are no kin together.

Iago. You charge me most vniustly.

Rod. With nought but truth: I haue wasted my selfe out of my meanes. The Iewels you haue had from me to deliver Desdemona, would halte haue corrupted a Votarist. You haue told me she hath receiu'd them, and return'd me expectations and comforts of sodaine respect, and acquaintance, but I finde none.

Iago. Well, go too: very well.

Rod. Very well, go too: I cannot go too, (man) nor tis not very well. Nay I think it is scurvy: and begin to finde my selfe fopt in it.

Iago. Very well.

Rodor. I tell you, 'tis not very well: I will make my selfe knowne to Desdemona. If she will returne me my Iewels, I will giue over my Suit, and repent my vnlawfull solicitation. If not, assure your selfe, I will seeke satisfaction of you.

Iago. You haue said now,

Rodo. I, and said nothing but what I protest intendment of doing.

Iago. Why, now I see there's mettle in thee: and even from this instant do build on thee a better opinion then ever before: give me thy hand Roderigo Thou hast taken against me a most just exception: but yet I protest I haue dealt most directly in thy Affaire.

Rod. It hath not appeer'd.

Iago. I grant indeed it hath not appeer'd: and your suspition is not without wit and iudgement. But Roderigo, if thou hast that in thee indeed, which I haue greater reason to beleeue now then ever (I mean purpose, Courage, and Valour) this night shew it. If thou the next night following enioy not Desdemona, take me from this world with Treacherie, and deuise Engines for my life.

Rod. Well: what is it? Is it within, reason and compasse?

Iago. Sir, there is especiall Commission come from Venice to depute Cassio in Othello's place.

Rod. Is that true? Why then Othello and Desdemona returne again to Venice.

Iago. Oh no: he goes into Mauritania and taketh away with him the faire Desdemona, vnlaffe his abode be lingred here by some accident. Wherein none can be so determinate, as the removing of Cassio.

Rod. How do you meane removing him?

Iago. Why, by making him vncapable of Othello's place: knocking out his braines.

Rod. And that you would haue me to do.

Iago. I: if you dare do your selfe a profit, and a right. He sups to night with a Harlotry: and thither will I go to him. He knowes not yet of his Honourable Fortune, if you will watch his going thence (which I will fashion to fall out betweene twelue and one) you may take him at your pleasure. I will be near to second your Attempt, and he shall fall betweene vs. Come, stand not amaz'd at it, but go along with me: I will shew you such a necessitie in his death, that you shall thinke your selfe bound to put it on him. It is now high supper time: and the night growes to waste. About it.

Rod. I will heare further reason for this.

Iago. And you shalbe satisfi'd. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Othello, Lodouico, Desdemona, Æmilia, and Attendants.

Lod. I do beseech you Sir, trouble your selfe no further.

Oth. Oh pardon me: 'twill do me good to walke.

Lodou. Madam, good night: I humbly thanke your Ladyship.

Des. Your Honour is most welcome.

Oth. Will you walke Sir? Oh Desdemona.

Des. My Lord.

Othello. Get you to bed on th'instant, I will be return'd forthwith: dismisse your Attendant there: look't be done. Exit.

Des. I will my Lord.

Æm. How goes it now? He looks gentler then he did.

Des. He tiles he will returne incontinent,
And hath commanded me to go to bed,
And bid me to dismisse you.

Æmi. Dismisse me?

Des. It was his bidding: therefore good Æmilia,
Give me my nightly wearing, and adieu.
We must not now displease him.

Æmil. I, would you had never seene him.

Des. So would not I: my loue doth so approue
That euen his stubbornesse, his checks, his frownes,
(Prythee vn-pin me) haue grace and fauour.

Æmi. I haue laid those Sheetes you bad me on the bed

Des. All's one: good Father, how foolish are our minds.
If I do die before, prythee strow'd me
In one of those same Sheetes.

Æmil. Come, come: you talke.

Des. My Mother had a Maid call'd Barbario,
She was in loue: and her she lou'd proue'd mad,
And did forsake her. She had a Song of Willough,
An old thing 'twas: but it express'd her Fortune,
And she dy'd singing it. That Song to night,
Will not go from my mind: I haue much to do,
But to go hang my head all at one side
And sing it like poore Barbario: prythee dispatch.

Æmi. Shall I go fetch your Night-gowne?

Des. No, vn-pin me here,
This Lodouico is a proper man.

Æmil. A very handsome m ...

Des. He speakes well.

Æmil. I know a Lady in Venice would haue walk'd barefoot to Palestine for a touch of his nether lip.

Des. The poore Soule sat singing, by a Sycamour tree.
Sing all a greene Willough:
Her hand on her bosome her head on her knee,
Sing Willough, Willough, Willough.
The fresh Streames ran by her, and murmur'd her moanes
Sing Willough, &c.
Her salt teares fell from her, and softned the stones,
Sing Willough, &c. (Lay by these)
Willough, Willough. (Prythee high thee: he'le come soon)
Sing all a greene Willough must be my Garland.
Let no body blame him, his scorne I approue.
(Nay that's not next. Harke, who is't that knocks?

Æmil. It's the wind.

Des. I call'd my Loue false Loue: but what said he then?
Sing Willough, &c.
If I euer see women, you'le coach with women.

So get thee gone, good night: mine eyes do itch:
Doth that bode weeping?

Æmil. 'Tis neyther here, nor there

Des. I have heard it said so. O these Men, these men!
Do'st thou in conscience thinke (tell me Æmilia)
That there be women do abuse their husbands
In such grosse kinde?

Æmil. There be some such, no question.

Des. Would'st thou do such a deed for all the world?

Æmil. Why, would not you?

Des. No, by this Heavenly light.

Æmil. Nor I neither, by this Heavenly light:
I might doo't as well i'th'darke.

Des. Would'st thou do such a deed for al the world?

Æmil. The world's a huge thing:
It is a great price, for a small vice.

Des. Introth, I thinke thou would'st not.

Æmil. Introth I thinke I should, and vndoo't when I had done. Marry, I would not doe such a thing for a joynt Ring, nor for measures of Lawne, nor for Gownes, Petticoats, nor Caps, nor any petty exhibition. But for all the whole world: why, who would not make her husbands Cuckold, to make him a Monarch? I should venture Purgatory for't.

Des. Beshrew me, if I would do such a wrong
For the whole world.

Æmil. Why, the wrong is but a wrong i'th'world; and having the world for your labour, 'tis a wrong in your owne world, and you might quickly make it right.

Des. I do not thinke there is any such woman.

Æmil. Yes, a dozen: and as many to'th'vantage, as would store the world they plaid for.
But I do thinke it is their Husbands faults
If Wives do fall: (Say, that they slacke their duties,
And powre our Treasures into forraigne laps;
Or else breake out in peevish Iealousies,
Throwing restraint vpon vs: Or say they strike vs,
Or scant our former having in despight)
Why we have galles: and though we have some Grace,
Yet have we some Revenge. Let Husbands know,
Their wives have sense like them: They see, and smell,
And have their Palats both for sweet, and sowre,
As Husbands have. What is it that they do,
When they change vs for others? Is it Sport?
I thinke it is: and doth Affection breed it?
I thinke it doth. Is't Frailty that thus errs?
It is so too. And have not we Affections?
Desires for Sport? and Frailty, as men have?
Then let them vse vs well: else let them know,
The illes we do, their illes instruct vs so.

Des. Good night, good night:
Heaven me such vses send,
Not to picke bad, from bad; but by bad, mend. Exeunt

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter Iago, and Roderigo,

Iago. Here, stand behinde this Barke,
Straight will he come:
Weare thy good Rapier bare, and put it home:
Quicke, quicke, feare nothing; I'le be at thy Elbow,
It makes vs, or it marres vs, thinke on thee,
And fixe most firme thy Resolution.

Rod. Be neere at hand, I may miscarry in't.

Iago. Heere, at thy hand: Be bold, & take thy sword.

Rod. I have no great devotion to the deed,
And yet he hath given me satisfying Reasons:
'Tis but a man gone. Forth my Sword: he dies.

Iago. I have rub'd this young Quat almost to the sense,
And he growes angry. Now, whether he kill Cassio,
Or Cassio him, or each do kill the other,
Every way makes my gaine. Live Roderigo,
He calles me to a restitution large
Of Gold, and Iewels, that I bob'd from him,
As Gifts to Desdemona.
It must not be: if Cassio do remaine,
He hath a daily beauty in his life,
That makes me vgly: and besides, the Moore
May vnfold me to him: there stand I in much peril:
No, he must dye. But so, I heard him comming.

Enter Cassio.

Rod. I know his gait, 'tis he: Villaine thou dyest.

Cas. That thrust had beene mine enemy indeed,
But that my Coate is better then thou know'st:
I will make proofe of thine.

Rod. Oh, I am slaine.

Cassio. I am maym'd for ever:
Helpe hoe: Murther, murther.

Enter Othello.

Oth. The voyce of Cassio. Iago keepes his word.

Rod. O Villaine that I am.

Oth. It is euen so.

Cas. Oh helpe hoe: Light, a Surgeon.

Oth. 'Tis he: O brave Iago, honest, and iust,
That hast such Noble sense of thy Friends wrong,
Thou teachest me. Minion, your dere lyes dead,
And your vnblest Fate hightes: Strumpet I come:
For of my heart, those Charmes thine Eyes, are blotted.
Thy Bed lust-stain'd, shall with Lusts blood be spotted.

Exit Othello.

Enter Lodouico and Gratiano.

Cas. What hoa? no Watch? No passage?
Murther, Murther.

Gra. 'Tis some mischance, the voyce is very direfull.

Cas. Oh helpe.

Lodo. Hearke.

Rod. Oh wretched Villaine.

Lod. Two or three groane. 'Tis heavy night;
These may be counterfeits: Let's think't vnsafe
To come into the cry, without more helpe.

Rod. Nobody come: then shall I bleed to death.

Enter Iago.

Lod. Hearke.

Gra. Here's one comes in his shirt, with Light, and Weapons.

Iago. Who's there?
Whe's noyse is this that cries on murther?

Lodo. We do not know.

Iago. Do not you heare a cry?

Cas. Heere, heere: for heaven sake helpe me.

Iago. What's the matter?

Gra. This is Othello's Ancient, as I take it.

Lodo. The same indeede, a very valiant Fellow.

Iago. What are you heere, that cry so greevously?

Cas. Iago? Oh I am spoyl'd, vndone by Villaines:
Give me some helpe.

Iago. O mee, Lieutenant!
What Villaines have done this?

Cas. I thinke that one of them is hereabout.

And

And cannot make away.
Iago. Oh treacherous Villaines:
What are you there? Come in, and give some helpe.
Rod. O helpe me there.
Cassio. That's one of them.
Iago. Oh murd'rous Slaue! O Villaine!
Rod. O damn'd Iago! O inhumane Dogge!
Iago. Kill men i'th'dark?
Where be these bloody Theeues?
How silent is this Towne? Heo, murther, murther.
What may you be? Are you of good, or euill?
Lod. As you shall proue vs, praise vs.
Iago. Signior Lodouico?
Lod. He Sir.
Iago. I cry you mercy: here's Cassio hurt by Villaines.
Gra. Cassio?
Iago. How is't Brother?
Cas. My Legge is cut in two.
Iago. Marry heauen forbid:
Light Gentlemen, I'le binde it with my shirt.
Enter Bianca.
Bian. What is the matter heo? Who is't that cry'd
Iago. Who is't that cry'd?
Bian. Oh my deere Cassio,
My sweet Cassio: Oh Cassio, Cassio, Cassio.
Iago. O notable Strumpet. Cassio, may you suspect
Who they should be, that haue thus mangled you?
Cas. No.
Gra. I am sorry to finde you thus;
I haue beene to seeke you.
Iago. Lend me a Garter. So——Oh for a Chaire
To beare him easily hence.
Bian. Alas he faints. Oh Cassio, Cassio, Cassio.
Iago. Gentlemen all, I do suspect this Trash
To be a party in this Iniurie.
Patience awhile, good Cassio. Come, come;
Lend me a Light: know we this face, or no?
Alas my Friend, and my deere Countryman
Roderigo? No: Yes sure: Yes, 'tis Roderigo.
Gra. What, of Venice?
Iago. Even he Sir: Did you know him?
Gra. Know him? I.
Iago. Signior Gratiano? I cry your gentle pardon:
These bloody accidents must excuse my Manners,
That so neglected you.
Gra. I am glad to see you.
Iago. How do you Cassio? Oh, a Chaire, a Chaire.
Gra. Roderigo?
Iago. He, he, 'tis he:
Oh that's well said, the Chaire.
Some good man beare him carefully from hence,
I'le fetch the General's Surgeon. For you Mistris,
Saue you your labour. He that lies slaine here (Cassio)
Was my deere friend. What malice was between you?
Cas. None in the world: nor do I know the man?
Iago. What? looke you pale? Oh beare him o'th'Ayre.
Stay you good Gentlemen. Looke you pale, Mistris?
Do you perciue the gastnesse of her eye?
Nay, if you stare, we shall heare more anon.
Behold her well: I pray you looke vpon her:
Do you see Gentlemen? Nay, guiltinesse will speake
Though tongues were out of vse.
Emil. Alas, what is the matter?
What is the matter, Husband?
Iago. Cassio hath beene bin set on in the darke
By Roderigo, and Fellowes that are scap'd:
He's almost slaine, and Roderigo quite dead.
Emil. Alas good Gentleman: alas good Cassio.
Iago. This is the fruits of whoring. Pry'the Emilia,
Go know of Cassio where he supt to night.
What, do you shake at that?
Bian. He supt at my house, but I therefore shake not.
Iago. O did he so? I charge you go with me.
Emil. Oh fie vpon thee Strumpet.
Bian. I am no Strumpet, but of life as honest,
As you that thus abuse me.
Emil. As I? Fie vpon thee.
Iago. Kinde Gentlemen:
Let's go see poore Cassio dress't.
Come Mistris, you must tell's another Tale.
Emilia, run you to the Cittadell,
And tell my Lord and Lady, what hath happ'd:
Will you go on afore? This is the night
That either makes me, or fordoes me quight. Exeunt

Scena Secunda.

Enter Othello, and Desdemona in her bed.

Oth. It is the Cause, it is the Cause (my Soule)
Let me not name it to you, you chaste Starres,
It is the Cause. Yet I'le not shed her blood,
Nor scarre that whiter skin of hers, than Snow,
And smooth as Monumentall Alablaster:
Yet she must dye, else she'l betray more men:
Put out the Light, and then put out the Light:
If I quench thee, thou flaming Minister,
I can again thy former light restore,
Should I repent me. But once put out thy Light,
Thou cunning'st Patterne of excelling Nature,
I know not where is that Promotheam heate
That can thy Light re-Lume.
When I haue pluck'd thy Rose,
I cannot giue it vitall growth again,
It needs must wither. I'le smell thee on the Tree.
Oh Balmy breth, that dost almost perswade
Iustice to breake her Sword. One more, one more:
Be thus when thou art dead, and I will kill thee,
And loue thee after. One more, and that's the last.
So sweet, was ne're so fatall. I must weepe,
But they are cruell Teares: This sorrow's heauenly,
It strikes, where it doth loue. She wakes.
Des. Who's there? Othello?
Oth. I Desdemona.
Des. Will you come to bed, my Lord?
Oth. Haue you pray'd to night, Desdemona?
Des. I my Lord.
Oth. If you bethinke your selfe of any Crime
Vnreconcil'd as yet to Heauen, and Grace,
Solicite for it straight.
Des. Alacke, my Lord,
What may you mean by that?
Oth. Well, do it, and be brefe, I will walke by:
I would not kill thy vnprepared Spirit,
No, Heauens fore-fend) I would not kill thy Soule.
Des. Talke you of killing?
Oth. I, I do.
Des. Then Heauen haue mercy on me.

Oth. Amen, with all my heart.
Des. If you say, I hope you will not kill me.
Oth. Humh.
Des. And yet I feare you: for you're fatall then
When your eyes rowle so.
Why I should feare, I know not.
Since guiltinesse I know not: But yet I feele I feare.
Oth. Thinke on thy sinnes.
Des. They are Loues I beare to you.
Oth. I and for that thou dy'st.
Des. That death's vnnaturall, that kills for loving.
Alas, why gnaw you so your nether-lip?
Some bloody passion shakes your very Frame:
These are portents: but yet I hope, I hope,
They do not point on me.
Oth. Peace, and be still.
Des. I will so: What's the matter?
Oth. That Handkerchiefe
Which I so lou'd, and gaue thee, thou gau'st to Cassio.
Des. No by my Life, and Soule: send for the man,
And aske him.
Oth. Sweet Soule, take heed, take heed of Periury,
Thou art on thy death-bed.
Des. I, but not yet to dye.
Oth. Presently.
Therefore confesse thee freely of thy sinne:
For to deny each Article with Oath,
Cannot remoue, nor choake the strong Conception
That I do grone withall. Thou art to dye.
Des. O Heauen haue mercy on me.
Oth. I say, Amen.
Des. And haue you mercy too. I neuer did
Offend you in my life: neuer lou'd Cassio,
But with such generall warrantie of Heauen,
As I might loue. I never gaue him Token.
Oth. By Heauen I saw my Handkerchiefe in's hand.
O periur'd woman, thou do'st stone my heart,
And makes me call, what I intend to do,
A Murther, which I thought a Sacrifice.
I saw the Handkerchiefe.
Des. He found it then:
I never gaue it him: Send, for him hither:
Let him confesse a truth
Oth. He hath confest.
Des. What, my Lord?
Oth. That he hath vs'd thee.
Des. How? vnlawfully?
Oth. I.
Des. He will not say so.
Oth. No: his mouth is stopp'd:
Honest Iago hath 'tane order for't.
Des. Oh, my feare interprets. What is he dead?
Oth. Had all his haires bin liues, my great Reuenge
Had stomacke for them all.
Des. Alas, he is betray'd, and I vndone.
Oth. Out Strumpet: weep'st thou for him to my face?
Des. O banish me, my Lord, but kill me not.
Oth. Downe Strumpet
Des. Kill me to morrow, let me liue to night.
Oth. Nay, if you striue.
Des. But halfe an houre.
Oth. Being done, there is no pawse
Des. But while I say one prayer.
Oth. It is too late. Smothers her.

Æmilia at the doore.

Æmil. My Lord, my Lord? What hoa?
My Lord, my Lord.
Oth. What noise is this? Not dead? not yet quite dead?
I that am cruell, am yet merciful,
I would not haue thee linger in thy paine?
So, so.
Æmil within. What hoa? my Lord, my Lord?
Oth. Who's there?
Æmil. Oh good my Lord, I would speake a word with you.
Oth. Yes: 'Tis Æmilia: by and by. She's dead.
'Tis like she comes to speake of Cassio's death:
The noise was high. Hah, no more moouing?
Still as the Graue. Shall she come in? Were't good?
I thinke she stirres againe. No, what's best to do?
If she come in, she'l sure speake to my wife:
My wife, my wife: what wife? I haue no wife.
Oh insupportable! Oh heauy hour!
Methinkes, it should be now a huge Eclipse
Of Sunne, and Moone; and that th'affrighted Globe
Did yawne at Alteration.
Æmil. I do beseech you
That I may speake with you. Oh good my Lord.
Oth. I had forgot thee: oh come in Æmilia.
Soft, by and by, let me the Curtaines draw.
Where art thou? What's the matter with thee now?

Enter Æmilia.

Æmil. Oh my good Lord, yonders foule Murthers done.
Oth. What? now?
Æmil. But now, my Lord.
Oth. It is the very error of the Moone,
She comes more nearer Earth then she was wont,
And makes men mad.
Æmil. Cassio, my Lord, hath kill'd
A young Venetian, call'd Roderigo.
Oth. Roderigo kill'd? and Cassio kill'd?
Æmil No. Cassio is not kill'd.
Oth. Not Cassio kill'd? Then Murther's out of tune,
And sweet Reuenge growes harsh.
Des. O falsely, falsely murder'd.
Æmil. Alas! what cry is that?
Oth. That? What?
Æmil. Out, and alas, that was my Ladies voice.
Helpe, helpe hoa, helpe. Oh Ladie speake again,
Sweet Desdemona, oh sweet Mistris, speake.
Des. A guiltlesse death, I dye.
Æmil. Oh who hath done this deed?
Des No body: I my selfe, farewell:
Commend me to my kinde Lord: oh farewell.
Oth. Why, how should she be murdred?
Æmil. Alas: who knowes?
Oth You heare her say her selfe, it was not I.
Æmil. She said so: I must needs report the truth.
Oth. She's like a Liar gone to burning hell,
'Twas I that kill'd her.
Æmil. Oh the more Angell she, and you the blacker
Diuell.
Oth. She turn'd to folly: and she was a whore.
Æmil. Thou do'st belie her, and thou art a Diuell.
Oth. She was false as water.
Æmil. Thou art rash as fire, to say
That she was false. Oh she was heauenly true.
Oth. Cassio did top her: Ask thy husband else.
O, I were damn'd beneath all depth in hell:
But that I did proceed vpon iust grounds
To this extremity. Thy Husband knew it all.

Æmil. My Husband?
Oth. Thy Husband.
Æmil. That she was false to Wedlocke?
Oth. I, with Cassio: had she bin true,
If Heauen would make me such another world,
Of one entyre and perfect Chrysolite,
I'ld not haue sold her for it
Æmil. My Husband?
Oth. I, 'twas he that told meon her first,
An honest man he is, and hates the slime
That sticks on filthy deeds.
Æmil. My Husband?
Oth. What needs this iterance, Woman?
I say, thy Husband.
Æmil. Oh Mistris,
Villany hath made mockes with loue:
My Husband say she was false?
Oth. He, Woman;
I say thy Husband: Do'st vnderstand the word?
My Friend, thy Husband; honest, honest Iago.
Æmil. If he say so, may his pernicious Soule
Rot halfe a graine a day: he lyes to'th'heart,
She was too fond of her most filthy Bargaine.
Oth. Hah?
Æmil. Do thy worst:
This deede of thine is no more worthy Heauen,
Then thou was't worthy her.
Oth. Peace, you were best.
Æmil. Thou hast not halfe that powre to do me harm,
As I haue to be hurt. Oh Gull, oh dolt,
As ignorant as dirt: thou hast done a deed
(I care not for thy Sword) Ile make thee known,
Though I lost twenty liues. Helpe, helpe, hoa, helpe:
The Moore hath kill'd my Mistris. Murther, murther.

Enter Montano, Gratiano, and Iago.

Mon. What is the matter? How now Generall?
Æmil. Oh, are you come, Iago: you haue done well,
That men must lay their Murthers on your neck.
Gra. What is the matter?
Æmil. Disproue this Villaine, if thou bee'st a man:
He sayes, thou told'st him that his wife was false:
I know thou did'st not: thou'rt not such a Villain.
Speake, for my heart is full.
Iago. I told him what I thought,
And told no more
Then what he found himselfe was apt, and true.
Æmil. But did you euer tell him,
She was false?
Iago. I did.
Æmil. You told a Lye an odious damned Lye:
Vpon my Soule, a Lye; a wicked Lye.
Shee false with Cassio?
Did you say with Cassio?
Iago. With Cassio, Mistris?
Go too, charme your tongue.
Emil. I will not charme my Tongue;
I am bound to speake,
My Mistris heere lyes murthered in her bed.
All. Oh Heauens, forefend.
Emil. And your reports haue set the Murder on.
Othello. Nay stare not Masters,
It is true indeede.
Gra. 'Tis a strange Truth.
Mont. O monstrous Act.
Emil. Villany, villany, villany:
I thinke vpon't, I thinke: I smel't: O Villany:
I thought so then: Ile kill my selfe for greefe.
O villany! villany!
Iago. What, are you mad?
I charge you, get you home.
Emil. Good Gentlemen, let me haue leaue to speake:
'Tis proper I obey him; but not now:
Perchance Iago, I will ne're go home.
Oth Oh, oh, oh.
Emil. Nay, lay thee downe, and roare:
For thou hast kill'd the sweetest innocent,
That ere did lift vp eye.
Oth. Oh she was fowle!
I scarse did know you Vnkle, there lies your Neece,
Whose breath (indeed) these hands haue newly stopp'd:
I know this act shewes horrible and grim.
Gra. Poore Desdemon:
I am glad thy Father's dead,
Thy Match was mortall to him: and pure greefe
Shore his old thred in twaine. Did he liue now,
This sight would make him do a desperate turne:
Yea, curse his better Angell from his side,
And fall to Reprobance.
Oth. 'Tis pitifull: but yet Iago knowes
That she with Cassio, hath the Act of shame,
A thousand times committed. Cassio confest it,
And she did gratifie his amorous workes
With that Recognizance and pledge of Loue
Which I first gaue her: I saw it in his hand:
It was a Handkerchiefe, an Antique Token
My Father gaue my Mother.
Emil. Oh Heauen! oh heauenly Powres
Iago. Come, hold your peace.
Emil. 'Twill out, 'twill out. I peace?
No, I will speake as liberall as the North;
Let Heauen, and Men, and Diuels, let them all,
All, all, crie shame against me, yet Ile speake.
Iago. Be wise, and get you home.
Emil. I will not.
Gra. Fye, your Sword vpon a Woman.
Emil. Oh thou dull Moore,
That Handkerchiefe thou speak'st of
I found by Fortune, and did give my Husband:
For often, with a solemne earnestnesse,
(More then indeed belong'd to such a Trifle)
He begg'd of me, to steale't.
Iago. Villanous Whore.
Emil. She gaue it Cassio? No, alas I found it,
And I did giu't my Husband.
Iago. Filth, thou lyest.
Emil. By Heauen I do not, I do not Gentlemen:
Oh murd'rous Coxcombe, what should such a Foole
Do with so good a wife?
Oth. Are there no stones in Heauen,
But what serues for the Thunder?
Precious Villaine.
Gra. The woman falles:
Sure he hath kill'd his Wife.
Emil. I, I: oh lay me by my Mistris side.
Gra. He's gone, but his wife's kill'd.
Mon. 'Tis a notorious Villaine take you this weapon
Which I haue recouer'd from the Moore:
Come guard the doore without, let him not passe,
But kill him rather. Ile after that same villaine,
For 'tis a damned Slaue.

Exit.

Oth.

Oth. I am not valiant neither:
But every Puny whipster gets my Sword.
But why should Honor out-liue Honesty?
Let it go all.

Æmil. What did thy Song bode Lady?
Hearke, canst thou heare me? I will play the Swan,
And dye in Musicke: Willough, Willough, Willough.
Moore, she was chaste: She lou'd thee, cruell Moore,
So come my Soule to bliss, as I speake true:
So speaking as I thinke, also I dye.

Oth. I haue another weapon in this Chamber,
It was a Sword of Spaine, the Ice brookes temper:
Oh here it is: Vaske I must come forth.

Gra. If thou attempt it, it will cost thee deere;
Thou hast no weapon, and perforce must suffer.

Oth. Looke in vpon me then, and speake with me,
Or naked as I am I will assault thee.

Gra. What is the matter?

Othel. Behold, I haue a weapon:
A better never did it selfe sustaine
Vpon a Soldiers Thigh. I haue seene the day,
That with this little Arme, and this good Sword,
I haue made my way through more impediments
Then twenty times your stop. But (oh vaine boast)
Who can controll his Fate? 'Tis not so now.
Be not affraid, though you do see me weapon'd:
Heere is my lournies end, heere is my but:
And verie Sea-marke of my vtmost Saile.
Do you go backe dismaid? 'Tis a lost feare:
Man but a Rush against Othello's breft,
And he retires. Where should Othello go?
Now: how dost thou looke now? Oh ill-Starr'd wench,
Pale as thy Smocke: when we shall meete at compt,
This looke of thine will hurle my Soule from Heaven,
And Fiends will snatch at it. Cold, cold, my Girle?
Even like thy Chastity. O cursed, cursed Slaue!
Whip me ye Diuels,
From the possession of this Heauenly sight:
Blow me about in winds, roast me in Sulphure,
Wash me in steepe-downe gulfes of Liquid fire.
Oh Desdemon! dead Desdemon: dead. Oh, oh!

Enter Lodouico, Cassio, Montano, and Iago, with Officers.

Lod. Where is this rash, and most vnfortunate man?

Oth. That's he that was Othello: heere I am.

Lod. Where is that Viper?
Bring the Villaine forth.

Oth. I look down towards his feet; but that's a Fable,
If that thou bee'st a Diuell, I cannot kill thee.

Lod. Wrench his Sword from him.

Iago. I bleed Sir, but not kill'd.

Othel. I am not sorry neither, I'd haue thee liue:
For in my sense, 'tis happinesse to die.

Lod. Oh thou Othello, that was once so good,
Falne in the practise of a cursed Slaue,
What shall be saide to thee.

Oth. Why any thing:
An honourable Murderer, if you will:
For nought I did in hate, but all in Honour.

Lod This wretch hath part confest his Villany:
Did you and he consent in Cassio's death.

Oth. I.

Cas. Deere Generall, I never gaue you cause.

Oth. I do beleeue it, and I aske your pardon:
Will you, I pray, demand that demy-Diuell,
Why he hath thus ensnar'd my Soule and Body.

Iag. Demand me nothing: what you know, you know:
From this time forth, I never will speake word.

Lod. What? not to pray?

Gra. Torments will ope your lips.

Oth. Well, thou dost best.

Lod. Sir,
You shall vnderstand what hath befalne,
(Which, as I thinke, you know not) heere is a Letter
Found in the pocket of the slaine Rodorigo,
And heere another, the one of them imports
The death of Cassio, to be vndertooke
By Rodorigo.

Oth. O Villaine!

Cassio. Most Heithenish, and most grosse.

Lod. Now, heere's another discontented paper
Found in his pocket too: and this is seemes
Rodorigo meant t'haue sent this damned villaine:
But that (belike) Iago in the interim
Came in, and stris'd him.

Oth. Oh thou pernitious Caitiffe!
How came you (Cassio) by that Handkerchiefe
That was my wiues?

Cassio. I found it in my Chamber:
And he himselfe confest it but even now,
That there he dropt it for a speciall purpose,
Which wrought to his desire.

Othel. O Foole, foole, foole!

Cassio. There is besides, in Rodorigo's Letter,
How he vpbraides Iago, that he made him
Braue me vpon the Watch: whereon it came
That I was cast: and even but now he spake
(After long seeming dead) Iago hurt him,
Iago set him on.

Lod. You most forsake this roome, and go with vs:
Your Power, and your Command is taken off,
And Cassio rules in Cyprus. For this Slaue,
If there be any cunning Cruetie,
That can torment him much, and hold him long,
It shall be his. You shall close Prisoner rest,
Till that the Nature of your fault be known
To the Venetian State. Come, bring away.

Oth. Soft you; a word or two before you go:
I haue done the State some seruice, and they know't
No more of that. I pray you in your Letters,
When you shall these vnlucke deeds relate,
Speake of me, as I am. Nothing extenuate,
Nor set downe ought in malice.
Then must you speake,
Of one that lou'd not wiselY, but too well:
Of one, not easily Iealious, but being wrought,
Perplexed in the extreame: Of one, whose hand
(Like the base Iudean) threw a Pearle away
Richer then all his Tribe: Of one, whose subdu'd Eyes,
Albeit vn-vsed to the melting moode,
Drops teares as fast as the Arabian Trees
Their Medicinable gumme. Set you downe this:
And say besides, that in Aleppo once,
Where a malignant, and a Turbond-Turke
Beate a Venetian, and traduc'd the State,
I tooke by th'throat the circumcised Dogge,
And smoote him, thus.

Lod. Oh bloody period.

Gra. All that is spoke, is marr'd.

Oth. I kist thee, ere I kill'd thee: No way but this,
Killing my selfe, to dye vpon a kisse.

Dyes

Cassio.

Cas. This did I feare, but thought he had no weapon:
For he was great of heart.
Lod. Oh Spartan Dogge:
More fell than Anguish, Hunger, or the Sea:
Looke on the Tragicke Loading of this bed:
This is thy worke:
The Obiect poysons Sight,
Let it be hid. Gratiano, keepe the house,
And seize vpon the Fortunes of the Moore,
For they succeede on you. To you, Lord Gouernor,
Remaines the Censure of this hellish villaine:
The Time, the Place, the Torture, oh inforce it:
My selfe will straight aboard, and to the State,
This heauie Act, with heauie heart relate. Exeunt.

FINIS.

The Names of the Actors.

(:.:)

Thelo, the Moore.
Brabantio, Father to Desdemona.
Cassio, an Honourable Lieutenant.
Iago, a Villaine.
Rodorigo, a gull'd Gentleman.
Duke of Venice.
Senators.
Montano, Gouernour of Cyprus.
Gentlemen of Cyprus.
Lodouico and Gratiano, two Noble Venetians.
Saylors.
Clowne.

Desdemona, wife to Othello.
Æmilia, wife to Iago.
Bianca, a Curtezan.

THE TRAGEDIE OF Anthonie, and Cleopatra.

Actus Primus. Scœna Prima.

Enter Demetrius and Philo.

Philo.

NAY, but this dotage of our Generals
O're-flowes the measure: those his goodly eyes
That o're the Files and Musters of the Warre,
Have glow'd like plated Mars:
Now bend, now turne
The Office and Devotion of their view
Vpon a Tawny Front. His Captaines heart,
Which in the scuffles of great Fights hath burst
The Buckles on his breft, reneages all temper,
And is become the Bellowes and the Fan
To coole a Gypsies Lust.

Flourish. Enter Anthony, Cleopatra, her Ladies, the Traine, with Eunuchs fanning her.

Looke where they come:
Take but good note, and you shall see in him
(The triple Pillar of the world) transform'd
Into a Strumpets Foole. Behold and see.

Cleo. If it be Loue indeed, tell me how much.

Ant. There's a beggery in the loue that can be reckon'd

Cleo. Ile set a bourne how farre to be belou'd.

Ant. Then must thou needes finde out new Heauen, new Earth.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Newes (my good Lord) from Rome.

Ant. Grates me, the summe.

Cleo. Nay heare them Anthony.
Fulnia perchance is angry: Or who knowes,
If the scarse-bearded Caesar haue not sent
His powerfull Mandate to you, Do this, or this;
Take in that Kingdome, and Infranchise that:
Perform'e, or else we damne thee.

Ant. How, my Loue?

Cleo. Perchance? Nay, and most like:
You must not stay heere longer, your dismission
Is come from Caesar, therefore heare it Anthony.
Where's Fulnia Processe? (Caesar I would say) both?
Call in the Messengers: As I am Egypts Queene,
Thou blushest Anthony, and that blood of thine
Is Caesars homager: else so thy cheeke payes shame,
When shrill-tongu'd Fulnia scolds. The Messengers.

Ant. Let Rome in Tyber melt, and the wide Arch
Of the rising Empire fall: Heere is my space,
Kingdomes are clay: Our dungie earth alike
Feeds Beast as Man; the Nobleneffe of life
Is to do thus: when such a mutuall paire,
And such a twaine can doo't, in which I binde
One paine of punishment, the world to weete
We stand vp Peerelesse.

Cleo. Excellent falsehood:
Why did he marry Fulnia, and not loue her?
Ile seeme the Foole I am not. Antony will be himselfe.

Ant. But stirr'd by Cleopatra.
Now for the loue of Loue, and her soft hours,
Let's not confound the time with Conferrance harsh;
There's not a minute of our lives should stretch
Without some pleasure now. What sport to night?

Cleo. Heare the Ambassadors.

Ant. Fye wrangling Queene:
Whom every thing becomes, to chide, to laugh,
To weepe: whose every passion fully strives
To make it selfe (in Thee) fairer, and admir'd.
No Messenger but thine, and all alone, to night
Wee'l wander through the streets, and note
The qualities of people. Come my Queene,
Last night you did desire it. Speake not to vs.

Exeunt with the Traine.

Dem. Is Caesar with Antonius prizi'd so slight?

Philo. Sir sometimes when he is not Antony,
He comes too short of that great Property
Which still should go with Antony.

Dem. I am full sorry, that he approues the common Lyar, who thus speakes of him at Rome; but I will hope of better deeds to morrow. Rest you happy. Exeunt

Enter Enobarbus, Lamprius, a Soothsayer, Rannius, Lucilius, Charmian, Iras, Mardian the Eunuch, and Alexas.

Char. L. Alexas, sweet Alexas, most any thing Alexas, almost most absolute Alexas, where's the Soothsayer that you prais'd so to th'Queene? Oh that I knewe this Husband, which you say, must change his Hornes with Garlands.

Alex. Soothsayer.

Sooth. Your will?

Char. Is this the Man? Is't you sir that know things?

Sooth. In Natures infinite booke of Secrecie, a little I can read.

Alex. Shew him your hand.

Enob. Bring in the Banket quickly: Wine enough,

Cleopa

Cleopatra's health to drinke.

Char. Good sir, give me good Fortune.

Sooth. I make not, but foresee.

Char. Pray then, foresee me one.

Sooth. You shall be yet fairer then you are.

Char. He means in flesh.

Iras. No, you shall paint when you are old.

Char. Wrinkles forbid.

Alex. Vex not his prescience, be attentive.

Char. Hush.

Sooth. You shall be more beloving, then beloved.

Char. I had rather heate my Liver with drinking.

Alex. Nay, heare him.

Char. Good now some excellent Fortune: Let mee be married to three Kings in a forenoone, and Widdow them all: Let me have a Childe at fifty, to whom Herode of Iewry may do Homage. Finde me to marrie me with Octavius Cæsar, and companion me with my Mistris.

Sooth. You shall out-live the Lady whom you serve.

Char. Oh excellent, I love long life better then Figs.

Sooth. You have seene and proved a fairer former fortune, then that which is to approach.

Char. Then belike my Children shall have no names: Prythee how many Boyes and Wenches must I have.

Sooth. If every of your wishes had a wombe, & foretell every wish, a Million.

Char. Out Foole, I forgive thee for a Witch.

Alex. You thinke none but your sheets are priests to your wishes.

Char. Nay come, tell Iras hers.

Alex. We'l know all our Fortunes.

Enob. Mine, and most of our Fortunes to night, shall be drunke to bed.

Iras. There's a Palme presages Chastity, if nothing els.

Char. E'en as the o're-flowing Nylus presageth Famine.

Iras. Go you wilde Bedfellow, you cannot Soothsay.

Char. Nay, if an oyly Palme be not a fruitfull Prognostication, I cannot scratch mine eare. Prythee tell her but a worky day Fortune,

Sooth. Your Fortunes are alike.

Iras But how, but how, give me particulars.

Sooth. I have said.

Iras. Am I not an inch of Fortune better then she?

Char. Well, if you were but an inch of fortune better then I: where would you choose it.

Iras. Not in my Husbands nose.

Char. Our worser thoughts Heavens mend.

Alexas Come, his Fortune, his Fortune. Oh let him marry a woman that cannot go, sweet Isis, I beseech thee, and let her dye too, and give him a worse, and let worse follow worse, till the worst of all follow him laughing to his grave. fifty-fold a Cuckold. Good Isis heare me this Prayer, though thou denie me a matter of more weight: good Isis I beseech thee.

Iras. Amen, deere Goddesse, heare that prayer of the people. For, as it is a heart-breaking to see a handsome man loose Wiu'd, so it is a deadly sorrow, to beholde a foole Knave uncuckolded: Therefore deere Isis keep decorum, and Fortune him accordingly.

Char. Amen.

Alex Lo now, if it lay in their hands to make mee a Cuckold, they would make themselves Whores, but they'ld doo't.

Enter Cleopatra.

Enob. Hush, heere comes Anthony.

Char. Not he, the Queene.

Cleo. Save you, my Lord.

Enob. No Lady.

Cleo. Was he not heere?

Char. No Madam.

Cleo. He was dispos'd to mirth, but on the sodaine A Roman thought hath strooke him.

Enobarbus?

Enob. Madam.

Cleo. Seeke him, and bring him hither: where's Alexas?

Alex. Heere at your service.

My Lord approaches.

Enter Anthony, with a Messenger.

Cleo. We will not looke upon him:

Go with us. Exeunt.

Messen. Fulvia thy Wife,

First came into the Field.

Ant. Against my Brother Lucius?

Messen. I: but soone that Warre had end,

And the times state

Made friends of them, joyning their force 'gainst Cæsar,

Whose better issue in the warre from Italy,

Upon the first encounter drave them.

Ant. Well, what worst.

Mess. The Nature of bad newes infects the Teller.

Ant. When it concernes the Foole or Coward: On.

Things that are past, are done, with me. 'Tis thus,

Who tels me true, though in his Tale lye death,

I heare him as he flatter'd.

Mes. Labienus (this is stiffe-newes)

Hath with his Parthian Force

Extended Asia: from Euphrates his conquering

Banner shooke, from Syria to Lydia,

And to Ionia, whil'st ——

Ant. Anthony thou would'st say.

Mes. Oh my Lord.

Ant. Speake to me home,

Mince not the generall tongue, name

Cleopatra as she is call'd in Rome:

Raile thou in Fulvia's phrase, and taunt my faults

With such full License, as both Truth and Malice

Have power to utter. Oh then we bring forth weeds,

When our quicke windes lye still, and our illes told us

Is as our earing: fare thee well awhile.

Mes. At your Noble pleasure. Exit Messenger.

Enter another Messenger.

Ant. From Scicion how the newes? Speake there

1. Mes. The man from Scicion,

Is there such an one?

2. Mes. He stayes upon your will.

Ant. Let him appeare:

These strong Egyptian Fetters I must breake,

Or loose my selfe in dotage.

Enter another Messenger with a Letter.

What are you?

3. Mes. Fulvia thy wife is dead.

Ant. Where dyed she.

Mes. In Scicion, her length of sicknesse,

With what else more serious,

Importeth thee to know, this beares.

Antho. Forbeare me

There's a great Spirit gone, thus did I desire it:

What our contempts doth often hurle from us,

We with it ours against. The present pleasure,
By revolution lowring, does become
The opposite of it selfe: she's good being gone,
The hand could pluck her backe, that shou'd her on.
I must from this enchanting Queene breake off,
Ten thousand harmes, more than the ills I know
My idlenesse doth hatch.

Enter Enobarbus.

How now Enobarbus.

Eno. What's your pleasure, Sir?

Ant. I must with haste from hence.

Eno. Why then we kill all our Women. We see how mortall an vnkindnesse is to them. if they suffer our departure death's the word.

Ant. I must be gone.

Eno. Vnder a compelling an occasion, let women die. It were pity to cast them away for nothing, though between them and a great cause, they should be esteemed nothing. Cleopatra catching but the least noyse of this, dies instantly: I have seene her dye twenty times vpon farre poorer moment: I do think there is mettle in death, which commaks some loving acte vpon her, she hath such a celerity in dying.

Ant. She is cunning past mans thought.

Eno. Alacke Sir no, her passions are made of nothing but the finest part of pure Loue. We cannot cal her winds and waters, sighes and teares: They are greater stormes and Tempests than Almanackes can report. This cannot be cunning in her; if it be, she makes a showre of Raine as well as Ioue.

Ant. Would I had never seene her.

Eno. Oh sir, you had then left vnseene a wonderfull peece of worke, which not to have beene blest withall, would have discredited your Travaile.

Ant. Fulvia is dead.

Eno. Sir.

Ant. Fulvia is dead.

Eno. Fulvia?

Ant. Dead.

Eno. Why sir, give the Gods a thankefull Sacrifice: when it pleaseth their Deities to take the wife of a man from him, it shewes to man the Tailors of the earth; comforting therein, that when olde Robes are worne out, there are members to make new. If there were no more Women but Fulvia, then had you indeede a cut, and the case to be lamented: This greefe is crown'd with Consolation, your old Smocke brings foorth a new Petticoate, and indeed the teares liue in an Onion, that should water this sorrow.

Ant. The businesse she hath broached in the State, Cannot endure my absence.

Eno. And the businesse you have broach'd here cannot be without you, especially that of Cleopatra's, which wholly depends on your abode.

Ant. No more light Answeres.
Let our Officers
Have notice what we purpose. I shall breake
The cause of our Expedience to the Queene,
And get her loue to part. For not alone
The death of Fulvia, with more vrgent touches
Do strongly speake to vs: but the Letters too
Of many our contriving Friends in Rome,
Petition vs at home. Sextus Pompeius
Hath gloven the dare to Cæsar, and commands
The Empire of the Sea. Our Slippery people,
Whose Loue is never link'd to the deserver,
Till his deserts are past, begin to throw
Pompey the great, and all his Dignities
Vpon his Sonne, who high in Name and Power,
Higher than both in Blood and Life, stands vp
For the main Souldier. Whose quality going on,
The sides o'th'world may danger. Much is breeding,
Which like the Courser's hayre, hath yet but life,
And not a Serpents poyson. Say our pleasure,
To such whose places vnder vs, require
Our quicke remoue from hence.

Eno. I shall do't.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmion, Iras, and Alas.

Cleo. Where is he?

Char. I did not see him since.

Cleo. See where he is,
Who's with him, what he does:
I did not send you. If you finde him sad,
Say I am dancing: if in Myrth, report
That I am sodaine sicke. Quicke, and returne.

Char. Madam, me thinkes if you did loose him darely,
You do not hold the method, to enforce
The like from him.

Cleo. What should I do, I do not?

Ch. In each thing give him way, crosse him in nothing.

Cleo. Thou teachest like a foolesthe way to lose him.

Char. Tempt him not so too farre. I wish forbear,
In time we hate that which we often feare.

Enter Antony.

But here comes Antony.

Cleo. I am sicke, and sullen.

An. I am sorry to give breathing to my purpose.

Cleo. Helpe me away deare Charmion, I shall fall,
It cannot be thus long, the sides of Nature
Will not sustaine it.

Ant. Now my deerest Queene.

Cleo. Pray you stand farther from mee.

Ant. What's the matter?

Cleo. I know by that same eye ther's some good news.
What says the married woman you may goe?
Would she had never given you leave to come.
Let her not say 'tis I that keepe you heere,
I have no power vpon you: Hers you are.

Ant. The Gods best know.

Cleo. Oh never was there Queene
So mightily betrayed: yet at the first
I saw the Treasons planted.

Ant. Cleopatra.

Cleo. Why should I think you can be mine, & true,
(Though you in swearing shake the Throned Gods)
Who have beene false to Fulvia?
Riotous madnesse,
To be entangled with those mouth-made vowes,
Which breake themselves in swearing.

Ant. Most sweet Queene.

Cleo. Nay pray you seake no colour for your going.
But bid farewell, and goe:
When you sued staying,
Then was the time for words: No going then,
Eternity was in our Lippes, and Eyes.
Bliss in our browes bent: none our parts so poore,
But was a race of Heaven. They are so still,
Or thou the greatest Souldier of the world,
Art turn'd the greatest Lyar.

Ant. How now Lady?

Cleo. I would I had thy inches, thou should'st know
There were a heart in Egypt.
Ant. Hence me Queene:
The strong necessity of Time, commands
Our Seruiciles a-while: but my full heart
Remaines in vse with you. Our Italy,
Shines o're with civill Swords; Sextus Pompeius
Makes his approaches to the Port of Rome,
Equality of two Domestick powers,
Breed scrupulous faction: The hated growne to strength
Are newly growne to Loue: The condemn'd Pompey,
Rich in his Fathers Honor, creepes apace
Into the hearts of such, as haue not thriued
Vpon the present state, whose Numbers threaten,
And quietnesse growne sicke of rest, would purge
By any desperate change: My more particular,
And that which most with you should safe my going,
Is Fulvias death.
Cleo. Though age from folly could not giue me freedom
It does from childishnesse. Can Fulvia dye?
Ant. She's dead my Queene.
Looke here, and at thy Souereigne leysure read
The Garboyles she awak'd: at the last, best,
See when, and where she dyed.
Cleo. O most false Loue!
Where be the Sacred Vioales thou should'st fill
With sorrowfull water? Now I see, I see,
In Fulvias death, how mine receiu'd shall be.
Ant. Quarrell no more, but bee prepar'd to know
The purposes I beare; which are, or cease,
As you shall giue th'aduice. By the fire
That quickens Nylus slime, I go from hence
Thy Souldier, Seruant, making Peace or Warre,
As thou affects.
Cleo. Cut my Lace, Charmian come,
But let it be, I am quickly ill, and well,
So Anthony loues.
Ant. My precious Queene forbeare,
And giue true euidence to his Loue, which stands
An honourable Triall.
Cleo. So Fulvia told me.
I prythee turne aside, and weepe for her,
Then bid adieu to me, and say the teares
Belong to Egypt. Good nou, play one Scene
Of excellent dissembling, and let it looke
Like perfect Honor.
Ant. You'l heat my blood no more?
Cleo. You can do better yet: but this is meetly.
Ant. Now by Sword.
Cleo. And Target. Still be mends.
But this is not the best. Looke prythee Charmian,
How this Herculeon Roman do's become
The carriage of his chafe.
Ant. I'le leaue you Lady.
Cleo. Courteous Lord, one word:
Sir, you and I must part, but that's not it:
Sir, you and I haue lou'd, but there's not it:
That you know well, something it is I would:
Oh, my Oblivion is a very Anthony,
And I am all forgotten.
Ant. But that your Royalty
Holds Idlenesse your subiect, I should take you
For Idlenesse itselfe.
Cleo. 'Tis sweating Labour,
To beare such Idlenesse so neere the heart
As Cleopatra this. But Sir, forgiue me,
Since my becomings kill me, when they do not
Eye well to you. Your Honor calles you hence,
Therefore be deafe to my vnpitied Folly,
And all the Gods go with you. Vpon your Sword
Sit Lawrell victory, and smooth success
Be strew'd before your feete.
Ant. Let vs go.
Come: Our separation so abides and flies,
That thou residing here, goes yet with mee;
And I hence fleeting, here remaine with thee.
Away. Exeunt.

Enter Octauius reading a Letter, Lepidus, and their Traine.

Caes. You may see Lepidus, and henceforth know,
It is not Cesars Natural vice, to hate
One great Competitor. From Alexandria
This is the newes: He fishes, drinkes, and wastes
The Lamps of night in rouell: Is not more manlike
Then Cleopatra: nor the Queene of Pulemy
More Womanly then he. Hardly gaue audience
Or vouchsafe to thinke he had Partners. You
Shall finde there a man, who is th'abstracts of all faults,
That all men follow.
Lep. I must not thinke
There are, euils enow to darken all his goodnesse
His sloths in him, seeme as the Spots of Heauen,
More fiery by night's Blackness; Hereditarie,
Rather then purchase: what he cannot change,
Then what he chooses.
Caes. You are so indulgent. Let's grant it is not
Amiss to tumble on the bed of Pulemy,
To giue a Kingdome for a Mirth, to fit
And keepe the turne of Tipling with a Slaue,
To reele the streets at noone, and stand the Buffet
With knaues that smell of sweate: Say this becomes him
(As his compositure must be rare indeed, Whom these things cannot blemish) yet must Anthony
No way excuse his foyles, when we do bear
So great weight in his lightnesse. If he fill'd
His vacancie with his Voluptuousnesse,
Full surfeits, and the drinesse of his bones,
Call on him for't. But to confound such time,
That drumme him from his sport, and speakes as loud
As his owne State, and ours, 'tis to be chid:
As we rate Boyes, who being mature in knowledge,
Pawne their experience to their present pleasure,
And so rebell to iudgement.
Enter a Messenger.
Lep. Heere's more newes.
Mes. Thy biddings haue beene done, & euerie houre
Most Noble Caesar, shalt thou haue report:
How 'tis abroad. Pompey is strong at Sea,
And it appeares, he is belou'd of those
That only haue feard Caesar: to the Ports
The discontents repaire, and mens reports
Give him much wrong'd.
Caes. I should haue knowne no lesse,
It hath bin taught vs from the primall state
That he which is was wisht, vntill he were
And the ebb'd man,
Ne're lou'd, till ne're worth loue,
Comes feer'd, by being lack'd. This common bodie,
Like to a Vagabond Flagge vpon the Stream,
Goes too, and backe, lacking the varying tyde

To rot itselfe with motion.

Mess. Cæsar I bring thee word,
Menecrates and Menas famous Pyrates
Makes the Sea serue them, which they eare and wound
With keeles of euery kinde. Many hot inrodes
They make in Italy, the Borders Maritime
Lacke blood to thinke on't, and flush youth reuolt,
No Vessell can peepe forth: but 'tis as soone
Taken as seene: for Pompeyes name strikes more
Then could his Warre resisted.

Cæsar. Anthony,
Leaue thy lasciuious Vassalles. When thou once
Was beaten from Modena, where thou slew'st
Hirsius, and Pansa Consals, at thy heele
Did Famine follow, whom thou fought'st against,
(Though daintily brought vp) with patience more
Then Sauages could suffer. Thou did'st drinke
The stale of Horses, and the gilded Puddle
Which Beasts would cough at. Thy palate then did deaine
The roughest Berry, on the rudest Hedge.
Yea, like the Stagge, when Snow the Pasture sheets,
The barkes of Trees thou brows'd. On the Alpes,
It is reported thou did'st eate strange flesh,
Which some did dye to looke on: And all this
(It wounds thine Honor that I speake it now)
Was borne so like a Soldiour, that thy cheeke
So much as lank'd not.

Lep. 'Tis pitty of him.

Caes. Let his shames quickely
Driue him to Rome, 'tis time we twaine
Did shew our selues i'th'Field, and to that end
Assemble me immediate counsell, Pompey
Thriues in our Idleneſſe.

Lep. To morrow Cæsar,
I shall be furnisht to informe you rightly
Both what by Sea and Land I can be able
To front this present time.

Caes. Til which encounter, it is my business too. Farwell.

Lep. Farwell my Lord, what you shal know mean time
Of stirres abroad, I shall beseech you Sir
To let me be partaker.

Caesar. Doubt not sir, I knew it for my Bond. Exeunt

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Iras, & Mardian.

Cleo. Charmian.

Char. Madam.

Cleo. Ha, ha, giue me to drinke Mandragora.

Char. Why Madam?

Cleo. That I might sleepe out this great gap of time:
My Anthony is away.

Char. You thinke of him too much.

Cleo. O'tis Treason.

Char. Madam, I trust not so.

Cleo. Thou, Eunuch Mardian?

Mar. What's your Highneſſe pleasure?

Cleo. Not now to heare thee sing. I take no pleasure
In ought an Eunuch has: 'Tis well for thee,
That being vnseminar'd, thy freer thoughts
May not flye forth of Egypt. Hast thou Affections?

Mar. Yes gracious Madam.

Cleo. Indeed?

Mar. Not in deed Madam, for I can do nothing
But what in deede is honest to be done:
Yet haue I fierce Affections, and thinke
What Venus did with Mars.

Cleo. Oh Charmian:
Where think'st thou he is now? Stands he, or sits he?
Or does he walke? Or is he on his Horse?
Oh happy horse to beare the weight of Anthony!
Do bravely Horse, for wot'st thou whom thou mouest?
The demy Atlas of this Earth, the Arme
And Burgonet of men. Hee's speaking now,
Or murmuring, where's my Serpent of old Nyle.
(For so he cals me:) Now I feede my selfe
With most delicious poyson. Think on me
That am with Phœbus amorous pinches blacke,
And wrinkled deepe in time. Broad-fronted Cæsar,
When thou was't here above the ground, I was
A morsell for a Monarke: and great Pompey
Would stand and make his eyes grow in my brow,
There would he anchor his Aspect, and dye
With looking on his life.

Enter Alexas from Cæsar.

Alex. Soueraigne of Egypt, haile.

Cleo. How much vnlike art thou Marke Anthony?
Yet coming from him, that great Med'cine hath
With his Tinct gilded thee.
How goes it with my brave Marke Anthonio?

Alex. Last thing he did (deare Qu ene)
He kist the last of many doubled kisses
This Orient Pearle. His speech sticks in my heart.

Cleo. Mine eare must pluckc it thence.

Alex Good Friend, quoth he:
Say the firme Romen to great Egypt sends
This treasure of an Oyster: at whose foote
To mend the petty presente, I will peere
Her opulent Throne, with Kingdomes. All the East,
(Say thou) shall call her Mistris. So he nodded,
And soberly did mount an Arme-gaunt Steede,
Who neigh'd so hye, that what I would haue spake,
Was beastly dumbe by him.

Cleo. What was he sad, or merry?

Alex. Like to the time o'th'yeare, between ſ extremes
Of hot and cold, he was nor sad nor merrie.

Cleo. Oh well diuided disposition: Note him,
Note him good Charmian, 'tis the man; but note him.
He was not sad, for he would shiuer on those
That make their looks by his. He was not merrie,
Which seem'd to tell them, his remembrance lay
In Egypt with his loy, but betweene both.
Oh heauenly mingle! Bee'st thou sad, or merrie,
The violence of either thee becomes,
So do's it no mans else. Met'st thou my Posts?

Alex. I Madam, twenty seuerall Messengers.
Why do you send so thicke?

Cleo. Who's borne that day, when I forget to send to Anthonie, shall dye a Begger. Inke and paper Charmian. Welcome my good Alexas. Did I Charmian, euer love Cæsar so?

Char. Oh that brave Cæsar!

Cleo. Be chook'd with such another Emphasis,
Say the brave Anthony.

Char. The valiant Cæsar.

Cleo. By Isis, I will giue thee bloody teeth,
If thou with Cæsar Paragon againe:
My man of men.

Char. By your most gracious pardon,
I sing but after you.

Cleo. My Sallad dayes,
When I was greene in iudgement, cold in blood,
To say, as I saide then. But come, away,
Get me Inke and Paper,

He

be shall haue every day a seuerall greeting, or lie vpon pile Egypt. Exeunt

Enter Pompey, Menecrates, and Menas, in warlike manner.

Pom. If the great Gods be iust, they shall assist
The deeds of iustest men.

Men. Know worthy Pompey, that what they do delay, they not deny.

Pom. Whiles we are suitors to their Throne, decayes the thing we sue for.

Men. We ignorant of our selues,
Begge often our owne harmes, which the wise Powers
Deny vs for our good: so finde we profit
By loosing of our Prayers.

Pom. I shall do well:
The people loue me, and the Sea is mine;
My powers are Crescent, and my Auguring hope
Says it will come to th'full. Marke Anthony
In Egypt sits at dinner, and will make
No warres without doores. Cæsar gets money where
He loosses hearts: Lepidus flatters both,
Of both is flatter'd: but he neither loues,
Nor either cares for him.

Men. Cæsar and Lepidus are in the field,
A mighty strength they carry

Pom. Where haue you this? 'Tis false

Men. From Siluius. Sir

Pom. He dreames: I know they are in Rome together
Looking for Anthony: but all the charmes of Loue,
Salt Cleopatra soften thy wand lip,
Let Witchcraft ioyne with Beauty, Lust with both,
Tye vp the Libertine in a field of Feasts,
Keepe his Brains forming. Epicurean Cookes,
Sharpen with cloyless sawce his Appetite,
That sleepe and feeding may prorogue his Honour,
Euen till a Lethied dulnesse ——

Enter Varrius.

How now Varrius?

Var. This is most certaine, that I shall deliuer:
Marke Anthony is every houre in Rome
Expected. Since he went from Egypt, 'tis
A space for farther Trauaile.

Pom. I could haue given less matter
A better eare. Menas, I did not thinke
This amorous Surfetter would haue doon'd his Helme
For such a petty Warre: His Souldiership
Is twice the other twaine: But let vs rere
The higher our Opinion, that our stirring
Can from the lap of Egypts Widdow, pluche
The ouere Lust-wearied Anthony.

Men. I cannot hope,
Cæsar and Anthony shall well greet together;
His Wife that's dead, did trespasses to Cæsar,
His Brother wan'd vpon him, although I thinke
Not mou'd by Anthony

Pom. I know not Menas,
How lesser Enmities may give way to greater,
Were't not that we stand vp against them all:
'Twer pregnant they should square between themselues,
For they haue entertained cause enough
To draw their swords: but how the feare of vs
May Cement their diuisions, and binde vp
The petty difference, we yet not know:
Beet as our Gods will haue't; it onely stands
Our lives vpon, to vse our strongest hands
Come Menas. Exeunt.

Enter Ambarbus and Lepidus

Lep. Good Ambarbus, 'tis a worthy deed,
And shall become you well, to intreat your Captaine
To soft and gentle speech.

Ambr. I shall interest him
To answer like himselfe: if Cæsar moue him,
Let Anthony looke ouer Cæsar's head,
And speake as loud as Mars. By Iupiter,
Were I the wearer of Anthonie's Beard,
I would not shaue't to day.

Lep. 'Tis not a time for priuate stomacking.

Ambr. Every time serues for the matter that is then borne in't.

Lep. But small to greater matters must give way.

Ambr. Not if the small come first.

Lep. Your speech is passion: but pray you stirre
No Embers vp. Heere comes the Noble Anthony.

Enter Anthony and Ventidius.

Ambr. And yonder Cæsar

Enter Cæsar, Mecænas, and Agrippa

Ant. If we compose well heere, to Parthia:
Hearke Ventidius

Cæsar. I do not know Mecænas, aske Agrippa.

Lep. Noble Friends:
That which combin'd vs was most great, and let not
A leaner action rend vs. What's amisse,
May it be gently heard. When we debate
Our mutuall difference loud, we do commit
Murther in healing wounds. Then Noble Partners,
The rather for I earnestly beseech,
Touch you the sowrest points with sweetest termes,
Nor curtnesse grow to th'matter.

Ant. 'Tis spoken well:
Were we before our Armies, and to fight,
I should do thus. Flourish.

Caes. Welcome to Rome.

Ant. Thanke you.

Caes. Sit.

Ant. Sit sir.

Caes. Nay then.

Ant. I learne, you take things ill, which are not so:
Or being, concerne you not.

Caes. I must be laught at, if or for nothing, or a little, I
Should say my selfe offended, and with you
Chiefely i'th'world. More laught at, that I should Once name you derogately: when to sound your name
It not concern'd me.

Ant. My being in Egypt Cæsar, what was't to you?

Caes. No more then my reciding heere at Rome
Might be to you in Egypt: yet if you there
Did practise on my State, your being in Egypt
Might be my question.

Ant. How intend you, practis'd?

Caes. You may be pleas'd to catch at mine intent,
By what did heere befall me. Your Wife and Brother
Made warres vpon me, and their contestation
Was Theame for you, you were the word of warre.

Ant. You do mistake your business, my Brother never Did vrge me in his Act: I did inquire it,
And haue my Learning from some true reports
That drew their swords with you, did he not rather Discredit my authority with yours,
And make the warres alike against my stomacke,
Having alike your cause. Of this, my Letters
Before did satisfie you. If you'l patch a quarrell,
As matter whole you haue to make it with,

It must not be with this.

Caes. You prease your selfe, by laying defects of judgement to me; but you patche vp your excuses.

Ant. Not so, not so:
I know you could not lacke, I am certaine on't,
Very necessity of this thought, that I
Your Partner in the cause 'gainst which he fought,
Could not with graceful eyes attend those Wares
Which frameed mine owne peace. As for my wife,
I would you had her spirit, in such another,
The third o'th'world is yours, which with a Snaffle,
You may pace easie, but not such a wife.

Eno. Would we had all such wives, that the men might go to Wares with the women.

Ant. So much vnworthable, her Garbulles (Caesar)
Made out of her impatience: which not wanted
Shrodenesse of policie to: I greeving grant,
Did you too much disquiet, for that you must,
But say I could not helpe it?

Caesar. I wrote to you, when rioting in Alexandria you
Did pocket vp my Letters: and with taunts
Did gibe my Missive out of audience.

Ant. Sir, he fell vpon me, ere admitted, then:
There Kings I had newly feasted, and did weare
Of what I was i'th'morning, but next day
I told him of my selfe, which was as much
As to have asktt him pardon. Let this Fellow
Be nothing of our strife: if we contend
Out of our question wipe him.

Caesar. You have broken the Article of your oath, which you shall never have tongue to charge me with.

Lep. Soft Caesar.

Ant. No Lepidus, let him speake,
The Honour is Sacred which he talks on now,
Supposing that I lackt it: but on Caesar,
The Article of my oath,

Caesar. To lend me Armes, and aide when I requir'd them, the which you both denied.

Ant. Neglected rather:
And then when poysoned hours had bound me vp
From mine owne knowledge, as merely as I may,
Ile play the penitent to you, But mine honesty,
Shall not make poore my greatnesse, nor my power
Worke without it. Truth is, that Pahno,
To lade me out of Egypt, made Wares heere,
For which my selfe, the ignorant motiue, do
So farre ask pardon, as befits mine Honour
To stoope in such a case.

Lep. 'Tis Noble spoken.

Mec. If it might please you, to enforce no further
The griefes betweene ye: to forget them quite,
Were to remember: that the present needs,
Speakes to attone you.

Lep. Worthily spoken Mecenas.

Eno. Or if you borrow one another's Loue for the instant, you may when you have no more words of Pompey returne it again: you shall have time to wrangle in, when you have nothing else to do.

Ant. Thou art a Souldier, only speake no more.

Eno. That truth should be silent, I had almost forgot.

Ant. You wrong this presence, therefore speake no more.

Eno. Go to then; your Considerate stone.

Caesar. I do not much dislike the matter, but
The manner of his speech: for't cannot be,
We shall remaine in friendship, our conditions
So differing in their acts. Yet if I knew,
What Hoope should hold vs staunch from edge to edge
O'th'world: I would persue it.

Agri. Give me leave Caesar.

Caesar. Speake Agrippa.

Agri. Thou hast a Sister by the Mothers side, admir'd
Octauia? Great Marke Antony is now a widdower.

Caesar Say not, say Agrippa, if Cleopatra heard you, your peoole were well deserued of rashnesse.

Ant. I am not married Caesar: let me heare Agrippa further speake.

Agri. To hold you in perpetuall amitie,
To make you Brothers, and to lade your hearts
With an vn-slipping knot, take Antony,
Octauia to his wife; whose beauty claimes
No worse a husband than the best of men: whose Vertue, and whose generall graces, speake
That which none else can vtter. By this marriage,
All little Iealousies which now seeme great,
And all great feares, which now import their dangers,
Would then be nothing. Truth's would be taine,
Where now half tales be truth's: her loue to both,
Would each to other, and all loues to both
Draw after her. Pardon what I have spoke,
For 'tis a studied not a present thought,
By duty ruminated.

Ant. Will Caesar speake?

Caesar. Not till he hears how Antony is touch'd
With what is spoke already.

Ant. What power is in Agrippa,
If I would say Agrippa, be it so,
To make this good?

Caesar. The power of Caesar,
And his power, vnto Octauia.

Ant. May I never
(To this good purpose, that so fairely shewes)
Dreame of impediment: let me have thy hand
Further this act of Grace: and from this houre,
The heart of Brothers gouerne in our Loues,
And sway our great Designes.

Caesar. There's my hand.
A Sister I bequeath you, whom no Brother
Did euer loue so dearely. Let her liue
To ioyne our kingdomes, and our hearts, and never Fle off our Loues again.

Lepi. Happily, Amen.

Ant. I did not think to draw my Sword 'gainst Pompey,
For he hath laid strange courtesies, and great
Of late vpon me. I must thanke him onely,
Lest my remembrance, suffer ill report:
At heele of that, defie him.

Lepi. Time cals vpon's,
Of vs must Pompey presently be sought,
Or else he seekes out vs

Ant. Where hes he?

Caesar. About the Mount-Misene.

Ant. What is his strength by land?

Caesar. Great, and increasing:
But by Sea he is an absolute Master.

Ant. So is the Fame,
Would we had spoke together. Haste we for it,
Yet ere we put our selues in Armes, dispatch we
The business we have talkt of.

Caesar. With most gladnesse,
And do inuite you to my Sisters view,

Vpon

Whether straight Ile lead you.

Ant. Let vs Lepidus not lacke your companie.

Lep. Noble Anthony, not sickneſſe ſhould detaine me.

Flourish. Exit omnes.

Manet Enobarbus, Agrippa, Mecenas.

Mec. Welcome from Egypt Sir.

Eno. Halfe the heart of Caſar, worthy Mecenas. My honourable Friend Agrippa.

Agri. Good Enobarbus.

Mec. We haue cauſe to be glad, that matters are ſo well digeſted: you ſtaid well by't in Egypt.

Eno. I Sir, we did ſleepe day out of countenance: and made the night light with drinking.

Mec. Eight Wilde-Boares roſted whole at a breakfaſt: and but twelue perſons there. Is this true?

Eno. This was but as a Flye by an Eagle: we had much more monſtrous matter of Feaſt, which worthily deſerued noting.

Mecenas. She's a moſt triumphant Lady, if report be ſquare to her.

Eno. When ſhe firſt met Marke Anthony, ſhe purſt vp his heart vpon the River of Sidnis.

Agri. There ſhe appear'd indeed: or my reporter deuis'd well for her.

Eno. I will tell you,

The Barge ſhe ſat in, like a burniſht Throne
Burnt on the water: the Poope was beaten Gold,
Purple the Sailes, and ſo perfumed that
The Windes were Loue-ſicke.
With them the Owers were Siluer,
Which to the tune of Flutes kept ſtroke, and made
The water which they beate, to follow faſter;
As amorous of their ſtrokes. For her owne perſon,
It beggard all deſcription, ſhe did lye
In her Pauillion, cloth of Gold, of Tiſſue,
O're-picturing that Venus, where we ſee
The ſpirit ore-worne Nature. On each ſide her,
Stood pretty Dimpled Boyes, like ſmiling Cupids,
With diuers colour'd Fanes whoſe winde did feeme,
To glow the delicate cheeke which they did coole,
And what they vndid did.

Agrip. Oh rare for Anthony.

Eno. Her Gentlewomen, like the Nereides,
So many Mer-maides tended her i'th'eyes,
And made their bends adornings. At the Helme.
A ſeeming Mer-maide ſteeres: The Silken Tackle,
Swell with the touches of thoſe Flowre-ſoft hands,
That yarely frame the office. From the Barge
A ſtrange inuiſible perfume hits the ſenſe
Of the adiacent Wharfes. The Cheey caſt
Her people out vpon her: and Anthony
Enthron'd i'th' Market-place, did ſit alone,
Whiſtling to th'ayre: which but for vacancie,
Had gone to gaze on Cleopatra too,
And made a gap in Nature.

Agri. Rare Egiptian.

Eno. Vpon her landing, Anthony ſentt to her,
Inuited her to Supper: ſhe replyed,
It ſhould be better, he became her gueſt:
Which ſhe entreated, our Courteous Anthony,
Whom neere the word of no woman heard ſpeake,
Being berber'd ten times o'r, goes to the Feaſt:
And for his ordinary, pays his heart,
For what he eyes euer onely.

Agri. Royall Wench:

She made great Caſar lay his Sword to bed,
He ploughed her, and ſhe cropt.

Eno. I ſaw her once
Hop forty Paces through the publicke ſtreets,
And hauing loſt her breath, ſhe ſpoke, and panted,
That ſhe did make defect, perfection,
And breathleſſe powre breath forth.

Mec. Now Anthony, muſt leaue her vtterly.

Eno. Neuer he will not:
Age cannot wither her, nor cuſtome ſtale
Her infinite variety: other women cloy
The appetites they feede, but ſhe makes hungry,
Where moſt ſhe ſatisfies. For vildeſt things
Become themſelues in her, that the holy Priests
Bleſſe her, when ſhe is Riggiſh.

Mec. If Beauty, Wiſedome, Modeſty, can ſettle
The heart of Anthony: Othauia is
A bleſſed Lottery to him.

Agrip. Let vs go. Good Enobarbus, make your ſelfe my gueſt, whilſt you abide heere.

Eno. Humbly Sir I thanke you. Enoun.

Enter Anthony, Caſar, Octauia between them.

Ant. The world, and my great office, will Sometimes deuide me from your boſome.

Octa. All which time, before the Gods my knee ſhall
Bowre my prayers to them for you.

Ant. Good night Sir. My Octauia
Read not my blemiſhes in the worlds report:
I haue not kept my ſquare, but that to come
Shall all be done by th'Rule: good night deare Lady:
Good night Sir.

Caſar. Goodnight. Exit.

Enter Soothſayer.

Ant. Now ſirrah: you do wiſh your ſelfe in Egypt?

Soth. Would I had neuer come from thence, nor you thither.

Ant. If you can, your reaſon?

Soth. I ſee it in my motion, haue it not in my tongue. But yet hie you to Egypt again.

Ant. Say to me, whoſe Fortunes ſhall riſe higher Caſars or mine?

Soth. Caſars. Therefore (oh Anthony) ſtay not by his ſide
Thy Demon that thy Spirit which keeps thee, is Noble, Courageous, high vnmatchable,
Where Caſars is not. But neere him, thy Angell
Becomes a feare: as being o're-powr'd, therefore
Make ſpace enough betweene you.

Ant. Speake this no more.

Soth. To none but thee no more but: when to thee,
If thou doſt play with him at any game,
Thou art ſure to looſe: And of that Naturall lucke,
He beats thee 'gainſt the odds. Thy Luſter thickens,
When he ſhines by: I ſay againe, thy Spirit
Is all affraid to gouerne thee neere him:
But he alway 'tis Noble.

Ant. Get thee gone:
Say to Ventidius I would ſpeake with him. Exit.
He ſhall to Parthia, be it Art or hap,
He hath ſpoken true. The very Dice obey him,
And in our ſports my better cunning faint,
Vnder his chance. If we draw lots he ſpeeds,
His Cocks do winne the Battaile, ſtill of mine,
When it is all to naught: and his Quailes euer
Beate mine (in hoope) at odd's. I will to Egypt:

And

And though I make this marriage for my peace,
I'th East my pleasure lies. Oh come Ventidius.
Exeunt Ventidius.
You must to Parthia, your Commissions ready:
Follow me, and receive't. Exeunt

Enter Lepidus, Mecenas and Agrippa.

Lepidus. Trouble your selves no further: pray you hasten your Generals after.
Agr. Sir, Marke Antony, will e're but kisse Octavia, and wee'le follow.
Lep. Till I shall see you in your Souldiers dresse,
Which will become you both: Farewell.
Mec. We shall: as I conceive the journey, be at Mount before you Lepidus.
Lep. Your way is shorter, my purposes do draw me much about, you'le win two dayes upon me.
Both. Sir good successe.
Lep. Farewell. Exeunt.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Iras and Alexas.

Cleo. Give me some Musicke: Musicke, moody foode of us that trade in Love.
Omnes. The Musicke, hoa.
Enter Mardian the Eunuch.
Cleo. Let it alone, let's to Billards: come Charmian.
Char. My arme is sore, best play with Mardian.
Cleopa. As well a woman with an Eunuch plaide, as with a woman. Come you'le play with me Sir?
Mardi. As well as I can Madam.
Cleo. And when good-will is shewed,
Though't come so short
The Actor may plead pardon. He nine now,
Give me mine Angle, we'le to'th River there
My Musicke playing farre off. I will betray
Tawny fine fishes, my bended hooke shall pierce
Their slimy jawes. and as I draw them vp,
I'le think them every one an Antony,
And say, ah ha, y'are caught.
Char. Twas merry when you wager'd on your Angling, when your diver did hang a salt fish on his hooke which he with fervencie drew vp.
Cleo. That time? Oh times:
I laught him out of patience: and that night
I laught him into patience, and next morne,
Ere the ninth houre I drunke him to his bed:
Then put my Tires and Mantles on him, whilst
I wore his Sword Philippan. Oh from Italia,
Enter a Messenger.
Ramme thou thy fruitefull tidings in mine eares,
That long time have bin barren.
Mes. Madam, Madam.
Cleo. Antonyo's dead.
If thou say so Villaine, thou kill'st thy Mistris:
But well and free, if thou so yeild him.
There is Gold, and here
My bleweft veines to kisse: a hand that Kings
Have lips, and trembled kissing.
Mes. First Madam, he is well.
Cleo. Why there's more Gold.
But sirrah marke, we use
To say, the dead are well: bring it to that,
The Gold I give thee, will I melt and power
Downe thy ill vexing throate.
Mes. Good Madam heare me.
Cleo. Well, go too I will:
But there's no goodnesse in thy face if Antony
Be free and healthfull; so tart a favour
To trumpet such good tidings. If not well,
Thou shouldst come like a Furie crown'd with Snakes,
Not like a formall man.
Mes. Wilt please you heare me?
Cleo. I have a mind to strike thee ere thou speak'st:
Yet if thou say Antony lives, 'tis well,
Or friends with Cæsar, or not Captive to him,
I'le set thee in a shower of Gold, and hailes
Rich Pearles upon thee.
Mes. Madam, he's well.
Cleo. Well said.
Mes. And Friends with Cæsar.
Cleo. Th'art an honest man.
Mes. Cæsar, and he, are greater Friends than ever.
Cleo. Make thee a Fortune from me.
Mes. But yet Madam.
Cleo. I do not like but yet, it does allay
The good precedence, fie vpon but yet,
But yet is as a Jayler to bring forth
Some monstrous Malefactor. Prythee Friend,
Pourre out the packe of matter to mine eare,
The good and bad together: he's friends with Cæsar,
In state of health thou saist, and thou saist, free.
Mes. Free Madam, no: I made no such report,
He's bound vnto Octavia.
Cleo. For what good turne?
Mes. For the best turne i'th bed.
Cleo. I am pale Charmian.
Mes. Madam, he's married to Octavia.
Cleo. The most infectious Pestilence vpon thee.
Strikes him downe.
Mes. Good Madam patience.
Cleo. What say, you? Strikes him.
Hence horrible Villaine, or I'le spurne thine eyes
Like balls before me: I'le throbbe thy head,
She hales him vp and downe.
Thou shalt be whipt with Wyre, and stew'd in brine,
Smarting in lingring pickle.
Mes. Gracious Madam,
I that do bring the newes, made not the match.
Cleo. Say 'tis not so, a Province I will give thee,
And make thy Fortunes proud: the blow thou had'st
Shall make thy peace, for moving me so much,
And I will boot thee with what gift besides
Thy modestie can beggar.
Mes. He's married Madam.
Cleo. Rogue, thou hast liv'd too long. Draw a knife.
Mes. Nay then I'le runne.
What mean you Madam, I have made no fault. Exit.
Char. Good Madam keepe your selfe within your selfe,
The man is innocent.
Cleo. Some Innocents scape not the thunderbolt:
Melt Egypt into Nyle: and kindly creatures
Turne all to Serpents. Call the slave again,
Though I am mad, I will not bite him: Call?
Char. He is afeard to come.
Cleo. I will not hurt him,
These hands do lacke Nobilitie, that they strike
A meaner than my selfe: since I my selfe
Have given my selfe the curse. Come hither Sir.
Enter the Messenger again.
Though it be honest, it is never good
To bring bad newes: give to a gracious Message

An host of tongues, but let ill tydings tell
Themselues, when they be felt.
Mes. I haue done my duty.
Cleo. Is he married?
I cannot hate thee worser then I do,
If thou againe say yes.
Mes. He's married Madam.
Cleo. The Gods confound thee,
Dost thou hold there still?
Mes. Should I lye Madame?
Cleo. Oh, I would thou didst:
So halfe my Egypt were submerg'd and made
A Cesterne for scal'd Snakes. Go get thee hence,
Had'st thou Narissus in thy face to me,
Thou would'st appeare most vgly: He is married?
Mes. I crave your Highnesse pardon.
Cleo. He is married?
Mes. Take no offence, that I would not offend you,
To punish me for what you make me do
Seemes much vnequall, he's married to Octauia.
Cleo. Oh that his fault should make a knaue of thee,
That art not what th'art sure of. Get thee hence,
The Merchandize which thou hast brought from Rome
Are all too deere for me:
Lye they vpon thy hand, and be vndone by em.
Char. Good your Highnesse patience.
Cleo. In praying Anthony, I haue dispais'd Cæsar.
Char. Many times Madam
Cleo. I am paid for't now: lead me from hence,
I faint, oh Iras, Charmion: 'tis no matter.
Go to the Fellow, good Alexas bid him
Report the feature of Octauia: her yeares,
Her inclination, let him not leaue out
The colour of her haire. Bring me word quickly,
Let him for euer go, let him not Charmian,
Though he be painted one way like a Gorgon,
The other wayes a Mars. Bid you Alexas
Bring me word, how tall she is: pitty me Charmian,
But do not speake to me. Lead me to my Chamber
Exeunt.

Flourish. Enter Pompey at one doore with Drum and Trumpet: at another Cæsar, Lepidus, Anthony, Enobarbus, Mecænas, Agrippa, Menas with Souldiers Marching

Pom. Your Hostages I haue, so haue you mine:
And we shall talke before we fight.
Cæsar. Most meete that first we come to words,
And therefore haue we
Our written purposes before vs sent,
Which if thou hast considered, let vs know,
If't will tye vp thy discontented Sword,
And send backe to Cleeba much tall youth,
That else must perish heere.
Pom. To you all three,
The Senators alone of this great world,
Chiefe Factors for the Gods. I do not know,
Wherefore my Father should reuengers want,
Having a Sonne and Friends, since Iulius Cæsar,
Who at Phillippi the good Brutus ghosted,
There saw you labouring for him. What was't
That mou'd pale Cassius to conspire? And what Made all-honor'd, honest, Romaine Brutus,
With the arm'd rest, Courtiers of beauteous freedome,
To drench the Capitoll, but that they would
Haue one man but a man, and that his is Hath made me rigge my Neuie. At whose bosome,
The anger'd Ocean fomes, with which I meane
To scourge th'ingratitude, that despightfull Rome
Cast on my Noble Father.
Cæsar. Take your time.
Ant. Thou can'st not feare vs Pompey with thy sailes.
Weele speake with thee at Sea. At land thou know'st
How much we do o're-count thee.
Pom. At Land indeed
Thou dost o'recount me of my Fathers house:
But since the Cuckoo builds not for himselfe,
Remaine in't as thou maist.
Lep. Be pleas'd to tell vs,
(For this is from the present how you takes)
The offers we haue sent you.
Cæsar. There's the point.
Ant. Which do not be entreated too,
But weigh what it is worth embrac'd
Cæsar. And what may follow to try a larger Fortune.
Pom. You haue made me offer
Of Cicelie, Sardinia: and I must Rid all the Sea of Pirats. Then, to send
Measures of Wheate to Rome: this greed vpon,
To part with vnhacke edges, and beare backe
Our Targes vndamed.
Omnes. That's our offer.
Pom. Know then I came before you heere,
A man prepar'd
To take this offer. But Marke Anthony,
Put me to some impatience: though I loose
The praise of it by telling. You must know
When Cæsar and your Brother were at blowes,
Your Mother came to Cicelie, and did finde
Her welcome Friendly.
Ant. I haue heard it Pompey,
And am well studied for a liberall thanks,
Which I do owe you.
Pom. Let me haue your hand:
I did not thinke Sir, to haue met you heere.
Ant. The beds i'th East are soft, and thanks to you,
That call'd me timelier then my purpose hither:
For I haue gained by't.
Cæsar. Since I saw you last, ther's a change vpon you.
Pom. Well, I know not.
What counts harsh Fortune casts vpon my face,
But in my bosome shall she neuer come,
To make my heart her vassaile.
Lep. Well met heere.
Pom. I hope so Lepidus, thus we are agreed:
I crave our composition may be written
And seal'd betweene vs.
Cæsar. That's the next to do.
Pom. Weele feast each other, ere we part, and let's
Draw lots who shall begin.
Ant. That will I Pompey.
Pompey. No Anthony take the lot: but first or last,
your fine Egyptian cookerie shall haue the fame, I haue heard that Iulius Cæsar, grew fat with feasting there.
Anth. You haue heard much.
Pom. I haue heard meaning Sir.
Ant. And faire words to them.
Pom. Then so much haue I heard,
And I haue heard Apollodorus carried ———
Eno. No more that: he did so.
Pom. What I pray you?
Eno. A certaine Queene to Cæsar in a Mattra.
Pom. I know thee now, how far'st thou Souldier?
Eno. Well, and well am like to do, for I perceiue

Four

Foure Feasts are toward.

Pom. Let me shake thy hand,
I never hated thee: I have seene thee fight,
When I have enuied thy behaviour.

Eno. Sir, I never lou'd you much, but I ha'prais'd ye,
When you have well deserv'd ten times as much,
As I have said you did.

Pom. Inioy thy plainnesse,
It nothing ill becomes thee:
Aboard my Gally, I inuite you all.
Will you lead Lords?

All. Shew s the way, sir.

Pom. Come. Exeunt. Manet Eno. & Menas

Men. Thy Father Pompey would ne're have made this Treaty. You, and I have knowne sir.

Eno. At Sea, I thinke.

Men. We have Sir.

Eno. You have done well by water.

Men. And you by Land.

Eno. I will praise any man that will praise me, though it cannot be denied what I have done by Land.

Men. Nor what I have done by water.

Eno. Yes some-thing you can deny for your owne safety: you have bin a great Theeft by Sea.

Men. And you by Land.

Eno. There I deny my Land seruice: but giue mee your hand Menas, if our eyes had authority, here they might take two Theeues kissing.

Men. All men faces are true, whatsoeuer their hands are.

Eno. But there is neuer a fayre Woman, has a true Face.

Men. No slander, they steale hearts.

Eno. We came hither to fight with you.

Men. For my part, I am sorry it is turn'd to a Drinking. Pompey doth this day laugh away his Fortune.

Eno. If he do, sure he cannot weep't backe againe.

Men. Y'haue said Sir, we look'd not for Marke Anthony here, pray you, is he married to Cleopatra?

Eno. Cæsars Sister is call'd Octauia.

Men. True Sir, she was the wife of Caius Marcellus.

Eno. But she is now the wife of Marcus Anthonius.

Men. Pray'ye sir.

Eno. 'Tis true.

Men. Then is Cæsar and he, for ever knit together.

Eno. If I were bound to Diuine of this vnity, I would not Prophesie so.

Men. I thinke the policy of that purpose, made more in the Marriage, then the loue of the parties.

Eno. I thinke so too. But you shall finde the bond that seemes to tye their friendship together, will bee the very strangler of their Amity: Octauia is of a holy, cold, and still conuersation.

Men. Who would not haue his wife so?

Eno. Not he that himselfe is not so: which is Marke Anthony: he will to his Egyptian dish again: then shall the sighes of Octauia blow the fire vp in Cæsar, and (as I said before) that which is the strength of their Amity, shall proue the immediate Author of their variance. Anthony will vse his affection where it is. Hee married but his occasion here.

Men. And thus it may be. Come Sir, will you aboard? I haue a health for you.

Eno. I shall take it sir: we haue vs'd our Throats in Egypt.

Men. Come, let's away. Exeunt.

Musicke plaies.

Enter two or three Seruants with a Banquet.

1 Heere they'l be man: some o'th'their Plants are rooted already, the least winde i'th'world will blow them downe.

2 Lepidus is high Coneiard.

1 They haue made him drinke Alms drinke.

2 As they pinch one another by the disposition, he cries out, no more; reconciles them to his entertaine, and himselfe to'th'drinke.

1 But it raises the greatest warre betweene him & his discretion.

2 Why this it is to haue a name in great mens Fellowship: I had as liue haue a Reede that will do me no seruice, as a Partizan I could not heaue.

1 To be call'd into a huge Sphere, and not to be seene to moue in't, are the holes where eyes should bee, which pitifully disdaine the cheeke.

A Sennet sounded.

Enter Cæsar, Anthony, Pompey, Lepidus, Agrippa, Mecænas, Enobarbus, Menas, with other Captaines.

Ant. Thus do they Sir: they take the flow o'th'Nile
By certaine scales i'th'Pyramid: they know
By'th'height, the lownesse, or the mean: If dearth
Or Foizon follow. The higher Nilus swell,
The more it promises: as it ebbes, the Sonldiers
Vpon the slime and Ooze scatter his graine,
And shortly comes to Harrest.

Lep. Y'haue strange Serpents there?

Anth. I Lepidus.

Lep. Your Serpent of Egypt, is bred now of your mud by the operation of your Sun: so is your Crocodile.

Ant. They are so.

Pom. Sit, and some Wine: A health to Lepidus.

Lep. I am not so well as I should be:
But I'le ne're out.

Eno. Not till you haue slept: I feare me you'l bee in till then.

Lep. Nay certainly, I haue heard the Ptolomies Pyramides are very goodly things: without contradiction I haue heard that.

Menas. Pompey, a word.

Pomp. Say in mine eare, what is't.

Men. Forsake thy seate I do beseech thee Captaine,
And heare me speake a word.

Pom. Forbeare me till anon. Whispers in's eare.
This Wine for Lepidus.

Lep. What manner o'thing is your Crocodile?

Ant. It is shap'd sir like itselfe, and it is as broad as it hath breath; It is just so high as it is, and moueth with owne organes. It liues by that which nourisheth it, and the Elements once out ofit, it Transmigrates.

Lep. What colour is it of?

Ant. Of it owne colour too.

Lep. 'Tis a strange Serpent.

Ant. 'Tis so, and the teares of it are wet.

Caes. Will this description satisfie him?

Ant. With the Health that Pompey gives him, else he is a very Epicure.

Pomp. Go hang sir, hang: tell me of that? Away:
Do as I bid you. Where's this Cup I call'd for?

Men. If for the sake of Merit thou wilt heare mee,

Rise

Rise from thy stoole.

Pom. I thinke th'art mad: the matter?

Men. I have ever held my cap off to thy Fortunes.

Pom. Thou hast serv'd me with much faith: what's else to say? Be jolly Lords.

Anth. These Quicke-sands Lepidus,
Keepe off, them for you sinke.

Men. Wilt thou be Lord of all the world?

Pom. What saist thou?

Men. Wilt thou be Lord of the whole world?
That's twice.

Pom. How should that be?

Men. But entertaine it, and though thou think me poore, I am the man will give thee all the world.

Pom. Hast thou drunke well.

Men. No Pompey, I have kept me from the cup,
Thou art if thou dar'st be, the earthly Iove:
What ere the Ocean pales, or sky inclippes,
Is thine, if thou wilt ha't.

Pom. Shew me which way?

Men. These three World-sharers, these Competitors
Are in thy vessell. Let me cut the Cable,
And when we are put off, fall to their throates:
All there is thine.

Pom. Ah, this thou shouldst have done,
And not have spoke on't. In me 'tis villanie,
In thee, 't had bin good service: thou must know,
'Tis not my profit that does lead mine Honour:
Mine Honour it. Repent that ere thy tongue,
Hath so betraide thine act. Being done vnknowne,
I should have found it afterwards well done,
But must condemne it now: desist, and drinke.

Men. For this, I'le never follow
Thy pau'l Fortunes more,
Who seekes and will not take, when once 'tis offer'd,
Shall never finde it more.

Pom. This health to Lepidus.

Ant. Bear him ashore,
I'le pledge it for him Pompey.

Eno Here's to thee Menas

Men. Enobarbus, welcome.

Pom. Fill till the cup be hid.

Eno. There's a strong Fellow Menas.

Men. Why?

Eno. A bears the third part of the world man: seest not?

Men. The third part, then he is drunk: would it were all, that it might go on wheeles.

Eno. Drinke thou: increase the Reeles.

Men Come.

Pom. This is not yet an Alexandrian Feast.

Ant. It ripens towards it: strike the Vessells ho,
Heere's to Cæsar

Cæsar. I could well forbeare 't, in's monstrous labour when I wash my braine, and it grow fouler.

Ant. Be a Child o'th'time.

Cæsar. Possesse it, I'le make answer: but I had rather fast from all, foure dayes, then drinke so much in one.

Eno. Ha my brave Emperour, shall we dance now the Egyptian Bacchanals, and celebrate our drinke?

Pom. Let's ha't good Souldier.

Ant. Come, let's all take hands,
Till that the conquering Wine hath steep't our sense,
In soft and delicate Lethe.

Eno. All take hands:
Make battery to our eares with the loud Musicke,
The while, I'le place you, then the Boy shall sing.
The holding every man shall beate as loud,
As his strong sides can volly

Musicke Playes. Enobarbus places them hand in hand.

The Song.

Come thou Monarch of the Vine,
Plumpe Bacchus, with pinky eyne:
In thy Fattes our Cares be drown'd,
With thy Grapes our hairs be Crown'd.
Cup us till the world go round,
Cup us till the world go round.

Cæsar. What would you more?
Pompey goodnight. Good Brother
Let me request you of our graver business
Frownes at this leaute. Gentle Lords let's part,
You see we have burnt our cheeks. Strong Enobarbe
Is weaker then the Wine, and mine owne tongue
Spleet's what it speakes: the wilde disguise hath almost Antickt vs all. What needs more words? goodnight.
Good Anthony your hand.

Pom. I'le try you on the shore.

Anth. And shall Sir, giues your hand.

Pom Oh Anthony, you have my Father house.
But what, we are Friends?
Come downe into the Boate.

Eno Take heed you fall not Menas. Honest on shore,
Ho to my Cabin: these Drummes,
These Trumpets, Flutes: what
Let Neptune heare, we bid aloud farewell
To these great Fellowes. Sound and be hang'd, sound out.
Sound a Flourish with Drummes.

Enor. Hoo saies a there's my Cap.

Men. Hoa, Noble Captaine, come. Exeunt.

Enter Ventidius as it were in triumph, the dead body of Pacorus borne before him.

Ven. Now darting Parthys art thou stroke, and now
Pleas'd Fortune does of Marcus Crassus death
Make me revenger. Bearе the Kings Sonnes body,
Before our Army thy Pacorus Orodes,
Paies this for Marcus Crassus

Romaine. Noble Ventidius,
Whil'st yet with Parthian blood thy Sword is warme,
The Fugitive Parthians follow. Spurre through Media,
Mesapotamia, and the shelters, whether
The routed flie. So thy grand Captaine Anthony
Shall set thee on triumphant Chariots, and Put Garlands on thy head.

Ven. Oh Silius, Silius,
I have done enough. A lower place note well
May make too great an act. For learne this Silius,
Better to leave vndone, then by our deed
Acquire too high a Fame, when him we serues away.
Cæsar and Anthony, have ever wonne
More in their officer, then person. Sossius
One of my place in Syria, his Lieutenant,
For quicke accumulation of renowne,
Which he achiu'd by 'th'minute, lost his favour.
Who does i'th' Warres more then his Captaine can,
Becomes his Captaines Captaine: and Ambition
(The Souldiers vertue) rather makes choise of loss
Then gaine, which darkens him.
I could do more to do Antonius good,
But 't would offend him. And in his offence,

Should

S'should my performance perish.

Ros. Thou hast Ventidius that, without the which a Souldier and his Sword grants scarce distinction: thou wilt write to Anthony.

Ven. I'le humbly signifie what in his name, That magicall word of Warre we have effected, How with his Banners, and his well paid ranks, The ne're-yet beaten Horse of Parthia, We have vaded out o'th Field.

Ros. Where is he now?

Ven. He purposeth to Athens, whither with what haste The weight we must convey with's, will permit: We shall appeare before him. On there, pass along. Exeunt.

Enter Agrippa at one door, Enobarbus at another.

Agri. What are the Brothers parted?

Eno. They have dispatcht with Pompey, he is gone, The other three are Sealing. Octavia weeps To part from Rome: Cæsar is sad, and Lepidus Since Pompey's feast, as Menas saies, is troubled With the Greene-Sicknesse.

Agri. 'Tis a Noble Lepidus.

Eno. A very fine one: oh, how he loves Cæsar.

Agri. Nay but how dearely he adores Mark Anthony.

Eno. Cæsar? why he's the Iupiter of men.

Ant. What's Anthony, the God of Iupiter?

Eno. Speak'st thou of Cæsar? How, the non-pareill?

Agri. Oh Anthony, oh thou Arabian Bird!

Eno. Would you praise Cæsar, say Cæsar, go no further.

Agri. Indeed he plied them both with excellent praises.

Eno. But he loves Cæsar best, yet he loves Anthony: Hoo Hearts, Tongues, Figure, Scribes, Bards, Poets, cannot Thinke, speake, cast, write, sing, number: hoo, His love to Anthony. But as for Cæsar, Kneele downe, kneele downe, and wonder.

Agri. Both he loves.

Eno. They are his Shards, and he their Beetle, so This is to horse: Adieu, Noble Agrippa.

Agri. Good Fortune worthy Souldier, and farewell.

Enter Cæsar, Anthony, Lepidus, and Octavia.

Anth. No further Sir.

Cæsar. You take from me a great part of my self; Vse me well in't. Sister, prove such a wife As my thoughts make thee, and as my farthest Band Shall pass on thy approofe: most Noble Anthony, Let not the peece of Vertue which is set Betwixt vs, as the Cyment of our loue To keepe is builded, be the Ramme to barter The Fortresse of it; for better might we Have lou'd without this mean, if on both parts This be not cherisht.

Ant. Make me not offended, in your distrust.

Cæsar. I have said.

Ant. You shall not finde, Though you be therein curious, the least cause For what you seeme to feare, so the Gods keepe you, And make the hearts of Romaines serve your ends: We will heere part.

Cæsar. Farewell my deerest Sister, fare thee well, The Elements be kind to thee, and make Thy spirits all of comfort: farethee well.

Octa. My Noble Brother.

Anth. The April's in her eyes, it is Loues spring, And these the showers to bring it on: be cheerfull.

Octa. Sir, looke well to my Husbands house: and—

Cæsar. What Octavia?

Octa. I'le tell you in your eare.

Ant. Her tongue will not obey her heart, nor can Her heart inform her tongue, The Swanne's downe feather That stands vpon the Swell at the ebb fall Tide: And neither way inclines.

Eno. Will Cæsar weepe?

Agr. He has a cloud in's face.

Eno. He weeps the weeds for that, were he a Horse so he being a man

Agri. Why Enobarbus: When Anthony found Iulius Cæsar dead, He cried almost to roaring: And he wept, When at Philippi he found Brutus slaine.

Eno. That proue indeed, he was troubled with a rheum: What willingly he did confound, he wail'd, Believe't till I weepe too.

Cæsar. No sweet Octavia, You shall heare from me still: the time shall not Out-go my thinking on you.

Ant. Come Sir, come, I'le wrastle with you in my strength of loue, Looke here I have you, thus I, let him go, And give you to the Gods.

Cæsar. Adieu be happy.

Lep. Let all the number of the Starres give light To thy faire way.

Cæsar. Farewell, farewell. Kisses Octavia.

Ant. Farewell. Trumpets sound. Exeunt.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Iras, and Alexas.

Cleo. Where is the Fellow?

Alex. Halfe afeard to come.

Cleo. Go too, go too: Come hither Sir.

Enter the Messenger as before.

Alex. Good Maiestie: Herod of Iury dare not looke vpon you, but when you are well pleas'd.

Cleo. That Herods head, I'le haue: but how? When Anthony is gone, through whom I might commaund it. Come thou neere.

Mes. Most gracious Maiestie.

Cleo. Did'st thou behold Octavia?

Mes. I dread Queene.

Cleo. Where?

Mes. Madam in Rome, I looke her in the face, and saw her led between her Brother, and Marke Anthony.

Cleo. Is she as tall as me?

Mes. She is not Madam.

Cleo. Didst hear her speake? Is she shrill tongu'd or low?

Mes. Madam, I heard her speake, she is low voic'd.

Cleo. That's not so good: he cannot like her long.

Char. Like her? Oh Ise: 'tis impossible.

Cleo. I think so Charmian: dull of tongue, & dwarfish What Maiestie is in her gate, remember If ever thou look'st on Maiestie.

Mes. She creepes her motion, & her stature one an ell: She has neyther a body, rather then a life, A Statue, then a Breather.

Cleo. Is this certaine?

Mes. Or I have no obseruance.

Char. Three in Egypt cannot make better note.

Cleo. He's very knowing, I do perceiue't, There's nothing in her yet.

This Fellow he's good indgement.
Char. Excellent.
Cleo. Guesse at her yeares, I prythee.
Mess. Madam, she was a widdow.
Cleo. Widdow? Charmian, hearke.
Mes. And I do thinke she's thirtie.
Cle. Ben't thou her face in mind? is't long or round?
Mess. Round, even to faultinesse.
Cleo. For the most part too, they are foolish that are so. Her haire what colour?
Mess. Browne Madam: and her forehead
As low as she would wish it.
Cleo. There's Gold for thee,
Thou must not take my former sharpenesse ill,
I will employ thee backe againe: I finde thee
Most fit for business. Go, make thee ready,
Our Letters are prepar'd.
Char. A proper man.
Cleo. Indeed he is so: I repent me much
That so I harried him. Why me think's by him,
This Creature's no such thing.
Char. Nothing Madam.
Cleo. The man hath seene some Maiesty, and should know.
Char. Hath he seene Maiestie? Isis else defend: and serving you so long.
Cleopa. I haue one thing more to aske him yet good Charmian: but 'tis no matter, thou shalt bring him to me where I will write, all may be well enough.
Char. I warrant you Madam. Exeunt.

Enter Anthony and Ollauia.

Ant. Nay, nay Ollauia, not only that,
That were excusable, that and thousands more
Of semblable import, but he hath wag'd
New Warres 'gainst Pompey. Made his will, and read it,
To publicke eare, spoke scantly of me,
When perforce he could not
But pay me termes of Honour: cold and sickly
He vented then most narrow measure inlenesse,
When the best hint was given him: he not look't,
Or did it from his teeth.
Ollau. Oh my good Lord,
Believe not all, or if you must believe,
Stomacke not all. A more vnhappie Lady,
If this deuision chance, ne're stood betweene
Praying for both parts:
The good Gods wil mocke me presently,
When I shall pray: Oh bless my Lord, and Husband,
Vndo that prayer, by crying out as loud,
Oh bless my Brother. Husband winne, winne Brother,
Prayes, and distroyes the prayer, no midway
'Twixt these extremes at all.
Ant. Gentle Ollauia,
Let your best loue draw to that point which seeks
Best to preserue it: if I loose mine Honour,
I loose my selfe: better I were not yours
Then your so branchlesse. But as you requested,
Your selfe shall go between's, the meane time Lady,
I'le raise the preparation of a Warre
Shall staine your Brother, make your soonest haste,
So your desires are yours.
Oll. Thanks to my Lord.
The Ioue of power make me most weake, most weake,
You reconciler: Warres 'twixt you twaine would be,
As if the world should cleaue, and that slaine men
Should soder vp the Rift.

Ant. When it appeares to you where this begins,
Turne your displeasure that way, for our 'rules
Can never be so equall, that your loue
Can equally moue with them. Provide your going,
Choose your owne company, and command what cost
Your heart he's mind too. Exeunt.

Enter Enobarbus, and Eros.

Eno. How now Friend Eros?
Eros. There's strange Newes come Sir.
Eno. What man?
Ero. Cæsar & Lepidus haue made warres vpon Pompey.
Eno. This is old, what is the successe?
Eros. Cæsar hauing made vse of him in the warres gainst Pompey: presently denied him riuality, would not let him partake in the glory of the action, and not resting here, accuses him of Letters he had formerly wrote to Pompey. Vpon his owne appeale seizes him, so the poore third is vp, till death enlarge his Confine.
Eno. Then would thou hadst a peire of chopes o more, and throw betweene them all the food thou hast, they'le grinde the other. Where's Anthony?
Eros. He's walking in the garden thus, and spurnes
The rush that lies before him. Cries Foole Lepidus,
And threats the throate of that his Officer,
That murdred Pompey.
Eno. Our great Noaies rig'd.
Eros. For Italy and Cæsar, more Domitius,
My Lord desires you presently: my Newes
I might haue told hereafter.
Eno. Twillbe naught, but let it beebring me to Anthony.
Eros. Come Sir. Exeunt.

Enter Agrippa, Mecenas, and Cæsar.

Cæs. Concerning Rome he has done all this, & more
In Alexandria: here's the manner o't:
I'th' Market-place on a Tribunall siluer'd,
Cleopatra and himselfe in Chaires of Gold
Were publikely enthron'd: at the feet, sat
Cæsarion whom they call my Fathers Sonne,
And all the vnlawfull issue, that their Lust
Since then hath made betweene them. Vnto her,
He gaue the stablishment of Egypt, made her
Of lower Syria, Cyprus, Lydia, absolute Queene.
Mece. This in the publike eye?
Cæsar. I'th' common shew place, where they exercise,
His Sonnes he her proclaimed the King of Kings,
Great Media, Parthia, and Armenia
He gaue to Alexander. To Ptolomy he assign'd,
Syria, Silicia, and Phoenicia: she
In th'abiliments of the Goddesse Isis
That day appeer'd, and oft before gaue audience,
As 'tis reported so.
Mece. Let Rome be thus inform'd.
Agri. Who queasie with his insolence already,
Will their good thoughts call from him.
Cæsar. The people knowes it,
And haue now receiu'd his accusations.
Agri. Who does he accuse?
Cæsar. Cæsar, and that hauing in Cicilie
Sextus Pompeius spoil'd, we had not rated him
His part o'th' Isle. Then does he say, he lent me
Some shipping vnrestor'd. Lastly, he frets
That Lepidus of the Triumphersate, should be depos'd,
And being that, we detaine all his Reuenue.
Agri. Sir, this should be answer'd.
Cæsar. 'Tis done already, and the Messenger gone:
I haue told him Lepidus was growne too cruell,

That he his high Authority abus'd,
And did deforce his charge: for what I have conquer'd,
I grant him part: but that in his Armeths,
And other of his conquer'd Kingdoms, I demand the like.
Octa. Her'l never yeild to that.
Caes. Not mult not then be yeilded to in this.

Enter Octavia with her Traine.

Octa. Haile Caesar, and my L. haile most deare Caesar.
Caesar. That name I should call thee Cast-away.
Octa. You have not call'd me so, nor have you cause.
Caes. Why have you stolne upon vs thus? you come not Like Caesars Sister, The wife of Anthony
Should have an Army for an Vsher, and
The neighes of Horse to tell of her approach,
Long ere she did appeare. The trees by th'way
Should have borne men, and expectation fainted,
Longing for what it had not. Nay, the dust
Should have ascended to the Roofe of Heaven,
Rais'd by your populous Troopes: But you are come
A Mar-ket-maid to Rome, and have prevented
The ostentation of our loue; which left vnshewne,
Is often left vnlou'd: we should have met you
By Sea, and Land, supplying every Stage
With an augmented greeting.
Octa. Good my Lord,
To come thus was I not constrain'd, but did it
On my free-will. My Lord Marke Anthony,
Hearing that you prepar'd for Warre, acquainted
My greeved eare withall: whereon I begg'd
His pardon for returne.
Caes. Which soone he granted,
Being an abstract 'twixt his Loft, and him.
Octa. Do not say so, my Lord.
Caes. I have eyes vpon him,
And his affaires come to me on the wind: where is he now?
Octa. My Lord, in Athens.
Caesar. No my most wronged Sister, Cleopatra
Hath nodded him to her. He hath given his Empire
Vp to a Whore, who now are levying
The Kings o'th'earth for Warre. He hath assembled,
Bocchus the King of Lybia, Archilaus
Of Cappadocia, Philadelphos King
Of Paphlagonia: the Thracian King Adallas,
King Mithrades of Arabia, King of Pont,
Herod of Iewry, Mithridates King
Of Comagene, Polemon and Amintas,
The Kings of Mede, and Licaonia,
With a more larger List of Scepters.
Octa. Aye me most wretched,
That have my heart parted betwixt two Friends,
That does afflict each other. (breaking forth
Caes. Welcome hither: your Letters did withhalde our Till we perceiu'd both how you were wrong led,
And we in negligent danger: cheere your heart,
Be you not troubled with the time, which drives
O're your content, these strong necessities,
But let determin'd things to destinie
Hold vnbewayl'd their way. Welcome to Rome,
Nothing more deere to me. You are abus'd
Beyond the marke of thought: and the high Gods
To do you Iustice, makes his Ministers
Of vs, and those that loue you. Best of comfort,
And ever welcome to vs. Agrip. Welcome Lady.
Mec. Welcome deere Madam,
Each heart in Rome does loue and pitty you,
Onely th adulterous Anthony, most large
In his abhominations, turnes you off,
And gives his potent Regiment to a Trull
That noyses it against vs.
Octa. Is it so, sir?
Caes. Most certaine: Sister welcome: pray you
Be ever known to patience. My dear'st Sister. Exeunt

Enter Cleopatra, and Enobarbus.

Cleo. I will be even with thee, doubt it not.
Eno. But why, why, why?
Cleo. Thou hast forespoke my being in these warres,
And say'st it is not fit.
Eno. Well: is it, is it.
Cleo. If not, denounc'd against vs, why should not we be there in person.
Eno. Well, I could reply: if we should serue with Horse and Mares together, the Horse were merely lost:
the Mares would beare a Souldiour and his Horse.
Cleo. What is't you say?
Eno. Your presence needs must puzzle Anthony,
Take from his heart, take from his Battaile, from's tent.
What should not then be spar'd. He is already
Traduc'd for Leuity, and 'tis said in Rome,
That Photinus an Eunuch, and your Maidens
Manage this warre.
Cleo. Sinke Rome, and their tongues rot
That speake against vs. A Charge we bear i'th' Warre,
And as the president of my Kingdome will Appoint there for a man. Speake not against it.
I will not stay behinde.

Enter Anthony and Camidius.

Eno. Nay I have done, here comes the Emperor.
Ant. Is it not strange Camidius,
That from Tarentum, and Brundusium,
He could so quickly cut the Ionian Sea,
And take in Toyne. You have heard on't (Sweet?)
Cleo. Celerity is never more admir'd,
Then by the negligent.
Ant. A good rebuke,
Which might have well becom'd the best of men
To taunt at slackness. Camidius, we Will fight with him by Sea.
Cleo. By Sea, what else?
Cam. Why will my Lord, do so?
Ant. For that he dares vs too'o.
Eno. So hath my Lord, dar'd him to single fight.
Cam. I, and to wage this Battell at Pharsalia,
Where Caesar fought with Pompey. But these offers
Which serue not for his vantage, he flushes off,
And so should you.
Eno. Your Shippes are not well mann'd,
Your Mariners are Muleters, Reapers, people
Ingrost by swift Impresse. In Caesars Fleete,
Are those, that often have 'gainst Pompey fought,
Their shippes are yare, yours heavy: no disgrace
Shall fall you for refusing him at Sea,
Being prepar'd for Land.
Ant. By Sea, by Sea.
Eno. Most worthy Sir, you therein throw away
The absolute Souldiership you have by Land,
Distract your Armie, which doth most consist
Of Warre-mark-footmen, leave vnexercised
Your owne renowned knowledge, quite forgoe
The way which promises assurance, and
Give vp your self merely to chance and hazard,
From firme Security.
Ant. I'le fight at Sea.

Cleo. I haue sixty Sailes, Cæsar none better.
Ant. Our ouer-plus of shipping will we burne,
And with the rest full mann'd, from th'head of Action
Beate th'approaching Cæsar. But if we faile,
We then can doo't at Land. Enter a Messenger.
Thy Businesse?
Mes. The Newes is true, my Lord, he is descried,
Cæsar has taken Toryne.
Ant. Can he be there in person? 'Tis impossible
Strange, that his power should be. Canidius,
Our nineteene Legions thou shalt hold by Land,
And our twelue thousand Horse. We'l to our Ship,
Away my Thetis.
Enter a Souldier.
How now worthy Souldier?
Sol. Oh Noble Emperor, do not fight by Sea,
Trust not to rotten plankes: Do you misdoubt
This Sword, and these my Wounds; let th Egyptians
And the Phoenicians go a docking: wee
Haue vs'd to conquer standing on the earth
And fighting foot to foot.
Ant. Well, well, away. exit Ant. Cleo. & Eno.
Sol. By Hercules I thinke I am i'th'right.
Can. Souldier thou art: but his whole action growes
Not in the power on't: so our Leaders leade,
And we are Womens men.
Sol. You keepe by Land the Legions and the Horse whole, do you not?
Ven. Marcus Octauius, Marcus Iuferus, Publicola, and Celius, are for Sea:
But we keepe whole by Land. This speede of Cæsars
Carries beyond beleefe.
Sol. While he was yet in Rome
His power went out in such distraictions,
As beguilde all Spies.
Can. Who's his Lieutenant, know you?
Sol. They say, one Taurus.
Can. Well, I know the man.
Enter a Messenger.
Mes. The Emperor cals Canidius.
Can. With Newes the times with Labour,
And throwes forth each minute, some. exeunt

Enter Cæsar with his Army, marching.

Cæs. Taurus?
Tau. My Lord.
Cæs. Strike not by Land,
Keepe whole, prouoke not Battaile
Till we haue done at Sea. Do not exceede
The Prescript of this Scroule: Our fortune lyes
Vpon this iumpe. exit.
Enter Anthony and Enobarbus.
Ant. Set we our Squadrons on yond side o'th'Hill,
In eye of Cæsars battaile, from which place
We may the number of the Ships behold,
And so proceed accordingly. exit.

Canidius Marcheth with his Land Army one way ouer the Stage, and Taurus the Lieuetenant of Cæsar the other way: After their going in, is heard the noise of a Sea fight.
Alarum. Enter Enobarbus and Scarus.

Eno. Naught, naught, all naught, I can behold no longer:
Thamoniaid, the Egyptian Admirall,
With all their sixty flye, and turne the Rudder:
To see't, mine eyes are blasted.
Enter Scarus.
Scar. Gods, & Goddesses, all the whole synod of them!
Eno. What's thy passion.
Scar. The greater Cantle of the world, is lost
With very ignorance, we haue kift away
Kingdomes, and Prouinces.
Eno. How appeares the Fight?
Scar. On our side, like the Tokan'd Pestilence,
Where death is sure. You ribaudred Nagge of Egypt,
(Whom Leprosie o're-take) i'th'midst o'th'fight,
When vantage like a payre of Twinnes appear'd
Both as the same, or rather ours the elder;
(The Breeze vpon her) like a Cow in loue,
Hoists Sailes, and flyes.
Eno. That I beheld:
Mine eyes did sicken at the sight, and could not
Indure a further view.
Scar. She once being looft,
The Noble ruine of her Magicke, Anthony,
Claps on his Sea-wing, and (like a doting Mallard)
Leaning the Fight in height, flyes after her:
I never saw an Action of such shame;
Experience, Man-hood, Honor, ne're before,
Did violate so it selfe.
Eno. Alacke, alacke.
Enter Canidius.
Can. Our Fortune on the Sea is out of breath,
And sinkes most lamentably. Had our Generall
Bin what he knew himselfe, it had gone well:
Oh his he's given example for our flight,
Most grossly by his owne.
Eno. I, are you thereabouts? Why then goodnight indeede.
Can. Toward Peloponnesus are they fled.
Scar. Tis easie toot,
And there I will attend what further comes.
Canid. To Cæsar will I render
My Legions and my Horse, six Kings already
Show me the way of yeelding.
Eno. Ile yet follow
The wounded chance of Anthony, though my reason
Sits in the winde against me.
Enter Anthony with Attendants.
Ant. Hearke, the Land bids me tread no more vpon't,
It is asham'd to beare me. Friends, come hither,
I am so lated in the world, that I
Haue loft my way for ever. I haue a shippe,
Laden with Gold, take that, diuide it: flye,
And make your peace with Cæsar.
Omnes. Fly? Not wee.
Ant. I haue fled my selfe, and haue instructed cowards
To runne, and shew their shoulders. Friends be gone,
I haue my selfe resolu'd vpon a course,
Which has no neede of you. Be gone,
My Treasure's in the Harbour. Take it: Oh,
I follow'd that I blush to looke vpon,
My very haires do mutiny: for the white
Reproue the browne for rashnesse, and they them
For feare, and doting. Friends be gone, you shall Haue Letters from me to some Friends, that will Sweepe your way for you. Pray you looke not sad,
Nor make replyes of loathnesse, take the hint
Which my dispaire proclaimes. Let them be left
Which leaues it selfe, to the Sea-side straight way;
I will possesse you of that ship and Treasure.

Leave me, I pray a little: pray you now,
Nay do so: for indeede I have lost command,
Therefore I pray you, He see you by and by. Sits downe

Enter Cleopatra led by Charmian and Eros.

Eros. Nay gentle Madam, to him, comfort him.
Iras. Do most deere Queene.
Char. Do, why, what else?
Cleo. Let me sit downe: Oh Iuno.
Ant. No, no, no, no, no.
Eros. See you heere, Sir?
Ant. Oh fie, fie, fie.
Char. Madam.
Iras. Madam, oh good Empresse.
Eros. Sir, sir.
Ant. Yes my Lord, yes; he at Philippi kept
His sword e'ne like a dancer, while I strooke
The lean and wrinkled Cassius, and 'twas I
That the mad Brutus ended: he slone
Dealt on Lieutenantry, and no practise had
In the brave squares of Warre: yet now: no matter.
Cleo. Ah stand by.
Eros. The Queene my Lord, the Queene.
Iras. Go to him, Madam, speake to him,
He's vnqualified with very shame.
Cleo. Well then, sustaine me: Oh.
Eros. Most Noble Sir arise, the Queene approaches.
Her head's declin'd, and death will seale her, but
Your comfort makes the recluse.
Ant. I have offended Reputation,
A most vnneble fowrning.
Eros. Sir, the Queene.
Ant. Oh whether hast thou lead me Egypt, fro
How I coueny my shame, out of thine eyes,
By looking backe what I have left behinde
Stroy'd in dishonor.
Cleo. Oh my Lord, my Lord,
Forgiue my fearfull fayles, I little thought
You would haue followed.
Ant. Egypt, thou knew'st too well,
My heart was to thy Rudder tyed by'th'strings,
And thou shoud'st follow me after. O're my spirit
The full supremacie thou knew'st, and that
Thy beckie, might from the bidding of the Gods
Command me.
Cleo. Oh my pardon.
Ant. Now I must
To the young man send humble Treaties, dodge
And palter in the shifts of lowrnes, who
With half the bulke o'th'world plaid as I pleas'd,
Making, and marring Fortunes. You did know
How much you were my Conqueror, and that
My Sword, made weake by my affection, would Obey it on all cause.
Cleo. Pardon, pardon.
Ant. Fall not a teare I say, one of them rates
All that is winne and lost: Give me a kisse,
Even this repayes me.
We sent our Schoolemaster, is a come backe?
Loue I am full of Lead: some Wine
Within there, and our Viands: Fortune knowes,
We scorne her most, when most she offers blowes. Exeunt

Enter Cæsar, Agrippa, and Dolabella, with others.

Cæs. Let him appeare that's come from Antony.
Know you him.
Dola. Cæsar, 'tis his Schoolemaster,
An argument that he is plucht, when hither
He sends so poore a Pinnion of his Wing,
Which had superfluous Kings for Messengers,
Not many Moones gone by.

Enter Ambassador from Antony.

Cæsar. Approach, and speake.
Amb. Such as I am, I come from Antony:
I was of late as petty to his ends,
As is the Morne-dew on the Myrtle leafe
To his grand Sea.
Cæs. Be't so, declare thine office.
Amb. Lord of his Fortunes he salutes thee, and Requires to live in Egypt, which not granted
He Lessons his Requests, and to thee sues
To let him breath betweene the Heauens and Earth
A priuate man in Athens: this for him.
Next, Cleopatra does confesse thy Greatnesse,
Submits her to thy might, and of thee craues
The Circle of the Ptolomies for her heyres,
Now hazarded to thy Grace.
Cæs. For Antony,
I have no eares to his request. The Queene,
Of Audience, nor Desire shall fails, so thee
From Egypt drive her all-disgraced Friend,
Or take his life there. This if thee performe,
She shall not sue vnheard. So to them both.
Amb. Fortune pursue thee.
Cæs. Bring him through the Bands:
To try thy Eloquence, now 'tis time, dispatch,
From Antony winne Cleopatra, promise
And in our Name, what she requires, adde more
From thine inuention, offers. Women are not
In their best Fortunes strong; but want will perjure
The ne're touch'd Vestall. Try thy cunning Thidias,
Make thine owne Edict for thy paines, which we Will answer as a Law.
Thid. Cæsar, I go.
Cæsar. Obserue how Antony becomes his flaw,
And what thee think'st his very action speakes
In every power that moues.
Thid. Cæsar, I shall. exeunt.

Enter Cleopatra, Enobarbus, Charmian, & Iras.

Cleo. What shall we do, Enobarbus?
Eno. Thinke, and dye.
Cleo. Is Antony, or we in fault for this?
Eno. Antony only, that would make his will
Lord of his Reason. What though you fled,
From that great face of Warre, whose seuerall ranges
Frighted each other? Why should he follow?
The itch of his Affection should not then
Haue kickt his Captain-ship, at such a point,
When half to half the world opp'o'd, he being
The meered question? 'Twas a shame no lesse
Then was his losse, to course your flying Flagges,
And leave his Navy gaping.
Cleo. Prythee peace.

Enter the Ambassador, with Antony.

Ant. Is that his answer? Amb. I my Lord.
Ant. The Queene shall then haue courtesie,
So she will yeeld vs vp.
Ant. He says so.
Amb. Let her know't. To the Boy Cæsar send this grizled head, and he will fill thy wishes to the brimme
With Principalities.
Cleo. That head my Lord?

Ant.

Ant. To him againe, tell him he weares the Rose
Of youth vpon him: from which, the world should note
Something particular: His Coine, Ships, Legions,
May hiss Lawrels, whose Miniſters would prevaile
Vnder the ſeruice of a Childe, as ſoone
As'th'Command of Cæſar. I dare him therefore
To lay his gay Comparisons a-part,
And anſwer me declin'd, Sword againſt Sword,
Our ſelves alone: Ile write it: Follow me.

Eno. You like enough: hye battel'd Cæſar will Vnſtatchet happineſſe, and be Stag'd to'th'Pew
Againſt a Sworder. I ſee mens Iudgements are
A parcell of their Fortunes, and things outward
Do draw the inward quality after them
To ſuffer all alike, that he ſhould dreame,
Knowing all meſures, the full Cæſar will
Anſwer his emptineſſe; Cæſar thou haſt ſubdu'de
His Iudgement too.

Enter a Seruant.

Ser. A Meſſenger from Cæſar

Cleo. What no more Ceremony? See my Women,
Againſt the blowne Rose may they ſtop their noſe,
That kneel'd vnto the Buds. Admit him ſir.

Eno. Mine honeſty, and I, beginne to ſquare.
The Loyalty well held to Fooles, does make
Our Faithe mere folly: yet he that can endure
To follow with Allegeance a falne Lord,
Does conquer him that did his Maſter conquer,
And earnes a place i'th'Story.

Enter Thidias.

Cleo. Cæſars will.

Thid. Heare it apart.

Cleo. None but Friends: ſay boldly.

Thid. So haply are they Friends to Anthony.

Eno. He needs no many (Sir) as Cæſar has,
Or needs not vs. If Cæſar pleaſe, our Maſter
Will leape to be his Friend: For vs you know,
Whoſe he is, we are, and that is Cæſars.

Thid. So. Thus then thou moſt renown'd, Cæſar intreats,
Not to conſider in what caſe thou ſtand'ſt
Further then he is Cæſars.

Cleo. Go on right Royall.

Thid. He knowes that you embrace not Anthony
As you did loue, but as you feared him.

Cleo. Oh.

Thid. The ſtarre's vpon your Honor, therefore he Does pitty, as conſtrained blemiſhes,
Not as deſerued.

Cleo. He is a God,
And knowes what is moſt right. Mine Honour
Was not yeelded, but conquer'd meerely.

Eno. To be ſure of that, I will aske Anthony.
Sir, ſir, thou art ſo leaky
That we muſt leaue thee to thy ſinking, for Thy deareſt quit thee. Exit Eno.

Thid. Shall I ſay to Cæſar,
What you' require of him? for he partly begges
To be deſir'd to giue. It much would pleaſe him,
That of his Fortunes you ſhould make a ſtaffe
To leane vpon. But it would warme his ſpirites
To heare from me you had left Anthony,
And put your ſelfe vnder his ſhroud, the vniuerſall Land-
Cleo. What's your name? (lord.

Thid. My name is Thidias.

Cleo. Moſt kinde Meſſenger,
Say to great Cæſar this in diſputation,
I kiſſe his conqu'ring hand: Tell him, I am prompt
To lay my Crowne at's feete, and there to kneele.
Tell him, from his all-obeying breath, I heare
The doome of Egypt.

Thid. Tis your Nobleſt courſe:
Wiſedome and Fortune combatting together,
If that the former dare but what it can,
No chance may ſhake it. Give me grace to lay
My duetie on your hand.

Cleo. Your Cæſars Father oft,
(When he hath mus'd of taking kingdomes in)
Beſtow'd his lips on that vnworthy place,
As it min'd kiſſes.

Enter Anthony and Enobarbus.

Ant. Fauours? By Ioue that thunders. What art thou
Thid. One that but performes (Fellow?
The bidding of the fullest man, and worthieſt
To haue command obey'd.

Eno. You will be whipt.

Ant. Approch there: ah you Kite. Now Gods & diuels
Authority melts from me of late. When I cried hoa,
Like Boyes vnto a muſſe, Kings would ſtart forth,
And cry, your will. Have you no eares?
I am Anthony yet. Take hence this Iack, and whip him.

Enter a Seruant.

Eno. Tis better playing with a Lions whelpe,
Then with an old one dying.

Ant. Moone and Starres,
Whip him: were twenty of the greateſt Tributaries
That do acknowledge Cæſar, ſhould I finde them
So ſawcy with the hand of ſhe heere, what's her name
Since ſhe was Cleopatra? Whip him Fellowes,
Till like a Boy you ſee him cringe his face,
And whine aloud for mercy. Take him hence.

Thid. Marke Anthony.

Ant. Tugge him away: being whipt
Bring him againe, the Iacke of Cæſars ſhall
Beare vs an arrant to him. Exeunt with Thidias.
You were halfe blaſted ere I knew you: Ha?
Haue I my pillow left vnpreſt in Rome,
Forborne the getting of a lawfull Race,
And by a gem of women, to be abus'd
By one that looke on Feeders?

Cleo. Good my Lord.

Ant. You haue been a boggler ever,
But when we in our viciouſneſſe grow hard
(Oh miſery on't) the wiſe Gods ſeele our eyes
In our owne filth, drop our clearе iudgements, make vs
Adore our errors, laugh at's while we ſtrut
To our confuſion.

Cleo. Oh, ſ't come to this?

Ant. I found you as a Morſell, cold vpon
Dead Cæſars Trencher: Nay you were a Fragment
Of Gneius Pompeyes, beſides what hotter houres
Vnregiſtred in vulgar Fame, you haue
Luxuriouſly picke out. For I am ſure,
Though you can gueſſe what Temperance ſhould be,
You know not what it is.

Cleo. Wherefore is this?

Ant. To let a Fellow that will take rewards,
And ſay, God quit you, be familiar with
My play-fellow, your hand; this Kingly Seale,
And plighter of high hearts. O that I were
Vpon the hill of Baſan to out-roare
The horned Heard, for I haue ſauage cauſe,
And to proclaime it civilly, were like

A halter'd necke, which do's the Hangmen thanke,
For being yare about him. Is he whipt?

Enter a Seruant with Thidias.

Ser. Soundly, my Lord.
Ant. Cried he? and begg'd a Pardon?
Ser. He did ake fauour.
Ant. If that thy Father liue, let him repent
Thou was't not made his daughter, and be thou sorrie
To follow Cæsar in his Triumph, since
Thou hast bin whipt. For following him, henceforth
The white hand of a Lady Feaner thee,
Shake thou to looke on't. Get thee backe to Cæsar,
Tell him thy entertainment: looke thou say
He makes me angry with him. For he seemes
Proud and disdainfull, harping on what I am,
Not what he knew I was. He makes me angry,
And at this time most easie 'tis to doo't:
When my good Starres, that were my former guides
Haue empty left their Orbes, and shot their Fires
Into th'Abisme of hell. If be mislike,
My speech, and what is done, tell him he has Hipparchus, my enfranched Bondman, whom
He may at pleasure whip, or hang, or torture,
As he shall like to quote me. Vrge is thee:
Hence with thy stripes, be gone. Exit Thid.
Cleo. Haue you done yet?
Ant. Alacke our Terrene Moone is now Eclipsd,
And it portends alone the fall of Antony.
Cleo. I must stay his time?
Ant. To flatter Cæsar, would you mingle eyes
With one that ties his points?
Cleo. Not know me yet?
Ant. Cold-hearted toward me?
Cleo. Ah (Deere) if I be so,
From my cold heart let Heauen engender hailie,
And poyson it in the sourse, and the first stone
Drop in my necke: as it determines so
Dissolue my life, the next Cæsarion smile,
Till by degrees the memory of my wombe,
Together with my braue Egyptians all,
By the discendering of this pelleted stormes,
Lye graueless, till the Flies and Gnats of Nyle
Haue buried them for prey.
Ant. I am satisfied:
Cæsar sets downe in Alexandria, where
I will oppose his Fate. Our force by Land,
Hath Nobly held, our seuer'd Navie too
Haue knit againe, and Fleete, threatning most Sea-like.
Where hast thou bin my heart? Dost thou heare Lady?
If from the Field I shall returne once more
To kisse these Lips, I will appeare in Blood,
I, and my Sword, will earne our Chronicle,
There's hope in't yet.
Cleo. That's my braue Lord.
Ant. I will be trebble-sinewed, hearted, breath'd,
And fight maliciously: for when mine hours
Were nice and lucky, men did ransome lives
Of me for iests: But now, I'le set my teeth,
And send to darknesse all that stop me. Come,
Let's haue one other gawdy night: Call to me
All my sad Captaines, fill our Bowles once more:
Let's mocke the midnight Bell.
Cleo. It my Birth-day,
I had thought t'haue held it poore. But since my Lord
Is Antony againe, I will be Cleopatra.
Ant. We will yet do well.
Cleo. Call all his Noble Captaines to my Lord.
Ant. Do so, we'l speake to them,
And to night I'le force
The Wine peepe through their scarres.
Come on (my Queene)
There's sap in't yet. The next time I do fight
I'le make death loue me: for I will contend
Even with his pestilent Syte. Exeunt.
Eno. Now he'l out-stare the Lightning, so he saue
Is to be frighted out of feare, and catchat mouse
The Dove will peeke the Estridge; and I see still
A diminution in our Captaines braine,
Restores his heart; when valour preyes on reason,
It eates the Sword it fights with: I will seeke
Some way to leaue him. Exeunt.

Enter Cæsar, Agrippa, & Mecænas with his Arm, Cæsar reading a Letter.

Cæs. He calles me Boy, and chides as he had power
To beate me out of Egypt. My Messenger
He hath whipt with Rods, dares me to personal Combat,
Cæsar to Antony: let the old Ruffian know,
I haue many other ways to dye: meanes time)
Laugh at his Challenge.
Mecæ. Cæsar must thinke,
When one so great begins to rage, he's hunted
Even to falling. Giue him no breath, but now
Make boote of his distraction: Never anger
Made good guard for its selfe.
Cæs. Let our best heads know,
That to morrow, the last of many Battailes
We meane to fight. Within our Files there are,
Of those that serv'd Marke Antony but late,
Enough to fetch him in. See it done,
And Feast the Army, we haue store to doute,
And they haue earn'd the waste. Poore Antony. Exeunt.

Enter Antony, Cleopatra, Enobarbus, Charmian, Iras, Alexas, with others.

Ant. He will not fight with me, Domitius?
Eno. No?
Ant. Why (should he not?
Eno. He thinks, being twenty times of better fortune,
He is twenty men to one.
Ant. To morrow Soldier,
By Sea and Land I'le fight: or I will liue,
Or bathe my dying Honor in the blood
Shall make it liue again. Wo't thou fight well.
Eno. I'le strike, and cry; Take all.
Ant. Well said, come on:
Call forth my Houshold Seruants, let's to night
Enter 3 or 4 Seruitors.
Be bounteous at our Meale. Give me thy hand,
Thou hast bin righly honest, so hast thou,
Thou, and thou, and thou: you haue serv'd me well,
And Kings haue beene your fellowes.
Cleo. What meanes this?
Eno. 'Tis one of those odde tricks which sorrow shoots
Out of the minde.
Ant. And thou art honest too:
I wish I could be made so many men,
And all of you clapt vp together, in
An Antony: that I might do you seruice,
So good as you haue done.

Omnes. The Gods forbid.
Ant. Well, my good Fellowes, wait on me to night:
Scant not my Cups, and make as much of me
As when mine Empire was your Fellow too,
And suffer'd my command.
Cleo. What does he mean?
Eno. To make his Followers weepe.
Ant. Tend me to night;
May be, it is the period of your duty.
Haply you shall not see me more, or if,
A mangled shadow. Perchance to morrow,
You'l serve another Master. I looke on you,
As one that takes his leave. Mine honest Friends,
I turne you not away, but like a Master
Married to your good service, stay till death:
Tend me to night two houres, I aske no more,
And the Gods yeeld you for't.
Eno. What meane you (Sir)
To give them thus discomfort? Looke they weepe,
And I an Asse, am Onyon-ey'd, for shame,
Transforme us not to women.
Ant. Ho, ho, ho:
Now the Witch take me, if I meane it thus.
Grace grow where those drops fall (my hearty Friends)
You take me in too dolorous a sense.
For I spake to you for your comfort, did desire you
To burne this night with Torches: Know (my hearts)
I hope well of to morrow, and will lead you,
Where rather I'le expect victorious life,
Then death, and Honor. Let's to Supper, come,
And drowne consideration. Exeunt.

Enter a Company of Souldiers.

1. Sol. Brother, goodnight: to morrow is the day.
2. Sol. It will determine one way: Fare you well.
Heard you of nothing strange about the streets.
1 Nothing: what newes?
2 Belike 'tis but a Rumour, good night to you.
1 Well sir, good night.
They meete other Souldiers.
2 Souldiers, have carefull Watch.
1 And you: Goodnight, goodnight.
They place themselves in every corner of the Stage.
2 Heere we: and if to morrow
Our Name thrive, I have an absolute hope
Our Landmen will stand vp.
1 'Tis a brave Army, and full of purpose.
Musicke of the Hoboyes is under the Stage.
2 Peace, what noise?
1 List list.
2 Hearke.
1 Musicke i'th' Ayre.
3 Under the earth.
4 It signes well, do's it not?
3 No.
1 Peace I say: What should this meane?
2 'Tis the God Hercules, whom Antony loved,
Now leaves him.
1 Walke, let's see if other Watchmen
Do heare what we do?
2 How now Maisters? Speak together.
Omnes. How now? how now? do you heare this?
1 I, is't not strange?
3 Do you heare Masters? Do you heare?
1 Follow the noyse so farre as we have quarter.
Let's see how it will give off.
Omnes. Content: 'Tis strange. Exeunt.

Enter Anthony and Cleopatra, with others.

Ant. Eros, mine Armour Eros.
Cleo. Sleepe a little.
Ant. No my Chocke. Eros, come mine Armor Eros.
Enter Eros.
Come good Fellow, put thine Iron on,
If Fortune be not ours to day, it is Because we brave her. Come.
Cleo. Nay, I'le helpe too, Antony.
What's this for? Ah let be, let be, thou art
The Armourer of my heart: False, false: This, this.
Sooth-law I'le helpe: Thus it must bee.
Ant. Well, well, we shall thrive now.
Seest thou my good Fellow. Go, put on thy defences.
Eros. Briefly Sir.
Cleo. Is not this buckled well?
Ant. Rarely, rarely:
He that vnbuckles this, till we do please
To daff for our Repose, shall heare a storme.
Thou fumblest Eros, and my Queenes a Squire
More tight at this, then thou: Dispatch. O Love,
That thou couldst see my Wares to day, and knew'st
The Royall Occupation, thou should'st see
A Workeman in't.
Enter an Armed Souldier.
Good morrow to thee, welcome,
Thou look'st like him that knowes a warlike Charge:
To business that we love, we rise betime,
And go too't with delight.
Sold. A thousand Sir, early though't be, have on their Riveted trim, and at the Port expect you. Shout.
Trumpets Flourish.
Enter Captaines, and Souldiers.
Alex. The Morne is faire: Good morrow Generall.
All. Good morrow Generall.
Ant. 'Tis well blowne Lads.
This Morning, like the spirit of a youth
That meanes to be of note, begins betimes.
So, so: Come give me that, this way, well-sed.
Fare thee well Dame, what ere becomes of me,
This is a Souldiers kisse: rebukeable,
And worthy shamefull checke it were, to stand
On more Mechanicke Complement, I'le leave thee.
Now like a man of Steele, you that will fight,
Follow me close, I'le bring you too't: Adieu. Exeunt.
Char. Please you retyre to your Chamber?
Cleo. Lead me:
He goes forth gallantly: That he and Cæsar might Determine this great Warre in single fight:
Then Antony; but now. Well on. Exeunt

Trumpets sound. Enter Anthony and Eros.

Eros. The Gods make this a happy day to Antony.
Ant. Would thou, & those thy fears had once prevailed
To make me fight at Land.
Eros. Had'st thou done so,
The Kings that have reuolted, and the Souldier
That has this morning left thee, would have still Followed thy heeles.
Ant. Who's gone this morning?
Eros. Who? one ever neere thee, call for Enobarbus,
He

He shall not heare thee, or from Cæsar's Campe,
Say I am none of thine.
Ant. What sayest thou?
Sold. Sir he is with Cæsar.
Eros. Sir, his Chests and Treasure he has not with him.
Ant. Is he gone?
Sol. Most certaine.
Ant. Go Eros, send his Treasure after, do it,
Detaine no iot I charge thee: write to him,
(I will subscribe) gentle adieu's, and greetings;
Say, that I wish he never finde more cause
To change a Master. Oh my Fortunes haue
Corrupted honest men. Dispatch Enobarbus. Exit

Flourish. Enter Agrippa, Cæsar, with Enobarbus, and Dolabella.

Cæs. Go forth Agrippa, and begin the fight:
Our will is Antony be tooke aliue:
Make it so knowne.
Agrip. Cæsar, I shall.
Cæsar. The time of vniuersall peace is neere:
Prouе this a prosp'rous day, the three nook'd world
Shall beare the Oliue freely.
Enter a Messenger.
Mes. Antony is come into the Field.
Cæs. Go charge Agrippa,
Plant those that haue reuolted in the Vant,
That Antony may seeme to spend his Fury
Vpon himselfe. Exeunt.
Enob. Alexas did reuolt, and went to Iewry on Affaires of Antony, there did disswade
Great Herod to incline himselfe to Cæsar,
And leaue his Master Antony. For this paines,
Cæsar hath hang'd him: Canidius and the rest
That fell away, haue entertainment, but
No honourable trust I haue done ill,
Of which I do accuse my selfe so forely,
That I will ioy no more.
Enter a Soldier of Cæsars.
Sol. Enobarbus, Antony
Hath after thee sent all thy Treasure, with
His Bounty ouer-plus. The Messenger
Came on my guard, and at thy Tent is now
Vnloading of his Mules.
Eno. I giue it you.
Sol. Mocke not Enobarbus,
I tell you true: Best you saf't the bringer
Out of the host, I must attend mine Office,
Or would haue done't my selfe. Your Emperor
Continues still a Loue. Exit
Enob. I am alone the Villaine of the earth,
And feele I am so most. Oh Antony,
Thou Mine of Bounty, how would'st thou haue payed
My better seruice, when my turpitude
Thou dost so Crowne with Gold. This blowes my hart,
If swift thought breake it not: a swifter meane
Shall out-strike thought, but thought will do't. I feele
I fight against thee: No I will go seeke
Some Ditch, wherein to dye: the foul'st best fits
My latter part of life. Exit.
Alarum, Drummes and Trumpets.
Enter Agrippa.
Agrip. Retire, we haue engag'd our selues too farre:
Cæsar himselfe has work, and our oppression
Exceeds what we expected. Exit.

Alarum.
Enter Antony, and Scarrus wounded.

Scar. O my brave Emperor, this is fought indeed,
Had we done so at first, we had droven them home
With clow ts about their heads. Fat off.
Ant. Thou bleed'st space.
Scar. I had a wound here that was like a T,
But now 'tis made an H.
Ant. They do retyre.
Scar. We'l beat 'em into Bench-holes, I haue yet
Roome for six scotches more.
Enter Eros.
Eros. They are beaten Sir, and our aduantage serues
For a faire victory.
Scar. Let vs score their backes,
And snatch 'em vp, as we take Hares behinde,
'Tis sport to maul a Runner.
Ant. I will reward thee
Once for thy sprightly comfort, and ten-fold
For thy good valour. Come thee on.
Scar. Ile haie after. Exeunt

Alarum. Enter Antony again in a Marche.
Scarrus, with others.

Ant. We haue beate him to his Campe: Runne on
Before, & let the Queen know of our guests: to morrow
Before the Sun shall see's, we'l spill the blood
That has't to day escap'd. I thanke you all,
For doughty handed are you, and haue fought
Not as you seru'd the Cause, but as't had beene
Each mans like mine: you haue shewne all Hectors.
Enter the Citty, clip your Wiues, your Friends,
Tell them your feats, whil'st they with ioyfull teares
Wash the congealement from your wounds, and kiss
The Honour'd gashes whole.
Enter Cleopatra.
Giue me thy hand,
To this great Fairy, Ile commend thy acts,
Make her thankes bleesse thee. Oh thou day o'th'world,
Chaine mine arm'd necke, leape thou, Attyre and all
Through proofe of Harnesse to my heart, and there
Ride on the pants triumphing.
Cleo. Lord of Lords.
Oh infinite Vertue, comm'st thou smiling from
The worlds great snare vncaught.
Ant. Mine Nightingale,
We haue beate them to their Beds.
What Gyrle, though gray
Do something mingle with our younger brown, yet ha we
A Braine that nourishes our Nerues, and can Get gole for gole of youth. Behold this man,
Commend vnto his Lippes thy fauouring hand,
Kisse it my Warriour: He hath fought to day,
As if a God in hate of Mankinde, had Destroyed in such a shape.
Cleo. Ile giue thee Friend
An Armour all of Gold: it was a Kings.
Ant. He has deseru'd it, were it Corbunkled
Like holy Phœbus Carre. Giue me thy hand,
Through Alexandria make a iolly March,
Bease our backt Targets, like the men that ouer them.
Had our great Pallace the capacity
To Campe this hoast, we all would sup together,
And drinke Carowses to the next dayes Fate

Which

Which promiſes Royall perill. Trumpeters
With brazen dinne blaſt you the Cities eare,
Make mingle with our rattling Tabourines,
That heaven and earth may ſtrike their ſounds together,
Applauding our approach. Exeunt.

Enter a Centurio, and his Company, Enobarbus followes.

Cent. If we be not releev'd within this houre,
We muſt returne to th'Court of Guard: the night
Is ſhiny, and they ſay, we ſhall embattaile
By'th'ſecond houre i'th'Morne.
1. Watch. This laſt day was a ſhrew'd one too's.
Eno. Oh bearе me witneſſe night.
2 What man is this?
1 Stand cloſe, and liſt him.
Eno. Be witneſſe to me (O thou bleſſed Moone)
When men reuolted ſhall vpon Record
Beare hateful memory: poore Enobarbus did
Before thy face repent.
Cent. Enobarbus?
2 Peace: Heare further.
Eno. Oh Soueraigne Miſtris of true Melancholly.
The poyſonous damp of night diſpunge vpon me,
That Life, a very Rebell to my will,
May hang no longer on me. Throw my heart
Againſt the flint and hardneſſe of my fault,
Which being dried with greefe, will breake to powder,
And finiſh all foule thoughts. Oh Anthony,
Nobler than my reuolt is Infamous,
Forgiue me in thine owne particular,
But let the world rank me in Regiſter
A Maſter leauer, and a fugitiue:
Oh Anthony! Oh Anthony!
1 Let's ſpeake to him.
Cent. Let's beare him, for the things he ſpeakes,
May concerne Cæſar.
2 Let's do ſo, but he ſleepes.
Cent. Swoonds rather, for ſo bad a Prayer as his
Was neuer yet for ſleepe.
1 Go we to him.
2 Awake ſir, awake, ſpeake to vs.
1 Heare you ſir?
Cent. The hand of death hath raught him.
Drummes afarre off.
Hearke the Drummes demurely wake the ſleepers:
Let vs beare him to'th'Court of Guard: he is of note:
Our houre is fully out.
2 Come on then, he may recouer yet. exeunt

Enter Anthony and Scarrus with their Army.

Ant. Their preparation is to day by Sea,
We pleaſe them not by Land.
Scar. For both, my Lord.
Ant. I would they'ld fighe i'th'Fire, or i'th'Ayre,
Wee'ld fight there too. But this it is, our Foote
Vpon the hilles adioyning to the Citty
Shall ſtay with vs. Order for Sea is giuen,
They haue put forth the Hauen:
Where their appointment we may beſt diſcouer,
And looke on their endeuour. exeunt

Enter Cæſar, and his Army.

Cæſ. But being charg'd, we will be ſtill by Land,
Which as I tak't we ſhall, for his beſt force
Is forth to Man his Gallies. To the Vales,
And hold our beſt aduantage. exeunt.

Alarum afarre off, as at a Sea-fight.

Enter Anthony, and Scarrus.

Ant. Yet they are not ioyn'd:
Where you'd Pine does ſtand. I ſhall diſcouer all.
Ile bring thee word ſtraight, how 'tis like to go. exit
Scar. Swallowes haue built
In Cleopatra's Sailes their neſts. The Augurіes
Say, they know not, they cannot tell, looke grimly,
And dare not ſpeake their knowledge. Anthony,
Is valiant, and deiected, and by ſtarts
His fretted Fortunes giue him hope and feare
Of what he has, and has not.

Enter Anthony.

Ant. All is loſt:
This foule Egyptian hath betrayed me:
My Fleete hath yeelded to the Foe, and yonder
They caſt their Caps vp, and Carouſe together
Like Friends long loſt. Triple-turn'd Whore, 'tis thou
Haſt ſold me to this Nouice, and my heart
Makes only Warres on thee. Bid them all flye:
For when I am reueng'd vpon my Charme,
I haue done all. Bid them all flye, be gone.
Oh Sunne, thy vprиſe ſhall I ſee no more,
Fortune, and Anthony part heere, even heere
Do we ſhake hands? All come to this? The hearts
That pannelled me at heeles, to whom I gaue
Their wiſhes, do diſ-Candie, melt their ſweets
On bloſſoming Cæſar: And this Pine is barkt,
That ouer-top'd them all. Betray'd I am.
Oh this falſe Soule of Egypt! this grane Charme,
Whoſe eye beck'd forth my Wars, & call'd them home:
Whoſe Boſome was my Crowner, my chiefe end,
Like a right Gypſie, hath at faſt and looſe
Beguil'd me, to the very heart of loſſe.
What Eros, Eros?

Enter Cleopatra.

Ah, thou Spell! Auaunt.
Cleo. Why is my Lord enrag'd againſt his Loue?
Ant. Vanith, or I ſhall giue thee thy deſeruing,
And blemiſh Cæſars Triumph. Let him take thee,
And boiſt thee vp to the ſhouting Plebeians,
Follow his Chariot, like the greateſt ſpot
Of all thy Sex. Moſt Monſter-like be ſhewne
For poor'ſt Diminitiues, for Dolts, and let Patiene Olaunia, plough thy viſage vp
With her prepared nailes. exit Cleopatra.
'Tis well th'art gone,
If it be well to liue. But better 'twere
Thou fell'ſt into my fiere, for one death
Might haue preuented many. Eros, hoa!
The ſhirt of Neſſus is vpon me, teach me
Alcides, thou mine Anceſtor, thy rage.
Let me lodge Lichas on the hornes o'th'Moone,
And with thoſe hands that graſpt the heaueſt Club,
Subdue my worthieſt ſelfe: The Witch ſhall die,
To the young Roman Boy ſhe hath ſold me, and I fall
Vnder this plot: She dyes fo's. Eros hoa? exit.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Iras, Mardian

Cleo. Helpe me my women: Oh he's more mad
Then Telamon for his Shield, the Boare of Theſſaly
Was neuer ſo imboſt.
Char. To'th'Monument there locke your ſelfe,
And ſend him word you are dead:

The

The Soule and Body rise not more in parting,
Then greatnesse going off.
Cleo. To'th'Monument:
Mardian, go tell him I have slaine my selfe.
Say, that the last I spoke was Antony,
And word it (prythee) piteously. Hence Mardian,
And bring me how he takes my death to'th'Monument.
Exeunt.

Enter Antony, and Eros.

Ant. Eros, thou yet behold'st me?
Eros. I Noble Lord.
Ant. Sometime we see a cloud that's Dragonish,
A vapour sometime, like a Beare, or Lyon,
A toward Citadell, a pendant Rocke,
A forked Mountaine, or blew Promontorie
With Trees vpon't, that nodde vnto the world,
And mocke our eyes with Ayre
Thou hast seene these Signes,
They are blacke Vespers Pageants.
Eros. I my Lord.
Ant. That which is now a Horse, euen with a thought the Racke dissimes, and makes it indistinct
As water is in water.
Eros It does my Lord.
Ant My good Knaue Eros, now thy Captaine is Euen such a body: Heere I am Antony,
Yet cannot hold this visible shape (my Knaue)
I made these warres for Egypt, and the Queene,
Whose heart I thought I had, for she had mine:
Which whel'st it was mine, had annext vnto't
A Million moe, (now lost.) shee Eros has Packt Cards with Cæsars, and false plaid my Glory
Vnto an Enemies triumph.
Nay, weepe not gentle Eros, there is left vs
Our selues to end our selues.

Enter Mardian.

Oh thy vilde Lady, she has rob'd me of my Sword.
Mar. No Antony,
My Mistris lou'd thee, and her Fortunes mingled
With thine entirely.
Ant. Hence sawcy Eunuch peace, she hath betrayd me,
And shall dye the death.
Mar. Death of one person, can be paide but once,
And that she ha's discharg'd. What thou would'st do
Is done vnto thy hand: the last she spake
Was Antony, most Noble Antony.
Then in the midd'st a tearing grone did breake
The name of Antony: it was diuided
Betweene her heart, and lips: she rendred life
Thy name so buried in her.
Ant. Dead then?
Mar. Dead.
Ant. Vnarme Eros, the long dayes task is done,
And we must sleepe: That thou depart'st hence safe
Does pay thy labour richly: Go. exit Mardian.
Off, pluckes off,
The seuen-fold shield of Aiax cannot keepe
The battery from my heart. Oh cleaue my sides.
Heart, once be stronger then thy Continent,
Cracke thy frailе Cale. Apace Eros, apace;
No more a Soldier: bruised peeces go,
You haue bin Nobly borne. From me awhile. exit Eros
I will o're-take thee Cleopatra, and
Weepe for my pardon. So it must be, for now
All length is Torture: since the Torch is out,
Lye downe and stray no farther. Now all labour
Marres what it does: yea, very force entangles
It selfe with strength: Seale then, and all is done.
Eros! I come my Queene. Eros? Stay for me,
Where Soules do couch on Flowers, we'l hand in hand,
And with our sprightly Port make the Ghosts gaze:
Dido, and her Æneas shall want Troopes,
And all the haunts be ours. Come Eros, Eros

Enter Eros.

Eros. What would my Lord?
Ant. Since Cleopatra dyed,
I haue liu'd in such dishonour, that the Gods
Detest my basenesse. I, that with my Sword,
Quarter'd the World, and o're greene Neptunes backe
With Ships, made Cities; condemne my selfe, to lacke
The Courage of a Woman, lesse Noble minde
Then she which by her death, our Cæsar telles
I am Conqueror of my selfe. Thou art sworne Eros,
That when the exigent should come, which now
Is come indeed: When I should see behinde me
The inuitable prosecution of disgrace and horror,
That on my command, thou then would'st kill me.
Doo't, the time is come: Thou strik'st not me,
'Tis Cæsar thou defeat'st. Put colour in thy Cheeke.
Eros. The Gods with-hold me,
Shall I do that which all the Parthian Darts,
(Though Enemy) lost ayme, and could not.
Ant. Eros,
Would'st thou be window'd in great Rome, and see
Thy Master thus with pleacht Armes, bending downe
His corrigible neckte, his face subdu'de
To penetrative shame; whil'st the wheel'd seate
Of Fortunate Cæsar drawne before him, branded
His Basenesse that ensued.
Eros. I would not see't.
Ant. Come then: for with a wound I must be cur'd.
Draw that thy honest Sword, which thou hast worne
Most vsefull for thy Country.
Eros. Oh sir, pardon me.
Ant. When I did make thee free, swor'st thou not then
To do this when I bad thee? Do it at once,
Or thy precedent Services are all
But accidents vnpurpos'd. Draw, and come.
Eros. Turne from me then that Noble countenance,
Wherein the worship of the whole world lyes.
Ant. Lo thee.
Eros. My Sword is drawne.
Ant. Then let it do at once
The thing why thou hast drawne it.
Eros. My dearest Master,
My Captaine, and my Emperor. Let me say
Before I strike this bloody stroke, Farewell.
Ant. 'Tis said man, and farewell.
Eros. Farewell great Chiefe. Shall I strike now?
Ant. Now Eros. Killes himselfe.
Eros. Why there then:
Thus I do escape the sorrow of Antonius death.
Ant. Thrice-Nobler then my selfe,
Thou teachest me: Oh valiant Eros, what
I should, and thou could'st not, my Queene and Eros
Haue by their brasse instruction got vpon me
A Nobleness in Record. But I will bee
A Bride-groome in my death, and run into't
As to a Louers bed. Come then, and Eros,
Thy Master dies thy Scholler; to do thus
I learne of thee. How, not dead? Not dead?
The Guard, how? Oh dispatch me.

Enter

Enter a Guard.

1. Guard. What's the noise?

Ant. I have done my worke ill Friends:
Oh make an end of what I haue begun.

2 The Starre is falne.

1 And time is at his Period.

All. Alas, and woe.

Ant. Let him that loues me, strike me dead.

1 Not I.

2 Not I.

3 Nor any one. exeunt

Dercetas. Thy death and fortunes bid thy followers fly
This sword but shewne to Cæsar with this tyding,
Shall enter me with him.

Enter Diomedes.

Dio. Where's Anthony?

Derc. There Diomed there.

Diom. Lives he: wilt thou not answer man?

Ant. Art thou there Diomed?
Draw thy sword, and giue me,
Sufficing strokes for death.

Diom. Most absolute Lord:
My Mistris Cleopatra sent me to thee.

Ant. When did shee send thee?

Diom. Now my Lord.

Anth. Where is she? (feare

Diom. Lockt in her Monument: she had a Prophesying
Of what hath come to passe: for when she saw
(Which never shall be found) you did suspect
She had dispos'd with Cæsar, and that your rage
Would not be purg'd, she sent you word she was dead:
But fearing since how it might worke, hath sent
Me to proclaime the truth, and I am come
I dread, too late.

Ant. Too late good Diomed: call my Guard I prythee.

Dio. What hoa: the Emperors Guard,
The Guard, what hoa? Come, your Lord calles.

Enter 4. or 5. of the Guard of Anthony.

Ant. Beare me good Friends where Cleopatra bides.
'Tis the last seruice that I shall command you.

1 Woe, woe are we sir, you may not liue to weare
All your true Followers out.

All. Most heauy day.

Ant Nay good my Fellowes, do not please sharp fate
To grace it with your sorrowes. Bid that welcome
Which comes to punish vs, and we punish it
Seeming to beare it lightly. Take me vp.
I haue led you oft, carry me now good Friends,
And haue my thankes for all. Exit bearing Anthony

Enter Cleopatra, and her Maides aloft, with Charmian & Iras.

Cleo. Oh Charmian, I will never go from hence.

Char. Be comforted deere Madam.

Cleo. No, I will not:
All strange and terrible events are welcome,
But comforts we dispise; our size of sorrow
Proportion'd to our cause, must be as great
As that which makes it.

Enter Diomed.

How now? is he dead?

Diom. His death's vpon him, but not dead.
Looke out o'th other side your Monument,
His Guard haue brought him thither.

Enter Anthony, and the Guard.

Cleo. Oh Sunne,
Burne the great Sphere thou moo'st in, darkling stand
The varying shore o'th'world. O Antony, Antony, Antony
Helpe Charmian, helpe Iras helpe: helpe Friends
Below, let's draw him hither.

Ant. Peace,
Not Cæsars Valour hath o'erthrowne Anthony,
But Anthonie's hath Triumphe on it selfe.

Cleo. So it should be,
That none but Anthony should conquer Anthony,
But woe 'tis so.

Ant. I am dying Egypt, dying; onely
I heere importune death a-while, vntill
Of many thousand kisses, the poore last
I lay vpon thy lippes.

Cleo. I dare not Deere,
Deere my Lord pardon: I dare not,
Least I be taken: not th'Imperious shew
Of the full-Fortun'd Cæsar, euer shall
Be brooch'd with me, if Knife, Drugges, Serpents haue
Edge, sting, or operation. I am safe:
Your Wife Octauia, with her modest eyes,
And still Conclusion, shall acquire no Honour
Demuring vpon me: but come, come Anthony,
Helpe me my women, we must draw thee vp.
Assist good Friends.

Ant. Oh quicke, or I am gone.

Cleo. Heere's sport indeede:
How heauy weighes my Lord?
Our strength is all gone into heauinesse,
That makes the waight. Had I great Iuno's power,
The strong wing'd Mercury should fetch thee vp,
And set thee by Ioues side. Yet come a little,
Wishers were ever Fooles. Oh come, come, come,

They beare Anthony aloft to Cleopatra.

And welcome, welcome. Dye when thou hast liu'd,
Quicken with kissing: had my lippes that power,
Thus would I weare them out.

All. A heauy sight.

Ant. I am dying Egypt, dying.
Giue me some Wine, and let me speake a little.

Cleo. No, let me speake, and let me rayle so hye,
That the false Housewife Fortune, breake her Wheele,
Prouok'd by my offence.

Ant. One word (sweet Queene)
Of Cæsar seeke your Honour, with your safety. Oh.

Cleo. They do not go together.

Ant. Gentle heare me.
None about Cæsar trust, but Proculeius.

Cleo. My Resolution, and my hands, I'le trust,
None about Cæsar.

Ant. The miserable change now at my end,
Lament nor sorrow at: but please your thoughts
In feeding them with those my former Fortunes
Wherein I liued. The greatest Prince o'th'world,
The Noblest: and do now not basely dye,
Not Cowardly put off my Helmet to
My Countreymen. A Roman, by a Roman
Valiantly vanquish'd. Now my Spirit is going,
I can no more.

Cleo. Noblest of men, woo't dye?
Hast thou no care of me, shall I abide
In this dull world, which in thy absence is
No better than a Stye? Oh see my women:
The Crowne o'th'earth doth melt. My Lord?
Oh wither'd is the Garland of the Warre,

The

The Souldiers pole is falne: young Boyes and Gyrles
Are leuell now with men: The odds is gone,
And there is nothing left remarkable
Beneath the visiting Moone.

Char. Oh quietneſſe, Lady.

Iras. She's dead too, our Soueraigne.

Char. Lady.

Iras. Madam.

Char. Oh Madam, Madam, Madam.

Iras. Royall Egypt: Empreſſe.

Char. Peace, peace, Iras.

Cleo. No more but in a Woman, and commended
By ſuch poore paſſion, as the Maid that Milkes,
And doe's the meaneſt chares. It were for me,
To throw my Scepter at the iniurious Gods,
To tell them that this World did equall theyrs,
Till they had ſtolne our Iewell. All's but naught;
Patience is ſottiſh, and impatience does
Become a Dogge that's mad: Then is it ſame,
To runſh into the ſecret houſe of death,
Ere death dare come to vs. How do you Women?
What, what good cheere? Why how now Charmian?
My Noble Gyrles? Ah Women, women! Looke
Our Lampe is ſpent, it's out. Good ſirs, take heart,
We'l bury him: And then, what's brauer, what's Noble,
Let's doe't after the high Roman faſhion,
And make death proud to take vs. Come, away,
This caſe of that huge Spirit now is cold.
Ah Women, Women! Come, we haue no Friend
But Reſolution, and the breeſeſt end.

Exeunt, bearing of Anthonies body.

Enter Cæſar, Agrippa, Dolabella, Mænas with his Counſell of Warre.

Cæſar. Go to him Dolabella, bid him yeeld,
Being ſo fruſtrate, tell him,
He mockes the powſes that he makes.

Dol. Cæſar, I ſhall

Enter Decretas with the ſword of Anthony.

Caſ. Wherefore is that? And what art thou that dar'ſt
Appeare thus to vs?

Dect. I am call'd Decretas,
Marky Anthony I ſerv'd, who beſt was worthie
Beſt to be ſerv'd: whil'ſt he ſtood vp, and ſpoke
He was my Maſter, and I wore my life
To ſpend vpon his haters. If thou pleaſe
To take me to thee, as I was to him,
Ile be to Cæſar: If thou pleaſeſt not, I yeild thee vp my life.

Cæſar. What is't thou ſay'ſt?

Dec. I ſay (Oh Cæſar) Anthony is dead.

Cæſar. The breaking of ſo great a thing, ſhould make
A greater cracke. The round World
Should haue ſhooke Lyons into ciuill ſtreets,
And Citizens to their denres. The death of Anthony
Is not a ſingle doome, in the name lay
A moiety of the world

Dec. He is dead Cæſar,
Not by a publike miniſter of Iuſtice,
Nor by a hyred Knife, but that ſelfe-hand
Which writ his Honor in the Acts it did,
Hath with the Courage which the heart did lend it,
Splitted the heart. This is his Sword,
I robb'd his wound of it: behold it ſtain'd
With his moſt Noble blood.

Caſ. Looke you ſad Friends,
The Gods rebuke me, but it is Tydings
To waſh the eyes of Kings.

Dol. And ſtrange it is,
That Nature muſt compell vs to lamente
Our moſt perſiſted deeds.

Mec. His taints and Honours, wag'd equall with him.

Dola. A Rarer ſpirit never
Did ſteere humanity: but you Gods will giue vs
Some ſaults to make vs men. Cæſar is touch'd.

Mec. When ſuch a ſpacious Mirror's ſet before him,
He needes muſt ſee him ſelfe.

Cæſar. Oh Anthony,
I haue followed thee to this, but we do launch
Diſeaſes in our Bodies. I muſt perforce
Haue ſhewne to thee ſuch a declining day,
Or looke on thine: we could not ſtall together,
In the whole world. But yet let me lament
With teares as Soueraigne as the blood of heauen,
Thee thou my Brother, my Competitor,
In top of all deſigne; my Mate in Empire,
Friend and Companion in the front of Warre,
The Arme of mine owne Body, and the Heart
Where mine his thoughts did kindle; that our Starres
Vnreconciliable, ſhould diuide our equaneſſe no then.
Heare me good Friends,
But I will tell you at ſome meeter Seaſon,
The buſineſſe of this man lookes out of him,
We'l heare him what he ſayes.

Enter an Ægyptian.

Whence are you?

Ægyp. A poore Egyptian yet, the Queen my miſtreſs
Confin'd in all, ſhe has her Monument
Of thy intents, deſires, inſtruction,
That ſhe preparedly may frame her ſelfe
To th'way ſhee's forc'd too.

Cæſar. Bid her haue good heart,
She ſoone ſhall know of vs, by ſome of ours,
How honourable, and how kindely We
Determine for her. For Cæſar cannot leaue to be vngentle

Ægyp. So the Gods preſerue thee. Exit.

Caſ. Come hither Proculeius. Go and ſay
We purpoſe her no ſhame: give her what comforts
The quality of her paſſion ſhall require;
Leaſt in her greatneſſe, by ſome mortall ſtroke
She do defeate vs. For her life in Rome,
Would be eternall in our Triumph: Go.
And with your ſpeedieſt. bring vs what ſhe ſayes,
And how you finde of her.

Pro. Cæſar I ſhall. Exit Proculeius.

Caſ. Gallus, go you along: where's Dolabella, to ſecond Proculeius?

All. Dolabella.

Caſ. Let him alone: for I remember now
How he's imployd: he ſhall in time be ready.
Go with me to my Tent, where you ſhall ſee
How hardly I was drawne into this Warre,
How calme and gentle I proceeded ſtill
In all my Writings. Go with me, and ſee
What I can ſhew in this. Exeunt.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Iras, and Mardian.

Cleo. My deſolation does begin to make
A better life: 'Tis paltry to be Cæſar:
Not being Fortune, he's but Fortunes knaue,
A miniſter of her will: and it is great

To

To do that thing that ends all other deeds,
Which shackles accidents, and bolts vp change;
Which sleepes, and neuer palsiates more the dung,
The beggers Nurse, and Cæsar:

Enter Proculeius.

Pro. Cæsar sends greeting to the Queene of Egypt,
And bids thee study on what faire demands
Thou mean'st to haue him grant thee.

Cleo. What's thy name?

Pro. My name is Proculeius.

Cleo. Antony
Did tell me of you, bad me trust you, but
I do not greatly care to be deceiu'd
That haue no vse for trusting. If your Master
Would haue a Queene his beggar, you must tell him,
That Maiesty to keepe decorum, must
No lesse begge than a Kingdome: If he please
To giue me conquer'd Egypt for my Sonne,
He gives me so much of mine owne, as I
Will kneele to him with thanks.

Pro. Be of good cheere:
Y'are falne into a Princely hand, feare nothing,
Make your full reference freely to my Lord,
Who is so full of Grace, that it flowes ouer
On all that needs. Let me report to him
Your sweet dependacie, and you shall finde
A Conqueror that will pray in ayde for kindnesse,
Where he for grace is kneel'd too.

Cleo. Pray you tell him,
I am his Fortunes Vassall, and I send him
The Greatnesse he has got. I hourely learne
A Doctrine of Obedience, and would gladly
Looke him i'th'Face.

Pro. This Ile report (deare Lady)
Haue comfort, for I know your plight is pitied
Of him that cau'd it.

Pro. You see how easily she may be surprix'd:
Guard her till Cæsar come.

Iras. Royall Queene.

Char. Oh Cleopatra, thou art taken Queene.

Cleo. Quicke, quicke, good hands.

Pro. Hold worthy Lady, hold:
Doe not your selfe such wrong, who are in this
Relieu'd, but not betrayd.

Cleo. What of death too that ride our dogs of languish

Pro. Cleopatra, do not abuse my Masters bounty, by Th'vndoing of your selfe: Let the World see
His Noblenesse well acted, which your death
Will never let come forth.

Cleo. Where are thou Death?
Come hither come; Come, come, and take a Queene
Worth many Babes and Beggers.

Pro. Oh temperance Lady.

Cleo. Sir, I will eate no meate. Ile not drinke sir,
If idle talke will once be necessary
I le not sleepe neither. This mortall house Ile ruine,
Do Cæsar what he can. Know sir, that I
Will not waite pinnion'd at your Masters Court,
Nor once be chastic'd with the sober eye
Of dull Octauia. Shall they hoyst me vp,
And shew me to the shouting Varlotarie
Of censuring Rome? Rather a ditch in Egypt.
Be gentle grant vnto me, rather on Nylus mudde
Lay me starke-nak'd, and let the water-Flies
Blow me into abhorring; rather make
My Countries high pyramides my Gibbet,
And hang me vp in Chaines!

Pro. You do extend
These thoughts of horror further then you shall Finde cause in Cæsar.

Enter Dolabella.

Dol. Proculeius,
What thou hast done, thy Master Cæsar knowes,
And he hath sent for thee: for the Queene,
Ile take her to my Guard.

Pro. So Dolabella,
It shall content me best: Be gentle to her.
To Cæsar I will speake, what you shall please,
If you'l imploy me to him. Exit Proculeius

Cleo. Say, I would dye.

Dol. Most Noble Empresse, you haue heard of me.

Cleo. I cannot tell.

Dol. Assuredly you know me.

Cleo. No matter sir, what I haue heard or knowne:
You laugh when Boyes or Women tell their Dreames,
Is't not your tricke?

Dol. I vnderstand not, Madam.

Cleo I dreampt there was an Emperor Antony,
Oh such another sleepe, that I might see
But such another man.

Dol. If it might pleasse ye.

Cleo. His face was as the Heau'ns, and therein stucke
A Sunne and Moone, which kept their course, & lighted
The little o'th'earth.

Dol. Most Soueraigne Creature.

Cleo. His legges bestrid the Ocean, his reard armes
Crestled the world: His voyce was propertied
As all the tuned Spheres, and that to Friends:
But when he meant to quaile, and shake the Orbe,
He was as ratling Thunder. For his Bounty,
There was no winter in't. An Anthony it was,
That grew the more by reaping: His delights
Were Dolphin-like, they show'd his backe aboue
The Element they liu'd in: In his Liuery
Walk'd Crowners and Crowners: Realms & Ilands were
As plates dropt from his pocket.

Dol. Cleopatra.

Cleo. Thinke you there was, or might be such a man
As this I dreampt of?

Dol. Gentle Madam, no.

Cleo. You Lye vp to the hearing of the Gods:
But if there be, nor euer were one such
It's past the size of dreaming: Nature wants stuffe
To vie strange formes with fancie, yet t'imagine
An Anthony were Natures peece, 'gainst Fancie,
Condemning shadowes quite.

Dol. Heare me, good Madam:
Your losse is as your selfe, great; and you bear it
As answering to the weight, would I might never
Ore-take pursu'de successe: But I do feele
By the rebound of yours, a greefe that suites
My very heart at roote.

Cleo. I thanke you sir:
Know you what Cæsar meanes to do with me?

Dol. I am loath to tell you what, I would you knew.

Cleo. Nay pray you sir.

Dol. Though he be Honourable.

Cleo. Hee'l leade me then in Triumph.

Dol. Madam he will I know'e. Flourish.

Enter Proculeius, Cæsar, Gallus, Mecænas, and others of his Traine.

All. Make way there Cæsar.

Caes. Which is the Queene of Egypt.
Dol. It is the Emperor Madam. Cleo. kneeles.
Cæsar. Arise, you shall not kneele:
I pray you rise, rise Egypt.
Cleo. Sir, the Gods will haue it thus,
My Master and my Lord I must obey.
Cæsar. Take to you no hard thoughts,
The Record of what injuries you did vs,
Though written in our flesh, we shall remember
As things but done by chance.
Cleo. Sole Sir o'th' World,
I cannot proiect mine owne cause so well
To make it cleare, but do confesse I haue
Bene laden with like frailties, which before
Haue often sham'd our Sex.
Cæsar. Cleopatra know,
We will extenuate rather than inforce:
If you apply your selfe to our intents,
Which towards you are most gentle, you shall finde
A benefit in this change: but if you seeke
To lay on me a Cruelty, by taking
Antonius course, you shall bereaue your selfe
Of my good purposes, and put your children
To that destruction which I le guard them from.
If thereon you relye. Ile take my leaue.
Cleo. And may through all the world: tis yours, & we your Scutcheons, and your signes of Conquest shall Hang in what place you please. Here my good Lord.
Cæsar. You shall aduise me in all for Cleopatra.
Cleo. This is the breefe: of Money, Plate, & Iewels
I am possest of, 'tis exactly valewed,
Not petty things admitted. Where's Seleucus?
Seleu. Heere Madam.
Cleo. This is my Treasorer, let him speake (my Lord)
Vpon his perill, that I haue reseru'd
To my selfe nothing. Speake the truth Seleucus.
Seleu. Madam, I had rather seele my lippes,
Then to my perill speake that which is not.
Cleo. What haue I kept backe.
Sel. Enough to purchase what you haue made known
Cæsar. Nay blush not Cleopatra, I approue
Your Wisedome in the deede.
Cleo. See Caesar: Oh behold,
How pompe is followed: Mine will now be yours,
And should we shift estates, yours would be mine
The ingratitude of this Seleucus, does
Euen make me wilde. Oh Slaue, of no more trust
Then loue that's hyr'd? What goest thou backe, ? shak
Go backe I warrant thee: but Ile catch thine eyes
Though they had wings. Slaue, Soule-lesse, Villain, Dog.
O rarely base!
Cæsar. Good Queene, let vs intreat you.
Cleo. O Cæsar, what a wounding shame is this,
That thou vouchsafing heere to visit me,
Doing the Honour of thy Lordlinesse
To one so meeke, that mine owne Seruant should Parcell the summe of my disgraces, by Addition of his Enuy. Say (good Cæsar)
That I some Lady trifles haue reseru'd,
Immoment toyes, things of such Dignitie
As we greet moderne Friends withall, and say
Some Nobler token I haue kept apart
For Liuia and Octauia, to induce
Their mediation, must I be vnbolted
With one that I haue bred: The Gods! it smites me
Beneath the fall I haue. Prythee go hence,
Or I shall shew the Cynders of my spirits
Through th'Ashes of my chance: Wer't thou a man,
Thou would'st haue mercy on me.
Cæsar. Forbeare Seleucus.
Cleo. Be is known, that we the greatest are mis-thought
For things that others do: and when we fall,
We answer others merits, in our name
Are therefore to be pitied.
Cæsar. Cleopatra,
Not what you haue reserv'd, nor what acknowledg'd
Put vs i'th' Roll of Conquest: still bee't yours,
Bestow it at your pleasure, and beleeue
Cæsars no Merchant, to make prize with you
Of things that Merchants sold. Therefore be cheer'd,
Make not your thoughts your prisons: No doeste Queene,
For we intend so to dispose you, as
Your selfe shall giue vs counsell: Feede, and sleepe
Our care and pitty is so much vpon you,
That we remaine your Friend, and so adieu.
Cleo. My Master, and my Lord.
Cæsar. Not so: Adieu. Flourish.
Exeunt Cæsar, and his Traine.
Cleo. He words me Gyrles, he words me,
That I should not be Noble to my selfe.
But hearke thee Charmion.
Iras. Finish good Lady, the bright day is done,
And we are for the darke.
Cleo. Hye thee again me,
I haue spoke already, and it is prouided,
Go put it to the haste.
Char. Madam, I will.
Enter Dolabella.
Dol. Where's the Queene?
Char. Behold sir.
Cleo. Dolabella.
Dol. Madam, as thereto sworne by your command
(Which my loue makes Religion to obey)
I tell you this: Cæsar through Syria
Intendes his journey, and within three dayes,
You with your Children will be send before,
Make your best vse of this. I haue perform'd
Your pleasure, and my promise.
Cleo. Dolabella, I shall remaine your debtor.
Dol. I your Seruant:
Adieu good Queene, I must attend on Cæsar. Exit
Cleo. Farewell, and thankes.
Now Iras, what think'st thou?
Thou, an Egyptian Puppet shall be shewne
In Rome aswell as I: Mechanicke Slaues
With greasie Aprons, Rules, and Hammers shall Vplift vs to the view. In their thicke breathes,
Ranke of grosse dyet, shall we be enclowded,
And forc'd to drinke their vapour
Iras. The Gods forbid.
Cleo. Nay, 'tis most certaine Iras: saucie Lictors
Will catch at vs like Strumpets, and scald Rimers
Ballads vs out a Tune. The quicke Comedians
Extemporally will stage vs, and present
Our Alexandrian Reuels: Antony
Shall be brought drunken forth, and I shall see
Some squeaking Cleopatra Boy my greatnesse
I'th' posture of a Whore.
Iras. O the good Gods!
Cleo. Nay that's certaine.
Iras. Ile neuer see't? for I am sure mine Nailes
Are stronger then mine eyes.

Cleo. Why that's the way to foole their preparation,
And to conquer their most absurd intents.

Enter Charmian.

Now Charmian.
Shew me my Women like a Queene: Go fetch
My best Attyres. I am againe for Cidrus,
To meete Marke Anthony. Sirra Iras, go
(Now Noble Charmian, wee'l dispatch indeede,)
And when thou hast done this chare, I'le give thee leave
To play till Doomesday: bring our Crowne, and all.

A noise within.

Wherefore's this noise?

Enter a Guardsman.

Guard. Here is a rurall Fellow,
That will not be deny'de your Highnesse presence,
He brings you Figges.

Cleo. Let him come in. Exit Guardsman.
What poore an Instrument
May do a Noble deede: he brings me liberty:
My Resolution's plac'd, and I have nothing
Of woman in me: Now from head to foote
I am Marble constant: now the fleeting Moone
No Planet is of mine.

Enter Guardsman, and Clowne.

Guard. This is the man.
Cleo. Avoid, and leave him. Exit Guardsman.
Hast thou the pretty worme of Nylus there,
That kilsles and paines not?

Clow. Truly I have him: but I would not be the parties that should desire you to touch him, for his byting is immortall: those that doe dye of it, doe seldome or never recover.

Cleo. Remember'st thou any that have dyed on't?

Clow. Very many, men and women too. I heard of one of them no longer then yesterday, a very honest woman, but something given to lye, as a woman should not do, but in the way of honesty, how she dyed of the byting of it, what paine she felt: Truely, she makes a verie good report o'th'worme: but he that will believe all that they say, shall never be saued by halfe that they do: but this is most fallisble, the Worme's an odde Worme.

Cleo. Get thee hence, farewell.

Clow. I wish you all ioy of the Worme.

Cleo. Farewell.

Clow You must thinke this (looke you,) that the Worme will do his kinde.

Cleo. I, I, farewell.

Clow. Looke you, the Worme is not to bee trusted, but in the keeping of wise people: for indeede, there is no goodnesse in the Worme.

Cleo. Take thou no care, it shall be heeded.

Clow. Very good: give it nothing I pray you, for it is not worth the feeding.

Cleo. Will it eate me?

Clow. You must, not think I am so simple, but I know the diuell himselfe will not eate a woman: I know, that a woman is a dish for the Gods, if the diuell dresse her not. But truly, these same whorson diuels doe the Gods great harme in their women: for in every ten one that they make, the diuels marre five.

Cleo. Well, get thee gone, farewell.

Clow. Yes forsooth: I wish you ioy o'th'worm. Exit

Cleo Give me my Robe, put on my Crowne, I have Immortall longings in me. Now no more
The iuyce of Egypts Grape shall moyst this lip.
Yare, yare, good Iras; quicke: Me thinkes I heare
Anthony call: I see him rowse himselfe
To praise my Noble Act. I heare him mock
The lucke of Cæsar, which the Gods give men
To excuse their after wrath. Husband, I come:
Now to that name, my Courage prove my Title.
I am Fire, and Ayre; my other Elements
I give to baser life. So, have you done?
Come then, and take the last warmth of my Lippes.
Farewell kinde Charmian, Iras, long farewell.
Have I the Aspicke in my lippes? Dost fall?
If thou, and Nature can so gently part,
The stroke of death is as a Lovers pinch,
Which hurts, and is desir'd. Dost thou lye still?
If thou thou vanishest, thou tell'st the world,
It is not worth leave-taking.

Char. Dissolve thicke clowd, & Raine, that I may say
The Gods themselves do weepe.

Cleo. This proves me base:
If she first meete the Curled Anthony,
Hee'l make demand of her, and spend that kisse
Which is my heauen to haue. Come thou mortal wretch,
With thy sharpe teeth this knot intrinsicate,
Of life at once vntye: Poore venomous Foole,
Be angry, and dispatch. Oh could'st thou speake,
That I might heare thee call great Cæsar Asse, vnpolicied.

Char. Oh Easterne Starre.

Cleo. Peace, peace:
Dost thou not see my Baby at my breast,
That suckes the Nurse asleepe.

Char. O breake! O breake!

Cleo. As sweet as Balme, as soft as Ayre, as gentle.
O Anthony! Nay I will take thee too.
What should I stay——— Dyes.

Char. In this wilde World? So farre thee well:
Now bost thee Death, in thy possession lyes
A Lasse vnparalell'd. Downe Windowes close,
And golden Phœbus never be beheld
Of eyes againe so Royall: your Crownes away,
Ile mend it, and then play———

Enter the Guard rushing in, and Dolabella.

1 Guard. Where's the Queene?

Char. Speake softly, wake her not.

1 Cæsar hath sent

Char. Too slow a Messenger.
Oh come apace, dispatch, I partly feele thee.

1 Approach hoa,
All's not well: Cæsar's beguild.

2 There's Dolabella sent from Cæsar: call him.

1 What worke is heere Charmian?
Is this well done?

Char. It is well done, and fitting for a Princesse
Descended of so many Royall Kings.
Ah Souldier. Charmian dyes

Enter Dolabella.

Dol. How goes it heere?

2. Guard. All dead.

Dol. Cæsar, thy thoughts
Touch their effects in this: Thy selfe art coming
To see perform'd the dreaded Act which thou
So sought'st to hinder.

Enter Cæsar and all his Traine, marching.

All. A way there, a way for Cæsar.

Dol. Oh sir, you are too sure an Augurer:
That you did feare, is done.
Cæsar. Bravest at the last,
She leuell'd at our purposes, and being Royall
Tooke her owne way: the manner of their deaths,
I do not see them bleede.
Dol. Who was last with them?
1 Guard. A simple Countryman, that brought his Figs:
This was his Basket.
Cæsar. Poyson'd then.
1 Guard. Oh Cæsar:
This Charmian liu'd but now, she stood and spake:
I found her trimming vp the Diadem;
On her dead Mistris tremblingly she stood,
And on the sodaine dropt.
Cæsar. Oh Noble weaknesse:
If they had swallow'd poyson, 'twould appeare
By externall swelling: but she lookes like sleepe,
As she would catch another Anthony
In her strong toyle of Grace.
Dol. Heere on her brest,
There is a vent of Blood, and something blown,
The like is on her Arme.
1 Guard. This is an Aspickes traile,
And these Figge-leaues haue slime vpon them, such
As th'Aspicke leaues vpon the Caues of Nyle.
Cæsar. Most probable
That so she dyed: for her Physician tells mee
She hath pursu'de Conclusions infinite
Of easie wayes to dye. Take vp her bed,
And beare her Women from the Monument,
She shall be buried by her Anthony.
No Graue vpon the earth shall clip in it
A payre so famous: high events as these Strike those that make them: and their Story is
No lesse in pitty, then his Glory which Brought them to be lamented. Our Army shall
In solemne shew, attend this Funerall,
And then to Rome. Come Dolabella, see
High Order, in this great Solemnnity. Exeunt omnes

FINIS.

THE TRAGEDIE OF CYMBELINE.

Actus Primus. Scœna Prima.

Enter two Gentlemen.

1. Gent. YOu do not meet a man but Frownes.
Our bloods no more obey the Heauens
Then our Courtiers:
Still seeme, as do's the Kings.

2 Gent. But what's the matter?

1. His daughter, and the heire of's kingdome (whom
He purpos'd to his wiues sole Sonne, a Widdow
That late he married) hath referr'd her selfe
Vnto a poore, but worthy Gentleman. She's wedded,
Her Husband banish'd; she imprison'd, all
Is outward sorrow, though I thinke the King
Be touch'd at very heart.

2 None but the King?

1 He that hath lost her too: so is the Queene,
That most desir'd the Match. But none a Courtier,
Although they weare their faces to the bent
Of the Kings lookes, hath a heart that is not Glad at the thing they scowle at.

2 And why so?

1 He that hath miss'd the Princesse, is a thing
Too bad, for bad report: and he that hath her,
(I meane, that married her, alacke good man,
And therefore banish'd) is a Creature, such,
As to seeke through the Regions of the Earth
For one, his like; there would be something failing
In him, that should compare. I do not thinke,
So faire an Outward, and such stuffe Within
Endowes a man, but he.

2 You speake him farre.

1 I do extend him (Sir) within himselfe,
Crush him together, rather then vnfold
His measure duly.

2 What's his name, and Birth?

1 I cannot delue him to the roote: His Father
Was call'd Sicilius, who did ioyne his Honor
Against the Romanes, with Cassibulan,
But had his Titles by Tenantius, whom
He serv'd with Glory, and admir'd Successe:
So gain'd the Sur-addition, Leonatus.
And had (besides this Gentleman in question)
Two other Sonnes, who in the Warres o'th'time
Dy'de with their Swords in hand. For which, their Father
Then old, and fond of yssue, tooke such sorrow
That he quit Being; and his gentle Lady
Bigge of this Gentleman (our Theame) deceast
As he was borne. The King he takes the Babe
To his protection, cals him Posthumus Leonatus,
Breedes him, and makes him of his Bed-chamber,
Puts to him all the Learnings that his time
Could make him the receiuer of, which he tooke
As we do ayre, fast as 'twas ministred,
And in's Spring, became a Harvest. Liu'd in Court
(Which rare it is to do) most prais'd, most lou'd,
A sample to the yongest: to th'more Mature,
A glasse that feated them: and to the graver,
A Childe that guided Dotards. To his Mistris,
(For whom he now is banish'd) her owne price
Proclaimes how she esteem'd him; and his Vertue
By her election may be truly read, what kind of man he is.

2 I honor him, euen out of your report.
But pray you tell me, is shee sole childe to'th'King?

1 His onely childe:
He had two Sonnes (if this be worth your hearing, Marke it) the eldest of them, at three yeares old
I'th'swathing cloathes, the other from their Nursery
Were stolne, and to this houre, no ghesse in knowledge
Which way they were.

2 How long is this ago?

1 Some twenty yeares.

2 That a King's Children should be so conuey'd,
So slackely guarded, and the search so slow
That could not trace them.

1 Howsoere, 'tis strange,
Or that the negligence may well be laugh'd at:
Yet is it true Sir.

2 I do well beleeue you.

1 We must forbeare. Heere comes the Gentleman,
The Queene, and Princesse. Exeunt

Scena Secunda.

Enter the Queene, Posthumus, and Imogen.

Qu. No, be assur'd you shall not finde me (Daughter)
After the slander of most Step-Mothers,
Euill-ey'd vnto you. You're my Prisoner, but
Your Geoler shall deliuer you the keyes

That locke vp your restraint. For you Posthumus,
So soone as I can win th'offended King,
I will be knowne your Aduocate: marry yet
The fire of Rage is in him, and 'twere good
You lean'd vnto his Sentence, with what patience
Your wisedome may informe you.

Post. 'Please your Highnesse,
I will from hence to day.

Qu. You know the perill:
Ile fetch a turne about the Garden, pitying
The pangs of barr'd Affections, though the King
Hath charg'd you should not speake together. Exit

Imo. O dissembling Courtesie! How fine this Tyrant
Can tickle where she wounds? My dearest Husband,
I something feare my Fathers wrath, but nothing
(Always reseru'd my holy duty) what
His rage can do on me. You must be gone,
And I shall heere abide the hourely shot
Of angry eyes: not comforted to liue,
But that there is this Iewell in the world,
That I may see againe.

Post. My Queene, my Mistris:
O Lady, weepe no more, least I giue cause
To be suspected of more tenderness
Then doth become a man. I will remaine
The loyall'st husband, that did ere plight troth.
My residence in Rome, at one Filario's,
Who, to my Father was a Friend, to me
Knowne but by Letter; thither write (my Queene)
And with mine eyes, Ile drinke the words you send,
Though Inke be made of Gall.

Enter Queene.

Qu. Be briefe, I pray you:
If the King come, I shall incurre, I know not
How much of his displeasure: yet Ile moue him
To walke this way: I never do him wrong,
But he do's buy my Iniuries, to be Friends:
Payes deere for my offences.

Post. Should we be taking leaue
As long a terme as yet we haue to liue,
The loathnesse to depart, would grow: Adieu.

Imo. Nay, stay a little:
Were you but riding forth to aire your selfe,
Such parting were too petty. Looke heere (Loue)
This Diamond was my Mothers; take it (Heart)
But keepe it till you woo another Wife,
When Imogen is dead.

Post. How, how? Another?
You gentle Gods, giue me but this I haue,
And seare vp my embracements from a next,
With bonds of death. Remaine, remaine thou heere,
While sense can keepe it on: And sweetest, fairest,
As I (my poore selfe) did exchange for you
To your so infinite loße; so in our trifles
I still winne of you. For my sake weare this,
It is a Manacle of Loue, Ile place it
Vpon this fairest Prisoner.

Imo. O the Gods!
When shall we see againe?

Enter Cymbeline, and Lords.

Post. Attacke, the King.

Cym. Thou basest thing, auoyd hence, from my sight:
If after this command thou fraught the Court
With thy vnworthinesse, thou dyest. Away,
Thou'rt poyson to my blood.

Post. The Gods preserue you,
And blesse the good Remainders of the Court:
I am gone. Exit

Imo. There cannot be a pinch in death
More sharpe then this is.

Cym. O disloyall thing,
That shouldst repayre my youth, thou hap'st
A yeares age on me.

Imo. I beseech you Sir,
Harme not your selfe with your vexation,
I am senselesse of your Wrath; a Touch more rare
Subdues all pangs, all feares.

Cym. Past Grace? Obedience?

Imo. Past hope, and in disposition, that may past Grace.

Cym. That might'st haue had
The sole Sonne of my Queene.

Imo. O blessed, that I might not: I chose an Eagle,
And did auoyd a Puttocke.

Cym. Thou tookst a Beggar, would'st haue made my Throne, a Seate for basenesse.

Imo. No, I rather added a lustre to it.

Cym. O thou vilde one!

Imo. Sir,
It is your fault that I haue loe'd Posthumus:
You bred him as my Play-fellow, and he is
A man, worth any woman: Ouer-buyes me
Almost the summe he payes.

Cym. What? art thou mad?

Imo. Almost Sir: Heauen restore me: would I were
A Neat-herds Daughter, and my Leonatus
Our Neighbour-Shepheards Sonne.

Enter Queene.

Cym. Thou foolish thing;
They were againe together: you haue done
Not after our command. Away with her,
And pen her vp.

Qu. Beseech your patience: Peace
Deere Lady daughter, peace. Sweet Soueraigne,
Leaue vs to our selues, and make your feare some cooling
Out of your best advice.

Cym. Nay let her languish
A drop of blood a day, and being aged
Die of this Folly. Exit.

Enter Pisanio.

Qu. Fye, you must giue way:
Heere is your Seruant. How now Sir? What news?

Pisa. My Lord your Sonne, drew on my Master.

Qu. Hah?
No harme, I trust is done?

Pisa. There might haue beene,
But that my Master rather plaid, then fought,
And had no helpe of Anger: they were parted
By Gentlemen, at hand.

Qu. I am very glad on't.

Imo. Your Son's my Fathers friend, he takes his part
To draw vpon an Exile. O brave Sir,
I would they were in Affricke both together,
My selfe by with a Needle, that I might prick
The goer backe. Why came you from your Master?

Pisa. On his command: he would not suffer me
To bring him to the Haueu: left these Notes
Of what commands I should be subiect too,
When't pleas'd you to employ me.

Qu. This hath beene
Your faithfull Seruant: I dare lay mine Honour
He will remaine so

Pisa. I humbly thanks your Highnesse.

Qu. Pray walke a-while.
Imo. About some halfe houre hence,
ay you speake with me;
ou shall (at least) go see my Lord aboard.
r this time leave me. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Cloten, and two Lords.

2. Sir, I would advise you to shift a Shirt; the Vioence of Action hath made you reek as a Sacrifice: where re comes out, ayre comes in: There's none abroad so olesome as that you vent.
Clot. If my Shirt were bloody, then to shift it.
me I hart him?
2 No faith: not so much as his patience.
1 Hurt him? His bodie's a passable Carkasse if he bee
: hurt. It is a through-fare for Steele if a be not hurt.
2 His Steele was in debt, it went o'th'Backe-side the rnne.
Clot. The Villaine would not stand me.
2 No, but he fled forward still, toward your face.
1 Stand you? you have Land enough of your owne:
t he added to your having, gave you some ground.
2 As many Inches, as you have Oceans (Puppies.)
Clot. I would they had not come betweene vs.
2 So would I, till you had measur'd how long a Foole
e were upon the ground.
Clot. And that thee should love this Fellow, and re-
e mee.
2 If it be a sin to make a true election, she is damn'd.
1 See, as I told you alwayes: her Beauty & her Braine not together. She's a good signe, but I have seene ll reflection of her wit.
2 She shines not upon Fooles, least the reflection
uld hurt her.
Clot. Come. He to my Chamber: would there had ne some hurt done.
1 I wish not so, unlesse it had bin the fall of an Asse,
ich is no great hurt.
Clot. You'l go with vs?
1 He attend your Lordship.
Clot. Nay come, let's go together.
2 Well my Lord. Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Imogen, and Pisanio.

mo. I would thou grew'st unto the shores o'th'Haven,
d questioned'st every Saile: If he should write,
d I not have it, 'twere a Paper lost offer'd mercy is: What was the last at he spake to thee?
Pisa. It was his Queene, his Queene.
Imo. Then wau'd his Handkerchiefe?
Pisa. And kiss'd it, Madam.
Imo. Senselesse Linnen, happier therein than I:
d that was all?
Pisa. No Madam: for so long
As he could make me with his eye, or eare,
Distinguish him from others, he did keepe
The Docke, with Glove, or Hat, or Handkerchiefe,
Still waving, as the fits and stirres of's mind
Could best expresse how slow his Soule sayl'd on,
How swift his Ship.
Imo. Thou should'st have made him
As little as a Crow, or lesse, ere left
To after-eye him.
Pisa. Madam, so I did.
Imo. I would have broke mine eye-strings;
Crack'd them, but to looke upon him, till the diminution
Of space, had pointed him sharpe as my Needle:
Nay, followed him, till he had melted from
The smalnesse of a Gnat, to ayre: and then
Have turn'd mine eye, and wept. But good Pisanio,
When shall we heare from him.
Pisa. Be assur'd Madam,
With his next vantage.
Imo. I did not take my leave of him, but had
Most pretty things to say: Ere I could tell him
How I would think on him at certaine houres,
Such thoughts, and such: Or I could make him swearre,
The Shees of Italy should not betray
Mine Interest, and his Honour: or have charg'd him
At the first houre of Morne, at Noone, at Midnight,
T'encounter me with Orisons, for then
I am in Heaven for him: Or ere I could,
Give him that parting kisse, which I had set
Betwixt two charming words, comes in my Father,
And like the Tyrannous breathing of the North,
Shakes all our buddes from growing.
Enter a Lady.
La. The Queene (Madam)
Desires your Highnesse Company.
Imo. Those things I bid you do, get them dispatch'd,
I will attend the Queene.
Pisa. Madam, I shall. Exeunt.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Philario, Iachimo: a Frenchman, a Dutchman, and a Spaniard.

Iach. Beleeve it Sir, I have seene him in Britaine; hee was then of a Crescent note, expected to prove so worthy, as since he hath beene allowed the name of. But I could then have look'd on him, without the help of Admiration, though the Catalogue of his endowments had bin tabled by his side, and I to peruse him by Items.
Phil. You speake of him when he was lesse furnish'd, then now hee is, with that which makes him both without, and within.
French. I have seene him in France: wee had very many there, could behold the Sunne, with as firme eyes as hee.
Iach. This matter of marrying his Kings Daughter, wherein he must be weighed rather by her value, then his owne, words him (I doubt not) a great deale from the matter.
French. And then his banishment.
Iach. I, and the approbation of those that weepe this lamentable divorce under her colours, are wonderfully

to extend him, be it but to fortifie her judgement, which else an easie battery might lay flat, for taking a Begger without lesse quality. But how comes it, he is to sojourne with you? How creepes acquaintance?

Phil. His Father and I were Souldiers together, to whom I have bin often bound for no lesse then my life.

Enter Posthumus.

Heere comes the Britaine. Let him be so entertained amongst you, as suites with Gentlemen of your knowing, to a Stranger of his quality. I beseech you all be better knowne to this Gentleman, whom I commend to you, as a Noble Friend of mine. How Worthy he is, I will leave to appeare hereafter, rather then story him in his owne hearing.

French. Sir we haue knowne together in Orleance.

Post. Since when, I haue bin debtor to you for courtesies, which I will be ever to pay, and yet pay still.

French. Sir, you o're-rate my poore kindnesse, I was glad I did atone my Countryman and yours, had beene pitty you should haue beene put together, with so mortall a purpose, as then each bore, upon importance of so slight and trivill a nature.

Post. By your pardon Sir, I was then a young Travaller, rather shun'd to go even with what I heard, then in my every action to be guided by others experiences: but upon my mended judgement (if I offend to say it is mended) my Quarrell was not altogether slight.

French. Faith yes, to be put to the arbitrement of Swords, and by such two, that would by all likelyhood haue confounded one the other, or haue falne both.

Iach. Can we with manners, aske what was the difference?

French. Safely, I thinke, 'twas a contention in publicke, which may (without contradiction) suffer the report. It was much like an argument that fell out last night, where each of vs fell in praise of our Country-Mistresses. This Gentleman, at that time vouching (and upon warrant of bloody affirmation) his to be more Faire, Vertuous, Wise, Chaste, Constant, Qualified, and lesse attemptable then any, the rarest of our Ladies in France.

Iach. That Lady is not now living; or this Gentlemans opinion by this, worse ouer.

Post. She holds her Vertue still, and I my mind

Iach. You must not so farre preferre her, Yore ours of Italy.

Post. Being so farre provok'd as I was in France: I would abate her nothing, though I professe my selfe her Adorer, not her Friend.

Iach. As farre, and as good: a kind of hand in hand comparison, had beene something too faire, and too good for any Lady in Britanie; if she went before others. I have seene as that Diamond of yours out-lusters many I haue beheld. I could not believe she excelled many: but I haue not seene the most pretious Diamond that is, nor you the Lady.

Post. I prais'd her, as I rated her: so do I my Stone.

Iach. What do you esteeme it at?

Post. More then the world enioyes.

Iach. Either your vnparagon'd Mistris is dead, or she a out-priz'd by a trifle.

Post. You are mistaken: the one may be solde or given, or if there were wealth enough for the purchase, or merite for the gulfe. The other is not a thing for sale, and onely the gift of the Gods.

Iach. Which the Gods haue given you?

Post. Which by their Graces I will keepe.

Iach. You may wear her in title yours: but you know strange Fowle light upon neighbouring Pond. Your Ring may be stolne too, so your brace of vnprizable Estimations, the one is but frailte, and the other Casualty. A cunning Theefe, or a (that way) accomplish'd Courtier, would hazard the winning both of first and last.

Post. Your Italy contains none so accomplish'd a Courtier to conuince the Honour of my Mistris: if ought holding or lesse of that, you conuse her frailte, I do nothing doubt you haue store of Theeues, notwithstanding I fetse not my Ring.

Phil. Let vs leave heere, Gentlemen?

Post. Sir, with all my heart. This worthy Signior I thanke him, makes no stranger of me, we are familiar at first.

Iach. With five times so much conversation, I should get ground of your faire Mistris, make her go backe, even to the yeilding, had I admittance, and opportunitie to friend.

Post. No, no.

Iach. I dare thereupon pawne the moytie of my Estate, to your Ring, which in my opinion o're-values something: but I make my wager rather against your Confidence, then her Reputation. And to bearre your offence herein so, I dare attempt it against any Lady in the world.

Post. You are a great deale abus'd in too bold a persuasion, and I doubt not you sustaine what y'are worthy of, by your Attempt.

Iach. What's that?

Post. A Repulse though your Attempt (as you call it) deserue more; a punishment too

Phil. Gentlemen enough of this, it came in too suddainely, let it dye as it was borne, and I pray you be better acquainted.

Iach. Would I had put my Fifteen, and my Knighthood on th'approbation of what I have spoke.

Post. What Lady would you chuse to assaile?

Iach. Yours, whom in constance you thinke stands so safe. I will lay you ten thousands Duckets to your Ring, that commend me to the Court where your Lady is, with no more advantage then the opportunitie of a second conference, and I will bring from thence, that Honor of hers, which you imagine so reserv'd.

Posthumus. I will wage against your Gold, Gold, to it: My Ring I holde deare as my finger, 'tis part of it

Iach. You are a Friend, and there in the wager: if you buy Ladies flesh at a Million a Dram, you cannot preserve it from tainting; but I see you haue some Religion in you, that you feare.

Posthu. This is but a custome in your tongue: you bearre a graver purpose I hope.

Iach. I am the Master of my speeches, and would vndertake what's spoken, I swearre.

Posthu. Will you? I shall but lend my Diamond till your returne: let there be Conuenants drawne between's: My Mistris exceedes in goodnesse, the hugeness of your vnworthy thinking. I dare you to this match: heere's my Ring.

Phil. I will haue it no lay.

Iach. By the Gods it is one: if I bring you no sufficient testimony that I haue enjoy'd the dearest bodily part of your Mistriss my ten thousand Duckets are yours.

So is your Diamond too: if I come off, and leaue her in such honour as you haue trust in; Shee your Iewell, this your Iewell, and my Gold are yours: prouided. I haue your commendation, for my more free entertainment.

Post. I embrace these Conditions, let vs haue Articles betwixt vs: only thus farre you shall answere, if you make your voyage vpon her, and giue me directly to vnderstand, you haue preuail'd, I am no further your Enemy, shee is not worth our debate. If shee remaine vnsedu'c'd, you not making it appeare otherwise: for your ill opinion, and th'assault you haue made to her chastity, you shall answer me with your Sword.

Iach. Your hand, a Couenant: wee will haue these things set downe by lawfull Counsell, and straight away for Britaine, least the Bargaine should catch colde, and starue: I will fetch my Gold, and haue our two Wagers recorded.

Post. Agreed.

French. Will this hold, think you.

Phil. Signior Iachimo will not from it.

Pray let vs follow 'em. Exeunt

Scena Sexta.

Enter Queene, Ladies, and Cornelius.

Qu. Whiles yet the dewe's on ground,
Gather those Flowers,
Make haste. Who has the note of them?

Lady. I Madam.

Queen. Dispatch. Exit Ladies.
Now Master Doctor, haue you brought those drugges?

Cor. Pleaseth your Highnes, I: here they are, Madam:
But I beseech your Grace, without offence
(My Conscience bids me aske) wherefore you haue
Commanded of me these most poysonous Compounds,
Which are the moouers of a languishing death:
But though slow, deadly.

Qu. I wonder, Doctor,
Thou ask'st me such a Question: Haue I not bene
Thy Pupill long? Hast thou not learn'd me how To make Perfumes? Distill? Preserue? Yes so,
That our great King himselfe doth woo me oft
For my Confections? Having thus farre proceeded,
(Vnlesse thou think'st me diuellish) is't not meete
That I did amplifie my knowledge in
Other Conclusions? I will try the forces
Of these thy Compounds, on such Creatures as
We count not worth the hanging (but none humane)
To try the vigour of them, and apply
Allayments to their Act, and by them gather
Their seuerall vertues, and effects.

Cor. Your Highnesse
Shall from this practise, but make hard your heart:
Besides, the seeing these effects will be
Both noysome, and infectious.

Qu. O content thee.

Enter Pisanio.

Heere comes a flattering Rascall, vpon him
Will I first worke: Hee's for his Master,
And enemy to my Sonne. How now Pisanio?
Doctor, your seruice for this time is ended,
Take your owne way.

Cor. I do suspect you, Madam,
But you shall do no harme.

Qu. Hearke thee, a word.

Cor. I do not like her. She doth thinke she has Strange ling'ring poysons: I do know her spirit,
And will not trust one of her malice, with
A drugge of such dame'd Nature. Those she has,
Will stupifie and dull the Sense a-while,
Which first (perchance) she'l proue on Cats and Dogs,
Then afterward vp higher: but there is
No danger in what shew of death it makes,
More than the locking vp the Spirits a time,
To be more fresh, reuiuing. She is fool'd
With a most false effect: and I, the true,
So to be false with her.

Qu. No further seruice, Doctor,
Vntil I send for thee.

Cor. I humbly take my leaue. Exit.

Qu. Weepes the still, (saist thou?)
Dost thou thinke in time
She will not quench, and let instructions enter
Where Folly now possesses? Do thou worke:
When thou shalt bring me word she loues my Sonne,
Ile tell thee on the instant, thou art then
As great as is thy Master: Greater, for
His Fortunes all lye speechlesse, and his name
Is at last gasp. Return he cannot, nor Continue where he is: To shift his being,
Is to exchange one misery with another,
And every day that comes, comes to decay
A dayes worke in him. What shalt thou expect
To be depender on a thing that leanes?
Who cannot be new built, nor has no Friends
So much, as but to prop him? Thou tak'st vp
Thou know'st not what: But take it for thy labour,
It is a thing I made, which hath the King
Five times redeem'd from death. I do not know
What is more Cordiall. Nay, I prythee take it,
It is an earnest of a farther good
That I meane to thee. Tell thy Mistris how
The case stands with her: doo't, as from thy selfe;
Thinke what a chance thou changest on, but thinke
Thou hast thy Mistris still, to boote, my Sonne,
Who shall take notice of thee. Ile moue the King
To any shape of thy Preferment, such
As thou'lt desire: and then my selfe, I chiefly,
That set thee on to this desert, am bound
To loade thy merit richly. Call my women. Exit Pisa.
Thinke on my words. A slye, and constant knaue,
Not to be shak'd: the Agent for his Master,
And the Remembrancer of her, to hold
The hand-fast to her Lord. I haue given him that,
Which if he take, shall quite vnpeople her
Of Leidgers for her Sweete: and which, she after Except the bred her humor, shall be sitter'd
To taste of too.

Enter Pisanio, and Ladies.

So, so: Well done, well done:
The Vjolets, Cowslippes, and the Prime-Roses
Beare to my Closset: Fare thee well, Pisanio.
Thinke on my words. Exit Qu. and Ladies

Pisa. And shall do:
But when to my good Lord, I prouse vntrue,
Ile choake my selfe: there's all Ile do for you. Exit.

Iouing

Scena Septima.

Enter Imogen alone.

Imo. A Parber cruell, and a Stepdame false,
A Foolish Suitor to a Wedded-Lady,
That hath her Husband banish'd: O, that Husband,
My supreame Crowne of griefe, and those repeated
Vexations of it. Had I bin Theefe-stolne,
As my two Brothers, happy: but most miserable
Is the desire that's glorious. Blessed be those
How mean so ere, that have their honest wills,
Which seasons comfort. Who may this be? Fye

Enter Pisanio, and Iachimo.

Pisa. Madam, a Noble Gentleman of Rome,
Comes from my Lord with Letters.
Iach. Change you, Madam:
The Worthy Leonatus is in safety,
And greetes your Highnesse dearely.
Imo. Thanks good Sir,
You're kindly welcome.
Iach. All of her, that is out of doore, most rich:
If she be furnish'd with a mind so rare
She is alone th'Arabian-Bird; and I
Haue lost the wager. Boldnesse be my Friend:
Arme me Audacitie from head to foote,
Orlike the Parthian I shall flying fight,
Rather directly fly.

Imogen reads.

He is one of the Noblest note, to whose kindnesses I am most infinitely tied. Reflect upon him accordingly, as you value your trust. Leonatus.

So far I reade aloud.
But euen the very middle of my heart
Is warm'd by th'rest, and take it thankefully.
You are as welcome (worthy Sir) as I
Haue words to bid you, and shall finde it so
In all that I can do.
Iach. Thanks fairest Lady:
What are men mad? Hath Nature given them eyes
To see this vaulted Arch, and the rich Crop
Of Sea and Land, which can distinguish 'twixt
The fiery Orbes above, and the twinn'd Stones
Vpon the number'd Beach, and can we not
Partition make with Spectacles so precious
Twixt faire, and foule?
Imo. What makes your admiration?
Iach. It cannot be i'th'eye: for Apes, and Monkeys
'Twixt two such She's, would chatter this way, and
Contemne with mowes the other. Nor i'th'judgement:
For Idiots in this case of fauour, would
Be wisely definit: Nor i'th'Appetite,
Sluttery to such neate Excellence, opposd
Should make desire vomit emptinesse,
Not so allur'd to feed.
Imo. What is the matter trow?
Iach. The Cloyed will:
That satiate yet vnsatisfi'd desire, that Tub
Both fill'd and running: Ravening first the Lamb,
Longs after for the Garbage.
Imo. What, dost Sir,
Thus rap's you? Are you well?
Iach. Thanks Madam well: Beseech you Sir,
Desire my Man's abode, where I did inane him
He's strange and peeuish.
Pisa. I was going Sir,
To give him welcome. Exit.
Imo. Continues well my Lord?
His health beseech you?
Iach. Well, Madam.
Imo. Is he dispos'd to mirth? I hope he is.
Iach. Exceeding pleasant: none a stranger there,
So merry, and so gamesome: he is call'd
The Britaine Reueller.
Imo. When he was heere
He did incline to sadnesse, and oft times
Not knowing why.
Iach. I never saw him sad.
There is a Frenchman his Companion, one
An eminent Monsieur, that it seemes much loues
A Gallian-Girle at home. He furnaces
The thicke sighes from him; whiles the iolly Britain,
(Your Lord I meane) laughes from's free lungs cruell.
Can my sides hold, to think that man who knowes
By History, Report, or his owne proofe
What woman is, yea what she cannot choose
But must be will's free houres languish:
For assured bondage?
Imo. Will my Lord say so?
Iach. I Madam, with his eyes in flood with laughter.
It is a Recreation to be by
And heare him mocke the Frenchmen:
But Heauen's know some men are much too blunt
Imo. Not he I hope.
Iach. Not he:
But yet Heauen's bounty towards him, might
Be vs'd more thankfully. In himselfe 'tis much;
In you, which I account his beyond all Talents.
Whil'st I am bound to wonder, I am bound
To pitty too.
Imo. What do you pitty Sir?
Iach. Two Creatures heartyly
Imo. Am I one Sir?
You looke on me: what wracke discerne you in me
Deserues your pitty?
Iach. Lamentable: what
To hide me from the radiant Sun, and solace
I'th'Dungeon by a Snuffe
Imo. I pray you Sir,
Deliuer with more opennesse your answeres
To my demands. Why do you pitty me?
Iach. That others do,
(I was about to say) enioy your — but
It is an office of the Gods to venge it,
Not mine to speake on't.
Imo You do seeme to know
Something of me, or what concernes me; pray you
Since doubting things go ill, often hurts more
Then to be sure they do. For Certainties
Either are past remedies, or timely knowing,
The remedy then borne. Discouer to me
What both you spur and stop
Iach. Had I this cheeke
To bathe my lips vpon: this hand, whose touch,
(Whose every touch) would force the Feeler soule
To th'touch of loyalty. This object, which Takes prisoner the wild motion of mine eye,
Fixing it only here, should I (damn'd then)

S louer with lippes as common as the stayres
That mount the Capitoll: loyne gripes, with hands
Made hard with hourely falshood (falshood as
With labour:) then by peeping in an eye
Base and illustrious as the smokie light
That's fed with stinking Tallow: it were fit
That all the plagues of Hell should at one time
Encounter such revolt.
Iuo. My Lord, I feare
Has forgot Brittaine.
Iach. And himselfe, not I
Inclin'd to this intelligence, pronounce
The Beggery of his change: but 'tis your Graces
That from my mutest Conscience, to my tongue,
Charmes this report out.
Iuo. Let me heare no more.
Iach. O dearest Soule: your Cause doth strike my heart
With pitty, that doth make me sicke. A Lady
So faire, and fasten'd to an Emperie
Would make the great'st King double, to be partner'd
With Tomboyes hyr'd, with that selfe exhibition
Which your owne Coffers yeeld: with diseas'd ventures
That play with all Infirmities for Gold,
Which rottennesse can lend Nature. Such boyl'd stuffe
As well might poyson Poyson. Be reueng'd,
Or shee that bore you, was no Queene, and you
Recoyle from your great Stock.
Iuo. Reueng'd:
How should I be reueng'd? If this be true,
(As I haue such a Heart, that both mine eares
Must not in haste abuse) if it be true,
How should I be reueng'd?
Iach. Should he make me
Liue like Diana's Priest, betwixt cold sheets,
Whiles he is vaulting variable Rampes
In your despight, vpon your purse: reuenge it.
I dedicate my selfe to your sweet pleasure,
More Noble then that runnagate to your bed,
And will continue fast to your Affection,
Still close, as sure.
Iuo. What hoa, Pisanio?
Iach. Let me my seruice tender on your lippes.
Iuo. Away, I do condemne mine eares, that haue
So long attended thee. If thou wert Honourable
Thou would'st haue told this tale for Vertue, not
For such an end thou seek'st, as base, as strange:
Thou wrong'st a Gentleman, who is as farre
From thy report, as thou from Honor: and
Solicitest here a Lady, that disdaines
Thee, and the Diuell alike. What hoa. Pisanio?
The King my Father shall be made acquainted
Of thy Assault: if he shall thinke it fit,
A sawcy Stranger in his Court, to Mart
As in a Romish Stew, and to expound
His beastly minde to vs; he hath a Court
He little cares for, and a Daughter, who
He not respects at all. What hoa, Pisanio?
Iach. O happy Leonatus! I may say,
The credit that thy Lady hath of thee
Deserues thy trust, and thy most perfect goodnesse
Her assur'd credit. Blessed liue you long,
A Lady to the worthiest Sir, that euer
Country call'd his; and you his Mistris, onely
For the most worthiest fit. Giue me your pardon,
I have spoke this to know if your Affiance
Were deeply rooted, and shall make your Lord,
That which he is, new o're: And he is one
The truest manner'd: such a holy Witch,
That he enchants Societies into him:
Half all men hearts are his.
Iuo. You make amends.
Iach. He sits 'mongst men, like a defended God;
He hath a kinde of Honor sets him off,
More then a mortall seeming. Be not angrie
(Most mighty Princesse) that I have aduentur'd
To try your taking of a false report, which hath
Honour'd with confirmation your great Iudgement,
In the election of a Sir, so rare,
Which you know, cannot erre. The loue I beare him,
Made me to fan you thus, but the Gods made you
(Vnlike all others) chaffleslesse. Pray your pardon.
Iuo. All's well Sir:
Take my powre i'th'Court for yours.
Iach. My humble thankes: I had almost forgot
T'intreat your Grace, but in a small request,
And yet of moment too, for it concernes:
Your Lord, my selfe, and other Noble Friends
Are partners in the business.
Iuo. Pray what is't?
Iach. Some dozen Romanes of vs, and your Lord
(The best Feather of our wing) haue mingled summes
To buy a Present for the Emperor:
Which I (the Factor for the rest) haue done
In France: 'tis Plate of rare deuice, and Iewels
Of rich, and exquisite forme, their valewes great,
And I am something curious, being strange
To haue them in safe stowage: May it please you
To take them in protection.
Iuo. Willingly:
And pawne mine Honor for their safety, since
My Lord hath interest in them, I will keepe them
In my Bed-chamber.
Iach. They are in a Trunke
Attended by my men: I will make bold
To send them to you, onely for this night:
I must aboard to morrow.
Iuo. O no, no.
Iach. Yet I beseech: or I shall short my word
By length'ning my returne. From Gallia,
I crost the Seas on purpose, and on promise
To see your Grace.
Iuo. I thanke you for your paines:
But not away to morrow.
Iach. O I must Madam.
Therefore I shall beseech you, if you please
To greet your Lord with writing, doo't to night,
I have out-stood my time, which is materiall
To'th'tender of our Presence.
Iuo. I will write:
Send your Trunke to me, it shall safe be kept,
And truely yeelded you: you're very welcome. Exeunt.

Actus Secundus. Scena Prima.

Enter Clotten, and the two Lords.

Clot. Was there euer man had such luckie when I kist the Iacke vpon an vp-cast, to be hit away? I had a hundred pound on't: and then a whorson Iacke-an-Apes, must

Scena Septima.

Enter Imogen alone.

Imo. A Father cruell, and a Stepdame false,
A Foolish Suitor to a Wedded-Lady,
That hath her Husband banish'd: O, that Husband,
My supreame Crowne of griefe, and those repeated
Vexations of it. Had I bin Theefe-stolne,
As my two Brothers, happy: but most miserable
Is the desire that's glorious. Blessed be those
How mean soe ere, that have their honest wills,
Which seasons comfort. Who may this be? Fye

Enter Pisanio, and Iachimo.

Pisa. Madam, a Noble Gentleman of Rome,
Comes from my Lord with Letters.
Iach. Change you, Madam:
The Worthy Leonatus is in safety,
And greetes you Highnesse dearely.
Imo. Thanks good Sir,
You're kindly welcome.
Iach. All of her, that is out of doore, most rich:
If she be furnish'd with a mind so rare
She is alone th'Arabian-Bird; and I
Have lost the wager. Boldnesse be my Friend:
Arme me Audacitie from head to foote,
Orlike the Parthian I shall flying fight,
Rather directly fly.

Imogen reads.

He is one of the Noblest note, to whose kindnesses I am most infinitely tied. Reflect upon him accordingly, as you value your staff. Leonatus.

So far I reade aloud.
But even the very middle of my heart
Is warm'd by'th'rest, and takes it thankefully.
You are as welcome (worthy Sir) as I
Have words to bid you, and shall finde it so
In all that I can do.
Iach. Thanks fairest Lady:
What are men mad? Hath Nature given them eyes
To see this vaulted Arch, and the rich Crop
Of Sea and Land, which can distinguish 'twixt
The fiery Orbes above, and the twinn'd Stones
Vpon the number'd Beach, and can we not
Partition make with Spectacles so precious
Twixt faire, and foule?
Imo. What makes your admiration?
Iach. It cannot be i'th'eye: for Apes, and Monkeys
'Twixt two such She's, would chatter this way, and
Contemne with mowes the other. Nor i'th'judgment:
For Idiots in this case of fauour, would
Be wisely definit: Nor i'th'Appetite.
Sluttery to such neate Excellence, oppos'd
Should make desire vomit emptinesse,
Not so allur'd to feed.
Imo. What is the matter trow?
Iach. The Cloyed will:
That satiate yet vnsatisfi'd desire, that Tub
Both fill'd and running: Ravening first the Lamb,
Longs after for the Garbage.
Imo. What, dost Sir,
Thus rap's you? Are you well?
Iach. Thanks Madam well: Beseech you Sir,
Desire my Man's abode, where I did leave him:
He's strange and peuish.
Pisa. I was going Sir,
To give him welcome. Exit.
Imo. Continues well my Lord?
His health beseech you?
Iach. Well, Madam.
Imo. Is he dispos'd to mirth? I hope he is.
Iach. Exceeding pleasant: none a stranger there,
So merry, and so gamesome: he is call'd
The Britaine Reueller.
Imo. When he was heere
He did incline to sadnesse, and oft times
Not knowing why.
Iach. I never saw him sad.
There is a Frenchman his Companion, one
An eminent Monsieur, that it seemes much loues
A Gallian-Girle at home. He furnaces
The thicke sighes from him; whiles the iolly Britaine,
(Your Lord I meane) laughes from's free lungs: cries-oh,
Can my sides hold, to think that man who knowes
By History, Report, or his owne proofe
What woman is, yea what she cannot choose
But must be will's free houres languish:
For assured bondage?
Imo. Will my Lord say so?
Iach. I Madam, with his eyes in flood with laughter,
It is a Recreation to be by
And heare him mocke the Frenchmen:
But Heauen's know some men are much too theane
Imo. Not he I hope.
Iach. Not he:
But yet Heauen's bounty towards him, might
Be vs'd more thankfully. In himselfe 'tis much;
In you, which I account his beyond all Talents.
Whil'st I am bound to wonder, I am bound
To pitty too.
Imo. What do you pitty Sir?
Iach. Two Creatures heartyby
Imo. Am I one Sir?
You looke on me: what wrack discerne you in me
Deserues your pitty?
Iach. Lamentable: what
To hide me from the radiant Sun, and solace
I'th'Dungeon by a Snaffle
Imo. I pray you Sir,
Deliuer with more openesse your safe eues
To my demands. Why do you pitty me?
Iach. That others do,
(I was about to say) enjoy your — but
It is an office of the Gods to venge it,
Not mine to speake on't.
Imo You do seeme to know
Something of me, or what concernes men pray you
Since doubting things go ill, often hurts more
Then to be sure they do. For Certainties
Either are past remedies; or timely knowing,
The remedy then borne. Discouer to me
What both you spur and stop
Iach. Had I this cheeke
To bathe my lips vpon this hand, whose touch,
(Whose every touch) would force the Feeler soule
To'th'oath of loyalty. This obiect, which
Takes prisoner the wild motion of mine eye,
Fixing it only heere, should I (damn'd then)

Slow

S Iouer with lippes as common as the stayres
That mount the Capitoll: Ioyne gripes, with hands
Made hard with hourely falshood (falshood as
With labour:) then by peeping in an eye
Base and illustrious as the smoakie light
That's fed with stinking Tallow: it were fit
That all the plagues of Hell should at one time
Encounter such revolt.
Iuo. My Lord, I feare
Has forgot Brittaine.
Iach. And himselfe, not I
Inclin'd to this intelligence, pronounce
The Beggery of his change: but 'tis your Graces
That from my mutest Conscience, to my tongue,
Charmes this report out.
Iuo. Let me heare no more.
Iach. O deerest Soule: your Cause doth strike my heart
With pitty, that doth make me sicke. A Lady
So faire, and fasten'd to an Emperie
Would make the great'st King double, to be partner'd
With Tomboyes hyr'd, with that selfe exhibition
Which your owne Coffers yeeld: with diteas'd ventures
That play with all Infirmities for Gold,
Which rottennesse can lend Nature. Such boyl'd stuffe
As well might poyson Poyson. Be reueng'd,
Or shee that bore you, was no Queene, and you
Recoyle from your great Stocke.
Iuo. Reueng'd:
How should I be reueng'd? If this be true,
(As I haue such a Heart, that both mine eares
Must not in haste abuse) if it be true,
How should I be reueng'd?
Iach. Should he make me
Liue like Diana's Priest, betwixt cold sheets,
Whiles he is vaulting variable Rampes
In your despight, vpon your purse: reuenge it.
I dedicate my selfe to your sweet pleasure,
More Noble then that runnagate to your bed,
And will continue fast to your Affection,
Still close, as sure.
Iuo. What hoa, Pisanio?
Iach. Let me my seruice tender on your lippes.
Iuo. Away, I do condemne mine eares, that haue
So long attended thee. If thou wert Honourable
Thou would'st haue told this tale for Vertue, not
For such an end thou seek'st, as base, as strange:
Thou wrong'st a Gentleman, who is as farre
From thy report, as thou from Honor: and
Solicites heere a Lady, that disdaines
Thee, and the Diuell alike. What hoa, Pisanio?
The King my Father shall be made acquainted
Of thy Assault: if he shall thinke it fit,
A sawcy Stranger in his Court, to Mart
As in a Romish Stew, and to expound
His beastly minde to vs; he hath a Court
He little cares for, and a Daughter, who
He not respects at all. What hoa, Pisanio?
Iach. O happy Leonatus! I may say,
The credit that thy Lady hath of thee
Deserues thy trust, and thy most perfect goodnesse
Her assur'd credit. Blessed liue you long,
A Lady to the worthiest Sir, that euer
Country call'd his; and you his Mistris, onely
For the most worthiest fit. Giue me your pardon,
I haue spoke this to know if your Affiance
Were deeply rooted, and shall make your Lord,
That which he is, new o're: And he is one
The truest manner'd: such a holy Witch,
That he enchanters Societies into him:
Half all men hearts are his.
Iuo. You make amends.
Iach. He sits 'mongst men, like a defended God;
He hath a kinde of Honor sets him off,
More then a mortall seeming. Be not angrie
(Most mighty Princesse) that I haue aduentur'd
To try your taking of a false report, which hath
Honour'd with confirmation your great Iudgement,
In the election of a Sir, so rare,
Which you know, cannot erre. The loue I beare him,
Made me to fan you thus, but the Gods made you
(Vnlike all others) chaffeless. Pray your pardon.
Iuo. All's well Sir:
Take my powre i'th'Court for yours.
Iach. My humble thankes: I had almost forgot
T'intreat your Grace, but in a small request,
And yet of moment too, for it concernes:
Your Lord, my selfe, and other Noble Friends
Are partners in the business.
Iuo. Pray what is't?
Iach. Some dozen Romanes of vs, and your Lord
(The best Feather of our wing) haue mingled summes
To buy a Present for the Emperor:
Which I (the Factor for the rest) haue done
In France: 'tis Plate of rare deuice, and Iewels
Of rich, and exquisite forme, their valewes great,
And I am something curious, being strange
To haue them in safe stowage: May it please you
To take them in protection.
Iuo. Willingly:
And pawne mine Honor for their safety, since
My Lord hath interest in them, I will keepe them
In my Bed-chamber.
Iach. They are in a Trunke
Attended by my men: I will make bold
To send them to you, onely for this night:
I must aboard to morrow.
Iuo. O no, no.
Iach. Yes I beseech: or I shall short my word
By length'ning my returne. From Gallia,
I crost the Seas on purpose, and on promise
To see your Grace.
Iuo. I thanke you for your paines:
But not away to morrow.
Iach. O I must Madam.
Therefore I shall beseech you, if you please
To greet your Lord with writing, doo't to night,
I haue out-stood my time, which is material
To'th'tender of our Present.
Iuo. I will write:
Send your Trunke to me, it shall safe be kept,
And truely yeelded you: you're very welcome. Exeunt.

Actus Secundus. Scena Prima.

Enter Clotten, and the two Lords.

Clot. Was there euer man had such luckes? when I kiss the Iacke vpon an vp-cast, to be hit away? I had a hundred pound on't: and then a whorson Iacke-an-Apes must must take me vp for swearing, as if I borrowed mine oathes of him, and might not spend them at my pleasure.

2. What got he by that? you hane broke his pate with your Bowle.

2. If his wit had bin like him that broke it: it would hane run all out.

Clot. When a Gentleman is disper'd to swearing; it is not for any standers by to curtail his oathes. Ha?

2. No my Lord; nor cop'd the eares of them.

Clot. Whorson dog: I gaue him satisfaction? would he had bin one of my Ranke.

2. To hane smell'd like a Foole.

Clot. I am not vext more at any thing in th'earth: a pox on't. I had rather not be so Noble as I am: they dare not fight with me, because of the Queene my Mother: every Iacke-Slaue hath his belly full of Fighting, and I must go vp and downe like a Cock, that no body can match.

2. You are Cockle and Capon too, and you crow Cock, with your comb on.

Clot. Sayest thou?

2. It is not fit you Lordship should vndertake every Companion, that you giue offence too.

Clot. No, I know that: but it is fit I should commit offence to my inferiors.

2. Ist fit for your Lordship only.

Clot. Why so I say.

1. Did you heare of a Stranger that's come to Court night?

Clot. A Stranger, and I not know on't?

2. He's a strange Fellow himselfe, and knowes it not.

1. There's an Italian come, and 'tis thought one of Leonatus Friends.

Clot. Leonatus? A banisht Rascall; and he's another, whatsoever he be. Who told you of this Stranger?

1. One of your Lordships Pages.

Clot. Is it fit I went to looke vpon him? Is there no derogation in't?

2. You cannot derogate my Lord.

Clot. Not easily I thinke.

2. You are a Foole granted, therefore your Issues being foolish do not derogate.

Clot. Come, Ile go see this Italian; what I hane lost to day at Bowles, Ile winne to night of him. Come go.

2. Ile attend your Lordship. Exit.

That such a crafftie Diuell as is his Mother
Should yeild the world this Asse: A woman, that
Beares all downe with her Braine, and this her Sonne,
Cannot take two from twenty for his heart,
And leaue eighteene. Alas poore Princesse,
Thou diuine Imogen, what thou endur'st,
Beswitz a Father by thy Step-dame gouern'd,
A Mother hourely coyning plots: A Wooer,
More hateful then the foule expulsion is
Of thy deere Husband. Then that horrid Act
Of the diuorce, beef'd make the Heauens hold firme
The walls of thy deere Honour. Keepe vnshak'd
That Temple thy faire mind, that thou mai'st stand
T'enioy thy banish'd Lord: and this great Land. Reuenge.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Imogen, in her Bed, and a Lady.

Imo. Who's there? My woman Helena?

La. Please you Madam.

Imo. What hours is it?

Lady. Almost midnight, Madam.

Imo. I hane read three hours then:
Mine eyes are weake,
Fold downe the leaf where I hane left: to bed
Take not away the Taper, leaue it burning:
And if thou canst awake by foure o'th'clock,
I prythee call me: Sleepe hath seiz'd me wholly.
To your protection I commend me, Gods,
From Feyries, and the Tempters of the night,
Guard me beseech yee. Sleeps.

Iachimo from the Trunke.

Iach. The Crickets sing, and man's o'er-labour'd sense
Repaires it selfe by rest: Our Tarquin thus
Did softly prestle the Rushes, ere he wakeni'd
The Chastitie he wounded. Cytherea,
How brayely thou becom'st thy Bed, fresh Lilly,
And whiter then the Sheetes: that I might touch,
But kisse, one kisse. Rubies vnparagon'd,
How deerely they doe't: 'Tis her breathing that
Perfumes the Chamber thus: the Flame o'th' Taper
Bowes toward her, and would vnder-peepe her lids,
To see th'enclosed Lights, now Canopied
Vnder these windowes, White and Azure lac'd
With Blew of Heauens owne tinct. But my designe,
To note the Chamber, I will write all downe.
Such, and such pictures: There the window, such Th'adornement of her Bed; the Arras, Figures,
Why such, and such: and the Contents o'th' Story.
Ah but some natiuitie vpon her Body,
Aboue ten thousand meaner Moueables
Would testifie, t'enrich mine Inuentorie.
O sleepe, thou Ape of death, lye dull vpon her,
And be her Sense but as a Monument,
Thus in a Chappell lying. Come off, come off;
As slippery as the Gordian knot was hard.
'Tis mine, and this will witnesse outwardly,
As strongly as the Conscience do's within:
To'th'madding of her Lord. On her left breast
A mole Cinque-spotted: Like the Crimson drops
I'th'bottome of a Cowslippe. Heere's a Voucher,
Stronger then ever Law could make; this Secret
Will force him thinke I hane pick'd the lock, and t'aken
The treasure of her Honour. No more: to what end?
Why should I write this downe, that's riueted,
Screw'd to my memorie. She hath bin reading late,
The Tale of Troyes, heere the leaffe's turn'd downe
Where Philomele gaue vp. I hane enough.
To'th'Trunke againe, and there the fearing of it.
Swift, swift, you Dragons of the night, that dawning
May beare the Raraen eye: I lodge in feare,
Though this a heauenly Angell: hell is heere.

Clocke strikes.

One, two, three: time, time. Exit.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Cloten, and Lords.

2. Your Lordship is the most patient man in loss, the most coldest that euer turn'd vp Ace.

Clo. It would make any man cold to loose.

1. But not every man patient after the noble temper of your Lordship; You are most hot, and furious when you winne.

Clo.

Wooing will put my man into courage: if I could get this foolish Imogen, I should haue Gold enough: it's almost morning, is't not?

2 Day, my Lord.

Clot. I would this Musicke would come: I am addicted to goe her Musicke a mornings, they say it will penetrate.

Enter Musicians.

Come on, tune: If you can penetrate her with your fingering, so: we'l try with tongues too: if none will do, let her remaine: but I'le never goe o're. First, a very excellent good conceyted thing; after a wonderful sweet aire, with admirable rich words to it, and then let her consider.

SONG.

Hearke, hearke, the Larke at Heauens gate sings,
and Phebus gins arise,
His Steeds to water at those Springs
on chalic'd Flowers that lyes:
And winking Mary-buds begin to ope their Golden eyes
With every thing that pretty is, my Lady sweet arise:
Arise, arise.

So, get you gone: if this pen trans, I will consider your Musicke the better: if it do not, it is a voyce in her eares which House-haires, and Calues-guts, nor the voyce of vnpaised Eunuch to boot, can never amend.

Enter Cymbeline, and Queene.

2 Here comes the King.

Clot. I am glad I was vp so late, for that's the reason I was vp so early: he cannot choose but take this Seruice I haue done, fatherly. Good morrow to your Maiesty, and to my gracious Mother.

Cym. Attend you here the doore of our stern daughter? Will shee not forth?

Clot. I haue assayl'd her with Musicke, but she vouchsafes no notice.

Cym. The Exile of her Minion is too new, She hath not yet forgot him, some more time Must weare the print of his remembrance on't, And then she's yours.

Qu. You are most bound to th'King, Who let's go by no vantages, that may Preferre you to his daughter: Frame your faith To orderly solicity, and be friended With aptnesse of the season: make denials Encrease your Services: so seeme, as if You were inspir'd to do those duties which You tender to her: that you in all obey her, Saue when command to your dismission tends, And therein you are senselesse.

Clot. Senselesse? Not so.

Mes. So like you (Sir) Ambassadors from Rome; The one is Caius Lucius.

Cym. A worthy Fellow, Albeit he comes on angry purpose now; But that's no fault of his: we must receyue him According to the Honor of his Sender, And toward himselfe, his goodnesse forespent on vs We must extend our notice: Our dearest Sonne, When you haue given good morning to your Mistris, Attend the Queene, and vs, we shall haue needs T'employ you towards this Romane. Come our Queene. Exeunt.

Clot. If she be vp, I'le speake with her: if not Let her lye still, and dreame: by your leaue hoa, I know her women are about her: what If I do line one of their hands, 'tis Gold Which buyes admittance (oft it doth) yea, and makes Diana's Rangers false themselues, yeeld vp Their Deere to th'stand o'th'Stealer: and 'tis Gold Which makes the True-man kill'd, and saues the Theefe: Nay, sometime hangs both Theefe, and True-man: what Can it not do, and vndoe? I will make One of her women Lawyer to me, for I yet not vnderstand the case my selfe. By your leaue. Knocks.

Enter a Lady.

La. Who's there that knocks?

Clot. A Gentleman.

La. No more.

Clot. Yes, and a Gentlewomans Sonne.

La. That's more Than some whose Taylors are as dere as yours, Can iustly boast of: what's your Lordships pleasure?

Clot. Your Ladies person, is she ready?

La. I, to keepe her Chamber.

Clot. There is Gold for you, Sell me your good report.

La. How, my good name? or an report of you What I shall thinke is good. The Princesse.

Enter Imogen.

Clot. Good morrow fairest, Sister your sweet hand.

Imo. Good-morrow Sir, you lay out too much paines For purchasing but trouble: the thanks I gaue, Is telling you that I am poore of thanks, And scarse can spare them.

Clot. Still I swear I loue you.

Imo. If you but said so, 'twere as deepe with me: If you swore still, your recompence is still That I regard it not.

Clot. This is no answer.

Imo. But that you shall not say, I yeeld being silent, I would not speake. I pray you spare me, Faith I shall vnfold equall discourtesie To your best kindnesse: one of your great knowing Should learne (being taught) forbearance.

Clot. To leaue you in your modestie, 'twere my sin, I will not.

Imo. Fooles are not mad Folkes.

Clot. Do you call me Fooles?

Imo. As I am mad. I do: If you'l be patient, I'le no more be mad, That cures vs both. I am much sorry (Sir), You put me to forget a Ladies manners By being so verbell: and learne now, for all, That I which know my heart, do here pronounce By th'very truth of it, I care not for you, And am so neere the lacke of Charitie To accuse my selfe, I hate you: which I had rather You felt, than make't my boast.

Clot. You feare against Obedience, which you owe your Father, for The Contract you pretend with that base Wretch, One, bred of Alms, and fostered with cold dishes, With scraps o'th'Court: It is no Contract, none: And though it be allowed in meaner parties (Yet who then be more meane) to knit their soules (On whom there is no more dependance But Brats and Beggery) in self-figu'd knot, Yet you are curb'd from that enlargement, by

The consequence o th'Crowne, and must not, foyle
The precious note of it; with a base Slave,
A Hilding for a Liverie, a Squares Cloth,
A Pantler; not so eminent.
Imo. Prophane Fellow:
Were thou the Sonne of Iupiter, and no more,
But what thou art besides: thou wer't too base,
To be his Groome: thou wer't dignified enough
Even to the point of Enuie. If 'twere made
Comparative for your Vertues, to be stil'd
The vnder Hangman of his Kingdome; and hated
For being preferr'd so well.
Clot. The South-Fog rot him.
Imo. He never can meete more mischance, then come
To be but nam'd of thee. His meanest Garment
That ever hath but clipt his body; is dearer
In my respect, then all the Heires above thee,
Were they all made such men: How now Pisanio?
Enter Pisanio.
Clot. His Garments? Now the diuell.
Imo. To Dorothy my woman hie thee presently.
Clot. His Garment?
Imo. I am sprighted with a Foole,
Frighted, and angred worse: Go bid my woman
Search for a Iewell, that too casually
Hath left mine Arme: it was thy Masters. Shrew me
If I would loose it for a Reuenew,
Of any Kings in Europe. I do think,
I saw't this morning: Confident I am,
Last night 'twas on mine Arme; I kiss'd it,
I hope it be not gone, to tell my Lord
That I kisse aught but he.
Pis. 'Twill not be lost.
Imo. I hope so: go and search.
Clot. You haue abus'd me:
His meanest Garment?
Imo. I, I said so Sir,
If you will make't an Action, call witnesse on't.
Clot. I will acquaine your Father.
Imo. Your Mother too:
She's my good Lady; and will conceiue, I hope
But the worst of me. So I leaue you Sir,
To'th'worst of discontent. Exit.
Clot. I'le be reuenge'd:
His mean'st Garment? Well. Exit.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Posthumus, and Philaro.
Post. Feare it not Sir: I would I were so sure
To winne the King, as I am bold, her Honour
Will remaine her's.
Phil. What means do you make to him?
Post. Not any: but abide the change of Time,
Quake in the present winters state, and wish
That warmer dayes would come: In these fear'd hope
I barely gratifie your loue; they fayling
I must die much your debtor.
Phil. Your very goodnesse, and your company,
O're-payes all I can do. By this your King,
Hath heard of Great Augustus; Caius Lucius,
Will do's Commission throughly. And I think
Hee'le grant the Tribute, send th'Arrearages,
Or looke vpon our Romanes, whose remembrance
Is yet fresh in their griefe.
Post. I do believe
(Statist though I am none, nor like to be)
That this will prouo a Warre; and you shall heare
The Legion now in Gallia, sooner landed
In our not-fearing-Britaine, then haue tydings
Of any penny Tribute paid. Our Countrymen
Are men more order'd, then when Iulius Cæsar
Smil'd at their lacke of skill, but found their courage
Worthy his frowning at. Their discipline,
(Now wing-led with their courages) will make known
To their Approuers, they are People, such
That mend vpon the world. Enter Iachimo.
Phi. See Iachimo.
Post. The swiftest Harts, haue posted you by land;
And Winds of all the Corners kiss'd your Sailes,
To make your vessell nimble.
Phil. Welcome Sir.
Post. I hope the briefenesse of your answere, made
The speedinesse of your returne.
Iachi. Your Lady,
Is one of the fayrest that I haue look'd vpon
Post. And therewithall the best, or let her beauty
Looke thorough a Casement to allure false hearts,
And be false with them.
Iachi. Heere are Letters for you.
Post. Their tenure good I trust.
Iach. 'Tis very like.
Post. Was Caius Lucius in the Britaine Court,
When you were there?
Iach. He was expected then,
But not approach'd.
Post. All is well yet,
Sparkles this Stone as it was wont, or is't not Too dull for your good wearing?
Iach. If I haue lost it,
I should haue lost the worth of it in Gold,
Ile make a iourney twice as farre, t'enioy
A second night of such sweet shortnesse, which
Was mine in Britaine, for the Ring is winne.
Post. The Stones too hard to come by.
Iach. Not a whit,
Your Lady being so easy.
Post. Make not sore Sir
Your losse, your Sport: I hope you know that we Must not continue Friends.
Iach. Good Sir, we must
If you keepe Couenant: had I not brought
The knowledge of your Mistris home, I grant
We were to question further; but I now
Professe my selfe the winner of her Honor,
Together with your Ring; and not the wronger
Of her, or you, having proceeded but
By both your Wills.
Post. If you can make't apparant
That you haue tasted her in Bed; my hand,
And Ring is yours. If not, the foule opinion
You had of her pure Honour gaines, or loses,
Your Sword, or mine, or Maistrisse honor bleed
To who shall finde them.
Iach. Sir, my Circumstances
Being so nere the Truth, as I will make them,
Must first induce you to beleeue; whose strength
I will confirme with oath, which I doubt not

You

You'l giue me leaue to spare, when you shall finde
You need it not.
Post. Proceed.
Iach. First, her Bed-chamber
(Where I confesse I slept not, but professe
Had that was well worth watching) it was hang'd
With Tapistry of Silke, and Siluer, the Story
Proud Cleopatra, when she met her Roman,
And Cydnus swell'd aboue the Bankes, or for
The presse of Boates, or Pride. A peece of Worke
So bravely done, so rich, that it did strive
In Workemanship, and Value, which I wonder'd
Could be so rarely, and exactly wrought
Since the true life on't was ——
Post. This is true:
And this you might haue heard of heere, by me,
Or by some other.
Iach. More particulars
Must satisfie my knowledge.
Post. So they must,
Or doe your Honour iniury.
Iach. The Chimney
Is South the Chamber, and the Chimney-peece
Chaste Dian, bathing: never saw I figures
So likely to report themselues; the Cutter
Was as another Nature dumbe, out-ware her,
Motion, and Breath left out.
Post. This is a thing
Which you might from Relation likewise reape,
Being, as it is, much spoke of.
Iach. The Roofe o'th Chamber,
With golden Cherubins is fretted. Her Andirons
(I had forgot them) were two winking Cupids
Of Siluer, each on one foote standing, nicely
Depending on their Brands.
Post. This is her Honor:
Let it be granted you haue seene all this (and praise
Be given to your remembrance) the description
Of what is in her Chamber, nothing saues
The wager you haue laid.
Iach. Then if you can
Be pale, I begge but leaue to aire this Iewell: See,
And now 'tis vp againe: It must be married
To that your Diamond, Ile keepe them.
Post. Ioue.——
Once more let me behold it: Is it that
Which I left with her?
Iach. Sir (I thanke her) that
She stript it from her Arme: I see her yet:
Her pretty Action, did out-sell her gift,
And yet enrich'd it too: she gaue it me,
And said, she prizd it once.
Post. May be, she pluck'd it off
To send it me.
Iach. She writes so to you? doth she?
Post. O no, no, no, 'tis true. Heere, take this too,
It is a Basiliske vnto mine eye,
Killes me to looke on't: Let there be no Honor,
Where there is Beauty: Truth, where semblance: Loue,
Where there's another man. The Vowes of Women,
Of no more bondage be, to where they are made,
Than they are to their Vertues, which is nothing:
O, abouo measure false.
Phil. Haue patience Sir,
And take your Ring againe, 'tis not yet wonne:
It may be probable she lost it: or
Who knowes if one her women, being corrupted
Hath stolne it from her.
Post. Very true,
And so I hope he came by't: backe my Ring.
Render to me some corporall signe about her
More euident then this: for this was stolne.
Iach. By Iupiter, I had it from her Arme.
Post. Hearke you, he sweares: by Iupiter he sweares
'Tis true, nay keepe the Ring; 'tis true. I am sure
She would not loose it: her Attendants are
All sworne, and honourable: they induc'd to steale it?
And by a Stranger? No, he hath enioy'd her,
The Cognizance of her incontinencie
Is this: she hath bought the name of Whore, thus deerly
There, take thy hyre, and all the Fiends of Hell
Diuide themselues betweene you.
Phil. Sir, be patient:
This is not strong enough to be beleeu'd
Of one persuaded well of.
Post. Never talke on't:
She hath bin coloed by him.
Iach. If you seeke
For further satisfying, vnder her Breast
(Worthy her pressing) lyes a Mole, right proud
Of that most delicate Lodging. By my life
I kist it, and it gaue me present hunger
To feede againe, though full. You do remember
This staine vpon her?
Post. I, and it doth confirme
Another staine, as bigge as Hell can hold,
Were there no more but it.
Iach. Will you heare more?
Post. Spare your Arithmetickie,
Never count the Turnes: Once, and a Million.
Iach. He be sworne.
Post. No swearing:
If you will swearе you haue not done't, you lye,
And I will kill thee, if thou do'st deny
Thou'st made me Cuckold.
Iach. He deny nothing.
Post. O that I had her heere, to teare her Limb-meale.
I will go there and doo't, i'th'Court, before
Her Father. Ile do something. Exit.
Phil. Quite besides
The gouernment of Patience. You haue wonne:
Let's follow him, and preuent the present wrath
He hath against himselfe.
Iach. With all my heart. Exeunt.

Enter Posthumus.

Post. Is there no way for Men to be, but Women
Must be half-workers? We are all Bastards,
And that most venerable man, which I
Did call my Father, was, I know not where
When I was stamp. Some Coyner with his Tooles
Made me a counterfeit: yet my Mother seem'd
The Diana of that time: so doth my Wife
The Non-pareill of this. Oh Vengeance, Vengeance!
Me of my lawfull pleasure she restrain'd,
And prey'd me on forbearance: did it with
A pudencie so Rosie, the sweet view on't
Might well haue warm'd olde Saturne;
That I thought her
As Chaste, as vn-Sunn'd Snow. Oh, all the Diuels!
This yellow Iachimo in an houre, was't not?

Or lesse; at first? Perchance he spoke not, but Like a full Acorn'd Boore, a Jarmen on,
Cry'de oh, and mounted; found no opposition
But what he look'd for, should oppose, and she Should from encounter guard. Could I finde out
The Woman's part in me, for there's no motion
That tends to vice in man, but I affirme
It is the Womans part: be it Lying, note it,
The womans: Flattering, hers; Deceiving, hers:
Lust, and rankle thoughts, hers, hers: Revenges hers:
Ambitions, Covetings, change of Prides, Disdaine,
Nice-longing, Slanders, Mutability;
All Faults that name, nay, that Hell knowes,
Why hers, in part, or all: but rather all For even to Vice
They are not constant, but are changing still;
One Vice, but of a minute old, for one
Not halfe so old as that. I'le write against them,
Detest them, curse them: yet 'tis greater Skill
In a true Hate, to pray they have their will:
The very Diuels cannot plague them better. Exit.

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Enter to Scene, Cymbeline, Queene, Clotten, and Lords at one doore, and at another, Caius, Lucius, and Attendants.

Cym. Now say, what would Augustus Cæsar with vs?
Luc. When Iulius Cæsar (whose remembrance yet
Lives in mens eyes, and will to Eares and Tongues
Be Theme, and hearing ever) was in this Britain,
And Conquer'd it, Cassibulan thine Vnkle
(Famous in Cæsars prayses, no whit lesse
Then in his Feares deserving it) for him,
And his Succession, granted Rome a Tribute,
Yearely three thousand pounds; which (by thee) lately
Is left vnrender'd.
Qu. And to kill the marrylle,
Shall be so ever.
Clot. There be many Cæsars,
Ere such another Iulius: Britaine's a world
By it selfe, and we will nothing pay
For wearing our owne Noses.
Qu. That opportunity
Which then they had to take from's, to resume
We have again. Remember Sir, my Liege,
The Kings your Ancestors, together with
The natural bravery of your Ile, which stands
As Neptunes Parke, ribb'd, and pal'd in
With Oakes vnskaleable, and roaring Waters,
With Sands that will not bear your Enemies Boates,
But suche them vp to th' Top-mast. A kinde of Conquest
Cæsar made heere, but made not heere his bragge
Of Came, and Saw, and Ouer-came: with shame
(The first that ever touch'd him) he was carried
From off our Coast, twice beaten: and his Shipping
(Poore ignorant Baubles) on our terrible Seas
Like Egge-shells mov'd vpon their Surges, crush'd
As easily gainst our Rockes. For lay whereof,
The sam'd Cassibulan, who was once at point
(O'h giglet Fortune) to master Cæsars Sword,
Made Lucie-Tenor with reioycing-Fires bright,
And Britaines first with Courage.
Clot. Come, there's no more Tribute to be paid: our Kingdome is stronger then it was at that time: and (as I said) there is no more such Cæsars, other of them may have crook'd Noses, but to owe such straite Armes, none.
Cym. Son, let your Mother end.
Clot. We have yet many among vs, can gripe as hard as Cassibulan, I doe not say I am one: but I have a hand. Why Tribute? Why should we pay Tribute? If Cæsar can hide the Sun from vs with a Blanket, or put the Moone in his pocket, we will pay him Tribute for light: else Sir, no more Tribute, pray you now.
Cym. You must know,
Till the iniurious Romans, did extort
This Tribute from vs, we were free. Cæsars Ambitions,
Which swell'd so much, that it did almost stretch
The sides o'th' World, against all colour heere,
Did put the yoake vpon's; which to shake off
Becomes a warlike people, whom we reckon
Our selues to be, we do. Say then to Cæsar,
Our Ancestor was that Mulmutius, which
Ordain'd our Lawes, whose vse the Sword of Cæsar
Hath too much mangled; whose repayre, and franchise,
Shall (by the power we hold) be our good deed,
Tho Rome be therefore angry. Mulmutius made our lawes
Who was the first of Britaine, which did put
His browes within a golden Crowne, and call'd
Himselfe a King.
Luc. I am sorry Cymbeline,
That I am to pronounce Augustus Cæsar
(Cæsar, that hath moe Kings his Seruants, then Thy selfe Domesticke Officers) thine Enemy:
Receyue it from me then. Warre, and Confusion
In Cæsars name pronounce I 'gainst thee: Looke
For fury, not to be resisted. Thus defide,
I thank thee for my selfe.
Cym. Thou art welcome Caius.
Thy Cæsar knighted me; my youth I spent
Much vnder him: of him, I gather'd Honour,
Which he, to seeke of me again, perforce,
Behooues me keepe at vtterance. I am perfect,
That the Pannonians and Dalmatians, for
Their Liberties are now in Armes: a Precedent
Which not to read, would show the Romans cold:
So Cæsar shall not finde them.
Luc. Let proofe speake.
Clot. His Maiesty bidds you welcome. Make pastime with vs, a day, or two, or longer: if you seek vs afterwards in other termes, you shall finde vs in our Salt-water-Girdle: if you beate vs out of it, it is yours: if you fall in the adventure, our Crowes shall fare the better for you: and there's an end.
Luc. So sir.
Cym. I know your Masters pleasure, and he mine:
All the Remaine, is welcome. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Posthumus reading of a Letter.

Post. How? of Adultery? Wherefore write you not
What I lenghten her accuse? Leonatus:
Oh Master, what a strange infection

Is false into thy eare? What false Italian,
(As poysonous tongu'd, as handed) hath prevail'd
On thy too ready hearing? Disloyall? No.
She's punish'd for her Truth; and vndergoes
More Goddesse-like, then Wife-like; such Assaults
As would take in some Vertue. Oh my Master,
Thy mind to her, is now as lowe, as were
Thy Fortunes. How? That I should murther her,
Vpon the Loue, and Truth, and Vowes; which I
Haue made to thy command? I her? Her blood?
If it be so, to do good seruice, never
Let me be counted seruiceable. How looke I,
That I should seeme to lacke humanity,
So much as this Fact comes to? Doo't. The Letter.
That I have sent her, by her owne command,
Shall giue thee opportunitie. Oh damn'd paper,
Blacke as the Inke that's on thee: senselesse bauble,
Art thou a Feedarie for this Act; and look'st
So Virgin-like without? Loe here she comes.

Enter Imogen.

I am ignorant in what I am commanded.

Iam. How now Pisanio?

Pis. Madam, heere is a Letter from my Lord.

Iam. Who, thy Lord? That is my Lord Leonatus?
Oh, learn'd indeed were that Astronomer
That knew the Starres, as I his Characters,
He'd lay the Future open. You good Gods,
Let what is heere contain'd, relliish of Loue,
Of my Lords health, of his content: yet not
That we two are asunder, let that grieue him;
Some griefes are medcinable, that is one of them,
For it doth physicke Loue, of his content,
All but in that. Good Wax, thy leaue: blest be
You Bees that make these Lockes of counsaile. Louers,
And men in dangerous Bondes pray not alike,
Though Forfeytours you cast in prison, yet
You chaspe young Cupids Tables: good Newes Gods.

Iustice and your Fathers wrath (should he take me in his Dominion; could not be so cruell to me, as you: (oh the dereest of Creatures) would euen renounce me with your eyes. Take notice that I am in Cambria at Milford-Hauen: what your own Loue, will out of this aduise you, follow. So he wishes you all happynesse, that remaines loyall to his Vow, and your increasing in Loue. Leonatus Posthumus.

Oh for a Horse with wings: Hear'st thou Pisanio?
He is at Milford-Hauen: Read, and tell me
How farre 'tis thither. If one of mean affaires
May plod it in a weeke, why may not I
Glide thither in a day? Then true Pisanio,
Who long'st like me, to see thy Lord; who long'st
(Oh let me bate) but not like me: yet long'st
But in a fainter kinde. Oh not like me:
For mine's beyond, beyond: say, and speake thicke
(Louers Counsailor should fill the bores of hearing,
To th'smothering of the Sense) how farre it is
To this same blessed Milford. And by th'way
Tell me how Wales was made so happy, as T'inherite such a Hauen. But first of all,
How we may steale from hence: and for the gap
That we shall make in Time, from our hence-going,
And our return, to excuse: but first, how get hence.
Why should excuse be borne or ere begot?
We'ele talke of that hereafter, Prythee speake,
How many score of Miles they we well rid
Twixt heure, and heure?

Pis. One score 'twixt Sun, and Sun,
Madam's enough for you: and too much too.

Iam. Why, one that rode to's Excution Man,
Could never go so slow: I haue heard of Riding wagers,
Where Horses haue bin nimbler then the Sands
That run i'th'Clocks behalfe. But this is Foolrie,
Go, bid my Women faigne a Sicknesse, say
She'le home to her Father; and prouide me presently
A Riding Suit: No costliier then would fit
A Franklins Huswife.

Pisa. Madam, you're best consider.

Iam. I see before me (Man) not heere, not heere:
Nor what ensues but haue a Fog in them
That I cannot looke through. Away, I prythee,
Do as I bid thee: There's no more to say:
Accessible is none but Milford way. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Belarius, Guiderius, and Arviragus.

Bel. A goodly day, not to keepe house with such,
Whose Roofe's as low as ours: Sleepe Boyes, this gaze
Instructs you how t'adore the Heauens; and bowes you
To a morninges holy office. The Gates of Monarches
Are Arch'd so high, that Giants may iet through
And keepe their impious Turbands on, without
Good morrow to the Sun. Haile thou faire Heauen,
We house i'th'Rocke, yet vse thee not so hardly
As prouder liuers do.

Guid. Haile Heauen.

Arvir. Haile Heauen.

Bela. Now for our Mountaine sport, vp to yond hill
Your legges are yong: Ile tread these Flats. Consider,
When you aboue perceiue me like a Crow,
That it is Place, which lessen's, and sets off.
And you may then reuolue what Tales, I haue told you,
Of Courts, of Princes; of the Tricks in Warre.
This Seruice, is not Seruice; so being done,
But being so allowed. To apprehend thus,
Drawes vs a profit from all things we see:
And often to our comfort, shall we finde
The sharded-Beetle, in a safer hold
Then is the full-wing'd Eagle. Oh this life,
Is Nobler, then attending for a checke:
Richer, then doing nothing for a Bobe:
Prouder, then rustling in vnpayd-for Silke:
Such gaine the Cap of him, that makes him fine,
Yet keepes his Booke vncrost: no life to ours.

Gui. Out of your proofe you speak: we poore vnfledg'd
Haue never wing'd from view o'th'nest; nor knowes not
What Ayre's from home. Hap'ly this life is best,
(If quiet life be best) sweeter to you
That haue a sharper known. Well corresponding
With your stiffe Age; but vnto vs, it is
A Cell of Ignorance: travelling a bed,
A Prison, or a Debtor, that not dares
To stride a limit.

Arvi. What should we speake of
When we are old as you? When we shall heare
The Raine and winde beate darke December? How
In this our pinching Cave, shall we discourse

The freezing houres away? We have seene nothing:
We are beastly; subtle as the Fox for prey,
Like warlike as the Wolfe, for what we eate:
Our Valour is to chace what flyes: Our Cage
We make a Quire, as doth the prison'd Bird,
And sing our bondage freely.

Bel. How you speake.
Did you but know the Cities Vsurers,
And sett them knowingly: the Art o'th Court,
As hard to leave, as keepe: whose top to climbe
Is certaine falling: or so slipp'ry, that
The feare's as bad as falling. The toyle o'th'Warre,
A paine that only seemes to seeke out danger
I'th'name of Fame, and Honor, which dyes i'th'search,
And hath as oft a sland'rous Epitaph,
As Record of faire Act. Nay, many times
Doth ill deserue, by doing well: what's worse
Must curt'sie at the Censure. Oh Boyes, this Story
The World may reade in me: My bodie's mark'd
With Roman Swords; and my report, was once
First, with the best of Note. Cymbeline lou'd me,
And when a Souldier was the Theame, my name
Was not farre off: then was I as a Tree
Whose boughes did bend with fruit. But in one night,
A Storme, or Robbery (call it what you will)
Shooke downe my mellow hangings: my my Leaues,
And left me bare to weather.

Gui. Vncertaine fauour.

Bel. My fault being nothing (as I haue told you oft)
But that two Villaines, whose false Oathes preuayl'd
Before my perfect Honor, swore to Cymbeline,
I was Confederate with the Romanes: so
Followed my Banishment, and this twenty yeeres,
This Rocke, and these Demesnes, haue bene my World,
Where I haue liu'd at honest freedome, payd
More pious debts to Heauen, than in all
The fore-end of my time. But, vp to'th Mountaines,
This is not Hunters Language; he that strikes
The Venison first, shall be the Lord o'th'Feast,
To him the other two shall minister,
And we will feare no poyson, which attends
In place of greater State:
Ile meete you in the Valleyes. Exeunt.
How hard it is to hide the sparkes of Nature?
These Boyes know little they are Sonnes to'th'King,
Not Cymbeline dreames that they are aliue.
They thinke they are mine,
And though train'd vp thus meanely
I'th'Cave, wherein the Bowe their thoughtes do hit,
The Roofes of Palaces, and Nature prompts them
In simple and low things, to Prince it, much
Beyond the trickle of others. This Paladour,
The heyre of Cymbeline and Belesine, who
The King his Father call'd Guiderius Iose,
When on my three-foot stoole I sit, and tell
The warlike feats I haue done, his spirits flye out
Into my Story: say thus mine Enemy fell,
And thus I set my foote on's neck, even then
The Princely blood flowes in his Cheeke, he sweats,
Straines his yong Nerues, and puts himselfe in posture
That acte my words. The yonger Brother Cadwal,
Once Arviragus, in as like a figure
Strikes life into my speech, and shewes much more
His owne conceiuing. Hearke, the Game is rouse'd,
Oh Cymbeline. Heauen and my Conscience knowes
Thou did'st vnrightly banish me: whereon
At three, and two yeeres old, I stole these babes,
Thinking to barre thee of Succession, as
Thou reft'st me of my Lands. Euriphile,
Thou wa's't their Nurse, they took thee for their mother,
And every day do honor to her grave:
My selfe Belarius, that am Morgan call'd
They take for Naturall Father. The Game is vp. Exit.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Pisanio and Iaquen.

Iaq. Then told'st me when we came foth horse, I place
Was neere at hand: Ne're long'd my Mother so
To see me first, as I haue now. Pisanio, Man:
Where is Posthumus? What is in thy mind
That makes thee stare thus? Wherefore breath'st thou sigh
From th'inward of thee? One, but painted thus
Would be interpreted a thing perplex'd
Beyond selfe-explication. Put thy selfe
Into a hauiour of feare, ere wildnesse
Vanquish my stayd-on Senses. What's the matter?
Why tender'st thou that Paper to me, with
A look vnrender? If't be Summer Newes
Smile too't before: if Winterly, thou need'st
But keepe that count'nance still. My Husbands hand?
That Drug-damn'd Italy, hath out-craftied him,
And bee's at some hard point. Speake man, thy Tongue
May take off some extremitie, which to reade
Would be even mortall to me.

Pis. Please you reade,
And you shall finde me (wretched man) a thing
The most disdain'd of Fortune

Iaquen reades

THy Mistris (Pisanio) hath plaide the Strumpet in my Bed: the Testimonies whereof lyes bleeding in me. I speake not of her infidelitie, but from proofe as strong as my grieffe, and as certaine as I expect my Reuenge. That part, thou (Pisanio) must act for me, if thy Faith be not tainted with the breach of hers; let thine own hands take away her life: I shall giue thee opportunity at Milford Haueu. She hath my Letter for the purpose; where, if thou feare to strike, and to make me certaine it is done, thou art the Pandor to her dishonour, and equally to me disloyall.

Pis. What shall I need to draw my Sword, the Paper
Hath cut her throat already? No, 'tis Slander,
Whose edge is sharper then the Sword, whose tongue
Out-venomes all the Wormes of Nyle, whose breath
Rides on the posting winds, and doth belye
All corners of the World. Kings, Queenes, and States,
Maides, Matrons, nay the Secrets of the Graue
This viperous slander enters. What cheere, Madam?

Iaq. False to his Bed? What is it to be false?
To lye in watch there, and to think on him?
To weepe 'twixt clock and clock? If sleep charge Nature,
To breake it with a fearfull dreame of him,
And cry my selfe awake? That's falsehoo's bed? Is it?

Pis. Alas good Lady.

Iaq. I false? Thy Conscience witnesse: Iachimo,
Thou did'st accuse him of Incontinence,
Thou then look'dst like a Villaine: now, methinkes

Thy

Thy fauours good enough. Some lay of Italy
(Whose mother was her painting) hath betrayd him:
Poore I am stale, a Garment out of fashion,
And for I am richer then to hang by th'walles,
I must be ripe: To pieces with me: Oh!
Mens Vowes are womens Traitors. All good seeming
By thy reuolt (oh Husband) shall be thought
Put on for Villainy; not borne where's growes,
But worne a Baite for Ladies.

Pisa. Good Madam, heare me.

Iuo. True honest men being heard, like false Æneas,
Were in his time thought false: and Synons weeping
Did scandall many a holy teare: tooke pitty
From most true wretchednesse. So thou, Posthumus
Wilt lay the Leasuen on all proper men;
Goodly, and gallant, shall be false and peiur'd
From thy great faile: Come Fellow, be thou honest,
Do thou thy Masters bidding. When thou seest him,
A little witnesse my obedience. Looke
I draw the Sword my selfe, take it, and hit
The innocent Mansion of my Loue (my Heart:)
Feare not, 'tis empty of all things, but Greefe:
Thy Master is not there, who was indeede
The riches of it. Do his bidding, strike,
Thou mayst be valiant in a better cause;
But now thou seem'st a Coward.

Pif. Hence vile Instrument,
Thou shalt not damne my hand.

Iuo. Why, I must dye
And if I do not by thy hand, thou art
No Seruant of thy Masters. Against Selfe-slaughter,
There is a prohibition so Diuine,
That crauens my weake hand: Come, heere's my heart:
Something's a-foot: Soft, soft, wee'l no defence,
Obedient as the Scabbard. What is heere,
The Scriptures of the Loyall Leonatus,
All turn'd to Heresie? Away, away.
Corrupters of my Faith, you shall no more
Be Stomachers to my heart: thus may poore Fooles
Believe false Teachers: Though those that are betrayd
Do feele the Treason sharpely, yet the Traitor
Stands in worse case of woe. And thou Posthumus,
That didd'st set vp my disobedience 'gainst the King
My Father, and makes me put into contempt the suites
Of Princely Fellowes, shalt hereafter finde
It is no acte of common passage, but
A strain of Rareness: and I greeue my selfe,
To thinke, when thou shalt be disedg'd by her,
That now thou tyrest on, how thy memory
Will then be pang'd by me. Prythee dispatch,
The Lambe entreats the Butcher. Wher's thy knife?
Thou art too slow to do thy Masters bidding
When I desire it too.

Pif. Oh gracious Lady:
Since I receiu'd command to do this business,
I haue not slept one winke.

Iuo. Doo't, and to bed then.

Pif. Ile wake mine eye-balles first.

Iuo. Wherefore then
Didd'st vndertake it? Why hast thou abus'd
So many Miles, with a pretence? This place?
Mine Action? and thine owne? Our Horses labour?
The Time inuiting thee? The perturb'd Court
For my being absent? whereunto I never
Purpose returne. Why hast thou gone so farre
To be vn-bent? when thou hast ne're thy stand,
Th'elected Deere before thee?

Pif. But to win time
To loose so bad employment, in the which
I haue consider'd of a course good Ladie
Heare me with patience.

Iuo. Talke thy tongue weary, speake:
I haue heard I am a Strumpet, and mine eare
Therein false strooke, can take no greater wound,
Nor tent, to bottome that. But speake.

Pif. Then Madam,
I thought you would not backe againe.

Iuo. Most like,
Bringing me heere to kill me.

Pif. Not so neither:
But if I were as wise, as honest, then
My purpose would prouе well: it cannot be,
But that my Master is abus'd. Some Villaine,
Land singular in his Art, hath done you both
This cursed iniurie.

Iuo. Some Roman Curtezan?

Pisa. No, on my life:
Ile giue but notice you are dead, and send him
Some bloody signe of it. For 'tis commanded
I should do so: you shall be mist at Court,
And that will well confirme it.

Iuo. Why good Fellow,
What shall I do the while? Where bide? How liue?
Or in my life, what comfort, when I am
Dead to my Husband?

Pif. If you'l backe to'th'Court.

Iuo. No Court, no Father, nor no more adoe
With that harsh, noble, simple nothing:
That Cloten, whose Loue-suite hath bene to me
As fearefull as a Siege.

Pif. If not at Court,
Then not in Britaine must you bide.

Iuo. Wherefore?
Hath Britaine all the Sunne that shines? Day? Night?
Are they not but in Britaine? I'th'worlds Volume
Our Britaine seemes as of it, but not in't:
In a great Poole, a Swannes-nest, prythee thinke
There's liuers out of Britaine.

Pif. I am most glad
You thinke of other place: Th'Ambassador,
Lucius the Romane comes to Milford-Hauen
To morrow. Now, if you could weare a minde
Darke, as your Fortune is, and but disguise
That which t'appeare it selfe, must not yet be,
But by selfe-danger, you should tread a course
Pretty, and full of view: yes, happily, neere
The residence of Posthumus; so nee (at least)
That though his Actions were not visible, yet
Report should render him hourely to your eare,
As truely as he moues.

Iuo. Oh for such meanes,
Though perill to my modestie, not death on't
I would aduenture.

Pif. Well then, heere's the point:
You must forget to be a Woman: change
Command, into obedience. Feare, and Niceness
(The Handmaides of all Women, or more truely
Woman it pretty selfe) into a waggish courage,
Ready in gybes, quicke-answer'd, saucie, and
As quarrellous as the Weasell: Nay, you must Forget that rarest Treasure of your Cheeke,
Exposing it (but oh the harder heart,

Alacke

Alacke no remedy) to the greedy touch
Of common-killing Tiran: and forget
Your labourſome and dainty Trimmes, wherein
You made great Iuno angry.

Imo. Nay be breefe?
I ſee into thy end, and am almoſt
A man already.

Poſ. Firſt, make your ſelfe but like one,
Fore-thinking this. I haue already fit
('Tis my Cloake-bagge) Doublet, Hat, Hoſe, all
That anſwer to them: Would you in their ſeruing,
(And with what imitation you can borrow
From youth of ſuch a ſeaſon) 'fore Noble Lucius
Preſent your ſelfe, deſire his ſeruice: tell him
Wherein you're happy; which will make him know,
If that his head haue eare in Muſicke, doubtleſſe
With joy he will imbrace you: for hee's Honourable,
And doubling that, moſt holy. Your meanes abroad:
You haue me rich, and I will never faile
Beginning, nor ſupplyment.

Imo. Thou art all the comfort
The Gods will diet me with. Prythee away,
There's more to be conſider'd: but we'l even
All that good time will giue vs. This attempt,
I am Souldier too, and will abide it with A Princes Courage. Away, I prythee.

Poſ. Well Madam, we muſt take a ſhort farewell,
Leaſt being miſt, I be ſuſpected of
Your carriage from the Court. My Noble Miſtris,
Heere is a boxe, I had it from the Queene,
What's in't is precious: if you are ſicke at Sea,
Or Stomacke-qualm'd at Land, a Dramme of this
Will driue away diſtemper. To ſome ſhade,
And fit you to your Manhood: may the Gods
Direct you to the beſt

Imo. Amen: I thanke thee. Exeunt.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Cymbeline, Queene, Cloten, Lucius, and Lords.

Cym. Thus farre and ſo farewell.

Luc. Thankes, Royall Sir
My Emperor hath wrote, I muſt from hence,
And am right ſorry, that I muſt report ye
My Maſters Enemy.

Cym. Our Subiects (Sir)
Will not endure his yoake; and for our ſelfe
To ſhew leſſe Soueraignty then they, muſt needs
Appeare vn-Kinglike.

Luc. So Sir: I deſire of you
A Conduct ouer Land, to Milford-Hauen.
Madam, all joy befall your Grace, and you.

Cym. My Lords, you are appointed for that Office:
The due of Honor, in no point omit:
So farewell Noble Lucius.

Luc. Your hand, my Lord.

Clot. Receiue it friendly: but from this time forth
I weare it as your Enemy.

Luc. Sir, the Event
Is yet to name the winner. Fare you well.

Cym. Leaue not the worthy Lucius, good my Lords
Till he haue croſt the Seuern. Happines. Exit Lucius, &c

Qu. He goes hence frowning: but it honours us
That we haue given him cauſe.

Clot. 'Tis all the better,
Your valiant Britaines haue their wiſhes in it.

Cym. Lucius hath wrote already to the Emperor
How it goes heere. It lies vs therefore ripely
Our Chariots, and our Horſemen be in readineſſe.
The Powre, that he already hath in Gallia
Will ſoone be drowne to head, from whence he comes
His warre for Britaine.

Qu. 'Tis not ſleepy buſineſſe,
But muſt be look'd too ſpeedily, and ſtrongly.

Cym. Our expectation that it would be thus
Hath made vs forward. But my gentle Queene,
Where is our Daughter? She hath not appeare'd
Before the Romen, nor to vs hath tender'd
The duty of the day. She looke vs like
A thing more made of malice, then of duty,
We haue noted it. Call her before vs, for
We haue beene too ſlight in ſufferance.

Qu. Royall Sir,
Since the exile of Poſthumus, moſt retyr'd
Hath her life bin: the Cure whereof, my Lord,
'Tis time muſt do. Beſeech your Maieſty,
Forbeare ſharpe ſpeeches to her. Shee's a Lady
So tender of rebukes, that words are ſtrokes,
And ſtrokes death to her.

Enter a Meſſenger.

Cym. Where is ſhe Sir? How
Can her contempt be anſwer'd?

Meſ. Pleaſe you Sir,
Her Chambers are all lock'd, and there's no anſwer
That will be giuen to th'loud of noiſe, we make.

Qu. My Lord, when laſt I went to viſit her,
She pray'd me to excuſe her keeping cloſe,
Whereto conſtrain'd by her infirmitie,
She ſhould that duties leaue vnpaide to you
Which dayly ſhe was bound to proffer: this
She wiſh'd me to make knowne: but our great Court
Made me too blame in memory

Cym. Her doores lock'd?
Not ſeene of late? Grant Heauens, that which I
Feare, proue falſe. Ex

Qu. Sonne, I ſay, follow the King.

Clot. That man of hers, Poſthumus, her old Seruant
I haue not ſeene theſe two dayes. Ex

Qu. Go, looke after:
Poſtumio, thou that ſtand'ſt ſo for Poſthumus.
He hath a Drugge of mine: I pray, his abſence
Proceed by ſwallowing that. For he deſerues
It is a thing moſt precious. But for her,
Where is ſhe gone? Haply diſpaire hath ſeiz'd her:
Or wing'd with fervour of her loue, ſhe's flowne
To her deſir'd Poſthumus: gone ſhe is,
To death, or to diſhonor, and my end
Can make good vſe of either. Shee being downe,
I haue the placing of the Britiſh Crowne.

Enter Cloten.

How now, my Sonne?

Clot. 'Tis certaine ſhe is fled:
Go in and cheere the King, he rages, none
Dare come about him.

Qu. All the better: may
This night forefall him of the comming day. Exit Q

Clo. I loue, and hate her: for ſhe's Faire and Royall
And that ſhe hath all courtly parts more exquiſite

Then Lady, Ladies, Women, from every one
The best she hath, and she of all compounded
Out-selles them all. I love her therefore, but Disdaining me, and throwing Fauours on
The low Posthumus, slanders so her judgement,
That what's else rare, is chaun'd: and in that point
I will conclude to hate her, nay indeede,
To be reueng'd vpon her. For, when Fooles shall—

Enter Pisanio.

Who is heere? What, are you packing sirrah?
Come hither: Ah you precious Pander, Villaine,
Where is thy Lady? In a word, or else
Thou art straightway with the Fiends.

Pis. Oh, good my Lord.

Cio. Where is thy Lady? Or, by Iupiter,
I will not aske againe. Close Villaine,
Ile haue this Secret from thy heart, or rip
Thy heart to finde it. Is she with Posthumus?
From whose so many weights of baseneſſe, cannot
A dram of worth be drawne.

Pis. Alas, my Lord,
How can she be with him? When was she miss'd?
He is in Rome.

Cio. Where is she Sir? Come neerer:
No farther halting: satisfie me home,
What is become of her?

Pis. Oh, my all-worthy Lord.

Cio. All-worthy Villaine,
Discouer where thy Mistris is, at once,
At the next word: no more of worthy Lord:
Speake, or thy silence on the instant, is
Thy condemnation, and thy death.

Pis. Then Sir:
This Paper is the historie of my knowledge
Touching her flight.

Cio. Let's see't: I will pursue her
Euen to Augustus Throne.

Pis. Or this, or perish.
She's farre enough, and what he learnes by this,
May prouе his travell, not her danger.

Cio. Hmmh.

Pis. Ile writes to my Lord she's dead: Oh Imogen,
Safe mayst thou wander, safe returne agen.

Cio. Sirra, is this Letter true?

Pis. Sir, as I thinke.

Cio. It is Posthumus hand, I know't. Sirrah, if thou would'st not be a Villain, but do me true seruice: vnder-go those Imployments wherin I should haue cause to vse thee with a serious industry, that is, what villainy soere I bid thee do to performe it, directly and truely, I would thinke thee an honest man: thou should'st neither want my meanes for thy releeſe, nor my voyce for thy preferr-ment.

Pis. Well, my good Lord.

Cio. Wilt thou serue mee? For since patiently and constantly thou hast stucke to the bare Fortune of that Begger Posthumus, thou canst not in the course of gratitude, but be a diligent follower of mine. Wilt thou serue mee?

Pis. Sir, I will.

Cio. Giue mee thy hand, heere's my purse. Hast any of thy late Masters Garments in thy possession?

Pison. I haue (my Lord) at my Lodging, the same
Suite he wore, when he tooke leaue of my Ladie & Mis-tresse.

Cio. The first seruice thou doſt mee, fetch that Suite hither, let it be thy first seruice, go.

Pis. I shall my Lord. Exit.

Cio. Meet thee at Milford-Hauen: (I forgot to aske him one thing, Ile remember't anon:) even there, thou villaine Posthumus will I kill thee. I would these Garments were come. She saide vpon a time (the bitterneſſe of it, I now belch from my heart) that shee held the very Garment of Posthumus, in more respect, then my Noble and naturall person: together with the adornement of my Qualities. With that Suite vpon my backe will I ra-uish her: first kill him, and in her eyes; there shall she see my valour, which will then be a torment to his contempt.
He on the ground, my speech of insulment ended on his dead bodie, and when my Luſt hath dined (which, as I say, to vex her, I will execute in the Cloathes that she so prais'd:) to the Court Ile knock her backe, foot her home againe. She hath despis'd mee reioycingly, and Ile bee merry in my Reuenge.

Enter Pisanio.

Be those the Garments?

Pis. I, my Noble Lord.

Cio. How long is't since she went to Milford-Hauen?

Pis. She can scarse be there yet.

Cio. Bring this Apparrell to my Chamber, that is the second thing that I haue commanded thee. The third is, that thou wilt be a voluntarie Mute to my designe. Be but duttiouſ, and true preferment shall tender it selfe to thee. My Reuenge is now at Milford, would I had wings to follow it. Come, and be true. Exit

Pis. Thou bid'st me to my loſſe: for true to thee,
Were to prouе false, which I will neuer bee
To him that is most true. To Milford go,
And finde not her, whom thou pursuest. Flow, flow
You Heauenly blessings on her: This Fooles speede
Be crost with slownesse; Labour be his meede. Exit

Scena Sexta.

Enter Imogen alone.

Imo. I see a mans life is a tedious one,
I haue tyr'd my selfe: and for two nights together
Haue made the ground my bed. I should be sicke,
But that my resolution helpes me: Milford,
When from the Mountaine top, Pisanio shew'd thee,
Thou was't within a kenne. Oh Ioue, I thinke
Foundations flye the wretched: such I meane,
Where they should be releeu'd. Two Beggers told me,
I could not misse my way. Will poore Folkes lye
That haue Afflictions on them, knowing 'tis
A punishment, or Triall? Yes; no wonder,
When Rich-ones scarse tell true. To lapse in Palacesse
Is sorer, then to lye for Neede: and Falsehood
Is worse in Kings, then Beggers. My deere Lord,
Thou art one o'th'false Ones: Now I thinke on thee,
My hunger's gone; but euen before, I was
At point to sinke, for Food. But what is this?
Heere is a path too't: 'tis some sauage hold:
I were best not call; I dare not call: yet Famine
Ere clean it o're-throw Nature, makes it valiant.
Plentie, and Peace breeds Cowards: Hardneſſe euer
Of Hardinesse is Mother. Hoa? who's heere?
If any thing that's ciuill, speake: if sauage,

Take,

Take, or lend. Hoe? No answer? Then I'le enter.
Best draw my Sword; and if mine Enemy
But feare the Sword like me, he'l scarsely looke on't.
Such a Foe, good Heauens. Exit.

Scena Septima.

Enter Belarius, Guiderius, and Arviragus.

Bel. You Polidore haue prou'd best Woodman, and
Are Master of the Feast: Cadwall, and I
Will play the Cooke, and Seruant, 'tis our match:
The sweat of industry would dry, and dye
But for the end it workes too. Come, our stomackes
Will make what's homely, sauoury: Wearinesse
Can snore vpon the Flint, when resties Sloth
Findes the Downe-pillow hard. Now peace be heere,
Poore house, that keep'st thy selfe.
Gui. I am throughly weary.
Arui. I am weake with toyle, yet strong in appetite.
Gui. There is cold meat i'th'Cave. we'l breake on that
Whil'st what we haue kill'd, be Cook'd.
Bel. Stay, come not in:
But that it eates our victuailes, I should thinke
Heere were a Fairy.
Gui. What's the matter, Sir?
Bel. By Iupiter an Angell: or if not
An earthly Paragon. Behold Diuinenesse
No elder then a Boy.

Enter Imogen.

Imo. Good masters harme me not:
Before I enter'd heere, I call'd, and thought
To haue begg'd, or bought, what I haue took: good troth
I haue stolne nought, nor would not, though I had found
Gold strew'd i'th'Floore. Heere's money for my Meate,
I would haue left it on the Board, so soone
As I had made my Meale; and parted
With Pray'rs for the Prouider.
Gui. Money? Youth.
Arui. All Gold and Siluer rather turne to dust,
As 'tis no better reckon'd, but of those
Who worship durty Gods.
Imo. I see you're angry:
Know, if you kill me for my fault, I should
Haue dyed, had I not made it.
Bel. Whether bound?
Imo. To Milford-Hauen.
Bel. What's your name?
Imo. Fidele Sir: I haue a Kinsman, who
Is bound for Italy; he embark'd at Milford,
To whom being going, almost spent with hunger,
I am falne in this offence.
Bel. Prythee (faire youth)
Thinke vs no Churles: not meanere our good mindes
By this rude place we liue in. Well encounter'd,
'Tis almost night, you shall haue better cheere
Ere you depart; and thankes to stay, and eate it:
Boyes, bid him welcome.
Gui. Were you a woman, youth,
I should woo hard, but be your Groome in honesty:
I bid for you, as I do buy.
Arui. I'le make't my Comfort
He is a man, I'le loue him as my Brother:
And such a welcome as I'ld giue to him
(After long absence) such is yours. Most welcome:
Be sprightly, for you fall 'mongst Friends.
Imo. 'Mongst Friends?
If Brothers: would it had bin so, that they
Had bin my Fathers Sonnes, then had my prayse
Bin less, and so more equall ballasting
To thee Posthumus.
Bel. He wrings at some distresse.
Gui. Would I could free't.
Arui. Or I, what ere it be,
What paine it cost, what danger: Gods!
Bel. Hearke Boyes.
Imo. Great men
That had a Court no bigger then this Cave,
That did attend themselues, and had the vertue
Which their owne Conscience seal'd them (saying by
That nothing-guift of differing Multitudes
Could not out-peere these twaine. Pardon me Gods,
I'ld change my sexe to be Companion with them,
Since Leonatus false.
Bel. It shall be so:
Boyes we'l go dresse our Hunt. Faire youth comain;
Discourse is heavy, fasting: when we haue supp'd
We'l mannerly demand thee of thy Story,
So fare as thou wilt speake it.
Gui. Pray draw neere.
Arui. The Night to th'Owle,
And Morne to th'Larke less welcome.
Imo. Thankes Sir
Arui. I pray draw neere. Exeunt.

Scena Octaua.

Enter two Roman Senators, and Tribunes.

1. Sen. This is the tenor of the Emperors Writ;
That since the common men are now in Action
'Gainst the Pannonians, and Dalmatians,
And that the Legions now in Gallia, are Full weake to vndertake our Warres against
The falne-off Britaines, that we do incite
The Gentry to this business. He creates
Lucius Pro-Consull: and to you the Tribunes
For this immediate Leuy, he commands
His absolute Commission. Long liue Cæsar.
Tri. Is Lucius Generall of the Forces?
2. Sen. I.
Tri. Remaining now in Gallia?
1. Sen. With those Legions
Which I haue spoke of whereunto your leuie
Must be supplicant: the words of your Commission
Will tye you to the numbers, and the time
Of their dispatch.
Tri. We will discharge our duty. Exeunt.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter Cloten alone.

Clot I am neere to th'place where they should meet,
if Pisanio haue mapp'd it truely. How fit his Garments serue me? Why should his Mistris who was made by him that that made the Taylor, not be fit too? The rather (saving reverence of the Word) for 'tis said a Woman fitneſſe comes by fits: therein I muſt play the Workman, I dare ſpeake it to my ſelfe, for it is not Vainglorie for a man, and his Glaſſe, to confer in his owne Chamber; I meane, the Lines of my body are as well drawne as his; no leſſe young, more ſtrong, not beneath him in Fortunes, beyond him in the advantage of the time, above him in Birth, alike conversant in generall ſervices, and more remarkeable in ſingle oppoſitions; yet this imperſeverant Thing loues him in my deſpight. What Mortalitie is? Poſthumus, thy head (which now is growing vppon thy ſhoulders) ſhall within this houre be off, thy Miſtris inforced, thy Garments cut to peeces before thy face: and all this done, ſpurne her home to her Father, who may (happily) be a little angry for my ſo rough vſage: but my Mother having power of his teſtineſſe, ſhall turne all into my commendations. My Horſe is tyed vp ſafe, out Sword, and to a ſore purpoſe: Fortune put them into my hand: This is the very deſcription of their meeting place and the Fellow dares not deceive me. Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Belarius, Guiderius, Arviragus, and Imogen from the Cave.

Bel. You ſee not well: Remaine heere in the Cave,
Wee'l come to you after Hunting.
Arm. Brother, ſtay heere:
Are we not Brothers?
Imo. So man and man ſhould be,
But Clay and Clay, differs in dignitie,
Whoſe duſt is both alike. I am very ſicke.
Gui. Go you to Hunting, Ile abide with him.
Imo. So ſicke I am not, yet I am not well:
But not ſo Citizen a wanton, as
To ſeeme to dye, ere ſicke. So pleaſe you, leaue me,
Stoicke to your Iournall courſe: the breach of Cuſtome,
Is breach of all. I am ill, but your being by me
Cannot amend me. Society, is no comfort
To one not ſociable: I am not very ſicke,
Since I can reaſon of it: pray you truſt me heere,
Ile rob none but my ſelfe, and let me dye
Stoaking ſo poorely.
Gui. I loue thee: I haue ſpoke it,
How much the quantity, the waight as much,
As I do loue my Father.
Bel. What? How? how?
Arvi. If it be ſinne to ſay ſo (Sir) I yoake me
In my good Brothers fault: I know not why
I loue this youth, and I haue heard you ſay,
Loue's reaſon's, without reaſon. The Beere at doore,
And a demand who is't ſhall dye, I'd ſay
My Father, not this youth.
Bel Oh noble ſtraine!
O worthineſſe of Nature, breed of Greatneſſe!
"Cowards father Cowards, & Baſe things Syre Baſe;
"Nature hath Meale, and Bran; Contempt, and Grace.
Pardon me, I mean, yet who this ſhould bee,
Doth miracle it ſelfe, lou'd before me.
'Tis the ninth houre o'th' Morne.
Arvi. Brother, farewell.
Imo. I wiſh ye ſport.
Arvi. You health. ——— So pleaſe you Sir.
Imo. These are kinde Creatures.
Gods, what lyes I haue heard:
Our Courtiers ſay, all's ſauage, but at Court;
Experience, oh thou diſproue'ſt Report.
Th'imperious Seas breeds Monſters; for the Diſh,
Poore Tributary Rivers, as ſweet Fiſh.
I am ſicke ſtill, heart-ſicke; Pizanio,
Ile now taſte of thy Drugge.
Gui. I could not ſtirre him:
He ſaid he was gentle, but vnfortunate;
Diſhoneſtly afflicted, but yet honeſt
Arvi. Thus did he anſwer me: yet ſaid hereafter,
I might know more.
Bel. To'th'Field, to'th'Field:
Wee'l leaue you for this time, go in, and reſt.
Arvi. We'l not be long away.
Bel. Pray be not ſicke,
For you muſt be our Huſwife.
Imo. Well, or ill,
I am bound to you. Exit
Bel. And ſhal't be euer.
This youth, how ere diſtreſt, appeares he hath had Good Anceſtors.
Arvi. How Angell-like he ſings?
Gui. But has neate Cookerie?
Arvi. He cut our Roots in Characters,
And ſauce'd our Brothes, as Imo had bin ſicke,
And he her Dieter.
Arvi. Nobly he yoakes
A ſmiling, with a ſigh; as if the ſighe
Was that it was, for not being ſuch a Smile:
The Smile, mocking the Sigh, that it would flye
From ſo diuine a Temple, to commix
With windes, that Saylors raile at.
Gui. I do note,
That greefe and patience rooted in them both,
Mingle their ſpurres together.
Arvi. Grow patient,
And let the ſtinking-Elder (Greefe) vntwine
His periſhing roote, with the encreaſing Vine.
Bel. It is great morning. Come away: Who's there?
Enter Cloten.
Clo. I cannot finde those Runnagates, that Villaine
Hath mock'd me. I am faint.
Bel. Those Runnagates?
Meanes he not vs? I partly know him, 'tis
Cloten, the Sonne o'th' Queene. I feare ſome Ambuſh:
I ſaw him not theſe many yeares, and yet
I know 'tis he: We are held as Out-Lawes: Hence.
Gui. He is but one: you, and my Brother ſearch
What Companies are neere: pray you away,
Let me alone with him.
Clo. Soft, what are you
That fly me thus? Some villaine-Mountaineers?
I haue heard of ſuch. What Slaue art thou?
Gui. A thing
More ſlauiſh did I ne're, then anſwering
A Slaue without a knocke.
Clo. Thou art a Robber,
A Law-breaker, a Villaine: yeeld thee Theefe.
Gui. To who? to thee? What art thou? Haue not I
An arme as bigge as thine? A heart, as bigge:
Thy words I grant are bigger: for I weare not
My Dagger in my mouth. Say what thou art.

Why

Why I should yeild to thee?
Clot. Thou Villaine base,
Know'st me not by my Cloathes?
Gui. No, nor thy Tailor, Rascall:
Who is thy Grandfather? He made thoſe cloathes,
Which (as it seemes) make thee.
Clo. Thou precious Varlet,
My Taylor made them not.
Gui. Hence then, and thanke
The man that gave them thee. Thou art some Foole,
I am loath to beate thee.
Clot. Thou infinitious Theeſt,
Heare but my name, and tremble.
Gui. What's thy name?
Clo. Cloten, thou Villaine.
Gui. Cloten, thou double Villaine be thy name,
I cannot tremble at it, were it Toad, or Adder, Spider,
'Twould moue me sooner.
Clot. To thy further feare,
Nay, to thy more Confuſion, thou ſhalt know
I am Sonne to th'Queene.
Gui. I am sorry for't: not ſeeming
So worthy as thy Birth.
Clot. Art not afeard?
Gui. Those that I reverence, those I feare: the Wiſe
At Fooles I laugh: not feare them.
Clot. Dye the death:
When I have ſlaine thee with my proper hand,
I'le follow those that even now fled hence:
And on the Gems of Lads-Towne ſet your heads:
Yeild Ruſtiche Mountaineer. Fight and Exeunt.
Enter Belarius and Arviragus.
Bel. No Companie's abroad?
Arui. None in the world: you did miſtake him ſure.
Bel. I cannot tell: Long is it ſince I ſaw him,
But Time hath nothing blurr'd those lines of Feature
Which then he wore: the ſnatches in his voice,
And burſt of ſpeaking were as his: I am abſolute
'Twas very Cloten.
Arui. In this place we left them;
I wiſh my Brother make good time with him,
You ſay he is ſo fell.
Bel. Being ſcarce made vp,
I meane to man; he had not apprehenſion
Of roaring terrors: For defect of iudgement
Is oft the cauſe of Feare.
Enter Guiderius.
But ſee thy Brother.
Gui. This Cloten was a Foole, an empty purſe,
There was no money in't: Not Hercules
Could haue knock'd out his Braines, for he had none:
Yet I not doing this, the Foole had borne
My head, as I do his.
Bel. What haſt thou done?
Gui. I am perfect what: cut off one Cloten's head,
Sonne to the Queene (after his owne report)
Who call'd me Traitor, Mountaineer, and ſwore
With his owne ſingle hand he'd take vs in,
Diſplace our heads, where (thanks the Gods) they grow
And ſet them on Lads-Towne.
Bel. We are all vndone.
Gui. Why, worthy Father, what haue we to loſe,
But that he ſwore to take, our Liues? the Law
Protects not vs, then why ſhould we be tender,
To let an arrogant peece of fleſh threat vs?
Play Iudge, and Executioner, all himſelfe?
For we do fearre the Law. What company
Diſcouer you abroad?
Bel. No ſingle ſoule
Can we ſet eye on: but in all ſafe reaſon
He muſt haue ſome Attendants. Though his Honor
Was nothing but mutation, I, and that
From one bad thing to worſe: Not Frenzie,
Not abſolute madneſſe could ſo farre haue raw'd
To bring him heare alone: although perhaps
It may be heard at Court, that ſuch as we
Cave heere, hunt heere, are Out-lawes, and in time
May make ſome ſtronger head, the which he hearing,
(As it is like him) might breake out, and ſwearre
He'd ſeach vs in, yet in't not probable
To come alone, either he ſo vndertaking,
Or they ſo ſuffering: then on good ground we ſtand,
If we do feare this Body hath a taile
More perilous then the head.
Arui. Let Ord'nance
Come as the Gods fore-ſay it: howſoeure,
My Brother hath done well.
Bel. I had no minde
To hunt this day: The Boy Fidele ſickneſſe,
Did make my way long forth.
Gui. With his owne Sword,
Which he did weare againſt my throat, I have taeu
His head from him: I'le throw't into the Cauſe
Behinde our Roche, and let it to the Sea,
And tell the Fiſhes, he's the Queenes Sonne, Cloten,
That's all I reake. Exit.
Bel. I feare 'twill be reuenge'd:
Would (Paladore) thou had'ſt not done't: though valour
Becomes thee well enough.
Arui. Would I had done't:
So the Reuenge alone purſu'de me: Paladore
I loue thee brotherly, but eaſy much
Thou haſt robb'd me of this deed: I would Reuenge
That poſſible ſtrength might meet, would ſeek vs through
And put vs to our anſwer.
Bel. Well, 'tis done:
We'l hunt no more to day, nor ſeeke for danger
Where there's no profit. I prythee to our Roche,
You and Fidele play the Cookes: I'le ſtay
Till hafty Paladore returne, and bring him
To dinner preſently.
Arui. Poore ſicke Fidele.
I'le willingly to him, to gaine his colour,
I'd lee a periſh of ſuch *Cloten*s blood,
And praiſe my ſelfe for charity. Exit.
Bel. Oh thou Goddeſſe,
Thou diuine Nature; thou thy ſelfe thou blaſt'ſt
In theſe two Princely Boyes: they are as gentle
As Zephires blowing below the Violet,
Not wagging his ſweet head; and yet, as rough
(Their Royall blood enchaf'd) as the rud'ſt winde,
That by the top doth take the Mountaine Pine,
And make him ſtoope to th'Vale. 'Tis wonder
That an inuiſible inſtinct ſhould frame them
To Royalty vnlearn'd, Honor vnteaught,
Civility not ſeene from other: valour
That wildely growes in them, but yeilds a crop
As if it had beene ſow'd: yet ſtill it's ſtrange
What Cloten being heere to vs portends,
Or what his death will bring vs.
Enter Guiderius.
Gui. Where's my Brother?

have sent Cloten Clot-pole downe the stream,
n Embassie to his Mother; his Bodin's hostage
For his returne. Solemne Musick.

Bel. My ingenuous Instrument,
Hearke Polidore) it sounds: but what occasion
Hath Cadwal now to give it motion? Hearke.

Gui. Is he at home?

Bel. He went hence even now.

Gui. What does he meane?
Since death of my deer'st Mother
It did not speake before. All solemne things
Should answer solemne Accidents. The matter?
Triumphs for nothing, and lamenting Toyes,
Is jollity for Apes, and greefe for Boyes.
Is Cadwall mad?

Enter Arviragus, with Imogen dead, bearing her in his Armes.

Bel. Looke, heere he comes,
And brings the dire occasion in his Armes,
Of what we blame him for.

Arvi. The Bird is dead
That we have made so much on. I had rather
Have skipt from sixteene yeares of Age, to sixty:
To have turn'd my leaping time into a Crutch,
Then have seene this.

Gui. Oh sweetest, fayrest Lilly:
My Brother weares thee not the one halfe so well,
As when thou grew'st thy selfe.

Bel. Oh Melancholly,
Who ever yet could sound thy bottome? Finde
The Ooze, to shew what Coast thy sluggish care
Might'st easiliest harbour in. Thou blessed thing,
Iove knowes what man thou might'st have made: but I,
Thou dyed'st a most rare Boy, of Melancholly
How found you him?

Arvi. Starke, as you see:
Thus smiling, as some Fly had tickled slumber,
Not as death's dart, being laugh'd at: his right Cheeke
Reposing on a Cushion.

Gui. Where?

Arvi. O'th'floore:
His armes thus leagu'd, I thought he slept, and put
My clowted Brogues from off my feete, whose rudenesse
Answer'd my steps too loud.

Gui. Why, he but sleepes:
If he be gone, he'l make his Grave, a Bed:
With female Fayries will his Tombe be haunted,
And Wormes will not come to thee.

Arvi. With fayrest Flowers
Whil'st Sommer lasts, and I live heere, Fidele,
I will peesen thee (sad grave: thou shalt not lacke
The Flower that's like thy face. Pale-Primrose, nor
The azur'd Hare-bell, like thy Veines: no, nor
The leafe of Eglantine, whom not to slander,
Out-sweetned not thy breath: the Raddocke would
With Charitable bill (Oh bill sore shaming
Those rich-left-heyres, that let their Fathers lye
Without a Monument) bring thee all this,
Yea, and furr'd Mosse besides. When Flowers are none
To winter-ground thy Corse———

Gui. Prythee have done,
And do not play in Wench-like words with that
Which is so serious. Let vs bury him,
And not protract with admiration, what
Is now due debt. To'th' grave.

Arvi. Say, where shall's lay him?

Gui. By good Euriphile, our Mother.

Arvi. Be't so:
And let vs (Polidore) though now our voyces
Have got the mannish cracke, sing him to'th' ground
As once to our Mother: vse like noce, and voices,
Same that Euriphile, must be Fidele.

Gui. Cadwall,
I cannot sing: I'le weepe, and word it with thee;
For Notes of sorrow, out of tune, are worse
Then Priests, and Phanes that lye.

Arvi. We'l speake it then.

Bel. Great greefes I see med'cine the lesse: For Cloten
Is quite forgot. He was a Queenes Sonne, Boyes,
And though he came our Enemy, remember
He was paid for that: though meane, and mighty rotting
Together have one dust, yet Reverence
(That Angell of the world) doth make distinction
Of place 'tweene high, and low. Our Foe was Princely,
And though you tooke his life, as being our Foe,
Yet bury him, as a Prince.

Gui. Pray you fetch him hither,
Thersites body is as good as Aiax,
When neyther are alive.

Arvi. If you'l go fetch him,
We'l say our Song the whil'st: Brother begin.

Gui. Nay Cadwall, we must lay his head to th' East,
My Father hath a reason for't.

Arvi. 'Tis true.

Gui. Come on then, and remove him.

Arvi. So, begin.

SONG.

Guid. Feare no more the heate o'th' Sun,
Nor the furious Winter's rages,
Thou thy worldly task hast done,
Home art gon, and ta'ne thy wages.
Golden Lads, and Girles all must,
As Chimney-Sweepers come to dust.

Arvi. Feare no more the frowne o'th' Great,
Thou art past the Tyrants stroke,
Care no more to clothe, and eate,
To thee the Reede is as the Oake:
The Scepter, Learning, Physicke must,
All follow this, and come to dust.

Guid. Feare no more the Lightning flash.

Arvi. Nor th'all-dreaded Thunder-stone.

Gui. Feare not Slander, Censure rash.

Arvi. Thou hast finish'd Joy, and mone.

Both. All Lovers, young, all Lovers must,
Consigne to thee, and come to dust.

Guid. No Exorciser harme thee,

Arvi. Nor no witch-craft charme thee.

Guid. Ghost vnlaid forbeare thee.

Arvi. Nothing ill come neere thee.

Both. Quiet consumation have,
And renowned be thy grave.

Enter Belarius with the body of Cloten.

Gui. We have done our obsequies:
Come lay him downe.

Bel. Heere's a few Flowres, but 'bout midnight more:
The herbes that have on them cold dew o'th' night
Are strewings fit'st for Graves: vpon their Faces.
You were as Flowres, now wither'd: even so
These Herbelets shall, which we vpon you strew.
Come on, away, apart vpon our knees:
The ground that gave them first, ha's them againe:
Their pleasures here are past, so are their paine. Exeunt.

Imogen awakes.

Yes Sir, to Milford-Haven, which is the way?
I thanke you: by yond bush? pray how farre thether?
'Ods pittikins: can it be six mile yet?
I have gone all night: 'Faith, I'le lye downe, and sleepe.
But soft; no Bedfellow? Oh Gods, and Goddesses!
These Flowers are like the pleasures of the World;
This bloody man the care on't. I hope I dreame:
For so I thought I was a Cave-keeper,
And Cooke to honest Creatures. But 'tis not so:
'Twas but a bolt of nothing, shot at nothing,
Which the Braine makes of Fumes. Our very eyes,
Are sometimes like our Iudgements, blinde. Good faith
I tremble still with feare: but if there be
Yet left in Heaven, as small a drop of pittie
As a Wrens eye; fear'd Gods, a part of it.
The Dreame's heere still: even when I wake it is Without me, as within me: not imagin'd, felt.
A headless man? The Garments of Posthumus?
I know the shape of's Legge: this is his Hand:
His Foote Mercuriall: his martiall Thigh
The brawnes of Hercules: but his Iouiall face——
Murther in heaven? How? 'tis gone. Pisanio,
All Curses madded Hecuba gaue the Greekes,
And mine to boot, be darted on thee: thou
Conspir'd with that Irregulous diuell Cloten,
Hath heere cut-on my Lord. To write, and read,
Be henceforth treacherous. Damn'd Pisanio,
Hath with his forged Letters (damn'd Pisanio)
From this most bravest vessell of the world
Struke the maine top! Oh Posthumus, alas,
Where is thy head? where's that? Aye me! where's that?
Pisanio might haue kill'd thee at the heare,
And left this head on. How should this be, Pisanio?
'Tis be, and Cloten: Malice, and Lucre in them
Haue laid this Woe heere. Oh 'tis pregnant, pregnant!
The Drugge he gaue me, which hee said was precious
And Cordiall to me, haue I not found it
Murd'rous to th'Senses? That confirmes it home:
This is Pisanio's deede, and Cloten: Oh!
Give colour to my pale cheeke with thy blood,
That we the horrider may seeme to those
Which chance to finde vs. Oh, my Lord! my Lord!

Enter Lucius, Captaines, and a Soothsayer.

Cap. To them, the Legions garrison'd in Gallia
After your will, haue crost the Sea, attending
You heere at Milford-Haven, with your Shippes:
They are heere in readinesse.

Luc. But what from Rome?

Cap. The Senate hath stirr'd vp the Confiners,
And Gentlemen of Italy, most willing Spirits,
That promise Noble Service: and they come
Vnder the Conduct of bold Iachimo,
Syenna's Brother.

Luc. When expect you them?

Cap. With the next benefit o'th'winde.

Luc. This forwardnesse
Makes our hopes faire. Command our present numbers
Be mustter'd: bid the Captaines looke too't. Now Sir,
What haue you dream'd of late of this warres purpose.

Soth. Last night the very Gods shew'd me a vision
(I fast, and pray'd for their Intelligence) thus:
I saw Ioues Bird, the Roman Eagle wing'd
From the spungy South, to this part of the West,
There vanish'd in the Sun-beames, which portends
(Vnlesse my sinnes abuse my Diuination)
Successe to th'Roman hoast.

Luc. Dreame often so,
And never false. Soft hoa, what trunckie is heere?
Without his top? The ruine speakes, that sometime
It was a worth by building. How? a Page?
Or dead, or sleeping on him? But dead rather:
For Nature doth abhorre to make his bed
With the defunct, or sleepe vpon the dead.
Let's see the Boyes face.

Cap. Hee's alive my Lord.

Luc. Hee'l thee inforce vs of this body: Young man,
Informe vs of thy Fortunes, for it seemes
They crave to be demanded: who is this Thou mak'st thy bloody Pillow? Or who was he
That (otherwise then noble Nature did)
Hath alter'd that good Picture? What's thy interest
In this sad wracke? How came't? Who is't?
What art thou?

Imo. I am nothing; or if not,
Nothing to be were better: This was my Master,
A very valiant Britaine, and a good,
That heere by Mountaineers lyes slaine: Alas,
There is no more such Masters: I may wander
From East to Occident, cry out for Service,
Try many, all good: serue truly: neuer
Finde such another Master.

Luc. 'Lacke, good youth:
Thou mou'st no lesse with thy complaining, than
Thy Master in bleeding: say his name, good Friend.

Imo. Richard du Champ: If I do lye, and do
No harme by it, though the Gods heare, I hope
They'l pardon it. Say you Sir?

Luc. Thy name?

Imo. Fidele Sir.

Luc. Thou doo'st approue thy selfe the very same:
Thy Name well fits thy Faith; thy Faith, thy Name:
Wilt take thy chance with me? I will not say
Thou shalt be so well master'd, but be sure
No lesse belou'd. The Romane Emperors Letters
Sent by a Consull to me, should not sooner
Then thine owne worth preferre thee: Go with me.

Imo. Ile follow Sir. But first, and't please the Gods,
Ile hide my Master from the Flies, as deepe
As these poore Pickaxes can digge: and when
With wild wood-leaues & weeds, I ha' strew'd his grave
And on it said a Century of prayers
(Such as I can) twice o're, Ile weepe, and sighs,
And leaving so his service, follow you,
So please you entertaine mee.

Luc. I good youth,
And rather Father thee, than Master thee: My Friends,
The Boy hath taught vs manly duties: Let vs
Finde out the prettiest Daisied-Plot we can,
And make him with our Pikes and Partizans
A Grave: Come, Arme him: Boy hee's preferr'd
By thee, to vs, and he shall be interr'd
As Souldiers can. Be cheerefull; wipe thine eyes,
Some Falles are means the happier to arise. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Cymbeline, Lords, and Pisanio.

Cym. Again: and bring me word how 'tis with her,
A Seruant with this absence of her Sonne;

A madnesse, of which her life's in danger: Heauens,
How deeply you at once do touch me. Imogen,
The great part of my comfort, gone: My Queene
Vpon a desperate bed, and in a time
When fearefull Wartes point at me: Her Sonne gone,
So needfull for this present? It strikes me, past
The hope of comfort. But for thee, Fellow,
Who needs must know of her departure, and
Dost seeme so ignorant, we'l enforce it from thee
By a sharpe Torture.

Pis. Sir, my life is yours,
I humbly set it at your will: But for my Mistris,
I nothing know where she remaines: why gone,
Nor when she purposes returne. Beseech your Highnes,
Hold me your loyall Seruant.

Lord. Good my Liege,
The day that she was missing, he was heere;
I dare be bound he's true, and shall performe
All parts of his subiection loyally. For Cloten,
There wants no diligence in seeking him,
And will no doubt be found.

Cym. The time is troublesome:
We'l slip you for a season, but our iealousie
Do's yet depend.

Lord. So please your Maiesty,
The Romaine Legions, all from Gallia drawne,
Are landed on your Coast, with a supply
Of Romaine Gentlemen, by the Senate sent.

Cym. Now for the Counsaile of my Son and Queen,
I am amaz'd with matter.

Lord. Good my Liege,
Your preparation can affront no lesse (ready:
Then what you heare of. Come more, for more you're
The want is, but to put those Powres in motion,
That long to moue.

Cym. I thanke you: let's withdraw
And meete the Time, as it seekes vs. We feare not What can from Italy annoy vs, but
We grieue at chances heere. Away. Exeunt

Pos. I heard no Letter from my Master, since
I wrote him Imogen was slaine. 'Tis strange:
Nor heare I from my Mistris, who did promise
To yeeld me often tydings. Neither know I
What is betide to Cloten, but remaine
Perplext in all. The Heauens still must worke:
Wherein I am false, I am honest: not true, to be true.
These present warres shall finde I lose my Country,
Euen to the note o'th'King, or I'le fall in them:
All other doubts, by time let them be clear'd,
Fortune brings in some Boats, that are not steer'd. Exit.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Belarius, Guiderius, & Arviragus.

Gui. The noyse is round about vs.

Bel. Let vs from it.

Arm. What pleasure Sir, we finde in life, so locke it
From Action, and Aduenture.

Gui. Nay, what hope
Haue we in hiding vs? This way the Romaines
Must, or for Britaines slay vs or receiue vs
For barbarous and vnnaturall Rebels
During their vse, and slay vs after.

Bel. Sonnes,
We'l higher to the Mountaines, there secure vs.
To the Kings party there's no going: newnesse
Of Cloten death (we being not knowne, nor mis'd
Among the Bands) may driue vs to a rendor
Where we haue liu'd, and so extort from's that
Which we haue done, whose answer would be death
Drawne on with Torture.

Gui. This is (Sir) a doubt
In such a time, nothing becoming you,
Nor satisfying vs.

Arui. It is not likely,
That when they heare their Roman horses neigh,
Behold their quarter'd Fires; haue both their eyes
And eares so cloyd importantly as now,
That they will waste their time vpon our note,
To know from whence we are.

Bel. Oh, I am knowne
Of many in the Army: Many yeeres
(Though Cloten then but young) you see, not wore him
From my remembrance. And besides, the King
Hath not deseru'd my Seruice, nor your Loues,
Who finde in my Exile, the want of Breeding;
The certainty of this heard life, aye hopelesse
To haue the courtesie your Cradle promis'd,
But to be still hot Summers Tanlings, and
The shrinking Slaues of Winter.

Gui. Then be so,
Better to cease to be. Pray Sir, to'th'Army:
I, and my Brother are not knowne; your selfe
So out of thought, and thereto so ouer-growne,
Cannot be question'd.

Arm. By this Sunne that shines
I'le thither: What thing is't, that I neuer
Did see man dye, scarce ever look'd on blood,
But that of Coward Hares, hot Goats, and Venison?
Never bestrid a Horse saue one, that had
A Rider like my selfe, who ne're wore Rowell,
Nor Iron on his heele? I am asham'd
To looke vpon the holy Sunne, to haue
The benefit of his blest Beames, remaining
So long a poore vnknowne.

Gui. By heauens I'le go,
If you will bless me Sir, and giue me leaue,
I'le take the better care, but if you will not,
The hazard therefore due fall on me, by
The hands of Romaines.

Arm. So say I, Amen.

Bel. No reason I (since of your lines you set)
So slight a valuation) should reserue
My crack'd one to more care. Haue with you Boyes:
If in your Country warres you chance to dye,
That is my Bed too (Lads) and there I'le lye.
Lead, lead; the time seems long, their blood thinks scorn
Till it fye out, and shew them Princes borne. Exeunt.

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter Posthumus alone.

Post. Yes bloody cloth, I'le keep thee: for I am wish
Thou should'st be colour'd thus. You married ones,
If each of you should take this course, how many
Must murther Wiues much better than themselues

For wrying but a little? Oh Pisanio,
Every good Seruant do's not all Commands:
No Bond, but to do iust ones. Gods, if you
Should haue 'tane vengeance on my faults, I never
Had liu'd to put on this: so had you saued
The noble Imogen, to repent, and strooke
Me (wretch) more worth your Vengeance. But ch'ecke,
You snatch some hence for little faults; that's loue
To haue them fall no more: you some permit
To second illes with illes, each elder worse,
And make them dread it, to the doers thrift.
But Imogen is your owne, do your best willes,
And make me blest to obey. I am brought hither
Amoung th'Italian Gentry, and to fight
Against my Ladies Kingdome: 'Tis enough
That (Britaine) I haue kill'd thy Mistris: Peace,
I'le giue no wound to thee: therefore good Heauens,
Heare patiently my purpose. I'le disrobe me
Of these Italian weedes, and suite my selfe
As do's a Britaine Peasant: so I'le fight
Against the part I come with: so I'le dye
For thee (O Imogen) even for whom my life
Is every breath, a death: and thus, vnknowne,
Pitied, nor hated, to the face of perill
My selfe I'le dedicate. Let me make men know
More valour in me, then my habits show.
Gods, put the strength o'th'Leonati in me:
To shame the guise o'th'world, I will begin,
The fashion less without, and more within. Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Lucius, Iachimo, and the Romane Army at one doore: and the Britaine Army at another: Leonatus Posthumus following it, like a poore Souldier. They march over, and go out. Then enter again in Skirmish Iachimo and Posthumus: he vanquisheth and disarmeth Iachimo, and then leaues him.

Ia. The heauinesse and guilt within my bosome,
Takes off my manhood: I haue belyed a Lady,
The Princesse of this Country; and the ayre on't
Reuengingly enfeebles me, or could this Carle,
A very drudge of Natures, haue subdu'de me
In my profession? Knighthoods, and Honors borne
As I weare mine) are taken but of scorne.
If that thy Gentry (Britaine) go before
This Lout, as he exceeds our Lords, the oddes
Is, that we scarse are men, and you are Goddes. Exit.

The Battaile continues, the Britaines fly, Cymbeline is taken: Then enter to his rescue, Bellarius, Guiderius, and Arviragus.

Bel. Stand, stand, we haue th'aduantage of the ground,
The Lane is guarded: Nothing sauers vs, but
The villany of our feares.

Gui. Arm. Stand, stand, and fight.

Enter Posthumus, and seconds the Britaines. They Rescue Cymbeline, and Exeunt.

Then enter Lucius, Iachimo, and Imogen.

Luc. Away boy from the Troopes, and saue thy selfe:
For friends kill friends, and the disorder's such
As warre were hood-wink'd.

Ia. Tis their fresh supplies.

Luc. It is a day turn'd strangely: or bestowes
Let's re-inforce, or fly. Exeunt

Scena Tertia.

Enter Posthumus, and a Britaine Lord.

Lor. Cam'st thou from where they made the stand?

Pos. I did.
Though you it seemes come from the Fliers?

Lo. I did.

Pos. No blame be to you Sir, for all was lost,
But that the Heauens fought: the King himselfe
Of his wings destitute, the Army broken,
And but the backes of Britaines seene; all flying
Through a strait Lane, the Enemy full-hearted,
Lolling the Tongue with slaughtering: hauing work'n
More plentifull, then Tooles to doo't: strooke dead vnto
Some mortally, some slightly touch'd, some falling
Merely through feare, that the strait passe was dammed
With deadmen, hurt behinde, and Cowards liuing
To dye with length'ned shame.

Lo. Where was this Lane?

Pos. Close by the battell, ditch'd, & wall'd with sticks,
Which gaue aduantage to an ancient Souldiour
(An honest one I warrant) who deseru'd
So long a breeding, as his white beard came to,
In doing this for's Country. Athwart the Lane,
He, with two striplings (Lads more like to run
The Country base, then to commit such slaughter,
With faces fit for Masks, or rather fayrer
Then those for preseruation cas'd, or shame)
Made good the passage, cryed to those that fled.
Our Britaines hearts dye flying, not our men,
To darknesse fleete soules that fye backwards; stand,
Or we are Romanes, and will giue you that
Like beasts, which you shun beastly, and may saue
But to looke backe in frowne: Stand, stand. These three,
Three thousand confident, in act as many:
For three performers are the File, when all
The rest do nothing. With this word stand, stand,
Accomodated by the Place; more Chearming
With their owne Nobleness, which could haue turn'd
A Destitie, to a Lance, guilded pale looks;
Part shame, part spirit renew'd, that some turn'd coward
But by example (Oh a sinne in Warre,
Dam'd in the first beginners) gan to looke
The way that they did, and to grin like Lyons
Vpon the Pikes o'th'Hunters. Then begunne
A stop i'th'Chaser; a Retyre: Anon
A Rout, confusion thicke: forthwith they flye
Chickens, the way which they stoope Eagles: Slaues
The strides the Victors made: and now our Cowards
Like Fragments in hard Voyages became
The life o'th'need: hauing found the backe doore open
Of the vnguarded hearts: heauens, how they wound,
Some slaine before, some dying; some their Friends
Ouer-borne i'th'former wave, ten chac'd by one,
Are now each one the slaughter-man of twenty:
Those that would dye, or ere resist, are grown
The mortall bugs o'th'Field.

Lord. This was strange chance:
A narrow Lane, an old man, and two Boyes.
Post. Nay, do not wonder at it: you are made
Rather to wonder at the things you heare,
Then to worke any. Will you Rime vpon't,
And vent it for a Mock'ry? Heere is one:
"Two Boyes, an Oldman (twice a Boy) a Lane,
"Preserv'd the Britaines, was the Romans bane.
Lord. Nay, be not angry Sir.
Post. Lackie, to what end?
Who dares not stand his Foe, I'le be his Friend;
For if he'l do, as he is made to doo,
I know he'l quickly fire my friendship too.
You haue put me into Rime.
Lord. Farewell, you're angry. Exit.
Post. Still going? This is a Lord: Oh Noble misery
To be i'th'Field, and seldo what newes of me:
To day, how many would haue given their Honours
To haue saw'd their Carkasses? I coake heele to doo't,
And yet dyed too. I, in mine owne woe charm'd
Could not finde death, where I did heare him groane,
Nor feele him where he strooke. Being an vgly Monster,
'Tis strange he hides him in fresh Cups, soft Beds,
Sweet woods; or hath more ministers then we
That draw his Inuisis i'th'War. Well I will finde him:
For being now a Fauourer to the Britaine,
No more a Brittaine, I haue seiu'd against
The part I came in. Fight I will no more,
But yeeld me to the veriest Hinde, that shall Once touch my shoulder. Great the slaughter is Heere made by'th'Romans; great the Answer be Brittaines must take. For me, my Ransome's death,
On eyther side I come to spend my breath;
Which neyther heere I'le keepe, nor beare agen,
But end it by some means for Imogen.
Enter two Captaines, and Souldiers.
1 Great Iupiter be prais'd, Lucius is taken,
'Tis thought the old man, and his sonnes, were Angels.
2 There was a fourth man, in a silly habit,
That gaue th'Affront with them.
1 So 'tis reported:
But none of 'em can be found. Stand, who's there?
Post. A Roman,
Who had not now beene drooping heere, if Seconds
Had answer'd him.
2 Lay hands on him: a Dogge,
A legge of Rome shall not returne to tell
What Crows haue pecke them heere: he bragg his service
As if he were of note: bring him to th'King.
Enter Cymbeline, Belarius, Guiderius, Arviragus Pisanio, and Romans Captiues. The Captaines present Posthumus to Cymbeline, who delivers him over to a Gaoler.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Posthumus, and Gaoler.
Gao. You shall not now be stolne,
You haue locks vpon you:
So graze, as you finde Pasture.
2. Gao. I, or a stomacke.
Post. Most welcome bondage; for thou art a way
(I think) to liberty: yet am I better
Then one that's sicke o'th'Gowt, since he had rather Groane so in perpetuity, then be cur'd
By th'sure Physician, Death; who is the key
T'vnbarre these Locks. My Conscience, thou art fetter'd
More then my shanks, & wrists; you good Gods giue me
The penitent Instrument to picke that Bolt,
Then free for euer. Is't enough I am sorry?
So Children temporall Fathers do appease;
Gods are more full of mercy. Must I repeate,
I cannot do it better then in Gyues,
Desir'd, more then constrain'd, to satisfie
If of my Freedome 'tis the maine part, take
No stricter vnder of me, then my All.
I know you are more clement than vilde men,
Who of their broken Debtors take a third,
A fift, a tenth, letting them thriue againe
On their abstinence; that's not my desire.
For Imogen dearer life, take mine, and though
'Tis not so dearer, yet 'tis a life; you coyn'd it,
'Twaine man, and man, they weigh not every stampe:
Though light, take Pieces for the figure sake.
(You rather) mine being yours: and so great Powers,
If you will take this Audit, take this life,
And cancell those cold Bonds. Oh Imogen,
I'le speake to thee in silence.

Solemne Musicke. Enter (as in an Apparition) Sicilius Leonatus, Father to Posthumus, an old man, attyred like a warriour, leading in his hand an ancient Matron (his wife, & Mother to Posthumus) with Musicke before them. Then after other Musicke follows the two young Leonati (Brothers to Posthumus) with wounds as they died in the warrs. They circle Posthumus round as he lies sleeping.

Sicil. No more thou Thunder-Master
shew thy spight on Mortall Flies:
With Mars fall out with Iuno chide, that thy Adulteries
Rates, and Reuenges.
Hath my poore Boy done aught but well,
whose face I never saw:
I dy'de whil'st in the Wombe he staide,
attending Nutures Law.
Whose Father then (as men report, thou Orphanes Father art)
Thou should'st haue bin, and shielded him,
from this earth-vexing smart.
Math. Lucina lent not me her ayde,
but tooke me in my Throwes,
That from me was Posthumus ripe,
came crying 'mong'st his Foes.
A thing of pitty.
Sicil. Great Nature like his Ancestrie, moulded the stuffe so faire:
That he d serv'd the praise o'th'World,
as great Sirlisus heyre.
1. Bro. When once he was mature for man,
in Britaine where was hee
That could stand vp his parallell?
Or fruitfull obiect bee?
In eye of Imogen, that best could deeme
his dignitie.
Mth. With Marriage wherefore was he mocke to be exil'd, and throwne
From Leonati Seate, and cast from her,
his dearest one:
Sweere Imogen?
Sic. Why did you suffer Iachimo, slight thing of Italy

o taint his Nobler heart & braine, with needlesse iealousy, and to become the geeke and scorne o'th'others villany?

2 Bro. For this, from stiller Seats we came,
our Parents, and vs twaine,
That striking in our Countries cause,
fell bravely, and were slaine,
Our Fealty, & Tenantius right, with Honor to maintaine.

1 Bro. Like hardiment Posthumus hath to Cymbeline perform'd:
Then Iupiter, ♃ King of Gods, why hast ♃ thus adhorrn'd
The Graces for his Merits due, being all to dolours turn'd?

Sicil. Thy Christall window ope; looke, looke out, no longer exercise
Vpon a valiant Race, thy harsh, and potent injuries:

Moth. Since (Iupiter) our Son is good,
take off his miseries.

Sicil. Peepe through thy Marble Mansion, helpe, or we poore Ghosts will cry
To'th'shining Synod of the rest, against thy Deity.

Brothers. Helpe (Iupiter) or we appeale, and from thy iustice flye.

Iupiter descends in Thunder and Lightning, sitting vppon an Eagle. he throwes a Thunder-bolt. The Ghosts fall on their knees.

Iupiter. No more you petty Spirits of Region low
Offend our hearing: hush. How dare you Ghosts
Accuse the Thunderer, whose Bolt (you know)
Sky-planted, batters all rebelling Coasts.
Poore shadowes of Elizium, hence, and rest
Vpon your never-withering banks of Flowers.
Be not with mortall accidents oppreſt,
No care of yours it is, you know 'tis ours.
Whom best I loue, I crosse; to make my guiſt
The more delay'd, delighted. Be content,
Your low-laide Sonne, our Godhead will vplift:
His Comforts thriue, his Trials well are spent:
Our louiall Starre reign'd at his Birth, and in
Our Temple was he married: Rise, and fade,
He shall be Lord of Lady Imogen,
And happier much by his Affliction made.
This Tablet lay vpon his Breſt, wherein
Our pleasure, his full Fortune, doth confine,
And so away: no farther with your dinne
Expreſſe Impatience, least you stirre vp mine:
Mount Eagle, to my Palace Christalline. Ascends

Sicil. He came in Thunder, his Celestiall breath
Was sulphurous to smell: the holy Eagle
Stoop'd, as to foote vs: his Ascension is
More sweet then our blest Fields: his Royall Bird
Prunes the immortall wing, and cloyes his Beake,
As when his God is pleas'd.

All. Thankes Iupiter.

Sic. The Marble Pauement closes, he is enter'd
His radiant Roofe: Away, and to be blest
Let vs with care performe his great behest. Vanish

Poſt. Sleepe, thou hast bin a Grandfire, and begot
A Father to me: and thou hast created
A Mother, and two Brothers. But (oh scorne)
Gone, they went hence so soone as they were borne:
And so I am awake. Poore Wretches, that depend
On Greatneſſe, Fauour; Dreame as I haue done,
Wake, and finde nothing. But (alas) I swerue:
Many Dreame not to finde, neither deserue,
And yet are steep'd in Fauours; so am I
That haue this Golden chance, and know not why:
What Fayeries haunt this ground? A Book? Oh rare one,
Be not, as is our fangled world, a Garment
Nobler than that it couers. Let thy effects
So follow, to be most valide as our Courtiers,
As good, as promise.

Reades.

W*Hen as a Lyons whelpe, shall to himſelfe vnknown, without ſeeking finde, and be embrac'd by a prauncing Ayre: And when from a ſtately Cedar ſhall be lopp'd branches, which being dead many yeares, ſhall after reuiue, be againe ſpreade the old Stocke, and freshly grow, then ſhall Poſthumus end his miseries, Britaine be fortunate, and flourish in Peace and Plenty.*

'Tis ſtill a Dreame: or elſe ſuch ſtuffe as Madmen
Tongue, and braine not: either both, or nothing,
Or ſenſeleſſe ſpeaking, or a ſpeaking ſuch
As ſenſe cannot vnrye. Be what it is,
The Action of my life is like it, which I'lle keepe
If but for ſimpathy.

Enter Gaoler.

Gao. Come Sir, are you ready for death?

Poſt. Over-roaſted rather: ready long ago.

Gao. Hanging is the word, Sir, if you bee ready for that, you are well Cook'd.

Poſt. So ſi I prove a good repaſt to the Spectators, the diſh payes the ſhot.

Gao. A heavy reckoning for you Sir: But the comfort is you ſhall be called to no more payments, fear no more Tauerne Bills, which are often the ſadneſſe of parting, as the procuring of mirth: you come in faint for want of meate, depart reeling with too much drinke: ſorrie that you haue payed too much, and ſorry that you are paid too much: Purſe and Braine, both empty: the Braine the heavier, for being too light; the Purſe too light, being drawne of heauineſſe. Oh, of this contradiction you ſhall now be quit: Oh the charity of a penny Cord, it ſumme vp thoſands in a trice: you haue no true Debtor, and Creditor but it: of what's paſt, is, and to come, the discharge: your necke (Sir) is Pen, Booke, and Counters; ſo the Acquittance followes.

Poſt. I am merrier to dye, then art to liue.

Gao. Indeed Sir, he that ſleepes, feeles not the Toothache: but a man that were to ſleepe your ſleepe, and a Hangman to helpe him to bed, I think he would change places with his Officer: for, look you Sir, you know not which way you ſhall go.

Poſt. Yes indeed do I, fellow.

Gao. Your death has eyes in's head then: I haue not ſeene him ſo pictur'd: you muſt either bee directed by ſome that take vpon them to know, or to take vpon your ſelfe that which I am ſure you do not know, or ſtumble after-enquiry on your owne peril: and how you ſhall ſpeed in your iourneys end, I thinke you'l never return to tell one.

Poſt. I tell thee, Fellow, there are none want eyes, to direct them the way I am going, but ſuch as wander, and will not vſe them.

Gao. What an infinite mocke is this, that a man ſhould haue the beſt vſe of eyes, to ſee the way of blindneſſe: I am ſure hanging's the way of winking.

Enter a Meſſenger.

Meſ. Knocke off his Manacles, bring your Priſoner to the King.

Poſt. Thou bring'ſt good newes, I am call'd to be made free.

Gao. I'le be hang'd then.

Poſt. Thou ſhalt be then freer than a Gaoler, no bolts

for

for the dead.

Gen. Valeſie a man would marry a Gallowes, & beget yong Gibberts, I neuer ſaw one ſo prone: yet on my Conſcience, there are verier Knaues deſire to liue, for all he be a Romen; and there be ſome of them too that dye againſt their willes; ſo ſhould I, if I were one. I would we were all of one minde, and one minde good: O there were deſolation of Gaolers and Galowſes: I ſpeake againſt my preſent profit, but my wiſh hath a preferment in't. Exeunt.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Cymbeline, Belarius, Guiderius, Arviragus, Piſanio, and Lords.

Cym. Stand by my ſide you, whom the Gods haue made
Preſerues of my Throne: woe is my heart,
That the poore Souldier that ſo richly fought,
Whoſe ragges, ſham'd gilded Armes, whoſe naked breſt
Stept before Targes of proofe, cannot be found:
He ſhall be happy that can finde him, if
Our Grace can make him ſo.

Bel. I neuer ſaw
Such Noble fury in ſo poore a Thing;
Such precious deeds, in one that promiſt nought
But beggery, and poore lookes.

Cym. No tydings of him?

Piſ. He hath bin ſearch'd among the dead, & liuing;
But no trace of him.

Cym. To my greefe, I am
The heyre of his Reward, which I will adde
To you (the Liuer, Heart, and Braine of Britaine)
By whom (I grant) ſhe liues. 'Tis now the time
To aſke of whence you are. Report it.

Bel. Sir,
In Cambria are we borne, and Gentlemen:
Further to boaſt, were neyther true, nor modeſt,
Vnleſſe I adde, we are honeſt.

Cym. Bow your knees:
Ariſe my Knights o'th'Battell, I create you
Companions to our perſon, and will fit you
With Dignities becoming your eſtates.

Enter Cornelius and Ladies.

There's buſineſſe in theſe faces: why ſo ſadly
Greet you our Victory? you looke like Romaines,
And not o'th'Court of Britaine.

Corn. Hayle great King,
To ſowre your happineſſe, I muſt report
The Queene is dead.

Cym. Who worſe than a Phyſitian
Would this report become? But I conſider,
By Med'cine life may be prolong'd, yet death
Will ſeize the Doctor too. How ended ſhe?

Cor. With horror, madly dying, like her life,
Which (being cruell to the world) concluded
Moſt cruell to her ſelfe. What ſhe confeſt,
I will report, ſo pleaſe you. Theſe her Women
Can trip me, if I err, who wiſh wet cheeke
We are preſent when ſhe finiſh'd.

Cym. Prythee ſay.

Cor. Firſt, ſhe confeſt ſhe never lou'd you: onely
Affected Greatneſſe got by you: not you:
Married your Royalty, was wife to your place:
Abhorr'd your perſon.

Cym. She alone knew this:
And but ſhe ſpoke it dying, I would not Believe her lips in opening it. Proceed.

Corn. Your daughter, whom ſhe bore in hand to loue
With ſuch integrity, ſhe did confeſſe
Was as a Scorpion to her ſight, whoſe life
(But that her flight prevented it) ſhe had Tane off by poyſon.

Cym. O moſt delicate Fiend!
Who is't can reade a Woman? Is there more?

Corn. More Sir, and worſe. She did confeſſe ſhe had
For you a mortall Mineralls, which being tooke,
Should by the minute feede on life, and ling'ring,
By inches waſte you. In which time, ſhe purpos'd
By watching, weeping, tendance, kiſſing, to
Orecome you with her ſhew; and in time
(When ſhe had fitted you with her craft, to worke
Her Sonne into th'adoption of the Crowne:
But ſaying of her end by his ſtrange abſence,
Grew ſhameleſſe deſperate, open'd (in deſpight
Of Heaven, and Men) her purpoſes: repented
The euils ſhe hatch'd, were not effected: ſo
Diſpairing, dyed.

Cym. Heard you all this, her Women?

La. We did, ſo pleaſe your Highneſſe.

Cym. Mine eyes
Were not in fault, for ſhe was beautifull:
Mine eares that heare her flattery, not my heart,
That thought her like her ſeeming. It had beene vicious
To haue miſtruſted her: yet (Oh my Daughter)
That it was folly in me, thou mayſt ſay,
And prouе it in thy feeling. Heauen mend all.

Enter Lucius, Iachimo, and other Romaine priſoners, Leonatus bound, and Imogen.

Thou comm'ſt not Caius now for Tribute, that
The Britaines haue rac'd out, though with the loſſe
Of many a bold one: whoſe Kinſmen haue made ſuite
That their good ſoules may be appeas'd, with ſlaughter
Of you their Captiues, which our ſelfe haue granted,
So think of your eſtate.

Luc. Conſider Sir, the chance of Warre, the day
Was yours by accident: had it gone with vs,
We ſhould not when the blood was cool, haue threatned
Our Priſoners with the Sword. But ſince the Gods
Will haue it thus, that nothing but our lives
May be call'd ranſome, let it come: Sufficeth,
A Romen, with a Romans heart can ſuffer:
Auguſtus liues to think on't: and ſo much
For my peculiar care. This one thing onely
I will entreate, my Boy (a Britaine borne)
Let him be ranſom'd: Never Maſter had
A Page ſo kinde, ſo duteous, diligent,
So tender ouer his occaſions, true,
So feate, ſo Nurſe-like: let his vertue joyne
With my requeſt, which I'le make bold your Highneſſe
Cannot deny: he hath done no Britaine harme,
Though he haue ſerv'd a Roman. Save him (Sir)
And ſpare no blood beſide.

Cym. I haue ſurely ſeene him:
His fauour is familiar to me: Boy,
Thou haſt look'd thy ſelfe into my grace,
And art mine owne. I know not why, wherefore,
To ſay, liue boy: ne're thanke thy Maſter, liue;
And aſke of Cymbeline what Boone thou wilt,
Fitting my bounty, and thy ſtate. I'le give it:

You

Yes, though thou do demand a Prisoner
The Noblest tane.
Imo. I humbly thanke your Highnesse.
Lac. I do not bid thee begge my life, good Lad,
And yet I know thou wilt.
Imo. No, no, alacke,
There's other worke in hand: I see a thing
Bitter to me, as death: your life, good Master,
Must shuffle for it selfe.
Lac. The Boy disdaines me,
He leaves me, scornes me: briefly dye their joyes,
That place them on the truth of Gyrion, and Boyes.
Why stands he so perplext?
Cym. What would'st thou Boy?
I love thee more, and more: thinke more and more
What's best to aske. Know'st him thou look'st on? speak
Wilt haue him live? Is he thy Kin? thy Friend?
Imo. He is a Romane, no more kin to me,
Then I to your Highnesse, who being born your vassaile
Am something nearer
Cym. Wherefore cy'st him so?
Imo. Ile tell you (Sir) in priuate, if you please
To give me hearing.
Cym. I, with all my heart,
And lend my best attention. What's thy name?
Imo. Fidele Sir.
Cym. Thou'rt my good youth: my Page
Ile be thy Master: walke with me: speake freely.
Bel. Is not this Boy reuiu'd from death?
Arm. One Sand another
Not more resembles that sweet Rose Lad:
Who dyed, and was Fidele: what thinke you?
Gui. The same dead thing alike.
Bel. Peace, peace, see further: he eyes vs not, forbeare
Creatures may be alike: were't he, I am sure
He would haue spoke to vs.
Gui. But we see him dead.
Bel. Be silent: let's see further.
Pisa. It is my Mistris:
Since she vs liuing, let the time run on,
To good, or bad.
Cym. Come, stand thou by our side.
Make thy demand aloud. Sir, step you forth,
Give answer to this Boy, and do it freely,
Or by our Greatnesse, and the grace of it
(Which is our Honor) bitter torture shall
Winnow the truth from falshood. One speake to him.
Imo. My boone is that this Gentleman may render
Of whom he had this Ring.
Post. What's that to him?
Cym. That Diamond vpon your Finger, say
How came it yours?
Iach. Thou'lt torture me to leaue vnspoken, that
Which to be spoke, wou'd torture thee.
Cym. How? how?
Iach. I am glad to be constrain'd to vtter that
Which torments me to conceale. By Villany
I got this Ring; 'twas Leonatus Iewell,
Whom thou did'st banish: and which more may greeue
As it doth me: a Nobler Sir, ne're liu'd (thee,
Twixt sky and ground. Wilt thou heare more my Lord?
Cym. All that belongs to this.
Iach. That Paragon, thy daughter,
For whom my heart drops blood, and my false spirits
Quaile to remember. Give me leaue, I faint.
Cym. My Daughter? what of him? Renew thy strength
I had rather thou shouldst live, while Nature will,
Then dye ere I heare more: striue man, and speake.
Iach. Vpon a time, (vnhappy was the clocke
That strooke the houre) it was in Rome, accurst
The Mansion where: 'twas at a Feast, (oh would Our Viands had bin poyson'd (or at least
Those which I heaue'd to hand:) the good Posthumus, (What should I say? he was too good to be
Where ill men were, and was the best of all
Among't the rar'st of good ones) sitting sadly,
Hearing vs praise our Loues of Italy
For Beauty, that made barren the swell'd boast
Of him that best could speake: for Feature, laming
The Shrine of Venus, or straight-pight Minerua,
Postures, beyond breefe Nature. For Condition,
A shop of all the qualities, that man
Loues woman for, besides those hooks of Winning,
Fairenesse, which strikes the eye.
Cym. I stand on fire. Come to the matter
Iach. All too soone I shall,
Vnlesse thou would'st grieue quickly. This Posthumus
Most like a Noble Lord, in loue, and one
That had a Royall Louer, took his hint,
And (not disprasing whom we prais'd, therein
He was as calme as vertue) he began
His Mistris picture, which, by her tongue, being made,
And then a minde put in't, either our hunger
Were crak'd of Kitchin-Trullos, or his description
Prou'd vs vnspeaking sotes.
Cym. Nay, nay, to th' purpose.
Iach. Your daughters Chastity, (there is beginning,
He spake of her, as Dian had hot dreames,
And she alone, were cold: Whereat, I wonder
Made scruple of his praise, and wager'd with him
Pieces of Gold, 'gainst this, which then he wore
Vpon his honour'd finger) to attaine
In suite the place of's bed, and winne this Ring
By hers, and mine Adultery: he (true Knaue)
No lesser of her Honour confident
Then I did truly finde her, stakes this Ring,
And wond so, had it beene a Carbuncle
Of Phœbus Wheele; and might so safely, had it
Bin all the worth of's Care. Away to Britaine
Post I in this designe: Well may you (Sir)
Remember me at Court, where I was taught
Of your chaste Daughter, the wide difference
'Twixt Amorous, and Villanous. Being thus quench'd
Of hope, not longing; mine Italian braine,
Gan in your duller Britaine operate
Most vildely: for my vantage excellent.
And to be breefe, my practise so prosper'd
That I return'd with simular proofe enough,
To make the Noble Leonatus mad,
By wounding his belieife in her Renowne,
With Tokens thus, and thus: averring notes
Of Chamber-hanging, Pictures, this her Bracelet
(Oh sinning how I got) my some marks
Of secrets on her person, that he conclude
Not thinke her bond of Chastity quite crack'd,
I hauing 'tane the forfeyt. Whereupon,
Me thinkes I see him now.
Post. I so thou do'st,
Italian Fiend. Aye me, most credulous Fool,
Egregious murtherer, Theefe, any thing
That's due to all the Villaines past, in being
To come. Oh give me Cord, or knife, or poyson,

Some vpright Iustiser. Thou King, send out
For Torturors ingenious: it is I
That all th'abhorred things o'th'earth amend
By being worse than they. I am Posthumus,
That kill'd thy Daughter: Villain-like, I lye,
That caus'd a lesser villaine then my selfe,
A sacrilegious Theefe to doo't. The Temple
Of Vertue was she; yea, and she her selfe.
Spit, and throw stones, cast myre vpon me, &c.
The dogges o'th'Street to bay me: every villaine
Be call'd Posthumus Leonatus, and
Be villany lesse then 'twas. Oh Imogen!
My Queene, my life, my wife: oh Imogen,
Imogen, Imogen.

Iuo. Peace my Lord, heare, heare.

Post. Shall's haue a play of this?
Thou scornfull Page, there lye thy part.

Pis. Oh Gentlemen, helpe,
Mine and your Mistris: Oh my Lord Posthumus,
You ne're kill'd Imogen till now: helpe, helpe,
Mine honour'd Lady.

Cym. Does the world go round?

Posth. How comes these staggers on me?

Pisa. Wake my Mistris.

Cym. If this be so, the Gods do meane to strike me
To death, with mortall ioy.

Pisa. How fares my Mistris?

Iuo. Oh get thee from my sight.
Thou gau'st me poyson: dangerous Fellow hence,
Breath not where Princes are.

Cym. The true of Imogen.

Pisa. Lady, the Gods throw stones of sulpher on me, if
That box I gaue you, was not thought by me
A precious thing, I had it from the Queene.

Cym. New matter still.

Iuo. It poyson'd me.

Cor. Oh Gods!
I left out one thing which the Queene confest,
Which must approue thee honest. If Pasonio
Haue (said she) given his Mistris that Confection
Which I gaue him for Cordiall, she is fere'd,
As I would serue a Rat.

Cym. What's this, Cornelius?

Corn. The Queene (Sir) very oft importun'd me
To temper poysons for her, still pretending
The satisfaction of her knowledge, only
In killing Creatures vilde, as Cats and Dogges
Of no esteeme. I dreading, that her purpose
Was of more danger, did compound for her
A certaine stuffe, which being tane, would cease
The present powre of life, but in short time,
All Offices of Nature, should againe
Do their due Functions. Haue you tane of it?

Iuo. Most like I did, for I was dead.

Bel. My Boyes, there was our error.

Gui. This is sure Fidele.

Iuo. Why did you throw your wedded Lady fro you?
Think that you are vpon a Rocke, and now
Throw me againe.

Post. Hang there like fruite, my soule,
Till the Tree dye.

Cym. How now, my Flesh? my Childe?
What, mak'st thou me a dullard in this Act?
Wilt thou not speake to me?

Iuo. Your blessing, Sir.

Bel. Though you did loue this youth, I blame ye not,
You had a motive for't.

Cym. My teares that fall
Proue holy-water on thee; Imogen,
Thy Mothers dead.

Iuo. I am sorry for't, my Lord.

Cym. Oh, she was naught; and long of her it was
That we meet here so strangely: but her Sonne
Is gone, we know not how, nor where.

Pisa. My Lord,
Now feare is from me, I'le speake troth. Lord Cloten
Vpon my Ladies missing, came to me
With his Sword drawne, foam'd at the mouth, and swore
If I discouer'd not which way she was gone,
It was my instant death. By accident,
I had a feigned Letter of my Masters
Then in my pocket, which directed him
To seeke her on the Mountaines neere to Milford,
Where in a frenzie, in my Masters Garments
(Which he inforc'd from me) away he postes
With vnchaste purpose, and with oath to violate
My Ladies honor, what became of him,
I further know not.

Gui. Let me end the Story: I slew him there.

Cym. Marry, the Gods forefend.
I would not thy good deeds, should from my lips
Pluck a hard sentence: Prythee valiant youth
Deny't againe.

Gui. I haue spoke it, and I did it.

Cym. He was a Prince.

Gui. A most incivill one. The wrongs he did me
Were nothing Prince-like; for he did prouoke me
With Language that would make me spurne the Sea,
If it could so roare to me. I cut off's head,
And am right glad he is not standing heere
To tell this tale of mine.

Cym. I am sorrow for thee:
By thine owne tongue thou art condemn'd, and must Endure our Law: Thou're dead.

Iuo. That headlesse man I thought had bin my Lord

Cym. Binde the Offender,
And take him from our presence.

Bel. Stay, Sir King.
This man is better then the man he slew,
As well descended as thy selfe, and hath
More of thee merited, then a Band of Clotens
Had ever scarre for. Let his Armes alone,
They were not borne for bondage.

Cym. Why old Soldier:
Wilt thou vndoo the worth thou art vnpaid for
By taking of our wrath? How of descent
As good as we?

Arui. In that he spake too farre.

Cym. And thou shalt dye for't.

Bel. We will dye all three,
But I will proue that two one's are as good
As I haue given out him. My Sonnes, I must
For mine owne part, vnfold a dangerous speech,
Though haply well for you.

Arui. Your danger's ours.

Guid. And our good his.

Bel. Haue at it then, by leaue
Thou hadd'st (great King) a Subiect, who Was call'd Belarius.

Cym. What of him? He is a banish'd Traitor.

Bel. He it is, that hath
Assum'd this age: indeed a banish'd man,

I know not how a Traitor.

Cym. Take him hence,
The whole world shall not save him.

Bel. Not too hot;
First pay me for the Nursing of thy Sonnes,
And let it be confiscate all, so soone
As I have receyv'd it.

Cym. Nursing of my Sonnes?

Bel. I am too blunt, and saucy: hereby my kinsmen
Ere I offer, I will preferre my Sonnes,
Then spare not the old Father. Mighty Sir,
These two young Gentlemen that call me Father,
And think they are my Sonnes, are none of mine,
They are the issue of your Loyns, my Liege,
And blood of your begetting.

Cym. How? my Issue.

Bel. So sure as you, your Fathers: I (old Morgan)
Am that Belarius, whom you sometime banish'd:
Your pleasure was my meere offence, my punishment
Itselfe, and all my Treason that I suffer'd,
Was all the harme I did. These gentle Princes
(For such, and so they are) these twenty yeares
Haue I train'd vp; those Arts they haue, as I
Could put into them. My breeding was (Sir)
As your Highnesse knowes: Their Nurse Euriphile
(Whom for the Theft I wedded) stole these Children
Vpon my Banishment: I mou'd her too't,
Having receyv'd the punishment before
For that which I did then. Beaten for Loyaltie,
Excited me to Treason. Their deere losse,
The more of you 'twas felt, the more it shap'd
Vnto my end of stealing them. But gracious Sir,
Heere are your Sonnes againe, and I must loose
Two of the sweet'st Companions in the World.
The benediction of these covering Heauens
Fall on their heads like dew, for they are worthie
To inlay Heauen with Starres.

Cym. Thou weep'st, and speak'st:
The Seruice that you three haue done, is more
Vnlike, than this thou tell'st. I lost my Children,
If these be they, I know not how to wish
A payre of worthier Sonnes.

Bel. Be pleas'd awhile;
This Gentleman, whom I call Polidore,
Most worthy Prince, as yours, is true Guiderius:
This Gentleman, my Cadwall, Arviragus,
Your younger Princely Son, he Sir, was lapt
In a most curious Mantle, wrought by th'hand
Of his Queene Mother, which for more probation
I can with ease produce.

Cym. Guiderius had
Vpon his neckle a Mole, a sanguine Starre,
It was a marke of wonder.

Bel. This is he,
Who hath vpon him still that naturall stampe:
It was wise Natures end, in the donation
To be his euidence now.

Cym. Oh, what am I
A Mother to the byrth of three? Heere Mother
Reioyc'd deliuerance more: Blest, pray you be,
That after this strange starring from your Orbes,
You may reigne in them now: Oh Imogen,
Thou hast lost by this a Kingdome.

Imo. No, my Lord:
I have got two Worlds by't. Oh my gentle Brothers,
Haue we thus met? Oh never say hereafter
But I am truest speaker. You call'd me Brother
When I was but your Sister: I you Brothers,
When we were so indeed.

Cym. Did you see meeting?

Arui. I my good Lord.

Gui. And at first meeting loe'd,
Continew'd so, until we thought he dyed.

Cor. By the Queenes Dreames the finallest o'd.

Cym. O rare instinct!
When shall I heare all thought? This force ebidgment,
Hath to it Circumstantiall branches, which Distinction should be rich in. Where? how lie'd you?
And when came you to serue our Romane Captiue?
How parted with your Brother? How first met them?
Why fled you from the Court? And whether these?
And your three motiues to the Battaile? with
I know not how much more should be demanded,
And all the other by-dependances
From chance to chance? But nor the Time, nor Place
Will serue our long Interrogatories. See,
Posthumus Anchors vpon Imogen;
And she (like harmlesse Lightning) throwes her eye
On him: her Brothers, Me: her Master hitting
Each object with a Joy: the Counter-change
Is seuerally in all. Let's quit this ground,
And smoothe the Temple with our Sacrifices.
Thou art my Brother, so we'l hold thee ever.

Imo. You are my Father too, and did relieue me:
To see this gracious season.

Cym. All o're-joy'd
Saue these in bonds, let them be joyfull too,
For they shall taste our Comfort.

Imo. My good Master, I will yet do you seruice.

Luc. Happy be you.

Cym. The forlorne Souldier, that so Nobly fought
He would haue well becom'd this place, and grac'd
The thankings of a King.

Post. I am Sir
The Souldier that did company these three
In poore beseeming: 'twas a fitment for
The purpose I then follow'd. That I was he,
Speake Iachimo, I had you downe, and might
Haue made you finish.

Iach. I am downe againe:
But now my heauie Conscience sinkes my knee,
As then your force did. Take that life, beseech you
Which I so often owe: but your Ring first,
And here the Bracelet of the truest Princesse
That ever swore her Faith.

Post. Kneele not to me:
The power that I haue on you, is to spare you:
The malice towards you, to forgiue you. Liue
And deale with others better.

Cym. Nobly doom'd:
We'l leaue you Prisoners of a Sonne-in-Law:
Pardon's the word to all.

Arui. You helpe vs Sir,
As you did meane indeed to be our Brother,
Joy'd are we, that you are.

Post. Your Seruant Princes. Good my Lord of Rome,
Call forth your Soothsayer: As I slept, me thought
Great Iupiter vpon his Eagle back'd
Appear'd to me, with other spritely shewes
Of mine owne Kindred. When I wak'd, I found
This Label on my bosome; whose containing
Is so from sense in hardnesse, that I can

Make

Make no Collection of it. Let him shew
His skill in the construction.

Luc. Philarmonus.

South. Heere, my good Lord.

Luc Read, and declare the meaning.

Reades.

WHen as a Lyons whelpe, shall to himselfe vnknown, without seeking finde, and bee embrac'd by a peere of tender Ayre: And when from a stately Cedar shall be lopt branches, which being dead many yeares, shall after reuiue, bee ioyned to the old Stocke, and freshly grow, then shall Posthumus end his miseries, Britaine be fortunate, and flourish in Peace and Plenty.

Thou Leonatus art the Lyons Whelpe,
The fit and apt Construction of thy name
Being Leonatus, doth import so much:
The peece of tender Ayre, thy vertuous Daughter,
Which we call Mollis Aer, and Mollis Aer
We term it Mulier; which Mulier I diuine
Is this most constant Wife, who euen now
Answering the Letter of the Oracle,
Vnknowne to you vnsought, were clipt about
With this most tender Aire.

Cym. This hath some seeming.

South. The lofty Cedar, Royall Cymbeline
Personates thee: And thy lopt Branches, poine
Thy two Sonnes forth: who by Belarius stolne
For many yeares thought dead, are now reuiu'd
To the Maiestieke Cedar ioyn'd; whose Issue
Promises Britaine, Peace and Plenty.

Cym. Well,
My Peace we will begin: And Caius Lucius,
Although the Victor, we submit to Cæsar,
And to the Romane Empire; promising
To pay our wonted Tribute, from the which
We were diswaded by our wicked Queene,
Whom besiuens in Iustice both on her, and hers,
Haue laid most heauy hand.

South. The fingers of the Powres aboue, do tune
The harmony of this Peace: the Vision
Which I made knowne to Lucius ere the stroke
Of yet this scarse-cold-Battaile, at this instant
Is full accomplish'd. For the Romane Eagle
From South to West, on wing soaring aloft
Lessen'd her selfe, and in the Beames o'th Sun
So vanish'd; which sore-shew'd our Princely Eagle
Th'Imperiall Cæsar, should againe vnite
His Fauour, with the Radiant Cymbeline,
Which shines heere in the West.

Cym. Laud we the Gods,
And let our crooked Smokes climbe to their Nostrils
From our blest Alters. Publish we this Peace
To all our Subiects. Set we forward: Let
A Roman, and a Brittish Ensigne waue
Friendly together: so through Lud-Towne march,
And in the Temple of great Iupiter
Our Peace wee'l ratifie: Seale it with Feasts.
Set on there: Neuer was a Warre did cease
(Ere bloodie hands were wash'd) with such a Peace.

Exeunt.

FINIS.

Printed at the Charges of W. Jaggard, Ed. Blount, I. Smithweeke, and W. Aspley, 1623.

A List of Books

PUBLISHED BY

CHATTO & WINDUS

74 & 75, PICCADILLY, LONDON, W.

ADVERTISING, A HISTORY OF, from the Earliest Times. Illustrated by Anecdotes, Curious Specimens, and Biographical Notes of Successful Advertisers. By HENRY SAMPSON. Crown 8vo, with Coloured Frontispiece and Illustrations, cloth gilt, 7*s.* 6*d.*

ÆSOP'S FABLES TRANSLATED INTO HUMAN NATURE. By C. H. BENNETT. Crown 4to, 24 Plates beautifully printed in Colours, with descriptive Text, cloth extra, gilt, 6*s.*

"For fun and frolic the new version of Æsop's Fables must bear away the palm. There are twenty-two fables and twenty-two wonderful coloured illustrations; the moral is pointed, the tale adorned. This is not a juvenile book, but there are plenty of grown-up children who like to be amused at Christmas, and indeed at any time of the year; and if this new version of old stories does not amuse them they must be very dull indeed, and their situation one much to be commiserated."—Morning Post.

AINSWORTH'S LATIN DICTIONARY. The only Modern Edition which comprises the Complete Work. With numerous Additions, Emendations, and Improvements, by the Rev. B. W. BEATSON and W. ELLIS. Imperial 8vo, cloth extra, 15*s.*

AMUSING POETRY. A Selection from the Best Writers. Edited, with Preface, by SHIRLEY BROOKS. Fcap. 8vo, cloth, gilt edges, 3*s.* 6*d.*

ANACREON. Translated by THOMAS MOORE, and Illustrated by the exquisite Designs of GIRODET. Oblong 8vo, Etruscan gold and blue, 12*s.* 6*d.*

ARTEMUS WARD, COMPLETE.—The Works of CHARLES FARRER BROWNE, better known as ARTEMUS WARD. With fine Portrait, facsimile of Handwriting, &c. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 7*s.* 6*d.*

AS PRETTY AS SEVEN, and other Popular German Stories. Collected by LUDWIG BECHSTEIN. With Additional Tales by the Brothers GRIMM, and 100 Illustrations by RICHTER. Small 4to, green and gold, 6*s.* 6*d.* gilt edges, 7*s.* 6*d.*

ASTLE ON WRITING.—THE ORIGIN AND PROGRESS OF WRITING, as well Hieroglyphic as Elementary, Illustrated by Engravings taken from Marbles, Manuscripts, and Charters, Ancient and Modern; also Some Account of the Origin and Progress of Printing. By THOMAS ASTLE, F.R.S., F.A.S., late Keeper of Records in the Tower of London. Royal 4to, half-Roxburghe, with 33 Plates (some Coloured), price £1 15s. A few Large Paper copies, royal folio, half-Roxburghe, the Plates altogether unfolded, price £3 3s.

BACON'S (Francis, Lord) WORKS, both English and Latin, with an Introductory Essay, Biographical and Critical, and copious Indexes. Two Vols., imperial 8vo, with Portrait, cloth extra, £1 4s.

BANKERS, A HANDBOOK OF LONDON; with some Account of their Predecessors, the Early Goldsmiths, together with Lists of Bankers, from the Earliest London Directory printed in 1677, to the Official List of 1875. By F. G. HILTON PRICE. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 7s. 6d. [In the press.

BARDSLEY'S OUR ENGLISH SURNAMES: Their Sources and Significations. By CHARLES WAREING BARDSLEY, M.A. SECOND EDITION, revised throughout, considerably Enlarged, and partially rewritten. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 9s.

"Mr. Bardsley has faithfully consulted the original mediæval documents and works from which the origin and development of surnames can alone be satisfactorily traced. He has furnished a valuable contribution to the literature of surnames, and we hope to hear more of him in this field."—Times.

BAUER AND HOOKER'S GENERA OF FERNS; in which the Characters of each Genus are displayed in a series of magnified dissections and figures, highly finished in colours, after the drawings of FRANCIS BAUER, with letterpress by Sir WILLIAM HOOKER. Imperial 8vo, with 120 beautifully Coloured Plates, half-morocco, gilt, £5 5s.

BEAUTIFUL PICTURES BY BRITISH ARTISTS: A Gathering of Favourites from our Picture Galleries. In Two Series. The FIRST SERIES including Examples by WILKIE, CONSTABLE, TURNER, MULREADY LANDSEER, MACLISE, E. M. WARD, FRITH, Sir JOHN GILBERT, LESLIE, ANSDELL, MARCUS STONE, Sir NOEL PATON, FARD, EYRE CROWE, GAVIN, O'NEIL, and MADOX BROWN. The SECOND containing Pictures by ARMYTAGE, FARD, GOODALL, HEMSLEY, HORSLEY, MARKS, NICHOLLS, Sir NOEL PATON, PICKERSGILL, G. SMITH, MARCUS STONE, SOLOMON, STRAIGHT, E. M. WARD, and WARREN. All engraved on Steel in the highest style of Art. Edited, with Notices of the Artists, by SYDNEY ARMYTAGE, M.A. Price of each Series, imperial 4to, cloth extra, gilt and gilt edges, 21s. Each Volume is Complete in itself.

BELL'S (Sir Charles) ANATOMY OF EXPRESSION, as connected with the Fine Arts. Fifth Edition, with an Appendix on the Nervous System by ALEXANDER SHAW. Illustrated with 45 beautiful Engravings. Imp. 8vo, cloth extra, gilt, 16s.

BINGHAM'S ANTIQUITIES of the CHRISTIAN CHURCH. A New Edition, revised, with copious Index. Two Vols., imperial 8vo, cloth extra, £1 4s.

"A writer who does equal honour to the English clergy and to the English nation, and whose learning is to be equalled only by his moderation and impartiality."—Quarterly Review.

BIOGRAPHICAL AND CRITICAL DICTIONARY OF RECENT AND LIVING PAINTERS AND ENGRAVERS, both English and Foreign. By HENRY OTTLEY. Being a Supplementary Volume to "Bryan's Dictionary." Imperial 8vo, cloth extra, 12s.

 This is the only work giving an account of the principal living painters of all countries.

BLAKE'S WORKS.—A Series of Reproductions in Facsimile of the Works of WILLIAM BLAKE, including the "Songs of Innocence and Experience," "The Book of Thel," "America," "The Vision of the Daughters of Albion," "The Marriage of Heaven and Hell," "Europe, a Prophecy," "Jerusalem," "Milton," "Urizen," "The Song of Los," &c. These Works will be issued both coloured and plain. [In preparation.

"Blake is a real name, I assure you, and a most extraordinary man he is, if he still be living. He is the Blake whose wild designs accompany a splendid edition of Blair's 'Grave.' He paints in water-colours marvellous strange pictures—visions of his brain—which he asserts he has seen. They have great merit. I must look upon him as one of the most extraordinary persons of the age."—CHARLES LAMB.

BLANCHARD'S (Laman) POEMS. Now first Collected. Edited, with a Life of the Author (including numerous hitherto unpublished Letters from Lord LYTTON, LAMB, DICKENS, ROBERT BROWNING, and others), by BLANCHARD JERROLD. Crown 8vo, with a Vignette Portrait, cloth extra, 9*s.* [In preparation.

BOCCACCIO'S DECAMERON; or, Ten Days' Entertainment. Translated into English, with Introduction by THOMAS WRIGHT, Esq., M.A., F.S.A. With Portrait after RAPHAEL, and STOTHARD'S beautiful Copperplates. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, gilt, 7*s.* 6*d.*

BOLTON'S SONG BIRDS OF GREAT BRITAIN. Illustrated with Figures, the size of Life, of both Male and Female; of their Nests and Eggs Food, Favourite Plants, Shrubs, Trees, &c. &c. Two Vols. in One, royal 4to containing 80 beautifully Coloured Plates, half-Roxburghe, £3 13*s.* 6*d.*

BOOKSELLERS, A HISTORY OF. Including the Story of the Rise and Progress of the Great Publishing Houses, in London and the Provinces, and of their greatest Works. By HENRY CURWEN. Crown 8vo, with Frontispiece and numerous Portraits and Illustrations, cloth extra, 7*s.* 6*d.*

"In these days, ten ordinary Histories of Kings and Courtiers were well exchanged against the tenth part of one good History of Booksellers."—THOMAS CARLYLE.

"This stout little book is unquestionably amusing. Ill-starred, indeed, must be the reader who, opening it anywhere, lights upon six consecutive pages within the entire compass of which some good anecdote or smart repartee is not to be found."—Saturday Review.

BOUDOIR BALLADS: Vers de Société. By J. ASHBY STERRY. Crown 8vo, cloth extra. [In preparation.

BRAND'S OBSERVATIONS ON POPULAR ANTIQUITIES, chiefly Illustrating the Origin of our Vulgar Customs, Ceremonies, and Superstitions. With the Additions of Sir HENRY ELLIS. A New Edition, with fine full-page Illustrations. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, gilt, 7*s.* 6*d.* [In the press.

BRET HARTE'S CHOICE WORKS in Prose and Poetry. With Introductory Essay by J. M. BELLEW, Portrait of the Author, and 50 Illustrations. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 7*s.* 6*d.*

BREWSTER'S (Sir David) MARTYRS OF SCIENCE. A New Edition, in small crown 8vo, cloth extra, gilt, with full-page Portraits, 4*s.* 6*d.*

BREWSTER'S (Sir David) MORE WORLDS THAN ONE, the Creed of the Philosopher and the Hope of the Christian. A New Edition, in small crown 8vo, cloth extra, gilt, with full-page Astronomical Plates, 4*s.* 6*d.*

BRIC-À-BRAC HUNTER (The); or, Chapters on Chinamania. By Major H. BYNG HALL. With Photographic Frontispiece. Crown 8vo, cloth, full gilt (from a special and novel design), 10*s.* 6*d.*

BRITISH ESSAYISTS (The): viz., "Spectator," "Tatler," "Guardian," "Rambler," "Adventurer," "Idler," and "Connoisseur." Complete in Three thick Vols., 8vo with Portrait, cloth extra, £1 7*s.*

BROADSTONE HALL, and other Poems. By W. E. WINDUS. With 40 Illustrations by ALFRED CONCANEN. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, gilt, 5*s.*

"This little volume of poems is illustrated with such vigour, and shows such a thoroughly practical knowledge of and love for sea-life, that it is quite tonic and refreshing. Maudlin sentimentality is carefully eschewed, and a robust, manly tone of thought gives muscle to the verse and elasticity of mind to the reader."—Morning Post.

BROCKEDON'S PASSES OF THE ALPS. Containing 109 fine Engravings by FINDEN, WILLMORE, and others; with Maps of each Pass, and a General Map of the Alps by ARROWSMITH. Two Vols., 4to, half-bound morocco, gilt edges, £3 13*s.* 6*d.*

BULWER'S (Lytton) PILGRIMS OF THE RHINE. With Portrait and 27 exquisite Line Engravings on Steel, by GOODALL, WILLMORE, and others; after Drawings by DAVID ROBERTS and MACLISE. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, top edges gilt, 10*s.* 6*d.*

BUNYAN'S PILGRIM'S PROGRESS. Edited by Rev. T. SCOTT. With 17 beautiful Steel Plates by STOTHARD, engraved by GOODALL; and numerous Woodcuts. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, gilt, 7*s.* 6*d.*

BURNET'S HISTORY OF HIS OWN TIME, from the Restoration of Charles II. to the Treaty of Peace at Utrecht. With Historical and Biographical Notes and copious Index. Imp. 8vo, with Portrait, cloth extra, 13*s.* 6*d.*

BURNET'S HISTORY OF THE REFORMATION OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND. A New Edition, with numerous illustrative Notes and copious Index. Two Vols., imperial 8vo, cloth extra, £1 1*s.*

BYRON'S (Lord) LETTERS AND JOURNALS. With Notices of his Life. By THOMAS MOORE. A Reprint of the Original Edition, newly revised, complete in a thick Volume of 1060 pp., with Twelve full-page Plates. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, gilt, 7*s.* 6*d.*

"We have read this book with the greatest pleasure. Considered merely as a composition, it deserves to be classed among the best specimens of English prose which our age has produced. . . . The style is agreeable, clear, and manly, and, when it rises into eloquence, rises without effort or ostentation. Nor is the matter inferior to the manner. It would be difficult to name a book which exhibits more kindness, fairness, and modesty."—MACAULAY, in the Edinburgh Review.

CALMET'S BIBLE DICTIONARY. Edited by CHARLES TAYLOR. With the Fragments incorporated and arranged in Alphabetical Order. New Edition. Imperial 8vo, with Maps and Wood Engravings, cloth extra, 10*s.* 6*d.*

CANOVA'S WORKS IN SCULPTURE AND MODELLING. 150 Plates, exquisitely engraved in Outline by MOSES, and printed on an India tint. With Descriptions by the Countess ALBRIZZI, a Biographical Memoir by CICOGNARA, and Portrait by WORTHINGTON. A New Edition. Demy 4to, cloth extra, gilt, gilt edges, 31*s.* 6*d.*

CARLYLE (Thomas) ON THE CHOICE OF BOOKS. With New Life and Anecdotes. Small post 8vo, brown cloth, 1*s.* 6*d.*

CAROLS OF COCKAYNE; Vers de Société descriptive of London Life. By HENRY S. LEIGH. Third Edition. With numerous Illustrations by ALFRED CONCANEN. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, gilt, 5*s.*

CARTER'S ANCIENT ARCHITECTURE OF ENGLAND. Including the Orders during the British, Roman, Saxon, and Norman Eras; and also under the Reigns of Henry III. and Edward III. Illustrated by 103 large Copperplate Engravings, comprising upwards of Two Thousand Specimens. Edited by JOHN BRITTON. Royal folio, half-morocco extra, £2 8*s.*

 This national work on ancient architecture occupied its author, in drawing, etching, arranging, and publishing, more than twenty years, and he himself declared it to be the result of his studies through life.

CARTER'S ANCIENT SCULPTURE NOW REMAINING IN ENGLAND, from the Earliest Period to the Reign of Henry VIII.; consisting of Statues, Basso-relievos, Sculptures, &c., Brasses, Monumental Effigies, Paintings on Glass and on Walls; Missal Ornaments; Carvings on Cups, Croziers, Chests, Seals; Ancient Furniture, &c. &c. With Historical and Critical Illustrations by DOUCE, MEYRICK, DAWSON TURNER, and JOHN BRITTON. Royal folio, with 120 large Engravings, many Illuminated, half-bound morocco extra, £8 8*s*.

CATLIN'S ILLUSTRATIONS OF THE MANNERS, CUSTOMS, AND CONDITION OF THE NORTH AMERICAN INDIANS, written during Eight Years of Travel and Adventure among the Wildest and most Remarkable Tribes now existing. Containing 360 Coloured Engravings from the Author's original Paintings. Two Vols., imperial 8vo, Cloth extra, gilt, the Plates beautifully printed in Colours, £3 3*s*.

"One of the most admirable observers of manners who ever lived among the aborigines of America."—HUMBOLDT'S Cosmos.

CATLIN'S NORTH AMERICAN INDIAN PORTFOLIO. Containing Hunting Scenes, Amusements, Scenery, and Costume of the Indians of the Rocky Mountains and Prairies of America, from Drawings and Notes made by the Author during Eight Years' Travel. A series of 31 magnificent Plates, beautifully coloured in facsimile of the Original Drawings exhibited at the Egyptian Hall. With Letterpress Descriptions, imperial folio, half-morocco, gilt, £7 10*s*.

 Five of the above Drawings are now first published.

CHAMBERLAINE'S IMITATIONS OF DRAWINGS FROM THE GREAT MASTERS in the Royal Collection. Engraved by BARTOLOZZI and others. 74 fine Plates, mostly tinted; including, in addition, "Ecce Homo," after GUIDO, and the scarce Series of 7 Anatomical Drawings. Imperial folio, half-morocco, gilt edges, £5 5*s*.

CHATTO'S (W. Andrew) HISTORY OF WOOD ENGRAVING, Historical and Practical. A New Edition, with an Additional Chapter. Illustrated by 445 fine Wood Engravings. Imperial 8vo, half-Roxburghe, £2 2*s*.

"This volume is one of the most interesting and valuable of modern times."—Art Union.

CHRISTMAS CAROLS AND BALLADS. Selected and Edited by JOSHUA SYLVESTER. Cloth extra, gilt, gilt edges, 3*s*. 6*d*.

CICERO'S FAMILIAR LETTERS, AND LETTERS TO ATTICUS. Translated by MELMOTH and HEBERDEN. With Life of Cicero by MIDDLETON. Royal 8vo, with Portrait, cloth extra, 12*s*.

"Cicero is the type of a perfect letter-writer, never boring you with moral essay out of season, always evincing his mastery over his art by the most careful consideration for your patience and amusement. We should rifle the volumes of antiquity in vain to find a letter-writer who converses on paper so naturally, so engagingly, so much from the heart as Cicero."—Quarterly Review.

CLAUDE'S LIBER VERITATIS. A Collection of 303 Prints after the Original Designs of CLAUDE. Engraved by RICHARD EARLOM. With a descriptive Catalogue of each Print, Lists of the Persons for whom, and the Places for which, the original Pictures were first painted, and of the present Possessors of most of them. London: published by Messrs. Boydell and Co., Cheapside. Printed by W. Bulmer and Co., Cleveland Row, 1777. Three Vols. folio, half-morocco extra, gilt edges, £10 10*s*.

CLAUDE, BEAUTIES OF, containing 24 of his choicest Landscapes, beautifully Engraved on Steel, by BROMLEY, LUPTON, and others. With Biographical Sketch and Portrait. Royal folio, in a portfolio, £1 5*s*.

COLLINS' (Wilkie) NOVELS. New Illustrated Library Editions, price 6*s.* each, with Frontispiece and several full-page Illustrations in each Volume:—

The Woman in White. Illustrated by Sir JOHN GILBERT and F. A. FRASER.

Antonina; or, The Fall of Rome. Illustrated by Sir JOHN GILBERT and ALFRED CONCANEN.

Basil. Illustrated by Sir JOHN GILBERT and M. F. MAHONEY.

The Dead Secret. Illustrated by Sir JOHN GILBERT and H. FURNISS.

The Queen of Hearts. Illustrated by Sir JOHN GILBERT and ALFRED CONCANEN.

The Moonstone. Illustrated by G. DU MAURIER and F. A. FRASER.

Man and Wife. Illustrated by WILLIAM SMALL.

Miss or Mrs.? Illustrated by S. L. FILDES and HENRY WOODS.

Hide and Seek; or, The Mystery of Mary Grice. Illustrated by Sir JOHN GILBERT and M. F. MAHONEY.

Poor Miss Finch. Illustrated by GEORGE DU MAURIER and EDWARD HUGHES.

The New Magdalen. With Illustrations by GEO. DU MAURIER and C. S. R.

The Frozen Deep. Illustrated by G. DU MAURIER and M. F. MAHONEY.

My Miscellanies. With Steel-plate Portrait of the Author, and Illustrations by ALFRED CONCANEN.

The Law and the Lady. Illustrated by S. L. FILDES and SYDNEY HALL.

"The greatest master the sensational novel has ever known."—World.

COLMAN'S HUMOROUS WORKS.—Broad Grins, My Nightgown and Slippers, and other Humorous Works, Prose and Poetical, of GEORGE COLMAN. With Life and Anecdotes by G. B. BUCKSTONE, and Frontispiece by HOGARTH. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, gilt, 7*s.* 6*d.*

CONEY'S ENGRAVINGS OF ANCIENT CATHEDRALS, Hôtels de Ville, Town Halls, &c., including some of the finest Examples of Gothic Architecture in France, Holland, Germany, and Italy. 32 large Plates, imperial folio, half-morocco extra, £3 13*s.* 6*d.*

CONQUEST OF THE SEA (The). A History of Diving from the Earliest Times. By HENRY SIEBE. Profusely Illustrated. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, gilt, 4*s.* 6*d.*

"We have perused this volume, full of quaint information, with delight. Mr. Siebe has bestowed much pains on his work; he writes with enthusiasm and fulness of knowledge."—Echo.

"Really interesting alike to youths and to grown-up people."—Scotsman.

CONSTABLE'S GRAPHIC WORKS. Comprising 40 highly finished Mezzotinto Engravings on Steel, by DAVID LUCAS; with descriptive Letterpress by C. R. LESLIE, R.A. Folio, half-morocco, gilt edges, £2 2*s.*

COTMAN'S ENGRAVINGS OF THE SEPULCHRAL BRASSES IN NORFOLK AND SUFFOLK. With Letterpress Descriptions, an Essay on Sepulchral Memorials by DAWSON TURNER. Notes by Sir SAMUEL MEYRICK, ALBERT WAY, and Sir HARRIS NICOLAS, and copious Index. New Edition, containing 173 Plates, two of them Illuminated. Two Volumes small folio, half-morocco extra, £6 6*s.*

COTMAN'S ETCHINGS OF ARCHITECTURAL REMAINS, chiefly Norman and Gothic, in various Counties in England, but principally in Norfolk, with Descriptive Notices by DAWSON TURNER, and Architectural Observations by THOMAS RICKMAN. Two Vols., imperial folio, containing 240 spirited Etchings, half-morocco, top edges gilt, £8 8*s*.

COTMAN'S LIBER STUDIORUM. A Series of Landscape Studies and Original Compositions, for the Use of Art Students, consisting of 48 Etchings, the greater part executed in "soft ground." Imperial folio, half-morocco, £1 11*s*. 6*d*.

COWPER'S POETICAL WORKS. Including his Translation of HOMER. Edited by the Rev. H. F. CARY. With Portrait and 18 Steel Engravings after HARVEY. Royal 8vo, cloth extra, gilt edges, 10*s*. 6*d*.

"I long to know your opinion of Cowper's Translation. The Odyssey especially is surely very Homeric. What nobler than the appearance of Phœbus at the beginning of the Iliad—lines ending with 'Dread sounding-bounding in the silver bow'?"—CHARLES LAMB, in a Letter to Coleridge.

CREASY'S MEMOIRS OF EMINENT ETONIANS; with Notices of the Early History of Eton College. By Sir EDWARD CREASY, Author of "The Fifteen Decisive Battles of the World." A New Edition, brought down to the Present Time, with Illustrations. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, gilt, 7*s*. 6*d*.
[In the press.

CRUIKSHANK AT HOME. Tales and Sketches by the most Popular Authors. With numerous Illustrations by ROBERT CRUIKSHANK and ROBERT SEYMOUR. Also, CRUIKSHANK'S ODD VOLUME, or Book of Variety, Illustrated by Two Odd Fellows—SEYMOUR and CRUIKSHANK. Four Vols. bound in Two, fcap. 8vo, cloth extra, gilt, 10*s*. 6*d*.

CRUIKSHANK'S COMIC ALMANACK. Complete in Two SERIES: The FIRST from 1835 to 1843; the SECOND from 1844 to 1853. A Gathering of the BEST HUMOUR of THACKERAY, HOOD, MAYHEW, ALBERT SMITH, A'BECKETT, ROBERT BROUGH, &c. With 2000 Woodcuts and Steel Engravings by CRUIKSHANK, HINE, LANDELLS, &c. Crown 8vo, cloth gilt, two very thick volumes, 15*s*.; or, separately, 7*s*. 6*d*. per volume.

CRUIKSHANK'S UNIVERSAL SONGSTER. The largest Collection extant of the best Old English Songs (upwards of 5000). With 8 Engravings on Steel and Wood by GEORGE and R. CRUIKSHANK, and 8 Portraits. Three Vols., 8vo, cloth extra, gilt, 21*s*.

CUSSANS' HANDBOOK OF HERALDRY. With Instructions for Tracing Pedigrees and Deciphering Ancient MSS.; Rules for the Appointment of Liveries, Chapters on Continental and American Heraldry, &c. &c. By JOHN E. CUSSANS. Illustrated with 360 Plates and Woodcuts. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, gilt and emblazoned, 7*s*. 6*d*.

CUSSANS' HISTORY OF HERTFORDSHIRE. A County History, got up in a very superior manner, and ranging with the finest works of its class. By JOHN E. CUSSANS. Illustrated with full-page Plates on Copper and Stone, and a profusion of small Woodcuts. Parts I. to VIII. now ready, 21*s*. each.

 An entirely new History of this important County, great attention being given to all matters pertaining to Family History.

CUVIER'S ANIMAL KINGDOM, arranged after its Organization: forming a Natural History of Animals, and an Introduction to Comparative Anatomy. New Edition, with considerable Additions by W. B. CARPENTER and J. O. WESTWOOD. Illustrated by many Hundred Wood Engravings, and numerous Steel Engravings by THOS. LANDSEER, mostly Coloured. Imperial 8vo, cloth extra, 18*s*.

CYCLOPÆDIA OF COSTUME; or, A Dictionary of Dress—Regal, Ecclesiastical, Civil, and Military—from the Earliest Period in England to the reign of George the Third. Including Notices of Contemporaneous Fashions on the Continent, and preceded by a General History of the Costumes of the Principal Countries of Europe. By J. R. PLANCHÉ, Somerset Herald. To be Completed in Twenty-four Parts, quarto, at Five Shillings each, profusely illustrated by Coloured and Plain Plates and Wood Engravings.—A Prospectus will be sent upon application. [In course of publication.

"There is no subject connected with dress with which 'Somerset Herald' is not as familiar as ordinary men are with the ordinary themes of everyday life. The gathered knowledge of many years is placed before the world in this his latest work, and when finished, there will exist no work on the subject half so valuable. The numerous illustrations are all effective—for their accuracy the author is responsible; they are well drawn and well engraved, and, while indispensable to a proper comprehension of the text, are satisfactory as works of art."—Art Journal.

"These, the first numbers of a Cyclopædia of Ancient and Modern Costume, give promise that the work, when complete, will be one of the most perfect works ever published upon the subject. The illustrations are numerous and excellent, and would, even without the letterpress, render the work an invaluable book of reference for information as to costumes for fancy balls and character quadrilles."—Standard.

"Destined, we anticipate, to be the standard English work on dress."—Builder.

"Promises to be a very complete work on a subject of the greatest importance to the historian and the archæologist."—Tablet.

"Beautifully printed and superbly illustrated."—Standard, second notice.

D'ARBLAY'S (Madame) DIARY AND LETTERS. Edited by her Niece, CHARLOTTE BARRETT. A New Edition, in Four Vols., 8vo. Illustrated by numerous fine Portraits engraved on Steel. [In the press.

DIBDIN'S (T. F.) BIBLIOMANIA; or, Book-Madness: A Bibliographical Romance. With numerous Illustrations. A New Edition with a Supplement, including a Key to the Assumed Characters in the Drama. Demy 8vo, half-Roxburghe, 21*s.*; a few Large Paper copies, half-Roxburghe, the edges altogether uncut, at 42*s.* [In the press.

DICKENS' LIFE AND SPEECHES. Royal 16mo, cloth extra, 2*s.* 6*d.*

DISCOUNT TABLES, on a new and simple plan; to facilitate the Discounting of Bills, and the Calculation of Interest on Banking and Current Accounts, &c.; showing, without calculation, the number of days from every day in the year to any other day. By THOMAS READER. Post 8vo, cloth extra, 7*s.*

DIXON'S (Hepworth) NEW WORK.—WHITE CONQUEST: AMERICA IN 1875. 2 vols. demy 8vo, cloth extra, 30*s.*

DON QUIXOTE: A Revised Translation, based upon those of MOTTEUX, JARVIS, and SMOLLETT. With 50 Illustrations by ARMSTRONG and TONY JOHANNOT. Royal 8vo, cloth extra, gilt, 10*s.* 6*d.*

DON QUIXOTE IN SPANISH.—EL INGENIOSO HIDALGO DON QUIJOTE DE LA MANCHA. Nueva Edicion, corregida y revisada. Por MIGUEL DE CERVANTES SAAVEDRA. Complete in One Volume, post 8vo, nearly 700 pages, cloth extra, price 4*s.* 6*d.*

DRURY'S ILLUSTRATIONS of FOREIGN ENTOMOLOGY. Containing, in 150 beautifully Coloured Plates, upwards of 600 Exotic Insects of the East and West Indies, China, New Holland, North and South America, Germany, &c. With important Additions and Scientific Indexes, by J. O. WESTWOOD, F.L.S. Three Vols., 4to, half-morocco extra, £5 5*s.*

DULWICH GALLERY (The): A Series of 50 beautifully Coloured Plates, from the most celebrated Pictures in this Collection, executed by the Custodian, R. COCKBURN, and mounted upon Cardboard, in the manner of Drawings. Imperial folio, in portfolio, £16 16*s*

DUNLOP'S HISTORY OF FICTION: Being a Critical and Analytical Account of the most celebrated Prose Works of Fiction, from the Earliest Greek Romances to the Novels of the Present Day, with General Index. Third Edition, royal 8vo, cloth extra, 9*s*.

DUNRAVEN'S (Earl of) THE GREAT DIVIDE: A Narrative of Travels in the Upper Yellowstone in the Summer of 1874. With numerous striking full-page Illustrations by VALENTINE W. BROMLEY. Demy 8vo, cloth extra, with Maps and Illustrations, 18*s*. [In the press.

EARLY ENGLISH POETS. A New Series is in preparation, Edited, with Introductions and copious Notes, by the Rev. A. B. GROSART. The following are just ready:—THE COMPLETE WORKS OF GILES FLETCHER, B.D.—THE WORKS OF SIR JOHN DAVIES.—To be followed by THE WORKS OF SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, and others.

ELLIS'S (Mrs.) MOTHERS OF GREAT MEN. A New Edition, with Illustrations by VALENTINE BROMLEY. Crown 8vo, cloth gilt, 6*s*.

EMANUEL ON DIAMONDS AND PRECIOUS STONES; Their History, Value, and Properties; with Simple Tests for ascertaining their Reality. By HARRY EMANUEL, F.R.G.S. With numerous Illustrations, Tinted and Plain. A New Edition, crown 8vo, cloth extra, gilt, 6*s*.

ENGLISHMAN'S HOUSE (The): A Practical Guide to all interested in Selecting or Building a House, with full Estimates of Cost, Quantities, &c. By C. J. RICHARDSON. Third Edition. With nearly 600 Illustrations. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 7*s*. 6*d*.

 This book is intended to supply a long-felt want, viz., a plain, non-technical account of every style of house, with the cost and manner of building; it gives every variety, from a workman's cottage to a nobleman's palace.

FAIRHOLT.—TOBACCO: Its History and Associations; including an Account of the Plant and its Manufacture; with its Modes of Use in all Ages and Countries. By F. W. FAIRHOLT, F.S.A. With Coloured Frontispiece and upwards of 100 Illustrations by the Author. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 6*s*. [In the press.

FARADAY'S CHEMICAL HISTORY OF A CANDLE. Lectures delivered to a Juvenile Audience. A New Edition, Edited by W. CROOKES, Esq., F.C.S., &c. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, with numerous Illustrations, 4*s*. 6*d*.

FARADAY'S VARIOUS FORCES OF NATURE. A New Edition, Edited by W. CROOKES, Esq., F.C.S., &c. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, with numerous Illustrations, 4*s*. 6*d*.

FIGUIER'S PRIMITIVE MAN: A Popular Manual of the prevailing Theories of the Descent of Man as promulgated by DARWIN, LYELL, Sir JOHN LUBBOCK, HUXLEY, E. B. TYLOR, and other eminent Ethnologists. Translated from the last French edition, and revised by E. B. T. With 263 Illustrations. Demy 8vo, cloth extra, gilt, 9*s*.

"An interesting and essentially popular resumé of all that has been written on the subject. M. Figuier has collected together the evidences which modern researches have accumulated, and has done this with a considerable amount of care. He endeavours to separate the inquiry respecting Primitive Man from the Mosaic account of Man's creation, and does not admit that the authority of Holy Writ is in any way questioned by those labours which aim at seeking the real epoch of Man's first appearance upon earth. . . . An interesting book, with 263 illustrations, of which thirty are full-page engravings, confessedly somewhat fanciful in their combinations, but which will be found on examination to be justified by that soundest evidence, the actual discovery of the objects of which they represent the use."—Athenæum.

FINGER-RING LORE: Historical and Anecdotal. By WILLIAM JONES, F.S.A. With Hundreds of Illustrations of Curious Rings of all Ages and Countries. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, gilt, 7*s*. 6*d*. [In the press.

FINISH TO LIFE IN AND OUT OF LONDON; or, The Final Adventures of Tom, Jerry, and Logic. By PIERCE EGAN. Royal 8vo, cloth extra, with spirited Coloured Illustrations by CRUIKSHANK, 21*s.*

FLAGELLATION AND THE FLAGELLANTS.—A History of the Rod in all Countries, from the Earliest Period to the Present Time. By the Rev. W. COOPER, B.A. Third Edition, revised and corrected, with numerous Illustrations. Thick crown 8vo, cloth extra, gilt, 12*s.* 6*d.*

FOX'S BOOK OF MARTYRS: The Acts and Monuments of the Church. Edited by JOHN CUMMING, D.D. With upwards of 1000 Illustrations. Three Vols., imperial 8vo, cloth extra, £2 12*s.* 6*d.*

GELL'S TOPOGRAPHY OF ROME AND ITS VICINITY. A New Edition, revised and enlarged by E. H. BUNBURY. With a large mounted Map of Rome and its Environs (from a careful Trigonometrical Survey). Two Vols., 8vo, cloth extra, 15*s.*

GELL AND GANDY'S POMPEIANA; or, The Topography, Edifices, and Ornaments of Pompeii. With upwards of 100 Line Engravings by GOODALL, COOKE, HEATH, PYE, &c. Demy 8vo, cloth extra, gilt, 18*s.*

GEMMER'S (Mrs.) PLEASANT RHYMES FOR LITTLE READERS. By CAROLINE M. GEMMER (GERDA FAY). With numerous Illustrations. Crown 8vo, cloth extra. [In the press.

GEMS OF ART: A Collection of 36 Engravings, after Paintings by REMBRANDT, CUYP, REYNOLDS, POUSSIN, MURILLO, TENIERS, CORREGGIO, GAINSBOROUGH, NORTHCOTE, &c., executed in Mezzotint by TURNER, BROMLEY, &c. Folio, in Portfolio, £1 11*s.* 6*d.*

GENIAL SHOWMAN; or, Show Life in the New World. Adventures with Artemus Ward, and the Story of his Life. By E. P. HINGSTON. Third Edition. Crown 8vo, Illustrated by W. BRUNTON, cloth extra, 7*s.* 6*d.*

GIBBON'S ROMAN EMPIRE (The Decline and Fall of the). With Memoir of the Author, and full General Index. Imperial 8vo, with Portrait, cloth extra, 15*s.*

GILBERT'S (W. S.) DRAMATIC WORKS ("A Wicked World," "Charity," "Palace of Truth," "Pygmalion," "Trial by Jury," &c.). One Vol., crown 8vo, cloth extra. [In the press.

GIL BLAS.—HISTORIA DE GIL BLAS DE SANTILLANA. Por LE SAGE. Traducida al Castellano por el PADRE ISLA. Nueva Edicion, corregida y revisada. Complete in One Vol., post 8vo, cl. extra, nearly 600 pp., 4*s.* 6*d.*

GILLRAY'S CARICATURES. Printed from the Original Plates, all engraved by Himself between 1779 and 1810; comprising the best Political and Humorous Satires of the Reign of GEORGE THE THIRD, in upwards of 600 highly spirited Engravings. Atlas folio, half-morocco extra, gilt edges, £7 10*s.*—There is also a Volume of the SUPPRESSED PLATES, atlas folio, half-morocco, 31*s.* 6*d.*—Also, a VOLUME OF LETTERPRESS DESCRIPTIONS, comprising a very amusing Political History of the Reign of GEORGE THE THIRD, by THOS. WRIGHT and R. H. EVANS. Demy 8vo, cloth extra, 15*s.*; or half-morocco, £1 1*s.*

GILLRAY, THE CARICATURIST: The Story of his Life and Times, and Anecdotal Descriptions of his Engravings. Edited by THOMAS WRIGHT, Esq., M.A., F.S.A. With 83 full-page Plates, and numerous Wood Engravings. Demy 4to, 600 pages, cloth extra, 31*s.* 6*d.*

"High as the expectations excited by this description [in the Introduction] may be, they will not be disappointed. The most inquisitive or exacting reader will find ready gathered to his hand, without the trouble of reference, almost every scrap of narrative, anecdote, gossip, scandal, or epigram, in poetry or prose, that he can possibly require for the elucidation of the caricatures."—Quarterly Review.

GLEIG'S CHELSEA PENSIONERS: Saratoga, the Rivals, and other Stories. By the Rev. G. R. GLEIG, late Chaplain to Her Majesty's Forces. Post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2*s.*

GOLDEN LIBRARY.

Square 16mo (Tauchnitz size), cloth, extra gilt, price 2s. per Vol.

BYRON'S DON JUAN.

CLERICAL ANECDOTES: Humours of "the Cloth."

HOLMES'S AUTOCRAT OF THE BREAKFAST TABLE. With an Introduction by GEORGE AUGUSTUS SALA.

HOLMES'S PROFESSOR AT THE BREAKFAST TABLE.

HOOD'S WHIMS AND ODDITIES. Both Series Complete in One Volume, with all the original Illustrations.

IRVING'S (Washington) TALES OF A TRAVELLER.

IRVING'S (Washington) TALES OF THE ALHAMBRA.

JESSE'S (Edward) SCENES AND OCCUPATIONS OF COUNTRY LIFE; with Recollections of Natural History.

LAMB'S ESSAYS OF ELIA. Both Series Complete in One Vol.

LEIGH HUNT'S ESSAYS: A Tale for a Chimney Corner, and other Pieces. With Portrait, and Introduction by EDMUND OLLIER.

MALLORY'S (Sir Thomas) MORT D'ARTHUR: The Stories of King Arthur and of the Knights of the Round Table. Edited by B. M. RANKING.

PASCAL'S PROVINCIAL LETTERS. A New Translation, with Historical Introduction and Notes, by T. M'CRIE, D.D., LL.D.

POPE'S COMPLETE POETICAL WORKS. Reprinted from the Original Editions.

ROCHEFOUCAULD'S MAXIMS AND MORAL REFLEC-TIONS. With Notes, and an Introductory Essay by SAINTE-BEUVE.

ST. PIERRE'S PAUL AND VIRGINIA AND THE INDIAN COTTAGE. Edited, with Life, by the Rev. E. CLARKE.

SHELLEY'S EARLY POEMS, AND QUEEN MAB, with Essay by LEIGH HUNT.

SHELLEY'S LATER POEMS: Laon and Cythna, &c.

SHELLEY'S POSTHUMOUS POEMS, the SHELLEY PAPERS, &c.

SHELLEY'S PROSE WORKS, including A Refutation of Deism, Zastrozzi, St. Irvyne, &c.

WHITE'S NATURAL HISTORY OF SELBORNE. Edited, with additions, by THOMAS BROWN, F.L.S.

GOLDEN TREASURY OF THOUGHT. An Encyclopædia of Quotations from Writers of all Times and all Countries. Selected and Edited by THEODORE TAYLOR. Crown 8vo, cloth gilt, and gilt edges, 7s. 6d.

GOSPELS (The Holy). Illustrated with upwards of 200 Wood Engravings, after the best Masters, and every page surrounded by ornamental Borders. Handsomely printed, imperial 4to, cloth, full gilt (Grolier style), 10s. 6d.

GOSSE (Edmund W.)—KING ERIE: A Tragedy. Crown 8vo, cloth extra. [In the press.

"Mr. Edmund W. Gosse has in the press a dramatic poem founded on that part of the 'Knytlingasaga' which treats of the voluntary exile and death of King Erie Eiegod."—Academy.

GRAMMONT (Count), MEMOIRS OF. By ANTHONY HAMIL-TON. A New Edition, with a Biographical Sketch of Count Hamilton, numerous Historical and Illustrative Notes by Sir WALTER SCOTT, and 64 Copperplate Portraits by EDWARD SCRIVEN. 8vo, cloth extra, 15s.

GREENWOOD'S (James) LOW-LIFE DEEPS: An Account of the Strange Fish to be found there; including "The Man and Dog Fight," with much additional and confirmatory evidence; "With a Tally-Man," "A Fallen Star," "The Betting Barber," "A Coal Marriage," &c. With Illustrations in tint by ALFRED CONCANEN. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, gilt, 7s. 6d. [In the press.

GREENWOOD'S WILDS OF LONDON; Descriptive Sketches from Personal Observations and Experience of Remarkable Scenes, People, and Places in London. By JAMES GREENWOOD, the "Lambeth Casual." With 12 Tinted Illustrations by ALFRED CONCANEN. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, gilt, 7s. 6d.

"Mr. James Greenwood presents himself once more in the character of 'one whose delight it is to do his humble endeavour towards exposing and extirpating social abuses and those hole-and-corner evils which afflict society.'"—Saturday Review.

GREVILLE'S CRYPTOGAMIC FLORA. Comprising the Principal Species found in Great Britain, inclusive of all the New Species recently discovered in Scotland. Six Vols., royal 8vo, with 360 beautifully Coloured Plates, half-morocco, gilt, £7 7s.; the Plates uncoloured, £4 14s. 6d.

"A truly admirable work, which may be honestly designated as so excellent, that nothing can be found to compete with it in the whole range of Indigenous Botany; whether we consider the importance of its critical discussions, the accuracy of the drawings, the minuteness of the analyses, or the unusual care which is evident in the publishing department."—LOUDON.

GRIMM.—GERMAN POPULAR STORIES. Collected by the Brothers GRIMM, and Translated by EDGAR TAYLOR. Edited, with an Introduction, by JOHN RUSKIN. With 22 Illustrations after the inimitable designs of GEORGE CRUIKSHANK. Both Series Complete. Square crown 8vo, 6s. 6d.; gilt leaves, 7s. 6d.

"The illustrations of this volume . . . . are of quite sterling and admirable art, of a class precisely parallel in elevation to the character of the tales which they illustrate; and the original etchings, as I have before said in the Appendix to my 'Elements of Drawing,' were unrivalled in masterfulness of touch since Rembrandt (in some qualities of delineation, unrivalled even by him). . . . . To make somewhat enlarged copies of them, looking at them through a magnifying glass, and never putting two lines where Cruikshank has put only one, would be an exercise in decision and severe drawing which would leave afterwards little to be learnt in schools."—Extract from Introduction by JOHN RUSKIN.

GUYOT'S EARTH AND MAN; or, Physical Geography in its Relation to the History of Mankind. With Additions by Professors AGASSIZ, PIERCE, and GRAY. With 12 Maps and Engravings on Steel, some Coloured, and a copious Index. A New Edition. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, gilt, 4s. 6d.

HAKE'S (T. GORDON) NEW SYMBOLS: Poems. By the Author of "Parables and Tales." Crown 8vo, cloth extra. [In the press.

HALL'S (Mrs. S. C.) SKETCHES OF IRISH CHARACTER. With numerous Illustrations on Steel and Wood, by DANIEL MACLISE, Sir JOHN GILBERT, W. HARVEY, and G. CRUIKSHANK. 8vo, cloth extra, gilt, 7s. 6d.

"The Irish sketches of this lady resemble Miss Mitford's beautiful English Sketches in 'Our Village,' but they are far more vigorous and picturesque and bright."—Blackwood's Magazine.

HALL-MARKS (BOOK OF); or, Manual of Reference for the Goldsmith and Silversmith. By ALFRED LUTSCHAUNIG. Crown 8vo, with 46 Plates of the Hall-marks of the different Assay Towns of the Kingdom. 7s. 6d.

HARRIS'S AURELIAN; A Natural History of English Moths and Butterflies, and the Plants on which they feed. A New Edition. Edited, with Additions, by J. O. WESTWOOD. With about 400 exquisitely Coloured Figures of Moths, Butterflies, Caterpillars, &c., and the Plants on which they feed. Small folio, half-morocco extra, gilt edges, £3 13s. 6d

HAYDON'S (B. R.) CORRESPONDENCE & TABLE-TALK. With a Memoir by his Son, FREDERICK W. HAYDON. Comprising a large number of hitherto unpublished Letters from KEATS, WILKIE, SOUTHEY, WORDSWORTH, KIRKUP, LAMB, LEIGH HUNT, LANDSEER, and others. Two Volumes, demy 8vo, cloth extra, illustrated with a Portrait and facsimiles of many interesting Sketches; including a Portrait of HAYDON drawn by KEATS, and HAYDON: Portraits of WILKIE, KEATS, LEIGH HUNT, and MARIA FOOTE, Sketched by him in his Journals. [In the press

HEEREN'S HISTORICAL WORKS. Translated from the German by GEORGE BANCROFT, and various Oxford Scholars. Six Vols., 8vo, cloth extra, £1 16*s.*; or, separately, 6*s.* per volume.

 The Contents of the Volumes are as follows:—Vols. 1 and 2. Historical Researches into the Politics, Intercourse, and Trade of the Ancient Nations of Asia; 3. Researches into the Politics, Intercourse, and Trade of the Ancient Nations of Africa, including the Carthaginians, Ethiopians, and Egyptians; 4. History of the Political System of Europe and its Colonies; 5. History of Ancient Greece, with Historical Treatises; 6. A Manual of Ancient History, with special reference to the Constitutions, Commerce, and Colonies of the States of Antiquity.

"Prof. Heeren's Historical Researches stand in the very highest rank among those with which modern Germany has enriched European literature."—Quarterly Review

"We look upon Heeren as having breathed a new life into the dry bones of Ancient History. In countries, the history of which has been too imperfectly known to afford lessons of political wisdom, he has taught us still more interesting lessons—on the social relations of men, and the intercourse of nations in the earlier ages of the world. His work is as learned as a professed commentary on the ancient historians and geographers, and as entertaining as a modern book of travels."—Edinburgh Review.

HISTORICAL PORTRAITS; Upwards of 430 Engravings of Rare Prints. Comprising the Collections of RODD, RICHARDSON, CAULFIELD, &c. With Descriptive Text to every Plate, giving a brief outline of the most important Historical and Biographical Facts and Dates connected with each Portrait, and references to original Authorities. In Three Vols., royal 4to, Roxburghe binding, price £6 6*s.* [In the press.

THE ORIGINAL HOGARTH.

HOGARTH'S WORKS. ENGRAVED BY HIMSELF. 153 fine Plates, with elaborate Letterpress Descriptions by JOHN NICHOLS. Atlas folio, half-morocco extra, gilt edges, £7 10*s.*

"I was pleased with the reply of a gentleman who, being asked which book he esteemed most in his library, answered 'Shakespeare'; being asked which he esteemed next best, answered 'Hogarth.'"—CHARLES LAMB.

HOGARTH'S WORKS. With Life and Anecdotal Descriptions of the Pictures, by JOHN IRELAND and JOHN NICHOLS. 160 Engravings, reduced in exact facsimile of the Originals. The whole in Three Series, 8vo, cloth, gilt, 22*s.* 6*d.*; or, separately, 7*s.* 6*d.* per volume.

HOGARTH'S WORKS. Engraved by T. COOK. 84 Plates, atlas folio, half-morocco, £5.

HOGARTH MORALIZED: A Complete Edition of all the most capital and admired Works of WILLIAM HOGARTH, accompanied by concise and comprehensive Explanations of their Moral Tendency, by the late Rev. Dr. TRUSLER; to which are added, an Introductory Essay, and many Original and Selected Notes, by JOHN MAJOR. With 57 Plates and numerous Woodcuts. New Edition, revised, corrected, and enlarged. Demy 8vo, hf.-Roxburghe, 12*s.* 6*d.*

HOGARTH'S FIVE DAYS' FROLIC; or, Peregrinations by Land and Water. Illustrated by Tinted Drawings, made by HOGARTH and SCOTT during the Journey. Demy 4to, cloth extra, gilt, 10*s.* 6*d.*

HOLBEIN'S PORTRAITS OF THE COURT OF HENRY THE EIGHTH. A Series of 84 exquisitely beautiful Tinted Plates, engraved by BARTOLOZZI, COOPER, and others, and printed on Tinted Paper, in imitation of the Original Drawings in the Royal Collection at Windsor. With Historical Letterpress by EDMUND LODGE, Norroy King of Arms. Imperial 4to, half-morocco extra, gilt edges, £5 15s. 6d.

HOLBEIN'S PORTRAITS OF THE COURT OF HENRY VIII. CHAMBERLAINE'S Imitations of the Original Drawings, mostly engraved by BARTOLOZZI. London: printed by W. BULMER & Co., Shakespeare Printing Office, 1792. 92 splendid Portraits (including 8 additional Plates), elaborately tinted in Colours, with Descriptive and Biographical Notes, by EDMUND LODGE, Norroy King of Arms. Atlas fol., half-morocco, gilt edges, £20.

HONE'S SCRAP-BOOKS: The Miscellaneous Collections of WILLIAM HONE, Author of "The Table-Book," "Every-Day Book," and "Year-Book": being a Supplement to those works. With Notes, Portraits, and numerous Illustrations of curious and eccentric objects. Crown 8vo. [In preparation.

HOOD'S (Thomas) CHOICE WORKS, in Prose and Verse. Including the CREAM OF THE COMIC ANNUALS. With Life of the Author, Portrait, and over Two Hundred original Illustrations. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, gilt, 7s. 6d.

HOOD'S (Tom) FROM NOWHERE TO THE NORTH POLE: A Noah's Arkæological Narrative. By TOM HOOD. With 25 Illustrations by W. BRUNTON and E. C. BARNES. Square crown 8vo, in a handsome and specially-designed binding, gilt edges, 6s.

"Poor Tom Hood! It is very sad to turn over the droll pages of 'From Nowhere to the North Pole,' and to think that he will never make the young people, for whom, like his famous father, he ever had such a kind, sympathetic heart, laugh or cry any more. This is a birthday story, and no part of it is better than the first chapter, concerning birthdays in general, and Frank's birthday in particular. The amusing letterpress is profusely interspersed with the jingling rhymes which children love and learn so easily. Messrs. Brunton and Barnes do full justice to the writer's meaning, and a pleasanter result of the harmonious co-operation of author and artist could not be desired."—Times.

HOOD'S (Tom) HUMOROUS WORKS. Edited, with a Memoir, by his Sister, FRANCES FREELING BRODERIP. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, with numerous Illustrations, 6s. [In the press.

HOOKER'S (Sir William) EXOTIC FLORA. Containing Figures and Descriptions of Rare or otherwise interesting Exotic Plants. With Remarks upon their Generic and Specific Characters, Natural Orders, Culture, &c. Containing 232 large and beautifully Coloured Plates. Three Vols., imperial 8vo, cloth extra, gilt, £6 6s.

HOOKER AND GREVILLE'S ICONES FILICUM; or, Figures and Descriptions of Ferns, many of which have been altogether unnoticed by Botanists, or have been incorrectly figured. With 240 beautifully Coloured Plates. Two Vols., folio, half-morocco, gilt, £12 12s.

HOPE'S COSTUME OF THE ANCIENTS. Illustrated in upwards of 320 Outline Engravings, containing Representations of Egyptian, Greek, and Roman Habits and Dresses. A New Edition. Two Vols., royal 8vo, with Coloured Frontispieces, cloth extra, £2 5s.

HORNE.—ORION. An Epic Poem, in Three Books. By RICHARD HENGIST HORNE. With Photographic Portrait. TENTH EDITION. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 7s.

"Orion will be admitted, by every man of genius, to be one of the noblest, if not the very noblest poetical work of the age. Its defects are trivial and conventional, its beauties intrinsic and supreme."—EDGAR ALLAN POE.

HUME AND SMOLLETT'S HISTORY OF ENGLAND. With a Memoir of HUME by himself, Chronological Table of Contents, and General Index. Imperial 8vo, with Portraits of the Authors, cloth extra, 15s.

HUNT'S (Robert) DROLL STORIES OF OLD CORNWALL; or, POPULAR ROMANCES OF THE WEST OF ENGLAND. With Illustrations by GEORGE CRUIKSHANK. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, gilt, 7*s.* 6*d.*

ITALIAN MASTERS (DRAWINGS BY THE): Autotype Facsimiles of Original Drawings. With Critical and Descriptive Notes by J. COMYNS CARR. Atlas folio, half-morocco, gilt. [In preparation.

ITALIAN SCHOOL OF DESIGN (The): 91 beautiful Plates, chiefly Engraved by BARTOLOZZI, after Paintings in the Royal Collection by MICHAEL ANGELO, DOMENICHINO, ANNIBALE CARACCI, and others. Imperial 4to, half-morocco, gilt edges, £2 12*s.* 6*d.*

JARDINE'S (Sir Wm.) NATURALIST'S LIBRARY. 42 vols. Fcap. 8vo, illustrated by over 1200 Coloured Plates, with numerous Portraits and Memoirs of eminent Naturalists, half (imitation) calf, full gilt, top edges gilt, £9 9*s.*; or, separately, red cloth extra, 4*s.* 6*d.* per Vol., as follows:—

Vols. 1 to 4. British Birds; 5. Sun Birds: 6 and 7. Humming Birds; 8. Game Birds; 9. Pigeons; 10. Parrots; 11 and 12. Birds of West Africa; 13. Fly Catchers; 14. Pheasants, Peacocks, &c.; 15. Animals—Introduction; 16. Lions and Tigers; 17. British Quadrupeds; 18 and 19. Dogs; 20. Horses; 21 and 22. Ruminating Animals; 23. Elephants, &c.; 24. Marsupialia; 25. Seals, &c.; 26. Whales, &c.; 27. Monkeys; 28. Insects—Introduction; 29. British Butterflies; 30. British Moths, &c.; 31. Foreign Butterflies; 32. Foreign Moths; 33. Beetles; 34. Bees; 35. Fishes—Introduction, and Foreign Fishes; 36 and 37. British Fishes; 38. Perch, &c.; 39 and 40. Fishes of Guiana; 41. Smith's Natural History of Man: 42. Gould's Humming Birds.

JENNINGS' (Hargrave) ONE OF THE THIRTY. With numerous curious Illustrations. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 10*s.* 6*d.*

JENNINGS' (Hargrave) THE ROSICRUCIANS: Their Rites and Mysteries. With Chapters on the Ancient Fire and Serpent Worshippers, and Explanations of Mystic Symbols in Monuments and Talismans of Primeval Philosophers. Crown 8vo, with 300 Illustrations, 10*s.* 6*d.*

JERROLD'S (Douglas) THE BARBER'S CHAIR, AND THE HEDGEHOG LETTERS. Edited, with an Introduction, by his Son, BLANCHARD JERROLD. Crown 8vo, with Steel-plate Portrait, cloth extra, 7*s.* 6*d.*

"Better fitted than any other of his productions to give an idea of Douglas Jerrold's amazing wit; the 'Barber's Chair' may be presumed to give as near an approach as is possible in print to the wit of Jerrold's conversation."—Examiner.

JOHNSON'S ENGLISH DICTIONARY. Printed verbatim from the Author's Last and most Complete Edition, with all the Examples in full; to which are prefixed a History of the Language and a Grammar of the English Tongue. Imperial 8vo, cloth extra, 15*s.*

JOHNSON'S LIVES OF ENGLISH HIGHWAYMEN, PIRATES, AND ROBBERS. With Additions by WHITEHEAD. Fcap. 8vo, 16 Plates, cloth extra, gilt, 5*s.*

JOSEPHUS (The Works of). Translated by WHISTON. Containing both the "Antiquities of the Jews," and the "Wars of the Jews." Two Vols., 8vo, with 52 Illustrations and Maps, cloth extra, gilt, 14*s.*

KAVANAGH.—FAIRY STORIES. By BRIDGET and JULIA KAVANAGH. Illustrated by J. MOYR SMITH. Small 8vo, cloth, full gilt, 6*s.*

KINGSLEY'S (Henry) NUMBER SEVENTEEN: A Novel. New and popular Edition, with a Frontispiece, crown 8vo, cloth extra, 6*s.*

[In the press.

KNIGHT'S (H. Gally) ECCLESIASTICAL ARCHITECTURE OF ITALY, from the time of Constantine to the Fifteenth Century, with Introduction and descriptive Text. Complete in Two Series; the FIRST, to the end of the Eleventh Century; the SECOND, from the Twelfth to the Fifteenth Century: containing 81 beautiful Views of Ecclesiastical Buildings in Italy, several of them Illuminated in gold and colours. Imperial folio, half-morocco extra, price £3 13*s.* 6*d.* each Series.

LAMB'S (Charles) COMPLETE WORKS, in Prose and Verse, reprinted from the Original Editions, with many pieces now first included in any Edition, and Notes and Introduction by R. H. SHEPHERD. With Two Portraits and facsimile of a page of the "Essay on Roast Pig." Crown 8vo, cloth extra, gilt, 7*s.* 6*d.*

"A complete edition of Lamb's writings, in prose and verse, has long been wanted, and is now supplied. The editor appears to have taken great pains to bring together Lamb's scattered contributions, and his collection contains a number of pieces which are now reproduced for the first time since their original appearance in various old periodicals."—Saturday Review.

LAMB (Mary and Charles): THEIR POEMS, LETTERS, and REMAINS. With Reminiscences and Notes by W. CAREW HAZLITT. With HANCOCK'S Portrait of the Essayist, Facsimiles of the Title-pages of the rare First Editions of Lamb's and Coleridge's Works, and numerous Illustrations. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 10*s.* 6*d.*; Large Paper copies, 21*s.*

"Must be consulted by all future biographers of the Lambs."—Daily News.

"Very many passages will delight those fond of literary trifles; hardly any portion will fail in interest for lovers of Charles Lamb and his sister."—Standard.

LAMONT'S YACHTING IN THE ARCTIC SEAS: An Examination of Routes to the North Pole, during Five Voyages of Sport and Discovery in the Neighbourhood of the Great Ice Pack. By JAMES LAMONT, F.G.S., F.R.G.S., Author of "Seasons with the Sea-Horses." Edited, with numerous full-page Illustrations, by WILLIAM LIVESAY, M.D. Demy 8vo, cloth extra, with Maps and Illustrations. [In the press.

LANDSEER'S (Sir Edwin) ETCHINGS OF CARNIVOROUS ANIMALS. Comprising 38 subjects, chiefly Early Works, etched by his Brother THOMAS or his Father, with Letterpress Descriptions. Roy. 4to, cloth extra 15*s.*

LEE (General Robert): HIS LIFE AND CAMPAIGNS. By his Nephew, EDWARD LEE CHILDE. With Steel-plate Portrait by JEENS, and a Map. Post 8vo, 9*s.*

LIFE IN LONDON; or, The Day and Night Scenes of Jerry Hawthorn and Corinthian Tom. WITH THE WHOLE OF CRUIKSHANK'S VERY DROLL ILLUSTRATIONS, in Colours, after the Originals. Cr. 8vo, cloth extra, 7*s.* 6*d.*

LINTON'S (Mrs. E. Lynn) PATRICIA KEMBALL: A Novel. New and Popular Edition, with a Frontispiece by GEORGE DU MAURIER. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, gilt, 6*s.*

"A very clever and well-constructed story, original and striking, and interesting all through. . . . A novel abounding in thought and power and interest."—Times.

"Perhaps the ablest novel published in London this year (1874) . . . We know of nothing in the novels we have lately read equal to the scene in which Mr. Hamley proposes to Dora . . . We advise our readers to send to the library for the story."—Athenæum.

"This novel is distinguished by qualities which entitle it to a place apart from the ordinary fiction of the day; . . . displays genuine humour, as well as keen social observation. . . . . Enough graphic portraiture and witty observation to furnish materials for half a dozen novels of the ordinary kind."—Saturday Review.

LINTON'S (Mrs. E. Lynn) JOSHUA DAVIDSON, CHRISTIAN AND COMMUNIST. SIXTH EDITION, with a New Preface. Small crown 8vo, cloth extra, 4*s.* 6*d.*

LONDON.—WILKINSON'S LONDINA ILLUSTRATA; or, Graphic and Historical Illustrations of the most Interesting and Curious Architectural Monuments of the City and Suburbs of London and Westminster (now mostly destroyed). Two Vols., imperial 4to, containing 207 Copperplate Engravings, with historical and descriptive Letterpress, half-bound morocco, top edges gilt, £5 5*s.*

 An enumeration of a few of the Plates will give some idea of the scope of the Work:—St. Bartholomew's Church, Cloisters, and Priory, in 1393; St. Michael's, Cornhill, in 1421; St. Paul's Cathedral and Cross, in 1616 and 1656; St. John's of Jerusalem, Clerkenwell, 1660; Bunyan's Meeting House, in 1687; Guildhall, in 1517; Cheapside and its Cross, in 1547, 1585, and 1641; Cornhill, in 1599; Merchant Taylors' Hall, in 1599; Shakespeare's Globe Theatre, in 1612 and 1647; Alleyne's Bear Garden, in 1614 and 1647; Drury Lane, in 1792 and 1814; Covent Garden, in 1732, 1794, and 1809; Whitehall, in 1638 and 1697; York House, with Inigo Jones's Water Gate, circa 1626; Somerset House, previous to its alteration by Inigo Jones, circa 1600: St James's Palace, 1660; Montagu House (now the British Museum) before 1685, and in 1804.

LONGFELLOW'S PROSE WORKS, Complete. With Portrait and Illustrations by VALENTINE BROMLEY. 800 pages, crown 8vo, cloth gilt, 7*s.* 6*d.*

 This is by far the most complete edition ever issued in this country. "Outre-Mer" contains two additional chapters, restored from the first edition; while "The Poets and Poetry of Europe," and the little collection of Sketches entitled "Driftwood," are now first introduced to the English public.

LONGFELLOW'S POETICAL WORKS. With numerous fine Illustrations. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, gilt, 7*s.* 6*d.*

LOST BEAUTIES OF THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE. An Appeal to Authors, Poets, Clergymen, and Public Speakers. By CHARLES MACKAY, LL.D. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 6*s.* 6*d.*

LOTOS LEAVES: Original Stories, Essays, and Poems, by WILKIE COLLINS, MARK TWAIN, WHITELAW REID, JOHN HAY, NOAH BROOKS, JOHN BROUGHAM, P. V. NASBY, ISAAC BROMLEY, and others. Profusely Illustrated by ALFRED FREDERICKS, ARTHUR LUMLEY, JOHN LA FARGE, GILBERT BURLING, GEORGE WHITE, and others. Crown 4to, handsomely bound, cloth extra, gilt and gilt edges, 21*s.*

"A very comely and pleasant volume, produced by general contribution of a literary club in New York, which has some kindly relations with a similar coterie in London. A livre de luxe, splendidly illustrated."—Daily Telegraph.

MACLISE'S GALLERY OF ILLUSTRIOUS LITERARY CHARACTERS. (THE FAMOUS FRASER PORTRAITS.) With Notes by the late WILLIAM MAGINN, LL.D. Edited, with copious Additional Notes, by WILLIAM BATES, B.A. The volume contains 83 CHARACTERISTIC PORTRAITS, now first issued in a complete form. Demy 4to, cloth gilt and gilt edges, 31*s.* 6*d.*

"One of the most interesting volumes of this year's literature."—Times.

"Deserves a place on every drawing-room table, and may not unfitly be removed from the drawing-room to the library."—Spectator.

MACQUOID'S (Katharine S., Author of "Patty," &c.) THE EVIL EYE, and other Stories. With 8 Illustrations by THOMAS R. MACQUOID and PERCY MACQUOID. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, price 6*s.* [In the press.

MADRE NATURA versus THE MOLOCH OF FASHION. By LUKE LIMNER. With 32 Illustrations by the Author. FOURTH EDITION, revised and enlarged. Crown 8vo, cloth, extra gilt, 2*s.* 6*d.*

"Agreeably written and amusingly illustrated. Common sense and erudition are brought to bear on the subjects discussed in it."—Lancet.

MAGNA CHARTA. An exact Facsimile of the Original Document in the British Museum, printed on fine plate paper, nearly 3 feet long by 2 feet wide, with the Arms and Seals of the Barons emblazoned in Gold and Colours. Price 5*s.*

A full Translation, with Notes, printed on a large sheet, price 6*d.*

MANTELL'S PICTORIAL ATLAS OF FOSSIL REMAINS. With Additions and Descriptions. 4to, 74 Coloured Plates, cloth extra, 31*s.* 6*d.*

AUTHOR'S CORRECTED EDITION.

MARK TWAIN'S CHOICE WORKS. Revised and Corrected throughout by the Author. With Life, Portrait, and numerous Illustrations. 700 pages, cloth extra, gil 7*s.* 6*d.*

MARK TWAIN'S PLEASURE TRIP on the CONTINENT of EUROPE. Post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2*s.*

MARRYAT'S (Florence) OPEN! SESAME! New and popular Edition, with a Frontispiece, crown 8vo, cloth extra, 6*s.* [In the press.

"A story which arouses and sustains the reader's interest to a higher degree than, perhaps, any of its author's former works. . . . A very excellent story."—Graphic.

MARSTON'S (Dr. Westland) DRAMATIC and POETICAL WORKS. Collected Library Edition, in Two Vols., crown 8vo. [In the press.

MARSTON'S (Philip Bourke) SONG TIDE, and other Poems. Second Edition. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 8*s.*

"This is a first work of extraordinary performance and of still more extraordinary promise. The youngest school of English poetry has received an important accession to its ranks in Philip Bourke Marston."—Examiner.

MARSTON'S (P. B.) ALL IN ALL: Poems and Sonnets. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 8*s.*

"Many of these poems are leavened with the leaven of genuine poetical sentiment, and expressed with grace and beauty of language. A tender melancholy, as well as a penetrating pathos, gives character to much of their sentiment, and lends it an irresistible interest to all who can feel."—Standard.

MAXWELL'S LIFE OF THE DUKE OF WELLINGTON. Three Vols., 8vo, with numerous highly finished Line and Wood Engravings by Eminent Artists. Cloth extra, gilt, £1 7*s.*

MAYHEW'S LONDON CHARACTERS: Illustrations of the Humour, Pathos, and Peculiarities of London Life. By HENRY MAYHEW, Author of "London Labour and the London Poor," and other Writers. With nearly 100 graphic Illustrations by W. S. GILBERT and others. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 6*s.*

"Well fulfils the promise of its title. . . The book is an eminently interesting one, and will probably attract many readers."—Court Circular.

MILLINGEN'S ANCIENT UNEDITED MONUMENTS; comprising Painted Greek Vases, Statues, Busts, Bas-Reliefs, and other Remains of Grecian Art. 62 beautiful Engravings, mostly Coloured, with Letterpress Descriptions. Imperial 4to, half-morocco, £4 14*s.* 6*d.*

MEYRICK'S ENGRAVED ILLUSTRATIONS OF ANCIENT ARMS AND ARMOUR. 154 highly finished Etchings of the Collection at Goodrich Court, Herefordshire, engraved by JOSEPH SKELTON, with Historical and Critical Disquisitions by Sir S. R. MEYRICK. Two Vols., imperial 4to, with Portrait, half-morocco extra, gilt edges, £4 14*s.* 6*d.*

MEYRICK'S PAINTED ILLUSTRATIONS OF ANCIENT ARMS AND ARMOUR: A Critical Inquiry into Ancient Armour as it existed in Europe, but particularly in England, from the Norman Conquest to the Reign of Charles II.; with a Glossary, by Sir S. R. MEYRICK. New and greatly improved Edition, corrected throughout by the Author, with the assistance of ALBERT WAY and others. Illustrated by more than 100 Plates, splendidly Illuminated in gold and silver; also an additional Plate of the Tournament of Locks and Keys. Three Vols., imperial 4to, half-morocco extra, gilt edges, £10 10*s*.

"While the splendour of the decorations of this work is well calculated to excite curiosity, the novel character of its contents, the very curious extracts from the rare MSS. in which it abounds, and the pleasing manner in which the author's antiquarian researches are prosecuted, will tempt many who take up the book in idleness, to peruse it with care. No previous work can be compared, in point of extent, arrangement, science, or utility, with the one now in question. 1st. It for the first time supplies to our schools of art, correct and ascertained data for costume, in its noblest and most important branch—historical painting. and. It affords a simple, clear, and most conclusive elucidation of a great number of passages in our great dramatic poets—ay, and in the works of those of Greece and Rome—against which commentators and scholiasts have been trying their wits for centuries. 3rd. It throws a flood of light upon the manners, usages, and sports of our ancestors, from the time of the Anglo-Saxons down to the reign of Charles the Second. And lastly it at once removes a vast number of idle traditions and ingenious fables, which one compiler of history, copying from another, has succeeded in transmitting through the lapse of four or five hundred years.

"It is not often the fortune of a painful student of antiquity to conduct his readers through so splendid a succession of scenes and events as those to which Dr. Meyrick here successively introduces us. But he does it with all the ease and gracefulness of an accomplished cicerone. We see the haughty nobles and the impetuous knights—we are present at their arming—assist them to their shields—enter the well-appointed lists with them—and partake the hopes and fears, the perils, honours, and successes of the manly tournaments. Then we are presented to the glorious damsels, all superb and lovely, in 'velours and clothe of golde and dayntie devyces, bothe in pearls and emerawds, sawphires and dymondes,—and the banquet, with the serving men and bucklers, servitors and trenchers—kings and queens—pageants, &c. &c. We feel as if the age of chivalry had returned in all its glory."—Edinburgh Review.

MILTON'S COMPLETE WORKS, Prose and Poetical. With an Introductory Essay by ROBERT FLETCHER. Imp. 8vo, with Portraits, cl. extra, 15*s*.

"It is to be regretted that the prose writings of Milton should, in our time, be so little read. As compositions, they deserve the attention of every man who wishes to become acquainted with the full power of the English language. They abound with passages compared with which the finest declamations of Burke sink into insignificance. They are a perfect field of cloth of gold. The style is stiff with gorgeous embroidery. Not even in the earlier books of the 'Paradise Lost' has the great poet ever risen higher than in those parts of his controversial works in which his feelings, excited by conflict, find a vent in bursts of devotional and lyric rapture. It is, to borrow his own majestic language, 'a sevenfold chorus of hallelujahs and harping symphonies.'"—MACAULAY.

MITFORD'S (Mary Russell) COUNTRY STORIES. With 5 Steel-plate Illustrations. Fcap. 8vo, cloth extra, gilt edges, 3*s*. 6*d*.

MONTAGU'S (Lady Mary Wortley) LETTERS AND WORKS. Edited by Lord WHARNCLIFFE. With important Additions and Corrections, derived from the Original Manuscripts, and a New Memoir. Two Vols., 8vo, with fine Steel Portraits, cloth extra, 18*s*.

"I have heard Dr. Johnson say that he never read but one book through from choice in his whole life, and that book was Lady Mary Wortley Montagu's Letters."—BOSWELL.

MOSES' ANTIQUE VASES, Candelabra, Lamps, Tripods, Paterse, Tazzas, Tombs, Mausoleums, Sepulchral Chambers, Cinerary Urns, Sarcophagi, Cippi, and other Ornaments. 170 Plates, several of which are coloured; with historical and descriptive Letterpress by THOS. HOPE, F.A.S. Small 4to, cloth extra, 18*s*.

MONUMENTAL INSCRIPTIONS OF THE WEST INDIES, from the Earliest Date, with Genealogical and Historical Annotations, &c., from Original, Local, and other Sources. Illustrative of the Histories and Genealogies of the Seventeenth Century, the Calendars of State Papers, Peerages, and Baronetages. With Engravings of the Arms of the Principal Families. Chiefly collected on the spot by Capt. J. H. LAWRENCE-ARCHER. Demy 4to, half-Roxburghe, gilt top, 42*s.*

MUSES OF MAYFAIR: Vers de Société of the Nineteenth Century. Including Selections from TENNYSON, BROWNING, SWINBURNE, ROSSETTI, JEAN INGELOW, LOCKER, INGOLDSBY, HOOD, LYTTON, C.S.C., LANDOR, AUSTIN DOBSON, HENRY LEIGH, &c. &c. Edited by H. CHOLMONDELEY-PENNELL. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, gilt, gilt edges, 7*s.* 6*d.*

NAPOLEON III., THE MAN OF HIS TIME. From Caricatures. Part I. THE STORY OF THE LIFE OF NAPOLEON III., as told by J. M. HASWELL. Part II. THE SAME STORY, as told by the POPULAR CARICATURES of the past Thirty-five Years. Crown 8vo, with Coloured Frontispiece and over 100 Caricatures, 7*s.* 6*d.*

NATIONAL GALLERY (The). A Selection from its Pictures. By CLAUDE, REMBRANDT, CUYP, Sir DAVID WILKIE, CORREGGIO, GAINSBOROUGH, CANALETTI, VANDYCK, PAUL VERONESE, CARACCI, RUBENS, N. and G. POUSSIN, and other great Masters. Engraved by GEORGE DOO, JOHN BURNETT, WM. FINDEN, JOHN and HENRY LE KEUX, JOHN PYE, WALTER BROMLEY, and others. With descriptive Text. Columbier 4to, cl. extra, full gilt and gilt edges, 42*s.*

NICHOLSON'S FIVE ORDERS of ARCHITECTURE (The Student's Instructor for Drawing and Working the). Demy 8vo, with 41 Plates, cloth extra, 5*s.*

NIEBUHR'S LECTURES ON ROMAN HISTORY, delivered at the University of Bonn. Translated into English from the Edition of Dr. M. ISLER, by H. le M. CHEPMELL, M.A., and FRANZ DEMMLER, Ph.D. Three vols., fcap. 8vo, half (imitation) calf, full gilt back, and top edge gilt, price 13*s.* 6*d.*

OLD BOOKS—FACSIMILE REPRINTS.

ARMY LISTS OF THE ROUNDHEADS AND CAVALIERS IN THE CIVIL WAR, 1642. SECOND EDITION, Corrected and considerably Enlarged. Edited, with Notes and full Index, by EDWARD PEACOCK, F.S.A. 4to, half-Roxburghe, 7*s.* 6*d.*

D'URFEY'S ("Tom") WIT AND MIRTH; or, PILLS TO PURGE MELANCHOLY. Being a Collection of the best Merry Ballads and Songs, Old and New. Fitted to all Humours, having each their proper Tune for either Voice or Instrument; most of the Songs being new set. London: Printed by W. Pearson, for J. Tonson, at Shakespeare's Head, over against Catherine Street in the Strand, 1719. An exact reprint. In Six Vols., large fcap. 8vo, printed on antique laid paper, antique boards, £3 3*s.*

EARLY NEWS SHEET.—The Russian Invasion of Poland in 1563. (Memorabilis et perinde stupenda de crudeli Moscovitarum Expeditione Narratio, e Germanico in Latinum conversa.) An exact Facsimile of a Contemporary Account, with Introduction, Historical Notes, and full Translation. Large fcap. 8vo, antique paper, half-Roxburghe, 7*s.* 6*d.*

ENGLISH ROGUE (The), described in the Life of MERITON LATROON, and other Extravagants, comprehending the most Eminent Cheats of both Sexes. By RICHARD HEAD and FRANCIS KIRKMAN. A Facsimile Reprint of the rare Original Edition (1665-1672), with Frontispiece, Facsimiles of the 12 Copperplates, and Portraits of the Authors. In Four Vols., large fcap. 8vo, printed on antique laid paper, and bound in antique boards, 36*s.*

HOGG'S JACOBITE RELICS OF SCOTLAND: The Songs, Airs, and Legends of the Adherents to the House of Stuart. Collected and Illustrated by JAMES HOGG. Two Vols, demy 8vo. ORIGINAL EDITION. Cloth extra, 28*s.*

OLD BOOKS—continued.

IRELAND FORGERIES.—Confessions of WILLIAM HENRY IRELAND. Containing the Particulars of his Fabrication of the Shakespeare Manuscripts: together with Anecdotes and Opinions (hitherto unpublished) of many Distinguished Persons in the Literary, Political, and Theatrical World. A Facsimile Reprint from the Original Edition, with several additional Facsimiles. Fcap. 8vo, antique paper and boards, 10*s.* 6*d.*; a few Large Paper copies, at 21*s.*

JOE MILLER'S JESTS: The politest Repartees, most elegant Bons-mots, and most pleasing short Stories in the English Language. London: printed by T. Read. 1739. A Facsimile of Orig. Edit. 8vo, half-morocco, 9*s.* 6*d.*

LITTLE LONDON DIRECTORY OF 1677. The Oldest Printed List of the Merchants and Bankers of London. Reprinted from the Rare Original, with Introduction by J. C. HOTTEN. 16mo, binding after the original, 6*s.* 6*d.*

MERRY DROLLERY, Complete; or, a Collection of Jovial Poems, Merry Songs, Witty Drolleries, intermingled with Pleasant Catches. Collected by W.N.C.B.R.S.J.C., Lovers of Wit. The two Parts in 1 Vol. A page-for-page and literal reprint. Edited, with Indexes and Notes, by J. WOODFALL EBSWORTH, M.A. Cantab. Large fcap. 8vo, antique paper and cloth boards, 12*s.* 6*d.*

MUSARUM DELICIÆ; or, The Muses' Recreation, 1656; Wit Restored, 1658; and Wit's Recreations, 1640. The whole compared with the Originals. With all the Wood Engravings, Plates, Memoirs, and Notes. A New Edition, in Two Vols., large fcap. 8vo, antique paper and boards, 21*s.*

MYSTERY OF THE GOOD OLD CAUSE. Sarcastic Notices of those Members of the Long Parliament that held Places, both Civil and Military, contrary to the Self-denying Ordinance of April 3, 1645; with the Sums of Money and Lands they divided among themselves. Sm. 4to, half-morocco, 7*s.* 6*d.*

RUMP (The); or, An Exact Collection of the Choicest POEMS and SONGS relating to the late Times, and continued by the most eminent Wits; from Anno 1639 to 1661. A Facsimile Reprint of the rare Original Edition (London, 1662), with Frontispiece and Engraved Title-page. In Two Vols., large fcap. 8vo, printed on antique laid paper, and bound in antique boards, 17*s.* 6*d.*

WESTMINSTER DROLLERIES: Being a Choice Collection of Songs and Poems sung at Court and Theatres. With Additions made by a Person of Quality. Now first reprinted in exact Facsimile from the Original Editions of 1671 and 1672. Edited, with an Introduction on the Literature of the Drolleries, a copious Appendix of Notes, Illustrations, and Emendations of Text, Table of Contents, and Index of First Lines, by J. WOODFALL EBSWORTH, M.A., Cantab. Large fcap. 8vo, antique paper and boards, 12*s.* 6*d.*

OLD DRAMATISTS.

BEN JONSON'S WORKS. With Notes, Critical and Explanatory, and a Biographical Memoir by WM. GIFFORD. Edited by Cbl. CUNNINGHAM. Complete in Three Vols., crown 8vo, cloth extra, gilt, with Portrait, 6*s.* each.

CHAPMAN'S (George) COMPLETE WORKS. Now first Collected. In Three Volumes, crown 8vo, cloth extra, with two Frontispieces, price 18*s.*; or, separately, 6*s.* per vol. Vol. I. contains the Plays complete, including the doubtful ones; Vol. II. the Poems and Minor Translations, with an Introductory Essay by ALGERNON CHARLES SWINBURNE; Vol. III. the Translations of the Iliad and Odyssey.

MARLOWE'S WORKS. Including his Translations. Edited, with Notes and Introduction, by Col. CUNNINGHAM. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, gilt, with Portrait, price 6*s.*

MASSINGER'S PLAYS. From the Text of WM. GIFFORD. With the addition of the Tragedy of "Believe as You List." Edited by Col. CUNNINGHAM. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, gilt, with Portrait, price 6*s.*

OLD SHEKARRY'S FOREST AND FIELD: Life and Adventure in Wild Africa. With 8 Illustrations. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, gilt, 6s.

OLD SHEKARRY'S WRINKLES; or, Hints to Sportsmen and Travellers upon Dress, Equipment, Armament, and Camp Life. A New Edition, with Illustrations. Small crown 8vo, cloth extra, gilt, 6s.

"The book is most comprehensive in its character, nothing necessary to the paraphernalia of the travelling sportsman being omitted, while the hints are given in that plain, unvarnished language which can be easily understood. There are numerous illustrations, and the book has been excellently brought out by the publishers."—Sportsman.

ORIGINAL LISTS OF PERSONS OF QUALITY; Emigrants; Religious Exiles; Political Rebels; Serving Men Sold for a Term of Years; Apprentices; Children Stolen; Maidens Pressed; and others who went from Great Britain to the American Plantations, 1600–1700. From MSS. in Her Majesty's Public Record Office. Edited by JOHN CAMDEN HOTTEN. Crown 4to, cloth gilt, 700 pages, 38s. Large Paper copies, half-morocco, 60s.

"This volume is an English Family Record, and as such may be commended English families, and the descendants of English families, wherever they exist."—Academy.

O'SHAUGHNESSY'S (Arthur) AN EPIC OF WOMEN, and other Poems. Second Edition. Fcap. 8vo, cloth extra, 6s.

O'SHAUGHNESSY'S LAYS OF FRANCE. (Founded on the "Lays of Marie.") Second Edition. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 10s. 6d.

O'SHAUGHNESSY'S MUSIC AND MOONLIGHT: Poems and Songs. Fcap. 8vo, cloth extra, 7s. 6d.

"It is difficult to say which is more exquisite, the technical perfection of structure and melody, or the delicate pathos of thought. Mr. O'Shaughnessy will enrich our literature with some of the very best songs written in our generation."—Academy.

OTTLEY'S FACSIMILES OF SCARCE AND CURIOUS PRINTS, by the Early Masters of the Italian, German, and Flemish Schools. 129 Copperplate Engravings, illustrative of the History of Engraving, from the Invention of the Art (the Niellos printed in Silver). Imperial 4to, half-bound morocco, top edges gilt, £6 6s.

OUIDA'S NOVELS.—Uniform Edition, crown 8vo, cloth extra, gilt, price 5s. each.

Folle Farine.

Idalia. A Romance.

Chandos. A Novel.

Under Two Flags.

Cecil Castlemaine's Gage.

Tricotrin. The Story of a Waif and Stray.

Pascarèl. Only a Story.

Held in Bondage; or, Granville de Vigne.

Puck. His Vicissitudes, Adventures, &c.

A Dog of Flanders, and other Stories.

Strathmore; or, Wrought by his Own Hand.

Two Little Wooden Shoes.

"Keen poetic insight, an intense love of nature, a deep admiration of the beautiful in form and colour, are the gifts of Ouida."—Morning Post.

PALEY'S COMPLETE WORKS. Containing the Natural Theology, Moral and Political Philosophy, Evidences of Christianity, Horæ Paulinæ, Clergyman's Companion, &c. Demy 8vo, with Portrait, cloth extra, 5s.

PERCY'S RELIQUES OF ANCIENT ENGLISH POETRY. Consisting of Old Heroic Ballads, Songs, and other Pieces of our Earlier Poets, together with some few of later date, and a copious Glossary. Medium 8vo with Engraved Title and Frontispiece, cloth extra, gilt, 5s.

PARKS OF LONDON: Their History, from the Earliest Period to the Present Time. By JACOB LARWOOD. With numerous Illustrations, Coloured and Plain. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, gilt, 7*s.* 6*d.*

PLATTNER'S MANUAL OF QUALITATIVE AND QUANTITATIVE ANALYSIS WITH THE BLOWPIPE. From the last German Edition. Revised and enlarged by Prof. TH. RICHTER, Royal Saxon Mining Academy. Translated by Prof. H. B. CORNWALL, School of Mines, New York. Edited by T. HUGO COOKESLEY. With numerous Illustrations. Demy 8vo, cloth extra, 21*s.*

"'Plattner's Manual' deservedly stands first among all other works on this subject, and its appearance in English will be hailed by all those who are occupied in the analysis of mineral ores, but who, from ignorance of the German language, have been hitherto unable to study it. It is a work of great practical as well as scientific value."—Standard.

"By far the most complete work extant on a subject of growing practical importance and of extreme interest."—Mining Journal.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES, Complete. Translated by the LANGHORNES. New Edition, with Medallion Portraits. In Two Vols., 8vo, cloth extra, 10*s.* 6*d.*

POE'S (Edgar Allan) CHOICE PROSE AND POETICAL WORKS. With BAUDELAIRE'S "Essay." 750 pages, crown 8vo, Portrait and Illustrations, cloth extra, 7*s.* 6*d.*

PRACTICAL ASSAYER: A Guide to Miners and Explorers. Giving directions, in the simplest form, for assaying bullion and the baser metals by the cheapest, quickest, and best methods. By OLIVER NORTH. With Tables and Illustrative Woodcuts. Crown 8vo, 7*s.* 6*d.*

PRIVATE BOOK OF USEFUL ALLOYS AND MEMORANDA FOR GOLDSMITHS AND JEWELLERS. By JAMES E. COLLINS, C.E. Royal 16mo, 3*s.* 6*d.*

PROUT, FATHER.—THE FINAL RELIQUES OF FATHER PROUT. Collected and edited, from MSS. supplied by the family of the Rev. FRANCIS MAHONY, by BLANCHARD JERROLD. With Portrait and Facsimiles.

PUCK ON PEGASUS. By H. CHOLMONDELEY-PENNELL. Profusely illustrated by JOHN LEECH, H. K. BROWNE, Sir NOEL PATON, J. E. MILLAIS, JOHN TENNIEL, RICHARD DOYLE, ELLEN EDWARDS, and other Artists. Seventh Edition, crown 8vo, cloth extra, gilt, price 5*s.*

"The book is clever and amusing, vigorous and healthy."—Saturday Review.

PUGIN'S ARCHITECTURAL WORKS.

APOLOGY FOR THE REVIVAL OF CHRISTIAN ARCHITECTURE. With 10 large Etchings. Small 4to, cloth extra, 5*s.*

EXAMPLES OF GOTHIC ARCHITECTURE, selected from Ancient Edifices in England. 225 Engravings by LE KEUX, with descriptive Letterpress by E. J. WILLSON. Three Vols., 4to, half-morocco, £3 13*s.* 6*d.*

FLORIATED ORNAMENTS. 31 Plates in Gold and Colours, royal 4to, half-morocco, £1 16*s.*

GOTHIC ORNAMENTS. 90 Plates, by J. D. HARDING and others. Royal 4to, half-bound, £1 16*s.*

ORNAMENTAL TIMBER GABLES. 30 Plates. Royal 4to, cloth extra, 18*s.*

SPECIMENS OF GOTHIC ARCHITECTURE, from Ancient Edifices in England. 114 Outline Plates by LE KEUX and others. With descriptive Letterpress and Glossary by E. J. WILLSON. Two Vols., 4to, half-morocco, £1 16*s.*

TRUE PRINCIPLES OF POINTED OR CHRISTIAN ARCHITECTURE. With 87 Illustrations. Small 4to, cloth extra, 10*s.* 6*d.*

PUNIANA; or, Thoughts Wise and Other-Why's. A New Collection of Riddles, Conundrums, Jokes, Sells, &c. In Two Series, each containing 3000 of the best Riddles, 10,000 most outrageous Puns, and upwards of fifty beautifully-executed Drawings by the Editor, the Hon. HUGH ROWLEY. Price of each Volume, in small 4to, blue and gold, gilt edges, 6*s*. Each Series Complete in itself.

"A witty, droll, and most amusing work, profusely and elegantly illustrated."—Standard.

PURSUIVANT OF ARMS (The); or, Heraldry founded upon Facts. A Popular Guide to the Science of Heraldry. By J. R. PLANCHÉ, Esq., Somerset Herald. To which are added, Essays on the BADGES OF THE HOUSES OF LANCASTER AND YORK. With Coloured Frontispiece, five full-page Plates, and about 200 Illustrations. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, gilt, 7*s*. 6*d*.

QUEENS AND KINGS, AND OTHER THINGS: A Rare and Choice Collection of Pictures, Poetry, and strange but veritable Histories, designed and written by the Princess HESSE-SCHWARZBOURG. Imprinted in gold and many colours by the Brothers DALZIEL, at their Camden Press. Imperial 4to, cloth gilt and gilt edges, £1 1*s*.

RABELAIS' WORKS. Faithfully translated from the French, with variorum Notes, and numerous Characteristic Illustrations by GUSTAVE DORÉ. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 700 pages, 7*s*. 6*d*.

READE'S (Winwood) THE OUTCAST. Cr. 8vo, cloth extra, 5*s*.

"He relaxed his mind in his leisure hours by the creation of a new religion."—Standard.

"A work of very considerable power, written with great pathos and evident earnestness."—Athenæum.

REMARKABLE TRIALS AND NOTORIOUS CHARACTERS. From "Half-Hanged Smith," 1700, to Oxford, who shot at the Queen, 1840. By Captain L. BENSON. With nearly Fifty spirited full-page Engravings by PHIZ. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, gilt, 7*s*. 6*d*.

ROLL OF BATTLE ABBEY; or, A List of the Principal Warriors who came over from Normandy with William the Conqueror, and Settled in this Country, A.D. 1066–7. Printed on fine plate paper, nearly three feet by two, with the principal Arms emblazoned in Gold and Colours. Price 5*s*.

ROLL OF CAERLAVEROCK, the Oldest Heraldic Roll; including the Original Anglo-Norman Poem, and an English Translation of the MS. in the British Museum. By THOMAS WRIGHT, M.A. The Arms emblazoned in Gold and Colours. In 4to, very handsomely printed, extra gold cloth, 12*s*.

ROMAN CATHOLICS IN THE COUNTY OF YORK IN 1604 (A List of). Transcribed from the MS. in the Bodleian Library, and Edited, with Notes, by EDWARD PEACOCK, F.S.A. Small 4to, cloth extra, 15*s*.

ROSCOE'S LIFE AND PONTIFICATE OF LEO THE TENTH. Edited by his Son, THOMAS ROSCOE. Two Vols., 8vo, with Portraits and numerous Plates, cloth extra, 18*s*.

 Also, an Edition in One Vol. 16mo, cloth extra, price 3*s*.

ROSCOE'S LIFE OF LORENZO DE' MEDICI, called "THE MAGNIFICENT." A New and much improved Edition. Edited by his Son, THOMAS ROSCOE. Demy 8vo, with Portraits and numerous Plates, cloth extra, 9*s*.

ROSS'S (C. H.) STORY OF A HONEYMOON. With numerous Illustrations by the Author. Fcap. 8vo, illustrated boards, 2*s*.

ROWLANDSON (Thomas): HIS LIFE AND TIMES; The History of his Caricatures, and the Key to their Meaning. With very numerous full-page Plates and Wood Engravings. Demy 4to, cloth extra, gilt and gilt edges, 31*s.* 6*d.* [In preparation.

SAINT-SIMON (MEMOIRS OF THE DUKE OF), during the Reign of Louis the Fourteenth and the Regency. Translated from the French and Edited by BAYLE ST. JOHN. A New Edition, in Three Vols., 8vo, with numerous Steel-plate Illustrations. [In preparation.

SALA (George Augustus) ON COOKERY IN ITS HISTORICAL ASPECT. With very numerous Illustrations by the AUTHOR. Crown 4to, cloth extra, gilt. [In preparation.

SEVEN GENERATIONS OF EXECUTIONERS.

SANSON FAMILY, Memoirs of the, compiled from Private Documents in the possession of the Family (1688-1847), by HENRI SANSON. Translated from the French, with an Introduction by CAMILLE BARRÈRE. Two Vols., 8vo, cloth extra.

 Sanson was the hereditary French executioner, who officiated at the decapitation of Louis XVI.

SCHOLA ITALICA; or, Engravings of the finest Pictures in the Galleries at Rome. Imperial folio, with 40 beautiful Engravings after MICHAEL ANGELO, RAPHAEL, TITIAN, CARACCI, GUIDO, PARMIGIANO, &c., by VOLPATO and others, half-bound morocco extra, £2 12*s.* 6*d.*

SCHOPENHAUER'S THE WORLD AS WILL AND IMAGINATION. Translated by Dr. FRANZ HÜFFER, Author of "Richard Wagner and the Music of the Future." [In preparation.

SCOTT'S COMMENTARY ON THE HOLY BIBLE. With the Author's Last Corrections, and beautiful Illustrations and Maps. Three Vols., imperial 8vo, cloth extra, £1 16*s.*

"SECRET OUT" SERIES.

Crown 8vo, cloth extra, profusely Illustrated, price 4*s.* 6*d.* each.

ART OF AMUSING: A Collection of Graceful Arts, Games, Tricks, Puzzles, and Charades. By FRANK BELLEW. 300 Illustrations.

HANKY-PANKY: Very Easy Tricks, Very Difficult Tricks, White Magic, Sleight of Hand. Edited by W. H. CREMER. 200 Illustrations.

MAGICIAN'S OWN BOOK: Performances with Cups and Balls, Eggs, Hats, Handkerchiefs, &c. All from Actual Experience. Edited by W. H. CREMER. 200 Illustrations.

MAGIC NO MYSTERY: Tricks with Cards, Dice, Balls, &c., with fully descriptive Directions. Numerous Illustrations. [In the press.

MERRY CIRCLE (The): A Book of New Intellectual Games and Amusements. By CLARA BELLEW. Numerous Illustrations.

SECRET OUT: One Thousand Tricks with Cards, and other Recreations; with entertaining Experiments in Drawing-room or "White Magic." By W. H. CREMER. 300 Engravings.

SEYMOUR'S (Robert) HUMOROUS SKETCHES. 86 Clever and Amusing Caricature Etchings on Steel, with Letterpress Commentary by ALFRED CROWQUILL. A New Edition, with Biographical Notice, and Descriptive List of Plates. Royal 8vo, cloth extra, gilt edges, 15*s.*

SHAKESPEARE.—THE FIRST FOLIO. Mr. WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE'S Comedies, Histories, and Tragedies. Published according to the true Originall Copies. London, Printed by ISAAC IAGGARD and ED. BLOUNT. 1623.—An exact Reproduction of the extremely rare Original, in reduced facsimile by a photographic process—thus ensuring the strictest accuracy in every detail. Small 8vo, half Roxburghe, 10*s.* 6*d.* [In the press.

SHAKESPEARE.—THE LANSDOWNE EDITION. Beautifully printed in red and black, in small but very clear type. Post 8vo, with engraved facsimile of DROESHOUT's Portrait, cloth extra, gilt, gilt edges, 14*s.*; or, illustrated by 37 beautiful Steel Plates, after STOTHARD, cloth extra, gilt, gilt edges, 18*s.*

SHAKESPEARE, THE SCHOOL OF. Including "The Life and Death of Captain Thomas Stukeley," with a New Life of Stucley, from Unpublished Sources; "A Warning for Fair Women," with a Reprint of the Account of the Murder; "Nobody and Somebody;" "The Cobbler's Prophecy;" Histriomastix;" "The Prodigal Son," &c. Edited, with Introductions and Notes, by R. SIMPSON, Author of "An Introduction to the Philosophy of Shakespeare's Sonnets." Two Vols., crown 8vo, cloth extra. [In the press.

SHAW'S ILLUMINATED WORKS.

ALPHABETS, NUMERALS, AND DEVICES OF THE MIDDLE AGES. Selected from the finest existing Specimens. 4to, 48 Plates (26 Coloured), £2 2*s.*; Large Paper, imperial 4to, the Coloured Plates very highly finished and heightened with Gold, £4 4*s.* [New Edition preparing.

ANCIENT FURNITURE, drawn from existing Authorities. With Descriptions by Sir S. R. MEYRICK. 4to, 74 Plates, half-morocco, £1 11*s.* 6*d.*; or, with some Plates Coloured, 4to, half-morocco, £2 2*s.*; Large Paper copies, imperial 4to, all the Plates extra finished in opaque Colours, half-morocco extra, £4 14*s.* 6*d.*

DECORATIVE ARTS OF THE MIDDLE AGES. Exhibiting, in 41 Plates and numerous beautiful Woodcuts, choice Specimens of the various kinds of Ancient Enamel, Metal Work, Wood Carvings, Paintings on Stained Glass, Venetian Glass, Initial Illuminations, Embroidery, Fictile Ware, Bookbinding, &c.; with elegant Initial Letters to the various Descriptions. Imperial 8vo, half-morocco extra, £1 8*s.*

DRESSES AND DECORATIONS OF THE MIDDLE AGES, from the Seventh to the Seventeenth Centuries. 94 Plates, beautifully Coloured, a profusion of Initial Letters, and Examples of Curious Ornament, with Historical Introduction and Descriptive Text. Two Vols., imperial 8vo, half-Roxburghe, £5 5*s.*

ELIZABETHAN ARCHITECTURE (DETAILS OF). With Descriptive Letterpress by T. MOULE. 4to, 60 Plates, half-morocco, £1 5*s.*; Large Paper, imperial 4to, several of the Plates Coloured, half-morocco, £2 12*s.* 6*d.*

ENCYCLOPÆDIA OF ORNAMENT. Select Examples from the purest and best Specimens of all kinds and all Ages. 4to, 59 Plates, half-morocco, £1 1*s.*; Large Paper copies, imperial 4to, with all the Plates Coloured, half-morocco, £2 12*s.* 6*d.*

ILLUMINATED ORNAMENTS OF THE MIDDLE AGES, from the Sixth to the Seventeenth Century. Selected from Missals, MSS., and early printed Books. 66 Plates, carefully coloured from the Originals, with Descriptions by Sir F. MADDEN, Keeper of MSS., Brit. Mus. 4to, half-Roxburghe, £3 13*s.* 6*d.*; Large Paper copies, the Plates finished with opaque Colours and illuminated with Gold, imperial 4to, half-Roxburghe, £7 7*s.*

LUTON CHAPEL: A Series of 20 highly-finished Line Engravings of Gothic Architecture and Ornaments. Imperial folio, India Proofs, half-morocco, £2 8*s.*

ORNAMENTAL METAL WORK: A Series of 50 Copperplates, several Coloured. 4to, half-morocco, 18*s.*

SHAW AND BRIDGENS' DESIGNS FOR FURNITURE, with Candelabra and Interior Decoration. 60 Plates, royal 4to, half-morocco, £1 1*s.* Large Paper, imperial 4to, the Plates Coloured, half-morocco, £2 8*s.*

SHELLEY'S EARLY LIFE. From Original Sources. With Curious Incidents, Letters, and Writings, now First Collected. By D. F. MACCARTHY Crown 8vo, with Illustrations, cloth extra, 7*s.* 6*d.*]

SHERIDAN'S COMPLETE WORKS, with Life and Anecdotes. Including his Dramatic Writings, printed from the Original Editions, his Works in Prose and Poetry, Translations, Speeches, Jokes, Puns, &c.; with a Collection of Sheridaniana. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, gilt, with 10 full-page Tinted Illustrations, 7*s.* 6*d.*

"Whatever Sheridan has done, has been, par excellence, always the best of its kind. He has written the best comedy (School for Scandal), the best drama (the Duenna), the best farce (the Critic), and the best address (Monologue on Garrick); and, to crown all, delivered the very best oration (the famous Begum Speech) ever conceived or heard in this country."—BYRON.

"The editor has brought together within a manageable compass not only the seven plays by which Sheridan is best known, but a collection also of his poetical pieces which are less familiar to the public, sketches of unfinished dramas, selections from his reported witticisms, and extracts from his principal speeches. To these is prefixed a short but well-written memoir, giving the chief facts in Sheridan's literary and political career; so that with this volume in his hand, the student may consider himself tolerably well furnished with all that is necessary for a general comprehension of the subject of it."—Pall Mall Gazette.

SIGNBOARDS: Their History. With Anecdotes of Famous Taverns and Remarkable Characters. By JACOB LARWOOD and JOHN CAMDEN HOTTEN. With nearly 100 Illustrations. SEVENTH EDITION. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 7*s.* 6*d.*

"Even if we were ever so maliciously inclined, we could not pick out all Messrs. Larwood and Hotten's plums, because the good things are so numerous as to defy the most wholesale depredation."—The Times.

SILVESTRE'S UNIVERSAL PALÆOGRAPHY; or, A Collection of Facsimiles of the Writings of every Age. Containing upwards of 300 large and beautifully executed Facsimiles, taken from Missals and other MSS., richly Illuminated in the finest style of art. A New Edition, arranged under the direction of Sir F. MADDEN, Keeper of MSS., Brit. Mus. Two Vols., atlas folio, half-morocco, gilt, £31 10*s.*

Also, a Volume of HISTORICAL AND DESCRIPTIVE LETTERPRESS, by CHAMPOLLION FIGEAC and CHAMPOLLION, Jun. Translated, with Additions, by Sir F. MADDEN. Two Vols., royal 8vo, half-morocco, gilt, £2 8*s.*

"This great work contains upwards of three hundred large and beautifully executed facsimiles of the finest and most interesting MSS. of various ages and nations, illuminated in the highest style of art. The cost of getting up this splendid publication was not far from £20,000"—Allibone's Dict.

"The great work on Palæography generally—one of the most sumptuous works of its class ever published."—Chambers's Encyclopædia.

SLANG DICTIONARY (The): Etymological, Historical, and Anecdotal. An ENTIRELY NEW EDITION, revised throughout, and considerably Enlarged. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, gilt, 6*s.* 6*d.*

"We are glad to see the Slang Dictionary reprinted and enlarged. From a high scientific point of view this book is not to be despised. Of course it cannot fail to be amusing also. It contains the very vocabulary of unrestrained humour, and oddity, and grotesqueness. In a word, it provides valuable material both for the student of language and the student of human nature."—Academy.

"In every way a great improvement on the edition of 1864. Its uses as a dictionary of the very vulgar tongue do not require to be explained."—Notes and Queries.

"Compiled with most exacting care, and based on the best authorities."—Standard.

SMITH'S HISTORICAL AND LITERARY CURIOSITIES: Containing Facsimiles of autographs, Scenes of Remarkable Events, Interesting Localities, Old Houses, Portraits, Illuminated and Missal Ornaments, Antiquities, &c. 4to, with 100 Plates (some Illuminated), half-morocco extra, £2 5*s.*

SMITH (Thomas Assheton), REMINISCENCES of the LATE or, The Pursuits of an English Country Gentleman. By Sir J. E. EARDLEY WILMOT, Bart. New Edition, with Portrait, and plain and coloured Illustrations Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 7*s.* 6*d.*

SHAKESPEARE.—THE LANSDOWNE E fully printed in red and black, in small but very clear engraved facsimile of DROESHOUT's Portrait, cloth extra, gil illustrated by 37 beautiful Steel Plates, after STOTHARD, edges, 18s.

SHAKESPEARE, THE SCHOOL OF. Includin
Death of Captain Thomas Stukeley," with a New Life of S lished Sources; "A Warning for Fair Women," with a Repri
the Murder; "Nobody and Somebody;" "The Cobbler's P mastix;" "The Prodigal Son," &c. Edited, with Introduct
R. SIMPSON, Author of "An Introduction to the Philosoph
Sonnets." Two Vols., crown 8vo, cloth extra.

SHAW'S ILLUMINATED WORKS

ALPHABETS, NUMERALS, AND DEVICES
MIDDLE AGES. Selected from the finest existing Specimens
(26 Coloured), £2 2s.; Large Paper, imperial 4to, the Coloured P finished and heightened with Gold, £4 4s. [New Ed

ANCIENT FURNITURE, drawn from existing Auth
Descriptions by Sir S. R. MEYRICK. 4to, 74 Plates, half-morocco, with some Plates Coloured, 4to, half-morocco, £2 2s.; Large Paper
4to, all the Plates extra finished in opaque Colours, half-morocco ex

DECORATIVE ARTS OF THE MIDDLE AGES.
in 41 Plates and numerous beautiful Woodcuts, choice Specimens o
kinds of Ancient Enamel, Metal Work, Wood Carvings, Painting
Glass, Venetian Glass, Initial Illuminations, Embroidery, Fictile binding, &c.; with elegant Initial Letters to the various Descriptio 8vo, half-morocco extra, £1 8s.

DRESSES AND DECORATIONS OF THE MIDDL
from the Seventh to the Seventeenth Centuries. 94 Plates, beautifull a profusion of Initial Letters, and Examples of Curious Ornament, with Introduction and Descriptive Text. Two Vols., imperial 8vo, half-Roxbur

ELIZABETHAN ARCHITECTURE (DETAILS OF
Descriptive Letterpress by T. MOULE. 4to, 60 Plates, half-morocco, £1
Paper, imperial 4to, several of the Plates Coloured, half-morocco, £2 12 morocco, £2 12s. 6d.

ENCYCLOPÆDIA OF ORNAMENT. Select Examples f
purest and best Specimens of all kinds and all Ages. 4to, 59 Plates, half-
£1 1s.; Large Paper copies, imperial 4to, with all the Plates Colour

ILLUMINATED ORNAMENTS OF THE MIDDLE A
from the Sixth to the Seventeenth Century. Selected from Missals, MS early printed Books. 66 Plates, carefully coloured from the Originals Descriptions by Sir F. MADDEN, Keeper of MSS., Brit. Mus. 4to, half burghe, £3 13s. 6d.; Large Paper copies, the Plates finished with o
Colours and illuminated with Gold, imperial 4to, half-Roxburghe, £7 7s.

LUTON CHAPEL: A Series of 20 highly-finished Line Engrav
of Gothic Architecture and Ornaments. Imperial folio, India Proofs, morocco, £2 8s.

ORNAMENTAL METAL WORK: A Series of 50 Copperplat
several Coloured. 4to, half-morocco, 18s.

SHAW AND BRIDGENS' DESIGNS FOR FURNITURE, wi
Candelabra and Interior Decoration. 60 Plates, royal 4to, half-morocco, £1 1
Large Paper, imperial 4to, the Plates Coloured, half-morocco, £2 8s.

SHELLEY'S EARLY LIFE. From Original Sources. Wit
Curious Incidents, Letters, and Writings, now First Collected. By D. F.
MACCARTHY. Crown 8vo, with Illustrations, cloth extra, 7s. 6d.]

SHERIDAN'S COMPLETE WORKS, with Life and Anecdotes. Including his Dramatic Writings, printed from the Original Editions, his Works in Prose and Poetry, Translations, Speeches, Jokes, Puns, &c.; with a Collection of Sheridaniana. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, gilt, with 10 full-page Tinted Illustrations, 7s. 6d.

"Whatever Sheridan has done, has been, par excellence, always the best of its kind. He has written the best comedy (School for Scandal), the best drama (the Duenna), the best farce (the Critic), and the best address (Monologue on Garrick); and, to crown all, delivered the very best oration (the famous Begum Speech) ever conceived or heard in this country."—BYRON.

"The editor has brought together within a manageable compass not only the seven plays by which Sheridan is best known, but a collection also of his poetical pieces which are less familiar to the public, sketches of unfinished dramas, selections from his reported witticisms, and extracts from his principal speeches. To these is prefixed a short but well-written memoir, giving the chief facts in Sheridan's literary and political career; so that with this volume in his hand, the student may consider himself tolerably well furnished with all that is necessary for a general comprehension of the subject of it."—Pall Mall Gazette.

SIGNBOARDS: Their History. With Anecdotes of Famous Taverns and Remarkable Characters. By JACOB LARWOOD and JOHN CAMDEN HOTTEN. With nearly 100 Illustrations. SEVENTH EDITION. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 7s. 6d.

"Even if we were ever so maliciously inclined, we could not pick out all Messrs. Larwood and Hotten's plums, because the good things are so numerous as to defy the most wholesale depredation."—The Times.

SILVESTRE'S UNIVERSAL PALÆOGRAPHY; or, A Collection of Facsimiles of the Writings of every Age. Containing upwards of 200 large and beautifully executed Facsimiles, taken from Missals and other MSS., richly Illuminated in the finest style of art. A New Edition, arranged under the direction of Sir F. MADDEN, Keeper of MSS., Brit. Mus. Two Vols., atlas folio, half-morocco, gilt, £31 10s.

Also, a Volume of HISTORICAL AND DESCRIPTIVE LETTERPRESS, by CHAMPOLLION-FIGEAC and CHAMPOLLION, Jun. Translated, with Additions, by Sir F. MADDEN. Two Vols., royal 8vo, half-morocco, gilt, £2 8s.

"This great work contains upwards of three hundred large and beautifully executed facsimiles of the finest and most interesting MSS. of various ages and nations, illuminated in the highest style of art. The cost of getting up this splendid publication was not far from £20,000"—Allibone's Dict.

"The great work on Palæography generally—one of the most [illegible] of its class ever published."—Chambers's Encyclopædia.

SLANG DICTIONARY (The): Etymological, Historical and Anecdotal. An ENTIRELY NEW EDITION, revised throughout, and enormously Enlarged. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, gilt, 6s. 6d.

"We are glad to see the Slang Dictionary reprinted and enlarged. [illegible] scientific point of view this book is not to be despised. Of course [illegible] be amusing also. It contains the very vocabulary of [illegible] oddity, and grotesqueness. In a word, it provides valuable [illegible] student of language and the student of human nature."—Athenæum.

"In every way a great improvement on the edition of 1864. [illegible] of the very vulgar tongue do not require to be explained."—[illegible]

"Compiled with most exacting care, and based on the best [illegible]

SMITH'S HISTORICAL AND LITERARY [illegible] Containing Facsimiles of [illegible]tographs, Scenes of [illegible] Localities, Old Houses, Portraits, Illuminated [illegible] &c. 4to, with 100 Plates (some Illuminated), [illegible]

SMITH (Thomas Assheton), REMI[illegible] or, The Pursuits of an English Country [illegible] WILMOT, Bart. New Edition, with Portrait, [illegible] Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 7s. 6d.

SMOKER'S TEXT-BOOK. By J. HAMER, F.R.S.L. Exquisitely printed from "silver-faced" type, cloth, very neat, gilt edges, 2s. 6d.

SOUTH'S (Dr. Robert) SERMONS. With Biographical Memoir, Analytical Tables, General Index, &c. Two Vols., royal 8vo, cloth extra, 15s.

SOUTHEY'S COMMON-PLACE BOOK. Edited by his Son-in-Law, J. W. WARTER. Second Edition. Four Vols., medium 8vo, with Portrait, cloth extra, £1 10s.

SOWERBY'S MANUAL OF CONCHOLOGY: A Complete Introduction to the Science. Illustrated by upwards of 650 etched Figures of Shells and numerous Woodcuts. With copious Explanations, Tables, Glossary, &c. 8vo, cloth extra, gilt, 15s.; or, the Plates beautifully Coloured, £1 8s.

SPECTATOR (The), with the Original Dedications, Notes, and a General Index. Demy 8vo, with Portrait of ADDISON, cloth extra, 9s.

STEDMAN'S (Edmund Clarence) VICTORIAN POETS: Critical Essays. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 9s.

Abstract of Contents:—The Period—Walter Savage Landor—Thomas Hood—Matthew Arnold—Bryan Waller Procter—Elizabeth Barrett Browning—Alfred Tennyson—Tennyson and Theocritus—Miscellaneous Poets—Robert Browning. Latter-Day Poets: Robert Buchanan—Dante Gabriel Rossetti—William Morris—Algernon Charles Swinburne.

STOTHARD'S MONUMENTAL EFFIGIES OF GREAT BRITAIN, selected from our Cathedrals and Churches. With Historical Description and Introduction, by JOHN KEMPE, F.S.A. A NEW EDITION, with a large body of Additional Notes by JOHN HEWITT. Imperial 4to, containing 147 beautifully finished Etchings, all Tinted, and some Illuminated in Gold and Colours, half-morocco, £9 9s.; Large Paper, the whole Illuminated in body-colours, half-morocco, £15 15s. [In the press

STOW'S SURVEY OF LONDON. Edited by W. J. THOMS, F.S.A. A New Edition, with Illustrations, large 8vo, half-Roxburghe, price 9s.

STRUTT'S DRESSES AND HABITS OF THE ENGLISH, from the Establishment of the Saxons in Britain to the Present Time. With an Historical Inquiry into every branch of Costume, Ancient and Modern. New Edition, with Explanatory Notes by J. R. PLANCHÉ, Somerset Herald. Two Vols., royal 4to, with 153 Engravings from the most Authentic Sources, beautifully Coloured, half-Roxburghe, £6 6s.; or the Plates splendidly Illuminated in Silver and Opaque Colours, in the Missal style, half-Roxburghe, £15 15s.

STRUTT'S REGAL AND ECCLESIASTICAL ANTIQUITIES OF ENGLAND: Authentic Representations of all the English Monarchs, from Edward the Confessor to Henry the Eighth; with many Great Personages eminent under their several Reigns. New Edition, with critical Notes by J. R. PLANCHÉ, Somerset Herald. Royal 4to, with 72 Engravings from Manuscripts, Monuments, &c., beautifully Coloured, half-Roxburghe, £3 3s.; or the Plates splendidly Illuminated in Gold and Colours, half-morocco, £10 10s.

STRUTT'S SPORTS AND PASTIMES OF THE PEOPLE OF ENGLAND; including the Rural and Domestic Recreations, May Games, Mummeries, Shows, Processions, Pageants, and Pompous Spectacles, from the Earliest Period to the Present Time. Illustrated by One Hundred and Forty Engravings, in which are represented most of the popular Diversions, selected from Ancient Manuscripts. Edited by WILLIAM HONE, Author of the "Every-day Book." Crown 8vo, cloth extra, gilt, price 7s. 6d. A few LARGE PAPER COPIES have been prepared, uniform with the "Dresses," with an extra set of Copperplate Illustrations, carefully Coloured by hand, from the Originals, price 50s. [In the press.

STUBBS' ANATOMY OF THE HORSE. 24 fine Copperplate Engravings on a very large scale. Imperial folio, cloth extra, £1 1s.

SUMMER CRUISING IN THE SOUTH SEAS. By CHARLES WARREN STODDARD. With Twenty-five Illustrations by WALLIS MACKAY. Crown 8vo, cloth, extra gilt, 7*s.* 6*d.*

SWIFT'S CHOICE WORKS, in Prose and Verse. With Memoir, Portrait, and numerous Illustrations. Cr. 8vo, cl. extra, gilt, 7*s.* 6*d.* [In the press.

SYNTAX'S (Dr.) THREE TOURS, in Search of the Picturesque, in Search of Consolation, and in Search of a Wife. With the whole of ROWLANDSON'S droll full-page Illustrations, in Colours, and Life of the Author by J. C. HOTTEN. Medium 8vo, cloth extra, gilt, 7*s.* 6*d.*

SWINBURNE'S WORKS.

QUEEN MOTHER AND ROSAMOND. Fcap. 8vo, 5*s.*

ATALANTA IN CALYDON. A New Edition. Crown 8vo, 6*s.*

CHASTELARD: A Tragedy. Fcap. 8vo, 7*s.*

POEMS AND BALLADS. Fcap. 8vo, 9*s.*

WILLIAM BLAKE: A Critical Essay. With Facsimile Paintings, Coloured by Hand, after Drawings by BLAKE and his Wife. Demy 8vo, 16*s.*

SONGS BEFORE SUNRISE. Crown 8vo, 10*s.* 6*d.*

BOTHWELL: A Tragedy. Two Vols., crown 8vo, 12*s.* 6*d.*

GEORGE CHAPMAN: An Essay. Crown 8vo, 7*s.*

SONGS OF TWO NATIONS: DIRÆ, A SONG OF ITALY, ODE ON THE FRENCH REPUBLIC. Crown 8vo, 6*s.*

ESSAYS AND STUDIES. Crown 8vo, 12*s.*

Also, fcap. 8vo, cloth extra, price 3*s.* 6*d.*

ROSSETTI'S (W. M.) CRITICISM UPON SWINBURNE'S POEMS AND BALLADS.

THACKERAYANA: Notes and Anecdotes. Illustrated by a profusion of Sketches by WILLIAM MAKEPEACE THACKERAY, depicting Humorous Incidents in his School-life, and Favourite Characters in the books of his every-day reading. Large post 8vo, with Hundreds of Wood Engravings and Five Coloured Plates, from Mr. Thackeray's Original Drawings, cloth, full gilt, gilt top, 12*s.* 6*d.*

"An exceedingly curious and valuable volume, the diverting pages of which are adorned by some six hundred engraved facsimiles of the little caricature sketches which the illustrious author of 'Vanity Fair' was perpetually scribbling in the margins of books, and on every scrap of paper which came in his way, and which these eyes have witnessed him scribbling scores of times.—GEORGE AUGUSTUS SALA, in the Illustrated London News.

THEODORE HOOK'S CHOICE HUMOROUS WORKS, with his Ludicrous Adventures, Bons-mots, Puns, and Hoaxes. With a new Life of the Author, Portraits, Facsimiles, and Illustrations. Cr. 8vo, cloth extra, gilt, 7*s.* 6*d.*

THESEUS: A GREEK FAIRY LEGEND. Illustrated, in a series of Designs in Gold and Sepia, by JOHN MOYR SMITH. With Descriptive Text. Oblong folio, price 7*s.* 6*d.*

THIERS' HISTORY OF THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. Roy. 8vo, cloth extra, 15*s.*

"The History of the French Revolution by Thiers is a celebrated and popular book in France—and I believe in Europe. It combines the compactness and unity of the book, the order and arrangement of the journal, the simplicity of the biography, the valuable and minute details of the autobiography, and the enthusiasm, the passion, and the indignation of the pamphlet. There are in many parts of this great book, whole chapters which read as if they had been written with the sword."—JULES JANIN, in the Athenæum.

THIERS' HISTORY OF THE CONSULATE AND EMPIRE OF FRANCE UNDER NAPOLEON. Royal 8vo, cloth extra, 15*s.*

THOMSON'S SEASONS, and CASTLE OF INDOLENCE. With a Biographical and Critical Introduction by ALLAN CUNNINGHAM, and over 50 fine Illustrations on Steel and Wood. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, gilt, 7*s.* 6*d.*

THORNBURY'S (Walter) HISTORICAL AND LEGENDARY BALLADS AND SONGS. Illustrated by J. WHISTLER, JOHN TENNIEL, A. F. SANDYS, W. SMALL, M. J. LAWLESS, J. D. WATSON, G. J. PINWELL, F. WALKER, T. R. MACQUOID, and others. Handsomely printed, crown 4to, cloth extra, gilt and gilt edges, 21*s.*

TIMBS' ENGLISH ECCENTRICS and ECCENTRICITIES: Stories of Wealth and Fashion, Delusions, Impostures and Fanatic Missions, Strange Sights and Sporting Scenes, Eccentric Artists, Theatrical Folks, Men of Letters, &c. By JOHN TIMBS, F.S.A. With nearly 50 Illustrations. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 7*s.* 6*d.*

"The reader who would fain enjoy a harmless laugh in some very odd company might do much worse than take an occasional dip into 'English Eccentrics.' Beaux, preachers, authors, actors, monstrosities of the public shows, and leaders of religious impostures, will meet him here in infinite, almost perplexing, variety. The queer illustrations, from portraits and caricatures of the time, are admirably suited to the letterpress."—Graphic.

TIMBS' CLUBS AND CLUB LIFE IN LONDON. With ANECDOTES of its FAMOUS COFFEE HOUSES, HOSTELRIES, and TAVERNS. By JOHN TIMBS, F.S.A. With numerous Illustrations. Cr. 8vo, cloth extra, 7*s.* 6*d.*

TOURNEUR'S (Cyril) COLLECTED WORKS, including a unique Poem, entitled "The Transformed Metamorphosis;" and "Laugh and Lie Down; or, The World's Folly." Edited, with a Critical Preface, Introductions, and Notes, by J. CHURTON COLLINS. Post 8vo, cloth extra, 10*s.* 6*d.* [In the press.

TROLLOPE'S (T. A.) DIAMOND CUT DIAMOND, and other Stories New and Popular Edition, with a Frontispiece. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 6*s.* [In the press.

TURNER'S (J. M. W.) LIBER FLUVIORUM; or, River Scenery of France. 62 highly-finished Line Engravings by WILLMORE, GOODALL, MILLER, COUSENS, and other distinguished Artists. With descriptive Letterpress by LEITCH RITCHIE, and Memoir by ALARIC A. WATTS. Imperial 8vo, cloth extra, gilt edges, £1 11*s.* 6*d.*

TURNER (J. M. W.) and GIRTIN'S RIVER SCENERY. 20 beautiful Mezzotinto Plates, engraved on Steel by REYNOLDS, BROMLEY, LUPTON, and CHARLES TURNER, principally after the Drawings of J. M. W TURNER. Small folio, in Portfolio, £1 11*s.* 6*d.*

TURNER'S (J. M. W.) LIFE AND CORRESPONDENCE. Founded upon Letters and Papers furnished by his Friends and Fellow-Academicians. By WALTER THORNBURY. New Edition, entirely rewritten and added to. With numerous Illustrations. Two Vols., 8vo, cloth extra. [In preparation.

TURNER GALLERY (The): A Series of Sixty Engravings from the Principal Works of JOSEPH MALLORD WILLIAM TURNER. With a Memoir and Illustrative Text by RALPH NICHOLSON WORNUM, Keeper and Secretary, National Gallery. Handsomely half-bound, India Proofs, royal folio, £10; Large Paper copies, Artists' India Proofs, elephant folio, £20.—A Descriptive Pamphlet will be sent upon application.

VAGABONDIANA; or, Anecdotes of Mendicant Wanderers through the Streets of London; with Portraits of the most Remarkable, drawn from the Life by JOHN THOMAS SMITH, late Keeper of the Prints in the British Museum. With Introduction by FRANCIS DOUCE, and Descriptive Text. With the Woodcuts and the 32 Plates, from the original Coppers. Crown 4to, half-Roxburghe, 12*s.* 6*d.*

VYNER'S NOTITIA VENATICA: A Treatise on Fox-Hunting, the General Management of Hounds, and the Diseases of Dogs; Distemper and Rabies; Kennel Lameness, &c. By ROBERT C. VYNER. Sixth Edition, Enlarged. With spirited Coloured Illustrations by ALKEN. Royal 8vo, cloth extra, 21*s.*

WALPOLE'S (Horace) ANECDOTES OF PAINTING IN ENGLAND. With some Account of the principal English Artists, and incidental Notices of Sculptors, Carvers, Enamellers, Architects, Medallists, Engravers, &c. With Additions by the Rev. JAMES DALLAWAY. New Edition, Revised and Edited, with Additional Notes, by RALPH N. WORNUM, Keeper and Secretary, National Gallery. Three Vols., 8vo, with upwards of 150 Portraits and Plates, cloth extra, £1 7*s.*

WALPOLE'S (Horace) ENTIRE CORRESPONDENCE. Chronologically arranged, with the Prefaces and Notes of CROKER, Lord DOVER and others; the Notes of all previous Editors, and Additional Notes by PETER CUNNINGHAM. Nine Vols., 8vo, with numerous fine Portraits engraved on Steel, cloth extra, £4 1*s.*

"The charm which lurks in Horace Walpole's Letters is one for which we have no term; and our Gallic neighbours seem to have engrossed both the word and the quality—'elles sont piquantes,' to the highest degree. If you read but a sentence, you feel yourself spell-bound till you have read the volume."—Quarterly Review.

WALPOLE'S (Horace) ROYAL AND NOBLE AUTHORS OF ENGLAND, SCOTLAND, AND IRELAND; with Lists of their Works. A New Edition, Annotated, considerably Enlarged, and brought down to the Present Time. Illustrated by nearly 200 Copperplate Portraits. Six Vols., 8vo, cloth extra. [In preparation.

WALTON AND COTTON, ILLUSTRATED.—THE COMPLETE ANGLER; or, The Contemplative Man's Recreation: Being a Discourse of Rivers, Fish-ponds, Fish and Fishing, written by IZAAK WALTON; and Instructions how to Angle for a Trout or Grayling in a clear Stream, by CHARLES COTTON. With Original Memoirs and Notes by Sir HARRIS NICOLAS, K.C.M.G. With the 61 Plate Illustrations, precisely as in Pickering's two-volume Edition. Complete in One Volume, large crown 8vo, cloth antique, 7*s.* 6*d.*

WARRANT TO EXECUTE CHARLES I. An exact Facsimile of this important Document, with the Fifty-nine Signatures of the Regicides, and corresponding Seals, on paper to imitate the Original, 22 in. by 14 in. Price 2*s.*

WARRANT TO EXECUTE MARY QUEEN OF SCOTS. An exact Facsimile of this important Document, including the Signature of Queen Elizabeth and Facsimile of the Great Seal, on tinted paper, to imitate the Original MS. Price 2*s.*

WATERFORD ROLL (The).—Illuminated Charter-Roll of Waterford, Temp. Richard II. The Illuminations accurately Traced and Coloured for the Work from a Copy carefully made by the late GEORGE V. DU NOYER, Esq., M.R.I.A. Those Charters which have not already appeared in print will be edited by the Rev. JAMES GRAVES, A.B., M.R.I.A. Imperial 4to, cloth extra, gilt, 36*s.* [Nearly ready.

WELLS' JOSEPH AND HIS BRETHREN: A Dramatic Poem. By CHARLES O. WELLS. With an Introductory Essay by ALGERNON CHARLES SWINBURNE. Crown 8vo, with Vignette Portrait, cloth extra, 8*s.* [In the press.

WESTWOOD'S PALÆOGRAPHIA SACRA PICTORIA: being a Series of Illustrations of the Ancient Versions of the Bible, copied from Illuminated Manuscripts, executed between the Fourth and Sixteenth Centuries. Royal 4to, with 50 beautifully Illuminated Plates, half-bound morocco, £3 10*s.*

WILD'S ENGLISH CATHEDRALS. Twelve select examples of the Ecclesiastical Architecture of the Middle Ages; beautifully coloured, after the Original Drawings by CHARLES WILD. Imperial folio, in portfolio, £4 4*s.*

WILD'S FOREIGN CATHEDRALS. Twelve fine Plates, imperial folio, coloured, after the Original Drawings, by CHARLES WILD. In portfolio, £4 4*s.*

"These splendid plates are unequalled, whether bound as a volume, treasured in a portfolio, or framed for universal admiration."—Athenæum.

WILSON'S AMERICAN ORNITHOLOGY; or, Natural History of the Birds of the United States; with the Continuation by Prince CHARLES LUCIAN BONAPARTE. NEW AND ENLARGED EDITION, completed by the insertion of above One Hundred Birds omitted in the original Work, and Illustrated by valuable Notes, and Life of the Author, by Sir WILLIAM JARDINE. Three Vols., 8vo, with a fine Portrait of WILSON, and 103 Plates, exhibiting nearly four hundred figures of Birds accurately engraved and beautifully printed in Colours, half-bound morocco. A few Large Paper copies will also be issued, with the Plates all carefully Coloured by hand. [In the press.

"The History of American Birds by Alexander Wilson is equal in elegance to the most distinguished of our own splendid works on Ornithology."—CUVIER.

WILSON'S FRENCH-ENGLISH AND ENGLISH-FRENCH DICTIONARY; containing full Explanations, Definitions, Synonyms, Idioms, Proverbs, Terms of Art and Science, and Rules for the Pronunciation of each Language. Compiled from the Dictionaries of the French Academy, BOYER, CHAMBAUD, GARNIER, LAVEAUX, DES CARRIÈRES and FAIN, JOHNSON, and WALKER. Imperial 8vo, 1,323 closely-printed pages, cloth extra, 15*s.*

WONDERFUL CHARACTERS: Memoirs and Anecdotes of Remarkable and Eccentric Persons of every Age and Nation. By HENRY WILSON and JAMES CAULFIELD. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, with 61 full-page Engravings, 7*s.* 6*d.*

WRIGHT'S (Andrew) COURT-HAND RESTORED; or, Student's Assistant in Reading Old Deeds, Charters, Records, &c. Folio, half-morocco, 10*s.* 6*d.*

WRIGHT'S CARICATURE HISTORY of the GEORGES (House of Hanover). With 400 Pictures, Caricatures, Squibs, Broadsides, Window Pictures, &c. By THOMAS WRIGHT, Esq., M.A., F.S.A. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 7*s.* 6*d.*

"Emphatically one of the liveliest of books, as also one of the most interesting. Has the twofold merit of being at once amusing and edifying."—Morning Post.

WRIGHT'S HISTORY OF CARICATURE AND OF THE GROTESQUE IN ART, LITERATURE, SCULPTURE, AND PAINTING, from the Earliest Times to the Present Day. By THOMAS WRIGHT, M.A., F.S.A. Profusely Illustrated by F. W. FAIRHOLT, F.S.A. Large post 8vo, cloth extra, gilt, 7*s.* 6*d.*

"Almost overwhelms us with its infinite research. Mr. Wright dexterously guides the reader to a full survey of our English caricature, from its earliest efforts to the full-blown blossoms of a Rowlandson or a Gillray. The excellent illustrations of Mr. Fairholt add greatly to the value of the volume."—Graphic.

"A very amusing and instructive volume."—Saturday Review.

XENOPHON'S COMPLETE WORKS. Translated into English. Demy 8vo, with Steel-plate Portrait, a thick volume of 770 pages, 12*s.*

YANKEE DROLLERIES. Edited, with Introduction, by GEORGE AUGUSTUS SALA. In Three Parts, each Complete in itself. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3*s.* 6*d.* per Vol.

J. OGDEN AND CO., PRINTERS, 172, ST. JOHN STREET, E.C.

This book should be returned to the Library on or before the last date stamped below.

A fine is incurred by retaining it beyond the specified time.

Please return promptly.

WIDENER
BOOK DUE
MAR 9 1983
MAR 23 1982
741076

orks of William Shakespeare in er Library 003610058
2044 086 735 800